Joseph Maas Prize (tenors) to Alan R. Thomson (a native of Sanguham, Dumfriesshire). The adjudicators were Messrs. Charles Phillips and Edward Iles. Sterndale Bennett Prize (female pianists) to Doris Sheppard (a native of Bromley, Kent), Dorothy Folkard and Rene Cook being highly commended. The adjudicators were Miss A. Adela Hamaton and Mr. Horace Kesteven. Goldberg Prize (tenors) to D. Murray Brown (a native of Horton, Bucks), Denys Erlam being highly commended. The adjudicator was Mr. Maurice d'Oisy. Edward W. Nicholls Prize (female pianists) to Sybil Barlow (a native of London), Betty Humby being very highly commended, and Rene Cook and Winifred M. Y. Sanders highly commended. The adjudicators were Miss Harriet Cohen, Miss Dorothy Howell, and Madame Elsie Horne.

ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC

The Conducting Class enjoyed what may fairly be termed a 'gala week' during the past month. Five students of the class took almost entire charge of the programme of a full-sized orchestral concert, conducting The Magic Flute Overture, Saint-Saëns's second Pianoforte Concerto (Miss Doreen Clark playing the solo part), a Suite of Debussy, the Meistersinger Overture, and so on. Not content with this, they repeated the whole programme at another concert a few days later, before a very large audience, thus enjoying the satisfaction, rarely accorded to musicians, of having a second chance to remember all the points they forgot to make at the first performance.

The chief features of the month's chamber concerts were Brahms's B flat major Sextet, admirably led by Miss Marie Wilson, vocal quartets (Five Pastorals) by H. Walford Davies, and some new songs for soprano and string quartet, by Mr. Cyril Dalmaine, a student, who showed considerable skill in blending his material and handling his subject-matter.

The recitals of the month, given by students, attained a consistently high standard, and one which many more experienced performers might envy. Three singers joined forces with an organist, a pianist, and a violoncellist, two performers being responsible for each occasion, and the result was three recitals of quite exceptional interest.

The third Patron's Fund Rehearsal of the term, on March 13, brought forward new works by five composers, the first two rehearsals of the term having been devoted to the interests of conductors and executive artists. It is gratifying to record that the composers rival the artists in popularity, for the concert hall of the College was crowded on this occasion. The purely orchestral items were an Eclogue by Edgar Bainton, a work picturesquely and effectively laid out, musically sensitive and interesting; and a lyrical poem after Keats's Ode to a Nightingale, by Patrick Hadley. The composer uses a large orchestra, but handles it with admirable restraint to clothe a poetical idea with grace and charm. Rupert Erlebach's Folk-Songs for string orchestra should be a welcome addition to the limited repertoire for strings, being interesting and well-written, though occasionally somewhat difficult for the players. The other compositions were two sets of songs for baritone and orchestra; these, though slender in design, proved most attractive. One set, by Leslie Woodgate, was sung by Mr. Stuart Robertson; the other, by Norman Peterkin, was sung by Mr. John Goss.

TRINITY COLLEGE OF MUSIC

The College Club, which has been so successful in maintaining the interest of former students, as well as those now attending for lessons, gave a dance in the College, on March 29, following the orchestral concert at Queen's Hall in the afternoon of the same day. The occasion will be succeeded, in a more venturesome spirit, by a dance arranged to take place at St. Marylebone Hall, on April 7, at 7.30 p.m.

A well-attended pianoforte and vocal recital was given on March 12, by Mr. William Lovelock and Miss E. Snape, formerly Scholarship holders at Trinity, and now on the professorial staff. The playing and singing well merited the enthusiastic appreciation of the audience.

The annual meeting of the College Corporation took place on March 14, with Sir Frederick Bridge in the chair, when the Secretary's report disclosed increases in the number of paying students, in the number of examinations candidates, and in the successes of its students.

One of the College University Scholarship holders, Eric Thimann, was recently successful in obtaining the Mus.B. degree of London University. When to this achievement is added the fact that three other students also qualified for the same degree, and one for the Doctorate of the same University, whilst a sixth gained the Mus.B. degree of Durham University, all during the period of a year just ending, the College is surely justified in feeling proud of so excellent a testimony to its teaching.

A BYRD MEMORIAL

On Wednesday, March 12, in the little Church of Standon Massey, a mural tablet was unveiled by the Lord Bishop of Chelmsford to the memory of William Byrd, whose home was at Standon Place from 1595 till his death in 1623. The Service was a form of Evensong, taken by the Rev. L. J. Percival, Precentor of the Chapel Royal, and, by permission of the King, the music was sung by the Gentlemen and Children of the Chapel Royal, conducted by Mr. Stanley Roper. The Responses were by Byrd, and in place of the Magnificat was sung his metrical Psalm, O praise the Lord, ye saints above. Instead of the Nunc Dimittis was sung an English version of Visita quesumus from Byrd's Gradualia, Book I. The anthem was Iustorum Anima, from the same source. After the anthem the tablet was unveiled, and Mr. Barclay Squire, on behalf of the Byrd Tercentenary Committee, presented it to the Rector and Churchwardens of Standon Massey, the Rector formally accepting the memorial in the name of the Parish. The Bishop then gave an address in which he told of Byrd's connection with Standon, and of his position of commanding influence in the beginnings of English Church music. The Service ended with the singing of For all the saints, to Vaughan Williams's tune, Dr. Charles Macpherson accompanying. Immediately after the Service a wreath was hung at either side of the tablet, one by Miss Willmott, from the Elizabethan Madrigal Society, the other by Mr. Charles Kennedy Scott, from the Oriana Madrigal Society.

The inscription on the tablet is as follows:

To the Glory of God, and in memory of who lived at Standon Place in this parish for the last thirty years of his life. He died 4 July, 1623, aged eighty. This tablet was erected in 1923 in celebration of the Tercentenary of his death.

WILLIAM BYRD,

Surmounting the tablet is Byrd's coat of arms, traced in stone, below which are the words 'A Father of Musick'—words which stand against the record of Byrd's death in the Cheque Book of the Chapel Royal. The tablet was designed by Mr. G. H. Kitchin, of Winchester. The frame is of white Caen stone, with panels of red Mansfield stone inscribed in gold lettering. A. R.

Gramophone Notes

By 'DISCUS'

COLUMBIA

The instrumental side of the March output is exceptionally strong. The roll of The Planets is added to by 'Saturn' (12-in. d.s.), and, despite some unclear passages, it is a good record—so good, in fact, that a few repetitions have enabled me to appreciate the movement that of all the Suite failed to get hold of me in the concert-room. How little, after all, do a few imperfections in performance or reproduction matter, compared with the opportunity for frequent hearing!

Two movements from Le Coq d'Or (the Introduction and Wedding March) are recorded on a 12-in. d.s.—a brilliant bit of playing by the Hallé Orchestra under Hamilton Harty.

Capital examples of light music are Lalo's Aubades in G minor and D minor (12-in. d.s.), played by the Queen's Hall Orchestra under Sir Henry Wood. I don't seem to have met with either of them in the concert-hall, which is odd, because they are just the attractive type of work that one would expect to hear often. The clear reproduction of many happy touches in the scoring makes this record very attractive.

A selection from Leo Fall's Madame Pompadour, played by Daly's Theatre Orchestra, is a long way better than the average of such things, thanks chiefly to the neat workmanship.

The gramophonist who takes his machine seriously will welcome three 12-in. d.s. of Brahms's D minor Sonata for violin and pianoforte, played by Arthur Catterall and William Murdoch. The only fault one feels disposed to find is in regard to balance. Too often the effect is that of a mere violin solo with pianoforte accompaniment, instead of a duologue between equals. This is especially the case in the slow movement, where the rather low chords for the pianoforte are so quiet that the harmonic basis sometimes escapes us. Otherwise there is nothing but praise for this record of a type of work that the average concert-goer gets few opportunities of hearing.

A disappointment is the record made by the Cherniavsky Trio (10-in. d.s.). The Boccherini Minuet is so hackneyed that we grudge record-space for it, even when the arrangement is so attractive as in this case. But why did the Brothers C. descend so low in choosing a companion to the Minuet? By the Waters of Minnetonka is feeble, even in its original song version. Robbed of the attractiveness of the voice, its fatuousness becomes comic. This half of the record should never have crossed the Atlantic.

Admirers of Edna Thomas will be glad to hear her recorded in a couple of negro 'spirituals'—I wanna be ready and Tone de bell. These are among the most moving vocal records I have heard. Everyone will smile at the queer upward flourish in the refrain of the first, and some of the smilers will be surprised to find themselves with a moist eye before the song is over. The record includes also Take me back to Old Virginie, which is just ordinary Moore & Burgess in comparison. Ulysses Lappas is to be heard in operatic extracts from Girl of the Golden West and Manon Lescaut—performances of the usual Lappas blatancy. After hearing it, one instinctively turns up an old Caruso record in order to be reminded that there have been tenors who could sing. There are still, no doubt; but most of them seem to dodge the recording-room.

ÆOLIAN VOCALION

A smallish bag, with little of outstanding quality. The Regent Symphony Orchestra is heard in Luigini's Ballet Russe Suite, conducted by Mr. Percy Fletcher (10-in. d.-s.), and the Band of the Life Guards' in a selection from Trial by Jury (12-in. d.-s.) and Elgar's No. 4 Pomp and Circumstance and Fletcher's Spirit of Pageantry March. The Sullivan seems tame without the words. The two Marches make a stirring record.

Adila Fachiri provides the only violin solos—characteristic performances of a Brahms-Joachim Hungarian Dance (No. 2) and a Weber-Kreisler air. (I wish these crack-fiddlers would give us less of the hyphenated composers. Is there such a poverty of good violin music?)

Of John Amadio's brilliant flute playing gramophonists know already. His latest feats are de Jong's Caprice, Will o' the Wisp and Paggi's Rimembrance Napolitaine (10-in. d.-s.).

Horace Stevens sings It is enough and Why do the nations with fervour and a fine, ringing voice. But the rapid Handelian divisions beat him. The orchestral part of Why do the nations, by the way, is a model of clearness.

Another good vocal record is that of Stewart Gardner in songs by Clutsam and Quilter (10-in. d.-s.).

H.M.V.

Delius's Brigg Fair and On hearing the first cuckoo in Spring are on two 12-in. d.-s., the latter piece very happily filling up the side left over from the Rhapsody. There is some loss on the colour side—always an important factor with Delius—but the texture comes out remarkably well. The cuckoo-call in the second piece is perhaps too modest. Hearers who don't know the piece might easily miss it, whereas in the concert-hall it is clear enough, though delicate. These works show Delius at his best, and it is good to have such capital records of them. The players are the Albert Hall Orchestra, conducted by Eugène Goossens.

Few of us have heard of the Countess Helena Morsztyn, though the catalogue describes her as 'a distinguished pianist.' She plays the Chopin Scherza, Op. 31, and plays it badly, with erratic tempo, a constantly broken melodic line, and harsh tone in the loud passages (10-in. d.-s.).

Moiseiwitsch, in a Chopin Mazurka and Moussorgsky's Gopak, heard immediately after the Countess, sounds even better than he is. The delicacy of nuance in the Mazurka is specially delightful (10-in. d.-s.).

Those who have not heard William Primrose at first hand have a pleasant surprise in a 12-in. d.-s. of the youth playing Saint-Saëns's Introduction and Rondo Capriccioso, with pianoforte accompaniment by G. O'Connor Morris. I have heard nothing so nearly like Heifetz in its clarity and finish, though I am a wee bit doubtful about the intonation in some of the chord playing at the end—and in such things mere doubt is enough. This brilliant young British fiddler, heralded by such a record as this, should go very far. Another capital violin record is a 10-in. d.-s. of Marjorie Hayward in A Donegal Air and The Admiral's Galliard, said to be by Moffatt, but sounding like an old piece edited by him. The Donegal Air is known to a good many folk in the song version of Hubert Hughes—The Lover's Curse. The violin arrangement is by Henry Coleman. Miss Hayward makes the most of both pieces, her vigorous treatment of the Galliard being particularly good.

Sidonie Goossens plays very delightfully in harp solos by MacDowell and Hamilton Harty, without, however, persuading us that the most picturesque of instruments can be heard alone for more than a few moments without becoming monotonous (10-in. d.-s.).

The English Singers have been recorded (10-in. d.-s.) in a couple of Vaughan Williams's folk-song arrangements—The Turtle Dove and The Springtime of the Year. They are heard to less advantage than in their previous records. The effect is far too strenuous, especially in the second song, the tender beauty being missed. The party needs, for one thing, more real bass quality for its foundation. The tone of the present bass is reedy and unappealing. I don't know who he is, and therefore speak with the more detachment.

The De Reszke Singers are heard in three ditties by Hubert Hughes—Simple Simon, Humpty Dumpty, and Doctor Foster. The first fails to amuse because the incongruity of nonsense sung to serious music makes its full effect only when we can see the singers. The two others are funny, especially that telling of Dr. Foster who went to Gloster (10-in. d.-s.).

Sundry vocal records are of Leila Megane (an extract from Therese and Brogi's Visione Veneziana); Florence Austral (numbers from La Forza del Destino and La Juive); and Carmen Hill (songs by Goring Thomas and Sibelius—that by the latter being The First Kiss, a striking song; but we don't hear many of the words).

A really funny record for the last—E. W. Hinchliff putting his bassoon through its paces with the Lucy Long Variations (beloved of Promenaders) and his own no less amusing Ri-too-Ral-i-Tay.

[We regret that 'Wireless Notes' are unavoidably omitted this month.—EDITOR.]

London Concerts

PHILHARMONIC CONCERT

The fifth concert of the Royal Philharmonic Society, on February 21, was conducted by Mr. Eugène Goossens. There was the innovation of a small orchestra of sixty, instead of the usual mighty array. The programme was designed to show that there is interesting orchestral music possible for a band of less than a hundred and ten. After Rimsky-Korsakov's little Symphony in A minor on Russian themes, there was a delicate performance of the Siegfried Idyll. Miss Jelly d'Aranyi played Mozart's Concerto in D (K. 211) in that superb, detached way of hers.

Holst's new Fugal Concerto for flute, oboe, and strings began the second part. Mr. Albert Fransella and Mr. Leon Goossens, the soloists, gave the engaging piece its due of crispness, fun, and feeling. It all passes too quickly for most people. We are used to so much more pomp and copiousness of musical eloquence. This is almost too witty. It is delicious. Stravinsky's Firebird Suite for small orchestra came last. It was admirably played, and won all ears. In this version the music sounds a degree more harsh and bold than in its original colours. Either way it is fascinating music, and inspires the wish that Stravinsky had managed to remain young, soft-hearted, and impressionable for a few more years. C.

A NEW BAX SONATA

WIGMORE HALL, FEBRUARY 26

Bax's new Sonata for violoncello and pianoforte was introduced, at their joint recital, by Beatrice Harrison and Harriet Cohen. It is a more spacious work than Bax's other recent contributions to chamber music, comprising three movements, the last of which is continued by an Epilogue. The slow section has a warm Southern glow that seems in retrospect to impart its colour to the whole, though there is little in the first movement that—again in retrospect—appears to welcome it. There the movement is charged with meaning of another kind—deeds, not dalliance—whilst the Finale furnishes a more boisterous, perhaps roistering, contrast. The Sonata, needless to say, was finely played, as were also several solos by both performers. E. E.

KODÁLY AGAIN

ÆOLIAN HALL, FEBRUARY 29

At its only recital for the present season, the Hungarian Quartet, besides playing Haydn and Beethoven in the finished style these players have taught us to expect from them, gave the first performance of Kodály's C minor Quartet. It is an early work (Op. 2) and antedates all the music we have hitherto heard of his in London. Whilst displaying certain attractive qualities of a somewhat Schubertian aspect (and even recalling that composer's longwindedness) it does not prove much more than that at this period Kodály had learned most of the requisites of his art—except perhaps how to 'carry on,' for he comes now and then to a dead stop and starts afresh. That at least is how it strikes us at present, but casting the mind back a few years it is easy to realise that such a Quartet as this, with its personal vein of melody and its freshness of treatment, would have made quite a stir, besides prompting predictions—which, happily, have meanwhile been realised.

E. E.

ROYAL CHORAL SOCIETY'S HOLST AND ELGAR PROGRAMME

Sir Hugh Allen conducted Holst's Hymn of Jesus at the Royal Choral Society's concert at the Albert Hall on March 1. Sir Hugh is not the sophisticated conductor that Sir Landon Ronald is, and it was therefore interesting to have them both appearing in the same programme. Owing to over-anxiety a false start was made in the opening brass solo, but from this point the conductor's magnetism and grip of choral forces dominated this dynamic and mystical work, imparting a unity of purpose and a fine flight of imagination which made the reading at once dramatic and beautiful. The semi-chorus of angelicals was ethereal, and tonally misty enough to form a foil to the piled-up architecture of the full, massive tone of the main choral body. Despite moments of indecision as well as some decidedly shaky intonation, it was a most satisfactory presentment of a great work.

Sir Landon Ronald has a flair for Elgar. The Dream of Gerontius gives him no trouble as a tour de force, nor does he ever waver in choosing the right amount of rhythmic elasticity and slight touches of theatricality which the work calls for. Elgar insists on such treatment by his scoring for both choir, and orchestra, and clothes this poem in full-coloured vestments which Cardinal Newman can hardly have imagined. This applies particularly to certain portions of the second half. Of the soloists (Miss Margaret Balfour, Mr. Arthur Jordan, and Mr. Horace Stevens), the honours must be given to the lady, especially on account of her ease of phrasing and comparatively clear enunciation.

G. V.

RETURN OF TERTIS WIGMORE HALL

At the risk of becoming platitudinous the one comment we can make on such an incident as the empty state of Wigmore Hall at Tertis's reappearance (March 4) is that a prophet was ever unhonoured in his own country. It is asserted that only about sixty to seventy people paid for admission. To them Tertis addressed a few remarks, welcoming the fact that they cared enough for music to be willing to support the musician. I should prefer to address my remarks to the absentees, but for the editorial censorship. To think that our musicians—performers, composers, and the rest of them—have laboured, and not in vain, to re-gild this country's musical escutcheon only to be told in unmistakable fashion that their sole prospect of a livelihood lies in the United States! Tertis and Bax joined in the latter's Viola Sonata—one of the works accepted for Salzburg. This was followed by Bach's Chaconne, transcribed, and by various other examples of transcendental viola playing. Anyway, those who were present were rewarded.

E. E.

DAME ETHEL SMYTH'S MASS

Dame Ethel Smyth's Mass in D was sung at Queen's Hall, on March 8, by the Birmingham Festival Choral Society, which at home, a month before, had retrieved the work from undeserved oblivion. Mr. Adrian C. Boulton again conducted, but there were changes in the soloists (this time Miss Carrie Tubbs, Miss Margaret Balfour, Mr. Archibald Winter, and Mr. Harold Williams)—and, more importantly, in the orchestra, which made all the difference. Sir Henry Wood's orchestra played, and the performance was incomparably better than that at Birmingham. The great accomplishment and spirit of it all naturally touched the composer's heart, and at the end, making a speech (she is as ready as Sir Walford Davies to make a speech!), she declared it the best performance of any work of music she had heard in her life. The Birmingham singers certainly made a great impression, all the more seeing that the vigorous choral writing betrays a certain inexperience which inclines to strain the voices in the animated movements.

It is a capital thing that the Mass should have been revived. It sheds light on the development of its remarkable author, and even if it is not a masterpiece of the first order, its genuine character and its vehemence make it intrinsically worth hearing. The large audience appeared to be thoroughly impressed.

C.

ITALIAN BALLET AND OPERA AT COVENT GARDEN

A company of dancers and opera-singers from Rome provided a mild entertainment at Covent Garden for a fortnight last month, beginning on March 10. Since the heyday of the wonderful Diaghilev there have been any number of little ballet companies which have sought to share in the vogue which his brilliant achievements created. This Italian Ballet, which did not boast many Italian names (the principal ballerina was Madame Leonidoff-Massera), was neither the best nor the worst of these seedlings. It was inoffensive, but it was feeble, and there was neither the technique in the dancing nor the ideas in the spectacles to warrant the occupation of Covent Garden. The season commenced with the inevitable Persian Festival, to music picked up here and there from the Russians. The vision of antique Greece and the Sèvres porcelain piece (both with commonplace music) were likewise rather hackneyed for 1924. The Ophelia Dance of Madame Leonidoff was a trifle absurd—her Ophelia gently waltzed to the too familiar tune of Sibelius. A Venetian ballet, The Dentist, after Gozzi, set forth with promising pretensions and then fizzled out. The music again was inconsiderable. Another Venetian diversion had music by Ottorino Respighi—dapper and adroit enough, but too intimately related to all the ballet music that ever was.

The singers of the troupe were much better than the dancers, and the little opera, The Quarrelsome Lovers, of the company's conductor, Attilio Parelli, warmed the chilly air of the first night. Later on they gave Wolf-Ferrari's well-known Susanna's Secret. Both these composers know their trade. As journalism is to literature, so is their slick musical writing to the art of original composition. But theirs is good journalism, and they know how to make the time pass agreeably—agreeably, that is, if one is complaisant enough to bear with the vacuity of action and theme of these pieces. Parelli's lovers are dolls, and very long-winded dolls, of the sort which the Roman marionettes of last year so well parodied. As for Susanna's secret cigarettes and Susanna's jealous idiot of a husband, that jest barely survives one performance.

The singing was generally on the small side for a house like Covent Garden, but everyone had a proper little idea of the art of song, which is never amiss. Madame Sassone-Soster, and the tenor Govoni, were the lovers in Parelli's piece. Madame Bine de Marchini, and the baritone Donarelli, sang Susanna's Secret.

C.

GOOSSENS CONCERTS

ÆOLIAN HALL, FEBRUARY 20 AND MARCH 12

These concerts continue to display their surprising—sometimes disconcerting—variety. At the second of the present series the remarkably efficient Hungarian Quartet, led by Emeric Waldbauer, was heard in two compositions—one the blithe-hearted work of an Englishman, the other one of the jaw-breaking nuts which Schönberg set his admirers to crack about the time when he was making the great change in his manner. Armstrong Gibbs's Pastoral Quartet is one of those works which are happy because they have no history to make. It follows precedent in a landscape, children, noontide peace, and evening romps, treated all with a fanciful but not too inventive touch, and is as pleasant to hear as the scenes it suggests are to see. The other work was Schönberg's second String Quartet, of which the two later movements are settings of poems by Stefan George. These were sung, not entirely without blemish, but very creditably, by Miss Dorothy Moulton. They are no easy task, and it is not certain that the music really deserves that such great effort should be made on its behalf, for it is in no settled style. It presents the evolution of Schönberg at the stage he had reached on the eve of launching his Op. 11 thunderbolt, not in its provisional consummation, but in a series of conic sections, of which the last suggests hyperbole. Small wonder that he had to call a halt and review his creative prospects. Miss Moulton also sang two settings by Eugène Bonner of poems by Walt Whitman—faithful musical reflections of the texts.

The third concert almost baffles description, except catalogue-fashion. Miss Dorothea Webb sang unaccompanied songs, including a very good one by Frederic Austin, and others to eight different forms of accompaniment, from harpsichord plain and harpsichord coloured with violin and 'cello, to Zulu marimba, and various instruments the names of which, for aught I know, may have been culled from the menu of the Chinese restaurant. This might have been a most absorbing entertainment had not Miss Webb herself infused into it an element of doubt. After some not very convincing French and a version of de Falla's Jota, to which her accompanist connived at imparting a suggestion of a Bayswater drawing-room, it was difficult to believe that she was singing Mohawk, Matabele, or Chinese as to the manner born. On the contrary there was the suspicion that authenticity faded as the distance from her native land increased. The best songs were, of those previously known, Ireland's sylvan rhapsody Earth's Call and Goossens's Tea-Time; of the less-familiar, Arthur Benjamin's The Sea towards Evening and Norman Peterkin's The Piper, the latter with viola. The Dawn, by Herbert Bedford, with strings and bass triangle, was somewhat marred by the preoccupied diffidence of the virtuoso 'at' the latter instrument, who finished by making the listener as concerned as himself. The programme opened with an effective though not eventful Prelude and Scherzo for string quartet by R. F. Wood Smith. By far the most fascinating feature in it was Mozart's Quartet for oboe and strings, in which Leon Goossens once more distinguished himself. E. E.

DUTCH MUSIC

CONTEMPORARY MUSIC CENTRE

Faithful to its policy, the Contemporary Music Centre extended a welcome to a party of Dutch musicians, comprising Hendrik Rijnbergen (violin), Thomas Canivez ('cello), Joh. Feltkamp (flute), and Willem Pijper (March 13). The last-named not only appeared as pianist, but was the composer most strongly represented in the programme. In addition to these, Miss Dorothy Robson sang some songs by Diepenbrock (which did little to substantiate the rumours that had reached us of his prowess as a song-writer), by Sem Dresden, Fritz Schuurmann (two attractive pseudo-Japanese numbers), and Pijper. Dresden was also represented by his Sonata for flute and harp, the latter part being played, as also at Salzburg, on the pianoforte. It is an idyllic, impressionistic work, moderately indebted to French influences, but none the less acceptable. Two of the pianoforte pieces were by Voormolen, the third—or rather first, since they were played in that order—by Zagwijn. This was a gossamer trifle, lacking all substance, but strangely pleasant in its thinness.

Pijper's contributions were his second Trio (1921) and second Violin Sonata (1922), the latter a later work than the example performed at Salzburg in August of that year. His is a sharply-outlined, personal talent whose expression may not always carry conviction, but intrigues the ear even when it does not. The reason is one not unusual with young composers to-day. The 'modern texture' is so prevalent that they acquire it in the very air they breathe, often whilst thematically they are unconsciously clinging to older associations. This creates a kind of hiatus between theme and treatment, which is accentuated by the harshness of the harmonic methods, with their intentional avoidance of fusion. Much of Pijper's music inclines to gentleness in all else but his methods of compounding a texture, and his harmonic bitterness does not impair the habitual suavity of his thought. On occasion, however, he can break out and shake a fist at the horizon, as he does in this Trio.

E. E.

THE BACH CHOIR

The Bach Choir sang the St. Matthew Passion on March 15 at Westminster Central Hall. Dr. R. Vaughan Williams conducted. The hall was full, and there was something in the air which said that the performance of the work, which not so very many years ago was felt to be strange and remote, was both to singers and audience a familiarised solemnity. The usual excisions were made, but Dr. Vaughan Williams pushed austerity far in not allowing a break in this long afternoon for the stretching of limbs and a few minutes' change of air.

The Bach Choir has now regulated a treatment of its own for the Passion, a treatment which does much to satisfy. These singers completely abjure the air of virtuosity worn by some famous choirs, which would ill become this work. The performance generally did not specially make for a high polish of sheer technical efficiency, but invoked serious understanding and feeling. This, applied to such music, meant a great measure of justice and of spiritual comfort for the listener. The Choir certainly still carries a good many 'passengers,' so far as tone-production is concerned. But the work is known—better known than ever—by all. Really only a few of the minor ejaculated solos were at all shaky throughout the afternoon. (The organ, however, played a few tricks that were out of place.) The Elgar and Atkins edition was used, with a few modifications in the recitatives.

The solo-singing harmonized with the general spirit. There was no strained display and no 'starring.' The accomplishment varied somewhat, but the feeling was always right. A young tenor from the Temple Church, Mr. Norman Stone, sang as the Evangelist. In this music he has already several times been heard, and so far as his musical sense of it goes, he earns great praise. If Bach's writing for the tenor voice were less extraordinary, Mr. Stone would be almost above criticism in the part, so interesting, and at the same time dignified, does he make the narrative music. The technics, however, of his production—notably on the high notes—needs some further consideration. The words of Jesus were sung with good style—earnest, simple, and not affected—by Mr. Stuart Robertson, a young bass of whom much may be expected one day. He has a useful, powerful voice, to which quality needs to be added. Miss Dorothy Silk sang the soprano music, and made the A minor aria one of the deeply-moving moments of the day. Miss Millicent Russell was the contralto, and sang well on a placid and steady level. It seemed that more distinction might be added to this singing by the giving to individual words of more character, higher relief. The men's arias were sung by Mr. Archibald Winter and Mr. Arthur Cranmer. Mr. Lofthouse played the continuo at the pianoforte. C.

THE PHILHARMONIC CHOIR

Holst's Hymn of Jesus has passed the tests of first and second performance, where so many acclaimed works break down, and has won its way into general esteem. Every time it is heard—Queen's Hall, Southwark Cathedral, Albert Hall, and again at Queen's Hall, at the Philharmonic Choir's concert on March 13—it seems to grow in stature, to reveal more and more direct purpose in its details and expressiveness in its force of language. The work seemed to have impressed itself thoroughly on the Choir at this latest performance under Mr. Charles Kennedy Scott, and with all these voices and a first-class orchestra thoroughly at grips with the music the effect was stirring. The Hymn of Jesus capped the fine C minor Pianoforte Concerto of Delius, which Mr. Howard-Jones played to admiration. The Concerto capped Parry's Blest Pair of Sirens, that ever-young work from an age of high mortality. This was an hour of great music, which musical London passed by in its blindness.

After this the programme descended. Franck's Psyche was, for most of us, new light on the composer. Could such inanimate music come from his best period? Could the lemonade be so diluted, and must one drink a gallon? No doubt Parry, Delius, and Holst had a good deal to do with the taste of Psyche. After that came Beethoven's Fantasia for pianoforte, orchestra, and chorus, which is not often heard. So rarely are the Franck and Beethoven works performed that we must thank the Choir for giving us a chance of making their acquaintance. It must be confessed, however, that to hear them is to understand the neglect.

M.

JOSEF HOFFMANN

We expect certain definite characteristics from the musical reputation which has been completed in America, characteristics which have a tendency to prejudice the Englishman who finds it difficult to forget the power of the press boosting process which is so rampant in the United States. Hearing Josef Hoffmann for the first time at Queen's Hall recently, with Sir Henry Wood's superb background of intuitive accompanying, it was hard to believe that this pianist had ever crossed the 'herring pond' at all. Perhaps only a virtuoso pianist ever sincerely admires Chopin in any work of his with orchestral setting. Judging by Hoffmann's exquisitely beautiful performance of the E minor Concerto he is one of those devotees, and he did justify the work as a piece of picturesque pianism set rather deliberately in an orchestral form which does not always fit it foursquare. Our satisfaction was almost too complete to be true, and so it turned out. Hoffmann at his Aeolian Hall recital later in the month committed occasional sins of artistic taste which we did not expect. There is in this artist a provocative gift of individualism which now and then carries him to an excess of originality. The striving of a Beethoven endeavouring to unfold new pianistic possibilities in an Op. 110 appealed to Hoffmann's reverential nature, and he allowed the Sonata to express itself without any applied artificialities of style. The colossal urge of Schumann's Symphonic Studies appealed strongly to the rhythmic vitality with which Hoffmann is so liberally endowed, as did the same characteristic in Chopin's A major Polonaise, but this mettlesome steed pranced through a series of exhilarating curvettings in the Berceuse and some of the smaller Chopin dance pieces, just as a child will impulsively kick over the house of blocks or cards which a parent has built up with light-fingered dexterity. An artist who depends as much as Hoffmann does on rhythmic effects is almost bound to develop a staccato mannerism, and this was thunderously—sometimes horribly—apparent in the G minor Ballade, when the pianist began to dogmatise with far too many left-handed poundings. The hearer was hard put to it for a logical reason for these signs of vulgarity after the superb grace of the E minor Concerto, and tried to excuse the soloist on account of what must have been his numerous trials of strength in abnormally large American concert-halls, but the argument fell again to the ground at the Albert Hall on the following Sunday, when Hoffmann returned to his more chastened mood, and gave us playing of real excellence.

G. Y.

SOLITO DE SOLIS

The arrival of M. Solito de Solis, a new comet of the pianoforte, has recalled nothing so much as the sudden bursting into view of M. Pouishnov. But M. de Solis went one better, for he trailed six recitals to M. Pouishnov's five. He is one of those pianists who seem to have been born with gifts in readiness—a pianist pur sang as distinct from a clever musical person who has practised the pianoforte. He can say what he likes in the pianoforte-playing language, but he addresses himself to an audience through the keyboard rather than through music, and we wish that he would manage to combine the two. He certainly does marvellous things with his fingers. His performance of Chopin's Study in thirds is still spoken of with bated breath. He floated through the Liszt Sonata with the ease of a Sioux shooting the rapids, and he had attention to spare for the scenery—in this case romantic effects of expression and tone. Yet, with all his wonderful faculty to help him on the right path, he plunges openly into musical crime. His rubato is robbery with violence. It seems to obey blind impulse, without care for right and wrong. In Chopin's F minor Fantasia there is a well-known tune which soars through the air in a wonderful flight of quavers. In the hands of M. de Solis it pranced before the footlights something like this:

&amp;c.

Morceau pittoresque. Par M. Chopin! The writer did not hear M. de Solis play Bach, but one who loves Bach as an old friend reports that the pianist was just his nimble-fingered and high-handed unaccountable self. Strange that such gifts should go with such a lack of responsibility.

M.

SOME SINGERS OF THE MONTH

Mr. Robert Maitland sang at Wigmore Hall more finely than at his previous concert, although again he had the misfortune of being imperfectly served by his accompanist. It was very agreeable to miss entirely this time the extravagances of detail which had marred his singing before. Mr. Maitland was at his best in Bach. He sang the G minor arioso from the St. Matthew Passion and the 50th Cantata. He is assuredly one of the finest of contemporary Bach singers. His tone here was rich, weighty, dignified. The low notes were duly loose, the upper ones so 'covered' as to be free of any suggestion of raucousness. His voice responded to a wide range of inward control, and his unhampered throat allowed him to change colour far more sensitively than do most singers with such heavy voices. Some Brahms was, too, of the first order. Mr. Maitland also sang some Mozart (the Catalogue Song and Osmin's two Arias), but this was not, to our mind, the right thing. It was altogether too ponderous and laboured for Mozart.

Miss Marguerite Namara, Messrs. Antonin Trantoul and Eric Marshall took part in a Sunday afternoon concert at the Albert Hall which, musically, was poverty-stricken. All these performers were announced as 'celebrated'—an epithet which is never applied in the advertisements of really celebrated performers. The lavish use of the term on this occasion failed to collect more than a meagre audience. M. Trantoul is a tenor with a typically French style. His unremitting care in placing his tones forward gave a sense of calculation, not to say frigidness, to his singing, which cannot be said to have appealed to the emotions. Mr. Marshall, the baritone, is improving, and his soft notes were beautiful. The ground work of his technique, however, is too unsettled to enable him to carry out the elaboration at which he aims.

Miss van Geuns, a Dutch soprano, sang at Wigmore Hall. She began indifferently. In Salvator Rosa's familiar Vado ten spesso she 'pushed up' to her higher notes, thinned her vowels, and in general sang like a student. Then in the song of Cesti, which followed, she recovered and showed us her true accomplishment. This was not of a sublime order, but it was artistic in a considered, homely way. At her best her tone was of an engaging sweetness, and her singing had a pleasant suggestion of inviting the listener into her confidence.

Miss Doris Pearce, who sang at Wigmore Hall, sometimes over-taxed her resources, but her voice was bright and agreeable. Arnold Bax's Amours, amours, asked for too much in the way of legato. This singer should make a point of working for a firm cantabile.

Mr. Roland Hayes sang at Queen's Hall, and was warmly welcomed back to London. Criticism can urge only this against his art, that it is over-sentimental. Is even that just? It must be remembered that Mr. Hayes has not unlimited volume. He has not the power to thrill us with magnificence. So he beguiles us instead, and very successfully. No doubt there is an exotic flavour about the young negro's interpretations. But that is surely within his rights, so long as he adheres to the notes and is sincerely aiming at the spirit of the music. Technically he is well-nigh faultless.

Mr. Charles Hackett sang at the Albert Hall. His tenor voice is probably one of the largest in the world to-day. This remarkable natural gift, together with the use he makes of it, gives him a leading place among the younger operatic singers. Mr. Hackett at present lacks the power to sweep the listener off his feet. He does much by well-considered methods, but there is a shade too much of deliberate consciousness. Mr. Hackett does not lose himself in the moment's glory—unlike Caruso (with whom he may fairly be compared in some ways), who stirred us so by singing every song as though that one were the crowning song of his life. Technically Mr. Hackett is as sound as was Caruso, and it is possible that, if he has in him the temperament, the development of a few years will see him as famous. He sang Liszt's Quand je dors superbly.

Mr. John Goss sang a programme of an unusual pretty tastefulness at Wigmore Hall. It began with Marcello's cantata Ora, che voi partisti, it included some unfamiliar Schubert, it introduced new songs of Peter Warlock and H. J. Foss (who accompanied), and embraced Delius, Vaughan Williams, and Arnold Bax. Sea chauties arranged by Clive Carey were jolly and popular. Mr. Goss has lightened his singing from some of the gloom that used to oppress it. He is singing now as though his chosen art had compensations for its cruel trials. There is no doubt that as he finds himself Mr. Goss will count considerably in our musical doings. He has been so well trained that he can afford still more to forget that he has ever been trained at all. There are still signs of a slightly cramped style, and there is room for more tone-colour. We wanted him to grasp his courage and make now and then for a brighter resonance. A singer of this calibre can afford to experiment. Mr. Goss's diction is cultivated, and his voice evenly produced throughout its range.

Mr. Goss also sang at Miss Dorothy Silk's concert at Wigmore Hall. This time Miss Silk was singing below her best form. In Handel's Gentle airs she scooped, and her singing was not free from throatiness. She was more herself in Bach's Jauchet Gott.

Mr. John Coates at his Chelsea concert sang once again as he only can sing—and then told us in speech a tale of hard facts, to show that though one may sing in a way second to none in the land, the community is not, therefore, to be persuaded to allow one a living wage. Mr. Coates explained to us that in 1921 he lost £400 on three concerts in the West-End, and that his net gain since on a series of twenty-one concerts at Chelsea had been £21. These strange figures were hardly the sort to encourage aspiring young vocalists in the audience. If John Coates of all men were not enjoying a deserved reward for his art, who on earth can hope for money from music! H. J. K.

Competition Festival Record

COMPETITIONS IN APRIL

(A list supplementary to that given on page 261 of our last issue.)

PLYMOUTH.—March 29 to April 5. Mr. J. H. Lucas, 62, Hill Park Crescent, Plymouth.

WITNEY AND COGGES.—April 1, 2. Miss Janet D. Early, Woodlands, Witney, Oxon.

TYNEDALE.—April 4, 5. Mrs. Thorp, Dalchhead, Stockfield.

NORTHAMPTONSHIRE (Central).—April 4, 5. Lady Annaly, Brixworth Hall, Northampton.

COLVILLE'S MUSICAL FESTIVAL (Motherwell and District, &c.).—April 4, 5. Mr. C. D. Rigg, 195, West George Street, Glasgow.

FOLKESTONE.—April 2, 5. Mr. R. E. Gordon, 5, Cheriton Place, Folkestone.

EAST SUSSEX AND TUNBRIDGE WELLS.—April 8, 9. Dr. E. A. Wharton, Withyham, Sussex.

BERKHAMSTED AND DISTRICT.—April 8, 9. Miss K. Talbot, Little Gaddesden House, Berkhamsted. (An extension of the Little Gaddesden Festival.)

NORTH LINCOLNSHIRE (BRIGG).—April 8, 9. Mr. Algernon R. Haynes, Bigby Road, Brigg.

MOTHERWELL AND WISHAW.—April 10, 11, 12. Mr. T. Rae, Main Street, Wishaw.

NORTH NORTHAMPTONSHIRE (OUNDLÉ).—April 11, 12. The Lady Lilford, Lilford Hall, Barnwell, Peterborough.

LIVERPOOL.—April 21-26. Mr. Herbert Moody, 16, Goodison Avenue, Stanley Park, Liverpool.

SLIGO FRIS CEOL.—April 22-25. Mr. T. Cawley, 20, Temple Street, Sligo.

FIFE, KINROSS, AND CLACKMANNAN.—April 23-26. Mr. George J. Sheriff, 30, Queen Anne Street, Dunfermline.

WIRRAL AND EDDISBURY (CHESTER).—April 24-26. Mrs. Harold Mitchell, Savings Bank, Grosvenor Road, Chester.

ABERDEEN AND NORTH-EAST SCOTLAND.—April 24-26.

RUTLAND (OAKHAM AND UPPINGHAM).—April 24. Miss M. Codrington, Preston Hall, Uppingham.

MANX (DOUGLAS).—April 28-May 1. Mr. W. A. Craine, North Cliff, Douglas, Isle of Man.

PORTADOWN.—April 28-May 2. Miss Winifred E. Hadden, Magharee, Portadown.

MORAY (ELGIN).—April 28-30. Mr. William McGhie, Bank of Scotland Chambers, Elgin.

WEST LINDSEY (GAINSBOROUGH).—April 30-May 3. Hon. Mrs. Sandars, Gate Burton Hall, Gainsborough.

WENSLEYDALE (LEYBURN).—April 30, May 1. Rev. H. G. Topham, The Deanery, Middleham.

THE 'BRITISH EMPIRE EISTEDDFOD' AGAIN

In our issue for October, 1923, we endeavoured to expose the futility of a musical competition held at the Crystal Palace under the above pretentious label. The event was so clearly a 'frost' that we thought no more would be heard of it. But here it is again, announced to be held at the Alexandra Palace. As the promoters have thus transferred their operations to a district already well catered for by existing competitive festivals, we think it well to tell our North London readers something about it. (1.) The British Empire Eisteddfod is not affiliated to the Federation of Musical Competition Festivals, and, on its present basis, is not likely to be. (2.) It has no connection with the British Empire Exhibition or the National Eisteddfod Association. The use of the term 'British Empire' is particularly misleading at the present juncture. (3.) It has been refused the use of the Crystal Palace. Apparently the C. P. had enough of it in 1923. (4.) Not a single choir competed in its 1923 events. (5.) It is announced as being 'under the auspices of the Music Section of the Universities Institute,' and gives on its Syllabus a long list of influential patrons, placed in such a way as to suggest that this distinguishing patronage is given to the Eisteddfod. Nevertheless, we shall be surprised if the galaxy of titled folk have ever heard of the affair. Moreover, the 'Universities Institute' appears to have no official connection with any University, and inquiries as to its examinations and diplomas (associateship and fellowship) produced no more than an evasive reply. (6.) The two secretarial addresses in the Syllabus give no names—merely streets and telephone numbers. The Northern address turns out to be that of Mr. Bertram Williams, who happens to be a singing adjudicator at the British Empire Eisteddfod, and a well-advertised teacher of singing in the Northern district. (7.) The Music Teacher for March contained some pertinent questions regarding the British Empire Eisteddfod, and marked copies were sent to Mr. Williams, to the Secretary, and to the 'Director' of the 'Universities Institute.' All three replied, but their letters gave no answer to the questions.

We are always ready to support any competitive festival that is clearly run for educational purposes. In the case of the 'British Empire Eisteddfod,' the signs of its being projected for private gain are so strong, and the publicity methods of its promoters so unsatisfactory, that we hope readers who think of filling up entry forms will go on thinking. The Music Teacher article and the above points will give them ample material.

Music in the Provinces

ABERYSTWYTH.—On February 22 the College Trio played Brahms's Horn Trio and Dvorák's Dumky, a small choir sang three pieces by Robert Jones, and the Choral Union sang Gossip Joan and chorus songs. Sir Walford Davies conducted.

BANGOR.—Early English music formed the programme of the University College concert on February 21. Pianoforte music included Byrd's The Carman's Whistle, and the Madrigals Upon a hill and The Nightingale (Weelkes), Weep, O mine eyes and Cruel, you pull away too soon (Morley), and others by Wilbye and Bateson, were sung by the Birmingham Elizabethan Trio. The instrumental works included Byrd's Sextet for strings, the melody, 'Go to bed, sweet Muse,' from Ultimum Vale (Robert Jones, 1609), arranged for strings and pianoforte by Mr. E. T. Davies, and some pieces for string quartet.

BARMOUTH.—The amateur orchestra, reinforced by a few professionals, and styled Harlech Festival Local Orchestra, gave its first concert at Barmouth on March 5. Dr. Heath is the conductor, and the thirty players are drawn from Criccieth, Blaenau-Festiniog, Dolgelley, Towyn, and Aberdovey. The programme included Gluck's Overture to Alceste, some Irish melodies arranged by Dr. Heath, Tchaikovsky's Elegie for string orchestra, and the Rosamunde music.

BIRMINGHAM AND DISTRICT.—Mr. Eugene Goossens's interpretation of Brahms's second Symphony, with the City Orchestra, on March 6, had a clean, penetrating quality. It was alive and warm, even in the Adagio movement. Mr. Sammons played the Max Bruch G minor Concerto on a new Vincent violin which has warm, full tone, especially on the lower strings.—At two Saturday night concerts Mr. Appleby Matthews was the conductor. One programme included Borodin's B minor Symphony and Dvorák's Water-Fay—the latter for the first time at Birmingham. It was, however, little more than tepid programme-music, and did not give us the composer at his best. Miss Winifred Browne was the soloist in Beethoven's C minor Pianoforte Concerto.—At another Saturday concert a programme of dance-music was given. Strauss's Wine, Women, and Love Waltz and Gluck's Ballet of the Furies were notably well-played. Madame Gell's Ladies' Choir gave some delightful part-singing in pieces by Brahms and Holst, and Wagner's Rhine Maidens music. At the Sunday concert on February 17, Beethoven's seventh Symphony and Grieg's Sigurd Jorsalfar Suite were played.—Mr. Charles Knowles was the singer on the following Sunday. In a scena from The Flying Dutchman, Mr. Knowles showed that a well-produced bass voice can be a pleasure in itself. The Clock Symphony of Haydn was also given.—The Sunday concerts, all conducted by Mr. Appleby Matthews, have brought Brahms's third Symphony, Mozart's Idomeneo Overture, and Beethoven's eighth Symphony.—At one of Miss Sotham's Mid-day concerts, the Philharmonic Quartet played Tanéïev's Pianoforte Quartet in E, and a set of variations from a Quartet by Dvorák.—On March 13, Mr. Frederick Dawson gave a mid-day pianoforte recital, at which he played works by Beethoven, Scriabin, and Chopin.—Miss Marjorie Hayward and Miss Marjory Sotham gave the Kreutzer Sonata at a mid-day concert.—Miss Ethel Cobham and Miss Violet Lewis have started a series of mid-day concerts at Wolverhampton. Among the artists who have already appeared are Miss Winifred Browne and Miss Marie Fromm, and Mr. John Goss.—On March 11, Miss Mary Abbott and Mr. Johan Hock gave Pianoforte and Violoncello Sonatas by Nicodé and Dohnányi.

BRADFORD.—A fortnight's season by the B.N.O.C. has overshadowed other things. The repertory, which made no concession to bad old fashions, included The Perfect Fool, Alkestis, and Gianni Schicchi.—Of recent orchestral occasions, the most memorable has been the performance of Elgar's Enigma Variations, by the Bradford Permanent Orchestra, under Mr. Julius Harrison.—Chamber music programmes have introduced Sir Walford Davies's Violin Sonata in E minor and the second Violin Sonata of Arnold Bax.

BRIDPORT.—The Orchestral Society, conducted by Mr. Alex. Stone, played York Bowen's Suite, At the Play, Schumann's Quartet, Op. 47, and Beethoven's first Symphony, on March 4.

BRISTOL.—For the third and last concert of the season, on February 23, the Choral Society performed Berlioz's Faust, assisted by orchestra. The principal singers were Miss Florence Mellors, Mr. John Perry, and Mr. Herbert Brown. Mr. George Riseley conducted.—The Royal Orpheus Glee Society gave its eightieth annual Ladies' Night, under Mr. Riseley's direction, on February 28. An unusual programme included Walmisley's I wish to tune, Bexfield's The Death of Hector, Elgar's The Wanderer and Zut, zut, zut! Patterson's The Wedding of Shon Maclean, Riseley's The Old Church Bells, Parry's Smile again, my bonnie lassie, and many other pieces.—At a Y.M.C.A. concert for the unemployed, the Co-operative Society Choir, under Mr. A. F. Lawrence, sang Walmisley's Music all-powerful and Dudley Buck's Hymn to Music.—Mr. Herbert Parsons played some pieces by John Ireland at his recent recital.—The Musical Society, formed by members of the various staffs of departments of the G.W.R., comprised on March 1 a choir of fifty-five voices and a string orchestra, conducted by Mr. Clare G. A. Beavis. Cowen's John Gilpin, Bantock's Grass of Parnassus, Elgar's Challenge of Thor, and some orchestral pieces were performed.—Before the West of England Musical Education Society, on March 1, Dr. George Dyson lectured on 'The Evolution of Contemporary Music,' with illustrations from Ireland, Holst, Goossens, Delius, Scriabin, and Stravinsky.—On March 12, Miss Gertrude Winchester's Ladies' Choir, at its second annual concert, sang Wolstenholme's The Ballad of Sir Humphrey Gilbert, Hoffmann's Song of the Norns, César Franck's Song of the Ermine, Karel Bendl's cantata, The Water-Sprite's Revenge, and Fletcher's The Galway Piper.

CARDIFF.—Bach's French Suite in G, Beethoven's Violin Sonata in C minor, and Trios in G by Haydn and Mozart, were played at the University College Chamber concert on February 18.—The Harmonic Choir and Male-Voice Party and Mr. Falkman's Orchestra combined in a performance, on March 2, of Félicien David's The Desert and Stanford's The Revenge.

EDINBURGH.—Prof. Tovey keeps up the interest of the Reid Orchestral Concerts. In February the programme honoured General Reid, who left funds to institute a Chair of Music at the University. A Sonata of his for flute was played by M. Fleury, who added Bach and Mozart. Miss Beatrice Harrison, with a Bach Suite and the Dvorák B minor Concerto, was the attraction in the following week. Later programmes have brought Schumann's Rhenish Symphony, the Delius Violin Concerto (played by Miss Adila d'Aranyi), and the 'big three' of Mozart's Symphonies, all in one evening.—Sir Thomas Beecham conducted the London Symphony Orchestra on February 23 in Bizet's Fair Maid of Perth Overture and the Chasse Royale of Berlioz.—The chief choral concerts have been that of Mr. Herbert Wiseman's Madrigal Choir on February 19 (choral music of Gibbons and Byrd, madrigals and modern part-songs, with string music of each period), and the performance of Athalie and part-songs by the University Musical Society on March 7, under Mr. H. Kinniburgh Robertson.—For chamber music there have been a visit by the Léner Quartet and Miss Katherine Goodson; Prof. Tovey's concert on February 17, with the Brahms Horn Trio; and the final Max Mossel concert, with the Rosé Quartet and Mr. Egon Petri.—The University Historical series has also provided much good chamber music, including the Trio for flute, violin, and violoncello from Bach's Musical Offering and the six-part Fugue for clavier.—M. Ysaye came on March 8, with Dame Clara Butt, and played a Veracini Sonata.

EXETER.—On February 19, Miss Mabel Pugh, a local musician, gave a pianoforte recital, assisted by Mr. Seymour Dossor (vocalist).—At the Chamber Music Club concert, on February 20, Dr. and Mrs. Bullock played a duet for two pianofortes by Parry, and Walford Davies's Six Pastorals for four voices, strings, and pianoforte were performed.—On February 26, the Male Choir, conducted by Mr. W. H. Cotton, sang Oakeley's Comes at times and Fleming's Integer Vixit.—Under the auspices of the Workers' Educational Association, a course of lectures was given in the spring term by Dr. Ernest Bullock and Mr. Lancelot Holden. Dr. Bullock dealt with the construction, analysis, and development of tunes; form and the composer, the interpreter and the listener; and Mr. Holden dealt historically with music from the period of Bach and Handel to modern tendencies.

GAINSBOROUGH.—Hamilton Harty's The Mystic Trumpeter was given by the Musical Society on February 18, under Mr. Alan Stephenson.

GLASGOW.—At the final concert of the season, on February 16, the Scottish Orchestra, conducted by Emil Mlynarski, played Beethoven's C minor Symphony and excerpts from The Mastersingers and Tannhäuser.

HUDDERSFIELD.—An excellent programme was given by the Glee and Madrigal Society on February 26. It included Lasso's Hark, the echo falling, Wilbye's Stay, Corydon, Elgar's Go, song of mine, Holst's Song of the Blacksmith and the Grail scene from Parsifal. This was the farewell appearance of Dr. C. H. Moody, who has conducted the Society for twelve years.

HULL.—Both Sir Henry Wood and Sir Thomas Beecham have conducted at Hull this year—the former in a miscellaneous programme by the Hull Philharmonic Society, the latter in Mozart's Prague Symphony with the London Symphony Orchestra.—The Harmonic Society, conducted by Mr. Walter Porter, ended its season with Caractacus on February 29, with Miss Maryan Elmar, Mr. Webster Millar, Mr. Arthur Cranmer, and Mr. Joseph Farrington as soloists.—The Shakespeare and Playgoers' Society has revived the 18th-century comic opera Midas, by Kane O'Hara, and made a very entertaining evening of it. The music had been discovered by Mr. Baggeley, the chief librarian of Hull, in the Henry Watson Music Library at Manchester.

LEEDS.—Chamber music has been in the ascendant lately. Mr. J. B. McEwen's Nugae was heard in company with Brahms at a University Mid-day recital. Haydn, Schubert, and Speaight's Shakespeare Fairy Characters were given at a 'Bohemian' concert. Messrs. Sammons, Sharpe, and Murdoch played Frank Bridge's Phantasy Trio at a Choral Union concert. On this occasion the choir, under Dr. Coward, sang two works of Byrd, Weelkes's As Vesta was from Latmos Hill descending, and Bach's Sleepers, wake.—Mr. Julius Harrison lectured on 'The Orchestra' to four hundred and fifty Leeds Grammar School boys on February 20.—The Mass in G minor of Vaughan Williams was admirably sung by the Philharmonic Society on March 12. Mr. Norman Strafford conducted in the absence of Dr. Bairstow.

LIVERPOOL.—At the Crane Hall concert on February 20, Mr. Frank Bertrand played Beethoven's Variations in C minor for pianoforte, and Mr. Harry Wilkinson played Elgar's 'Cello Concerto'.—On February 22 Miss Stillwell played Gerrard Williams's Potpourri for pianoforte, and, with Miss Isabel McCullagh and Miss Mary McCullagh, Schubert's Pianoforte Trio in E flat.—The final Mossel concert of the season, on February 23, brought the Rosé Quartet, Miss Marcia van Dresser, and Mr. Egon Petri. Schumann's Pianoforte Quintet and Hugo Wolf's Italian Serenade were the principal concerted numbers.—At the Vickers concert, on February 23, the artists were Miss Rosina Buckman, Mr. Maurice d'Oisly, Mr. Kingsley Lark, and the Vera Hall Pianoforte Trio.—At Crane Hall, on February 27, Miss Dorothy Vincent was the pianist, Miss le Mesurier the violinist, and Miss Sophie Thomson-de-Koushen sang Russian songs in the vernacular.—Sir Henry Wood conducted the Philharmonic concert on February 27, and the programme included Holst's Fugal Overture, York Bowen's Viola Concerto in C minor, in which Mr. Lionel Tertis was the soloist, Frank Bridge's Suite, The Sea, Strauss's Don Quixote Variations, the Bach-Elgar Fugue in C minor, and portions of The Immortal Hour.—Mr. Walter Rummel was the guest of the British Music Society on February 25, and played Bax's second Sonata and three Bach Chorale Preludes.—At the meeting of the British Music Society, on March 13, two new composers were introduced.—Mr. C. P. D. Cannon and Mr. T. H. Stafford. Of three songs by Mr. Cannon, A Memory and Spring Sorrow were most successful. Mr. Stafford was represented by two songs and a Violin Sonata. Another work performed was a new Pianoforte Trio by Ernest Lodge.

NEWCASTLE.—Blyth Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Mr. Duncan K. Grieve, played Tannhäuser music on February 18, and Mr. Tom Campbell—who was a miner, and has been engaged by the B.N.O.C.—was the singer.

NEWTOWN (MONTGOMERYSHIRE).—Newtown and District Choral Society, assisted by a full orchestra, performed Hiawatha's Wedding-Feast on February 27, conducted by Mr. W. R. Allen, of Aberystwyth College.

OKEHAMPTON.—The Choral Society, assisted by a string orchestra, performed Bach's Peasant Cantata, the Epilogue from The Golden Legend, and Purcell's Come, if you dare, on February 27. Miss Ffine de la Côte, Mr. Rowland Huyshe, and Mr. Walter Belgrove were the principal singers, and Mr. Sydenham James conducted.

OXFORD.—In connection with a scheme organized by Mr. W. K. Stanton, for providing concerts for the boys of St. Edward's School, Miss Myra Hess played Preludes and Fugues by Bach: Franck's Prelude, Chorale, and Fugue, Schumann's Papillons, and pieces by Ireland, O'Donnell, and Rachmaninov to a large audience of boys on February 20.—On February 24 the Elizabethan Singers were joined by Mr. Keith Douglas's chamber orchestra, and combined in a performance of the Masqué from Purcell's Dioclesian. The band also played Holst's St. Paul's Suite and Mr. Douglas's arrangement of Rameau's Tambourin.—On February 27 a party of local musicians performed a Violin Sonata by Joseph Gibbs, Elgar's Violin Sonata, Hamilton Harty's Irish Romance for violin, Scarlatti's Concerto sacro per il Santissimo Sacramento for voice, string trio, and pianoforte, and The Moor, a new song by Dr. W. H. Harris. Dr. Ernest Walker was the pianist, Miss Murray Lambert the violinist, and Mr. Sumner Austin the singer.—Mr. Roland Hayes gave a song recital in the Town Hall on February 28.—The Orchestral Society, at its final concert on March 13, played Schumann's Genoveva Overture, Beethoven's Pastoral Symphony, and Arthur Bliss's Rout. Mr. Maurice Besly conducted, and Miss Dorothy Moulton sang French folk-songs with orchestral accompaniment.—In the absence of Sir Hugh Allen, Mr. W. K. Stanton conducted the Bach Choir on March 9, when Be not afraid (Bach), Parry's Job, and Holst's Ode to Death were sung.

PENCOED.—The Choral Society, assisted by Mr. Herbert Ware's orchestra, performed Hiawatha's Wedding-Feast and The Hymn of Praise, on February 27. Mr. David Rees conducted.

PLYMOUTH.—The Orchestral Society, numbering eighty performers, played the Leonore Overture No. 3, Borodin's second Symphony, and an Idyll for viola solo and orchestra, composed by the conductor, Mr. Walter Weekes.—Dr. Harold Lake's Madrigal Society, at its spring concert on March 12, gave an excellent programme, including Wesley's When Israel came out of Egypt, Bach's Be not afraid and Chorale, Thou art mine, and Julius Harrison's In the Forest.

PORTSMOUTH.—Mr. Felix Swinstead deputised for Mr. Benjamin Dale (who was absent through illness) at the meeting of the Music Teachers' Association on February 20, and lectured on the technical and musical difficulties of teaching.—On February 18 the Quartet Players gave a programme of British music. Holbrooke's Symphonic Quartet for pianoforte and strings and three of Walthew's Five Diversions were played. The pianist, Mrs. Bullin, played York Bowen's Three Serious Dances, Cyril Scott's Danse Nègre, and Ireland's Heart's Ease.—The Excelsior Temperance Choir sang Fletcher's Rhapsody on Welsh Airs, Stanford's Diaphenia, Buck's Hymn to Music, and Walmisley's Sweete flowers, ye were too faire, on March 5. Mr. C. Weedon conducted.—On March 2 the Royal Marine Orchestra played a Sea Suite, by Fairfield, at the Municipal Concert.

RHONDDA.—The Upper Rhondda Orchestra, conducted by Mr. Percie G. Smith, played the Grieg Pianoforte Concerto in A minor, with Mr. J. T. Jones as soloist, and other music by Sibelius, Tchaikovsky, and Nicolai.

RICHMOND (YORKS).—Mr. Arthur Fountain and the Richmond Choral Society distinguished themselves on March 4 by performing Parry's Songs of Farewell and Dear's Songs of the Open Air as part of an excellent programme, in which Mr. Robert Parker joined worthily.

SCARBOROUGH.—The Rosé Quartet was heard here on February 15.—The Philharmonic Society ended its season on March 11 with a miscellaneous programme comprising Stanford's Songs of the Fleet, Cornelius's The Hero's Rest, other part-songs, and solo singing and playing. Dr. Ely conducted.

SHEFFIELD.—The E flat Clarinet Sonata of Brahms was played on March 5 by Mr. William Tomlinson, with Miss Ethel Cook at the pianoforte.—The Queen's Hall Orchestra, from London, came to Sheffield on March 18 and played Beethoven's seventh Symphony, Brahms's Tragic Overture, Bach's second Brandenburg Concerto, Dohnányi's Variations, and the Siegfried Idyll under Sir Henry Wood.

SIDMOUTH.—On February 21 Miss Doris Gough, a local violinist, gave a recital, assisted by Mr. Walter Belgrove, vicar-choral of Exeter Cathedral. The recitalist, who played a Concerto romantique in A minor, by Godard, was joined by Miss A. McNeile in a Concertante for two violins by Dancía, and by Miss Ethel Gough in César Franck's Sonata for pianoforte and violin.—The last of this season's Subscription concerts, organized by a number of ladies, with Miss M. Allen as hon. secretary, took the form of a pianoforte recital by Miss Myra Hess on February 28.

SWANSEA.—At a lecture on 'Colour in Music,' given by Sir Walford Davies on February 27, before University College Musical Society, the Aberystwyth College Trio played music by Brahms, Beethoven, and Dvůřák. In Beethoven's Archduke Trio, Sir Walford Davies was at the pianoforte.

TORQUAY.—Mr. E. W. Goss's Winter Orchestra played a Caucasian Suite by M. Ippolitov Ivanov on February 20, and Beethoven's String Quartet in E flat was included in the programme.—At the Symphony concert on February 21, the augmented orchestra played Schubert's fifth Symphony, Holst's Fugal Concerto for flute and oboe (with Mr. A. Gleghorn and Mr. G. Ellis as soloists), Borodin's On the Steppes of Central Asia, and Rimsky-Korsakov's Capriccio Espagnol.—On February 23 Coleridge-Taylor's Petite Suite de Concert was played.—On February 27 Quilter's Suite, As You Like It, and Handel's Violin Sonata in A, were the chief numbers.—A Burmese Suite by Woodforde-Finden was played on February 29.—On March 12, Mr. Henry Crocker's Orchestra of forty players performed Beethoven's second Symphony, Schumann's Pianoforte Concerto, with Dr. Harold Rhodes as pianist, and a Purcell Suite for strings.—The winter orchestra, conducted by Mr. E. W. Goss, has recently played a Suite, The Seasons, for strings and pianoforte, by J. C. Ames, Quilter's Three English Dances, and Suite As You Like It, the Unfinished Symphony, Saint-Saëns's Overture, Princess Jaune, and Dancía's Petit Symphonie for two violins.

WELLS.—On February 13 the Kendall String Quartet played a String Quartet by Arnold Bax, and some pieces by Percy Grainger.

YORK.—The British Music Society recently gave a programme of Mr. John Ireland's works, with the composer at the pianoforte, Mr. Alfred Wall as violinist (in the second Sonata), and Mr. Raymond Hartley as vocalist.

IRELAND

On February 15, at the Gaiety Theatre, Dublin, Mr. Joseph O'Mara's Opera Company presented the first performance in Ireland of an Austrian opera, The Apostle of St. Otmar, composed by Dr. Wilhelm Kienzl, a fellow-pupil of Weingartner and Busoni. Kienzl was on terms of intimacy with Wagner at Bayreuth, but was also a keen admirer of Schumann, and his style may be said to be an amalgamation of the schools of these two masters. Kienzl was born in January, 1857, and lived most of his life at Gratz. His first opera, Urvasi, was given at Dresden in February, 1886, and his best-known production, Der Evangelimann—dating from 1894—had a wonderful vogue. This is the opera which has been Englished as The Apostle of St. Otmar, the translation being by Mr. Walter Meyrowitz, who conducted the work. Although unconvincing, even at the repeat performance on February 28, it was an interesting revival.—The Philharmonic String Quartet gave a recital under the auspices of the Royal Dublin Society in the Theatre Royal on February 18, playing Mozart, Schubert, and Ravel. The last-named was particularly well received.—Dr. Esposito and Mr. Clyde Twelvetrees gave a pianoforte and 'cello recital under the same auspices on February 25—the last of the season.—A public meeting was held in the Mansion House, on February 19, to consider a scheme for the erection of a Citizens' Building and Concert-Hall for Dublin. Already the Feis Ceoil Council has offered £500, and other large subscriptions are promised. For over five years Dublin has been without an adequate concert-hall, and it is surely a matter of urgency to erect a suitable building on a central site.—Signor Viani gave his first public concert at the Theatre Royal on March 1, and delighted a vast audience. His songs were varied, and he played his own accompaniments.—Rummel drew a fairly large audience to the Theatre Royal on February 16, when his playing of Bach, Beethoven, Chopin, and Wagner was greatly appreciated. His recital (a Bach, Beethoven, Schubert programme) at Ulster Hall, Belfast, on February 19, was also most successful.

At Ulster Hall, Belfast, on February 16, Miss Kathleen Lafra, an Austrian mezzo-soprano, was the principal attraction. Her choice of songs showed fine discrimination.—An excellent programme was provided by the Ulster Male-Voice Choir, under the conductorship of Mr. John Vine, at Ulster Hall, on February 29, the Choir being assisted by Miss A. Turley, Mr. D. McAlpin, Mr. John Clarke, and Mr. Joseph L. Gurd, with Mr. J. H. MacBratney at the pianoforte.

Musical Notes from Abroad

GERMANY

KODÁLY AND SCHÖNBERG

In the presence of Arnold Schönberg, who had personally conducted his Pierrot Lunaire at Hamburg, the famous Amar Quartet gave a performance of two sharply contrasted chamber numbers. We are accustomed to count Zoltán Kodály among the composers of decidedly modern tendencies, the more so as we know that he is intimately connected with Béla Bartók, the strong and austere advocate of modernism in music. But every time we hear a new work by Kodály, the great distance that separates these composers becomes evident, a fact which is clearly proved by the Trio for two violins and viola which was heard at a recent evening of the Melos Society. There Kodály appears a rather superficial but extremely clever musician, whose principal virtue lies in his skilful handling of the stringed instruments. All that is modern seems, with him, rather artificial, but we find, especially in the last movement, a very distinct reaching back to the sources of popular music, which is the only point where Bartók and Kodály meet. It seems certain that he is one of the few composers of to-day who are able to write a violin concerto or a work of the kind. Yet how strangely was this Trio overshadowed by Schönberg's String Quartet, Op. 7, which, in spite of all that is romantic or sentimental in it, gives only the impression of music destined to persist. How noble the spirit whence such music has sprung! The form may be obscure and the music a trial to perceptivities, yet it grips the listener from beginning to end—almost an hour.

Schönberg's pupil, Anton Webern, a composer of deep artistic conviction, which rather handicaps him and hinders the free use of his gifts, came into prominence with some songs that were given by the Melos Society. It was indeed interesting to see how far romantic feeling may be translated into immaterial sound. It must, however, be added that these songs, with their lack of spontaneity, are rather degenerate children of romanticism. Another work offered by this Society was a new String Quartet by Otto Luening, a young American who studied in Germany. He is a pupil of Philip Jarnach, and a solid musical structure is the outcome. But neither imaginative power nor technical skill is fully developed. There is conflict between a very simple nature, speaking in its natural idiom, and the homage to modernity expressed by a linear contrapuntal language.

'BORIS GODOUNOV' AT THE GROSSE VOLKSOPER

Performances of Boris Godounov are much more rare in Germany than in the western countries of Europe, where Moussorgsky is considered the starting-point of modern music. Following the fine performance given by Fritz Busch at the Dresden Staats-Oper, the enterprising Grosse Volksooper gave Berlin a splendid interpretation of Boris. Next to Handel's Rodelinda it is the opera that makes the glory of the Volksooper and helps the last-named to compete with the less active Staats-Oper. Eugen Szenkar conducted the work with a fine sense for rhythm and colour, and the scenery, by Georg Salter, was splendid.

The Grosse Volksooper has been fortunate in securing Otto Klemperer, the great Kapellmeister of the Colonia Opera, as general music-director. This new appointment means a new and great hope for musical Berlin, which is becoming the home of good conducting. The public likes Erich Kleiber and Georg Szell, of the Staats-Oper. They both come from Vienna, but they made their careers in Germany.

SMETANA'S CENTENARY IN GERMANY

All over Germany Smetana's centenary has been celebrated as that of a national composer of European importance. Homage has been paid chiefly with performances of The Bartered Bride and the String Quartet, Aus mienem Leben.

But to this country belongs the merit of having produced the first biography worthy of the great composer (Smetana, by Ernst Rychnovsky, published by the Deutsche Verlags-Anstalt, Stuttgart & Berlin). It contains very full detail of Smetana's life and works, and a collection of his letters.

ADOLF WEISSMAN.

NEW YORK

The Metropolitan Opera Company announced nine novelties and revivals for the season. The novelties were really only two, La Habañera and I Compagnacci, of which I have written before. Of the revivals only a half have been worth producing; the others would have been much better left alone. Le Cq d'Or, Die Meistersinger, and Siegfried were ranked among the revivals, but these should be on the permanent list of current productions.

The last revival, Le Roi de Lahore, by Massenet, proved the most gorgeous spectacle ever presented on the stage of the Metropolitan, a riot of colour and superbscenic effects—but allied to a score of such inanity that it was impossible to listen with any patience. One whole Act is a ballet which is sometimes diverting, but not even miraculous spectacular effects nor wonderful ballet can atone for lack of interest or worth in the music. The expense of production must have been enormous—and to what purpose? That is what all are asking, but there seems to be no answer. It seems impossible that the box-office receipts will pay even half the outlay.

Our concert-halls have not been very interesting of late. Mengelberg gave us a badly-arranged programme at a recent Philharmonic concert, when he introduced two pieces of ancient music each calling for a harpsichord. The Concerto Grosso No. 8, by Corelli, was written for two solo violins and solo 'cello, accompanied by strings, harpsichord, and organ. Mengelberg used more strings than the composer intended, with the result that the accompaniment was sometimes too heavy; and himself played the harpsichord music on the pianoforte, conducting at the same time. The old melodic music was pleasing to the ear, especially as all the solo parts were very well done. But to follow this with Richard Strauss's arrangement of Couperin's Dance Suite was surely a mistake! As the programme-notes said 'this is Strauss's latest composition' we certainly wanted our ears and attention tuned to something that was a contrast to what had gone before. Strauss's ingenuity in the arrangement of this Dance Suite was quite obvious, but to appreciate and enjoy the Strauss-Couperin it must be heard under different conditions.

Another programme of dull music was relieved at the end by the brilliance of the solo performer. It is undeniable that Mahler has enough devoted admirers to form a coterie called 'Mahlerites,' but still they are not so numerous as to fill a concert-hall. The applause was scanty when the New York Symphony Society under Bruno Walter's direction played Mahler's first Symphony. It was a dreary affair. Such repetitious platitudes can never be interesting to any but the most devoted of Mahlerites. No fault could be found with the conductor, who showed great sincerity in directing so tiresome a score. The Goldmark Violin Concerto which followed was almost as dull a composition as the Symphony, but the playing of Heifetz nearly transformed it into a thing of beauty.

However, even Mahler must have his deserts. The Friends of Music gave lately an early song-cycle of his called The Lays of a Travelling Journeyman. The Journeyman sleeps, walks, and has various adventures on his travels. The music for the four songs is really beautiful, and Mahler was only twenty-three when he wrote it. What a pity that his early inspirations did not last into his later years!

M. H. FLINT.

ROME

At the Augusteum an outstanding success must be accorded the violinist, Adolf Busch, in a concert which lasted over two and a-half hours. Members of his Quartet collaborated with him in two works which, although productions of Mozart and Beethoven, were announced as 'novelties' for the Augusteum—i.e., the Sinfonia Concertante for violin, viola, and orchestra of Mozart, and Beethoven's Concerto for violin, 'cello, pianoforte, and orchestra. On the following day the Busch Quartet gave a concert at the Royal Philharmonic Hall, playing Schubert, Beethoven, and Mozart.

M. Alfred Cortôt has also been a visitor at the Augusteum, giving two concerts with the orchestra.

Two concerts taking place in March, and dedicated to Italian music, have been of special interest. The first, organized by Fernando Molinari, was held at the Augusteum, and gave the first performance of Respighi's second Suite of ancient lute dances and airs, transcribed for orchestra. This Suite is composed of four airs: Laura suave, by Fabrizio Garosio; Danza rustica, by Besardo; Campanae Parisienses, by an unknown composer; and a Bergamasca of Zanoncelli's. The second part of the programme was devoted to modern composers—e.g., Gasco's Presse il Clitunno, two symphonic impressions of Zandonai's Terra nativa, &c.

The second concert, organized by the Royal Philharmonic Society, brought to a hearing a very interesting unpublished Quartet in C minor, by Boccherini, the MS. of which is in the Library of the Accademia Sta. Cecilia. Its third movement is interesting as being a series of variations on the first phrase of the well-known Westminster Chimes. As novelties, the programme contained a Sonata in C minor for viola and pianoforte, the work of Alexander Bustini, and four Japanese Songs by Setaccioli.

The Amica della Musica succeeded in engaging the well-known Finnish violoncellist, Lennart von Zweyberg, who plays a fine Stradivarius instrument, and knows how to make the most of it. In a programme that included Bach's Sonata in D major and Suite in G major for violoncello unaccompanied, this Finnish artist created an excellent impression.

The Accademia Sta. Cecilia has formed a special committee to organize the quadricentennial celebrations of Palestrina in the spring of 1925.

LEONARD PEYTON.

TORONTO

Never before in the history of the Mendelssohn Choir of Toronto (Dr. H. A. Fricker, conductor) have the programmes so thoroughly covered the whole range of choral writing, from Palestrina and Byrd to Holst and Bax. Almost a record was reached in attendance, over fourteen thousand people subscribing and five hundred being refused admission. The five concerts, given in conjunction with the Philadelphia Orchestra, under Mr. Leopold Stokowski, provided material of interest to every type of individual to be found in our very cosmopolitan audiences. The first evening was devoted solely to a cappella works, among which were Adoramus Te and Exultate Deo (Palestrina), Ave Verum (Byrd), In Exitu Israel (S. Wesley), and Trois Beaux Oiseaux (Ravel). New York's most recent idol, the Russian pianist, Josef Lhevinne, was engaged as assisting artist.

Through the courtesy of the Choir committee, and contrary to constitution, permission was accorded Mr. Stokowski to conduct the Choral Symphony at the second concert. His interpretation was brilliant in the most superlative sense of the word. The famous Ninth was preceded by Brahms's Song of Destiny, Four Part-Songs for women's voices by the same composer, and the Bach Motet, Come, Jesu, Come. On Friday evening came the Bach B minor Mass (cut to ten parts), with The Silver Swan (Orlando Gibbons), Flow, O my tears (Benet), The Blue Bird (Stanford), the Overture to Figaro, and the Mozart G minor Symphony in addition. The Saturday matinée programme was the most vivid and coloured within memory here, Mr. Stokowski choosing the Rimsky-Korsakov Scheherazade and the Tchaikovsky fourth Symphony as a contrast to the Wagner given last year. The series closed on Saturday evening with an interesting popular selection: Jerusalem (Parry), Fatherland (Bax), Orchestral Suite from L'Oiseau de Feu (Stravinsky), Songs from the Rig Veda (Holst), Five Songs for men's voices (Dvorák), Don Juan (Strauss), Scenes from Boris Godunov (Moussorgsky), and the 'Polovetzian Dances' from Prince Igor (Borodin). The Choir this year shows added strength and vitality in the women's sections, ensuring a firmer ensemble balance than last year. Buffalo, New York, Philadelphia, and Baltimore were on the Choir's visiting list, with performances of the Choral Symphony in the second and third named cities.

The National Chorus, under Dr. Albert Ham, chose a fresh and well-balanced cappella programme for its annual concert on January 31. This choir is particularly noted for its sound technique and excellent quality of tone, ample scope for which was found in the following: All creatures now are merry-minded (Benet), Hosanna to the Son of David (Gibbons), Celtic Hymn, The Outgoing of the Fishermen's Boats, A Pastoral (Carey), The Tempest (Cornelius), and Reichardt's The Image of a Rose. Giovanni Martinelli, the famous Metropolitan tenor, sang well—and badly.

The New Symphony Orchestra is steadily gaining ground with our musically super-saturated public. Recent programmes have included the Tannhäuser Overture, Liszt's Les Préludes, Schubert's Unfinished Symphony, A Midsummer Night's Dream Overture, an Elgar Pomp and Circumstance March, a Liszt Concerto, with Paul Wells as assisting artist, the Liszt-Popper Hungarian Rhapsody, with Lionel Bilton, and Beethoven's C minor Concerto, with Mark Hambourg.

Under the auspices of the Women's Musical Club the young New York String Quartet gave its première, leaning mainly toward the modern composers. Cecilia Hansen, the brilliant Scandinavian violinist, made her first appearance, and fully justified New York's high opinion of her playing. Moritz Rosenthal returned after many years' absence, and Galli-Curci paid her annual visit.

Recitals have been given by Alfred Heather and Arthur Blight (vocalists), Rachelle Copeland (violinist), Cameron McLean (Chicago vocalist), and Alberto Guerrero (pianoforte). Mr. T. J. Crawford is having good attendances at his weekly recitals at St. Paul's Church, Bloor Street, and Dr. H. A. Fricker's post-service programmes are attracting considerable attention.

H. C. F.

VIENNA

OPERATIC AFFAIRS

The improved economic conditions in Germany which have accompanied the expedient of stabilising German currency on a sterling basis are now drawing native musicians back to that country. Whereas only six months ago German singers were eagerly seeking for Vienna engagements, the tempting gold mark salaries now offered them from beyond the German border leave the Vienna Staatsoper virtually without singers and conductors. Two prominent conductors, Clemens Krauss and Carl Alwin, are about to exchange their engagements at the Staatsoper for leading positions at Frankfurt and Cologne, and in view of the frequent absences of directors Schalk and Strauss the Staatsoper is now mostly without a leader. Only recently Strauss was absent with almost half of the Staatsoper's singers and orchestral personnel on a visit to Holland, and shortly afterwards Schalk departed on a tour of Czechoslovakia, taking with him two-thirds of the orchestra (the Philharmonic). The Staatsoper is therefore in a state of complete disorganization, which has been discussed in Parliament and has led to attacks upon Strauss and Schalk by press and public. The repertoire and the performances have reached the lowest level of quality, and Vienna looks to other institutions for operatic performance. The management of the Konzerthaus has recently undertaken to provide occasional high-class revivals of the classic operas so sorely neglected by the directorate of the Staatsoper, and incidentally to give Vienna its share of the 'Handel renaissance' which is observable in present-day Germany. Last year's production of Orfeo was of great merit, and this season's revival (or rather première) of Acis and Galatea, given at the Konzerthaus, marked a great achievement notwithstanding certain shortcomings necessitated by the limited stage possibilities of the Grosser Konzerthausaal. Moreover, the work, which is a thing half-way between an oratorio and an opera, is not particularly well suited for dramatic production. The director of the Konzerthaus, Dr. Botstiber, who was the promoter and stage-manager of the performance, solved the scenic problem cleverly by erecting a stage of intimate proportions surrounded by a proscenium which resembled the gilt frame of a 'Biedermeier' painting. The chorus was placed outside of the stage, and it was left to the beautiful and eminently artistic poses and motions of the Ellen Tels Ballet to visualize the meaning of the choral portions. It was an interesting experiment, and a great credit to Dr. Botstiber and Paul von Klenau, the musical leader of the production.

The Volksoper, under Felix Weingartner, is now preparing its next novelty productions, i.e., Die Vögel, by Braunfels, and Hassan der Schärmer, by Wilhelm Kienzl. The latest popular success of this theatre has been the first production anywhere of Princess Tanagra, a comic opera, with music by Offenbach. The aim of the librettists has been to 'modernise' the great Frenchman by supplying his wonderful, if frivolous, melodies with a book better suited to prevalent taste and routine. Chief interest at the Volksoper recently centred in the guest appearances of Luella Meluis, an American coloratura soprano with a stupendous technique; of Alessandro Bonci, whose high register has paid its tribute to time, while his art of singing remains unchanged; and of Mattia Battistini, the ever-youthful, who has preserved his consummate mastery of bel canto unimpaired, although his acting still smacks of Italian provincial methods.

ORCHESTRAL NOVELTIES AND CONDUCTORS

The vogue of Mahler's great symphonic works is still increasing. Recently Vienna had six Mahler performances within a week, and four within two days. Furtwängler conducted the third, Clemens Krauss the seventh, and Erwin Stein (a young conductor and disciple of Arnold Schönberg) the rarely-heard ninth in close succession, with two sold-out houses listening attentively to each Symphony. Mahler's Song of the Earth was chosen for the return to his native city of Dr. Fritz Stiedry, from the Berlin Opera, who supplemented this début programme with a new song-cycle, with orchestra, by Karl Horwitz, entitled Vom Tode. The cycle is in the nature of a requiem for Mahler's death, and the orchestral prelude, which employs a theme from Mahler's Resurrection Symphony, is inscribed 'May 23, 1911' (the date on which Mahler died). Horwitz, who is one of the most earnest and fervently sincere of Vienna's young musicians, is a former Schönberg pupil. His work is a purely lyric score of supreme beauty, and worthy of more frequent hearing.

The novelties offered this year by Rudolf Nilius (the new leader of the Vienna Oratorio Society) in his series of chamber orchestra concerts, included an all-too-sentimental Canzone italiana entitled La mamm lontana, by Domenico Alaleona; a much-too-long and unoriginal second Symphony by Franz Moser; and the première of a composition, Romantic Night, by Josef Rinaldini-Dasatiel. The last-named piece abounds in glowing and beautifully blended orchestral colour. The Philharmonic, under Weingartner, introduced only one novelty this season, in the form of a melodious and effective Symphony (his first) by Julius Bittner. This Austrian musician has just made his first venture into comic opera with Die silberne Tünzerin, an unusually tasteful operetta which is at last bringing the dignified composer that popular approval which his charming grand operas had failed to gain for him. Benno Sachs—a Viennese conductor who, like many of his native colleagues, is dwelling in undeserved obscurity—had his first opportunity in a Workers' Concert, when he gave an authoritative reading of Haydn's C major Symphony, and also directed a secular cantata by Carl Prohaska, Der Fusswanderer, which proved a Brahmsian aftermath of small interest. Leopold Reichwein, who shares with Clemens Krauss and Furtwängler (soon to withdraw from Vienna) the Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde orchestral series, introduced a new Viennese composer in the person of Rolf Kattnigg (a pupil of Josef Marx), with a Suite, Op. 5. It bespeaks abundant talent, although as yet lacking discrimination and depth. Reichwein conducted the work without a score (as indeed he does even with the most intricate and difficult compositions) and won for the composer a decisive success.

MODERN CHAMBER MUSIC

The majority of the orchestral novelties of the past month were of Viennese origin. In the chamber music field, the Kolbe Quartet, an organization consisting of four courageous and talented young women, has been blazing the trail for native talent this season. The String Quartet, Op. 16, by Hans Gal, which dates from 1916, gives a surprising foretaste (in the last movement) of the American fox-trot rhythms which Stravinsky has since tried to adopt as a part of legitimate musical idiom; and Paul A. Pisk's Three Songs with string quartet, Op. 9, with their lyric tenderness and distinct personal style, indicate that the gifted young composer has completely freed himself from the 'unsentimentalism' preached by his former master, Arnold Schönberg. Vienna's musical life has received a strong incentive through the activities of the local I.S.C.M. group, which is giving monthly concerts to attentive audiences. Its evenings afford hearings to all contemporary composers regardless of nationality or musical creed. Recent programmes have included Arnold Bax's Violin Sonata No. 2, Ravel's Hebrew Songs, Milhaud's Violin Sonata No. 2, Poulenc's witty Le Bestiaire, some daring pianoforte pieces by Rudolf Réti (played by the composer himself), and some surprisingly simple, if highly problematic, pianoforte pieces by Josef Mattias Hauer, which contrasted strangely with the complicated and not altogether intelligible introductory speech delivered by this Viennese radicalist in explanation of his rather fantastic theories. The I.S.C.M. also, in collaboration with the Austrian Society for the Promotion of Modern Art, gave an excellent evening of Russian music, which served to acquaint Vienna with Stravinsky's L'Histoire d'un Soldat, besides his songs Op. 2. Among other works heard were Prokofiev's Vision fugitive, for pianoforte, and Overture on Jewish themes, for clarinet, string quartet, and pianoforte, which is not exactly Jewish, but fascinating and clever music. Two new paraphrases on Jewish national themes also formed part of the programme of Juliusz Wolfisch, the Polish pianist who had previously won admirers as a composer and interpreter of this species of music. This concert also brought an innovation with the introduction into a modern composition—a five-movement Fantasy by Rudolph E. Prochazka, a Czech composer—of a 'mute violin,' which produced unique tonal effects.

PAUL BECHERT.

Answers to Correspondents

Questions must be of general musical interest. They must be stated simply and briefly, and if several are sent, each must be written on a separate slip. We cannot undertake to reply by post.

Q.—Kindly give me brief notes on Saint-Saëns's Danse Macabre, together with the poem which is said to have prompted its composition.—W. W. J.

A.—The work was composed in 1874, and published in the following year. It was suggested by some verses by Henri Cazalis (published under the nom de plume Jean Lahor), which the composer had already set to music as a song. Here are the lines with which the Danse is concerned:

'Zig et Zig et Zig, la Mort en cadence
Frappant une tombe avec son talon,
La Mort à minuit joue un air de danse
Zig et Zig et Zag, sur son violon.
Le vent d'hiver souffle, et la nuit est sombre;
Des gémissements sortent des tilleuls;
Les squelettes blancs vont à travers l'ombre,
Courant et sautant sous leurs grands linéaux.
Zig et Zig et Zig, chacun se trémousse,
On entend claquer les os des danseurs.

Mais psit ! tout à coup on quitte la ronde,
On se pousse, on fuit, le coq a chanté.'

The music is a remarkably faithful and picturesque illustration of the text. The striking of the midnight hour is represented by detached notes for harp and horn in unison, and the dance is ushered in by a shrill passage for solo violin, the E string of which has to be tuned down a semitone in order to obtain a diminished fifth on the open strings. The dance is a waltz, and the bony structure of the waltzers is gruesomely indicated by the xylophone. A hint at the Dies Ira is given by the wood-wind and harp. When the dance is at its height, the cock crows (vid oboe), and the dancers speedily get underground again.

Q.—Can you give me some information concerning a composer of the name of Viottis? I have three Trios, by a composer of that name, arranged as Sonatas for the pianoforte by J. L. Dussek.—C. H. P.

A.—Musical history does not register the name of 'Viottis' in its pages. It is quite possible that a composer of that name existed unknown to fame. But the probability is that the works you mention are the Trios for two violins and bass of G. B. Viotti, the celebrated Piedmontese violinist (1753-1824).

Q.—Please give me some biographical notes on Miss Harriet Cohen.—F. J. K.

A.—Miss Harriet Cohen was born in London in 1902. Her grandparents on the father's side were Russians, on her mother's side Spanish Jews. At the age of eleven she won the Ada Lewis Scholarship at the R.A.M., where she studied with Mr. Tobias Matthay. The Scholarship was extended twice owing to the exceptional talent of the student. When she was sixteen years old she won the medal of the Worshipful Company of Musicians for the most accomplished student of the year. She made her first appearance three and a-half years ago at Wigmore Hall, and was immediately engaged by Sir Henry Wood for the Promenade Concerts. Miss Cohen has also been engaged by the Salzburg Committee for the International Festival which is to take place in the summer. She has also written some pianoforte pieces which were published by Messrs. Augener in 1918 under the title of Russian Impressions.

Q.—A writer of lyrics for music, whose poems have earned the approval of literary critics, wishes to submit them to a composer of standing who does not ask a fee for setting them.

A.—If a lyric of yours were set to music by a composer of standing, he would want the song to be published, and no publisher would print your words without securing the copyright or permission from you, for which you would charge a fee. Send copies of your lyrics to a number of publishers. Some firms are glad to bring writer and composer together.

Q.—Is Chopin's Nocturne in A flat, Op. 32, in simple binary form?—H. H. H.

A.—One eminent authority would call it binary because it has two principal subjects. Another eminent authority would call it ternary because it has three sections. It can safely be described as 'A-B-A' form. In any case, the particular label you choose tells you as much about the form of this Nocturne as the enumeration of walls and windows tells you about the architecture of a house. Chopin invented forms as he went along.

Q.—Am I right in surmising that the frequent trill-like signs in the song sung by the 'Cold Genius' (and later by the chorus) in Purcell's King Arthur, are intended to illustrate a shivering as from cold?—G. S.

A.—You are right. It is an example of naive realism, and the effect, so far from being ludicrous, is good in these particular circumstances.

ANSWERS IN BRIEF

ELMUS.—There is little difference between the various editions of The Creation in the matter of accompaniment. All are necessarily pianistic arrangements from the orchestra part, and need a great deal of adapting for organ use. I you need help in this matter read the article on 'Arrangement' in Grove, the various lectures on the subject reprinted in the R.C.O. Calendar during recent years, and Mr. Ellingford's book, The Art of Transcribing for the Organ (H. W. Gray, Novello, 18s.). From these you can get sound advice on general principles which you can apply to your particular needs.

IGNORANT.—'Aural Culture' is merely another way of saying 'Ear-Training'—and not quite so good a way.

E. H.—The organ part in Elijah is not an arrangement, but an integral part of the original score.

L. M. G.—(1.) The desirability of the post of organist and choirmaster being divided is too big for this department. We hope to discuss it soon in the body of the journal. (2.) Dr. Frere's qualifications for a seat on the Archbishop's Committee on Church Music are dual: he is a recognised authority on liturgy and plainsong. The other members who held no recognised musical distinctions sat as representatives of the average musical section of the laity. (3.) We do not know whether any of Dykes's descendants are professional musicians.

A. L.—(1.) Healey Willan's Introduction, Passacaglia, and Fugue is published by Schirmer; Harvey Grace's Meditation in Ancient Tonality by Novello; Bairstow's Meditation in A by Collard Moutrie. (2.) Do you mean Byrd's choral works or keyboard pieces? If the latter, write to Miss Margaret Glyn, c/o Messrs. Reeves, Charing Cross Road.

A. G.—W. von Lenz's Die Grossen Pianoforte-Virtuosen unserer Zeit is obtainable in an English version, published abroad. Tausig's finger-exercises, as edited by Ehrlich, may be had from Messrs. Novello, through whom you can also obtain the von Lenz book.

J. O.—A pneumatic chin-rest for violin was patented and manufactured about ten years ago by Messrs. John & Arthur Beare. We understand that for various reasons it is no longer obtainable.

W. B.—We cannot undertake to analyse complete works in this column.

In our reply to 'F. N.,' in the March number, concerning books on musical appreciation, we omitted to mention one of the best and best-known of all—Stewart Macpherson's Music and its Appreciation, or, The Foundations of True Listening (Joseph Williams).

READERS' HELP NEEDED.—Mr. Hubert Hunt (14, Belgrave Road, Bristol) will be glad to hear of a copy of the 1669 edition of Apollo's Banquet. He is searching for a tune called The Bristol Waits, which is not in the 1690 edition—the only one at the British Museum.

MR. W. ROBSON (Hartburn, Stockton-on-Tees) wishes for information about books dealing with Ancient Hebrew Psalmody.

Miscellaneous

Mr. Willan Swainson, founder and conductor of the Aberdeen Choral and Orchestral Concerts, has been presented by the members of the Oratorio Choir with a number of valuable scores. Among other tributes to Mr. Swainson's work was one from Dr. Sanford Terry, who, in the course of a letter, wrote: 'Aberdeen can boast a choral organization which worthily represents our community. The credit belongs solely to Mr. Willan Swainson, whose stubborn idealism, tireless and self-sacrificing enthusiasm, and exceptional gifts as a musician, have created an organization in which every music-lover in the community will feel a personal pride. Floreat!'

Miss Monica Harrison's first song recital, announced for March 11, had to be postponed. It will take place on April 9, at 3.15, at Æolian Hall.

The Tercentenary of Byrd and Weelkes was celebrated at St. Paul's Cathedral, Melbourne, with a recital of unaccompanied choral music under Mr. A. E. Floyd.

ANNIVERSARY MUSIC.

TWO SPLENDID NUMBERS WHICH SHOULD BE IN EVERY 1924 PROGRAMME.

"MY TASK"

FOUR-PART SONG.

"ON THE HILL"

PART-SONG.

SAMPLES OF THESE AND OTHERS POST FREE TO CHOIR-LEADERS AND ORGANISTS.

Write to-day to

REID BROS. LTD.,

26 EASTCASTLE STREET, LONDON, W.1.

PERCIVAL ADAMS (L.T.C.L.)

TENOR.

AVAILABLE FOR ORATORIO, CONCERTS, ETC.

22, BLAGDON ROAD, NEW MALDEN, SURREY.

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
John Frederick Bridge ( with coloured portrait )	305
— A Personal Tribute. By W.-G. Alcock	306
Music at the Empire Exhibition	307
The 'Bel Canto.' By Herman Klein	308
A Critic on his Critics. By M.-D. Calvocoressi	311
Ad Libitum. By 'Feste'	314
Brows, High and Low. By 'Feste'	314
Recovery of the Lost Voice. By Harold Hollinshead	318
Free Counterpoint. By Arthur G. Claypole	320
Rheinberger's Organ Sonatas. By Harvey Grace	322
A Forgotten Prophet. By Gerald R. Hayes	327
Modern Composers and Modern Composition. By Hamilton Harty	328
Music in the Foreign Press. By M.-D. Calvocoressi	332
Occasional Notes	334
New Music	335
The Musician's Bookshelf	343
Church and Organ Music	346
Royal College of Organists	346
Letters to the Editor	348
Sharps and Flats	351
The Amateurs' Exchange	352
'Criticism of the Living'	352
The Pianistic Interpretation of Bach's Music. By Alexandre Cellier	353
Royal Academy of Music	354
Royal College of Music	354
Trinity College of Music	355
A Byrd Memorial	355
Gramophone Notes	355
London Concerts	356
Competition Festival Record	360
Music in the Provinces	361
Music in Ireland	363
Musical Notes from Abroad	363
Answers to Correspondents	366
Miscellaneous	367

MUSIC.

'The day Thou gavest, Lord, is ended.' A Short Hymn-Anthem. By C. LEE WILLIAMS ... 337

TWO EXTRA SUPPLEMENTS are given with this Number:

1. Portrait of Sir Frederick Bridge, printed in colours.
2. 'Who would true valour see.' Part-Song for mixed voices. By Geoffrey Shaw.

DURING THE LAST MONTH.

Published by NOVELLO & CO., LIMITED.

BRIDGE, SIR FREDERICK.—'The Goslings.' Humorous Part-Song. Arranged for S.S.A. (No. 488, Novello's Trios, &c., for female voices.) 4d.

HOLMES - DALLIMORE, A.—'When twilight fades.' Part-Song for A.T.T.B. 3d.

NORTH, J. W. ALLEN.—Benedicite, Omnia Opera, in B. 3d.

SCHOOL MUSIC REVIEW, No. 382, contains the following music in both notations.—'Mister Sailorman.' Unison Song by ALEC ROWLEY. 'My garden flowers.' Unison Song by ARTHUR RICHARDS. 3d.

SCHOOL SONGS. Published in two forms. A. Voice Parts in Staff and Tonic Sol-fa Notations, with Piano-forte Accompaniment (8vo). B. Voice Parts only, in Tonic Sol-fa Notation. A. B.

No. 905. 'The glow of evening.' Two-part Song. H. SMART — 1½d.

No. 1360. 'There is music by the river.' Arranged as a Two-part Song. PINSUTI — 2d.

No. 1361. 'O for the wings of a dove.' MENDELSSOHN. Arranged by JOHN E. WEST — 3d.

No. 1362. 'The songs our fathers loved.' Trio for S.S.A. Irish Air. Arranged by W. McNAUGHT — 1½d.

SCHOOL SONGS—DURING THE LAST MONTH—(Continued).

No. 1363. 'Come, happy spring' (Caro A. B. mio ben). Song for Mezzo-Soprano. GIORDANI — 1½d.

No. 1368. 'Humpty Dumpty sat on a wall.' Solo and Chorus from the Cantata 'Humpty Dumpty.' H. WALFORD DAVIES — 3d.

No. 1377. 'The Birds.' (When Jesus Christ was four years old.) Three-part Song G. RATHBONE 3d. 2d.

SHAW, G.—'The day draws on with golden light.' Easter Anthem. (No. 1131, Novello's Octavo Anthems.) 4d.

—'Worship.' Unison Song for Massed Voices. Wind parts, &c. 3s. 8d.

SWEETING, E. T.—'Evening.' Six-part Song for mixed voices. (No. 1417, Novello's Part-Song Book.) 4d.

TONIC SOL-FA SERIES:

No. 2445. 'Piper's Song.' Arranged as a Trio for S.S.A. R. BOUGHTON 2d.

No. 2446. 'O fount of love.' Short Anthem. A. W. WILSON 2d.

WEST, JOHN E.—'John Peel.' Old North Country Hunting Song. Arranged for S.S.A. (No. 489, Novello's Trios, &c., for female voices.) 4d.

WILLIAMS, C. LEE.—'The day Thou gavest, Lord, is ended.' Short Hymn-Anthem. (No. 974, The Musical Times.) 2d.

PUBLISHED FOR

THE H. W. GRAY CO., NEW YORK.

ANDREWS, MARK.—'Lord, I call upon Thee.' Anthem for Tenor or Soprano Solo and Chorus.

BAHNTE, G. F.—Intermezzo for Pianoforte. 60 cents (2s. 6d.).

FORSYTH, C.—'To America.' Choral Rhythm for Women's Voices. 15 cents (8d.).

IFFIN, J. A.—'Just for Thee.' Hymn and Tune.

HAILE, E.—A Riddle Book with Melodies. $1.00 (4s.).

KOUNTZ, R.—'All ye whom sorrow hath taken.' Anthem for Lent. 12 cents (6d.).

—'Hear Thou our prayer, O Lord.' Traditional Slovak Air. Arranged for T.T.B.B. 10 cents (4d.).

ETTING, W. H.—'Ho, everyone that thirsteth.' Sacred Song. 60 cents (2s. 6d.).

TAYLOR, JEAN.—'Kerless' Love.' Part-Song for Men's Voices. Arranged from the Negro Song. 12 cents (6d.).

WARREN, E. R.—'Jesus, from Thy throne on high.' Anthem for Christmas Day. 12 cents (6d.).

WEBBE, W. Y.—'The Good Shepherd.' Church Cantata. 75 cents (3s.).

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER WANTED for St. John's, Greenock. Large choir. Three-Manual organ. Salary, £100 per annum. Apply with three copies of testimonials, to The Rector, 38, Robertson Street, Greenock.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER REQUIRED for Temple Cong. Church, St. Mary Cray, Kent. Choir of twenty, practice Tuesday evening. Salary, £35. Apply, C. H. Lansdell, Moorfield House, Orpington.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER WANTED. ST. PAUL'S AMERICAN CHURCH, ROME, ITALY.

Young single man, adequate references. Salary equivalent to £150 yearly, and small apartment with light and heat. Beginning June 15. Applications and copies of testimonials to Rev. Walter Lowrie, Via Napoli 58,—Roma (22), Italy.

FOR SALE.—A 'Peter Guarnerius' VIOLIN (certified genuine), excellent condition, beautiful tone. £840, or near. Apply, 'W,' Lloyds' Bank, Vaughan Parade, Torquay.

MAGDALEN COLLEGE, OXFORD.

Academical Clerkship Vacant. Tenor Voice. Voice Trial, May 13. Stipend, £70 per annum. Candidates must be qualified by previous education to become undergraduate members of the College in October, 1924. For full particulars, write to The Dean of Divinity.

NOVELLO'S PART-SONG BOOK

A COLLECTION OF PART-SONGS, GLEES, AND MADRIGALS.

No.		No.		No.
1	Our Native Land ... Reichardt	3d.	87	A Finland love song... H. Hiles	2d.
2	Cricketers' Song (T.T.B.) Macfarren	3d.	88	Evening ... ..	2d.
3	Boating Song ... .. Monk	3d.	89	To the Morning Wind ... ..	4d.
4	Song of the Railroads Macfarren	4d.	90	To Daffodils ... ..	4d.
5	Good-morrow, fair ladies Morley	3d.	91	Summer longings ... ..	4d.
6	Home Fairy (T.T.B.B.) ... Winter	3d.	92	Night, lovely Night ... F. Berger	2d.
7	The Wreath ... .. Benedict	3d.	93	Essay, my Heart ... ..	4d.
8	Countryman's Song ... Rimbault	4d.	94	Childhood's melody ... ..	2d.
9	Student's Greeting (T.T.B.B.) Berner	3d.	95	Now ... ..	4d.
10	Magdalen College Song ... Monk	3d.	96	Sunset ... ..	2d.
11	Integer Vitæ (T.T.B.B.) Flemming	6d.	97	Arise, the sunbeams hail ... ..	4d.
12	Orpheus with his lute Macfarren	3d.	98	Night winds that ... J. B. Calkin	2d.
13	Harvest Song ... .. Macfarren	3d.	99	Breathe soft, ye Winds ... ..	2d.
14	Come, heavy sleep ... Douland	3d.	100	My lady is so wondrous fair ... ..	2d.
15	Fisherman's Song ... Rimbault	3d.	101	Chivalry of Labour (S.A.T.B.), ... ..	6d.
16	In all thy need ... .. Douland	3d.	102	Come, fill, my boys (A.T.T.B.), ... ..	4d.
17	All among the barley ... Stirling	3d.	103	Echoes ... ..	2d.
18	When icicles hang ... Macfarren	3d.	104	Phœbus ... .. J. Barnby	2d.
19	Jolly Cricket Ball ... .. Monk	3d.	105	Luna ... ..	2d.
20	Emigrant's Song ... Macfarren	3d.	106	A Wife's Song ... ..	2d.
21	Shepherd's Song ... .. Brewer	4d.	107	Home they brought... ..	2d.
22	Pedlar's Song ... .. Douland	3d.	108	Annie Lee ... ..	2d.
23	Fairies' Song (S.S.S.S.) ... Bishop	8d.	109	Starry Crowns of Heaven ... ..	2d.
24	June (S.S.A.) ... .. F. Dun	3d.	110	The Wind ... ..	2d.
25	Awake! the starry Mendelssohn	3d.	111	The Skylark ... ..	2d.
26	Fair Flower ... .. Rimbault	3d.	112	The Sands of Dee G.A. Macfarren	2d.
27	O happy he who ... .. Gastoldi	3d.	113	Alton Locke's Song ... ..	2d.
28	Green Leaves ... .. Taylor	3d.	114	The Starlings ... ..	2d.
29	Dirge ... .. S. Wesley	3d.	115	The Three Fishers ... ..	2d.
30	Angler's Trysting Tree ... Corfe	4d.	116	The World's Age ... ..	2d.
31	The Dream ... .. Steward	3d.	117	Sing heigh ho! ... ..	2d.
32	God speed the Plough ... Richter	3d.	118	Fairy Song ... .. A. Zimmermann	2d.
33	There is a ladie sweete ... Ford	3d.	119	Good-Night ... ..	2d.
34	Football Song ... .. Monk	4d.	120	Gone for ever ... ..	4d.
35	Haymakers' Song ... .. Steward	4d.	121	Flowers ... ..	4d.
36	Come away, Death ... Macfarren	4d.	122	To Daffodils ... ..	2d.
37	Old May-day, in A ... Benedict	2d.	123	Good Morrow ... ..	4d.
38	Invocation to Sleep ... ..	4d.	124	Sigh no more, ladies Macfarren	2d.
39	A Night Song ... ..	4d.	125	You spotted snakes (S.A.A.) ... ..	4d.
40	Dirge for the faithful lover ... ..	2d.	126	Take, oh take those lips away ... ..	6d.
41	A Drinking Song (T.T.B.B.) ... ..	6d.	127	It was a lover and his lass ... ..	6d.
42	Sylvan pleasures ... ..	2d.	128	O mistress mine ... ..	2d.
43	Consolation ... .. H. Smart	2d.	129	Under the greenwood tree ... ..	2d.
44	Good-night, thou glorious Sun ... ..	2d.	130	Hark, the lark ... ..	4d.
45	Hunting Song ... ..	2d.	131	Tell me where is fancy bred ... ..	2d.
46	Lady, rise, sweet Morn's ... ..	2d.	132	The Violet ... .. H. Leslie	4d.
47	Summer Morning ... ..	2d.	133	One morning sweet in May ... ..	4d.
48	The Sea King ... ..	2d.	134	Daylight is fading ... ..	2d.
49	Orpheus with his lute Macfarren	2d.	135	Down in a pretty valley ... ..	2d.
50	When Icicles hang ... ..	2d.	136	The Primrose ... ..	2d.
51	Come away, Death (S.A.T.T.B.), ... ..	4d.	137	Arise, sweet love ... ..	2d.
52	When Daisies pied ... ..	4d.	138	'Tis break of day ... H. Smart	3d.
53	Who is Sylvia ... ..	4d.	139	My true love hath my heart ... ..	3d.
54	Fear no more the heat ... ..	4d.	140	Doth not my lady come ... ..	2d.
55	Blow, blow, thou winter wind ... ..	2d.	141	Spring Song ... ..	2d.
56	The Belfry Tower ... J.L. Hatton	2d.	142	The Curfew ... ..	2d.
57	England ... ..	2d.	143	Hear, sweet spirit ... ..	2d.
58	Come, celebrate the May ... ..	2d.	144	Spring Voices ... .. S. Reay	4d.
59	Song to Pan ... ..	2d.	145	Waken, lords and ladies gay ... ..	4d.
60	The Indian Maid ... ..	6d.	146	As it fell upon a day ... ..	4d.
61	The Pearl Divers ... ..	6d.	147	Huntsman, rest ... ..	4d.
62	Robin Goodfellow G.A. Macfarren	4d.	148	'Tis May upon the mountain ... ..	2d.
63	Break, break on thy cold grey ... ..	2d.	149	Take, oh take those lips away ... ..	2d.
64	Echoes (The Splendour falls) ... ..	2d.	150	The Rainy Day ... .. A. Sullivan	4d.
65	Song of the Railroads ... ..	2d.	151	Oh, hush thee, my babe ... ..	2d.
66	Christmas ... ..	2d.	152	Evening ... ..	3d.
67	Adieu, Love, Adieu ... ..	2d.	153	Joy to the Victors ... ..	2d.
68	Sir Knight, Sir Knight Macarone	2d.	154	Parting gleams ... ..	2d.
69	The Wounded Cupid ... ..	2d.	155	Echoes ... ..	2d.
70	Woman's smile ... ..	4d.	156	Spring ... .. W. Macfarren	2d.
71	Autolycus' Song ... ..	2d.	157	Summer ... ..	2d.
72	Footsteps of Angels ... ..	2d.	158	Autumn ... ..	4d.
73	The Sun shines fair ... ..	2d.	159	Winter ... ..	2d.
74	The Pilgrims ... .. H. Leslie	2d.	160	You stole my love ... ..	2d.
75	My soul to God ... ..	4d.	161	Dainty love ... ..	2d.
76	Awake, the flow'rs unfold ... ..	2d.	162	Drops of Rain ... .. J. Leunings	2d.
77	How sweet the moonlight ... ..	2d.	163	The Fairy Ring ... ..	4d.
78	Land, Ho! ... ..	2d.	164	The Light of Life ... ..	4d.
79	Up, up, ye Dames ... ..	2d.	165	Oh, welcome him ... ..	4d.
80	Thine eyes so bright ... ..	6d.	166	Sunshine through the ... ..	4d.
81	All is not gold ... .. Westbrook	4d.	167	The Corn Field ... ..	4d.
82	Hark how the birds ... .. H. Lahee	4d.	168	Wake! to the hunting ... H. Smart	2d.
83	All ye woods (S.A.T.T.B.) ... ..	2d.	169	Dost thou idly ask ... ..	2d.
84	My love is fair (S.A.T.T.B.B.) H. Leslie	2d.	170	A Psalm of Life ... ..	2d.
85	Charm me asleep (S.A.T.T.B.B.), ... ..	4d.	171	Only Thou ... ..	2d.
86	When twilight dews ... .. H. Hiles	2d.	172	I prithee send me back ... ..	2d.
173	The Moon ... .. H. Smart	4d.	174	A Spring Song ... .. Ciro Pinsuti	4d.
175	An Autumn Song ... ..	4d.	176	The Two Spirits ... ..	4d.
177	The Crusaders ... ..	2d.	178	The Caravan ... ..	2d.
179	Stradella ... ..	4d.	180	When evening's twilight Hatton	2d.
181	Absence ... ..	2d.	182	April showers ... ..	2d.
183	The red, red rose ... ..	2d.	184	Beware, beware ... ..	2d.
185	The Sailor's Song ... ..	2d.	186	Good-Night ... ..	2d.
187	Blythe is the bird ... ..	2d.	188	Stars of the summer night ... ..	6d.
189	The hemlock-tree ... ..	2d.	190	Jack Frost ... ..	2d.
191	I loved her ... ..	4d.	192	The Village Blacksmith ... ..	2d.
193	Bait, The (Come live with me), ... ..	2d.	194	Softly fall the shades of ... ..	4d.
195	Auburn (Sweet village) ... ..	4d.	196	Bird of the wilderness ... ..	3d.
197	The Summer gale ... ..	3d.	198	I met her in the quiet lane ... ..	4d.
199	If thou art sleeping ... ..	4d.	200	Spring Song ... ..	4d.
201	Good wishes ... ..	4d.	202	Parting and Meeting ... ..	3d.
203	Whether kissed by sunbeams, ... ..	4d.	204	The roses are blushing ... ..	2d.
205	The Rivals ... ..	4d.	206	The village dance ... ..	4d.
207	Song of the Gipsy maidens ... ..	2d.	208	The Waterfall ... ..	4d.
209	Over hill, over dale ... ..	4d.	210	Love me little, love me long ... ..	4d.
211	Going a-maying ... ..	4d.	212	See, the rooks are homeward ... ..	4d.
213	Sweet Lady Moon ... ..	4d.	214	Hark, the Convent bells are ... ..	4d.
215	When evening's (small voices), ... ..	2d.	216	Warrior's Song ... ..	4d.
217	Absence ... ..	3d.	218	April showers ... ..	2d.
219	The red, red rose ... ..	4d.	220	Beware, beware ... ..	2d.
221	The happiest land ... ..	2d.	222	The Sailor's Song ... ..	4d.
223	Busy, curious fly ... ..	3d.	224	Good-night, beloved ... ..	3d.
225	Bacchanalian Song ... ..	4d.	226	Stars of the summer, ... ..	2d.
227	King Wiltal's Song ... ..	4d.	228	Tars' Song ... ..	4d.
229	The hemlock-tree ... ..	6d.	230	Jack Frost ... ..	4d.
231	The Lye ... ..	4d.	232	I loved her ... ..	4d.
233	Village Blacksmith ... ..	4d.	234	The Letter ... ..	4d.
235	Shall I wasting in ... ..	4d.	236	Way to building in ... ..	6d.
237	I loved a lass ... ..	6d.	238	The Lifeboat ... ..	4d.
239	Shepherd's farewell ... H. Smart	2d.	240	The waves' reproof ... ..	4d.
241	Ave Maria ... ..	3d.	242	Spring ... ..	3d.
243	Morning ... ..	2d.	244	Hymn to Cynthia ... ..	4d.
245	Cradle Song ... ..	4d.	246	The joys of Spring ... ..	2d.
247	Dream, baby, dream ... ..	4d.	248	A song for the Seasons ... ..	3d.
249	O say not that my heart ... ..	4d.	250	Love and mirth ... ..	4d.
251	Sweet Vesper hymn ... ..	4d.	252	Crocuses and Snowdrops ... ..	2d.
253	Stars of the summer night ... ..	2d.	254	Wind thy horn ... ..	4d.
255	The land of wonders ... ..	4d.	256	Ye little birds that sit and sing, ... ..	3d.
257	How soft the shades of ... ..	2d.	258	How sweet is summer ... ..	3d.

IN MEMORIAM, ANNIE GOODHART

WHO WOULD TRUE VALOUR SEE

PART-SONG FOR MIXED VOICES

WORDS BY J. BUNYAN, 1628—88

MUSIC BY

GEOFFREY SHAW

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED; NEW YORK: THE H. W. GRAY, CO., SOLE AGENTS FOR THE U.S.A.

Quick, with cheerful vigour

SOPRANO
Who would true val - our see, . . Let him come hith - er; One here will

ALTO
Who would true val - our see, . . Let him come hith - er; One here will

TENOR
Who would true val - our see, . . Let him come hith - er; One here will

BASS
Who would true val - our see, Let him come hith - er; One here will

(For practice only)
mf
Quick, with cheerful vigour

con - stant be, . . Come wind, come wea - ther. There's no dis - cour - age - ment con - stant be, . . Come wind, come wea - ther. There's no dis - cour - age - ment con - stant be, . . Come wind, come wea - ther. There's no dis - cour - age - ment con - stant be, . . Come wind, come wea - ther. There's no dis - cour - age - ment

WHO WOULD TRUE VALOUR SEE

... Shall make him once re-lent His first a-vowed in-tent . . . To

... Shall make him once re-lent His first a-vowed in-tent . . . To

... Shall make him once re-lent His first a-vowed in-tent . . . To

... Shall make him once re-lent His first a-vowed in-tent . . . To be a pil-grim, . . . to be a pil-grim, a . . . pil-grim.

poco rall.

be a pil-grim, . . . to be a pil-grim, a . . . pil-grim.

poco rall.

poco rall.

be a . . . pil-grim, to be a . . . pil-grim, . . . a . . . pil-grim.

poco rall.

be a pil-grim, to be a pil-grim, be a pil-grim.

WHO WOULD TRUE VALOUR SEE

a tempo mf

Who - so be - set him round .. With dis - mal sto - ries,

a tempo mf

Who - so be - set him round With dis - mal sto - ries,

a tempo mf

Who - so be - set him round With dis - mal sto - ries,

a tempo mf

Who - so be - set him round .. With dis - mal sto - ries, with sto - ries,

f

Do but them-selves con-found; His strength the more is. No li - on can him fright,

f

His . . strength, his strength the more is. No li - on can him fright,

f

His strength the more, his strength the more is. No li - on can him fright,

f

His strength the more, . . . the more is. No li - on

WHO WOULD TRUE VALOUR SEE

He'll with a gi-ant fight, But he will have the right .. To

He'll with a gi-ant fight, But he will have the right .. To He'll gi - - ant fight, But he will have the right .. To can him fright, He'll gi - - ant fight, But he will have the right .. To

poco rall.
be .. a .. pil - grim, .. to be .. a .. pil - - grim, a .. pil - grim.

poco rall.
be a pil - grim, .. to be a pil - - grim, a .. pil - grim.

poco rall.
be a .. pil - - grim, to be a .. pil - grim, . . a .. pil - grim.

poco rall.
be a pil - - grim, to be a pil - grim, be a pil - grim.

WHO WOULD TRUE VALOUR SEE

f

Hob - gob - lin nor foul fiend . . Can daunt his spi - rit: He knows he

f

Hob - gob - lin nor foul fiend . . Can daunt his spi - rit: He knows he

f

Hob - gob - lin nor foul fiend . . Can daunt his spi - rit: He knows he

f

Hob - gob - lin nor foul fiend . . Can daunt his spi - rit: He knows he

mf

at the end Shall life in - her - it. Then fan - cies fly a - way, . . He'll not fear

mf

at the end Shall life in - her - it. Then fly . . a - way, . . He'll not fear

mf

at the end Shall life in - her - it. Then fan - cies fly a - way, . . He'll not fear

mf

at the end Shall life in - her - it. Fly, . . He'll not fear

mf

WHO WOULD TRUE VALOUR SEE

what men say, He'll la - bour night and day . . To be a . . pil - grim, . . to be a . .

what men say, He'll la - bour night and day . . To be a pil - grim, . . to be a what men say, He'll la - bour night and day . . To be a . . pil - grim, to be a . .

what men say, He'll la - bour night and day . . To be a pil - grim, to be a

a little slower

pil - grim, a . . pil - - grim, . . to be . . a . . pil - grim.

pil - grim, a . . pil - - grim, . . to be a pil - grim.

pil - grim, . . a . . pil - - grim, . . to be a pil - grim.

pil - grim, be a pil - - grim, . . to be a pil - grim.

a little slower

NOVELLO'S PART-SONG BOOK (continued).

No.		No.		No.
259	Now May is here... H. Smart 4d.	361	Echo's last word ... J. L. Hatton 2d.	465	My love beyond the sea F. H. Simms 4d.
260	Hunting Song ... W. Macfarren 2d.	362	He that hath a pleasant face ... 2d.	466	Lord Ullin's Daughter ... Prescott 6d.
261	Summer Song ... 4d.	363	Keep time, keep time ... 4d.	467	Slow, slow, fresh fount... Walmisley 4d.
262	The Curfew Bell ... 4d.	364	Lo, the peaceful shades... 2d.	468	Song of the Wind ... Gertrude Hine 6d.
263	The Warrior ... 4d.	365	Not for me the lark is singing ... 4d.	469	Gentle winds ... J. T. Musgrave 3d.
264	Love's heigh-ho! ... 4d.	366	Spring, the sweet Spring ... 4d.	470	The Curfew ... Oliver King 3d.
265	Good-night, good rest ... 4d.	367	Take heart ... 4d.	471	Waken, lords and ladies gay E. Louis 6d.
266	The Fairies ... 2d.	368	The fishing boat ... 2d.	472	Tell me where is fancy bred Pinsuti 4d.
267	Cradle Song ... 4d.	369	The lark ... 4d.	473	Hymn to Cynthia ... B. Tours 4d.
268	Morning Song ... 4d.	370	The moon shone calmly bright ... 2d.	474	Two lovers ... E. Hecht 6d.
269	Ye pretty birds ... 4d.	371	The reproach ... 4d.	475	'Tis twilight's holy hour Clippingdale 4d.
270	More life ... 4d.	372	The swing ... 4d.	476	Oh, I wish I were a swallow O. Wagner 4d.
271	Sweet content ... 4d.	373	The wrecked hope ... 4d.	477	Slumber on, Baby dear Oliver King 4d.
272	Sea Song ... (T. T. B. B.) 4d.	374	Twilight ... 4d.	478	Allen-a-Dale ... C. H. Lloyd 6d.
273	The stars are with the ... 3d.	375	Twilight now is round us ... 4d.	479	The sweet spring ... F. E. Gladstone 4d.
274	Autumn ... 4d.	376	What is got by sighing? ... 2d.	480	Rustic coquette ... F. Champneys 4d.
275	Highland War Song ... 4d.	377	Where shall the lover rest ... 2d.	481	Pack, clouds, away ... C. H. Lloyd 4d.
276	Shortest and longest ... 4d.	378	Night ... Gounod 4d.	482	A chaffer's wedding L. Lewandowski 8d.
277	Windlass Song ... 4d.	379	The dawn of day ... S. Reay 6d.	483	Joy in spring ... J. Raff 4d.
278	O Lady, leave thy silken ... 4d.	380	The calm of the sea... H. Hiles 6d.	484	Ave Maria ... 4d.
279	Lover's Parting ... 2d.	381	The wreck of the Hesperus ... 8d.	485	And then no more ... 3d.
280	Shepherds all and maidens ... 4d.	382	Uncertain light ... Schumann 4d.	486	Starlit, in wealth of light ... 3d.
281	Night, sable goddess ... 4d.	383	Confidence, Double Chorus ... 4d.	487	Starlit, in night-time ... 3d.
282	Hence, all you vain delights ... 4d.	384	The Dream ... 2d.	488	In the moonlight ... 4d.
283	Swallow, swallow, hither ... 4d.	385	The Boat ... 4d.	489	Silent happiness ... 3d.
284	Hardy Norseman... De Pearsall 2d.	386	Spring's approach Seymour Egerton 4d.	490	Snowdrops ... 3d.
285	Nymphs are sporting... 4d.	387	Wild rose ... 4d.	491	May-day ... 3d.
286	O who will o'er the downs ... 2d.	388	In the woods ... 4d.	492	Good-night from the Rhine ... 4d.
287	Who shall win my lady fair ... 2d.	389	The rose and the soul ... 2d.	493	Evening ... G. C. Martin 3d.
288	Why with toil ... 2d.	390	Adieu to the Woods... 4d.	494	O too cruel fair ... W. S. Rockstro 6d.
289	When Allen-a-Dale went ... 2d.	391	King Winter ... 4d.	495	The Miller's wooing ... E. Fanning 8d.
290	I saw lovely Phillis ... 2d.	392	The Miller ... G. A. Macfarren 2d.	496	When twilight dew J. L. Gregory 3d.
291	River Spirit's Song (A. T. T. B.) 2d.	393	At first the mountain rill... 2d.	497	The East Indian ... 3d.
292	It was upon a Spring-tide day ... 4d.	394	All is still ... 2d.	498	When at Corinna's eyes C. H. Lloyd 4d.
293	Take heed, ye shepherd ... 2d.	395	Sleep! the bird is in its nest J. Barnby 4d.	499	I love my love... G. B. Allen 2d.
294	Spring returns (S. A. T. B.) 3d.	396	Hushed in death ... H. Hiles 8d.	500	The Troubadour ... H. Leslie 2d.
295	Great god of love (8 voices) ... 4d.	397	Evening (It is the hour) ... Hy. Leslie 2d.	501	The Lass of Richmond Hill ... 2d.
296	In dulci jubilo, Carol ... 4d.	398	No the bright morning star ... 4d.	502	In this hour of softened C. Pinsuti 2d.
297	Song of the Frank companies ... 4d.	399	Boat Song (Hail to the chief) ... 2d.	503	The sea hath its pearls... 4d.
298	How bright in the May-time ... 4d.	400	The triumph of Death ... C. Holland 4d.	504	Ye gallant men of England E. Hecht 4d.
299	Winter Song ... 2d.	401	Now the bright morning star Pierson 4d.	505	The Moorland Witch ... E. Hecht 4d.
300	Bishop of Mentz ... 2d.	402	The bright-haired morn ... S. Reay 4d.	506	It was a lover and his lass J. Barnby 2d.
301	When last I strayed ... 3d.	403	Red o'er the forest ... 4d.	507	Come live with me... W. S. Bennett 2d.
302	See how smoothly ... 3d.	404	Sweet is the breath of early morn ... 4d.	508	Looking for Spring ... C. H. Lloyd 4d.
303	Let us all go maying ... 3d.	405	Where wavelets rippled Ciro Pinsuti 8d.	509	Tell me not, in mournful C. Pinsuti 4d.
304	List! Lady, be not coy ... 4d.	406	We'll gaily sing and play ... 8d.	510	There is music by the River ... 4d.
305	O ye roses ... 4d.	407	Gently falls the evening... Marenzio 4d.	511	O sunny beam ... R. Schumann 3d.
306	Sing we and chaunt it (8 voices) ... 3d.	408	Lilies white, crimson roses (5 v.) ... 4d.	512	O red, red rose ... 4d.
307	Ditto (4 voices) ... 3d.	409	The shepherd's pipes (5 v.) ... 4d.	513	Wanderer's Song ... 3d.
308	Red Wine flows (T. T. B. B.) ... 3d.	410	Spring returns (5 v.) ... 4d.	514	Evening Song ... 3d.
309	Shoot, false love, I care not ... 2d.	411	See where with rapid bound (6 v.) ... 4d.	515	Ah! woe is me... H. Lahee 6d.
310	Laugh not, Youth, at Age ... 6d.	412	Those dainty daffodils (5 v.) Morley 4d.	516	Sweet evening hour ... S. Reay 4d.
311	Down in my garden fair ... 4d.	413	Dainty, fine, sweet nymph ... 4d.	517	Fair land, we greet thee Ciro Pinsuti 4d.
312	Adieu! my native shore ... 3d.	414	Shoot, false love, I care not ... 4d.	518	Rise, Fair Goddess ... H. Smart 2d.
313	Purple glow the forest ... 3d.	415	O say what nymph (6 v.)... Palestrina 4d.	519	A garland for our fairest J. L. Hatton 4d.
314	Caput apri defero ... 4d.	416	Ye singers all ... H. Waelrent 4d.	520	Around the maypole tripping Hatton 2d.
315	A Chieftain to the Highlands ... 3d.	417	Now fie on love... G. A. Macfarren 3d.	521	The boatman's good-night F. Schira 2d.
316	A King there was in Thule ... 3d.	418	Winds of Autumn! ... Chas. Oberthur 3d.	522	The serenade ... J. Brahms 3d.
317	Come, let us be merry ... 3d.	419	Softly fall the shades ... E. Silas 3d.	523	Vineta ... 6d.
318	Mihisi propositum (A. T. B. B.) ... 3d.	420	Love me little, love me long L. Wilson 3d.	524	The dirge of Darthula ... 4d.
319	Light of my soul ... 4d.	421	Shall I tell you whom I love Wesley 4d.	525	As I saw fair Clara ... F. Corder 4d.
320	Lay a garland ... 4d.	422	It was a lover and his lass J. Booth 2d.	526	Up! up! ye dames... W. Bendall 4d.
321	Summer is y-coming in ... 3d.	423	Love's question and reply J. B. Grant 3d.	527	If love be dead ... C. Wood 6d.
322	Why should the Cuckoo's ... 4d.	424	Hence, loathed melancholy (5 v.) Lahee 6d.	528	The Norse Queen's gift W. Hay 4d.
323	Why weep, alas! ... 4d.	425	Evening Song ... E. M. Hill 4d.	529	Cavalry Song ... C. A. Macrone 3d.
324	There is a paradise (A. T. B. B.) ... 3d.	426	Welcome dawn of summer's day ... 4d.	530	The winds that waft Vincent Wallace 3d.
325	O! all ye ladies fair and true ... 3d.	427	Charge of the Light Brigade Hecht 6d.	531	Corin for Cleora dying ... 2d.
326	War Song of the Baron ... 3d.	428	There is beauty on the mountain Goss 2d.	532	Madeleine ... J. L. Roedel 4d.
327	Why do the roses... 3d.	429	O my sweet Mary (5 v.) ... 6d.	533	Earth, with its troubled voices Costa 4d.
328	Sweet as a flower in May ... 3d.	430	Lo! where the rosy-bosom'd hours ... 6d.	534	Music, when soft voices die A. King 6d.
329	Praise of good wine (T. T. B. B.) ... 3d.	431	Her eyes the glow-worm ... 6d.	535	The days of long ago ... B. Tours 4d.
330	Watchman's Song (T. T. B. B.) ... 3d.	432	Bells of St. Michael's ... Stewart 6d.	536	The present ... C. Carr Moseley 4d.
331	Ditto (S. A. T. B.) ... 3d.	433	The Cruisken Lawn (5 v.) ... 4d.	537	The triumph of Victoria J. Stainer 8d.
332	Waters of Elle (S. A. T. B.) ... 3d.	434	The wine cup is circling ... 4d.	538	The three merry dwarfs Mackenzie 6d.
333	No! no! Nigella (8 voices) ... 3d.	435	Ye mariners of England H. Pierson 2d.	539	Sleep, darling baby Ricardo Mählig 4d.
334	Sir Patrick Spens. In 10 parts ... 6d.	436	The Vesper Hymn ... Beethoven 3d.	540	The rosy dawn creeps C. H. Lloyd 6d.
335	Already snow has fallen Franz 2d.	437	What though sorrow ... Naumann 3d.	541	If doughty deeds C. Lee Williams 4d.
336	At parting ... 2d.	438	The Swallows ... Pohlentz 3d.	542	Radiant sister ... Rosalind F. Ellicott 6d.
337	The fairest time ... 2d.	439	Hope and Faith ... Weber 3d.	543	To Chloris, on her singing Pringle 4d.
338	Spring's faith ... 2d.	440	Hark, hark, the Lark ... Kücken 4d.	544	The blue-eyed lassie F. Brandeis 3d.
339	May Song ... 2d.	441	A walk at dawn ... Gade 4d.	545	Bonnie Bell ... A. C. Mackenzie 3d.
340	A morning walk ... 4d.	442	Winter days ... A. J. Caldicott 6d.	546	Peace be around thee R. F. Ellicott 4d.
341	Home that I love... F. Abt 2d.	443	Homeward ... Henry Leslie 6d.	547	O Mistress mine ... H. MacCunn 3d.
342	Eventide ... 2d.	444	To sea! the calm is o'er ... Marshall 6d.	548	There is a garden ... 4d.
343	O thou world so fair ... 4d.	445	Rest bath come... 3d.	549	It was a lass ... 4d.
344	Spring's awaking ... 2d.	446	Hymn to the Moon ... Josiah Booth 6d.	550	How can a bird help singing? Abt 4d.
345	Night Song ... 2d.	447	The Brook ... C. G. Reissiger 4d.	551	In Spring time ... 4d.
346	Evening glow on the woods ... 4d.	448	The Secret ... 4d.	552	The Rover's Joy ... 3d.
347	Dost thou hear the trees F. Hensel 2d.	449	Is it to odours sweet ... R. Müller 4d.	553	The Flowers' review ... 3d.
348	The unknown land ... 4d.	450	On the water ... R. de Curvy 4d.	554	The Rose in October Wm. Robinson 3d.
349	In Autumn ... 2d.	451	The Water-lily ... N. W. Gade 3d.	555	The Hunters ... W. W. Pearson 3d.
350	Morning greeting ... 2d.	452	There's one that I love ... F. Kücken 4d.	556	The Inconstants ... R. Schumann 4d.
351	The woodland valley ... 4d.	453	The trees are all budding ... 4d.	557	The heath rose ... 3d.
352	When woods are glowing ... 4d.	454	There sings a bird ... Franz Abt 3d.	558	The recruit ... 3d.
353	How I love the festive... Mackenzie 4d.	455	O world! thou art so ... Hiller 6d.	559	The Highland Lassie ... 4d.
354	Autumn ... 2d.	456	Winter Song ... H. Dorn 4d.	560	Rattlin' roarin' Willie ... 3d.
355	When Spring ... 6d.	457	The arrow and the song... W. Hay 4d.	561	The lovely Adelaide ... Volkslied 3d.
356	The day of love ... 4d.	458	Kings and Queens ... Ciro Pinsuti 4d.	562	To the wood we'll go ... 4d.
357	Stars are with the voyager ... 2d.	459	Would you ask my heart? ... 4d.	563	The Douglas raid ... O. Prescott 4d.
358	Hail to the chief ... E. Prout 6d.	460	The Rhine Raft Song ... 4d.	564	When the hunter's horn J. Benedict 4d.
359	At the coming of the J. L. Hatton 4d.	461	The Silent Tide ... 2d.	565	The Fountain ... F. Schira 4d.
360	Calm night ... 4d.	462	The April time ... 3d.	566	The three lays ... J. L. Roedel 3d.
		463	The Song to Pan ... 4d.	567	Airs of Summer ... 3d.
		464	Autumn is come again ... F. Corder 4d.

NOVELLO'S HYMNS AND TUNES

FOR

SUNDAY SCHOOL ANNIVERSARY SERVICES.

PUBLISHED IN BOTH NOTATIONS COMBINED.

Five Sets, each containing Ten Hymns and Tunes, price 6d. each set; Words only, 6s. 6d. per 100.

The following may be had separately, price 1½d. each.

	Words by	Music by
1. COME, CHILDREN, ON AND FORWARD ...	... F. BEVAN ...	... G. C. MARTIN
2. FOR THE FRESHNESS OF THE MORNING (Flower Service)	... W. ST. HILL BOURNE...	... Lady EUAN-SMITH
3. I LOVE TO HEAR THE STORY ...	... EMILY H. MILLER ...	... F. CLAY
4. COME, O COME, IN PIOUS LAYS ...	... G. WITHER ...	... J. STAINER
5. {THINE FOR EVER! GOD OF LOVE... NOW THE DAYLIGHT GOES AWAY ...	... MARY F. MAUDE ... ... F. R. HAVERGAL ...	... W. C. HARVEY ... J. ADCOCK
6. JESU, WHOM THY CHILDREN LOVE ...	... J. F. WHEELER ...	... H. E. BUTTON
7. SWEETLY O'ER THE MEADOWS FAIR ... (Flower Service)	... F. A. CHALLINOR ...	... F. A. CHALLINOR
8. WOULD YOU GAIN THE BEST IN LIFE ...	... H. R. PALMER ...	... C. J. MAY
9. ON OUR WAY REJOICING ...	... J. S. B. MONSELL ...	... W. B. GILBERT
10. AGAIN THE MORN OF GLADNESS...	... J. ELLERTON ...	... J. STAINER
11. THE ANGEL'S SONG ...	... F. R. HAVERGAL ...	... A. RANDEGGER
12. FORWARD, CHRISTIAN CHILDREN ...	... HELEN W. SELBY ...	... A. MOFFAT
13. THE GOLDEN SHORE ...	... E. OXENFORD ...	... J. STAINER
14. SAVIOUR, BLESSED SAVIOUR ...	... G. THRING ...	... JOHN E. WEST
15. ENTER WITH THANKSGIVING ...	... W. ST. HILL BOURNE	... F. H. COWEN
16. MAN SHALL NOT LIVE BY BREAD ALONE	... W. H. DRAPER ...	... J. V. ROBERTS
17. STARS, THAT ON YOUR WONDROUS WAY	... J. BOGUE ...	... J. STAINER
18. THE DAY IS PAST AND OVER ...	... J. M. NEALE ...	... J. BARNBY
19. WE MARCH, WE MARCH TO VICTORY ...	... G. MOULTRIE ...	... J. BARNBY
20. HARK! HARK! THE ORGAN LOUDLY PEALS	... G. THRING ...	... G. J. BENNETT
21. O WHAT CAN LITTLE HANDS DO...	... G. W. HINSDALE ...	... H. E. BUTTON
22. THE ROSEATE HUES OF EARLY DAWN...	... C. F. ALEXANDER ...	... A. SULLIVAN
23. LORD, THY CHILDREN GUIDE AND KEEP	... W. W. HOW ...	... A. S. COOPER
24. {THE BEAUTIFUL LAND ... JESUS, TENDER SHEPHERD, HEAR ME...	... E. OXENFORD ... ... M. L. DUNCAN ...	... J. STAINER ... H. PARKER
25. THE BOYS AND GIRLS OF ENGLAND ...	... J. COMPTON ...	... J. STAINER
26. THE CITY OF LIGHT ...	... F. ADLER ...	... E. J. TROUP
27. {GOD IS IN HEAVEN! CAN HE HEAR ... GENTLE JESUS, MEEK AND MILD...	... A. GILBERT ... ... C. WESLEY ...	... H. E. BUTTON ... J. STAINER
28. HE DWELLS AMONG THE LILIES (Flower Service)	W. ST. HILL BOURNE	... Lady EUAN-SMITH
29. THE CROWN IS WAITING ...	... E. OXENFORD ...	... J. STAINER
30. RAISE YOUR STANDARD, BROTHERS ...	... G. SPILLER ...	... E. J. TROUP
31. FLOWERS (Flower Service) ...	... F. R. HAVERGAL ...	... A. RANDEGGER
32. THE GOOD SHEPHERD...	... E. OXENFORD...	... J. STAINER
33. ABOVE THE CLEAR BLUE SKY ...	... M. BOURDILLON ...	... H. E. CRIMP
34. WHEN LOVE DRAWS NEAR ...	... L. WHITEHEAD ...	... E. J. TROUP
35. COME SING WITH HOLY GLADNESS ...	... J. J. DANIELL ...	... G. W. TORRANCE
36. WE WILL PRAISE THEE ...	... E. OXENFORD ...	... J. STAINER
37. WHAT CAN I GIVE JESUS (Flower Service)...	... A. C. BENSON ...	... A. M. GOODHART
38. COME, PRAISE OUR LORD AND SAVIOUR	... W. W. HOW ...	... H. A. CHAMBERS
39. NOW THE DAY IS OVER ...	... S. BARING-GOULD ...	... F. W. BLUNT
40. WE THANK THEE LORD FOR THIS FAIR EARTH	G. E. L. COTTON	... W. C. HARVEY
41. THE LESSON OF LOVE ...	... ..	... J. BARNBY
42. COME, FRIENDS, THE WORLD WANTS MENDING	... ..	... E. J. TROUP
43. CREATOR, GOD, AND LORD ...	... MARY BRADFORD WHITING ...	... J. H. MAUNDER
44. O GOD, WE COME BEFORE THEE (Flower Service)	J. GIBSON ...	... Tune—"ELLACOMBE"

(To be continued.)

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

ANTHEMS FOR ASCENSIONTIDE.

*Above all praise and all majesty .. ..	Mendelssohn	2d.	Let not your heart be troubled (Double Chorus unac.) .. ..	M. B. Foster	4d.
Achieved is the glorious work .. ..	Haydn	1½d.	*Let not your heart (Four-part) .. ..	M. B. Foster	4d.
*Achieved is the glorious work (and Chorus) ..	Haydn	2d.	*Let their celestial concerts all unite .. ..	Handel	4d.
*All glory to the Lamb .. ..	Spohr	2d.	*Lift up your heads .. ..	Handel and J. L. Hopkins, each	2d.
Awake up, my glory .. ..	M. Wise	4d.	*Lift up your heads .. ..	S. Coleridge-Taylor	4d.
*Christ became obedient unto death .. ..	J. F. Bridge	2d.	Lift up your heads .. ..	W. Turner	3d.
Christ is not entered into the Holy Places ..	E. Faning	2d.	*Look, ye saints .. ..	M. B. Foster	4d.
Come, ye children .. ..	H. J. King	4d.	O all ye people, clap your hands .. ..	H. Purcell	4d.
For it became Him .. ..	O. King	2d.	*O clap your hands .. ..	J. Stainer	8d.
God is gone up .. ..	*Croft, 6d.; W. B. Gilbert	3d.	O clap your hands .. ..	T. T. Trimmell	4d.
*God, my King .. ..	Bach	2d.	*O God, the King of Glory .. ..	H. Smart	6d.
Grant, we beseech Thee .. ..	H. Lahee	2d.	*O God, when Thou appearest .. ..	Mozart	4d.
Grant, we beseech Thee (Collect) .. ..	A. R. Gaul	4d.	*O how amiable .. ..	J. Barnby	4d.
*Hallelujah unto God's Almighty Son .. ..	Beethoven	4d.	*O Lord our Governour .. ..	H. Gadsby	4d.
*How excellent Thy Name, O Lord .. ..	Handel	2d.	O Lord our Governour .. ..	Marcello	2d.
*If ye then be risen with Christ .. ..	I. Atkins	6d.	*O risen Lord .. ..	J. Barnby	2d.
If ye then be risen .. ..	*F. O. Carr and J. Naylor, ea.	4d.	*Open to me the gates .. ..	F. Adlam	6d.
If ye then be risen (Two parts) F. W. Wadeley, 2d.; M. B. Foster		4d.	*Rejoice in the Lord .. ..	J. B. Calkin	2d.
In My Father's house .. ..	H. E. Button and J. M. Crament, ea.	4d.	*Sing unto God .. ..	F. Bevan	4d.
In that day .. ..	G. Elvey	6d.	*Ten thousand times ten thousand .. ..	E. V. Hall	4d.
In that day (Open ye the gates) .. ..	F. C. Maker	4d.	The earth is the Lord's .. ..	T. T. Trimmell	6d.
*It shall come to pass .. ..	B. Tours	2d.	*The Lord is exalted .. ..	J. E. West	2d.
I will not leave you comfortless .. ..	W. Byrd	4d.	*The Lord is King .. ..	H. Gadsby, 8d.; H. J. King, 6d.; W. King	3d.
*King all-glorious .. ..	J. Barnby	8d.	Thou art a priest for ever .. ..	S. Wesley	4d.
King all-glorious (with Chorus arr. for four voices) ..	J. Barnby	6d.	*Unfold, ye portals .. ..	Ch. Gounod	4d.
*Leave us not, neither forsake us .. ..	J. Stainer	2d.	*Where Thou reignest .. ..	Schubert	4d.
Let not your heart .. ..	E. Faning and G. Gardner, each	4d.	Who is this so weak and helpless .. ..	Rayner	3d.

ANTHEMS FOR WHITSUNTIDE.

And all the people saw .. ..	J. Stainer	8d.	If ye love Me .. ..	H. W. Wareing and W. J. Westbrook, each	4d.
*And suddenly there came .. ..	H. J. Wood	4d.	*In divers tongues .. ..	.. ..	3d.
And when the day of Pentecost .. ..	C. W. Smith	4d.	In My Father's house .. ..	.. ..	4d.
*As pants the hart .. ..	Spohr	2d.	It shall come to pass .. ..	*B. Tours, 2d.; G. Garrett	3d.
*As the hart pants .. ..	Mendelssohn	2d.	Let God arise .. ..	T. T. Trimmell, 6d.; Greene	3d.
Behold, I send the promise .. ..	J. V. Roberts	6d.	*Let not your heart be troubled .. ..	H. G. Trembath	2d.
*Come, Holy Ghost .. ..	Attwood	2d.	Look down, Holy Dove .. ..	B. Luard-Selby	4d.
Ditto (Three-part, s.s.a.) .. ..	Attwood	2d.	*O clap your hands .. ..	J. Stainer	8d.
Come, Holy Ghost .. ..	Elvey and J. L. Hatton, each	6d.	*O give thanks .. ..	G. Elvey	4d.
Come, Holy Ghost .. ..	C. L. Williams and *Palestrina, each	3d.	*O God, my soul thirsteth .. ..	F. R. Greenish	4d.
Come, Thou Holy Spirit .. ..	J. F. Barnett	4d.	*O Holy Ghost, into our minds .. ..	G. A. Macfarren	2d.
Do not I fill heaven and earth .. ..	H. Blair	4d.	*Oh I for a closer walk with God .. ..	M. B. Foster	2d.
*Eye hath not seen (Two-part setting) .. ..	M. B. Foster	4d.	Ditto .. ..	H. A. Chambers	4d.
*Eye hath not seen (Four-part setting) .. ..	M. B. Foster	4d.	O taste and see .. ..	*Sullivan, 2d.; *Goss and A. H. Mann, each	4d.
Fear thou not .. ..	J. Booth	2d.	O Thou, the true and only Light .. ..	Mendelssohn	3d.
Give thanks unto God .. ..	Spohr	6d.	O where shall wisdom be found .. ..	Boyce	8d.
Glorious and powerful God .. ..	O. Gibbons	4d.	*Our blest Redeemer .. ..	E. V. Hall	4d.
*God came from Teman .. ..	C. Steggall	6d.	*Peace I leave .. ..	J. V. Roberts	4d.
*God is a Spirit .. ..	W. S. Bennett	2d.	*Praised be the Lord daily .. ..	J. B. Calkin	2d.
Ditto (Two-part, s.s.) .. ..	Bennett	2d.	Sing to the Lord .. ..	Smart	1s. 6d.
Ditto (Male Voice, A.T.B.B.) .. ..	Bennett	3d.	*Spirit of mercy, truth, and love .. ..	H. A. Chambers, B. Luard-Selby, ea.	2d.
Gracious Spirit, Holy Ghost .. ..	H. Blair	4d.	The eyes of all wait upon Thee .. ..	Gibbons	6d.
*Great is the Lord .. ..	W. Hayes	6d.	*The Glory of the God of Israel .. ..	T. Adams	4d.
*Grieve not the Holy Spirit .. ..	J. Stainer	4d.	*The Lord came from Sinai .. ..	J. E. West	4d.
Hail! breath of life .. ..	T. Adams	2d.	The Lord descended .. ..	Hayes	2d.
Happy is the man .. ..	E. Prout	1s.	The Lord is in His Holy Temple .. ..	J. Stainer	6d.
He that dwelleth in the secret place .. ..	J. Booth	6d.	The Lord is in His Holy Temple .. ..	J. W. Elliott; E. H. Thorne, ea.	2d.
*Holy Spirit, come, O come (Ad Spiritum Sanctum) ..	G. C. Martin	2d.	The love of God is shed abroad .. ..	S. Reay	2d.
I was in the spirit .. ..	Blow	8d.	There is no condemnation .. ..	H. S. Irons	4d.
*I will magnify Thee .. ..	Bunnett, 4d.; J. H. Parry	4d.	The Spirit of God .. ..	A. W. Marchant	4d.
*I will not leave you comfortless .. ..	B. Steane	3d.	The wilderness .. ..	J. Goss, 3d.; *S. S. Wesley	8d.
*I will pray the Father .. ..	G. W. Torrance	2d.	*When God of old came down from Heaven ..	E. V. Hall	4d.
If I go not away .. ..	A. J. Caldicott, 4d.; G. W. Torrance	2d.	We will rejoice .. ..	Croft	6d.
If ye love Me .. ..	Bunnett, 4d.; B. Steane, 3d.; C. S. Heap	2d.	When the Day of Pentecost .. ..	A. Kempton	4d.
*If ye love Me .. ..	W. H. Monk, Tallis, and R. P. Stewart, each	2d.	Whosoever drinketh .. ..	J. T. Field	2d.

ANTHEMS FOR TRINITYTIDE.

*Almighty and everlasting God .. ..	Gibbons	2d.	In sweet consent .. ..	E. H. Thorne	4d.
Almighty God, Who hast promised .. ..	H. E. Button	1½d.	In the fear of the Lord .. ..	J. V. Roberts	4d.
*Angel Spirits, ever blessed .. ..	Tchaikovsky	3d.	Let the peace of God .. ..	J. Stainer	6d.
Ascribe unto the Lord .. ..	S. S. Wesley	6d.	*Let Thy merciful ears .. ..	A. R. Gaul	2d.
Behold, God is great .. ..	E. W. Naylor	6d.	*Light of the world .. ..	E. Elgar	4d.
*Beloved, if God so loved us .. ..	J. Barnby	2d.	Lord of all power and might .. ..	E. T. Chipp	4d.
Beloved, let us love one another .. ..	G. F. Cobb	2d.	*Lord of all power and might .. ..	W. Mason	2d.
Be ye all of one mind .. ..	A. E. Godfrey	4d.	Lord of all power and might (men's voices) ..	J. Barnby	3d.
Blessed is the man .. ..	J. Goss	6d.	Lord, we pray Thee .. ..	H. A. Chambers and *J. V. Roberts, ea.	2d.
Blessing and glory .. ..	Boyce	2d.	O Father blest .. ..	J. Barnby	2d.
*Blessing, glory .. ..	Bach	8d.	O God, Who hast prepared .. ..	A. R. Gaul	3d.
Come, ye children .. ..	J. Booth	4d.	O joyful Light .. ..	B. Tours	6d.
God came from Teman .. ..	C. Steggall	6d.	*O Lord, my trust .. ..	K. Hall	2d.
*God so loved the world .. ..	M. Kingston	2d.	O taste and see .. ..	*J. Goss and A. H. Mann, each	4d.
Grant, O Lord .. ..	Mozart	2d.	*O taste and see .. ..	A. Sullivan	4d.
Grant to us, Lord .. ..	H. E. Button	1½d.	O where shall wisdom be found? .. ..	Boyce	8d.
*Hail, gladdening Light .. ..	J. T. Field, 3d.; *G. C. Martin	6d.	Ponder my words, O Lord .. ..	A. D. Culley	2d.
*Holy, holy, holy .. ..	Crotch	4d.	*Praise His awful Name .. ..	Spohr	3d.
Holy, Lord God Almighty .. ..	T. Bateson	6d.	Rejoice in the Lord .. ..	G. C. Martin	8d.
*How goodly are Thy tents .. ..	F. Ouseley	2d.	*See what love hath the Father .. ..	Mendelssohn	2d.
*How lovely are Thy dwellings .. ..	Spohr	2d.	Sing to the Lord .. ..	Mendelssohn	1s.
*Hymn to the Trinity .. ..	Tchaikovsky	2d.	Stand up and bless .. ..	J. Goss	6d.
I am Alpha and Omega .. ..	Ch. Gounod and J. V. Roberts, each	4d.	Teach me Thy way .. ..	W. H. Gladstone, 2d.; F. L. Moir	4d.
*I am Alpha and Omega .. ..	J. Stainer	2d.	*The Lord hath been mindful .. ..	S. S. Wesley	4d.
I behold, and lo! .. ..	Blow	8d.	*The Lord is my Shepherd .. ..	G. A. Macfarren	2d.
I know that the Lord is great .. ..	F. Ouseley	2d.	*The Lord is my Shepherd .. ..	J. Shaw	4d.
I saw the Lord .. ..	C. Harris, 4d.; *J. Stainer	8d.	The Lord will comfort Zion .. ..	H. Hiles	6d.
I will magnify .. ..	J. Shaw	4d.	Thou art worthy, O Lord .. ..	F. E. Gladstone	4d.
I will sing of Thy power .. ..	Greene	6d.	Thou shalt shew me the path of life .. ..	A. Gray	2d.
*I will sing of Thy power .. ..	A. Sullivan	2d.	Three in One and One in Three (S.S.) ..	F. W. Wadeley	3d.
I will sing unto the Lord .. ..	H. Wareing	4d.	We humbly beseech Thee .. ..	H. E. Button	1½d.
*In humble faith .. ..	G. Garrett	2d.	Whosoever is born of God .. ..	H. Oakeley	4d.
*In Jewry is God known .. ..	J. Clarke-Whitfield	2d.	Who can comprehend Thee .. ..	Mozart	4d.

* * Anthems marked thus (*) may be had in Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d. to 3d. each.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

FOR LENT AND PASSION WEEK.
"REX SÆCULORUM."

CHORALE
 By J. CRÜGER, S.J.
 Arranged for Mixed Voices, with independent Accompaniment for Organ, by
THEODOR L. CLEMENS.
 Price Sixpence.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

SONG, SUITABLE FOR LENTEN SEASON.
 A devotional setting of the well-known words
When I Survey the Wondrous Cross

FOR SOPRANO OR TENOR, BY
A. H. FILLINGHAM, A.R.C.M.

Price Two Shillings.
 Sung by Madame Goodall, &c.
 "An agreeable and well varied song."—Yorkshire Post, &c.
W. WEEKES & CO., 14, HANOVER STREET, W.

A SHORT AND EASY
COMMUNION SERVICE

IN E FLAT

(Including Ninefold Kyrie, Benedictus qui venit, and Agnus Dei).

COMPOSED BY

BASIL HARWOOD.

PRICE ONE SHILLING.

Voice Part only, for Congregational use, 6d.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

THE
CHANT COMMUNION SERVICE
 WITH EUCHARISTIC HYMNS.

The Creed and Gloria in Excelsis, arranged in verses and pointed both for Anglican and Gregorian chanting.

Suitable for Mission, Village, and Parish Choirs, or for a Congregation without the aid of a Choir.

ARRANGED BY THE

REV. C. W. A. BROOKE, M.A.

PRICE SIXPENCE.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

As sung at the principal Churches, including St. Mary Redcliffe, St. Thomas (City), Bristol, &c.

FESTIVAL SETTING IN G. OF THE
MAGNIFICAT AND NUNC DIMITTIS

For Full Choir, Soprano Solo, and Organ.

PRICE SIXPENCE.

Specimen Copies from the Composer,
J. J. JONES, 8, Brecknock Road, Bristol.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

CHAMINADE'S CELEBRATED

"SERENADE ESPAGNOLE"

Transcribed for Violin and Piano by KREISLER, and played by him at a large number of concerts in America, Price 2s. 6d. net.

Send for complete lists to

ENOCH & SONS, LD., Enoch House, 58, Great Marlborough Street,
 London, W.1.

And at Paris, New York, Toronto, and Melbourne.

JOSEPH WILLIAMS, LTD.

PART-SONGS INCLUDED IN SYLLABUS

OF
THE EMPIRE MUSICAL FESTIVAL,
 CRYSTAL PALACE, MAY, 1924.

- CHAMPIONSHIP SECTION (MALE VOICES).
R. VAUGHAN WILLIAMS (arr.). O.N. Sol-fa
 "Down among the dead men" (T.T.B.B.)... 6d. 3d.
 CHAMPIONSHIP SECTION (FEMALE VOICES).
CHRIS. M. EDMUNDS.
 "To primroses filled with morning dew" (3v.) 6d. 3d.
 CHAMPIONSHIP SECTION (CHILDREN'S CHOIRS).
CYRIL JENKINS.
 "Lady Moon" Both Notations (combined) 4d.
ARNE.
 "By dimpled brook and fountain brim" ... 4d. —

PART SONGS.

* SIX SONGS FROM SHAKESPEARE.

- GEOFFREY SHAW.
 1. What shall he have that kill'd the deer (S.A.T.B.) ... 4d.
 2. When icicles hang by the wall (S.A.T.B.) ... 4d.
 3. Over hill, over dale (S.A.) ... 2d.
 4. Ye spotted snakes (S.A.T.B.) ... 4d.
 5. Hey Robin, jolly Robin (T.B.) ... 4d.
 6. When that I was and a little tiny boy (S.A.T.B.) ... 4d.

COMPLETE, TWO SHILLINGS NET.

* EDWARD ELGAR.

"From the Bavarian Highlands" (Choral Suite)
 S.A.T.B. Nos. 1 to 6.

Complete O.N., 4s.; Sol-fa, 1s. 3d.

* Band Parts may be had on hire.

DEPT. I., JOSEPH WILLIAMS, LIMITED,
 32, GREAT PORTLAND STREET, LONDON, W.1.

AN EVENING HYMN

ON A GROUND

("NOW THAT THE SUN")

WORDS BY

DR. WILLIAM FULLER

MELODY AND BASS BY

HENRY PURCELL

EDITED AND AN ACCOMPANIMENT WRITTEN BY

HARVEY GRACE.

TWO KEYS

Price ... Two Shillings each.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

No. 98.—NOVELLO'S MUSIC PRIMERS.

ELEMENTS

OF

MUSICAL APPRECIATION.

BY

W. J. FOXELL,

M.A., Mus. Bac., Lond.

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE.

London: NOVELLO & COMPANY, Limited.

COMPETITION FESTIVAL MUSIC

PUBLISHED BY NOVELLO & CO., LTD.

VIOLIN SOLOS WITH PIANOFORTE ACCOMPANIMENT.

	s. d.		s. d.
AUSTIN, E. Sweet Night ... ..	2 3	IRELAND, J. Bagatelle ... ..	3 0
BERGER, F. Cavatina ... ..	2 3	LEMARE, E. H. Andantino ... ..	3 0
— Romanzetta ... ..	3 0	MacCUNN, H. Romance in G ... ..	3 0
BOHM, C. Rigaudon (Six Morceaux de Salon) ... ..	2 3	MACDONALD, R. H. Romance ... ..	3 0
— Capriccio (Ditto) ... ..	2 3	MACKENZIE, A. C. Distant Chimes (Op. 89) ... ..	3 0
— Finale (Ditto) ... ..	2 3	— Zingaresca (Op. 37. No. 1) ... ..	3 0
CARSE, A. Gavotte in G ... ..	2 3	MCAUGHT, W. Barcarolle ... ..	3 0
COLERIDGE-TAYLOR, S. Eastern Dance ("Nero") ... ..	3 0	NESVERA, J. Berceuse Bohémienne ... ..	1 6
COWEN, F. H. Minuet d'Amour ... ..	3 0	NEWTON, E. Cavatina in G ... ..	2 3
DAVID, F. Barcarolle ... ..	1 6	O'DONNELL, B. W. A Slumber Song ... ..	3 0
DOLMETSCH, A. Barcarolle and Menuet ... ..	1 6	PARRY, C. H. H. From Suite in D—Capriccioso ... ..	2 3
D'OZANNE, A. DUTEIL. Air à Danser (Op. 21) ... ..	3 0	— From Suite in F. Slow Minuet ... ..	2 3
DVORÁK. Allegretto grazioso (Symphony No. 4) ... ..	3 0	— " " Gigue ... ..	2 3
ELGAR, E. Chanson de Matin ... ..	3 0	RAFF, Cavatina ... ..	1 6
— Chanson de Nuit ... ..	2 3	SAURET, E. Gondolera (Op. 39, No. 2) ... ..	3 0
GERMAN, E. Pastorale (Romeo and Juliet) ... ..	3 0	— Mazourka (Op. 49, No. 3) ... ..	3 0
— Three Dances (Henry VIII.) ... ..	4 6	TSCHAIKOWSKY. Andante Cantabile (Op. 11) ... ..	3 0
GOUNOD. Julex from "Mors et Vita" ... ..	3 0	— Chant sans Paroles (Op. 2, No. 3) ... ..	2 3
HAYNES, BATTISON. Idyll ... ..	3 0	WOLSTENHOLME, W. Allegretto ... ..	2 3
HOLBROOKE, J. Souvenir de Printemps (Op. 23, No. 6) ... ..	3 0	— Meditation ... ..	2 3

PIANOFORTE SOLOS.

	s. d.		s. d.
ARENSKY, A. Prelude in F minor (Op. 42, No. 1) ... ..	3 0	HUMMEL, J. N. Rondo in E flat (Op. 11) (Klindworth) ... ..	3 0
— Romance in A flat (Op. 42, No. 2) ... ..	3 0	— Rondo in B minor (Op. 109) (Klindworth) ... ..	3 0
BACH. Bourrée in C ... ..	2 3	LANGE, G. Two Hungarian Dances (Op. 266) :
— Gavotte in B minor from Violin Sonata (Saint-Saëns) ... ..	2 0	1. Isteni Czárdás ... ..	2 3
BEETHOVEN. Andante in F (Klindworth) ... ..	3 0	2. Rozsabokar Czárdás ... ..	2 3
— Two Rondos (Op. 51, No. 1 in C, No. 2 in G) (Klindworth) ... ..	3 0	MENDELSSOHN. Perpetuum mobile (Op. 119) ... ..	3 0
COLERIDGE-TAYLOR, S. Valse de la Reine ... ..	2 3	— Prelude and Fugue in E minor (Klindworth) ... ..	3 0
DALCROZE, JAKUES. Four Characteristic Dances ... ..	3 0	— Scherzo in G minor from Octet (Op. 20) (Klhl) ... ..	3 0
ELGAR, E. Chanson de Nuit ... ..	2 3	RUBINSTEIN. Barcarolle (Op. 30) ... ..	2 3
— Chanson de Matin ... ..	2 3	— Melody in F ... ..	1 6
ESIPOFF, S. Ballade. G minor ... ..	3 0	SAINT-SAËNS. Gavotte in C minor ... ..	2 3
— Cantique d'Amour ... ..	3 0	— Mazurka in G minor ... ..	3 0
FLETCHER, PERCY E. Valse Lyrique ("Smile of Spring") ... ..	2 3	SCHUBERT. Impromptu in B flat (Klindworth) ... ..	3 0
HANDEL. Aria con Variazioni ("The Harmonious Blacksmith") (Klindworth) ... ..	2 3	SCHUMANN. Arabesque in C major (Op. 18) ... ..	1 6
— Fugue in E minor (Klindworth) ... ..	2 3	— Three Romances (Op. 28) ... ..	1 6
HAYDN. Andante con Variations in F minor (Klindworth) ... ..	3 0	SCOTT-BAKER, H. Pantomime ... ..	3 0
HENSELT, A. Si oiseau j'étais, A toi je volerais! (Op. 2, No. 5) (Pachmann) ... ..	2 3	STRELEZKI. Miniature ... ..	2 3
— Wiegenlied (Op. 45) (Chanson de Berceau) (Pachmann) ... ..	2 3	— Valse Impromptu ... ..	2 3
HOFMANN, H. From Golden Days (Op. 34, No. 3) ... ..	1 6	TSCHAIKOWSKY. Marche Militaire ... ..	3 0
— Puck (Op. 37, No. 9) ... ..	2 3	— Valse Scherzo in A major ... ..	3 0
		WEBER. Rondo brillant (E flat) (Op. 62) (Klindworth) ... ..	3 0
		WEST, A. H. Toccata ... ..	3 0

SONGS.

SOPRANO.	s. d.	TENOR.	s. d.
DVORÁK. Invocation ... ..	2 0	FARRAR, E. O Mistress Mine ... ..	2 0
ELGAR, E. Oh soft was the song ... ..	2 0	MACKENZIE, A. C. While my lady sleepeth ... ..	1 6
FARRAR, E. Brittany ... ..	1 6	PARRY, C. H. H. God breaketh the battle ... ..	2 0
MACKENZIE, A. C. Cross and Crown ... ..	2 0	SOMERVILLE, R. Invocation to the Dawn ... ..	2 0
PURCELL. Evening Hymn ... ..	2 0	WAGNER. Walter's Prize Song ... ..	2 0
CONTRALTO.		BASS.
COLERIDGE-TAYLOR, S. Soul's Expression ... ..	4 0	BENEDICT. Rage, thou angry storm ... ..	2 0
DVORÁK. Inflammatus ... ..	2 0	DALE, B. J. O mistress mine ... ..	2 0
ELGAR, E. A child asleep ... ..	2 0	GREENE, Dr. M. Like the young God of wine ... ..	2 0
GLUCK. Thou art gone, alas, for ever ... ..	2 0	HARTY, HAMILTON. Homeward ... ..	2 0
PARRY, C. H. H. Ballad of Meshullemeth ... ..	2 0	SMYTH, E. M. Chrysis ... ..	2 0

Specimens of every kind of music will be forwarded on application. To ensure a satisfactory selection, the Syllabus of the last Festival should accompany the request.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

COMPETITION FESTIVAL MUSIC

PUBLISHED BY NOVELLO & CO., LTD.

MIXED VOICES.

BANTOCK, GRANVILLE. Awake, awake ... .. 4d.	GERMAN, E. Chase, The ... .. 4d.
Grass of Parnassus ... .. 4d.	London Town ... .. 6d.
On Himalay ... .. 4d.	My bonnie lass, she smileth ... .. 4d.
BRAHMS. Dirge of Darthula, The (Op. 42, No. 3) ... .. 6d.	PARRY, C. H. H. Music, when soft voices die ... .. 3d.
COLERIDGE-TAYLOR. Evening Star, The ... .. 2d.	My delight and thy delight ... .. 4d.
Lee Shore, The ... .. 4d.	There rolls the deep ... .. 3d.
CORNELIUS, P. O death! thou art the tranquil night (Op. 11, No. 1) ... .. 6d.	Sweet day, so cool... .. 3d.
Hero's rest (Op. 19) ... .. 4d.	REED, W. H. My lady fell a-sighing ... .. 4d.
ELGAR, E. After many a dusty mile (arr.) ... .. 4d.	STANFORD, C. V. Corydon, arise ... .. 4d.
Death on the hills ... .. 8d.	Phoebe ... .. 4d.
Feasting I watch (arr.) ... .. 4d.	WEST, JOHN E. Woodmen, shepherds, come away ... .. 4d.
Go, song of mine ... .. 8d.	WILLIAMS, C. LEE. Song of the Pedlar ... .. 4d.
Shower, The ... .. 6d.	WILLIAMS, R. VAUGHAN. Fain would I change that note ... .. 3d.
FLETCHER, PERCY E. Folly's Song ... .. 4d.	WOOD, CHARLES. Full fathom five ... .. 3d.
GARDINER, H. BALFOUR. Cargoes ... .. 4d.
Old song resung, An ... .. 6d.

ELIZABETHAN MADRIGALS.

BATESON. Hark! hear you not... .. 4d.	MORLEY. Arise, awake, you silly shepherds ... .. 4d.
BENET. All creatures now are merry-minded ... .. 4d.	Shoot, false love, I care not ... .. 4d.
BYRD. I joy not in no earthly bliss ... .. 4d.	TOMKINS. Oyes! has any found a lad... .. 2d.
This sweet and merry month of May... .. 4d.	Weep no more ... .. 2d.
FARMER. I thought my love, that I should overtake you ... .. 4d.	WEEKES. As Vesta was from Latmos' Hill descending ... .. 4d.
GIBBONS, ORLANDO. Ah! dere heart ... .. 2d.	Lady, your eye ... .. 4d.
I tremble not at noise of war ... .. 4d.	WILBYE. Adieu, sweet Amarillis ... .. 3d.
MARSTON Nymphs and shepherds ... .. 4d.	Alas! what hope of speeding ... .. 3d.
	Lady Oriana, The... .. 4d.

MALE VOICES (T.T.B.B.).

BANTOCK, GRANVILLE. Festival Song ... .. 6d.	FLETCHER, PERCY E. Sailor's Return, The ... .. 6d.
Give a rouse ... .. 4d.	Vision of Belshazzar, The ... .. 4d.
How sleep the brave ... .. 4d.	GARDINER, H. BALFOUR. Sir Eglamore ... .. 4d.
CARSE, A. The tide rises, the tide falls ... .. 3d.	GERMAN, E. O peaceful night ... .. 4d.
CORNELIUS, P. Rider's Song, The ... .. 6d.	Sleeping ... .. 4d.
DAVIES, H. WALFORD. Hymn before Action ... .. 4d.	LLOYD, C. H. Wet sheet and a flowing sea ... .. 4d.
DUNHILL, T. F. Full fathom five ... .. 4d.	SCHUMANN. Night March, The (Op. 62, No. 1) ... .. 4d.
It was a lover and his lass ... .. 4d.	Song of Freedom (Op. 62, No. 2) ... .. 4d.
Who is Sylvia? ... .. 3d.	WILLIAMS, R. VAUGHAN. Bushes and briars (Folk-Song) ... .. 3d.
Wind and the rain, The ... .. 4d.	WOOD, CHARLES. Down in yon summer vale ... .. 3d.
ELGAR, E. Reveille, The ... .. 8d.
Wanderer, The ... .. 4d.
Zut! zut! zut! ... .. 4d.

FEMALE VOICES.

ATKINS, IVOR. Sea Song, A. (s.s.a.) ... .. 4d.	FLETCHER, PERCY E. *Dream, baby. (s.s.a.) ... .. 4d.
BERLIOZ. Ophelia. (s.a.)... .. 4d.	*Oh the merry May. (s.s.a.) ... .. 4d.
BOUGHTON, RUTLAND Piper's Song. (s.s.a.)... .. 3d.	GERMAN, E. Beauteous morn. (s.s.a.) ... .. 4d.
BRAHMS. *Barcarolle (Op. 44, No. 3). (s.s.a.a.) ... .. 2d.	O lovely May. (s.s.a.) ... .. 4d.
Gardener, The (Op. 17, No. 3). (s.s.a.) ... .. 4d.	HOLST, G. *Now sleeps the crimson petal. (s.s.a.a.) ... .. 3d.
*Now all the roses (Op. 44, No. 7). (s.s.a.a.) ... .. 4d.	*O swallow, swallow. (s.s.a.) ... .. 3d.
COLERIDGE-TAYLOR, S. Encinctured with a twine of leaves. (s.s.a.) ... .. 4d.	*Splendour falls, The. (s.s.a.a.) ... .. 4d.
From the green heart of the waters. (s.s.a.) ... .. 4d.	*Sweet and low. (s.s.a.a.) ... .. 4d.
DAVIES, H. WALFORD. Cradle Song, A. (s.s.a.) ... .. 4d.	*Tears, idle tears (s.s.a.a.) ... .. 3d.
Lamb, The. (s.s.a.) ... .. 4d.	SHAW, GEOFFREY. Three Hymns from Pan's Anniversary:—
Shepherd, The. (s.s.a.) ... .. 4d.	Of Pan we sing. (s.s.a.)... .. 6d.
ELGAR, E. Christmas greeting, A. (s.a.) ... .. 8d.	Pan is our all. (s.s.a.a.) ... .. 4d.
My love dwelt in a northern land (arr.). (s.s.a.) ... .. 4d.	If yet Pan's orgies. (s.s.a.a.) ... .. 4d.
Stars of the summer night. (s.a.) ... .. 8d.	WILLIAMS, R. VAUGHAN. Sound sleep. (s.s.a.) ... .. 6d.
	WOOD, CHARLES. La Fileuse. (s.a.) ... .. 4d.

ELIZABETHAN MADRIGALS (ARRANGED).

*BATESON. Nightingale, The. (s.s.a.) ... .. 2d.	MORLEY. *My bonny lass she smileth. (s.s.a.a.) ... .. 4d.
*BYRDE. Looke downe, O Lord. (s.s.a.a.) ... .. 3d.	*Now is the month of maying. (s.s.a.a.) ... .. 3d.
*EDWARDS. In going to my lonely bed (s.s.a.a.)... .. 3d.	WEEKES. *Nightingale, The. (s.s.a.) ... .. 3d.
*GIBBONS, ORLANDO. The silver swan. (s.s.a.a.) ... .. 2d.	WILBYE. *Seek sweet content. (s.s.a.) Adapted from the madrigal—"Fly love, to heaven" ... .. 2d.

* Unaccompanied.

UNISON SONG FOR MASSES VOICES.

Words by WHITTIER.

WORSHIP.
PRICE TWOPENCE.

Music by GEOFFREY SHAW.

Specimens of every kind of music will be forwarded on application. To ensure a satisfactory selection, the Syllabus of the last Festival should accompany the request.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

SERVICES AND PRAYERS.

SERVICES.

COMMUNION SERVICE.

Communion Service, Easy ( S. or T. Solo )	G. D. Harris	85026	6d.
Communion Service in B flat (Short and Easy)	L. M. White	85156	6d.
Communion Service in E ( S.S.C. )	C. H. Lloyd	85223	1s.
Communion Service in Dorian Mode with Benedictus added...	Richardson—Tallis	85230	8d.
Children's Eucharist, The ( Simple two-part Music ), in F ... ..	H. J. King	85088	6d.
Fa-burden Merbecke. Edited by Godfrey Scaats ( Credo and Gloria in unison, with organ part ; the remainder in fa-burden (faux-bourdon) in 4-part harmony. )		12463	1s.
Kyrie Eleison ( six condensed settings )	F. Helmore	85119	3d.
Office for Holy Communion ( with harmonies in tonality of period )	Dr. Pearce—Merbecke	85228	4d.
Messe Royale in Mode ( H. Dumont ) ( Planned in the same way as "The Fa-burden Merbecke" ). Edited by Godfrey Scaats		12464	1s.
Missa de Angelis ( Choir or Congregation )	W. Vale	85232	8d.

Any of the above may be seen through our "On Approval" Dept., or Sample Copies sent at half-price, post free, to bona-fide Choirmasters and Conductors sending card.

Of all Music Dealers, or if offer No. 17 is mentioned, post free from:—

W. PAXTON & Co., Ltd., 22, HIGH ST., NEW OXFORD ST.,
LONDON, W.C.1.

Send for complete Vocal and Choral Catalogue, C. 201, post free.

BURIAL OF THE DEAD.

Office for the Burial of the Dead Dr. Vincent 85136 4d.

MORNING SERVICE.

Morning Service (Short Chant Form) Dr. Vincent 85121 3d.

PRAYERS, ETC.

150th Psalm ( Chant Form ) ...	H. D. Wetton	85250	3d.
our Short Amens ... ..	A. E. Godfrey	85233	1d.
Litany of Intercession for Soldiers and Sailors	L. N. Fowles	85215	3d.
Litany and Suffrages ( Traditional Style )	F. Burgess	85226	3d.
Lord's Prayer ( Unison ) ... ..	J. Hyde	85200	2d.
Lord's Prayer ( Festival arr. )	A. E. Godfrey	85106	2d.
Lord's Prayer ... ..	Henry Tolhurst	85236	1d.
Sevenfold Amen ... ..	Henry Tolhurst	85235	1d.
Vesper Hymn, No. 2 ... ..	H. D. Wetton	85265	1d.

ORIGINAL COMPOSITIONS FOR THE ORGAN.

(NEW SERIES.)

No.	RECENT NUMBERS	s. d.
76.	TOCCATA AND FUGUE ("The Wanderer") C. Hubert H. Parry	3 6
77.	ANDANTE RELIGIOSO ... ..	Alec Rowley 1 6
78.	SCHERZO ... ..	G. J. Bennett 2 3
79.	THREE PRELUDES ... ..	G. J. Bennett 2 3
80.	DÉSÉSPOIR ... ..	Ch. Quef 1 6
81.	CAPRICE IN D FLAT ... ..	J. A. Sowerbutts 2 3
82.	THREE PSALM-PRELUDES, No. 1 ... ..	H. Howells 1 6
83.	" " " No. 2 ... ..	H. Howells 1 6
84.	" " " No. 3 ... ..	H. Howells 1 6
85.	THEMA OSTINATA ... ..	C. C. Palmer 1 6
86.	COVENANTERS' MARCH ... ..	R. G. Hailing 1 6
87.	CHORAL MELODY ... ..	C. F. Waters 1 6
88.	CONCERT OVERTURE IN F MINOR ...	Alfred Hollins 3 0
89.	HOMAGE TO HANDEL ... ..	S. Karg-Elert 3 6
90.	THREE SHORT AND EASY POSTLUDES (2nd Set) F. W. Wadely	2 3
91.	INTERMEZZI (No. 1, Pastorale) ...	C. V. Stanford 2 0
92.	" (No. 2, Marcia Eroica) ...	C. V. Stanford 2 0
93.	" (No. 3, Hush Song) ...	C. V. Stanford 2 0
94.	" (No. 4, Intermezzo Founded upon an Irish air ... ..	C. V. Stanford 2 0
95.	CHORAL IMPROVISATION ON "DER HÖLLE PFORTEN SIND ZERSTÖRT" ... ..	S. Karg-Elert 2 0
96.	CHORAL IMPROVISATION ON "GEBOT SEI GOTT IM HÖCHSTEN THRON" ... ..	S. Karg-Elert 2 0
97.	SEVEN PASTELS FROM THE LAKE OF CONSTANCE S. Karg-Elert	5 6
98.	PRELUDE AND FUGUE IN C ... ..	C. V. Stanford 2 0
99.	PRELUDE AND FUGUE IN C MINOR ...	C. V. Stanford 2 0
100.	PRELUDE AND FUGUE IN B MINOR ...	C. V. Stanford 2 0

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

ORCHESTRAL WORKS.

SELECTED LIST.

GRANVILLE BANTOCK.

OLD ENGLISH SUITE. Small Orchestra.

Full Score, 16s. String Parts, 6s. 9d. Wind Parts, 11s. 1d.

EDWARD ELGAR.

VARIATIONS ON AN ORIGINAL THEME.

Full Score, 25s. String Parts, 14s. 9d. Wind Parts, 31s. 6d.

EDWARD GERMAN.

MARCH RHAPSODY.

Full Score, 16s. String Parts, 8s. 3d. Wind Parts, 19s. 8d.

HAMILTON HARTY.

WITH THE WILD GEESE. Poem for Orchestra.

Full Score, 19s. String Parts, 10s. 6d. Wind Parts, MS.

DOROTHY HOWELL.

LAMIA. Symphonic Poem.

Full Score, 15s. String Parts, 6s. 8d. Wind Parts, MS.

A. C. MACKENZIE.

THE LITTLE MINISTER. Overture.

Full Score, MS. String Parts, 6s. 9d. Wind Parts, 14s. 8d.
Wind Parts (Small Orchestra), MS.

CHARLES MACPHERSON.

HALLOWE'EN. Suite.

Full Score and Wind Parts, MS. String Parts, 16s. 6d.

ARTHUR SULLIVAN.

OVERTURE "In Memoriam."

Full Score, 19s. String Parts, 6s. 9d. Wind Parts, 12s.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

USEFUL CANTICLES, ETC.

MAGNIFICAT AND NUNC DIMITTIS.

Blair, Hugh in F (Congregational setting) ...	85183	4d.
Bunnett, Dr. E. in C (Congregational setting) ...	85181	4d.
Burgess, F. (Chant Form) (Traditional) ...	85227	3d.
Foster, Myles B. in F ...	85164	4d.
Gostelow, F. in A flat ( S.A.T.B. or Unison ) ...	85197	6d.
Harding, Dr. H. in C ( S. Solo ) ...	85165	4d.
Harris, G. D. ( Ecclesiastical Tones ) ...	85042	4d.
Monk, E. L. in D ...	85210	4d.
Vincent, Dr. in B flat ...	85140	4d.
Vincent, Dr. in C (Congregational setting) ...	85174	4d.
Vincent, Dr. in G ...	85015	4d.
Vincent, Dr. in Dorian Mode ...	85225	4d.

THE VENITE.

O come, let us sing ... Dr. Vincent 85214 4d.

Any of the above may be seen through our "On Approval" Dept., or Sample Copies sent at half-price, post free, to bona-fide Choirmasters and Conductors sending card.

Of all Music Dealers, or if offer No. 17 is mentioned, post free from:—

W. PAXTON & Co., Ltd., 22, HIGH ST., NEW OXFORD ST.,
LONDON, W.C.1.
Send for complete Vocal and Choral Catalogue, C. 201, post free.

TE DEUM.

Foster, Myles B. in F ...	85163	4d.
Hassard, T. Benedictus only in F (Chant Form) ...	85186	3d.
Jackson, W. in F ...	85238	2d.
Rowton, S. J. in E flat (Chant Form) ...	85168	3d.
Vincent, Dr. in G (and Benedictus ) ...	85080	4d.
Wetton, Dr. H. D. in G ...	85251	4d.

BENEDICITE.

Coombs, E. A. in G (Congregational setting) ...	85202	2d.
Howard-McLean, N. W. in D (Chant setting) ...	85137	2d.
Powell, C. T. in E flat (Congregational setting) ...	85201	2d.
Vincent, Dr. in G ...	85066	3d.
Vincent, Dr. in F (Shortened Form) ...	85178	2d.
Wetton, Dr. H. D. in G ...	85252	4d.
Winton, W. W. in F (Chant setting with Organ Accompaniment) ...	85125	3d.

CANTATE DOMINO.

Cantate Domino and Deus Misereatur in G
Dr. Vincent 85138 6d.

EURHYTHM: THOUGHT IN ACTION

The Principles and Practice of Vocal and Physical Therapy.

DESIGNED FOR THE USE OF TEACHERS AND STUDENTS OF VOCAL AND PHYSICAL EDUCATION

By H. H. HULBERT

CAPT. R.A.M.C., M.A. OXFORD, M.R.C.S., L.R.C.P., ETC.

176 Pages, Octavo Size, Cloth, Gilt Lettered - - - PRICE SEVEN SHILLINGS NET.

SHORT SYNOPSIS OF CHAPTERS.

I.—DEFINITION OF EURHYTHM. II.—THE ENGLISH PHYSIQUE AND ARTISTIC MOVEMENT. Science and games of skill—Movements of novice and master-man—Co-ordination in movement—Discipline of games. III.—THE POISE OF THE BODY AND TONICITY. Common deformities—Correct poise—Correct figure—Lumbar curve the centre of balance—Degrees of tonic—Position of attention—Special exercises. IV.—THE SCIENCE OF APPRECIATION AND THE CONCEPTION OF THE BEAUTIFUL. Power of imagery—Knowledge of self—Kinds of appreciation—The five senses and experience—Sense of touch in music and games. V.—THE ART OF EXPRESSION AND CONTROL. Three nervous levels—Will and movement—The guiding sensation of movement—feeling—Self-control of the actor and public speaker—Euphonetics. VI.—THE CENTRAL APPARATUS OF SPEECH. Physiological congestion of throat—Voice-training prevents voice-user's throat—Loss of health through civilization—Physical exercises for health—Positions: movements of arms, head, body, and legs; balance exercises, jumping, and marching. VII.—THE SOUNDS OF THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE. VIII.—BREATHING FOR VOICE. Diagrammatic sketch of apparatus—Different kinds of breathing—Effects of types of breathing on voice hygiene and figure. IX.—THE ARTICULATORY APPARATUS. X.—THE LARYNX. XI.—HYGIENE FOR VOICE-USERS AND ORDINARY HEALTH EXERCISES. Voice-user's throat—Physiological congestion of throat—Voice-training prevents voice-user's throat—Loss of health through civilization—Physical exercises for health—Positions: movements of arms, head, body, and legs; balance exercises, jumping, and marching. XII.—EURHYTHMICS.—THE PRACTICE OF EURHYTHMICS.

"It was very much wanted, and now that it has arrived it proves to be the best book on the subject we have ever seen. . . . One would like to dwell lovingly on every stage of this monumental work did space permit, but it will only allow of a general commendation of every word from the beginning . . . to the end, which consists of music to accompany the rhythmic physical exercises."—The Morning Post, February 17, 1922.

"No teacher of singing should be without this wonderful book."—Musical Opinion.

"This is a thoughtful and thought-compelling book which touches life at most points. Eurhythm the author defines as perfect harmony, and discusses with a fine enthusiasm the practical means of bringing about in the individual this desirable condition. The book should be of great value to teachers of singing and physical education, while the intelligent student can also derive great benefit from a careful reading."—Glasgow Herald.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

PRICE SIXTEEN SHILLINGS NET.

IN TWO VOLUMES, CLOTH GILT.

FREDERICK CHOPIN

AS A MAN AND MUSICIAN

BY

FREDERICK NIECKS

WITH A PORTRAIT ETCHED BY H. R. ROBERTSON, AND FACSIMILES OF THE COMPOSER'S MS.

EXTRACTS FROM PREFACE.

My guiding principle has been to place before the reader the facts collected by me as well as the conclusions at which I arrived. This will enable him to see the subject in all its bearings, with all its pros and cons, and to draw his own conclusions, should mine not obtain his approval.

My researches had for their object the whole life of Chopin and his historical, political, artistical, social, and personal surroundings, but they were chiefly directed to the least known and most interesting period of his career—his life in France, and his visits to Germany and Great Britain.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

SEVENTH AND REVISED EDITION.

A HANDBOOK OF EXAMINATIONS IN MUSIC

CONTAINING

600 QUESTIONS WITH ANSWERS

BY

ERNEST A. DICKS,

Fellow of the Royal College of Organists.

PREFACE TO THE SEVENTH EDITION.

Through the kindness of Dr. E. H. Turpin the seventh edition of the Handbook of Examinations in Music includes the latest type of Papers set by Trinity College of Music, London, in their scheme of Local Examinations in Musical Knowledge.

The work will also be found to have been considerably enlarged by the addition of fifty specimen questions, with answers. They have been designed for the most part after the manner of those set in the Theory Paper for the L.R.A.M. Diploma, and also that required by candidates for the Higher Practical Examinations held by Trinity College of Music, London. The author earnestly hopes that these additions will considerably enhance the value of the Handbook, and render it increasingly helpful to students.

E. A. D.

Price, cloth, Five Shillings and Sixpence.

THE QUESTIONS (separately),

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

A VALUABLE BOOK FOR TEACHERS AND STUDENTS.

TECHNIQUE AND EXPRESSION IN PIANOFORTE PLAYING BY FRANKLIN TAYLOR.

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

In the course of my experience as a teacher of the pianoforte, an experience extending over many years, certain ideas have from time to time suggested themselves to me which have proved useful—to myself, as enabling me to express more clearly that which I desired my pupils to understand, and to my pupils, as tending to facilitate their comprehension of the various difficulties they have had to encounter, at the same time leading them to perceive the most practical means of overcoming them, and thus accelerating their general rate of progress.

These suggestions relate to both the mechanical and intellectual sides of the study of pianoforte-playing, or briefly, to Technique and Expression, the chief matters implied by the first of these terms being the production of various qualities of tone, the choice of suitable fingering, and the best methods of attacking certain difficulties; while the second, which may perhaps be more aptly designated the means of expression, includes rhythm, phrasing, variety and gradation of tone, the use of the pedals, et cetera.

WITH NUMEROUS MUSICAL EXAMPLES FROM THE
WORKS OF THE GREAT MASTERS.

PRICE, CLOTH GILT, SEVEN SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE NET.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

NOVELLO'S HANDBOOKS FOR MUSICIANS.

EDITED BY ERNEST NEWMAN.

CHORAL TECHNIQUE AND INTERPRETATION

BY

HENRY COWARD.

MUS. DOC., OXON.

*Published as a Net Book.Price, Cloth, gilt, Seven Shillings and Sixpence net.*THE TEACHING AND ACCOMPANIMENT OF PLAINSONG

BY

FRANCIS BURGESS.

*Published as a Net Book.Price, Cloth, gilt, Five Shillings and Sixpence net.*THE Interpretation of the Music of the 17th & 18th Centuries

AS REVEALED BY CONTEMPORARY EVIDENCE

BY

ARNOLD DOLMETSCH.

Published as a Net Book.Price, Cloth, gilt, Fifteen Shillings net.

APPENDIX

CONTAINING TWENTY-TWO ILLUSTRATIVE PIECES.

*Price Five Shillings and Sixpence.*THE SOURCES OF KEYBOARD MUSIC IN ENGLAND

BY

CHARLES VAN DEN BORREN.

Professor of the Université Nouvelle of Brussels.

TRANSLATED FROM THE FRENCH BY

JAMES E. MATTHEW.

Published as a Net Book.Price, Cloth, gilt, Ten Shillings and Sixpence net.

THE THEORY OF HARMONY

An Inquiry into the Natural Principles of Harmony, with an examination of the chief systems of Harmony from Rameau to the present day.

BY

MATTHEW SHIRLAW,

MUS.D., F.R.C.O.

(Lecturer in Music, University of Edinburgh, &c.)Published as a Net Book.Price, Cloth, gilt, Fifteen Shillings net.

THE ORGAN WORKS OF BACH

BY

HARVEY GRACE.

With an Introduction by ERNEST NEWMAN.

Published as a Net Book.Price, Cloth, Nine Shillings net.

LONDON : NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

ALBUMS FOR THE ORGAN

PRICE FIVE SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE EACH. CLOTH, SEVEN SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE EACH.

No.	No. 1.	No.	No. 5.
1. Interlude ... ..	Th. Dubois	1. Jour de Noces ... ..	J. Stuart Archer
2. Chanson de Matin ... ..	Edward Elgar	2. Festival Prelude on "Ein feste Burg" ... ..	W. Faulkes
3. Fantasia on the old melody "Urbs Beata" ... ..	W. Faulkes	3. Legend ... ..	Harvey Grace
4. There is a green hill far away ... ..	Ch. Gounod	4. Allegretto Pastorale ... ..	H. M. Higgs
5. Marche Triomphale ... ..	Alexandre Guilmant	5. Benediction Nuptiale ... ..	Alfred Hollins
6. Ave Maria ... ..	A. Henselt	6. Sursum Corda ... ..	John N. Ireland
7. Grand Chœur No. 2 ... ..	Alfred Hollins	7. Alla Marcia ... ..	John N. Ireland
8. Andantino in D flat ... ..	Edwin H. Lemare	8. Adagio Cantabile ... ..	Edwin H. Lemare
9. Chanson Triste ... ..	P. Tschaiakowsky	9. Fanfare ... ..	J. Lemmens
10. Prelude to "Lohengrin," Act I ... ..	R. Wagner	10. Intermezzo ... ..	B. Luard-Selby
11. Romanza ... ..	W. Wolstenholme	11. Easter Morn ... ..	John E. West
12. Allegretto in E flat ... ..	W. Wolstenholme	12. Finale in B flat ... ..	W. Wolstenholme
No. 2.	No. 3.	No. 6.	No. 7 (Funeral Music).
1. Chanson de Nuit ... ..	Edward Elgar	1. Nocturne ... ..	Thomas F. Dunhill
2. Alla Marcia ... ..	Myles B. Foster	2. Postludium ... ..	William Faulkes
3. Minuetto ... ..	Alexandre Guilmant	3. Andante Tranquillo ... ..	H. M. Higgs
4. Lied ... ..	H. Hofmann	4. In Springtime ... ..	Alfred Hollins
5. Barcarolle ... ..	H. Hofmann	5. Madrigal ... ..	Edwin H. Lemare
6. Spring Song ... ..	Alfred Hollins	6. Triumphal March ... ..	J. Lemmens
7. The Curfew ... ..	Edward J. Horsman	7. Allegro in B flat ... ..	F. Mendelssohn-Bartholdy
8. Pastorale in E ... ..	Edwin H. Lemare	8. Choral Prelude on "Rockingham" ... ..	C. Hubert J. Parry
9. Ave Maria d'Arcadelt ... ..	Franz Liszt	9. Præludium Pastorale ... ..	J. Stainer
10. Cantique d'Amour ... ..	Theo. Wendt	10. Romance in F minor ... ..	Tschaiakowsky
11. The Seraph's Strain ... ..	W. Wolstenholme	11. Romance in A flat ... ..	H. Sandiford Turner
12. Le Carillon ... ..	W. Wolstenholme	12. Festal Commemoration ... ..	John E. West
No. 4.	No. 8 (Christmas Music).	No. 9 (Christmas Music).	No. 10 (Christmas Music).
1. Scherzo in A flat ... ..	Edward C. Bairstow	1. Chorale Prelude, "In dulci jubilo" ... ..	J. S. Bach
2. Melody ... ..	S. Coleridge-Taylor	2. Pastoral Symphony ("Christmas Oratorio") ... ..	J. S. Bach
3. Serenade ... ..	H. Hofmann	3. Quem Vidistis, Pastores ... ..	W. T. Best
4. Bridal March ... ..	Alfred Hollins	4. Venite in Bethlehem ... ..	W. T. Best
5. Berceuse ... ..	Edwin H. Lemare	5. December—Christmas Morn ... ..	Frederic H. Cowen
6. Melodie in E ... ..	S. Rachmaninoff	6. Fantasia on Old Christmas Carols ... ..	William Faulkes
7. Aubade ... ..	A. Strelezki	7. For unto us a Child is born ("Messiah") ... ..	Handel
8. Nocturne in C sharp minor ... ..	P. Tschaiakowsky	8. Pastorale ... ..	Theodore Kullak
9. Procession to the Minster ("Lohengrin") ... ..	R. Wagner	9. Chorus of Shepherds ... ..	J. Lemmens
10. Passacaglia ... ..	John E. West	10. Christmas Pastoral ... ..	Gustav Merkel
11. Fantasia upon the Plain-song Melody "Ad cenam Agni" ... ..	Healey Willan	11. A Christmas Pastoral ... ..	B. Luard-Selby
12. Allegretto in A flat ... ..	W. Wolstenholme	12. Fantasy on Two Christmas Carols ("The First Nowell" and "Good King Wenceslas.") ... ..	John E. West
No. 5.	No. 6.	No. 7 (Christmas Music).	No. 8 (Christmas Music).
1. Arietta ... ..	S. Coleridge-Taylor	1. Chorale Prelude, "In dulci jubilo" ... ..	J. S. Bach
2. Souvenir de Printemps ... ..	Joseph Holbrooke	2. Pastoral Symphony ("Christmas Oratorio") ... ..	J. S. Bach
3. Andante in D ... ..	Alfred Hollins	3. Quem Vidistis, Pastores ... ..	W. T. Best
4. Pavane in A ... ..	Bernard Johnson	4. Venite in Bethlehem ... ..	W. T. Best
5. Harmonies du Soir ... ..	Sigfrid Karg-Elert	5. December—Christmas Morn ... ..	Frederic H. Cowen
6. An Eton Memorial March ... ..	C. H. Lloyd	6. Fantasia on Old Christmas Carols ... ..	William Faulkes
7. Allegro alla Marcia ... ..	A. L. Peace	7. For unto us a Child is born ("Messiah") ... ..	Handel
8. Visione ... ..	J. Rheinberger	8. Pastorale ... ..	Theodore Kullak
9. Chant sans Paroles ... ..	P. Tschaiakowsky	9. Chorus of Shepherds ... ..	J. Lemmens
10. Prelude to Act III. ("Die Meistersinger") ... ..	R. Wagner	10. Christmas Pastoral ... ..	Gustav Merkel
11. Allegro Pomposo ... ..	John E. West	11. A Christmas Pastoral ... ..	B. Luard-Selby
12. Canzona ... ..	W. Wolstenholme	12. Fantasy on Two Christmas Carols ("The First Nowell" and "Good King Wenceslas.") ... ..	John E. West

SHORT PRELUDES FOR THE ORGAN

PRICE ONE SHILLING AND SIXPENCE EACH BOOK.

These Short Preludes are intended for use chiefly as Introductory Voluntaries to Divine Service, more especially in those churches where the time allowed for such is, of necessity, somewhat limited.

No.	Book I.	No.	Book IV.
1. Andante Grazioso ... ..	Thomas Adams	1. "Elevation"—Andante e Legato ... ..	Thomas Adams
2. Andante ... ..	W. G. Alcock	2. Andante Religioso ... ..	Myles B. Foster
3. Largamente ... ..	George J. Bennett	3. "Simplicity"—Andante ... ..	Barry M. Gilholy
4. Andante Religioso ... ..	Myles B. Foster	4. Largamente ... ..	R. G. Hailing
5. Andantino ... ..	Alfred Hollins	5. "Dialogue"—Andante Grazioso ... ..	Charles H. Lloyd
6. Adagio Cantabile ... ..	Alfred Hollins	6. Andantino ... ..	Arthur W. Marchant
7. Larghetto ... ..	Charles J. May	7. Con Moto Moderato ... ..	William Sewell
8. Andante con Moto ... ..	John E. West	8. Andante Amabile ... ..	William Sewell
9. Andantino quasi Allegretto ... ..	John E. West	9. Andante ... ..	Clement M. Spurling
10. Andante ... ..	W. Wolstenholme	10. Andante Sostenuto ... ..	F. Cunningham Woods
Book II.	Book III.	Book V.	Book VI.
1. Andante con Moto ... ..	Thomas Adams	1. "Invocation"—Andante Grazioso ... ..	Thomas Adams
2. Con Moto ... ..	W. G. Alcock	2. Andante con Moto ... ..	Percy E. Fletcher
3. Moderato ... ..	H. A. Chambers	3. Poco Adagio ... ..	Myles B. Foster
4. Marziale, poco Lento ... ..	Myles B. Foster	4. Andante Espresso ... ..	Ignace Gibsons
5. Moderato ... ..	Alfred Hollins	5. Adagio ... ..	Alfred Hollins
6. Andantino ... ..	Alfred Hollins	6. Poco Lento ... ..	Charles H. Lloyd
7. Adagio ... ..	Charles J. May	7. Andante Dolente ... ..	Arthur W. Marchant
8. "Hymnus"—Andante e Sostenuto ... ..	John E. West	8. Andantino con Tenerezza ... ..	William Sewell
9. Andante Serioso ... ..	John E. West	9. Andante con Moto ... ..	Clement M. Spurling
10. Adagio ... ..	W. Wolstenholme	10. Adagio Molto ... ..	F. Cunningham Woods
Book III.	Book IV.	Book V.	Book VI.
1. Moderato e Legato ... ..	Thomas Adams	1. Dolente ... ..	Edmund T. Chipp
2. Moderato ... ..	W. G. Alcock	2. Andante Sostenuto ... ..	Myles B. Foster
3. Andante con Moto ... ..	George J. Bennett	3. Andantino ... ..	R. G. Hailing
4. Andante ... ..	H. A. Chambers	4. Con Moto ... ..	Alfred Hollins
5. Grazioso molto Espresso ... ..	Myles B. Foster	5. "Communion"—Cantabile ... ..	J. Lemmens
6. "Song without Words"—Con Moto ... ..	Alfred Hollins	6. Andante Religioso ... ..	Arthur W. Marchant
7. Andante ... ..	Alfred Hollins	7. Lento ... ..	Charles J. May
8. Andante Dolente ... ..	John E. West	8. Larghetto ... ..	Albert Robins
9. Andante Pastorale ... ..	John E. West	9. Adagio e Mesto ... ..	William Sewell
10. Adagio ... ..	W. Wolstenholme	10. Andante Affettuoso ... ..	William Sewell

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

NOVELLO'S PIANOFORTE ALBUMS.

In Numbers, each 1s. 6d., except Nos. 26, 27, and 28; or, Cloth Volumes, each 6s.

VOLUME I.

- No. 1.—BACH. Twenty pieces from Petits Préludes, Suites Anglaises. Partita Nos. 1 to 3, &c.
No. 2.—BACH. Twenty Pieces from Suites Anglaises, Suites Françaises. Partita Nos. 4 and 5, &c.
No. 3.—BACH. Twenty Pieces from Petits Préludes, Concertos, Suites Anglaises, &c.

VOLUME II.

- No. 4.—HANDEL. Twenty-four Pieces from Suites 1 to 7, Sonatas, "Harmonious Blacksmith," &c.
No. 5.—HANDEL. Twenty-four Pieces from Suites 8 to 12, Gavottes, &c.
No. 6.—HANDEL. Twenty-four Pieces from Suites 13 to 16, Water Music, &c.

VOLUME III.

- No. 7.—MARCHES. Fifteen Pieces, including Mendelssohn's Hero's March, Rakoczy March, Bridal March ("Lohengrin"), &c.
No. 8.—MARCHES. Fifteen Pieces, including Meyerbeer's Coronation March, Cornelius March, Pilgrims' March, &c.
No. 9.—MARCHES. Fifteen Pieces, including Mendelssohn's Wedding March, March "Tannhäuser," &c.

VOLUME IV.

- No. 10.—GAVOTTES, MINUETS, ETC. Sixteen Pieces, including Rameau's Gavotte, Zimmermann's Gavotte, Calkin's Minuet, Silas's Bourrée, &c.
No. 11.—GAVOTTES, MINUETS, ETC. Sixteen Pieces, including Gluck's Gavotte, W. Macfarren's Bourrée, Bach's Bourrée, &c.
No. 12.—GAVOTTES, MINUETS, ETC. Sixteen Pieces, including W. Macfarren's 2nd Gavotte, Benedict's Gavotte, Mozart's Minuet, &c.

VOLUME V.

- No. 13.—WOLLENHAUPT, J. Ten Pieces, including Marche Hongroise, Scherzo Brilliant, &c.
No. 14.—WOLLENHAUPT, J. Ten Pieces, including "La Gazelle," "Mazeppa Galop," &c.
No. 15.—WOLLENHAUPT, J. Ten Pieces, including "Les Clochettes," "Feu Follet," &c.
No. 16.—SCHWEIZER, OTTO. Eight Scottish Airs (arranged for four hands).

VOLUME VI.

- No. 17.—SPINDLER, FRITZ. Nine Pieces, including "Murmuring Rivulet," The Pilgrims' Chorus ("Tannhäuser"), &c.
No. 18.—SPINDLER, FRITZ. Nine Pieces, including "L'Oisillon," "Le Carillon," "The Evening Star" ("Tannhäuser"), &c.
No. 19.—SPINDLER, FRITZ. Ten Pieces, including "Jeu des Ondes," Valse Mélodieuse, Spinning Song, ("Flying Dutchman"), &c.

VOLUME VII.

- No. 20.—GOETZ, HERMANN. Five Compositions.
No. 21.—GOETZ, HERMANN. Four Compositions.
No. 22.—GOETZ, HERMANN. Six Compositions.

VOLUME VIII.

- No. 23.—RHEINBERGER, JOSEF. Seven Compositions.
No. 24.—RHEINBERGER, JOSEF. Eleven Compositions.
No. 25.—RHEINBERGER, JOSEF. Seven Compositions.
No. 26.—TOURS, BERTHOLD. Juvenile Album, Eight Characteristic Pieces (Duets), 3s.

VOLUME IX.

- Nos. 27 and 28.—MOSCHELES, I. "Domestic Life." Twelve Characteristic Duets, Two Books, each, 3s.

VOLUME X.

- No. 29.—KJERULF, HALFDAN. Nine Pieces. Op. 4, Nos. 1 to 3; Op. 12, Nos. 1 to 6.
No. 30.—KJERULF, HALFDAN. Ten Pieces. Op. 24, Nos. 1 to 4; Op. 27, Nos. 1 and 2; Op. 28, Nos. 1 to 4.
No. 31.—KJERULF, HALFDAN. Op. 28, Nos. 5 and 6; Op. 29; and Twenty Songs arranged.

VOLUME XI.

- Nos. 32, 33, and 34. The National Dance Music of Scotland. Arranged for the Pianoforte by Alexander Mackenzie; with additions by his son, A. C. Mackenzie.

VOLUME XII.

- No. 35.—MACKENZIE, A. C. Eight Pieces. Op. 13, Nos. 1 to 5; Op. 15, Nos. 1 to 3.
No. 36.—MACKENZIE, A. C. Nine Pieces. Op. 20, Nos. 1 to 6; Op. 23, Nos. 1 to 3.
No. 37.—MACKENZIE, A. C. Six Songs. Transcribed for the Pianoforte by Giuseppe Buonamici.

- No. 38.—ALTSCHUL, RUDOLF. Fifty Hungarian National Songs.

VOLUME XIV.

- No. 41.—LIADOFF, ANATOLE. Twenty-one Pieces. Op. 2, Nos. 1 to 14; Op. 3, Nos. 1, 3, 4, and 6; Op. 6; Op. 15, Nos. 1 and 2.
No. 42.—LIADOFF, ANATOLE. Seven Pieces. Op. 4, Nos. 1 to 4; Op. 7, Nos. 1 and 2; Op. 11.
No. 43.—LIADOFF, ANATOLE. Ten Pieces. Op. 8; Op. 9, Nos. 1 and 2; Op. 10, Nos. 1, 2, and 3; Op. 13, Nos. 1 to 4.

VOLUME XV.

- No. 44.—CUI, CÉSAR. Thirteen Pieces. Op. 20, Nos. 1 to 12; Op. 21, No. 3.
No. 45.—CUI, CÉSAR. Eleven Pieces. Op. 21, No. 4; Op. 22, Nos. 1, 2, and 3; Op. 31, No. 2; Op. 39, Nos. 1 to 6.
No. 46.—CUI, CÉSAR. Seven Pieces. Op. 22, No. 4; Op. 29, No. 1; Op. 30, No. 1; Op. 35, Nos. 1 and 2; Op. 40, Nos. 2 and 4.

VOLUME XVI.

- No. 47.—SCHUBERT, FRANZ. Four Impromptus. Op. 90.
No. 48.—SCHUBERT, FRANZ. Four Impromptus. Op. 142.
No. 49.—SCHUBERT, FRANZ. Moments Musicaux. (Op. 94), and Adagio and Rondo (Op. 145).

VOLUME XVII.

- No. 50.—SCHUBERT, FRANZ. Three Sets of Variations, Andante, and Klavierstück.
No. 51.—SCHUBERT, FRANZ. Adagio, Allegretto, and March in E major, &c.
No. 52.—SCHUBERT, FRANZ. Five Klavierstücke and Two Scherzi.

VOLUME XVIII.

- No. 53.—HOFMANN, H. "The Trumpeter of Säckingen" (Op. 52) and Two Valses Caprices (Op. 2).
No. 54.—HOFMANN, H. "Italian Love Tale" (Op. 19) and Five other Pieces.
No. 55.—HOFMANN, H. Fourteen Pieces.

PROGRESSIVE STUDIES

FOR THE PIANOFORTE

EDITED, ARRANGED IN GROUPS, AND THE FINGERING REVISED AND SUPPLEMENTED

BY

FRANKLIN TAYLOR.

THIS Collection of Studies is intended to illustrate the various elements of a complete course of pianoforte technique, and to provide students with the means of attacking and overcoming the different special difficulties which have to be encountered. With this view, the Studies have been arranged in groups, those in each group being placed in progressive order, and having reference to some one particular difficulty. The greater part of the Studies themselves have been selected from the standard works of the most eminent Study-writers, and with these are included numerous others, which, though of equally great practical utility, have hitherto been less generally accessible.

1. FIVE-FINGER STUDIES ... .. Part I	31. DOUBLE NOTES ... .. Part I
2.* " " " " " " " " 2	32. " " " " " " " " 2
3. SCALES ... .. Part I	33. " " " " " " " " 3
4. " " " " " " " " 2	34. " " " " " " " " 4
5. BROKEN CHORDS ... .. Part I	35. OCTAVES ... .. Part I
6. " " " " " " " " 2	36.* " " " " " " " " 2
7. " " " " " " " " 3	37. CHORDS ... .. Part I
8. " " " " " " " " 4	38. " " " " " " " " 2
9. " " " " " " " " 5	39.* STACCATO ... ..
10. LEFT HAND ... .. Part I	40. REPETITION ... .. Part I
11. " " " " " " " " 2	41.* REPETITION AND TREMOLO ... .. 2
12. " " " " " " " " 3	42. " " " " " " " " 3
13. " " " " " " " " 4	43.* PART-PLAYING ... .. Part I
14.* ARPEGGIO ... .. Part I	44. " " " " " " " " 2
15. " " " " " " " " 2	45.* ORNAMENTS ... .. Part I
16. " " " " " " " " 3	46. " " " " " " " " 2
17. VELOCITY ... .. Part I	47. ACCOMPANIED MELODY ... .. Part I
18. " " " " " " " " 2	48. " " " " " " " " 2
19. " " " " " " " " 3	49. EXTENSIONS AND SKIPS ... .. Part I
20. " " " " " " " " 4	50.* " " " " " " " " 2
21. " " " " " " " " 5	51. RHYTHM ... .. Part I
22. " " " " " " " " 6	52.* " " " " " " " " 2
23. " " " " " " " " 7	53. EXERCISES FOR THE WEAKER FINGERS. By J. A. O'NEILL.
24. FIGURES IN SEQUENCE ... .. Part I	54. WRIST STUDIES (Handgelenksübungen). By ARNOLD KRUG.
25.* " " " " " " " " 2	55. EXERCISES FOR FACILITATING INDE- PENDENCE OF THE FINGERS (Übungen für die Selbständigkeit der Finger). By ARNOLD KRUG.
26. BROKEN THIRDS, SIXTHS, AND OCTAVES ... .. Part I	56. PRELIMINARY STUDIES IN PLAYING POLYPHONIC MUSIC (Vorübungen für das polyphone Spiel). By ARNOLD KRUG.
27. BROKEN THIRDS, SIXTHS, AND OCTAVES ... .. 2
28. SHAKES ... .. Part I
29. " " " " " " " " 2
30. " " " " " " " " 3

* These Books contain Studies composed by Mr. Franklin Taylor specially for this Series.

FIFTY-SIX BOOKS, PRICE ONE SHILLING AND SIXPENCE EACH.

FROM THE ABOVE:

SELECTED PIANOFORTE STUDIES

PROGRESSIVELY ARRANGED BY

FRANKLIN TAYLOR.

THE present collection of Studies is designed to provide teachers with a short course of Pianoforte Technique adapted to the needs of the average pupil, the intention being to spare the teacher the labour of choosing a sufficiently varied selection from the large mass of material existing, and at the same time to ensure that the different departments of technique shall be undertaken in the order which experience has proved to be the most beneficial.

The Studies are grouped in two Sets, and are so arranged that the different Books in which they are contained may be taken in consecutive order, but pupils who are already further advanced than the elementary stage represented by Set I. may commence at once with Set II., which will be found to be complete in itself, and to illustrate all the essential elements of technique.

Where additional studies are desired, or studies on certain subjects which are not touched upon in this series, the larger collection, published under the title of "Progressive Studies" (from which the present examples have been selected), is of course available.

IN TWO SETS (EIGHT BOOKS), PRICE TWO SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE EACH BOOK.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

SOLOS FROM THE SACRED CANTATAS

OF

JOHN SEBASTIAN BACH.

In eight Books—each Book, One Shilling and Sixpence.

FIRST SET.

SOPRANO.

- Air WITHIN MY HEART OF HEARTS ("A Stronghold Sure").
- Air OUR JESUS HATH FOR AYE ("God goeth up").
- Air MY HEART EVER TRUSTING ("God so loved the world").
- Air O GRANT US, MIGHTY LORD ("Jesus, now will we praise Thee").
- Air SIGHING, WEEPING ("My Spirit was in heaviness").

ALTO.

- Air THOU, WHOSE PRAISES NEVER END ("Bide with us").
- Recit. { THE FATHER HATH APPOINTED HIM ("God goeth up").
- Air { MY SPIRIT HIM DESCRIBES ("God goeth up").
- Air INTO THY HANDS ("God's time is best").
- Air REJOICE, YE SOULS, ELECT AND HOLY ("O Light Everlasting").

TENOR.

- Air LORD, TO US THYSELF BE SHOWING ("Bide with us").
- Recit. { WHY HAST THOU THEN, O GOD ("My Spirit was in heaviness").
- Air { FAST MY BITTER TEARS ARE FLOWING ("My Spirit was in heaviness").
- Air REJOICE, O MY SPIRIT ("My Spirit was in heaviness").
- Recit. { THE MIGHTY GUARDIAN ("Thou Guide of Israel").
- Air { HIS FACE MY SHEPHERD LONG IS HIDING ("Thou Guide of Israel").
- Air AND WHY ART THOU, MY SOUL, SO FEARFUL ("When will God recall").

BASS.

- Recit. { HE COMES, THE LORD OF LORDS ("God goeth up").
- Air { 'TIS HE, WHO ALL ALONE ("God goeth up").
- Recit. { IT IS NOT MINE ("God so loved the world").
- Air { ON MY BEHALF " " "
- Recit. { YEA, THIS THY WORD ("Thou Guide of Israel")
- Air { WHOM JESUS DEIGNS " " "
- Air YET SILENCE ("When will God recall").

SECOND SET.

SOPRANO.

- Air OPEN WIDE, MY HEART ("Come, Redeemer").
- Air FATHER, WHAT I PROFFER ("Give the hungry man thy bread").
- Air COME, VISIT, YE GLOWING ("How brightly shines").
- Air I HAVE WAITED FOR THE LORD ("If thou but sufferest").

ALTO.

- Air GOD'S ENSAMPLE THUS TO FOLLOW ("Give the hungry man thy bread").
- Air JESUS SLEEPS ("Jesus sleeps, what hope remaineth").
- Recit. { INCLINE THINE EAR ("Lord, rebuke me not").
- Air { THE LORD HATH HEARD ("Lord, rebuke me not").
- Air ALL EARTHLY POWERS FROM GOD INHERIT ("Praise thou the Lord").

TENOR.

- Recit. { THE SAVIOUR NOW APPEARETH ("Come, Redeemer").
- Aria { COME, JESU, COME ("Come, Redeemer").
- Air WHAT VOICE IS WITH THE TEMPEST ("From depths of woe").
- Air TUNEFUL HARPS AND VOICES ("How brightly shines").
- Air THOU ART MY GOD ("Lord, rebuke me not").

BASS.

- Air THE PASCHAL VICTIM HERE WE SEE ("Christ lay in death's dark prison").
- Air DO THINE ALMS ("Give the hungry man thy bread").
- Air WITH JESUS WILL I GO ("Wailing, crying").
- Recit. { AH, WHEN ON THAT GREAT DAY ("Watch ye, pray ye").
- Air { BLESSED RESURRECTION DAY ("Watch ye, pray ye").

ENGLISH LYRICS

SET TO MUSIC BY

C. HUBERT H. PARRY.

EACH SET, PRICE FOUR SHILLINGS.

FIRST SET.

- |                                    |                          |                                   |                        |
|------------------------------------|--------------------------|-----------------------------------|------------------------|
| 1. *My true love hath my heart ... | Sir Philip Sidney | 3. Where shall the lover rest ... | ... Scott       |
| 2. Good-night ...                  | ... Shelley       | 4. Willow, Willow, Willow ...     | ... Shakespeare |

SECOND SET.

- |                                      |                        |                                     |                        |
|--------------------------------------|------------------------|-------------------------------------|------------------------|
| 1. O Mistress Mine ...               | ... Shakespeare | 3. No longer mourn for me ...       | ... Shakespeare |
| 2. Take, O take those lips away ...  | ... Shakespeare | 4. Blow, blow, thou winter wind ... | ... Shakespeare |
| 5. When icicles hang by the wall ... | ... Shakespeare |                                     |                        |

THIRD SET.

- |  |                     |                               |                           |
|--|---------------------|-------------------------------|---------------------------|
| 1. *To Lucasta, on going to the wars ... | ... Lovelace | 4. *Why so pale and wan ...   | ... Suckling       |
| 2. If thou would'st ease thine heart ... | ... Beddoes  | 5. Through the ivory gate ... | ... Julian Sturgis |
| 3. *To Althea, from prison ...           | ... Lovelace | 6. Of all the torments ...    | ... William Walsh  |

FOURTH SET.

- |  |                                   |  |                  |
|--|-----------------------------------|--|------------------|
| 1. *Thine eyes still shined for me ... | ... Emerson                | 4. Weep you no more ...                    | ... Anon. |
| 2. *When lovers meet again ...         | ... Langdon Elwyn Mitchell | 5. There be none of beauty's daughters ... | ... Byron |
| 3. *When we two parted ...             | ... Byron                  | 6. Bright star ...                         | ... Keats |

FIFTH SET.

- |                               |                           |                                   |                                    |
|-------------------------------|---------------------------|-----------------------------------|------------------------------------|
| 1. *A stray nymph of Dian ... | ... Julian Sturgis | 4. Lay a garland on my hearse ... | ... Beaumont &amp; Fletcher |
| 2. *Proud Maisie ...          | ... Scott          | 5. Love and laughter... ..        | ... Arthur Butler           |
| 3. *Crabbed age and youth ... | ... Shakespeare    | 6. A girl to her glass ...        | ... Julian Sturgis          |
| 7. A Lullaby ...              | ... E. O. Jones    |                                   |                                    |

SIXTH SET.

- |                                       |                        |                                      |                             |
|---------------------------------------|------------------------|--------------------------------------|-----------------------------|
| 1. *When comes my Gwen ...            | ... E. O. Jones | 4. *A lover's garland ...            | ... Alfred P. Graves |
| 2. *And yet I love her till I die ... | ... Anon.       | 5. At the hour the long day ends ... | ... Alfred P. Graves |
| 3. *Love is a bable ...               | ... Anon.       | 6. Under the greenwood tree ...      | ... Shakespeare      |

SEVENTH SET.

- |  |                           |  |                           |
|--|---------------------------|--|---------------------------|
| 1. On a time the amorous Silvy ...       | ... Anon.          | 4. O never say that I was false of heart ... | ... Shakespeare    |
| 2. Follow a shadow ...                   | ... Ben Jonson     | 5. Julia ... ..                              | ... Herrick        |
| 3. Ye little birds that sit and sing ... | ... Thomas Heywood | 6. *Sleep ... ..                             | ... Julian Sturgis |

EIGHTH SET.

- |                            |                                   |                            |                            |
|----------------------------|-----------------------------------|----------------------------|----------------------------|
| 1. Whence ... ..           | ... Julian Sturgis         | 4. Dirge in woods ... ..   | ... George Meredith |
| 2. Nightfall in winter ... | ... Langdon Elwyn Mitchell | 5. Looking backward ... .. | ... Julian Sturgis  |
| 3. Marian ... ..           | ... George Meredith        | 6. Grapes ... ..           | ... Julian Sturgis  |

NINTH SET.

- |                                    |                              |                           |                              |
|------------------------------------|------------------------------|---------------------------|------------------------------|
| 1. Three aspects ... ..            | ... Mary E. Coleridge | 4. Whether I live ... ..  | ... Mary E. Coleridge |
| 2. A fairy town (St. Andrew's) ... | ... Mary E. Coleridge | 5. Armida's garden ... .. | ... Mary E. Coleridge |
| 3. The witches' wood ... ..        | ... Mary E. Coleridge | 6. *The maiden ... ..     | ... Mary E. Coleridge |
| 7. There ... ..                    | ... Mary E. Coleridge |                           |                              |

TENTH SET.

- |  |                               |                                   |                                   |
|--|-------------------------------|-----------------------------------|-----------------------------------|
| 1. My heart is like a singing bird ... | ... Christina Rossetti | 4. The child and the twilight ... | ... Langdon Elwyn Mitchell |
| 2. Gone were but the winter cold ...   | ... Allan Cunningham   | 5. From a city window ...         | ... Langdon Elwyn Mitchell |
| 3. A moment of farewell ... ..         | ... Julian Sturgis     | 6. One silent night of late ...   | ... Herrick                |

ELEVENTH SET.

- |                                    |                                   |   |                                   |
|------------------------------------|-----------------------------------|---|-----------------------------------|
| 1. One golden thread... ..         | ... Julia Chatterton       | 5. The faithful lover ... ..              | ... Alfred Perceval Graves |
| 2. The spirit of the Spring ...    | ... Alfred Perceval Graves | 6. If I might ride on puissant wing... .. | ... Julian Sturgis         |
| 3. What part of dread eternity ... | ... Author unknown         | 7. Why art thou slow ... ..               | ... Massinger              |
| 4. The blackbird ... ..            | ... Alfred Perceval Graves | 8. She is my love beyond all thought ...  | ... Alfred P. Graves       |

TWELFTH SET.

- |                                  |                             |                                   |                      |
|----------------------------------|-----------------------------|-----------------------------------|----------------------|
| 1. When the dew is falling ...   | ... Julia Chatterton | 4. When the sun's great orb... .. | ... H. Warner |
| 2. To Blossoms ... ..            | ... Herrick          | 5. Dream pedlary ... ..           | ... Beddoes   |
| 3. Rosaline ... ..               | ... Lodge            | 6. O World, O Life, O Time ...    | ... Shelley   |
| 7. The sound of hidden music ... | ... Julia Chatterton |                                   |                      |

* Published separately, price 1s. 6d.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.
NEW YORK: THE H. W. GRAY CO., SOLE AGENTS FOR THE U.S.A.

JOHN SEBASTIAN BACH

48 PRELUDES AND FUGUES

(THE WELL-TEMPERED CLAVICHORD)

A NEW EDITION, EDITED BY HAROLD BROOKE.

IN TWO PARTS.

Price Four Shillings each.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

HAWKES &amp; SON

have pleasure in announcing .. that they are now the ..SOLE AND EXCLUSIVE AGENTS IN THE BRITISH EMPIRE

FOR THE

"VIENNA PHILHARMONIC EDITION"

OF

MINIATURE POCKET SCORES

INCLUDING

CLASSICAL AND MODERN WORKS.

These Scores are beautifully engraved and printed, and are invaluable to both the Musician and the Student.A complete Catalogue is in preparation, a copy of which will be despatched as soon as ready, upon receipt of a post-card.HAWKES & SON, DENMAN STREET, PICCADILLY CIRCUS,
LONDON, W.1.

THE SINGER'S ART.

A. J. LARKCOM, F.R.A.M.

MANUAL FOR SINGERS AND TEACHERS.

Recommended for Study for the L.R.A.M. Teacher's Diploma.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

The Pied Piper of Hamelin

BY

ROBERT BROWNING.

SET TO MUSIC FOR CHILDREN'S VOICES

BY

GEORGE RATHBONE

(Composer of "VOGELWIED," "SINGING LEAVES," "ORPHEUS," and other popular works for Children's Voices.)

Price, Staff Notation, Two Shillings. Tonic Sol-fa, One Shilling.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

NEW PUBLICATIONS

By T. TERTIUS NOBLE.

- 816. NIGHT. S.A.T.B.
- 817. TO MY LOVE. T.T.B.B.
- 818. WHEN I AM DEAD, MY DEAREST. S.A.T.B.
- 819. SAVE, LORD, OR WE PERISH. S.A.T.B.
- 820. SAVE, LORD, OR WE PERISH. T.T.B.B.
- 821. BUT NOW, THUS SAITH THE LORD. S.A.T.B.

Price Fourpence each.

- 822. MAGNIFICAT AND NUNC DIMITTIS IN B FLAT.

Price Sixpence.

BANKS &amp; SON, MUSIC PUBLISHERS, YORK.

IMPORTANT NEW WORK FOR CHORAL SOCIETIES.

GREAT SUCCESS OF THE CONCERT VERSION

OF THE ROMANTIC LIGHT OPERA

“THE REBEL MAID”

MUSIC BY

MONTAGUE F. PHILLIPS.

This Edition is uniform with “MERRIE ENGLAND,” “TOM JONES,” &c., and may be had as follows:

Vocal Score (8vo) Paper Covers	...	5/- net.
” ” ” Cloth Boards	...	7/- ”
Choruses only	... ..	2/- ”

PRINTED ORCHESTRAL PARTS AVAILABLE FOR HIRE.

Applications for terms of performance should be addressed to

CHAPPELL & Co., Ltd., 50, New Bond Street, LONDON, W.1.

J. & W. CHESTER, LTD., MUSIC PUBLISHERS.

A new and unique Collection:

LES PLUS BEAUX AIRS
DE
L'OPÉRA FRANÇOIS

(Collection of Vocal Numbers from Old French Operas)

Collected, Transcribed, and Edited by

GABRIEL GROVLEZ.

Original French Words, with an English Version by

PERCY PINKERTON.

in 8 volumes.

Soprano : 2 Volumes.	...	Mezzo-Soprano or Contralto : 2 Volumes.
Tenor : 2 Volumes.	...	Baritone or Bass : - - 2 Volumes.

PRICE OF EACH VOLUME, THREE SHILLINGS NET.

It is scarcely necessary to point out to singers the importance of this magnificent collection of vocal numbers from old French Operas, most of which have been long forgotten, and all of which more than deserve to be resuscitated. Not only are they of immense historical interest, but among them will be found many beautiful and characteristic examples of a school which is unlike any other in musical history. That M. Gabriel Grovlez, who has already contributed a collection of old French keyboard music to the same edition, should have acquitted himself of his task in a masterly manner, goes without saying.

LONDON: 11, GREAT MARLBOROUGH STREET, W.1.

Telegrams: “GUARNERIUS, WESDO, LONDON.”

Telephone: 7841 GERRARD.

THE MUSICAL TIMES

'AND SINGING-CLASS CIRCULAR

FOUNDED IN 1844

PUBLISHED ON THE FIRST OF EVERY MONTH

No. 975.—Vol. 65
Registered at the General Post
Office for Canadian Postage

MAY 1 1924

Price 6d.; Postage 2d.
Annual Subscription, post-free, 7s. 6d.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

YORK GATE, MARYLEBONE ROAD, LONDON, N.W.1.

Instituted 1822. Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1830.

Patron: HIS MAJESTY THE KING.

President: H.R.H. THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT, K.G.

Principal: Sir A. C. MACKENZIE, K.C.V.O., Mus. Doc., F.R.C.M.

Acting Principal: JOHN B. MC EWEN, M.A., F.R.A.M.

MIDSUMMER TERM will begin on Monday, May 5.

A SPECIAL COURSE FOR THE TRAINING OF CONDUCTORS has been instituted.

A SPECIAL TEACHERS' TRAINING COURSE has been arranged to meet the requirements of the Teachers' Registration Council.

LECTURES will be given by Dr. F. G. SHINN, on the Chamber Music of Brahms and Dvorák, and some recent developments in National Music, on Wednesdays, May 14, 21, 28, and June 4, at 3.15.

FORTNIGHTLY CONCERTS, Saturdays, May 17 and 31, at 8.

CHAMBER CONCERT, Monday, May 26, at 3.

J. A. CREIGHTON, Secretary.

THE ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

PRINCE CONSORT ROAD, SOUTH KENSINGTON, S.W.7.

(Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1883.)

Patron: HIS MAJESTY THE KING.

President: H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, K.G.

Director: Sir HUGH P. ALLEN, M.A., Mus. Doc.

Honorary Secretary: GEORGE A. MACMILLAN, Esq., D.Litt.

Registrar: CLAUDE AVELING, Esq., M.A.

The College offers a Complete Course of Musical Education to pupils of both sexes, both professional and amateur. Upwards of seventy Scholarships and Exhibitions are founded which provide free musical education.

SPECIAL CLASSES for CONDUCTING and TRAINING of TEACHERS have been instituted.

The OPERATIC and BALLET CLASSES have the use of the fully equipped College OPERA THEATRE with SUNKEN ORCHESTRA.

Examinations for the Associateship of the College (A.R.C.M.) in all subjects held three times a year in December, April, and September.

Guildhall School of Music.

(CORPORATION OF LONDON.)

VICTORIA EMBANKMENT, E.C.4.

PRINCIPAL ... Sir LONDON RONALD, F.R.A.M., F.G.S.M.

PRIVATE LESSONS in all Musical Subjects, and STAGE TRAINING in Elocution, Gesture, Dancing, Opera.

Complete Musical Education at inclusive fees, £9 9s. and £12 12s. Opera Class, Saturdays. Special Training Course for Teachers (approved by Teachers' Registration Council).

Prospectus and Syllabus of Local Centres and Schools Examinations (open to general public) free.

Telephone: Cent. 4459. H. SAXE WYNDHAM, Secretary.

MR. HERBERT HODGE will give an Organ Recital (11.15th), at St. Nicholas Cole Abbey, on May 6, and every Tuesday at 1 p.m.

The Royal College of Organists.

The SOLO-PLAYING TESTS for the next F.R.C.O. EXAMINATION are:

Prelude and Fugue in E minor ("Wedge"), J. S. Bach. (Novello, Book 8, p. 98; Augener, p. 227; Peters, Vol. 2, No. 9.)

Canon in B minor, Schumann, Op. 56. (Any edition.)

Andante in F, from the 6th Quartet, Mozart. Best's Arrangements, No. 2, p. 12 (Novello). This arrangement only.

The selected pieces and the book set for the Essay for the July, 1924, A.R.C.O. Examination, differ from those set for January, 1924.

The CHOIR-TRAINING EXAMINATION will begin on May 14th.

The following LECTURES will be delivered at the College: Monday, May 12, at 2 p.m., Mr. S. H. NICHOLSON, M.A., Mus. B. Subject: "Congregational Singing." At 5.30 p.m., Mr. E. T. COOK, Mus. B. Subject: "Plainsong." Tuesday, May 13th, at 3 p.m., Dr. E. BULLOCK. Subject: "Practical Choir-Training." At 5.30 p.m., Dr. W. A. AIKIN. Subject: "The Voice." Members will be admitted on production of their membership cards.

All Candidates for the next Examinations must send in their Names for FELLOWSHIP by JUNE 5th, for ASSOCIATESHIP by JUNE 12th. In the case of NEW MEMBERS proposal forms duly filled up must be sent in before JUNE 2nd. No names will be entered after the above dates.

Regulations, list of College Publications, Lectures, &c., may be had on application.

The College is open daily from 10 to 4; Saturdays, 10 to 1.

Examples indicating the character and approximate difficulty of the NEW TESTS, to be set for the first time at the July, 1924, Examinations, may now be obtained at the College.

Associateship or Fellowship, 6d. each (post free).

H. A. HARDING, Hon. Secretary.

Kensington Gore, S.W.7.

ROYAL MANCHESTER COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

Founded 1893. Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1923.

Patron: HER MAJESTY QUEEN ALEXANDRA.

President: H.R.H. THE DUKE OF YORK, K.G.

Principal: Dr. ADOLPH BRODSKY.

Registrar: STANLEY WITHERS, M.A.

Students are required to enter upon a complete course of Musical instruction, and are not admitted for a shorter period than one year.

Fee for the year, £36. Special fee for Organ Course, £30, and for Wind Instrument Course, £18.

Systematic Course for the Training of Teachers included in the curriculum.

The Prospectus, with Scholarship information, Diploma Regulations, and Entry Forms, on application.

MANCHESTER SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

Principal: ALBERT J. CROSS, A.R.A.M.

FOUNDED 1892.

The oldest Institution in Manchester devoted solely to the interests of Music.

All branches of Music taught. Day and Evening Private Lessons. Opera Class. Full Orchestral Class. Intermediate and Elementary String Orchestras, Classes for Ensemble Playing, Elocution, Choral Singing, Harmony, &c.

Single Subjects taught. Prospectus from 16, Albert Square.

THREE CHOIRS FESTIVAL, HEREFORD.

CONDUCTOR - - DR. PERCY C. HULL.

SEPTEMBER 7th to 12th inclusive.

Prospectus on application to—

SECRETARY, MUSICAL FESTIVAL, HEREFORD.

GLASGOW
ATHENÆUM SCHOOL OF MUSIC.
SESSION 1923-24.

The Session consists of Three Terms: September 10 to December 1, December 3 to March 8, and March 10 to June 6.

Complete Musical Curriculum. Day and Evening Classes.
Single Subjects taught.

Prospectus and further information may be obtained from:

STUART S. FORSYTH, Secretary,
ATHENÆUM BUILDINGS, GLASGOW.

96 and 95, WIMPOLE STREET, W.I.
TOBIAS MATTHAY
PIANOFORTE SCHOOL

Instruction under his teachers, and under his own supervision.

Open to Professionals and Amateurs, and also to Children.

The Staff consists of thirty-nine senior Professors of thorough experience and platform reputation, all trained by the founder.

Special Short Courses for Teachers during term and vacation.

LECTURE-LESSON Class by Mr. MATTHAY on the practical teaching of Technique and Interpretation, diagnosis and correction of faults, musical analysis and synthesis, &c., alternate Wednesday evenings.

Mr. FREDERICK MOORE takes alternate Wednesdays.

COMPLETE TRAINING COURSE FOR TEACHERS.
(Approved by the Teachers' Registration Council.)

This ONE-YEAR Course may be joined at the beginning of ANY TERM.

For further particulars please apply, Mrs. MARION COLE, Secretary.

BIRMINGHAM & MIDLAND INSTITUTE
SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

Visitor ... Sir EDWARD ELGAR, O.M., Mus.Doc., LL.D.

Director ... GRANVILLE BANTOCK, M.A., D.Mus. (Ed.).

SESSION 1923-1924.

The Session consists of AUTUMN TERM (September 20 to December 18); WINTER TERM (January 19 to April 9); SUMMER TERM (April 11 to July 9).

Instruction in all branches of Music, Students' Choir and Orchestra, Chamber Music, Students' Rehearsals, and Concerts.

Prospectus and further information may be obtained from—

H. M. FRANCIS, Secretary.
Paradise Street, Birmingham.

THE LONDON CHOIR SCHOOL

(CHAMPION HILL SCHOOL).

GROVE LANE, DENMARK HILL, S.E.5.
(Twelve minutes from Victoria, L.B.S.C. Railway;
L.C.C. Trams 56, 58, 62, and 84 pass the door.)

Director: CARLTON BORROW, A.R.C.O.

Solo and Chorus Boys for Services, Oratorios, Madrigal Societies, Concerts, &c. Solo and Chorus Altos (male), Tenors, and Basses for Temporary Engagements.

Telephone: Brixton 2124. Apply, Secretary.

THE LONDON SCHOOL OF SINGING.

20A, HENRIETTA STREET, CAVENDISH SQUARE, W.1.

The School provides complete instruction and training in all branches of Vocal Art, for both Professional and Amateur; and specialises in the production and artistic development of the voice.

A special short course for beginners has now been arranged.

Auditions and advice free.

Lessons in Pianoforte and Theory.

For particulars and appointment please apply to Secretary.

Telephone: Mayfair 3819.

THE LONDON COLLEGE FOR CHORISTERS.

6 and 7, BLOMFIELD CRESCENT, PADDINGTON, W.2.

Founder: Mr. JAMES BATES.

Solo Boys and Chorus Boys supplied at short notice for Church Services, &c. Telephone: Paddington 5990. Sec., ARTHUR G. BATES.

AN ORGAN RECITAL will be given by Mr. Herbert Hodge at St. Stephen's Walbrook, on May 8th, at 1.10 p.m.

Perfect Touch and Technique without Laborious Practice . .

The fundamental principles of my System have stood the test of time. Proof of this lies in the enormous number of pupils who have passed through my hands to piano-mastery—who have found in the System the Royal Road to the whole of the practical side of Pianoforte Playing, without any keyboard drudgery.

The results are frequently described by pupils as "miraculous," "magical," &c.

Pianists of every grade of proficiency can benefit from this simple, inexpensive, and unique Postal Course. Many eminent musicians, including the late Sir Frederick Bridge, have used and highly recommended my System—the ORIGINAL POSTAL SYSTEM.

17,000 Successful Pupils.

"From Brain to Keyboard"

Macdonald Smith's System of Pianoforte Playing.

Read my Illustrated Book, "Light on Pianoforte Playing."

This explains fully how I teach the System by a Series of Postal Lessons, and gives particulars of the very reasonable fee for tuition. No apparatus or special music necessary—just an easily acquired method with much quicker and BETTER results, based on an important discovery in physiology.

Apply for book to-day, but please DO NOT OMIT to state whether average or advanced player, or, if a beginner, whether you can or cannot play at sight a simple hymn-tune. The book will be sent free of charge and post free.

M. MACDONALD SMITH, 19, BLOOMSBURY SQUARE,
LONDON, W.C.1.

JOHN B. WOOD, MUS. BAC.

C. G. WOOD, MUS. BAC., L.R.A.M.

THE IDEAL CORRESPONDENCE
SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

EXPERT TUTORS.

THEORY OF MUSIC, HARMONY,
COMPOSITION, ART OF TEACHING,
INTERPRETATION,
FORM AND MEMORY TRAINING
FOR MUSICIANS.

Correspondents from all parts of the world and ex-students of the Principal Musical Institutions have been enrolled as pupils.

Write,

6, BOLTON ROAD, FARNWORTH, BOLTON.

PAPER WORK BY MUS. B., F.R.C.O.

OVER 1100 SPECIMEN WORKINGS.

"Your lessons and ideas splendid."

"Your excellent models make my attempts look cold."

RECENT SUCCESSES.

2s. 6d. per lesson and postage.

"E. B.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

---

SUCCESS IS ITS OWN GUARANTEE.

---

DR. NORMAN SPRANKLING,

Mus. Doc. (Lond.),

48, LINDEN ROAD, REDLAND, BRISTOL.

TELEPHONE: BRISTOL 3033.

CORRESPONDENCE COACHING

COMPLETE and INDIVIDUAL PREPARATION for Mus. Doc., Mus. Bac., A.R.C.M., L.R.A.M., and all Diplomas of T.C.L. and R.C.O.

Numerous Candidates have achieved success through
Dr. Sprankling's coaching.

The following are a few extracts from letters from successful pupils:

From Successful Mus. Doc.

"I know you will be delighted to hear that I have passed. I am more grateful than I can say for all your skilful and patient teaching. I thoroughly enjoyed the lessons, and they made work a real pleasure."

From Successful Mus. Bac.

"I am extremely pleased to tell you that I have now obtained my degree. This is very largely due to the invaluable help you have given me; and, as one who has given much attention to the science and practice of education, I can testify to the soundness of your methods."

From Successful F.R.C.O.

"I am glad to say I have been successful, and I tender you my sincerest thanks for the right guidance you have given me, without which I could not have done it."

From Successful A.R.C.O.

"Unquestionably I derived much benefit from your course, and I beg to take this opportunity of thanking you for your valuable assistance."

(This Student has now also passed Inter. Mus. Bac. at first attempt.)

From Successful L.R.A.M.

"You will be pleased to hear that I have been successful in every branch of the L.R.A.M. examination. Thank you very much for all your help; it covered a wide ground, and consequently in the questions I didn't come across anything I had not taken with you."

From Successful A.R.C.M.

"I wish to thank you for the help I have received from your papers. They were invaluable."

---

PERSONAL LESSONS ALSO in BRISTOL and LONDON.

MODERN CORR. COLLEGE.

Principal : ARTHUR McALISTER, B.A. (CANTAB.).

MATRIC. - - - SUCCESSES AT DURHAM - - - 104

The Principal of the M.C.C. has made a special study of this Examination, and has been instrumental in passing Students who had failed repeatedly under other Tuition. If you are an F.R.C.O., you need not be afraid of Matric. We can pass you in from four to six months.

1ST Mus. Bac. - - - FOUR Students of the M.C.C. passed 1st M.B. in September, 1923.

You will appreciate the significance of this when you are reminded that the Total number of Successes from all Sources is usually from Six to Seven. A Special Feature of the Course consists of full workings of recent String Tests.

Exercise - - - Start now, and you can get your Ex. accepted in March, 1925. Tutors of the M.C.C. will train you to write in a Modern Idiom. Carefully graded models are sent, showing the exact style required.

Mus. Bac. - - - The Guarantee Course, originated by the M.C.C., has become very popular, and the reasons are obvious. For One Fee (which can be paid by Easy Instalments) Tuition is given until the Degree is gained. No time-limit is imposed, and if the work is interrupted, it can be taken up again without further fee. Extra Lessons can be worked during Vacations.

Any University - - - DURHAM—LONDON—OXFORD— DUBLIN—MANCHESTER.

A.R.C.O. - - - SIX Students of the M.C.C. passed A.R.C.O. (paper work), January, 1924. One Student, after failing FOUR TIMES (under other Tuition) passed after a Three Months' Course with the M.C.C. In addition to the ordinary Course in Harmony and Counterpoint, special papers are sent as follows: Ten Lessons Musical Form, Ten Lessons History, Ten Lessons Voice Culture, Four Lessons Essay.

Detailed notes are given on salient points, and model workings are sent to likely questions.

RECENT SUCCESSES: { A.R.C.O. - - - 16
F.R.C.O. - - - 7

A. Mus. T.C.L. - - - This Examination is entirely Theoretical, and forms an excellent stepping-stone to Mus. Bac. At a recent Examination, a Student of the M.C.C. gained 94% for Counterpoint. If you are an A.R.C.O. you need take only the paper on "The Art of Teaching."

SEND FOR A SPECIMEN LESSON.

L.R.A.M. - - - Aural Training and Sight-Singing. S. VIII. Voice Culture and Class-Singing. S. IX.

SEND FOR A SPECIMEN LESSON.

"ST. MORITZ," 201, ILKESTON ROAD, NOTTINGHAM.

MODERN CORR. COLLEGE

Principal: ARTHUR McALISTER, B.A. (CANTAB.).

L.R.A.M.

A.R.C.M.

A.T.C.L.

Pianoforte
Teaching.

The Courses are of a practical nature, and train the Student to apply the principles of Touch, Phrasing, Fingering, and Pedalling to the set Pieces. Students are invited to submit difficulties arising from their private work.

SEND FOR OUR FREE GUIDE.

L.R.A.M.

A.R.C.M.

L.T.C.L.

Singing.

A Successful Student writes: "Your Course may be summed up in one word, 'MODERN.'"

The Course consists of Twenty Lessons, each of which contains 500 to 1,000 words, and embraces the teaching of the greatest authorities in the Country. The Course includes the following: (1.) Some Essentials. (2.) Breathing. (3.) Resonance. (4.) Vowels. (5.) Diction. (6.) Types of Song. (7.) Mood and Tone-Colour. (8.) Some Daily Problems. (9.) Diagnosing a Pupil. (10.) Style and Interpretation, &c.

Three Courses are offered: Ordinary, Self-Preparation, Guarantee.

SEND FOR A SPECIMEN LESSON.

L.R.A.M.

A.R.C.M.

L.T.C.L.

Elocution.

This is one of the most comprehensive Courses ever prepared for Students.

FEATURES OF THE COURSE.

- 1.—Each Lesson consists of from 500 to 1,000 words.
- 2.—Besides containing a large amount of matter not usually found in Text-books (in fact, never in any one book), the notes constitute a guide to, and summary of, vital points in the Text-books used.
- 3.—This is not a Cramming Course. The M.C.C. not only imparts knowledge in an effective and interesting way, it shows, step by step, the bearing of such knowledge on Practical Teaching.

SEND FOR A SPECIMEN LESSON.

A.R.C.M.

(Musical Appreciation) S. XIII.—A successful student writes: "I consider you deserve great credit for thus selecting the chief principles and grouping them in such a carefully graduated Course. I am very deeply obliged to you."

SEND FOR A SPECIMEN LESSON.

SEPARATE COURSES.

								£	s.	d.
10	LESSONS.	PIANOFORTE ACCOMPANIMENT	...	...	...	...	...	1	1	0
10	"	HISTORY	...	...	...	...	...	0	15	0
10	"	FORM	...	...	...	...	...	1	1	0
6	"	MEMORY TRAINING	...	...	...	...	...	1	10	0
6	"	WRITING AND HEARING	...	...	...	...	...	1	1	0
6	"	SIGHT-READING	...	...	...	...	...	1	1	0
4	"	ESSAY (A.R.C.O.)	...	...	...	...	...	0	10	0

NOTE.—Carefully graded Courses for every subject in the L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. Syllabuses.

"ST. MORITZ," 201, ILKESTON ROAD, NOTTINGHAM.

THE CHARLES A. GILLETT PIANOFORTE SCHOOL.

PERSONAL LESSONS DAY AND EVENING.

The most Modern Teaching of "APPLIED WEIGHT TOUCH."
Unique and distinctive from all other methods.

The Key to Successful Playing.

The REAL USE of RELAXA-TION and "WEIGHT TOUCH" fully developed in 12
CORRESPONDENCE LESSONS.

STIFFNESS and FATIGUE
RAPIDLY OVERCOME.

Special Courses for Beginners, Advanced Players, and Teachers.

Send me your difficulties.

AUDITION AND ADVICE FREE.

11, SOUTH MOLTON STREET, BOND STREET,
LONDON, W.1.

CALISTHENICS

FOR THE MUSCLES USED IN SINGING

As taught and perfected for 20 years.

Astonishing increase of POWER, QUALITY, RANGE, and EASE of SINGING assured by five minutes' practice
twice (better three times) daily.

By Correspondence, Fee £2 2s., for Three Lessons.

No more sore or relaxed throat, or strained voice.

THOS. CHURCH SAXBY, L.Mus.T.C.L.,
UNDERCLIFFE, LEWES.

L.R.A.M. AND A.R.C.M.

TEACHING SINGING AND ELOCUTION EXAMINATIONS.

Numerous Successes both in Singing and Elocution Exams. at
L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M.

Special Correspondence Course and personal tuition.
Complete preparation.

Also Special Short Instructional Courses in Voice-Production and
The Art of Teaching Singing, to meet particular requirements of the General Practitioner in Music.

MR. W. LEE WEBSTER, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M.
INGLESIDE, PARK ROAD, NOTTINGHAM.

MUSICAL COMPOSITIONS REVISED.

LYRICS SET TO MUSIC, MELODIES HARMONIZED, MUSIC TRANSPOSED
AND COPIED, BAND PARTS WRITTEN, MSS. PREPARED FOR PUBLICA-TION BY A MASTER HAND, ACCOMPANIMENTS OF DISTINCTION
WRITTEN TO SONGS.

For terms, write, A. CARRINGTON BRIGGS,
Glennholme, The Common, Hesse, E. Yorks.

MR. W. H. BREARE VOCAL ADVISER AND TEACHER OF SINGING TO STUDENTS AND THE PROFESSION.

Author of "Vocalism," "Elocution: Its First Principles," "Vocal
Faults and their Remedies." Now Published: "Vocal Technique:
How it feels to Sing."

3s. 6d. each. Postage: 1 Book, 9d.; 2 or 3, 1s.; Set of 4, 1s. 3d.

"The most complete guide to singing in English."—"Lancelot," in the Referee.

"One of the sanest of sane expositions."—"Musical Courier, N.Y."

"Is a reliable expert in all branches."—"Gentlewoman."

"A magnificent guide to both teachers and students."—"Eastern Morning News."

"Do not hesitate to commend."—"Glasgow Herald."

"His technical knowledge is minute, wide, and accurate: what he has to say is well worthy of consideration by public singers and music teachers."—"Aberdeen Free Press."

"Common-sense in all he utters."—"Leeds Mercury."

"Is an acknowledged authority. . . ."—"Western Morning News."

"I have not the slightest fear of contradiction when I say that no one knows more about the voice and vocal production than Mr. W. H.
Breare."—"Counterpoint," in the Newcastle Journal.

Address: "HERALD" BUILDINGS, HARROGATE.

MR. ALBERT GARCIA

LESSONS IN VOICE PRODUCTION AND SINGING.

Special Coaching in Opera, Oratorio, and for Recitals.

Pupils prepared for A.R.C.M. and L.R.A.M. Exams.

"A number of Mr. Albert Garcia's pupils sang excellently at the concert which they gave on Wednesday evening. It was particularly pleasant to hear voices so well placed and well poised, smooth and even in tone from the lowest to the highest notes, showing a control which too few learn to exercise."—"Daily Telegraph."

"One takes it that a concert by pupils fulfils its object if it demonstrates—as the one given at Wigmore Hall by singers studying with Mr. Albert Garcia certainly did—the excellence of that master's method."—"Era."

"Mr. Garcia—himself a fine artist and the inheritor of a great tradition and a great name—has some most promising pupils, and such singers as Miss Rosa Burn and Mr. Frederick Lippold show in what an excellent school they have been trained."—"Daily Telegraph."

For Auditions, Appointments, &c., write,

59, Queen's Road, St. John's Wood, N.W.8.

(Hampstead 4597.)

VOICE TRAINING.

A Special Course of TEN CORRESPONDENCE
LESSONS (named the "Simplex" Course), covering the whole range of Voice Production. Interesting, concise, and easy to follow. Invaluable to Teachers and Students alike.

Dame Clara Butt writes: "I advise all would-be Singers and all interested in the Teaching of Singing to take the 'Simplex' Course. They will find it most helpful."

Mr. Ben Davies writes: "The ideas which comprise the 'Simplex' System of Voice Training are most excellent, and I certainly think that all who apply themselves diligently to these Lessons will greatly benefit thereby."

For Full Particulars address: MR. E. H. BIBBY, Mus. Bac., Waterloo Buildings, Piccadilly, Manchester.

THE TECHNIQUER FOR STRETCH, STRENGTH, AND SUPPLENESS.

We have . . . investigated . . . 'THE TECHNIQUER' . . . and it seems to us it entirely meets the needs of an instrumentalist in a scientific and reliable manner. The inventor . . . backs his claims by . . . convincing testimonials from such well-known men as Lamond, Pouishnoff, Dyke, Walenn, and many others. To those who have small stretch or but little time for practice, we advise they should look into the matter for themselves. Mr. Pitcher . . .
an L.R.A.M. as a public performer, approaches the matter from a highly scientific and experienced point of view."—Extract from
The Strad, March, 1924.

"Hand Development," with numerous photos, 1s. 6d.

Send for full particulars, &c.—

Miss F. J. FITCH, A.R.C.M., A.R.C.O. (Sec.),

21, Boundary Road, N.W.8.

'Phone: Maida Vale 1715.

ACQUIRE A FAULTLESS MEMORY FOR MUSIC

WITH ONLY 15 MINUTES' DAILY PRACTICE

EVEN if you find difficulty at present in memorising the simplest piece, by means of the Mackinnon Musical Memory Course, consisting of Six Correspondence Lessons easily completed in a month or two, you can acquire the ability to learn music easily and play from memory without fear of breakdown.

Dismiss from your mind the idea that ceaseless practice is the only method of memorising. The Mackinnon Musical Memory Course requires only fifteen minutes' practice daily. Artistic interest is never staled. Learning becomes a pleasure.

There is no element of risk. Under the guarantee results are guaranteed or fees are returned without question.

Hundreds of pianists and organists have learned to memorise easily and play from memory with confidence through the Course.

Think what assistance a first-class musical memory would mean to you. The advantage of playing without music—the scope for interpretation and artistic feeling.

Fill up the Coupon below for free booklet, to-day.

MACKINNON'S MUSICAL MEMORY COURSE.

EMPIRE HOUSE, 175, PICCADILLY, W.1.

IN SIX POSTAL LESSONS - FEE, £3:3:0

GUARANTEE

If within four weeks from the receipt of the first lesson, and before the receipt of the second, any Student feels that he or she has not made definite progress as a result of taking the Course, such Student's fees will be refunded in full.

Read these letters received from organists and pianists who have recently completed the Course :

SEND THIS COUPON
TO-DAY.

From a Cathedral Organist.

"Many students of the organ find it difficult to accompany the Psalms satisfactorily. To those who find it so, I recommend this memory Course."

From a Teacher.

"I am really amazed how your method succeeds. If you had set out to tell me I could memorise, I could not have believed you."

From a Church Organist.

"Of the greatest assistance, cannot fail to play from memory where your instructions are followed."

From a Pianist.

"I found it impossible to learn anything from memory, and was never able to play to any stranger. Now, thanks to the delightful lessons, I can memorise a piece in a day or two, and play on any piano to any public."

COUPON

MACKINNON'S "MUSICAL MEMORY," Empire House, 175, Piccadilly, W.1.

Please send me, without obligation, free, and post free, your booklet on "MEMORY TRAINING."

Name.....

Address.....

WESTMINSTER CATHEDRAL.

ORGAN RECITALS

A short series of Special Recitals will be given in May by the following eminent English, French, and American Organists:—

MAY 15th, 1924. LYNNWOOD FARNAM, of New York.

At 6.30 p.m.

MAY 22nd, 1924. W. G. ALCOCK, M.V.O., Mus. Doc., of Salisbury Cathedral.

At 6.30 p.m.

MAY 29th, 1924. MARCEL DUPRÉ, Legion d'Honneur.

At 6.30 p.m.

M. Marcel Dupré will improvise the following movements on a theme to be submitted by Dr. W. G. Alcock, M.V.O.:—

Variations.

Fugue.

Toccata.

A COURSE FOR ORGANISTS

WILL BE A FEATURE OF THE

"MUSICIAN'S HOLIDAY"

To be held this year at DENBIGH, N. WALES, in August, which incorporates the Summer Vacation Course of the TRAINING SCHOOL FOR MUSIC TEACHERS.

TEN LECTURES on CHOIR-TRAINING, ORGAN ACCOMPANIMENT OF CHURCH SERVICES, Etc., will be given by DR. ERNEST BULLOCK, F.R.C.O.

(Organist of Exeter Cathedral).

An attractive Lecture Programme includes (in addition to the above), the following :

MUSICAL APPRECIATION.

MR. STEWART MACPHERSON, F.R.A.M.
MR. PERCY A. WHITEHEAD, A.R.C.M.

AURAL CULTURE.

MR. ERNEST READ, F.R.A.M.
MISS ELSIE MURRAY, L.R.A.M.

VIOLIN TEACHING.

MR. SYDNEY ROBJOHNS, A.R.A.M.

PIANOFORTE TEACHING.

MISS NELLIE HOLLAND, A.R.C.M.

PSYCHOLOGY.

MR. ERNEST HUNT.

CLASS-SINGING.

MR. PERCY A. WHITEHEAD, A.R.C.M.

IMPROVISATION.

MR. ERNEST READ, F.R.A.M.

AND A SHORT COURSE OF

FIVE INTERPRETATION RECITALS

BY

MR. EVLYN HOWARD-JONES.

Full particulars given in illustrated booklet, sent post free on application to the Lecture Secretary, T.S.M.T., 73A, High Street, Marylebone, W.1.

MR. CHARLES TREE

Will give a few Special Lessons to any keenly interested who will be up for the Exhibition.

"How to ACQUIRE EASE OF VOICE-PRODUCTION" AND ITS COMPANION, "BEL CANTO" EXERCISES, 5/2 and 3/7 postfree. (If difficult to obtain, write direct.)

Accommodation may be had at—

Bolton Mansions Hotel, Bolton Gardens, S.W.5.

Courtfield Gardens Hotel, Courtfield Gardens, S.W.5.

New Address: 12, Bolton Gardens, S.W.5. (Kensington 5853.)

MR. JACQUES HOPKINS

(rer Prix Paris National Conservatoire),

Musical Director St. Paul's, Portman Square.

VOICE TRAINING—SINGING.

OPERA—ORATORIO—RECITALS—COACHING FOR L.R.A.M. AND L.R.C.M. EXAMS.

Auditions free.

Write for terms, appointments, &c.,

Studio, 16, Baker Street, W.1.

Musical Education is admittedly incomplete without such a knowledge of Harmony as will furnish the means for understanding music in respect of the Chords, Ornaments, Keys, Modulations, and Phrases.

Text-book Harmony is only concerned with Figured Bases, and the accompaniment of simple melodies. The more generally needed use of Harmony for purposes of analysis and interpretation will be found set forth in simple and easily understood language in the 112 pages of

HARMONY FOR PIANISTS

or Harmony in Pianoforte Idiom without written exercises

By DR. PERCY RIDEOUT, D.Mus., Lond.

A Course of Ten Correspondence Lessons, and Examination Papers.

For further particulars call or write:

THE CHARLES A. GILLET

Pianoforte School,

11, SOUTH MOLTON ST., BOND ST., LONDON, W.1.

University College of Wales, Aberystwyth.

FIFTH*ABERYSTWYTH FESTIVAL

(CHORAL AND ORCHESTRAL).

JUNE 21st to 24th (inclusive), 1924.

THE WELSH SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

CONDUCTORS:

SIR HENRY J. WOOD.

SIR WALFORD DAVIES.

THE SECRETARY, MUSIC HOUSE, U.C.W., ABERYSTWYTH.

South London Philharmonic Society.

ALL BRITISH
CHORAL AND ORCHESTRAL

CONCERT

SATURDAY, 24th MAY, 7.30 p.m.

GOLDSMITHS' COLLEGE, NEW CROSS.

ALBERT SAMMONS

WILL PLAY THE

ELGAR VIOLIN CONCERTO.

POPULAR PRICES.

Hon. Org. Sec., JOHN W. WATERER, 50c, Crooms Hill, S.E.10.

A LADY will let her beautiful Drawing-room (near Metropolitan Station, Fenchley Road) for professional use. Music, Singing, Practice, or Lessons. Rud. Ibach grand Piano. "L. M.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

PROFESSIONAL NOTICES.*MISS LYDIA JOHN

(A.R.A.M., L.R.A.M.), CONTRALTO.

Concerts, Oratorios, Organ Recitals, &c.

Recital-Lectures of Folk-Songs, Elizabethan Songs, &c.

Pupils received for Voice-Production and Singing.

Prepared for L.R.A.M., Associated Board, &c.

15, Albion Road, London, N.W.6.

Tel.: Hampstead, N.W.6.

FRANK CARLETON

(TENOR).

CONCERTS, ORATORIOS, Etc.

Address: 58, Hazel Street, Audenshaw, near Manchester.

MR. HORACE CURTIS

(Tenor Soloist, St. Michael's, Cornhill).

Oratorios, &c.

34, Ravenslea Road, Balham, S.W.12.

VERNON HARRISS,

L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., Gold Medallist. BASS.

Oratorio, Concerts. Vocal Coach and Adjudicator.

Senior Music Master, Downside School, near Bath.

MR. HERBERT TRACEY

BASS.

8, Cavendish Mansions, E.5.

London Wall 4033.

MISS THELMA DANDRIDGE (A.R.C.M.),

'CELLIST.

Concerts, Pupils, &c., apply to "Inversnaid," Chinbrook Road, Grove Park, S.E.12. ('Phone: Lee Green 1707.)

LEONARD SALISBURY (A.R.C.M.)

Founder of "The Gresham Singers."

Receives Pupils in Voice-Culture and Singing,

at 14, Hanover Street, Regent Street, W.1.

Tele.: Streatham 2525.

ARTHUR MANGELSDORFF

SOLO PIANIST.

For terms, vacant dates, &c., apply to

ARTHUR ELLARSHAW, 497, Coventry Road, Birmingham.

THE TRAINING OF TEACHERS.

CORRESPONDENCE COURSES IN

VOICE-PRODUCTION, covering the whole subject.

FORM AND TEACHING, TOUCH, ACCOMPANIMENT.

MUSICAL APPRECIATION, AND AURAL TRAINING.

Nearly 1000 Successes at L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., &c.

MR. R. J. PITCHER, Mus. Bac., F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M. (Double Dip. Singing and Piano), L.R.A.M., Class A, Performer and Teacher.

Prof. Singing G.S.M., 1905-1915. Special Lect. on Mus. Appreciation to L.C.C.

"Recit. and its Rendering," 1s. 6d. "Vade Mecum for Singers," 6d.

Send for prospectus, 21, Boundary Road, N.W.8.

'Phone: 1715 Maida Vale.

MUSICAL REVISOR TO MESSRS. NOVELLO FOR THIRTY-NINE YEARS.

COMPOSERS' MSS.

REVISED AND PREPARED FOR PRINTING

H. ELLIOT BUTTON, "Harewood," Ardwick Road, N.W.2.

*** The late Sir HUBERT PARRY and Sir FREDERICK BRIDGE permitted their names to appear, along with those of the following composers to whom reference is kindly permitted:—Sir EDWARD ELGAR, O.M.; Sir HENRY WALFORD DAVIES, Mus. Doc.

DR. ALLISON instructed by Post Candidates who OBTAINED DEGREES OF MUS. B. and Mus. D. at Oxford, Cambridge, Dublin, London, and Durham Universities, Diplomas of L.L.C.M. (April, 1924), L.R.A.M., F.R.C.O., L. Mus. L.C.M., A.R.C.M., Gold Medals, Silver Medals, Scholarships, Prizes, Certificates, and valuable professional appointments. Dr. Allison is willing to teach those who neither require nor desire to pass examinations. Harmony, Counterpoint, Orchestration, and Analysis of Compositions by Post, to correspondents anywhere. Personal instruction in Theory, Singing, and Piano. 24, Park Range, Victoria Park, Manchester.

REVISION OF MUSICAL COMPOSITIONS.

Dr. Horton Allison, 24, Park Range, Victoria Park, Manchester.

MR. J. PERCY BAKER, Mus. B., Dunelm.,

F.R.A.M., gives Postal Tuition and prepares for Examinations. Personal Lessons (Pianoforte and Theory), at 14, Hanover Square, W.1. Address, 12, Longley Road, Tooting Graveney, S.W.17.

CAPTAIN PERCY BAKER, M.C., F.R.C.O.,
L. Mus. T.C.L. (Author of "Compend of Musical Knowledge,"
"Studies in History and Form," &c.). Specialist in Tuition by post for T.C.L. and R.C.O. Essay Models, Sight-Reading Courses.
Study Aids, 9d. Studies in Modulation, 3s.

Send for interesting Pamphlets on Methods.

HAZELDENE, TEWKESBURY.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:—

- (1.) L.R.A.M. Paper Work.
- (2.) A.R.C.M. Paper Work.
- (3.) Interesting Courses of Study in Rudiments,
Harmony, Form, &c.

L.R.A.M. Exams. 1910-24 ... 233 Correspondence Pupils successful.
A.R.C.M. Exams. 1914-24 ... 61 " " "

MR. E. H. BIBBY, Mus. Bac., L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M.,
Waterloo Buildings, Piccadilly, Manchester.

In response to many requests, Mr. BIBBY begs to announce that he has prepared the following additional CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:

- (1.) The "Mus. Bac." Degree.
- (2.) A.R.C.O. and F.R.C.O. Paper Work.
- (3.) A.T.C.L. and L.T.C.L. Paper Work.
- (4.) The Associated Board Examinations in Rudiments,
Harmony, and Counterpoint.

(Address as above.)

MISS J. BLAKE, A.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. (Regd.
Teacher of Singing), prepares pupils L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M.
Exams., as Teacher or Performer. Highest recommendations.—
Studio, 139, New Bond Street, W.1.

L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. SPECIAL COACHING by
ARTHUR ELLARSHAW, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. Pianist.
Paper-work Postal. Address, 497, Coventry Road, Birmingham.

DR. A. C. PHILLIPS EMBLING, Mus. Doc.,
Dunelm. (1921), Mus. Bac., Oxon., F.R.C.O. Lessons by post
for Diplomas and Degrees. 64, Wokingham Road, Reading.

MISS FREDA EVANS, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M.,
L.T.C.L. (Late Pupil of Felix Swinstead), visits or receives Private Pupils for Pianoforte, Harmony, &c. Prospectus on application to 26, Granard Road, Wandsworth Common, S.W.12.

FREDERICK GREEN, L.R.A.M., ETC. Voice
Specialist, Vocal Coach, and Adjudicator. Preparation for
L.R.A.M. c/o Rushworth & Dreaper, 11, Islington, Liverpool.

DR. CUTHBERT HARRIS, Mus. Doc., Dunelm.,
F.R.C.O. SPECIALIST IN CORRESPONDENCE
TUITION. 405 Successes in Mus. D., Mus. B., F.R.C.O., and
A.R.C.O., &c. 58, Avondale Road, Gorseleston-on-Sea.

DR. HARRIS REVISES and PREPARES MSS.
FOR PUBLICATION. Accompaniments to Songs written.

MISS H. HEALE COACHES for all EXAM-
INATIONS IN MUSIC (at private residence or at West-End Studio), in Pianoforte, Harmony, Counterpoint, Fugue, Form,
Orchestration, "Teaching," Modulation, Transposition, &c. For
Terms, &c., apply Dunraven House, 41, Albert Bridge Road, S.W.11.

DR. CHASTEY HECTOR, D. Mus. Oxon., 1922,
L.R.A.M., instructs Candidates, personally or by post, for Degrees and Diplomas in Music. "The Downs," Old Shoreham Road, Hove, Sussex.

HERBERT HODGE, F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M.,
Organist and Choirmaster, St. Nicholas Cole Abbey, Queen
Victoria Street, London, has, since 1908, made a speciality of coaching Candidates for the Organ Playing Examinations of the Royal College of Organists, and can arrange a private course of instruction
(or single lessons) to organists visiting London, at St. Nicholas
Cole Abbey. Many recent F.R.C.O. and A.R.C.O. successes.
5, Streatham Place, S.W.2. Telephone: Streatham 2195.

DR. A. G. IGGULDEN, Mus. Doc. Dunelm., F.R.C.O.,
SPECIALIST IN CORRESPONDENCE COACHING.
Latest Successes: Durham, March, 1924—2 in 1st Mus. Bac. Sept., 1923
—2 out of the 3 Mus. Doc. passes, and 4 out of the 6 Final Mus. Bac.
passes. Also 2 Exercises, after prelim. course in composition. Over 150 Successes at Durham alone. The Durdans, Reigate.

MR. GORDON JACOB, A.R.C.M., gives lessons
personally or by correspondence in Harmony, Counterpoint,
Fugue, Form, and all theoretical subjects.
Special Course in Modern Orchestration.
MUSIC SCORED for any combination of instruments required.
Incidental Music, &c., written or arranged.
1, Homefield Road, S.W.19.

DR. F. J. KARN (Mus. Bac. Cantab.; Mus. Doc.
Toronto) continues to give lessons in Harmony and other
Theoretical subjects, and prepares for all Musical Examinations.
Compositions revised and Analyses written. Candidates prepared by
Dr. Karn have gained the Mus. Bac. and Mus. Doc. degrees at the Universities and diplomas from the Musical Colleges.
Address: 106, Haverstock Hill, London, N.W.3.

DR. KNOWLES (Manchester 1919, Durham 1920)
specialises in preparing candidates by post for the Paper-work of all examinations in music. Solutions, with methods of working.
Address, 45, Churchgate, Bolton, Lancs.

MADAME LARKCOM, F.R.A.M., Prof. Singing,
R. A. Music, has resumed her lessons in Singing at the Wigmore Hall Studios, 40, Wigmore Street, W.1.

J. H. MAKINSON, F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M., A.T.C.L.
Correspondence Tuition in Paper Work (T.C.L. and other Diplomas). Terms moderate. Kent House, Lake Road, Ambleside.

MISS F. HELENA MARKS, Author of "The Sonata: Its Form and Meaning," prepares for L.R.A.M.,
A.R.C.M., and all other examinations, Pianoforte, Harmony, "Form and Teaching," &c. Personal or Correspondence Lessons in all Paper-Work subjects, including those for L.R.A.M. "Aural Training and Sight-Singing," and A.R.C.M. in "The Teaching of Musical Appreciation," &c. Pupils received and visited for the Pianoforte.
Many recent successes L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., &c.
10, Matheson Road, London, W.14.

DR. H. H. L. MIDDLETON, Mus. Doc., F.R.C.O.,
L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. Twenty-five years' experience in Private
Tuition and Coaching for Degrees. More than 500 of Dr. Middleton's Pupils have obtained Degrees at the Universities, R.A.M., R.C.M.,
and R.C.O. Address, 60, Berners Street, W.1.

W. J. FREDERICK PUGH, L.R.A.M., Pre- pares for L.R.A.M. (Aural Culture and Voice Culture Diplomas), A.R.C.M. (Appreciation Diploma). Recent Successes, 34, Wilmington Avenue, Chiswick, W.4.

DR. TAYLOR'S POSTAL PUPILS HAVE passed Mus. Bac. 1st and final. A.R.C.O.; L.R.A.M.;
A.T.C.L. Pupil gained the Stillie Bursary at Glasgow for Counterpoint. Latest success, A.R.C.O. for 1924. Portland
Place, Lancaster.

DR. PERCY WOOD, Mus. Doc. Oxon., F.R.C.O.
SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:

- (1) Elementary Harmony and Counterpoint.
- (2) F.R.C.O. and A.R.C.O.
- (3) L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M.
- (4) Mus. Bac. Degree.

Several recent Mus. B. successes at Durham.

R.C.O. EXAMINER says: "Your system is undoubtedly an excellent one."

SUCCESS GUARANTEED—given any pupils with the requisite musical ability for the examination in view

R.C.O. SUCCESSSES IN PAPER WORK:

6 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1914.	11 A.R.C.O., Jan. 1914.
6 F.R.C.O., July, 1914.	12 A.R.C.O., July, 1914.
4 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1915.	6 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1915.
2 F.R.C.O., July, 1915.	9 A.R.C.O., July, 1915.
3 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1916.	3 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1916.
2 F.R.C.O., July, 1916.	5 A.R.C.O., July, 1916.
2 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1917.	2 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1917.
2 F.R.C.O., July, 1917.	4 A.R.C.O., July, 1917.
4 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1918.	2 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1918.
1 F.R.C.O., July, 1918.	2 A.R.C.O., July, 1918.
3 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1919.	3 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1919.
4 F.R.C.O., July, 1919.	3 A.R.C.O., July, 1919.
3 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1920.	10 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1920.
3 F.R.C.O., July, 1920.	6 A.R.C.O., July, 1920.
6 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1921.	7 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1921.
5 F.R.C.O., July, 1921.	8 A.R.C.O., July, 1921.
4 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1922.	5 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1922.
4 F.R.C.O., July, 1922.	5 A.R.C.O., July, 1922.
7 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1923.	6 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1923.
7 F.R.C.O., July, 1923.	10 A.R.C.O., July, 1923.
7 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1924.	9 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1924.

"Tralee," Warwick Road, Cliftonville, Margate.

MISS MARGARET YOUNG, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M.
(Pianoforte); A.T.C.L. (Vocal and Pianoforte). Registered Teacher, T.R.C. Postal Tuition for Theoretical, above Diplomas; also General Musical Knowledge and Advice. Bawburgh, Norwich.

A N EMINENT MASTER, whose Pupils are artists of International repute, will train and "present" a promising voice on exceptional terms. Write, "Influential," 195, Oxford Street, W.1.

EASTBOURNE.

DOWNSMEADE BOARDING SCHOOL FOR BOYS.
Modern education with special musical education if desired. Prospectus on application to the Headmaster, F. E. Wilson, F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M.

PUPIL of Randegger and Clara Novello-Davies Teaches Artistic Singing. Two Lessons free. "A. W. G.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

WIGMORE HALL STUDIOS.—These splendidly appointed Studios are the recognised centre of the best musical activities in London. Forty-five rooms. Grand Piano in every room. Lift, telephone and every comfort and convenience.
Low inclusive rates. One morning or afternoon per week the minimum time arranged for. Apply, 38, Wigmore Street, W.1.

SOLO and CHORUS BOYS supplied (CITY OF LONDON CHORAL COLLEGE). Apply to Francis Sutton, F.R.C.O., St. Stephen's Walbrook, E.C.4.

KING'S COLLEGE, CAMBRIDGE.

There are VACANCIES in the Choir for ALTO, TENOR, and BASS Choral Scholars. Choral Scholarships are tenable by those who intend to take a University Degree. The value of the Scholarship is £80 a year, with considerable allowances in addition. The Competitions will be held on Thursday, May 22 (Alto and Tenor), and Friday,
May 23 (Bass). Applications to be sent in not later than May 14.
For further information apply to The Deans, King's College, Cambridge.

GLOUCESTER CATHEDRAL.

ALTO LAY-CLERK REQUIRED.

Candidates should be under 30 and Communicants. Good reader essential. Duties, Sunday Services, Evensong five days in the week, and Matins Saints' Days. Salary, £80. Additional fees £10 to £12 a year. Applications, with testimonials (copies), should be sent, not later than May 7, to Dr. A. Herbert Brewer, Palace Yard, Gloucester.

VOLUNTEERS WANTED.—Ladies and Gentlemen for Choir, W.C. District. Two Sunday Services; Friday practice. Also 2 Violins to help at Evening Service. Please write to Rector, Holy Trinity Rectory, 27, John Street, Bedford Row, W.C.1.

BASS REQUIRED. St. Saviour's Highbury.
£10 to £12 per annum. Voluntary help gratefully accepted.
Write, "Choirmaster," Vicarage, Aberdeen Road, Highbury.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER for Northgate-
End Chapel, Halifax, with use of Organ for pupils' lessons.
Salary not exceeding £40. Address, J. Teal, 25, Hyde Park Gardens, Halifax.

ST. CUTHBERT'S CHURCH, CARLISLE.—
ORGANIST-CHOIRMASTER WANTED. Salary, £80. Use of Organ for pupils. Apply, Vicar, stating experience.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER WANTED
at the end of June, for the Parish Church of St. Luke, West Norwood, S.E. Apply, with testimonials and references, stating previous experience and salary required, to Vicar, 10, Barston Road, West Norwood, S.E.27.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER WANTED
for Homerton Parish Church, E.9. Choral Communion.
Salary, £30 per annum. Apply, Vicar.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER WANTED
immediately. Salary £50. Teaching. Apply, Vicar, Parish Church, Market Drayton, Salop.

ASSISTANT-ORGANIST for Church in Kennington. Practice offered on modern 3-manual electric organ. F. Eustace, 42, Dawnay Road, S.W.18.

ORGANIST, F.R.C.O., free to deputise or accept permanency. G. A. Howard, 25, Chiswick Road, W.4.

EXCHANGE of House and Duty desired by Organist of large Parish Church in Kent, for the month of August, with Organist resident in Seaside Town (East Coast preferred). Charming district. Boating, Golf, Tennis, &c. Geo. J.
Kimmins, 31, The Drive, Tonbridge.

ACCOMPANIST (Gentleman) desires Engagement with Vocalist or Instrumentalist, for practice or Concert.
Moderate terms. "C.," 67, Maitland Park Road, N.W.3.

GOOD ACCOMPANIST WANTED.—Singing lessons from eminent master in exchange. Letters only,
"Pronto," c/o 195, Oxford Street, W.1.

MUSICIANS and OTHERS can supplement their income by PIANO TUNING. Lessons by post.
Improved System. Intuitive. Great success. Write for terms, Bankfield House, 117, Armley Road, Leeds.

LARGE MUSIC TEACHING CONNECTION
for DISPOSAL in London, with or without residence. Other positions attached. Apply, "M. G.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

ORGANS (New and Second-hand) for SALE.—
Electric and pneumatic action up-to-date. Built or reconstructed.
Bedwell & Son, The Cambridge Organ Works, Cambridge.

CHURCH ORGANS STANDARDISED.—Two
Manuals, Pneumatic Pedals, various sizes; specially built.
Five to fifteen stops. Introduced to meet the requirements of the times at minimum of cost. W. E. Richardson & Sons, Central Organ Works, Manchester, S.W.

FOR SALE.—New 2-manual Pipe Organ, 20 to 30 stops. All modern accessories. Suitable for Church or large Hall.
W. E. Richardson & Sons, Central Organ Works, Manchester, S.W.

PIPE ORGAN for SALE.—One Manual and Pedal, Swell Box, 9 Stops, BISHOP. Address in first instance
F. E. Bullivant, Hillmorton Paddock, Rugby.

ORGAN, 2-manual, pedal, 10 stops, two pedal stops three couplers, composition pedal, pedal to Swell. Pneumatic action throughout; blown electricity or hand. Very beautiful tone.
Private owner. New condition. Lady Haking, Old Mill Cottage, Bulford, Wilts.

ORGAN PEDAL PIANO ATTACHMENT,
Radiating and concave, with Stool. £7 10s. New condition.
Mundy, 63, Manilla Road, Selly Park, Birmingham.

FOR SALE.—PIANO by J. J. Hopkinson,
Trichord. Concert pitch. £30 cash. "C.," 67, Maitland
Park Road, N.W.3.

VIRGIL CLAVIER METHOD.—WANTED,
Foundation Exercises, also Step by Step. 3, Ash Place, Sunderland.

THE UNKNOWN TRUTH ABOUT THE
VOICE AND ITS DEVELOPMENT. By E. DAVIDSON
PALMER, Mus. Bac., Oxon. Showing the prevailing Error in the Training of Men's Voices, and the primary cause of Voice-Failure in Singers and Public Speakers. Post free, 1s. (Postal Order). Address:
11, Grazebrook Road, Stoke Newington, N.16.

MUSIC COMPOSERS and LYRIC WRITERS.
The Cosmos Publishing Co. are open to consider Songs, &c., with a view to publication. Send MSS. with stamp for reply, to Glenholme, The Common, Hesse

SHAPED PIANO COVERS, stocked in twelve different materials. Plush Tops, Backings, Key Covers.
Patterns and prices by return post. William Moore & Co., Lauderdale Buildings, Aldersgate, London, E.C.1. Telephone: Clerkenwell 2827.

MUSIC COPIED neatly and accurately.
Transposition, Band-Parts, &c. Gordon Jacob, A.R.C.M.,
1, Homefield Road, S.W.19.

MUSIC COPIED, neat work, Transposition and Duplicating. E. W. Cartwright, 20, Waverley Rd., Bournemouth.

MUSIC COPIED, 12-stave page, 9d. (transposition extra). Neat work. M. J. Morris, 114, Alexandra Road, Hampstead, N.W.8.

RUDYARD KIPLING'S RECEPTIONAL HYMN,
Set to Music by ROWLAND H. WILLIAMS. Price 2d., post free.
Special Prices for quantities. ESCOTT & Co., Ltd., 67, Newman Street, London, W.1.

BARITONES and BASSES should buy new song,
"BEAUTY'S DAUGHTER" (Oakley). Compass B flat to E flat.
Price 2s. Weekes & Co., 14, Hanover St., W.1, and all music-sellers.

WANTED.—Copies of Communion Service by James Langran. Particulars to A. Bardgett, 51, Duncruin Street, Maryhill, Glasgow.

WANTED to Purchase or Hire, "Christian, The Pilgrim," Cantata by Wilford Morgan. Vicar, Over, Cheshire

PIANO PEDALS, with Octave Coupler

This wonderful invention supersedes all Piano Pedals, and is a Master Patent.

St. George's Hall, Liverpool,
9th April, 1921.

"The simplicity of the attachment, and the clever sixteen-feet, eight-feet, or both combined, 'OPTIONAL OCTAVE' contrivance,
astonished me.

"I was delighted with the Pedal touch and with the variety in that touch, which your Attachment makes possible. It is very responsive to the movements of the feet, and is reliable."

HERBERT F. ELLINGFORD, Mus. Bac., Oxon., F.R.C.O.

Terms: 17 guineas net cash, or monthly payments made.

Write for Lists, Prices, and Clients' Opinions, and References to
THE MALKIN PATENT PEDAL CO., LTD.,
NEWCASTLE-UNDER-LYME.

London address: 11, Ashlake Road, Streatham, S.W.16.

U.S.A.—FOR SALE.—The sole rights to manufacture, import, or sell in the United States.

IF YOU COMPOSE MUSIC

and need help to ensure your compositions being written in correct form, the Editorial
Dept. of PAXTON'S is at your service.

Compositions criticised, Revised, Edited; Melodies harmonized,
Accompaniments written; Music transposed or copied; MSS.
Engraved and printed; Lyrics supplied or Set. Lowest terms, Efficient service. Write for Booklet, to PAXTON'S, 22, High Street,
New Oxford Street, London, W.C.1.

THE "DISCUS" REGD. ORGAN BLOWER

THE QUIET EFFICIENCY OF THE "DISCUS"—

Blower is largely responsible for its widespread adoption in Cathedrals and Churches at home and abroad. Nearly a thousand are now in use. Apart from its quietness of working the "Discus" is a very attractive financial proposition. It saves the wages of a blower, and gives the organist the opportunity for rehearsal at all times. Any organ, large or small, can be fitted with the "Discus," and the motive power may be either electric motor, gas, or oil engine. Constructed of metal throughout, well designed and of the best workmanship. Its reliability and efficiency are guaranteed.

AS SUPPLIED TO WESTMINSTER ABBEY, YORK MINSTER, ETC., ETC.

WRITE FOR NEW BOOKLET.

MADE BY

B. WATKINS AND WATSON

ORGAN BLOWING SPECIALISTS FOR THE PAST THIRTY YEARS.

Designers and Manufacturers of all types of Hydraulic Engines, Gears, and Fittings for Organ blowing.

WHITE LION STREET, LONDON, N.1.

ESTIMATES SUBMITTED FREE.

Telegrams: "HYDISBLOW, ISLING, LONDON."

Telephone: NORTH 2039.

ORIGINAL COMPOSITIONS FOR THE ORGAN.

(NEW SERIES.)

No.	RECENT NUMBERS	s. d.
76.	TOCCATA AND FUGUE ("The Wanderer") C. Hubert H. Parry	3 6
77.	ANDANTE RELIGIOSO ... .. Alec Rowley	1 6
78.	SCHERZO ... .. G. J. Bennett	2 3
79.	THREE PRELUDES ... .. G. J. Bennett	2 3
80.	DÉSÉSPOIR ... .. Ch. Quef	1 6
81.	CAPRICE IN D FLAT ... .. J. A. Sowerbutts	2 3
82.	THREE PSALM-PRELUDES, No. 1 ... .. H. Howells	1 6
83.	" " " No. 2 ... .. H. Howells	1 6
84.	" " " No. 3 ... .. H. Howells	1 6
85.	THEMA OSTINATA ... .. C. C. Palmer	1 6
86.	COVENANTERS' MARCH... .. R. G. Hailing	1 6
87.	CHORAL MELODY ... .. C. F. Waters	1 6
88.	CONCERT OVERTURE IN F MINOR ... .. Alfred Hollins	3 0
89.	HOMAGE TO HANDEL ... .. S. Karg-Elert	3 6
90.	THREE SHORT AND EASY POSTLUDES (2nd Set) F. W. Wadely	2 3
91.	INTERMEZZI (No. 1, Pastorale) ... .. C. V. Stanford	2 0
92.	" (No. 2, Marcia Eroica) ... .. C. V. Stanford	2 0
93.	" (No. 3, Hush Song) ... .. C. V. Stanford	2 0
94.	" (No. 4, Intermezzo Founded upon an Irish air ... .. C. V. Stanford	2 0
95.	CHORAL IMPROVISATION ON "DER HÖLLE PFORTEN SIND ZERSTÜRT" ... .. S. Karg-Elert	2 0
96.	CHORAL IMPROVISATION ON "GELOBT SEI GOTT IM HÖCHSTEN THRON" ... .. S. Karg-Elert	2 0
97.	SEVEN PASTELS FROM THE LAKE OF CONSTANCE S. Karg-Elert	5 6
98.	PRELUDE AND FUGUE IN C ... .. C. V. Stanford	2 0
99.	PRELUDE AND FUGUE IN C MINOR ... .. C. V. Stanford	2 0
100.	PRELUDE AND FUGUE IN B MINOR ... .. C. V. Stanford	2 0

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

A LITTLE ORGAN BOOK

IN MEMORY OF

HUBERT PARRY.

A Collection of Pieces for the Organ, including a hitherto unpublished work by the late

SIR C. HUBERT H. PARRY.

The following composers have contributed to this memorial Publication:

WALTER G. ALCOCK. IVOR ATKINS. G. THALBEN BALL.
A. HERBERT BREWER. FRANK BRIDGE. HAROLD DARKE.
H. WALFORD DAVIES. ALAN GRAY. HENRY G. LEV.
CHARLES MACPHERSON. CHARLES V. STANFORD. CHARLES WOOD.

Cloth Gilt, 10s. 6d. net. Paper Boards, 6s. 6d. net.

From all Music Sellers, or the Publishers,

H. F. W. DEANE & SONS

The Year Book Press Limited,

31, MUSEUM STREET, LONDON, W.C.1.

THE SINGER'S ART.

A. J. LARKCOM, F.R.A.M.

MANUAL FOR SINGERS AND TEACHERS.

Recommended for Study for the L.R.A.M. Teacher's Diploma.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

LYNNWOOD FARNAM

(Premier Organist of the North American Continent)

Messrs. Daniel Mayer Company, Ltd., have pleasure in announcing that they have arranged for MR. LYNNWOOD FARNAM to come over to England at the end of April this year and to devote the months of May and June to Organ Recitals throughout Great Britain. The English Press has vied with the American Press in their recognition of this great Organist's unique talent. For instance, the "New York Times" on May 26th, 1923, stated:

"The last word in organ playing," and the "Daily Mail" on September 14th, 1923, stated:

"He certainly is in the first flight of living organists."

Both Messrs. Marcel Dupré and Lemare have publicly acknowledged their appreciation of his magnificent art.

For vacant dates, terms, &c., apply to

DANIEL MAYER COMPANY LIMITED,

GRAFTON HOUSE, GOLDEN SQUARE, LONDON, W.1.

A WESTMINSTER PILGRIM

BY

SIR FREDERICK BRIDGE.

Three-hundred-and-sixty pages, Large Demy 8vo, with a Frontispiece in Colour by Sir LESLIE WARD, numerous Illustrations, and a Special Portrait of the Author by Sir WILLIAM RICHMOND, K.C.B., R.A.

REDUCED PRICE.
TEN SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE NET.
Stiff Paper Cover.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

DAILY GRAPHIC.

Under the happy title of "A Westminster Pilgrim" Sir Frederick Bridge has narrated in a vivacious manner many of the most outstanding events of his distinguished career. The volume has qualities which make it an important contribution to the history of music in England.

WESTMINSTER GAZETTE.

Sir Frederick Bridge's retirement from the organ-loft at Westminster Abbey has enabled him to complete a delightful volume of reminiscences. Is a most readable book—a big one, too. Every page bristles with good things, and it would take much space to do justice to them even in a general survey.

SPECTATOR.

Makes excellent reading . . . there are many pleasant and humorous stories.

GRAPHIC.

This handsome autobiography . . . is a very readable and happy book.

MUSICAL STANDARD.

Concerning the book itself, it ought in justice to be added that it is a very full record of an active musical life. It is admirably arranged, excellently printed, and copiously illustrated. The "get-up" generally is all that could be desired, and one handles it with infinite pleasure.

MUSIC TRADES REVIEW.

From first to last the book is of intense interest. It is of great historical value . . . and makes exceedingly pleasant reading . . . Music-lovers must not consider their libraries complete until this new volume has been added.

YORKSHIRE POST.

A very entertaining volume of reminiscences. More than a conventional word of praise is due to the publishers for the excellent appearance of the volume, which has no vestige of war economy about it, and has many appropriate illustrations, artistically reproduced.

GUARDIAN.

A singularly pleasant and companionable book.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

Dedicated to SIR JOHN JAMES BADDELEY.

THE OLD CRYES OF LONDON

BY

SIR FREDERICK BRIDGE

WITH NUMEROUS ILLUSTRATIONS AND MUSICAL EXAMPLES
AND A COLOURED FRONTISPIECE.

Eighty-Eight Pages, Crown 4to . . . . . Price Seven Shillings net.

THE MORNING POST: "His book has a delightful antiquarian flavour, increased by its quaint illustrations, and the use of the old-style music type."

THE TIMES: "Under the title 'The Old Cryes of London' Sir Frederick Bridge has now written, and Messrs. Novello have published, a delightful little volume.

The best thing in this book is the author; and the next best things are the illustrations."

ARMY, NAVY, AND AIR FORCE GAZETTE: "A very unusually attractive book. It certainly forms a most welcome contribution to musical history."

THE REFEREE: "This contains a mine of antiquarian lore, reproductions of old woodcuts, and musical examples."

THE GUARDIAN: "Those individuals who were so unfortunate as to miss Sir Frederick Bridge's delightful lectures in the City on 'The Old Cryes of London' will derive both consolation and entertainment from this excellent volume."

THE CHRISTIAN WORLD: "This delightful little volume . . . an excellent piece of genial antiquarianism, musical, literary, and historical."

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

TRINITY COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

President :

THE RT. HON. THE EARL OF SHAFTESBURY, K.P., G.C.V.O.

Chairman of the Board :

Director of Studies : C. W. PEARCE, M.A., Mus. D.

Director of Examinations : E. F. HORNER, Mus. D.

The following CANDIDATES were SUCCESSFUL at the HIGHER EXAMINATIONS held in the Dominions, India, and South America in 1923.

FELLOWSHIP (F.T.C.L.).—Robert Dalley-Scarlett, Mary Kerridge, Winifred McCarthy, Mary McKenzie, Josephine Milligan, Evelyn B. Moon, Koa E. M. Oliver, Thelma M. Shaw, Mary V. Thompson, Alma Urquhart, Maizie I. Wood.

LICENTIATE IN MUSIC (L. Mus. T.C.L.). Archibald H. West.

LICENTIATES (L.T.C.L.).

PIANOFORTE.—Agnes M. Aim, Margaret C. Albu, Mary Astill, Aileen Backwell, Sybil H. Baker, Olive A. Barber, Edgar C. Bates, Mabel Battershill, Freda E. Belcher, Helen K. Bell, Margaret B. Bellard, Sadie Bew, Vera Billing, Hilda Bilton, Minnie Bilton, Gladys Bishop, Enid Blake, Hermione Bocarro, Beatrice Boner, Eva A. Boulton, Helen McC. Boyne, Elizabeth Bray, Gladys Brislin, Alice J. Broadhead, Nellie Brook, Letitia E. Brown, Marguerite Bruce, Yvonne Bryant, Winifred E. Burns, Ivah Callaghan, Mary Callaghan, Millie Cameron, Leila Campbell, Delia Carmody, Roberta Carroll, Ana Chaplin, Daniel P. Connery, Eileen M. Coughlan, Theresa M. Courtney, Florence Crowl, Muriel Croxford, Veronica Dalton, Florence J. Daniel, Edith I. David, Horace J. Davies, Edith Deane, Bernice M. de Lima, Alma J. Dickens, Mavis P. Dillon, Winnie Douglas, Blanche M. Downes, Eleanor O. Dunsford, Winifred P. Dutton, Cora Easton, Phyllis Ebert, Chester J. Edwards, Constance Elliott, Lillian M. Enright, Miriam N. Fewkes, Edith N. Forbes, Phyllis B. Forsyth, Winifred A. Fortune, Aruba French, Ethel A. Frye, Iris C. Fulton, Irene Gannaway, Beatrice Gerstle, Irene E. Goodwin, Thelma M. Gordon, Hubert D. Gorvett, Eileen M. Greene, Mavis Grieve, Margaret F. Hamann, Winifred Hawkins, Dorothy Heerden, Gertrude Hesselton, Hazel M. Holland, Sylvia V. Hough, Jessie M. Hughes, Lavinia A. Humphreys, Lillian Isaacs, Frances M. Le G. Jacob, Mary James, Eunice A. Jansen, Gladys I. Johnson, Ruth Johnson, Helena Keane, Phyllis M. Keedwell, Marjorie Keegan, Frank A. Kidwell, Mary Kinna, Edna Langmuir, Eileen Lee, Iris Lette, Esmé Lewers, Lila Lines, Doris Lloyd, Nora M. Locke, Irene Lorenzen, Mary M. McDonald, Adelina McGrath, Annie McKee, Margery McKenna, Eileen Mackenzie, Kathleen McMahon, Marie McMahon, Kathleen M. McPhail, Chrystobel G. McRae, Laura B. Mackay, Rosemary Malcolm, Gertrude Mannes, Ivy E. Mannion, Edith Mayberry, Isabel V. Mazlin, Marie A. Meeking, Sylvia F. Mendoza, Kitty Miller, Anna Moffat, Mary Monaghan, Evelyn Moon, Elizabeth W. Muir, Nona Murray, Florrie Murphy, Margaret Nickoll, May Norcross, Kathleen M. O'Connor, Mary O'Neill, Beryl N. Osborne, Ernest R. Pearce, Lyla V. A. Purcell, Flossie Ramgopal, Catherine McL. Reid, Monica Richards, Florence Richardson, Alma F. Ringwood, Annie Rive, Doris Robertson, Phyllis J. Robins, Elizabeth A. Roper, Florence Roper, Marie B. Rose, Grace Salway, Eleanor Shewan, Hannah Sinclair, Mildred M. Sinclair, Dorothy E. Smart, Edith F. Smith, Marguerite Smith, Lynda Spence, Roberta G. Spencer, Emma C. Stevenson, Phyllis Stevenson, Vona Story, Jane E. Strachan, Una M. Sullivan, Louise Sumner, Jessie W. Sunderland, Freida Swan, Marion Taylor, May Terlier, Alma Thompson, Masie E. Thompson, Alice Topham, Catherine K. Underwood, Phyllis Upshon, Erna van Blommestein, Max van Heerden, Ena B. Vaughan, Madge Wagner, James P. Wallis, Amy Walsh, Mildred Watt, Marjorie F. Watts, Claude A. Williams, Katherine Williams, Nora N. Williams, Stanley H. Williams, Doris M. Wilson, Sarah Wolfowitz, Mavis C. Woodward, Nora M. Wright.

ORGAN.—Leonard W. Bell, Edward A. Golding, Francis E. Willesden, Robert Dalley-Scarlett.

VIOLIN.—Muriel C. Indge, Daintree M. White.

SINGING.—Kate I. Andrews, Cordelia Biggs, Doris E. Biggs, Selma M. Bowering, Marie Doherty, Anne Gilpin, Winifred Greene, John H. Lovell, Ethel Moroney, Viola B. Parry, Doris G. Ricketts, Elizabeth Seymour, Vivienne Sivell, Maisie Thompson.

ELOCUTION.—Violet A. Alphonso, Myra A. Collins, Florence E. Edwardes, Rhoda M. Felgate, Ivy B. Flower, Nell Floyd, Enid L. Frye, Frances H. Frye, Catherine Grant, Ruth A. Harman, Nora H. Jackson, Mary Johnson, Sybil Lloyd-Williams, Myrtle Logue, Georgina A. McLennan, Sylvie-Mathey, Ethel Melman, Ellen J. Murray, Beatrice Newman, Hazel V. Ranson, Eileen Robinson, Sybil H. Stone, Amy F. Stratford, Georgina Stuart-Russell, Rose Turner, Helen M. Veitch, Winifride M. Walker, May Wood.

ASSOCIATES IN MUSIC.—(A. Mus. T.C.L.). Sheila F. Bradney, Francis E. Willesden.

TRINITY COLLEGE OF MUSIC—(Continued.)

ASSOCIATES (A.T.C.L.).

PIANOFORTE.—Elsie B. Anderson, Lillian M. Arthur, Jessie Bailey, Mary I. Bald, Jack Bargwanna, Jean E. Barlow, Dorothy H. Basham, Caroline Berentzen, Veronica I. Blair, Vera J. Bodman, Doreen Bourne, Eileen J. Boyce, Agnes F. Brook, Laura Brook, Ida L. Brown, Nora M. Brown, Pattie Brown, Bessie Brownlie, Agnes M. Brunton, Norah M. Caldwell-Davis, Errol P. Callier, Olive M. Campbell, Marguerite Care, Irene Carmody, Gwendoline A. Cawse, Eileen M. Chapman, Myra T. Chesher, Tryphenia Chew, Bernita Clur, Cornelia M. Coetzee, Minnie Cohen, Mildred W. Cook, Ethel G. Cosgrove, Edith Court, Ngaire Cowan, Adam Currie, Philomena Currin, Edith Deane, Mary Deegan, Molly de Gunst, Mary E. Dick, Mavis Dillon, Marjorie Dixon, Esmé G. Duncan, Caroline Dupree, Kathleen Dwyer, Florence M. Eaglesome, Mary S. Edbrooke, Beryl I. Edwards, Ivy Elliott, Ivy M. Errington, Daphne C. Evans, Mira Evans, Annie Farmer, Ella A. Farquharson, Maude Fifield, Annie Fine, Maymie Fleming, Winifred Flower, Cecilia Foley, Erna E. Fountain, Rita M. Fox, Alfreda K. Frames, Dorothy M. French, Edith C. H. Fyfe, Mary A. Garr, Greta Gibb, Mary L. Gibson, Hortensia Girard, Mylis G. Goldsack, Vera Gorman, Enid A. Goss, Muriel Greer, Edith M. Gregory, Dorothy L. Grigg, Patricia E. Grundy, Annie L. Hall, Winifred Hamer, Belle Hamilton, Mary C. Harden, Dolores M. Hart, Charlotte D. Harvey, Frances M. Harvey, Clarissa J. Hattam, Vera W. Hayes, Winifred M. V. Haynes, Myra M. Heenan, Irene Heher, Lorraine Henderson, Eileen Herron, Rita V. Higginbotham, Nellie R. Hill, Mabel F. Hodges, Emily Hodgson, Winifred Holden, Winifred E. Hopkins, Margaret Horan, Freda Hunt, Dorothy Hutchinson, Sylvia M. Jacka, Lily Jacobson, Dulcie Jensen, Kathleen R. M. Jordan, Grace Joseph, Gladys Keith, Rabie Kennedy, Veronica Knell, Mary Knowler, Frances Knowles, Margaret M. Kufal, Nellie Kulkhen, Winifred Kyle, Jessie D. Landells, Annie Lanigan, Elizabeth S. Landon, Rita M. Leeming, Ethel G. Legg, Audrey Léibrandt, Veronica Leonard, Olive Liggett, Richard H. Lipscombe, Ethel M. Liston, Laura Loch, Olive Lonie, Laura A. Lynagh, Rose N. McCollum, Cyris McCollm, Olive McCusker, Daphne McGucken, Eliza M. McKee, Olive A. McKenzie, Jean I. McMillan, Mary McNulty, Borgia McSherry, Agnes Macbeth, Christiana Marsden, Priscilla M. Martin, Edith J. Mataré, Lexie Matheson, Helen P. Maunsell, Elsie D. May, Mildred E. Maynard, Mary M. Meaney, Stephanie G. Mendis, Elsie M. Menzies, Dorothy Mickle, Edna M. Miller, Doris Milne, Amy Missenden, Vera D. Moncrieff, Lorna Moore, Olive Moss, Ronald E. Moyle, Lona Mulvay, Marion Myers, Dora Nairn, Dorothy E. Nash, Mrs. Gertrude L. Newman, Ellene Nicachi, Edith M. Nicolson, Una M. Nicolson, Rita Nolan, Irene O'Connor, Josephine M. O'Flynn, Mary O'Grady, Cecilia O'Meara, Mary E. O'Neill, Louis N. Orchard, Isabel O'Regan, Agnes Paglin, Letty Parkinson, Lillian M. Parrott, Kathleen M. Paul, Isabel Penny, Mrs. Ethel P. Pepper, Caroline E. Perrett, Ursula Perry, Hildegard Peterson, Martina M. E. Poen, Evelyn A. Pohlman, Bessie F. Pollard, Nellie Pollock, Reta B. Porter, Elise H. Provan, Doris T. Purdon, Mabel Radford, Jessie Rainier, Dorris N. Richards, Marjorie Richards, Dorothy H. Robinson, Beatrice Roedert, Alice M. Ronaldson, Constance Russo, Nora Scannell, Ada E. Sewell, Gladys Sherman, Violet M. Simpson, Dora A. Skinner, Winifred T. Smalridge, Marjorie E. Smith, Winnie Smith, Dulcie Soysa, Heather G. Spence, Lois Springer, Eileen Stainkaph, Mabel Staples, Helen H. Steindl, Catherine E. B. Suckling, Louise Sumner, Dulcie M. G. Tarbolton, Alma J. Thomas, Mary V. Thompson, Evelyn M. Thomson, Gladys Tilbury, Catherine M. Toomey, Muriel Tooth, Gertrude Trobe, Thelma Ulrick, Venda H. E. Val Deremao, Dorothy C. Van der Straaten, Mary Wake, Doris M. Walsh, Rina Ward, Veronica Ward, Mary Whiteley, Minnie Wilensky, Mai E. Willers, Eileen J. Williams, Mary E. Wilson-Murray, Annie Wineberg, Marie Wollaston, Beatrice Woolf, Leone Wright, Agnes L. Young, Dorothy M. Young.

ORGAN.—Sydney O. Thrower.

VIOLIN.—Jean J. Bonamour, Winifred E. Burns, Florence M. Cox, Thelma Davies, Croydon B. Dunstan, Margaret E. V. Foote, Ngao A. Garland, Annie Glatston, Keith R. Hunter, Alma Paterson, Jessie B. L. Pearson, John M. Yule.

VIOLONCELLO.—Doreen B. Webbe.

SINGING.—Martha E. Bonney, Isobel P. Burton, Vida E. Christopherson, Jean Curry, Roemer E. Gair, Winifred Greene, Edna Greenwood, May Guy, Dorothy Hughes-Johnson, Clara E. March, Mrs. Ethel P. Pepper, Doris G. Ricketts, Alison Wilson, Edith M. Wiltshire.

ELOCUTION.—Dorothy M. K. Andrews, Mary Augustine, Mildred S. Baker, Jessie E. Ball, Marion A. Bishop, Perdita O. Bowering, Rita Cleal, Kathleen E. Combes, Muriel C. Connor, Lyall E. Cooper, May Cooper, Helen E. Cuffe, Norah W. Devenish-Mearns, Grace R. Driver, Anne Drynan, Audrey C. Eagar, Violet B. Edwardes, Hetty Feitlerberg, Dorothy Forsyth, Marjorie E. I. Fountain, Jessie J. Fullerton, Molly Gallagher, Constance G. Glastonbury, Hope E. Grace, Nancy Griffith, Isabel F. Halligan, Alice U. M. Hancock, Mary Hehir, Ethel M. L. Hilliker, Thelma E. Hoffman, Nancy M. Holmes, Karoline D. Horn, Vera Horton, Aileen Houghton, Molly Iverson, Florence H. Ives, Ida V. Kearney, Catherine L. Kitchener, Pops Knipe, Madge A. E. McCleary, Mavis R. McCulloch, Edith McCurdie, Ina Mackie, Clara E. Marrett, Lilly Mason, Nora Mayhead, Pollie M. Miller, Holly E. Morgan, Doris J. Mortlock, B.A., Lona Mulvay, Gwendolen Penberthy, Mabel B. Ralston, Edythe M. Read, Amy H. Sherry, Phyllis A. Simcock, Heather A. H. Smith, Elsie M. Squires, Charlotte J. Stevenson, Louise Sumner, Phyllis Thomas, Annie E. Thompson, Lilliane O. van Eyssen, Henry J. Walker, Mary V. Wilkinson.

(Continued on page 400.)

TRINITY COLLEGE OF MUSIC—(Continued.)

CERTIFICATES.

PIANOFORTE.—Kathleen Ahearn (Hons.), John H. Aldridge (Hons.), Haidee E. Allen, Naomi E. Bailey, Marjorie Barlow, Teresa Barren, Dorothy Barron, Aline B. Bease, Nora P. Bewsher, Enid M. Butler, Stella K. Cattermull, Ibbie H. Christie, Frances E. Clarke, Ida Colman, Rosemary M. Cornelius, Phoebe De Rosa, May I. Donaldson, Herschell F. A. du Chenne, Mary Dudley, Phyllis Ebert, Audrey Edgecombe, Mabel L. I. Farquhar, Ella A. Farquharson, Ivy M. Farrow, Muriel E. Freeman, Dorothy Gammion, Annie F. Garret, Muriel C. Gibson, May J. G. Glen, Sybil Goodwin (Hons.), Gwendolyn Gordon, Kathleen M. Graham (Hons.), Myrtle L. Gray, Lesley Hamilton, Annie A. Hanifin, Kathleen Healy, Irene Heysham (Hons.), Margery A. Hoffman, Emily G. Hornsby, Rona Hough (Hons.), Doris M. Ireland (Hons.), Beulah I. Jones (Hons.), Freda Keast, Laurenti M. Leddin, Lilian M. Lewis, Edna Little (Hons.), Bertha Lusher (Hons.), Marjorie K. McAdam, Rita McVicar, Enid H. Marshall, May J. Marshall, Bessie Milligan, Vida Monaghan (Hons.), Olga F. R. Morgan (Hons.), Coral Mudford, Jessie Newman (Hons.), Etta M. Nicoll, Violet E. D. Oakley, Ethel B. Oliver (Hons.), Mrs. Florence M. O'Malley, Flora J. Parsons, Alvie D. Payne, Edna N. Penny, Irma G. Pierce, Alice G. Pires, Jean A. Pollock, Alice F. McW. Poole, Margaret E. Poole, Mary Pulman, Emily E. Quicross, Margaret S. Reid, Ruth Robson, Grace M. Roulston (Hons.), Claude C. Rowney, Raymond S. Ryburn, Hilda Scully, Rita M. Seaton (Hons.), Dorothy Sinclair (Hons.), Myrtle I. Smith, Margaret Stratton, Florence M. Tellefsen, Leslie M. Temple, Frances W. Templeton, Ruby H. Thomson (Hons.), Marjorie S. Turnbull, Florence B. Turner, Elsie C. Turnpenny, Susie M. Venter, Beryl Vince, Mary C. Wadia (Hons.), Dorothy H. E. Walker, Ethel Whitley, Eunice M. Wightman, Dorothy P. Wilkie (Hons.), Sybil Wood.

VIOLIN.—Kathleen Byrne, Gwendoline E. Leech, Jeffrey R. Lorden.

SINGING.—Gulestan J. Bahardurji (Hons.), Howard J. Banerchse, Barbara S. Bernicke, Cordelia Biggs, Sable A. R. Griwell, Lillias G. Morton, Marie Hannaford (Hons.), May Hollies, Marie Jones (Hons.), Ruby Nicolas (Hons.), Norah P. V. O'Neill (Hons.), Perin J. Porter (Hons.).

EXAMINERS.—Sir Frederic Cowen, Mus. D., Edward d'Evry, F.R.C.O., Charles E. Ford, Mus. D., C. Egerton Lowe, Albert Mallinson, Alfred Mistowski, Mus. D., Charles Schilsky, George F. Vincent, Egbert F. Horner, Mus. D., Charles W. Pearce, M.A., Mus. D.

Particulars of the Teaching Department, with list of Professors, Fees, Scholarships regulations, &c., Admission Cards to Concerts, and the Syllabuses of the Higher and Local Examinations, on application to the undersigned.

C. N. H. RODWELL, Secretary.

Mandeville Place, Manchester Square, London, W.1.

MACDOWELL

SOME FAMOUS PIANO ALBUMS.

			s.	d.
FOREST IDYLS.	Op. 19	...	4	6
LES ORIENTALES.	Op. 37	...	3	0
TWELVE STUDIES.	Op. 39.
Two Books	...	each	3	6
WOODLAND SKETCHES.	Op. 51.
(Or in Two Books, 3s. each.)	complete		5	0
SEA PIECES.	Op. 55	...	6	0
(Or in Two Books, 3s. 3d. each.)	complete
FIRESIDE TALES.	Op. 61	...	4	6
NEW ENGLAND IDYLS.	Op. 62
(Or in Two Books, 3s. 3d. each.)	complete		6	0
FORGOTTEN FAIRY TALES	...		3	0

"MacDowell has in his music proved himself as great a poet of Nature as Wordsworth proved himself in verse. One has only to think of the 'SEA PIECES,' 'WOODLAND SKETCHES,' 'NEW ENGLAND IDYLS,' 'FORGOTTEN FAIRY TALES,' and a new world of romance is opened up."—Musical Opinion.

ELKIN &amp; CO., LTD.

8 & 10, BEAK STREET, REGENT STREET,
LONDON, W.1.

AND OF ALL MUSIC SELLERS.

BROADWOOD
PIANOS

BOSWORTH & CO., LTD.

JUST PUBLISHED

OF GREAT IMPORTANCE TO ALL TEACHERS AND PROFESSIONALS

HAND CULTURE

FINGER, HAND, AND ARM GYMNASTICS AT THE PIANO

FOR

PIANISTS, VIOLINISTS, AND 'CELLISTS

GIVING

STRENGTH, FREEDOM, AND INDEPENDENCE,

BY

BLANCHE H. RENNIE

TEACHER OF PIANO AT THE BIRMINGHAM
SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

Price 5/- net.

A Press Review: "Study on modern lines, remembering that you can never play as your mind desires until your muscles are absolutely under control. To obtain this mastery, I know no book equal to that recently brought out by Bosworth & Co., Ltd."

BOSWORTH & CO., LTD.,

8, HEDDON STREET, REGENT STREET, LONDON, W.1.

JUST PUBLISHED.

No. 99.—NOVELLO'S MUSIC PRIMERS.

PIANOFORTE ACCOMPANIMENT

BY

WELTON HICKIN

Fellow and Professor, Royal Academy of Music.

CONTENTS.

Technical Proficiency—Artistic Imagination—Ensemble—
Balance of Tone—Phrasing—Vital Notes—Pedalling—
Recitations with Music—Reading at Sight—Transposition—Harmonization—Recitative—Modulation—Accompaniment studied in detail, &c.

PRICE ... FOUR SHILLINGS.
Paper Boards, 5s.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

(Reproduced from a photograph by Alexander Corbett, London, W.1)

JOHN BLACKWOOD McEWEN

The Musical Times

AND SINGING-CLASS CIRCULAR

MAY I 1924

(FOR LIST OF CONTENTS SEE PAGE 464.)

WALTER PARRATT

FEBRUARY 10, 1841—MARCH 27, 1924

CHARLES VILLIERS STANFORD

SEPTEMBER 30, 1852—MARCH 29, 1924

Barely a week had passed after the death of Sir Frederick Bridge when the musical world suffered two further blows in the loss of Sir Walter Parratt and Sir Charles Stanford. It is hardly possible to over-estimate the influence of these three men in their different departments—Bridge at the Abbey, and busy in a hundred ways outside; Parratt, through his playing and teaching, the most beneficent influence the country has had in regard to organ-playing; and Stanford, with no superior in the dual rôle of composer and teacher of composition. All three began their career as organists; all three had been on the staff of the Royal College of Music since its foundation in 1883, and although Parratt and Stanford had been in failing health for some months, they, like Bridge, had been at work until very near the end.

Walter Parratt was born at Huddersfield, where his father was organist at the Parish Church. There was never any doubt as to his natural bent; he could play both organ and pianoforte while still little more than an infant. Though he was appointed organist at Armitage Bridge Church when only eleven years old, he was already by way of being an old hand, for he had played a service when he was seven, and at ten he performed the Forty-eight from memory. (The latter achievement is significant in view of Parratt's later prodigious feats of memorising, and in even more remarkable mental efforts, such as simultaneously playing the pianoforte and winning a chess match without once seeing the chess-board. He could play the game blindfold, and at the end of a long contest could recall every move.) He held the Armitage Bridge post for a few months only, going thence to St. Peter's, Pimlico, Choir School, where he acted as organist and became a pupil of George Cooper. Here again only a brief stay was made; he returned to Huddersfield, where he held the post of organist at St. Paul's, from 1854 to 1861. Then followed some years as organist to Lord Dudley at Witley Court, Worcestershire, and a spell (1868-72) at Wigan Parish Church. The Witley period was specially important, in that it gave him ample opportunity for study.

Here may be interpolated a glimpse of Parratt during his Wigan period. We owe it to a letter in The Times, written a few days after his death by the Rev. W. A. Wickham, who became Vicar of Wigan some years after Parratt left. He says:

St. Andrew's Parish had recently been cut off from it [Wigan Parish] as a Peel district, and a school built some two miles away from the centre of the town. Mr. Parratt for some time gave up his Sunday afternoons to help this struggling work as superintendent of the Sunday School, being then about thirty years old. I succeeded the first vicar in 1878, and I found the following tradition: One Sunday a big lout in the upper class made himself peculiarly objectionable to the superintendent, and ended by spitting, effusively and pointedly, upon the floor. In a moment the irascible musician had dealt faithfully with him as country people used to deal with a poorly cat. It made a great impression.

In 1872 he succeeded Stainer at Magdalen College, Oxford, where he remained for ten years.

At Oxford he speedily became a powerful factor in the musical life of the University, holding a number of important posts as well as that at Magdalen. In 1882 he was appointed to St. George's Chapel, Windsor, in succession to Sir George Elvey; a year later he became professor of the organ and conductor of the Choral Class at the Royal College of Music; he was knighted in 1892; and in 1893 was made Master of the Queen's Musick and private organist to Her Majesty. He was a Member of the Victorian Order, and received the honorary degree of Mus.D. at Oxford in 1894.

Parratt did little composition, and his fame rests almost entirely on his extraordinary skill as a player and teacher. His influence on a generation of organists has been so marked that it is customary to speak of a 'Parratt school' of playing, and it is a fact that one could without much difficulty 'spot' his best pupils. The excellences of teacher and taught alike were those that spring from the prime virtue of clearness—a quality called for in organ-playing more, perhaps, than in any other department of musical performance, owing to the polyphonic character of most of the organ repertory, and the acoustic problems, which vary with almost every organ and building. His constant adjuration to his pupils was 'Be clean'; and he made no attempt to conceal his detestation of slovenliness and vulgarity of any sort.

Dr. Ley, a pupil on whom his mantle descended in an unusual degree, described some of his characteristics in an interview that appeared in the Musical Times of December, 1922. After referring to Parratt's remarkable influence as choirmaster of St. George's Chapel, Dr. Ley went on to speak of his skill as an accompanist. Even at the date of the interview, when Parratt was over eighty, he was a model.

A week or two ago [said Dr. Ley] I heard him accompany the first part of Brahms's Requiem on the temporary organ now in use at St. George's during the repairs to the Chapel. It is a little instrument with only a few stops, but one forgets the meagreness of its resources, so skilfully are they used, and so finished is the playing.

That word 'finished' is bound to come into a discussion of Parratt's playing.

His strong points [we quote Dr. Ley again] were phrasing and accuracy. In phrasing he made skilful use of the Swell pedal. His registration was generally simple, with plenty of use of single stops, and his gradual building up of a crescendo very striking. However well he played elsewhere, he was at his best and most characteristic at St. George's. To watch him play, as I constantly had the privilege of doing, was an education in itself.

As a Bach player he was supreme, largely owing to the beautiful phrasing and technical accuracy spoken of by Dr. Ley. The enthusiasm for Bach, which showed itself in his memorising the '48' when a boy, remained with him till the end. He was constant, too, in his liking for Rheinberger, and made liberal use, not only of the bulk of the Sonatas, but of the composer's numerous short pieces as well. Indeed, it is safe to say that the firm position of Rheinberger's works in the English organist's repertory is largely due to Parratt's steady use of them both in playing and teaching. But he was by no means rigid in his choice of organ music, being ready enough to give an ear to writers of a more free and so-called 'advanced' type, though (as he said a few years ago) he rarely found himself fully repaid for the trouble. Probably the untidy texture of so much modern organ music held him off.

His influence on his innumerable pupils was far more than merely musical. The mental alertness that so distinguished his work as a musician was at the back of his powers as a conversationalist. His literary taste was as impeccable as his musical, and his amazing memory was as well stored from books as from music. You misquoted a passage from Bach, or a sentence from (say) Lamb, with equal certainty of detection. (For Lamb, by the way, he had a special predilection, and it is said that he could repeat pretty well the whole of the Essays by heart.) His memory will long be honoured, not only for what he did in raising the standard of organ-playing, but for what he was—a brilliantly-accomplished man and a delightful companion.

Charles Villiers Stanford was a native of Dublin, where he began his musical life as a pupil of Arthur O'Leary and Sir Robert Stewart. He may be said to have lisped in numbers, for several of his songs and pianoforte pieces appeared in the glory of print while he was still a child. His first composition was a March, written when he was eight years old, and played at the Theatre Royal, Dublin, a year or two later. In 1870 he matriculated at Queens' College, Cambridge, as an organ scholar, and in 1873 was appointed organist at Trinity College, in succession to J. L. Hopkins, 'migrating' to that college, and taking his degree there.

As conductor of the Cambridge University Musical Society he did remarkably good work, giving first English performances of Schumann's Faust, Brahms's Alto Rhapsody and C minor Symphony, &c., as well as reviving long-neglected music by Purcell and Handel. From 1874-76 he received annual leave of absence for study abroad, working with Reinecke at Leipsic, and later with Kiel at Berlin. In 1887 he succeeded Sir G. A. Macfarren as Cambridge Professor of Music, a post he held until a few months before his death. As stated above, he was appointed to the staff of the Royal College of Music at its founding, being professor of composition and conductor of the orchestra. He continued his work as organist of Trinity College until 1892.

As a conductor he early made his mark, and in addition to countless Festival and other engagements in England and on the Continent, he held the post of conductor to the Bach Choir (1885-1902) and Leeds Philharmonic Society (1897-1910). He received the honorary degree of Mus. Doc. at Oxford in 1883, and at Cambridge in 1888. The honour of knighthood was conferred on him in 1901, and in 1904 he was elected a member of the Royal Academy of Arts at Berlin.

As a teacher of composition his influence was deep and widespread, a large proportion of prominent composers having been among his pupils. The best testimony to his work in this department is the fact that, stringent as he was, he developed rather than suppressed the individuality of those who studied with him. What trace of Stanford is there in the music of such widely diverse composers as, for example, Ireland, Vaughan Williams, Frank Bridge, Holst, and Hurlstone? He provided the best of answers to the statement that 'composition cannot be taught.' It is, of course, as teachable a subject as any other practical department of music, and it could hardly be better taught than by Stanford.

The distinguishing quality in Stanford the composer was his versatility. This country has surely not produced his equal so far as range is concerned. There is no branch in which he did not do work varying from the merely sound to the first-rate—oratorio, opera, orchestral and chamber music, works for various solo instruments, choral works from the largest to the smallest size for church and concert use, songs for grown-ups and infants, and countless arrangements of folk-music. His numbered works approach the two hundred mark, and we believe a good deal is still in manuscript. As is inevitable in so vast an output there is much that is unoriginal, but impeccable workmanship is always evident. The matter may be perfunctory, the manner never. Young composers in a hurry, who despise the technique of writing, should learn a lesson from the fact that in a surprisingly large number of cases Stanford's workmanship carries him through. So unerring was his knowledge of effect—which is, of course, merely a branch of a composer's technique—that many a work, uninspired and dull on paper, 'comes off' so well in performance as to reach a degree of success denied to better music less well written.

Like most British composers, his larger compositions have rarely had the attention they deserve. Yet few will deny that his symphonies and other orchestral works are infinitely better, and far more attractive, than stacks of things that are played to rags year in, year out. And are not Shamus O'Brien and The Critic still worthy the attention of our opera companies?

Among choralists his position is secure. No church choir is likely to exhaust the interest and effect of his service music and anthems. His Service in B flat, with its skilful and significant use of fragments of plain-chant, was something new in English church music, and wears as too little of the repertory does. Choral societies, large and small, will long revel in The Revenge, Phaudrig Crohoore, and The Last Post.

In the part-song he excelled. There are few better examples of this delightful form than The Blue Bird, Like Desert Woods, Peace, come away, Heracitus, and a dozen others of his best. And he was no less successful in unison and two-part songs for school use. Such things as The Lark's Grave, and most of the settings of Stevenson's Child's Garden of Verses, are gems.

Two factors that count for much in his work are his fondness for the sea and his sense of humour. No other British composer has given us the sea as Stanford has done in The Revenge; The Battle of the Baltic, The Songs of the Sea, and the Songs of the Fleet.

His humour is largely of the allusive sort. The Critic is full of delicious quotations, and the songs contain many examples, some so subtle as to escape any but the attentive ear—e.g., the quotation from the Valkyrie 'Fire Music' in Daddy-long-legs. The Ode to Discord has its funny moments, but it set out to do the impossible—to burlesque music that is itself often merely a burlesque. As a result, much of it could pass muster as serious work in the ultra-modern style. In fact, the Ode is good evidence in support of a remark Stanford made to the writer at about this time: 'Anybody can write in the extreme modern style,' he said. 'It's largely a matter of having enough spare time to write lots of notes.' Certainly, in this matter of writing notes for mere notes' sake, no composer is less guilty than Stanford. His scores of all kinds are models of economy, though perhaps this quality is best shown in his songs, and above all in those written for children's choirs. Here the accompaniment to a unison song will often be reduced to the slenderest dimensions—a simple counter-theme to the voice part, plus a single bass note; or a few detached three-note chords. But so skilful is the 'placing' of this tiny accompaniment that every note is important.

Although there is difference of opinion as to the value of Stanford's instrumental works in the larger forms, there is unanimity as to his general high level when writing for voices. We believe there is ground for both difference and unanimity. In his instrumental music, he was prone, especially in his later years, to use somewhat mechanical methods of development and linking up. In song writing there is little or no temptation to this kind of weakness; apart from the exigencies of the text, mere literary taste alone will do much to keep a composer straight. As a song-composer Stanford ranks with the greatest of any period or country. He had not only the taste that prevented him from choosing poor words; he had also a happy knack of seeing possibilities in many poems that to the ordinary eye seemed unsuitable for musical setting. No other serious composer would have thought of setting such things as The Bold Unbiddable Child or The Crow, for example, or even Johnnie, perhaps. Yet they are among the most 'fetching' things Stanford ever wrote.

But to start talking of Stanford's songs is to be tempted into a detailed eulogy for which this is not the place. It must suffice now to express something of the gratitude and admiration of singers for the rich store he has given them. From The Fairy Lough to Eva Toole, from Trottin' to the Fair to The Little Admiral, there are songs for everybody. No harder blow at the shop ballad has been dealt than by the popular success of such things as Stanford's sea songs and arrangements of national airs, especially those of his native Ireland.

To-day, when new music streams from the press in such floods that nobody has time to take in more than a tithe of it, a composer so versatile and prolific as Stanford is apt to suffer from those very qualities. Inevitably there is a tendency to fasten on to his most easily negotiable works at the expense of the remainder. We believe that a revival of the bigger Stanford works will take place, and that it will show him to be of greater stature than was evident to most musicians during his life-time. But even without such a revival his name will stand high, not merely in the roll of British composers, but in that elect line where such national labels are rarely used.

THE NEW PRINCIPAL OF THE ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC

John Blackwood McEwen, who took over the reins at the Royal Academy of Music a few days ago, was born at Hawick on April 13, 1868, but from the age of three his youth was spent at Glasgow, where his father was appointed minister of Sydney Place Church in 1871. While an undergraduate at the University he worked enthusiastically at music, being a pupil of the late D. B. Johnstone; among other activities was the choirmastership at St. James's Free Church for a couple of years, and then for a short time at Lanark Parish Church. He took his M.A. degree at twenty. In 1891 he came to London, and entered the R.A.M. as a student a couple of years later. He was already an ambitious composer, having written a couple of String Quartets, three Symphonies, a Mass, &c. At the Academy he studied with Prout and Corder, and worked at the pianoforte with Matthay. Two years later he returned to Scotland, and became choirmaster at South Parish Church, Greenock, and a teacher of pianoforte, harmony, and composition at the Athenæum School of Music, Glasgow. After three busy and fruitful years of work here, he accepted an invitation to join the staff of the R.A.M. as Professor of harmony and composition. This was in 1898, and at the Academy he has since remained, one of its most distinguished figures.

To the general musical public Professor McEwen is well-known as a composer, especially in the field of chamber music. He has written thirteen String Quartets, six Sonatas for violin and pianoforte, a Pianoforte Quartet, a Sextet for wind instruments, a String Quintet, and some smaller pieces for pianoforte solo, voice, &c., a fair number of which have received frequent and successful public performance.

Among the larger works his Solway Symphony appears to be the only one that has had a hearing. But that hearing was unusual, in that the Symphony was recorded for the gramophone by the Æolian Vocalion Company at about the time of its first public performance. The incident is not without significance. Now that the production of new orchestral works of large scale is an economic problem, the gramophone seems to point a way out. Apparently the Solway is the first British Symphony to be recorded.

Continuing the catalogue of McEwen's compositions, we add that there are four other Symphonies, two Symphonic Poems, Overtures and Suites, Viola and Pianoforte Concertos, and numerous choral works, large and small. That there is an uncompleted opera goes without saying. Is there a British composer of standing without some such evidence of unjustifiable optimism in his bag? He has written also a number of text-books—Harmony and Counterpoint, The Elements of Music, A Primer of Harmony, Exercises on Phrasing in Pianoforte Playing, The Principles of Phrasing and Articulation in Music, and The Thought in Music: An Inquiry into the Principles of Musical Rhythm, Phrasing, and Expression.

His appointment to the R.A.M. Principalship has been received on all sides with a warm approval that is the best of auguries for his success.

We have received the Directory of the British Music Industries for 1924, an invaluable book of reference for musicians and music traders. It contains nearly a thousand more entries, and ninety-five more pages than last year's issue.

A COMMENTARY UPON MENDELSSOHN

BY HUBERT J. FOSS

There is nothing to which the old saying 'so near and yet so far' can be applied with greater aptitude than the passage of history, for it is an undoubted truth that a period of fifty years marks a greater break between the sympathies of the times it divides, than the same number with a hundred added. As men die and fade from our present view, they pass through the purgatory of recent generations and the respectable Elysium of antiquity, eventually to reach an enviable heaven of uncritical admiration. Generations bring laughter, before, becoming centuries, they bring comfort. We are amused at the bulbous sleeves, the bodices, the bustles, and the weepers of the 'fifties, not, I think, any of them intrinsically more funny than spats, or the ruffles, brocades, and buckles of an earlier period, nor yet than broadcloth, tabard, kiton, or woad. So we are less diverted by the knife-axled chariot than by the earliest motor-car, and less by the wax writing-tablet than by the early 'telegraphic message' of Trollope's novels. It is not only that there is no medium of comparison between a remote and a present moment, such as there is with times nearer our own; there is also that divine provision, reaction.

The group-consciousness of a time reacts no less against its previous age than an individual child against its fogey parents. It is a purely parental, and not in the least an intellectual, desire that children should either inherit or accept as eternal verities the experience of their forbears. No one who cares for life can desire it with his mind. We may, we do, wish that this reaction should strive to reach εἰς ὑπερβολὴν πατρὸς—possibly the difference between Greek ideals and ours is that their youth attempted such a thing as an ideal, and ours assumes it, unattempted, as an inherent prerogative. Yet however admirable this aim, we can recognise in this world only a progress that leads not from better to worse but from one thing to another; things neither consistently better nor consistently worse, but only different, and with what a blessed difference!

In music this characteristic reaction is no less observable than in any other part of life, and we need look no further than Brahms to see it. His transformation in our modern minds is not unlike (if less sudden than) that of Cinderella at midnight. It is possible, however, that our reaction against our fathers is rather more intense than that of certain earlier generations against theirs, for music, always a rapidly moving art, has jumped particularly swiftly in what to us are modern times. It is not only that the ideals have changed, which indeed they have, but that the means have changed too. There is a strong physical as well as spiritual difference come about in the last fifty years—a change which often has hurt our ears more than our hearts, and which, while convincing some of its utter superiority over its forbears, has convinced others more reasonably of a hope for the future, and others, as exaggerated as the first, of its utter madness. So we get to-day, besides the small number who are open-minded, the larger party who are shocked at consonance, and the largest of all who are horrified at an enlarged system of dissonance, or, in other words, a wider definition of consonance. In the main there are the two well-marked types—those on whom the reaction has laid a violent hand of welcome, and those whom it has neglected even to nod to in the street. The one school is still wedded to tonic and dominant; the other to anything but.

Mendelssohn provides in some senses a Tom Tiddler's ground between the two parties. As representing in a highly characteristic way an important phase of our immediate forbears' life, he is as sainted in the view of one party as he is anathema in that of the other. There is nothing to choose between the values of the criticisms of these two parties; both are equally uncritical. There is, however, an advantage on the side of the anathema school, that at least it is subject to a natural and healthy reaction which has a chance of producing something for the future. Examples of the degree of anathema are commonly to be found, but I may quote, as an example of the other school's attitude, a well-known musician of my acquaintance, who, when he found in a writing of mine a reference to Mendelssohn as 'of the second rank,' accused me of using a meaningless tag. It did not even occur to him that I might have chosen words which exactly conveyed my meaning. But the object of criticism is not to await the verdict of time, which is, virtually, to wait for the verdict of those who do not wait for time. That is an easy method, sometimes followed but not to be commended. It is therefore excusable to attempt a reconsideration of Mendelssohn to-day—not a wholly bad moment—basing our view more upon his work than upon his ancient reputation. So we may perhaps find the proper place of Mendelssohn—not a place of adoration like that of his life, but a place where he is neither despised nor flattered. It is that place to which musicians and all of us should try to attain.

With reservation, if with no actual doubt, one declares Mendelssohn to be typical of his age. What man indeed could typify all of an age, and such an age? And the figure of Liszt rises before our eyes at the mention of the idea. (It is one of the strangest things in musical history that the attention of nearly all English musicians should be open so wide to Mendelssohn and shut so tightly to Liszt.) There is a parallel in English poetry, where Tennyson and Swinburne are both types of Victorianism, yet as removed as any two poets could be. So, even if it is allowed that in Romanticism Mendelssohn falls behind certain others and that in originality he is a small figure, he may be called not only a product but also a type of his age.

And the first testimony to this is his productivity. It is a comparison commonly made between the 19th century and ourselves that it was of a bigger build, and the epithet 'spacious' is hackneyed but true. This is no criterion that the century was truer, better, or of a more permanent achievement; that is in debate, but there is little doubt that it was bigger. An age when Hofmann was a minor and Gissing and Collins among the next-best, when Mrs. Browning could write her voluminous love-letters as well as Aurora Leigh and the Brontë children novels instead of theirs, when Trollope could flow with his interminable fiction in the intervals of a busy post-office life, is planned upon a big scale. So it is with Mendelssohn from the beginning.

'He is a mature artist,' Moscheles said, 'and he is yet only fifteen,' and at this age he was indeed not only a mature but also an experienced composer. Of none other save Mozart is there such a profusion of youthful music recorded. The year 1820, Mendelssohn's twelfth, saw the beginning of serious composition, and the inauguration of the series of forty-four MS. volumes which records most of his writings, in autograph and with carefully noted date and place of completion. To this same year

. . . . are attributable [says Grove] between fifty and sixty movements, including amongst them a Trio for pianoforte and strings (three movements); a Sonata for pianoforte and violin, in F (three movements); two full Sonatas for pianoforte solo; the beginning of a third, in C minor, finished the next year, and published (posthumously) in 1868 (as Op. 105); six pieces for pianoforte solo; three pieces for pianoforte, four hands; four pieces for organ; three songs for single voice; two songs for four men's voices; a cantata . . . ; and a Lustspiel, or little Comedy, for voices and pianoforte in three scenes.

The year 1821 produces 'five Symphonies for string quartet, each in three movements,' and 'nine Fugues, also for string quartet,' as a beginning. So the composition proceeded, until the Symphony published in 1824 is inscribed 'simphonia XIII in C,' and is known to the world as Op. 11, Mendelssohn's first Symphony. Before he was of age, he had produced several important and some even lasting works—the Rondo Capriccioso, the Quintet and Octet for strings, the Midsummer Night's Dream Overture, and the Pianoforte Sonata (Op. 6), for example. It is said that in later life a composition pupil brought to Mendelssohn a setting of some words. Mendelssohn's advice was that the pupil should set the same words twelve more times and choose which setting he liked best. The story, even if not true, is not at all out of keeping with its subject's own fluency.

The same characteristic is retained all through his life; where we would produce songs, he produced symphonic works. There is Ruy Blas, which together with a chorus for sopranos, was conceived, written, copied, rehearsed, and performed all within one week—and indeed sounds like it. There is his power of improvisation, which played so large a part in producing his phenomenal popularity in this country. His memory was no less prodigious. In April, 1829, when Mendelssohn came to England for the first time to produce his Shakespeare overture, Attwood left the MS. full score in a hackney coach and lost it. When Mendelssohn heard this, he said, unperturbed, that he would make another from memory, and on a comparison of the second score with the band parts no errors were found. It is also recorded that he sat at the pianoforte and played to Spontini, before the latter had ever heard it, the entire Ninth Symphony, a work which Mendelssohn continued to remember by heart until his death.

Critically this may have little to do with the value of his music, but it is at least an indication of the age and how Mendelssohn was part of it. One relation, however, it does bear to his musical production, and that concerns technique; in fluency and accuracy Mendelssohn's technique never failed him, but to speak of him technically as a master, as he is sometimes described, is to exaggerate. Theoretically we may divide a composer's invention from his technique; and it is no less possible to judge his technique by its conformity to accepted principles. But in practice there must be times when a composer's invention is whipped up by his technical capacity, and times when his invention is actually a matter of technique; and this statement, if extended so as to mean that technique needs invention and not only acquired skill, applies with equal truth to both my theoretical suppositions. There is a conspicuous lack of originality about Mendelssohn's technique. One can of course point to small virtues—to the slight twist he gave to the book-recorded concerto-form in his Violin Concerto; to his crystallising the Songs-without-Words form in a way that has made him responsible for much; particularly to his ability to reintroduce his first subject in first-movement form. Otherwise we can only find efficiency—a remarkable efficiency, displayed in the very earliest of his compositions, but not surprising I think in so clever a Jew. Here again, in his possession of ease, ability, efficiency, and certainty of touch—all, mind you, on a broad scale—but not originality, Mendelssohn is a characteristic child of the 19th century. Again, too, I recommend doubters to make a close examination of Liszt's truly creative technique, as a contemporary basis of comparison.

Mendelssohn was the centre of one of those whirlpools of popularity which at intervals broke the current of the 19th century. When machinery made the people greater in number they came into a quite new existence. But the fact that there was then a people with whom a figure could be popular, essential to the time as it is, does not stand alone. Nor was the sole cause of this particular popularity only what must have been the startling personal magnetism of this little man, nor yet even the surprising instinct of both himself and his father for discreet publicity. There was also the fact that popularity, becoming once more a physical possibility, produced a type of art which it could grasp. So in literature there are the growth of the novel and the entry into literature of the ordinary man as a subject as well as an object. But while admitting that there is a tendency in the art that deals with the problems of the ordinary as opposed to the exceptional to attain a greater universality, we must avoid confusing the universal idea with the idea that most men might conceive. It is in the production of this second class that Mendelssohn is related to the economic revolution of the early century. His ideas are commonly popular ideas, but they are rarely universal ideas. That is to say, they are commonly ideas that are familiar and near to the ordinary man, but they are not commonly ideas which are fundamental to the human nature which is in the ordinary man. Mendelssohn's music had the faculty of sounding new but not unfamiliar; it must always have been flatteringly like a pleasant reminiscence. There are certain tricks of Liszt's which are to-day spoken of as hackneyed, and to-day are hackneyed—not by any fault of his—but then were not. That is something different; the characteristic of Mendelssohn's music to which I refer is the inherent popularity of his methods and motifs, which have just sufficient novelty to interest and just too little to excite.

It is in this lack of surprise and excitement that Mendelssohn is finally found to be an exposition of his age. With machinery came wealth, and with wealth came, but for certain things, luxury. What prevented it was, first, the strong materialism of the age, secondly its inherent hopefulness ('O yet we trust that somehow good Will be the final goal of ill'), and thirdly that high moral tone which was—except for a few black sheep—the first lesson which parents gave their children. So we had comfort, which is to luxury as cocoa to whiskey, and to poverty as cocoa to water. 'Comfort—a person who saves one trouble; cause of satisfaction: conscious well-being,' says the Concise Oxford Dictionary, pregnant with suggestion. Comfort is that compromise which at once gives the body ease and the mind the assurance of no evil responsibilities. Comfort, like love, is blind; comfort is heaven brought to earth, but with truth left behind.

(To be continued.)

MUSIC IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS.—At Westminster, on March '31, the Madrigal and Orchestral Societies joined forces in a programme that contained the Brandenburg Concerto in D (all three movements), Two Dances by Debussy, A. W. Goldsbrough's Medley, and small choral works by Bennet, Elgar, Stanford, Whittaker, and Vaughan Williams. The Radley College concert (April 2) also included some Bach (Concertos for two pianofortes, in C and C minor), the rest of the programme being made up of choral and instrumental items by Géroult, Purcell, Stanford, Holst, Rebikoff, and Sullivan. There was an orchestra of twenty-six and a choir of fifty.

'HIAWATHA' AS OPERA

It was inevitable that, sooner or later, somebody would see the stage possibilities of so picturesque a work as Longfellow's Hiawatha. Several dramatic versions have already been given by amateur organizations—we ourselves have seen some of the episodes performed privately with excellent effect. It is, therefore, not surprising to hear that Coleridge-Taylor's setting of the poem is shortly to be produced in operatic form. The

'It occurred to us,' he said, 'that Coleridge-Taylor's Hiawatha, being an immensely popular cantata, would prove a great public attraction if presented with the help of scenery and costume—as an opera, in fact. We have been so fortunate as to secure the help of the Royal Choral Society and the Royal Albert Hall Orchestra, and many leading artists are giving their services. The staging will be in the hands of Mr. T. C. Fairbairn, the well-known operatic

Photo. by]

[The Press Photographic Agency

THE 'BAND' AT THE BLIND BABIES' HOME, CHORLEY WOOD

event is fixed for May 19-24, at the Royal Albert Hall, and will be in aid of the National Institute for the Blind. Music plays so big a part in the work of the Institute that we feel the occasion is one that should command the interest of our readers in a special degree. We therefore called on Mr. Sherwood Foster, and obtained some particulars.

He began by pointing out that the Institute had favoured the enterprise because it needed money for two very important branches of work—the education of blind girls and the care of blind babies.

producer, and Mr. Fred Leist, a clever Australian artist, who will be responsible for the costumes and scenery.'

We suggested that the vast spaces of the Hall raised some problems in the matter of lighting.

'You are right,' replied Mr. Foster, 'at first the difficulties seemed insuperable. But they will be overcome by an installation of the most powerful limelights in the world, each being over a million candle power. We shall thus be enabled to project any colour over the whole of the arena, so that it will be brilliantly illuminated, while the audience will be outside the focus, and invisible.'

Here we were shown a coloured sketch of the arena as it will appear during the performance, and a strikingly picturesque setting it promises to be.

Photo. by]

[W. S. Campbell.

MR. SINCLAIR LOGAN, THE BLIND COMPOSER,
WRITING A NEW WORK IN BRAILLE

'About a thousand performers will take part,' Mr. Foster went on; 'the chorus (in costume, of course) will number five hundred. I doubt if any work of the kind has ever been done under similar conditions. The nearest approach to it was, I think, Reinhardt's The Miracle, produced at Olympia some years ago. But that was a wordless play, whereas Hiawatha will be an opera. Moreover, Reinhardt had nothing like our facilities for lighting and illumination. There will be a ballet—very appropriately, for you will remember that the poem contains references to the art, and a dance is actually described in the Wedding-Feast. We shall probably put some dancing in the Departure as well. The ballet will be produced by Kyasht.'

'What music will be used for this?' we asked. 'The Hiawatha Ballet of Coleridge-Taylor?'

'Unfortunately there is a copyright difficulty about that,' Mr. Foster replied. 'The Hiawatha Ballet Music is a separate work; it has no more than a merely nominal connection with the Cantata, and is published by a different firm. The owners of the Ballet copyright maintain that, being an independent work, it does not lend itself to incorporation with the Cantata, and they are unwilling to allow its performance save as a separate entertainment. But we shall no doubt get over the difficulty. After all, Coleridge-Taylor wrote a good deal of music of an incidental character, some of which will prove no less suitable for our purpose.'

'I am glad to be able to say that the project is meeting with influential support, and we expect to receive very distinguished patronage at each performance. A ladies' committee is being formed, chiefly with a view to looking after the "front" of the house. The Duchess of York is President, and Princess Arthur of Connaught is in the chair. Mrs. Kellogg, the wife of the American Ambassador, has agreed to join the Committee. We believe that the performances should appeal strongly to the numerous Americans who will be over here for the Exhibition. In fact, it ought to interest all our Overseas visitors, for the Institute is the biggest thing of its kind in the world, and the best-known, too. It sends out the greater part of the world's circulation of Braille editions of literature and music. There is no need to tell readers of the Musical Times of our musical activities in general; they are well aware of what we do in that way. But you might enlist their sympathies on behalf of the two special departments in whose aid we are giving Hiawatha. The College for Blind Girls is at Chorley Wood, and gives its pupils a first-class education. Music, of course, plays a prominent part at the school. The Blind Babies' Homes are at Chorley Wood and at Southport. (Lancashire folk visiting London between May 19 and 24, please remember!) These poor kiddies have their music too—a bit on the jazzy side, as you will see by the photograph, but they enjoy it. As a matter of fact we find music an immense help in quickening their faculties and helping on their education generally.'

We reproduce one of the Babies' Home photographs, and also two others, one showing Mr. H. C. Warrilow, the well-known blind organist, at the Institute organ; the other is of Mr. Sinclair Logan noting down a composition by means of a Braille writer.

MR. H. C. WARRILOW, F.R.C.O., AT THE ORGAN,
NATIONAL INSTITUTE FOR THE BLIND

It should be added that the Hiawatha performances take place at 8 o'clock, and that tickets (12s. 6d. to 5s.) are to be had from the National Institute for the Blind, 224, Great Portland Street, W.1 (Tel.: Langham 2542), as well as at the Royal Albert Hall, and the usual agencies.

AD LIBITUM

BY 'FESTE'

The few timid remarks I ventured to make last month on certain aspects of popular music have had a reception that disappoints me. Preaching to the converted is a dull kind of sport, and, judging from the unanimous expressions of agreement, that is what I seem to have been doing. But one never knows, does one? Some of the other sort of reader may still be chewing it over, and, anyhow, the converted seem to have been pleased to find all that they had been thinking put into print.

On that question of propaganda, however, a little bit more material has turned up in the shape of an interview which appears in the current number of the P.R. Gazette, the organ of the Performing Rights Society. The interviewee is Mrs. G. Hubi Newcome, and she says a number of naïve things that deserve a wider publicity than they are likely to get through the P.R. Gazette. Thus, she thinks that 'from the publisher's, composer's, and author's point of view, it greatly adds to the success of a song if the vocalists who "feature" it are allowed a royalty on copies sold.' I should think so! But she might have put it another way, and said that it greatly adds to the likelihood of a slushy ballad being 'featured' if the featurer has an interest in the sale thereof. In theory, there is a good deal to be said for this method of popularising a work. In practice, however, it works out vilely, because it is applied almost entirely to music (especially songs) of the feeblest type.

Mrs. Hubi Newcome goes on:

If singers find that a song satisfies and is suitable to their requirements and personal taste, their taking it up naturally follows, it being not only an advantage monetarily, but also a help in winning public favour; and the song will consequently secure the singer's best efforts in its delineation.

But what the musical world needs is singers who will take up a song that suits them and give their 'best efforts in its delineation' without any monetary inducement beyond the fee that goes with their engagement. There is a tendency to regard singers as being the least musical and the most tasteless members of the profession. Such a view is likely to be strengthened by Mrs. Newcome's implication that a singer's best efforts can be counted on only when he receives a royalty on the sale of the songs he performs. Mrs. Newcome speaks as one having authority, for the interviewer tells us that she is 'authoress of [hold tight!] two thousand lyrics, four hundred adapted works, and four published cantatas,' and we are assured that she has 'derived much benefit from such royalty songs.' In the case of an output running into thousands this is easy to believe.

Here I may be allowed to enter a protest against the degradation of that word 'lyric.' English lyrical poetry is generally acknowledged to be second to none. Our greatest lyrical poets turned out lyrics by the mere hundred—some of the most exquisite examples have been written by men who produced no more than a dozen or so—and I object to these writers of song-words complacently talking of turning out 'lyrics' by the thousand. You will have noticed, too, that when a new musical comedy is launched, among the score or so of hacks who combine to give it a sort of birth are two or three who are stated to have written 'lyrics.' (I say 'a sort of birth,' because such works generally depend for their success upon the subsequent efforts of the chief comedian in working-up his part.) It may be difficult to suggest off-hand an alternative to 'lyric,' but that is their job, not ours. We can only enter a protest against their applying to their jingles and platitudinous versifications a label that carries a definite literary significance, and that has so far been applied only to some of the choicest and most intimate examples of poetry. If Mrs. Hubi Newcome has produced a couple of thousand of these rare blooms, she is greater than Shelley, Keats, and Wordsworth rolled into one. In fact, she is more than a poet. I apply to her the term a friend of mine, amazed at the multifariousness of Bach's output, applied to John Sebastian: 'The man wasn't a composer; he was a bloomin' syndicate.'

Returning to the P.R. Gazette interview, I find Mrs. Hubi Newcome following up her remark about having derived much benefit from royalty songs by this quaint piece of reasoning:

This may seem to suggest that one song—the royalty paid one—would be favoured more than another, but in the end it is the better song that gets home, and a real artist would not risk his reputation for a royalty on a poor song.

Then why bang good hard money by paying royalties to a singer if you know that he will be so careful of his reputation as to sing only the better songs? Look at that dismal refrain by Ivor Novello printed in last month's Musical Times. It was, remember, sung by Dame Clara Butt, and no doubt it received the Dame's 'best efforts in its delineation.' But why? Because she thought it was a fine song, or because there was some 'advantage monetarily.' Presumably the former, for Mrs. Newcome assures us that 'a real artist would not risk his reputation for a royalty on a poor song.' This statement opens up speculations as to the taste and musicianship of certain famous singers—speculations that it will be safer to allow the reader to pursue for himself.

By the way, the term 'royalty ballad' is not quite understood by the general public. Exactly a year ago the subject was discussed in this journal in an 'Occasional Note,' but judging from recent comments in various quarters it may be useful to return briefly to the subject. First, there are two kinds of royalties: (a) that paid to a composer—the best and fairest of all methods of payment; (b) that paid to a singer on the sales of a work he has helped to popularise. The latter kind of royalty does not necessarily cease when the popularity is achieved. It may go on a long while after—sometimes as long as the singer lives, in fact. The payment of a fee to a singer for each performance of a given song is what most people have in mind when they speak of 'royalty ballads.'

* One does not. Since this article has been in type a letter objecting in toto to 'Feste's' views has been received. It appears on p. 449.—EDITOR.

I have often wondered how this payment stands in relation to the law governing secret commissions. Probably very few members of an audience realise that a singer is singing a certain song not necessarily because he thinks it is good, but because he receives a small bribe. I should like to see the question thrashed out, and settled in such a way that the fact of such a fee being paid would have to be stated on the copies of the songs concerned. We should then know that the words 'sung by H. Plunket Greene' signified that the singer thought highly of the song, and nobody would need a better guarantee as to quality. On the other hand, 'sung by Madame Whatnot, in consideration of a fee,' would leave the hearers in no doubt as to whether they were assisting at a musical performance or a commercial transaction.

Artistically the present system works out badly because, as is said above, the type of song that is pushed by such means is almost invariably the worst. Sooner or later musicians will come to see that if the practice cannot be ended it must be mended—or, rather, extended. That is to say, publishers and composers of good music must adopt the same methods of popularising their output. As things are now, the singers with the least conscience and the poorest taste have a steady means of income denied to such few singers as happen to be artists. Far better, of course, would be united action on the part of all singers in favour of abolishing such payments. After all, pianists and violinists don't expect to be tipped for playing works by living composers—at all events, one never hears of such payments—and anyway leading instrumental soloists never descend to the drivel that some of our Queens of Song ladle out. If players can be satisfied with the payment they receive as players, why must singers, like taxi-drivers, always have an itching palm for that extra dollop? The public taste in songs is lower than in any other department of music, and it will remain so until one of two drastic steps is taken: (a) The system of paying singers to push songs will be abolished; or (b) it will be extended to embrace good singers and the best songs. It is useless to complain of the vogue of bad songs while they have so long a start over the good. Give both the same start, or, better still, put both back to 'scratch,' and let their success depend on their merits.

I am glad to see that The Newspaper World of March 29 gave a page of extracts from Mr. Percy Scholes's lectures to students of journalism at the London University. The extracts dealt with the present position of musical criticism in the daily press, and contained some things that badly needed frank statement. I mention only one of them. Mr. Scholes says that 'editors are afraid of offending the public by allowing the appearance of drastic criticism of public favourites,' though I should say that the fear of offending the public was less a factor than a fear of offending the public favourite's advertisement manager. However, we know that the public is never more of a hass than in its blind devotion to its favourites of the concert platform. No matter how badly they perform, the public twitches its long ears appreciatively and bangs enthusiastic hooves. Mr. Scholes says that ... the critics of some important papers say plainly that they dare not tell the blunt truth about a public favourite. Should Paderewski or Ysaye on occasion play badly he must be spoken of in almost the same terms as when he plays well—which is not much of a compliment to Paderewski or Ysaye! If a prima donna's voice wears out (as it generally does some years before she has the sense to retire) the public must be told that she is singing as magnificently as ever.

This is true enough. You would be astonished if the Editor of this journal printed some of the abusive letters that reach him after a bit of frank criticism. Not long since he dared to say about Pachmann some of the things that ninety per cent. of musicians and critics in this country feel, but which so far had not been boldly said, except by some American writers. At once came the protesting letters: how dared he speak thus of a great artist who had given so many happy moments to the highly emotional protesters? The answer of course was that he dared to speak thus because, being Editor, nobody could stop him. Mr. Scholes rightly goes on to say that the case of the prima donna is worst of all, because 'a few papers make a "stunt" of her for weeks before she appears, and so send their critics to her concert bound and gagged.' The worst case of this was surely the Daily Mail and Evening News hysterical boosting of Melba. Apropos of this singer, I do not remember that a single daily paper contained a reference to the absurdity of her being cast for the part of Mimi at the B.N.O.C. performance of La Bohème. No wonder Dr. Weissmann, in his article in the Musical Times of February, comparing English and German musical life, expressed surprise and disappointment on hearing 'a very elderly singer, although a very celebrated artist,' play a part that ought to be sung by a young woman. He rightly regarded it as 'against all theatrical tradition'; the reception she had 'was characteristic only of a British audience, ever ready to subordinate artistic outlook to sentimental feeling.' And I remember some Canadian visitors last year telling me that certain eminent singers whose worn voices and indifferent programmes excite nothing but the usual favourable criticism in this country were roundly dealt with in Canada. After all, why should famous singers and players be exempt from frank unfavourable criticism that is dealt out unflinchingly to composers, authors, and painters? Some book reviewers, for example, have dropped heavily with both feet on H. G. Wells's latest novel. Thus, here is W. B. Walkley hitting Wells good and hard in a whole column of The Times, and ending:

Let me . . . say frankly that the stuff I have been quoting seems to me to be unworthy of Mr. Wells, who ought to be above choking the world with printed rubbish.

Imagine such candour being administered to our leading singers and players on the morning after they had had an off night! The musical world would shudder, and there would probably be a lawsuit or assault and battery.

By the way, musical readers of this book of Mr. Wells's (The Dream) will be interested to observe that the novelist's invention seems to peter out where our art is concerned. There are few things more certain than the early and immense development of scientific and mechanical means of distributing musical performances. Yet Mr. Wells, in his picture of humanity two thousand years hence, shows us people playing an instrument which, though he calls it a Clavier (with capital), is clearly no more than the domestic pianoforte. And what do they play? We find no hint of musical composition or technique having advanced beyond the stage it reached fifty years ago. The chief character, Sarnac, looking back two thousand years and describing his experiences when alive at the beginning of the present century, speaks of somebody playing some Schumann on the pianola, and adds that he never hears Schumann now (i.e., two thousand years hence) without recalling that dim time in his former existence. So it is clear that the people in Mr. Wells's Utopia will still have their Schumann, though, so dully peaceful is Utopia, there will be no Diaghilevs to call Schumann 'a sick dog baying the moon.'

Mr. Wells's acquaintance with music seems to be curiously limited to the pianoforte romantics, for in the opening chapter of the book he gives us a picture of the Utopians sitting around, among them

. . . a musician who made Sunray talk [all the characters seem to have had their names drawn from catalogues of sweet-peas, soaps, and such like hygienic goods—Sunray, Radiant, Firefly, and the like] about the days gone by, and afterwards he played music with his own hands, on a Clavier, to express the ancient feelings of men. He played one piece that was, he explained, two thousand years old; it was by a man named Chopin, and it was called The Revolutionary Etude. Sunray could not believe a pianoforte capable of such passionate resentment. [Mr. Wells has evidently never heard some of the pianoforte music of Casella, Kodály, and others, who make the pianoforte resent a bit more than Chopin ever did.] After that, he played grotesque and angry battle music and crude marching tunes from those half-forgotten times, and then he invented wrathful and passionate music of his own.

Altogether, that Clavier seems to have had a pretty good doing. But it is inconsistent of Mr. Wells to show us on one page Schumann still being played in the ordinary way, and Chopin exhibited as a curious antique.

Mr. Wells so thoroughly damns the present time (the Utopians call it the Age of Confusion—like their cheek!) that we are astonished to find its music singled out for praise.

Sarnac, looking back over those two thousand years says:

One of the few really good things of that age was the music. Mankind perfected some things very early. . . . I doubt if there has ever come very much sweeter music into the world than the tuneful stuff we had away back there in the Age of Confusion. The music Mr. Plaiçe was giving us was some bits of Schumann's Carnaval music; we hear it still played on the Clavier.

Mr. Plaiçe, by the way, was delivering that 'Carnaval music' per pianola. According to Mr. Wells, there will be no pianolas in Utopia, so if you have any financial interest in the machine, get out before the draught comes. In Utopia we hear of no instrument other than this ambiguous Clavier, and such as perform thereon do so by hand. The pianola, instead of going on from triumph to triumph, had fizzled out and been forgotten.

I don't know [Sarnac says] if you understand what a pianola was. It was an instrument for playing the Clavier with hammers directed by means of perforated rolls, for the use of those who lacked the intelligence and dexterity to read music and play the Clavier with their hands. Because everyone was frightfully unhandy in those days. It thumped a little and struck indiscriminating chords . . . but, as we used to say in those days, it might have been worse.

We read that Sarnac 'watched the musician's nimble hands,' for 'he had not heard very much music.' As, like his fellow-Utopians, he was dreadfully cultivated and superior, it is clear that music played but a small part in Utopian amenities. Our Age may be Confused, but musically it is not so lean as Utopia.

The portions of the book that deal with the present day give us some delightful bits of the earlier Wellsian humour—bits so refreshing that most readers will hope (as they have hoped after each of Mr. Wells's later books) that the author will drop shrilly scolding and putting the world to rights, and give it what it badly needs—some more Kippses, Bealbys, Tonobungays, and Mr. Polleys. For there can be no getting away from the fact that one yawns over Mr. Wells's Fireflys and Radiants; his ideal world does not over-stimulate. If Utopia is to be so colourless a show, peopled with oracular prigs, all talking like Mr. Wells in his most superior vein, anybody can have it for me. I prefer our jolly old Age of Confusion.

RHEINBERGER'S ORGAN SONATAS

By HARVEY GRACE

(Concluded from April number, page 327)

NO. 20, IN F, OP. 196, To the Peace FeastPraeludium; Intermezzo; Pastorale; Finale

There is some doubt as to the meaning of this Sonata's sub-title. Dr. Bennett thinks that the composer had in mind the Peace Conference being held at the Hague at the time the work was written (1900). Whatever the origin of the ascription, the Praeludium seems to have been inspired by some lofty idea, for none of the sonata movements excels it in breadth and nobility. Most of its thematic material is notable for simplicity of the type we rarely meet, save in the works of the really big men, e.g., the opening theme :

Ex. 1.

The whole of the first-subject section—two pages—is on these plain, broad lines, though after the opening ten bars semiquaver figuration is used a good deal for the inner parts. The second subject appears early on page 4, and is a mere two-bar affair treated fugally. This section ends curiously with the pedal delivering the subject twice, first in the dominant and then in the tonic, after which the manual parts come to a full stop high on the keyboard. The composer seems to pull up and remind himself that he is in danger of writing a fugue—a form he had dropped three Sonatas earlier. So he brushes the fugue idea aside with a splendid cadence in C, ff, and brings on another subject in C minor, sempre ff:

Ex. 2.

This is a vigorous quaver tune, still simple, but providing excellent contrast to what has gone before, owing to the minor key and the semiquaver sixths in both hands. From this springs a catchy little theme in dotted rhythm :

Ex. 3.

with which a good deal is done on page 5. Note how by its aid the composer makes a fine thing of our well-worn old friend the half close on the dominant via the augmented sixth. This brings back the opening subject, with a richly harmonized extension. The reprise follows the usual course, with Rheinberger as usual avoiding mere mechanical repetition. He invariably manages to add some fresh touch—an unexpected modulation (note how the meno f theme of the opening page begins on page 6 in D, and is suddenly switched into F); a new treatment (the minor subject now opens with a demisemiquaver flourish, is laid out differently, and after two bars is given a throbbing triplet pedal point at the top); or a development instead of repetition (Ex. 3, instead of reappearing, is merely suggested by a new passage in which dotted rhythm is prominent), and so on. We expect the pause on the dominant on page 8 to be followed either by the second subject proper, or by the main theme. But Rheinberger has another surprise for us. He takes the little syncopated figure that appeared twice towards the end of the second page, and dallies pleasantly with it for half a dozen bars. It leads, as before, into the second subject, again treated imitatively, but with free semiquaver parts added—a delightful page of velvety counterpoint. The opening theme is then delivered più lento with a characteristic broad close. The cadence in the third line is of grand simplicity :

Ex. 4.

The registration is little more than a matter of simple variations of power, and, as usual, we must not stick to the composer's marks. Thus, there are about four pages of continuous ff, beginning at line 4 on page 4; a half-dozen points suggest themselves as suitable for a reduction to f and mf. The pastoral passage following the pause on page 8 may well be played on two nicely balanced manuals of different tone-colour, and a reduction to f should be made with the entry of the tenor in bar 1 of page 9, the right-hand chord being shortened from a quaver to a semiquaver. If this is too tricky to be managed neatly, the reduction may be deferred till the treble entry of the subject two bars later. The point is that plenty of power must be reserved for the final page. For a concluding voluntary at a big service in a big building nothing can be better than this truly great movement. It is decidedly difficult as to manual work; the feet, as usual with Rheinberger, have a comfortable time.

The Intermezzo opens with a very simple Beethovenish theme—in fact, it recalls the slow movement of the Fourth (E flat) Pianoforte Sonata :

The dropping leading-note is a favourite Rheinberger trick (see Ex. 1 for another instance). The theme is subjected to very little in the way of development, the bulk of the movement being concerned with two pleasant secondary motives :

The portion marked (b) appears first independently of (a), and the two are mostly used apart. The vigorous ff subject appears to be yet another theme, but it is best regarded as a derivative of (b), and it may well be treated rather more quietly than indicated. This is yet another of the numerous occasions when we feel that Rheinberger's fortissimo is out of place in a slow movement. When such a passage follows a forte, as it does here, the case is best met by merely changing the character of the forte—e.g., a string-toned Swell (box open) contrasted with Great diapason tone. The movement is so straightforward as to call for few words. Though not one of the best of the slow movements, it has a good deal of charm, and with tasteful registration can be made very attractive.

The Pastorale, like its predecessor in Sonata No. 12, is in A, and is in 3-4 instead of the customary 6-8. It will never be so popular as the earlier example, though it has its points. A mordente—written out—is a prominent feature of the main theme :

Ex. 7. Andantino.  $\text{♩} = 76$ .

A charming moment in its first page, for example, is the modulation to F, and the hesitation and pause on a first inversion in that key, followed by a resumption of the main theme in A. The middle section is marked Alternativo, with a direction in German that the repetition is to be played Full organ. It opens in A minor, and modulates freely. There is little in the way of definite thematic importance, the effect being chiefly that of sustained harmonic progressions in the left hand and pedals, with semiquaver figuration overhead. The remainder of the movement consists of a repetition of the opening, with a short Coda.

The Finale appears to be the most frequently played movement of this Sonata. It has an undeniably attractive main theme, suggestive of the Grand Chœur style so effectively used by French composers :

Ex. 8. Con moto.  $\text{♩} = 84$ .

This frank vein is carried on by the theme that follows. In fact, we could not wish for a better blend of the dignified and festive than is given in the opening three pages. A falling-off then shows itself in a weak bridge-passage which introduces the second subject (A flat). There is too little contrast between this and the first subject, both being of the solid chordal type, and mainly in crotchet movement. The quaver pedal does not save the situation, and a further loss of interest is caused by two longish sections in which we do little but hang round the dominant of F minor.

When the opening theme is present the movement is first-rate, but the decline of interest elsewhere is fatal. The end is imposing enough, with a brief quotation from the opening of the Praeludium, followed by yet one more example of the composer's fertility in the matter of effective, though simple, cadences.

We cannot help regretting that Rheinberger did not end this Sonata by trying his hand at the useful French combination of Grand Chœur and fugue forms—A, B, A, the middle section being a compact fughetto. He has done so with fine effect in several of the short pieces—e.g., the Solemn Festival, the Entrata, and in the Finale of the Twelve Characteristic Pieces.

No doubt the comparative failure of this—the last of his organ movements—is due to the ill-health that clouded the composer's last years. His power of invention lasted well, but there is a lack of the concentration that produced such splendid examples of long, well-developed movements as the Toccata, the D flat Phantasie, and the best of the Fugues. Perhaps we have here the explanation of the fact that the last three Sonatas contain no fugue. With most composers, of course, the fugue form would have been the stand-by when other resources were failing. Mere technique would enable them to turn out plenty of examples effective enough, and entirely satisfactory so long as one demands of a fugue no more than mere fugality, so to speak. But, as has already been pointed out, Rheinberger is never more inventive, or more free in mood, than in his Fugues. In fact, one of his claims to a high position among composers is based on his ability to use the strictest forms—canon, fugue, ground-bass—as a medium for original and expressive music. It is the characteristic that distinguishes only the really great men, and none more than Bach and Mozart.

These articles set out to deal with the Sonatas only, but in response to a general request, I add a brief discussion of Rheinberger's short pieces, and of his works for organ with other instruments. The short pieces number nearly a hundred, and are grouped as follows:

Ten Trios (Op. 49);

Twelve Fughettas in Strict Style (Op. 123);

Twelve Characteristic Pieces (Op. 156);

(Preludio; Arioso; Canzonetta; Intermezzo; Visione; Duetto; In Memoriam; Pastorale; Lamento; Riposo; Passacaglia; Marcia Funèbre.)

Twelve Monologues (Op. 162);

Twelve Meditations (Op. 167);

(Entrata; Agitato; Canzonetta; Andantino; Preludio; Aria; Intermezzo; Alla Marcia; Thema variato; Passacaglia; Fugato; Finale.)

Twelve Pieces (Op. 174);

(Romance; Scherzoso; Aspiration; Contemplation; Agitato; Improvisation; Solemn Festival; Duet; Ricercare; Evening Rest; Melodia Ostinata; Finale.)

Ten Trios (Op. 189);

Six Short Pieces;

(Prelude; Intermezzo; Epilogue; Canzonetta; Consolation; Trio.)

Fugue in F minor.

Probably the best known are the Monologues. Apart from Bach's Little Organ Book, I know of no other set of short pieces in which so much is said in so small a space. The average length is a couple of pages, and the degree of difficulty somewhat beyond that of Bach's Eight Short Preludes and Fugues. There is not a weak number. So great is the variety and contrast, that one might with good effect play the dozen as a recital programme, just as pianists play the Twenty-five Preludes of Chopin at a sitting.

The Twelve Fughettas are very little known in England; they will give pleasure to players who enjoy good, compact essays in fugal form. All but a few are on the loud, vigorous side, and all provide excellent material for study, the degree of difficulty being a good stage beyond that of the Monologues. In three cases Rheinberger constructs his theme on composers' names—B A C H, G A D E, and F E S C A. The length averages a couple of pages, and the style is far less severe than is threatened by the Strengen in the title. The pick of these pieces show the composer in excellent form.

Opp. 156, 167, and 174 are rather longer than the Monologues, and generally a good deal more difficult. The attractive titles are well lived up to. Such pieces as Evening Rest, Duetto, Pastorale, and Canzonetta are genuine little idylls. There are three fine ground-bass treatments—In Memoriam, Ostinato, and Passacaglia. Like the sturdy B flat minor example in the Monologues they are worthy satellites of the Passacaglia in the eighth Sonata. The set of variations in Op. 167 is a good example of the composer's excellence as a writer of variations. The Alla Marcia is that rare thing, an original March. A valuable study for playing on black keys and dividing work between the hands is Aspiration. It is a splendid piece of music, too, with the idea of the title expressed by the rising repetitions of the main theme. The figuration is throughout on the pattern of the opening:

Ex. 10. Adagio. ♩ = 95.

Such a number as this is worthy of inclusion in any recital programme by way of quiet relief.

There are some admirable canons, tuneful and expressive, though for neat workmanship none is better than the example in the first set, which opens thus :

Ex. 11. Sanfte Register.
Andante molto.

and continues in the same effortless way for thirty bars. The Fugue in F minor is a lengthy, vigorous work, that appears under Best's editorship in one of Augener's Cecilia volumes.

Solemn Festival opens and closes with imposing breadth, the middle section being an ingenious Canon Fugue that happens also to be fine music. In Op. 156, a particularly fine number is the Preludio—a fiery piece suitable for recital purposes, and a good study for keyboard command and freedom.

The Six Short Pieces return to the Monologue style, with a little less originality; they serve well as studies and voluntaries.

The two sets of Trios differ in length and style. Those in Op. 49 are quite short and fairly easy; the second set are longer, more difficult, and of far more varied interest. Some are of the 'song without words' type, a really beautiful example being No. 11 :

The organist who has the whole of these eighty-nine pieces at his elbow is never at a loss for voluntaries of the very best type. For recital purposes, either singly or in small groups, the collection is no less useful. I mentioned above The Little Organ Book as a kind of analogy to the Monologues. One may go farther, and say that in all the organ repertory the two standing dishes of which one never tires are Bach's Chorale Preludes and the miscellaneous pieces of Rheinberger. This, at all events, is the firm conviction of one who has used both constantly during a fairly long spell as a church organist. And it says much for the Rheinberger collection that, like The Little Organ Book, it inspires the player with intimate feelings towards the composer. There are players who speak of 'Josef' as they do 'John Sebastian.' The use of the Christian name means a good deal.

The use of other instruments with organ is becoming so frequent that inquiries are often made as to works specially written for the purpose. Players who wish to get away from the conventional and often unsatisfactory arrangements of well-known works should examine Rheinberger's essays in this field. There is neither space nor need for critical discussion of them. I will content myself with the single remark that, so far as I have been able to test them, they are well up to the standard we expect from the composer.

Here is a list. Violin and Organ : Rhapsodie, Andante (Op. 127); Suite (Op. 166) (Praeludium, Canzone, Allemande, Moto Perpetuo) (the Moto Perpetuo may also be had separately); Six Pieces (Op. 150) (Theme with Variations, Evening Song, Gigue, Pastorale, Elegy, Overture—all are published separately, and the Evening Song, Pastorale, and Elegy appear also arranged for organ and violoncello). Two Violins and Organ : Duetto (an arrangement of the charming piece of the same name in the Twelve Organ Pieces, Op. 156); Suite (Op. 149). Organ and Wind Instruments : Andante and Pastorale for oboe and organ (Op. 98); Rhapsodie for oboe and organ (Op. 127). Concertos: No. 1 (Op. 137), No. 2 (Op. 177).*

In a very interesting letter in last month's Musical Times Mr. Andrew de Ternant told us that Rheinberger was disappointed that English recognition of his music was almost confined to his Organ Sonatas. There is a reason for this, as Mr. de Ternant showed. No doubt Rheinberger's other music suffers from the fact of its being merely good, with no such aids to popularity as a programme, or a big name on the title-page. The last point is perhaps the most important. There are a fair number of composers whose best work is far superior to a good deal of that produced by the great classical writers. Raff, Henselt, Rheinberger—here are three names that occur at once in this connection. Their music is killed from above and below: it cannot compete with the classics, and it is too good and too difficult to be able to hold its own in the field of the frankly popular. Yet a man of this second class sometimes hits on a medium that brings out qualities of a far higher order than is shown in the rest of his work. Hugo Wolf is a composer of the second grade, yet in the one department of song he ranks with the first-raters. Parry's instrumental music seems destined to early oblivion, but it can hardly be denied that as a composer of songs and choral works he is among the big men. Chopin never approached his best save when writing for pianoforte, and, above all, in the smaller forms. So with Rheinberger. Much of his great output is excellent (there are some particularly charming things among the small pianoforte pieces), but only in his organ music does he reach his full stature. Here his position is next to Bach himself. The claim will seem extravagant to the musician who knows little about the organ repertory. Yet, apart from Beethoven, what composer has written twenty Sonatas for pianoforte or violin of so high a level of excellence as the twenty Rheinberger wrote for the organ? Indeed, we may go farther, and boldly ask if there are twenty out of Beethoven's thirty-two for pianoforte that are superior to these organ works. After all, Rheinberger's twenty include no such immature and feeble works as the Sonatinas in G major and G minor, and the Quasi una Fantasia in E flat, or the Sonata Alla Tedesca of Beethoven. When we add to the twenty Sonatas the eighty-nine short pieces, which also show Rheinberger at his best, we have a mass of fine organ music for which no parallel can be found outside Bach. It is difficult to understand how, twenty years ago, some critics placed Rheinberger second to such a merely competent workman as Merkel, or spoke of him as the most important organ composer after Mendelssohn. Nor, in the long run, is his position likely to be menaced by the only two German rivals—Reger and Karg-Elert. The former, though still a power in Germany, has long since been tried and found wanting elsewhere. Very few of his works remain throughout at a high level; many a magnificent page is followed by a plunge into the depths of dry platitudes. Karg-Elert began splendidly, and his Sixty-six Choral Improvisations and about a dozen other works made us not merely take our hats off; we felt like throwing them up as well. But his later music shows far too much reliance on registration effects and bizarre colouring, both tonal and harmonic. There is more than a touch of megalomania, too, in his laying-out. Nor do I think the French school has produced a serious rival to Rheinberger. A brilliant and vivid school it is, but many of us who were captured by it ten years ago are already finding it wear less well than we expected. It gives dazzling light, but little warmth; and its expressive moments have too often a touch of the macabre.

As material for the student, Rheinberger's organ works are invaluable, chiefly because their difficulties, like those of Bach, cannot be 'faked' or shirked. They have a texture and continuity that admit of no halts for stop-hunting. No organ music depends less on registration, though, as I have tried to show in these articles, much more may—indeed, must—be done than the composer ever indicated. But the fact remains that only two considerable organ composers may be played with satisfaction on a pedal-pianoforte or on an organ of one manual and a few stops—Bach and Rheinberger. Josef shares other likenesses with John Sebastian—he excels as a fugue writer; and his organ music has the true architectural and spacious quality. You may enjoy it on a pedal-pianoforte or in the pianoforte-duet arrangements made by the composer himself. Similarly you can get a lot of pleasure from the like arrangements of a Haydn Symphony or a Mozart Quartet. But in all these cases the style is such that you never forget the original form. The music bears the closest scrutiny qua music, but it delivers its full message only through its real medium. The test is a double-barrelled one, and many estimable works are brought down or winged on one side or the other. Rheinberger comes through with all the honours. Rank him where you will as a composer of pianoforte, chamber, orchestral, and operatic music; in one department he rose so far above the level of these works that he showed himself to be of the stuff that makes the really big men. Opinions may differ as to the nearness of his approach to Bach as an organ composer, but I believe that all who really know the whole of his works for the instrument will place him second only to Bach. And in the matter of organ music a man may be a bad second to Bach, and yet a great composer.

THE END.

THE PRESENT POSITION OF WELSH MUSIC

BY LLEWELYN C. LLOYD

To anyone interested in Welsh music it was gratifying to note that an English musician of Mr. Jeffrey Pulver's standing had seen fit to write the article 'What is Wrong with Welsh Music?' in the March number of the Musical Times, for it shows that at any rate some English musicians take an interest in musical affairs on the other side of the Severn. Mr. Pulver says that his article was the outcome of a visit to South Wales, so perhaps the present writer, as one more constantly in touch with Wales by reason of his residence there, may be permitted to add a few notes to Mr. Pulver's article.

To answer the question 'What is wrong with Welsh music?' is no easy task, and perhaps it is more useful and suggestive to alter the question into: 'What was wrong with Welsh music?' for at present Welsh music is breaking away from the shackles which have bound it for many years. It is in a stage of transition, and shortly we may hope that the Principality will be able confidently to take its place among the musical nations of Europe. In the past the bane of Welsh music has been complacency and self-satisfaction—largely brought about, it must be said, by the sentimental and non-critical enthusiasm of English and foreign musicians. It was not so long ago when any musician in Wales, if questioned as to the state of the art in his country, would complacently quote the saying, 'Môr o gân yw Cymru i gyd' (The whole of Wales is a sea of song), and leave it at that. But that phase is passing, and that attitude of mind is dying—slowly, perhaps, but dying all the same. To-day Welshmen are not so certain that they are divinely endowed with the gift of song, and they recognise that education is as necessary in music as it is in any other art.

* Concerto No. 1 is scored for organ, strings, and three horns; No. 2 for organ, strings, two horns, two trumpets, and two drums.

Mr. Pulver says some good things about choral singing in Wales—things which need saying. It is, indeed, only too true that a great fault of Welsh choirs is that Celtic emotionalism has a habit of getting the better of intonation—in other words, the choirs have a 'tendency to scream.' Anyone who has attended Eisteddfodau knows this, but it is a difficult disease to cure, for emotion is a fine thing in music, and we do not want to kill it in correcting the fault engendered by its abundance. The only remedy is probably more musical education, for with education will come restraint.

On the matter of sight-reading one can readily agree with Mr. Pulver. The shortage of sight-readers is one of the greatest difficulties with which the Welsh choral conductor is faced. The remedy here is obvious—education, again.

But when Mr. Pulver talks about 'the lack of interest in instrumental music in Wales,' we cannot agree with him. For long, apathy in instrumental music was a justifiable reproach to level at Wales, but no longer is it so. All over the country are amateur orchestras, and orchestral music is listened to with obvious delight and deep appreciation. When recently the L.S.O. visited Cardiff it was given a splendid reception. Orchestral music finds a prominent place in the National Eisteddfod year by year; and, finally, Sir Walford Davies is busily engaged on his splendid scheme for a Welsh National Orchestra, to include amateur and professional players from all parts of the land. Bearing these points in mind, it must be admitted that Wales's lack of interest in instrumental music is a hoary fallacy which has been exploded. That it has been exploded is largely due to Sir Walford Davies, who, by means of lectures, recitals, the gramophone, and his chamber music combinations, has aroused an interest in instrumental performances which delights all Welsh lovers of fine music.

Welsh music proper—as distinguished from music in Wales—is in an interesting position at the present time. Two schools of musicians are at war as to which shall have the honour of rescuing Wales from the slough of despond into which she had fallen. On the one hand is the school of perfervid nationalists, enthusiastically led by Mr. W. S. Gwynn Williams and Mr. Leigh Henry. On the other is the school of Sir Walford Davies, which holds that Wales must learn to love and appreciate the masters of other lands before she produces a national music of her own.

The case for the nationalists has been ably put by Mr. Gwynn Williams, and I may be permitted to quote from one of his articles:

The masterpieces of the German classical composers are great masterpieces, everyone will admit, but they are masterpieces of expression of German classical mentality in music, and can never be set as a sound and natural basis of a Welsh school of musical composition.

And again:

The way of a Welsh composer is not easy. He can put up no ready-made musical system and say to the world, 'This is an example of the beautiful music I am trying to write.' He can only strive to call back the half-forgotten melodies and harmonies of his ancestors, and say, 'This is the basis upon which I am attempting to build a modern Welsh musical system that will express something of myself and the land that gave me birth.'*

The attitude of the other school may be exemplified by an extract from the reply to the article quoted above by Mr. Iorwerth C. Peate:

... from what can be judged, this 'nationalist' school of Welsh music does not desire the study of the works of foreign composers. Welsh music must be starved on 'half-forgotten Welsh folk-songs,' which, though admirable enough per se, are poor fare for a hefty youngster in the musical world. ... Humanity progresses through the impact of new ideas upon old. 'All isolated territories,' states Hilaire Belloc, 'when cut off, wither.' But no! say the protagonists of the 'nationalists,' this tradition of 'half-forgotten folk-songs,' and this tradition alone will I develop. I will not join in the common chorus of civilised humanity, but I will sing my own tune in my own way.

The nationalists are all for a distinctly national type and style, and their slogan is 'Back to folk-song.' Their attitude is easy to appreciate. One of the greatest national treasures of any country is its store of folk-song, and Wales has a store as rich as that of any other country in the world. Every year new folk-melodies are being discovered by the diligent workers of the Welsh Folk-Song Society, and they should prove a fruitful source of inspiration for Wales's 'national' composer when he comes along. But that day is not yet, say the other school. Sing your lovely old folk-songs, but at the same time do not forget that you may learn much from Bach, Mozart, Beethoven, and the rest of the glorious company of music's masters.

Both these schools have the germ of the matter with them, but it would be better for Wales if they would forego their wrangling and work together for the common good of the country. Then, undoubtedly, Wales's day in the world of music would dawn the sooner.

In the midst of all the quarrelling, however, are being laid the foundations of a Welsh school of musical composition. And perhaps the most interesting figure is Dr. D. Vaughan Thomas, of Swansea, a cultivated musician who has, more surely than any other Welsh composer, striven to express the soul of Wales in music. As yet he writes in the smaller forms, but those are, perhaps, more in accordance with Welsh tradition. His settings of Welsh 'cywyddau'—a particular form of Welsh verse used by Wales's greatest poet, Dafydd ap Gwilym—are notably admirable, as also are certain others of his songs, for instance the setting of Ceiriog's Nant y Mynydd.

Another Welsh composer who has lately come prominently to notice is Dr. David de Lloyd, an associate of Sir Walford Davies at Aberystwyth, who has written an opera, Gwenllian, to a Welsh libretto. This work has been very favourably noticed, and one critic refers to it as containing 'the greatest music yet written by a Welshman.'

* Western Mail, June 18, 1923.

Mr. Cyril Jenkins is known principally for his orchestral work, The Magic Cauldron, his cantata, Freedom, some part-songs, and more lately his Ode to the West Wind, for chorus and orchestra. So far he has not written much really Welsh music, but in his later works he shows a more individual style.

Other composers active in Wales are E. T. Davies, who writes songs and part-songs in a modern idiom; W. S. Gwynn Williams, the composer of numerous songs; Sir Walford Davies himself, who, of course, has a reputation far outside Wales; T. Hopkin Evans, Leigh Henry, Dr. David Evans, Dr. Roland Rogers, Dr. Caradog Roberts, and a host of others. One name which must not be omitted is that of Morfydd Owen, a woman of undoubted genius, who was lost to Wales when she died in the early twenties, leaving behind her a mere handful of songs which show her to have been endowed with a rare individuality and a musical genius of no common order.

Surely from out of all this musical activity will come music to vindicate Wales's reputation in the world of music?

PERSONALITY AND THE ARTIST

By L. N. HIGGINS

Amidst the hundreds of recitals given by solo artists, and amidst the almost equal number of criticisms which automatically follow these performances, it would seem a good thing if, now and then, we paused to consider what it is that really constitutes a great artist.

The musical critics, of course, spend the greater part of their lives in considering this question in its individual application, but it is very much open to question what their criterion is—or even if they have any at all. It is highly probable that the musical critic attends so many recitals with a view to criticism, and is so continually under the immediate obligation of pronouncing upon each individual performance, that he finds little or no time for the more abstract contemplation of what the ideal in an artist is. Judging from the number of careless, slap-dash criticisms that make their appearance in the columns of the daily and Sunday papers, we are almost led to suppose that the average critic has nothing whatever to say on the matter at all, and so contents himself and his readers with writing down a few off-hand and superficial remarks with a view to being cutting, or even humorous, at the artist's expense.

But amongst the ordinary concert-goers there is so much discussion as to the comparative merits of great artists, and so much difference of opinion even in regard to the greatest, that we are apt to shrug our shoulders over the whole question and decide that it is all simply a matter of personal opinion and taste.

This would certainly seem to be a plausible way of settling the matter. If Mr. Percy Scholes writes that Miss ——'s Chopin recital was really rather a poor show, does this simply mean that Mr. Scholes is speaking only for himself? Should he have started his sentence with the words 'I think' or 'It struck me personally'? Obviously, if that is the case, he and all the rest of the critics had better give it up at once; there would cease to be such a thing as criticism. Unless criticism means the referring to some exterior criterion—i.e., to something other than the personal tastes of the critic—it ceases to be criticism at all. Why, even if it were all a matter of opinion, should one man's opinion be more worth having than another man's?—or than one's own? All the evidence points in the other direction. We value one man's opinion more than another's because we feel that he is more likely to be 'right,' and directly we say that we have placed the matter on an idealistic basis.

The primary question is, of course, as old as the hills. All I am asking now is whether, in this matter of criticism, we are to be idealists, in the Platonic sense, or not. Is there any absolute and universal standard by which we can judge an artist, and, if so, how are we to know what it is?

The second question, to which I am leading up, is concerned with this matter of 'personality.' We frequently hear such a remark as this: 'Of course, her actual voice is nothing to rave about, but she is such a perfect artist'; or, 'It is not her voice that strikes one so much as her personality.' Or it is sometimes heard in this form: 'His technique is marvellous, but he has no soul.'

I am not charging the critics with the use of these phrases, but they are all used frequently by the average concert-goer and the amateur critic, and it makes us ask what these people are really out for when they go to a recital. Do they want to hear music, or do they simply want to watch someone performing on an instrument or the vocal organ?

It is easy to be bitter on the subject of the tyranny of the soloist, such as we get at the 'Proms.' Half the audience at least have come to hear or see the soloist, and they shriek the house down, however poor his or her performance may be. But that is neither here nor there. This question of personality came to the front in connection with Kreisler and Heifetz. Many people said that Heifetz was more brilliant than Kreisler, only that he was not such a great artist. What did such people mean by an artist? Or they said that Heifetz had the finer technique, only Kreisler was the greater artist, because 'You felt the whole personality of the man come out in his playing.' But is it a desirable thing that a man's whole personality should come out in his playing? We have only got to assume that an artist has a very undesirable personality, and we should very soon find ourselves saying that the artist with the desirable personality is a great artist because he expresses himself in his playing, and an artist with an undesirable personality is a great artist because he suppresses himself in his playing. This of course is hopelessly untenable—it cannot even be passed off as a paradox. If a man is called a great artist just because he has a great personality, he is not really being called a great artist at all; he is only being called a great personality.

Naturally, the answer to the question of the artist lies in the music he is playing; the perfect artist is surely he who interprets the music most perfectly and brings out its full significance. But there are others who seem to look at it the other way round, and hold that the song exists for the singer, the prelude for the pianist, and not the singer (qua singer) for the song. That is the crux.

At the end of this somewhat rambling article I have two suggestions to make—one of a practical, the other of a theoretical nature. The first is that we, the concert-going public—and perhaps also the critics—would find it easier to give a really genuine criticism of an artist if the latter were concealed from the view of the audience. We should then have nothing to go by except what we actually heard. We should cease to be ensnared by the 'great personality,' or the fascinating mannerism, or the beautiful style. We should simply go to hear music and nothing else.

My second suggestion refers to, at least, one thing that constitutes a great artist. It is a test which I always apply myself, and generally it is responsive, viz., Is the artist playing or singing to the audience, or is he playing for the love of the thing? (I am leaving out the commercial side of the question.) Of course he must to a certain extent be playing to the audience in any case, otherwise he would not be up on the platform; but, spiritually speaking, is he performing at the audience to the glory of himself, or is he playing for its own sake—or, if you like, ad gloriam Dei? I will give one concrete example of what I mean. What is it that makes the Russian dancers so immeasurably greater than any English dancers? Simply this, I think. That we feel that the Russians would go on dancing just as beautifully if there were no one there to watch them. The English are too self-conscious to produce many great artists. They would hate it so if the audience could not see them. But that is the way to sift them out—the tares from the wheat.

PURCELL'S CHURCH MUSIC

BY H. D. STATHAM

Purcell wrote more than a hundred compositions for the Church, including three Services—in B flat, G minor (evening only), and D major—the big Te Deum, and Jubilate. Of all his Church compositions about a fifth only are published in octavo editions, and are thus made available for performance. The rest are to be found in Vincent Novello's folio edition, and are in course of being published in the Purcell Society edition. At present all the Services and twenty-four of the big anthems, many with orchestral accompaniment, have appeared in the latter edition. This edition, of course, is the authoritative one: it would, therefore, be a great boon to Church choirs if the editors would follow the example of the Tudor music editors by publishing octavo editions of some of the Church music appearing in their official edition. All the anthems so far published in this edition are within the capabilities of a first-class Church choir, and it seems a pity that they cannot be heard. Moreover, these big anthems are very well suited to the needs of an amateur choral and orchestral society. If copies and band parts were available they would be performed in church, and would be a welcome change from the staple fare of such societies when giving a Church performance; that is to say, extracts from the Mendelssohn and Handel oratorios, Brahms's Requiem, and works by Spohr, Gounod, and other foreign composers.

But even those anthems and Services which are published in octavo editions are very much neglected. It is the purpose of these articles to try to find whether there is any justification for this neglect, or, better, to try to prove that there is no justification for it, and to offer, in doing so, a few practical suggestions as to the performance of the music.

One of the impressions that people have about Purcell's Church music is that much of it is dull: that the Services, and many of the anthems, consist mostly of wearisome verses for three voices (in the best cathedral style), which are only rather dreary exercises in counterpoint. Much of this supposed dullness comes from a misunderstanding of the music. It often looks dull because the minim is used as the beat-unit where the crotchet would be used to-day. The Service in B flat is very dull if it is sung Moderato maestoso in an a cappella style: but practical experiment (and whatever is put forward in these articles is the result of practical experiment with a choir making a study of Purcell's Church music) shows that it ceases to be dull if taken considerably faster and transposed up a tone. The Service will stand being taken at  $\text{♩} = 100$  at least, and there is some justification for transposing it up by reason of the compass of the alto part, which ranges from:

though the transposition does take the tenor rather high. Some may think this treatment very arbitrary, but the fact remains that when this Service is sung Moderato in the a cappella manner, with numerous rallentandi, it is quite intolerably tedious; when it is sung as suggested it becomes a ringing and joyous thing, and passages such as the following from the Benedictus come out with a new lilt and beauty:

Ex. 1 (transposed version).

Parts of this Service taken at this speed require, however, very careful singing and word accentuation if they are not to sound 'clattery.'

But if this Service gains by being taken rather fast, the Service in G minor gains even more. The Purcell Society marks it Moderato; but it should be a one-in-the-bar Moderato rather than a three-in-the-bar Moderato. When the Service is sung with long phrasing and at the right speed, there is a dewy freshness about the opening phrase which is delightful:

Ex. 2.

(The time has been altered here; it is really three minims in the bar.) The verses also, at this speed, instead of being rather stodgy pieces of three-part harmony, come out as long, sweeping tunes. The whole Service will bear being taken at this speed provided long phrasing is used. The only exception is the verse canon in the second Gloria, where there are two minims in the bar; this must be taken much slower than the rest of the Service, perhaps at half the pace. The original pace is resumed when the triple time reappears. The concluding Amen section, which at a slow pace is heavy and monotonous, becomes at the faster pace a very delicate piece of writing, especially if it is sung mezza voce :

Ex. 3

There is a point of interest in the quaint little phrase in the treble part :

Ex. 4.

Sung at a slow pace, as it must be if the quavers are to sound as distinct notes, it seems somewhat pointless; sung fast, it becomes a sort of bird-like chirrup in which the quavers are slurred over without being sounded as separate notes :

Is this what Purcell intended it to be? Almost certainly I think it is. This slurring over a few rapid notes was a feature of the vocal technique of the 16th and 17th centuries. The Editors of the Tudor Music Byrd volume draw attention to the use of portamenti in some passages, and there are many places, particularly in Gibbons's music, where a portamento has to be used unless so slow a time is adopted as to make the music practically meaningless.

An instance occurs in the treble part of the Service in F at the words 'servant Israel' :

Ex. 6.

and the same composer's anthem Glorious and all-powerful God provides frequent examples of portamenti, e.g. :

An even more illuminating example can be found in the first song of Blow's collection called Amphion Anglicus. The composer gives a speed indication—'Brisk' :

If the composer's direction is followed, and this is sung briskly, the second 'welcome' can be given only as a little jovial, upward scoop. There is a similar treatment of the voice in Purcell's anthem, Be merciful unto me, O God, where the bass sings :

Ex. 9.

In Vincent Novello's edition of the anthem this passage is marked  $\text{♩} = 42$ ; and it is most probable that he marked it at this very slow pace solely on account of that one word 'troubling.' Once realise that these notes are not meant to be sung as written, but as an upward portamento, and the whole verse in which the phrase occurs can be taken at its proper speed, something like  $\text{♩} = 80$ . This generous treatment of the voice, this way of throwing it about, no longer exists: but unless it is realised that it was part of the equipment of singers in Elizabethan and Restoration times, some at least of the music of those times becomes unsingable or meaningless. To sing the rather rollicking Purcell example just quoted at  $\text{♩} = 42$  reduces it to absurdity. Two more examples are worth quoting from this anthem :

Ex. 10.

The rhythm  $\text{♩} \cdot$  on the word 'down' should be treated as an acciaccatura with a strong accent on the first note, and the three notes on 'cast' as an upward portamento. This is really splendid, fiery music. We feel at the end of it that there can be no possible doubt that they are going to be cast down and by no means gently. To try to trim it down, and to make it into solemn and respectable Cathedral music by taking it at a snail's pace, in order that every note shall be heard exactly as it is written, is to ruin it.

(To be continued.)

NEW LIGHT ON EARLY TUDOR COMPOSERS

By W. H. GRATTAN FLOOD

XXXI.—EDWARD HIGGINS

Although it is known that Edward Higgins composed some Masses and Motets in the first quarter of the 16th century, yet none of his works have come down to us. However, he deserves inclusion in the present series of articles as the writer of the magnificent full-choir book now in Caius College, Cambridge, known as the Gonville and Caius College MS. 667—a really splendid parchment measuring 28-in. by 20-in. At the end of the MS. is written, 'Ex dono et opere Eduardi Higgins hujus ecclesie Canonici.'

Strange to say, none of our musical historians could find any clue to the biography of this musical

Canon, but Mr. Henry Davey surmises that the Caius MS. was written 'circa 1510-20.' The Right Rev. Dr. Frere is of opinion that the handwriting of this MS. is the same as that of the famous Lambeth MS., but other experts are not of the same way of thinking. In fact, the tradition of Lambeth is that the MS. came from St. Alban's Abbey, and that the scribe was none other than Dr. Fayrfax himself, whose exercise for his Mus. Doc. is included therein.

Fortunately, my researches have resulted in a goodly number of entries from official sources relating to Higgins, who, as will be seen, was not only a musician, but also a D.C.L. of Oxford, and a Canon of St. Stephen's Chapel Royal, Westminster, and of Lincoln.

Edward Higgins—whose family came from Exeter—was born about the year 1489, and graduated B.C.L. of Oxford, in 1507, proceeding to D.C.L. on February 3, 1511. On August 1, 1511, he was presented to the Church of Lanteglos-juxta-Stratton (Cornwall), void by the death of Thomas Moreton (Patent Rolls 3 Henry VIII., p. 1, m. 8). Seven months later (March 9, 1512) he was admitted a Master in Chancery, void by the death of Thomas Cowley. In the letters of admission, directed to the Archbishop of Canterbury, he is described as 'clerk and Councillor.'

On June 7, 1513, Master Edward Higgins, 'King's chaplain' (who had accompanied King Henry VIII. to Terouenne and Tournai), was granted the Deanery of Shrewsbury, vice Master Adam Grafton, resigned, 'a pension of six marks being reserved for the said Adam out of the issues of the Deanery' (Patent Rolls 5 Henry VIII., p. 2, m. 15). He resigned this Deanery, on May 11, 1517, on his appointment to the Rectory of the Church of Meifod, in the diocese of St. Asaph, but he resigned this benefice in July, 1518, on being appointed to a Canonry of St. Stephen's (Chapel Royal), Westminster, on an exchange of benefices with John Vesey, Dean of the Chapel Royal.

If I may be permitted a conjecture as to the date of the famous Caius MS. 667, I would venture to say that Dr. Higgins wrote it between the years 1519 and 1525. In regard to his preferments, it is certain that on July 6, 1522, he was granted the Prebend of St. Stephen's, void by exchange with the celebrated Thomas Linacre, M.D., who had been granted it four months previously. The then Master of the Choristers was Richard Pigot (vide No. VI. of this series of articles, March, 1920), while the Dean was John Chambre, M.D., a good musical amateur. Another of his co-Canons was John Stokesley, subsequently Bishop of London.

Further preferment awaited Higgins, who, in 1530, was appointed Master of Arundel Collegiate Church, Sussex. On September 3, 1535, he was appointed a Canon of Lincoln, as appears from the Valor Ecclesiasticus. These two appointments he held till his death, which occurred two years later, on January 6, 1538.

An old friend has suggested to me that the Caius MS., written by Higgins, was for Lincoln Cathedral, but inasmuch as his appointment to that preferment was not till 1535, such a suggestion must be ruled out, as the MS. is almost certainly from about the year 1523 or 1524.

It may be well to give a brief summary of the contents of the Caius MS. 667, which, in truth, was a princely gift, apart from the labour of transcription. In all there are ten Masses and five Magnificats. Dr. Fayrfax is represented by five Masses, viz., O bone Jesu, Regali, O quam glorifice, Tecum principium, and Albanus; Nicholas Ludford by four, Cristi virgo, Videte miraculum, Benedicta, and Lapidaverunt; William Pasche by one, Criste resurgens. The five Magnificats are by Fayrfax, Cornish, Ludford, Turges, and Trentes. Above all, this MS. is in almost perfect condition, and, fortunately, the missing leaves can be supplied from the Lambeth MS.

In conclusion, may I express the hope that the Carnegie United Kingdom Trust may give us some day a transcript of both the Lambeth MS. and the Caius MS.

Occasional Notes

In our correspondence columns appears an appeal on behalf of the Federation of Musical Competition Festivals. There is perhaps no need to commend it to the readers of such a journal as this. Few musicians can be unaware of the developments of the Festival movement, and surely none can deny its immense power for good. There is to-day no other combination of artistic and social activity that touches so many people of all types and classes. Our concern here, however, is with the musical side, and we can testify from first-hand knowledge as to the marvellous influence for good effected by the Festivals. Not the least important point is that, unlike most musical activities, the movement caters for the smallest centres of population, as well as for the largest. Indeed, it may reasonably be claimed that the smaller Festivals, attended by choirs from villages of a few hundred inhabitants, are the most important of all, because they start and maintain choral and other activities in remote places where otherwise there would be no corporate musical life. We hope the Federation will receive the financial help for which it asks, and we can imagine no more fitting way of giving such help than through membership. Large donations and subsidies have the drawback of being dependent upon a few people, and are no guarantee of public interest. The latter is a factor of immense importance. The Federation is engaged in public work of the greatest value, and the most suitable form of support would be that from the musical public—which in this case is practically the general public. Millionaires and Trusts are accustomed to hold back until they see how far an appeal is based on wide public demand. We suggest to our readers, therefore, that they should back up the appeal by promptly joining the Federation. If the rich donors weigh in later, so much the better; but if ever there was a cause with claims on the rank and file, this is one, and the rank and file should start the response.

We are glad to hear that Mr. Gerrard Williams's light opera Kate, which was withdrawn after a short run, is likely to be revived with its weak side—the libretto—strengthened. Rarely do critics agree so thoroughly as they did concerning the excellence of the music of Kate, and its permanent withdrawal would be a bad set-back to the development of a type of opera that appears to be suitable to British taste and temperament. The success of the Beggar's Opera on the one hand, and the Gilbert and Sullivan series on the other, seems to indicate a line that composers and writers would do well to follow up. But apparently we have more composers than writers equal to the task. No amount of musical charm will suffice if the 'book' be weak, as is proved by the fate of Kate. The odd thing is that all the people concerned in its production appear to have been unaware of the feebleness of the libretto. Why are such not unimportant discoveries left for the audience to make? We hope Kate will soon turn up again, with a text worthy of Mr. Gerrard Williams's delightful score.

The East Anglian Association of Musical Societies is known to be a useful and enterprising body. It is now working on behalf of the musical community at large by tackling one of its universal grievances, the Entertainment Tax. We have received a copy of a resolution adopted by the Association at its last meeting, to the following effect:

This Association desires to express its regret that the concessions made as from the date of the passing of the last Finance Act in regard to the exemption of certain entertainments from the Entertainments Tax do not include performances by musical societies which are not conducted for profit. In view of the great educational work which is being accomplished, this Association calls upon H.M. Government to place musical societies at least on the same footing as horticultural and live-stock shows, arts craftsmanship exhibitions, &c.

The Association calls for active support in drawing the attention of Parliament to the burden which the tax places upon non-commercial art. We understand that sympathetic replies have been received from the members who have been approached. The suggestion made by the Association is that musical societies all over the land should bring their claims before local members at once, in order that the reality of the grievance may be generally recognised, should it come before the House.

The operatic controversy, which was widely imagined to be a case of Viennese opera v. B.N.O.C., is settled in favour of neither party. The Covent Garden Syndicate retains its own opera-house for its own opera season. Italian and German artists will hold possession as if the 'grand' tradition had never been interrupted, and Society will no doubt flock to the doors of Covent Garden as in the old days. The season will last from May 5 to July 26. Salome, Die Rosenkavalier, Ariadne auf Naxos, and two cycles of Der Ring des Nibelungen will be given under Herren Bruno Walter and Carl Oscar Alwin. The rest of the season will be Italian, with five of Verdi's operas, five of Puccini's, Lucia di Lammermoor, I Pagliacci, I Gioielli del Madonna, and—one little concession to the Mozart-lovers—Don Giovanni.

The appointment of Mr. Frederic Austin to the musical directorship of the B.N.O.C., in succession to Mr. Percy Pitt, has given wide satisfaction. Mr. Austin is a fine singer, composer, and conductor, and if (as is reported) he is given a bigger voice than his predecessor in the matter of production, a long overdue improvement in this respect may be looked for. Perhaps his appointment signifies a move of the B.N.O.C. in the direction of light opera. Such a move would probably be good policy. We hope the Company will make it, and that it will find another Beggar's Opera.

The retirement of Sir Richard Terry from the post of musical director at Westminster Cathedral brings to a close a period so important in the history of both English music and Church music that it may without exaggeration be called an epoch. Sir Richard was appointed to the Cathedral twenty-three years ago, and in a short time he had made the spot a Mecca for all who had ears for the finest Church music ever written. He had already done much preparatory work at Downside Abbey in performing old polyphonic works that had for centuries been lost to sight—at all events, to hearing. Armed with the practical experience thus gained, he was able to make Westminster Cathedral a kind of world-centre for music of this type. It was a happy event for the revival of Tudor and Elizabethan works, for although the rescued music would have been printed, without Terry and Westminster very little of it would have been sung. Sir Richard's retirement is not to leisure, but to further research among old English music. He will also edit the Musical News and Herald.

Appropriately, overseas visitors to Wembley are to have special opportunities of hearing performances by their fellow-countrymen. By arrangement with the Exhibition authorities, and under the direct support and patronage of the High Commissioners concerned, the Imperial Concert Agency (Empire House, Piccadilly) are organizing a series of concerts to be given in the Conference Hall at the Exhibition by musicians representing the various Dominions. One of the most important of these events will be the Union Day Concert by South African artists, which is to take place on Union Day, May 31.

From a concert programme:

It was a Lover and his loss.

Presumably the same old loss—the girl he left behind him.

Music in the Foreign Press

GREEK INSTRUMENTAL NOTATION

In the Zeitschrift für Musikwissenschaft (March), Curt Sachs writes:

The instrumental notation of the Greeks is deciphered, but not yet understood. The letter is known, but not the spirit. It stands to reason that whenever a nation has two kinds of notation, one for vocal music and one for instrumental, we may take it that the former represents notes, and the latter represents modes of attack. We cannot understand Greek instrumental notation if we do not know the kithara and lyre, and, conversely, knowledge of these instruments is impossible if we do not understand the corresponding notation.

Proceeding in accordance with this principle, the writer shows that most investigators have taken far too much for granted as regards the tuning of these instruments. Texts and their translations are discussed. When we are shown Reinach converting a passage from Plutarch that says, 'Phrynis, with five strings, produces twelve different harmonies (i.e., in octaves),' into this, 'Phrynis, within eleven strings, introduced four different octaves,' we learn to beware of systematisations. Curt Sachs's analyses and reasoning are clear, and appear sound. His conclusion is :

In old Greece, not only did the chief musical instruments and the notation used for instrumental music originate on the pentatonic principle, but music remained essentially pentatonic until the collapse of the old world.

THE 'MALBROUCK' SONG

In the same issue, Max Friedländer retraces very thoroughly the evolution, wanderings, and family ties of this famous tune. Among the composers who have used the tune—'consciously or unconsciously'—the following are named: Beethoven, Weber, Albrechtsberger, Schumann, Berlioz, Déléibes, Bizet, and Leoncavallo. The distribution ranges from France to Russia, from Germany to Palestine, from Britain to Canada, and from Spain to Chili.

MORE ABOUT SATIE

Part of the March issue of the Revue Musicale is devoted to Satie. An article by Charles Kœchlin calls for special notice, because it constitutes the first convincing piece of praise written of late on this much-discussed composer. Kœchlin is a firm believer in the musical quality of Satie's humour as apart from his verbal humour. On Socrate he writes :

This, I think, is Satie's greatest work. I do not wonder that many people do not like it much, for it is altogether new and original. Satie has made Socrates talk as Socrates might have wished it done, with no attempt towards rhetoric and hardly any towards expression. The sensitiveness is there, but unobtrusive, almost hidden, and accordingly more intense. There exist to my knowledge few works that are so genuinely Greek. Clear-cut, simple, thoughtful, serene, the music constitutes a synthesis of the hellenism of Socrates.

Excerpts from a lecture by Cocteau provide, among other things, the information that Satie's mother was English, and that the composer's full name is Erik Leslie Satie. Cocteau tells the following story :

Debussy told me that Satie once said : 'The orchestra should not attitudinise whenever a character appears on the stage. Do the trees around him attitudinise? What is needed is a musical background, a musical climate . . . no couplets nor leit-motives, but an atmosphere à la Puits de Chavannes.' . . . Debussy asked what Satie was planning, and Satie said : 'I am thinking of setting to music Maeterlinck's Princesse Maleine, but I do not know how to get the author's permission.' A few days later Debussy, having procured permission from Maeterlinck, started writing Pelléas et Mélisande.

GASPARD LE ROUX

In the same issue, André Tessier considers the music of this forgotten composer, first 'rediscovered,' so to speak, by J. Ecorcheville :

Little is known of Le Roux's life, except that he must have been acquainted with Lorenzani (who left Paris in 1694), and that he is mentioned in certain documents bearing the dates of 1690, 1692, and 1695. His book of clavichord pieces appeared in 1705. His music is closely related to that of Chambonnières and Le Bégue, but contains features that belong to the clavichord music of the 18th century rather than to that of the 17th. The melody is often lyrical in character, free in pattern, and well sustained.

DOM POTHIER

In Les Tablettes de la Schola (January), Amédée Gastoué outlines the biography of Dom Pothier (1835-1923), and describes the important part played by him in the restoration of Gregorian chant.

Dom Pothier's work began in the early 'sixties, and by 1868 the preliminary labour was ended, and the principle of the restoration discovered. His first book, the famous Mémoire des Mélodies Grégoriennes, appeared in 1880 only. In 1888 the Paléographie Musicale was founded with Dom Mocquereau's co-operation. From 1892 to 1914, Dom Pothier published and edited the Revue du Chant Grégorien. One of Pius X.'s first acts was to appoint him President of the Special Gregorian Pontifical Commission ; and in 1904 the Pope entrusted him with the editorship of the Editio Vaticana. It is with his work that the modern reform in old Church music started ; it is his principles that were followed throughout.

A NEW ITALIAN PERIODICAL

The first (February) number of La Prora, the monthly organ of the newly-founded Corporazione delle Nuove Musiche (which is headed by d'Annunzio, Casella, and Pizzetti), begins with the following declaration of principles :

This periodical will probably be described as a 'vanguard' organ. If the epithet is applicable to all that is experimental, then we sincerely hope that it does not apply to us. Indeed, certain extremists will perhaps consider us as conservative, because we do not intend to grope blindfold towards the future. Our object is to create in Italy a new musical consciousness founded on a strong and widespread musical culture, and to co-operate in the formation of a new Italian musical style which will reflect all the idiosyncrasies of our race.

The issue contains a thoughtful article by Casella on polytonality and atonality. The writer admits both as legitimate and aesthetically acceptable, but believes that the future holds more in store for polytonality than for atonality—the latter being less direct an extension of musical tradition.

NAPOLEON IN OPERA

In the February Revue Musicale, Z. Iachimeki describes an opera in which Napoleon plays a part, and another in which he is extolled in allegorical fashion.

The first, in one Act, is entitled Zélis et Valcour, ou Bonaparte au Caire, the words and the music by Prince Michel Cléophas Oginski. The subject is the usual love intrigue, Bonaparte appearing to play the part of Deus ex machina, and the work ending with his apotheosis. It was written in 1798-99, but was never performed nor published.

The second, Andromède, words by Osinski, music by Joseph Elsen, was written to celebrate Napoleon's victory over Poland's enemies. It was produced at Warsaw in 1807.

AN INTERESTING MISCELLANY

The same issue contains a wealth of information on various topics. Philippe Stern describes and discusses dances of Java, Cochín-China, and India. The article is usefully illustrated with sketches by Maurice Garnier. G. Radiciotti contributes particulars of Rossini's visit to London (1823-24). An obituary of Tomas Breton, by Paul Guinand, gives useful particulars of his career, and appreciates the part he played in the renaissance of Spanish music.

EXTIRPATING UNWORTHY CRITICS

In the Nouvelle Revue Musicale (February), Léon Vallas writes :

Many newspapers entrust their music column to nobodies of nowhere, and some seem to go out of their way to choose the most unsuitable among candidates. Why do not all artists who suffer from the ignorance or malevolence of unworthy critics join forces and create an organization in order to protect both themselves and the corporation of critics from the evils wrought by incapable or dishonest journalists?

THE MELODIC LINE IN BEETHOVEN'S FIFTH SYMPHONY

The 'Fate knocking at the door' type of comment dies hard ; but surely certain writers will succeed in riding their hobby to death. In the February Zeitschrift für Musik, Dr. Georg Göhler writes, among other things :

Fate does not knock : it strikes man to the ground. Whenever the panting victim struggles to arise (e.g., bars 33-43) he is ruthlessly thrown down again (bars 44-56). The second theme, with its two downward fifths, outbids the first. Thus does Fate grind its heel on man's neck and press it hard on the ground (the long-sustained, deep B flat), while man begs for mercy :

unmeaning meandering of the clarinet, with an effect which was ludicrous. It might be thought that such an experience as this must be confined to the distant past. But I don't know! Not long since I heard a Haydn Symphony played without a single oboe. I am inclined to think that many conductors of small choral societies and incomplete orchestras either do not take the trouble to study the full score, or are unable, from want of sufficient experience, to estimate the relative importance of the parts which it contains.

Unless the incomplete orchestra is quite unworthy of its name (in which case it had better never come together), the presence of a pianoforte is undesirable. With the exception of the harp, there is no orchestral instrument for which the pianoforte can act as deputy. A good harmonium (not an American organ) would form a more useful background to the picture. But even this is quite superfluous, provided that each member of the orchestra is competent for the business in hand. For an average chorus of any number up to fifty, or possibly sixty, the smallest number of instrumentalists that can be regarded as in any way adequate is twelve.

In my opinion, the best composition for a band of twelve is two violins, two second violins, viola, violoncello, double-bass, flute, oboe, clarinet, horn, and bassoon. This is assuming that the work to be performed is scored for the usual full orchestra, but of course some peculiarity in the score may very possibly require a slight modification of the above list—e.g., in Mendelssohn's Hear My Prayer there are no flutes, and kettle-drums may therefore be included. But such cases are unusual. For an immense majority of works a band of twelve is best constituted as above—seven stringed and five wind instruments.

But it will be worse than useless to place the orchestral parts before these five wind instruments with instructions to play first oboe, first clarinet, first bassoon, and so on. Such a course can only result in disaster. Neither will it be sufficient to mark the parts, showing where to play first and where to play second. There are performers who cannot always be trusted to do as they are told, especially if they have reason to believe that the conductor is not a man of much experience in such matters. The temptation to play a pretty little bit of melody rather than a sustained note or something that appears to be of secondary importance, may be too great to be resisted. Besides, there are the parts for trumpets and trombones, not to mention less frequently used instruments, which are often much too important to be altogether omitted. There may also be an occasional division of the violas or violoncellos, requiring the assistance of one or other of the wind. The parts for the oboe, clarinet, horn, and bassoon must be written out in full—of course with as little alteration as possible, but at the same time taking care to omit nothing that is essential to the harmony. Any man who is competent to conduct such an orchestra as we are contemplating should be able to re-arrange these four parts with the minimum amount of injury to the design of the composer. In the case of copyright works, consent must necessarily be first obtained; but owners of copyright will generally be found willing to grant the required permission. As regards the flute, it will seldom, if ever, be found desirable to add anything to the primo part. The original string parts will also be left untouched.

It may be objected that such treatment as this cannot result in a perfect presentation of the composer's intentions. Of course it cannot. Nothing but the performance of the score as he wrote it can do that. But the question is not whether a complete or an incomplete orchestra is the most desirable. There can be no doubt that a more perfect performance, much more consonant with the composer's intentions, can be obtained from the orchestra described above (combined with not too large a chorus) than from any possible combination of keyed instruments.

It may also be objected that the scheme entails a great deal of additional work upon the conductor. This is true. But a conductor who is unwilling to undertake work of this kind has missed his vocation. The man whom circumstances compel to be content with a tiny orchestra, and who works upon the lines herein laid down, will be amply rewarded by the result of his labour.

If a larger, but still incomplete, orchestra is possible, it is essential that the number of strings be increased, for with seven strings and five wind the balance in favour of the former is barely sufficient. I doubt if the plan of making the number of violins equal to the total of all the other bowed instruments can be improved upon—provided, of course, that all the former are thoroughly efficient. With three first violins, three seconds, two violas, two violoncellos, and two double-basses, the wood-wind quartet might remain as before; but a couple of horns might be included, bringing up the total number of performers to eighteen. To this well-balanced force kettle-drums would be a very valuable addition. In this orchestra any ordinary division of the string parts would be provided for; and although it would probably be necessary to re-arrange the oboe, clarinet, bassoon, and horn parts, as in the case of the smaller band, the addition of a second horn would render the work of arrangement considerably easier.

The British public is said to love noise. Nevertheless, I am of opinion that it is better to do without trumpets (cornets) and trombones unless there are at least twelve violins and twelve other strings. Take, for instance, Mozart's Requiem Mass. This is scored for basset-horns, bassoons, trumpets, kettle-drums, three trombones, and the usual strings, with a figured bass for the organ. With a band of twelve, I should include two clarinets, two bassoons, and a horn. To the latter I should assign the trombone solo in the Tuba mirum, although it used to be played by a bassoon in the days when trombonists shied at it. With an orchestra of nineteen (which would include a drummer) the wind would consist of clarinets, bassoons, and horns—two of each. A couple of trumpets and three trombones would be simply overwhelming.

Beyond this point it is unnecessary to pursue the subject, except to say that additional strings should always be at hand to balance any increase in the wind. With twelve violins, twelve other strings, eight wood-wind, seven brass, and kettle-drums, we shall have obtained an orchestra capable of occupying a large hall, adequate to the accompaniment of a considerable chorus, and which can no longer be described as incomplete.

---

Mr. Adrian C. Boulton has been appointed permanent conductor to the Birmingham Municipal Orchestra in succession to Mr. Appleby Matthews.

MUSIC AND THE CINEMA

BY RICHARD HOLT

I trust it is no disrespect to the cinema, that ubiquitous benefactor of the masses—and the classes, adds a cynical prompting—to give titular precedence to music. I do so, not because I am under any delusions as to their respective degrees of importance, but because this article is written from the musical standpoint. I am not what might be called an abandoned votary of the 'pictures,' but neither do I import any highbrow (a disagreeable word, I admit) prejudice into my attitude towards them. When, as occasionally occurs, a picture of real artistic merit or histrionic value is to be seen I make a point of going. I say occasionally, for the most fanatical of devotees, be he endowed with the veriest pinch of æsthetic taste, would not contend that the majority of pictures answer to that description. Tawdry romance, insufferable sentimentality, and dramatic unreality, actuated by commercial considerations, seem to swamp those better instincts which should prevail even in the mission of ministering to the popular taste.

Of the greater part of the 'humorous' films I have had to endure I will forbear to speak, merely remarking that they fall into a lower category than the most humble efforts of the circus clown. The limit of inanity in this respect was exemplified in a film called The Gown Shop, which I recently witnessed. The principal ingredient of this production, so far as humour was concerned, seemed to reside in what I may call the 'art of propulsion'—or, in plain words, pushing. Everybody in the picture pushed everybody else on the slightest or no provocation; he or she, in turn, passed on the 'push' until by an unending concatenation of shoves, pushes, and kicks, the total population of The Gown Shop entered actively and passively into the pastime which seemed to be the sole business occupation of the establishment. Needless to say, before the end, the very doors, walls, and roofs therein suffered contagion, and the whole thing culminated in a spectacle of pushing humanity and crumbling masonry. To introduce the main subject of this article, I will impart the information that the musical accompaniment of this Colney Hatch production—I make the simile with due apologies to the comparatively sane inmates of that institution—consisted of a portion of Suppé's Pique Dame Overture, a half-dozen bars from the Light Cavalry Overture of the same composer (a rather effeminate note to strike, considering the picture) and a hotch-potch of tunes of the Banana variety. Seeing, however, that such a film was not worthy of the worst musical dross, there is no need to stress unduly the incongruity in this case.

But, undoubtedly, even in pictures of a worthier type, there is a lamentable failure on the part of the musical director in the majority of cinemas to present an apt musical illustration or concomitant of the particular specimen of visual art portrayed. As instances of such inability to rise to the occasion, I will mention the following: Isolde's Death Song, to accompany a mob chasing a man in Demos (George Gissing); Liszt's Liebestraum (No. 3), to illustrate a mutiny in a film called All the Brothers were Valiant; Mendelssohn's Midsummer Night's Dream Overture as music to a storm in the jungle (Where the Pavement Ends)—it will end for me in future at the threshold of this particular cinema—and the Moonlight Sonata, third movement, to portray a violent encounter between two jealous women, in a masterpiece of which I forget the name. One further example was a Gluck Overture, of all pieces, with a view of intensifying the excitement of a bomb explosion (The Ace of Hearts).

All these prove that the chief motive of those who supply the music is to find pieces which present a physical or rhythmic counterpoint to the picture, independently of their incompatibility in other respects—often the most vital, such as the emotional or poetical intent. For instance, the Presto movement of the Moonlight Sonata scarcely expresses physical violence or exuberance, but, as I sense it, feelings of a strongly spiritual rapture or restlessness. This particular director, however, discerned an automobilic lilt in it, and deemed it a fitting accompaniment to a mundane altercation between two viragoes. Perhaps the worst defect which music-lovers have to suffer at the cinema, so far as good music is concerned, is the custom which the cinematographic art necessarily entails, of starting a classical excerpt and then abruptly breaking off directly the sense of the picture demands it. The only remedy for such a tyrannous antagonism lies, of course, in the provision of specially composed music for each film, as was done for a film shown at Covent Garden, of which the music was composed by Eugène Goossens.

But it is scarcely likely that this will become a common practice while people without a sense of artistic decency dominate the cinema. At present, continuity in the picture enhances the lack of it in the music, and a series of irritating gaps and illogical transitions offend the ear and sense of dramatic fitness. As matters stand, a good film resembles an opera, of which one person has written the libretto, and a score, or perhaps more, the music. The result is an internecine warfare, a pot-pourri of conflicting and disparate styles. The more conscientious musical directors do their best, and often achieve a result which is tolerably satisfying, if not ideally convincing; but on the whole picture-music still remains a problem. If you suppose a scenic, that is, a film presentation, of Tristan and Isolde coupled with Wagner's music, you at once imagine the ideal state of things. There would be in such a picture the most complete harmony between the action and the music. When, therefore, a librettist and a composer join forces in the picture world, we shall have as satisfactory a form of the art as for so long we have had in the operatic world.

I am, of course, aware of the fact that so far as a union of its composite elements is concerned, opera itself presents problems which, by reason of human limitations, may possibly be insoluble, but if we are sensible enough to forego ideal exigencies, we experience a wonderful pleasure which is denied only to those who are dominated by theoretical and pedantic considerations. Many such writers gravely inform us that there is but this or that example of an opera approaching to any extent the ideal amalgamation of action and music, although the difference in their verdicts denotes that there are as many ideal operas as there are exponents of such a theory. Meanwhile the world fares tolerably well with those examples which the genius of the great composers has provided for it. It awaits the 'ideal amalgamation,' &c., but, perhaps contrary to a well-known adage, it will be happy till it gets it. I would seem to have strayed from cinema-land, but the two domains are not so remote as would appear, and when we have pictures which speak, the rivalry between them will reveal their close relationship, for the cinema can denote ideal scenery, while the operatic stage—well, I expect you are as familiar as I am with such unrealities as Tristan's ship, the palatial cottages, the decorous oceans, and other paraphernalia of operatic scenery. I do not look forward to such a thing, for nothing will compensate me for the loss of the actor's presence, but there is a distinct trend in that direction.

The question of music in the cinema will become a vital one only when the cinema art itself takes an upward bound, and when the subjects presented through its medium are of more momentous import than is now the case. Cinema audiences, with their airy disregard of art, require but to be momentarily impressed; hence the fact that, unlike all other arts, there are no accepted classical masterpieces of the picture world which are thought worth revival; they appear but once, and then one by one creep silently to rest. It is no use composing good music if it is to share the oblivion of the picture which called it forth; but here the musical conscience is not invulnerable, and it is a case of stones and glass-houses, for how long is it since we heard such works as César Franck's Beautés, a Mahler Symphony, Beethoven's King John Overture, and a countless host of other neglected works? So, until the millennium in the cinema world—I am afraid it is just as near or far as other millenniums (purists, your pardon)—we shall have to content ourselves with the present state of things, wherein our cinema orchestras provide for a particular film excerpts of from two to fifty bars from some half-century of works, ranging from oratorios to fox-trots, and of such intimate spiritual kindred as Tristan and Isolde, Katinka, Yes, We have, &c., together with snippets from Parsifal and the Pathétique, the whole proceeding in exquisitely appropriate sequence.

Finally, one would like to utter a word of admiration for the skilful use of the organ made at cinemas. Its main function seems to be to serve as a stop-gap till the orchestra arrives, and this economy is noteworthy not only in an economic but also in a musical sense, as cinema organists seem unaware that the organ is actually an organ, appearing to regard it as a kind of sedentary flute, from which they can evoke a protracted note of lachrymose sentimentality. I refer, of course, to their incessant use of the voix céleste. Some day, perhaps, a cinema organist will . . . but we must not be over-optimistic.

MUSIC IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS

BY ALBAN CLAUGHTON

Some years ago, while reading H. G. Wells's Mankind in the Making, I was arrested by a passage in which he deals with music in the school. The gist of the passage is that, generally speaking, instrumental teaching is largely a waste of time, and that musical instruction, if it were to be worth while as a serious issue, should aim at producing a class of intelligent listeners rather than one of indifferent performers. The whole passage is well worth studying, and one cannot but feel that the main idea is in more pressing need of realisation to-day even than it seemed to be at the time the book was written.

Music has made such strides in England in the last twenty years that it behoves us to ask ourselves whether the present system of instruction in our public schools—under which 'learning music' is synonymous with learning to play on an instrument (chiefly the pianoforte)—is really furthering the cause of education, or is a mere 'free-wheeling' down a well-worn traditional track; to consider whether it is really better so far to exploit the active to the exclusion of the receptive, that although a boy may leave school with a moderate proficiency on the pianoforte, an orchestral or chamber concert has little or no meaning for him.

Let us look at some of the results of the 'instrumental' system, and consider a suggestion or two for making the teaching of music cover a wider ground and produce more far-reaching results.

At present a boy comes to school and intimates that he wishes (or rather, perhaps, his parents wish him) to 'learn music.' This 'learning music,' as we all know, resolves itself into a matter of taking lessons either on the pianoforte or—more dangerous still—the violin. At the end of his school career he may be:

- (1.) A keen and very promising performer on his instrument.
- (2.) A still keen but distinctly unpromising performer.
- (3.) A fair reader, with a distinct skill in playing right notes, but with no particular keenness save for definitely low-class music.
- (4.) An earnest plodder, who, if he hasn't chucked the whole business at an earlier date, will be still earnestly plodding, probably at music far below the level of his now almost grown-up receptive faculties.

No. (1) practically speaks for himself.

(2.) This fellow is the buffer between the usefulness of the present system and the uselessness of it. He is just worth while on account of the good he himself may get out of it.

(3.) Has simply mistaken both his own vocation and that of music (the latter a very common phenomenon even among otherwise highly-educated people). He might have made quite a successful typist. Indeed, a great deal of school-boy pianoforte playing is really nothing more than typewriting in terms of the pianoforte.

(4.) Shows the prevailing system in its most useless and degrading aspect. His type is present in all shades of ability from hopeless to just possible, and in all manner of approach to the subject, from sincere application to the worst kind of forced labour.

In all cases except No. 1, there is a maximum of loss and a minimum of gain. It is quite possible that in all the other cases a quite reasonable, and in some instances a surprising amount of progress might be made along the line of true musical appreciation and a wider grasp of the real meaning of music, whereas the time has been spent (and probably wasted) in trying to adjust recalcitrant means to a difficult and highly-specialised end—an end which, even when perfectly achieved, opens but one door in the great Palace of Art. (Witness the noticeable lack of musical culture, apart from their special instrument and its music, of many first-class pianists and violinists.)

Now, I would not for a moment advocate the total banishment of all special instrumental training and practice from the music-education scheme. But what I do advocate, and that most strenuously, is a system of selection whereby those who show some real aptitude, and give evidence of real promise—and those alone—should be permitted to continue their study of the pianoforte, violin, or organ, as the case may be, and that the whole host of hopeless plodders, potential typists, and mere rag-time enthusiasts shall no longer be allowed to misuse both their own energies and the school pianofortes. These fellows might become ardent enthusiasts for good music if they could be brought day after day into direct touch with music itself, instead of with their own physical inability to produce it.

Incidentally, one excellent by-product of this idea would be the elimination of many so-called 'practice pianofortes.' There is a widespread illusion among educationists—and the economic situation undoubtedly tends to keep it alive and healthy—that any old thing in the way of a pianoforte is good enough for a boy to practise on. Under a system whereby any old thing in the way of a boy is made to play the pianoforte willy-nilly, it is not difficult to understand how the idea took root and flourished. If only for the sake of sportsmanship I feel bound to add, to save the faces of the pedagogues, that in other departments of school life this theory has no place. Even in the joiner's shop a boy will not be expected to work with a blunt chisel or to use a saw with only three sound teeth. But it adds to the pathetic nature of the musical situation that the pianoforte playing fallacy should be rendered doubly fallacious by the additional handicap of instruments from which the most highly-trained pianist would find difficulty in extracting anything approaching musical sounds. It is all part and parcel of the extraordinary confusion of ideas so long prevalent concerning both the nature of music and its position in educational practice.

If we agree that the only object of any form of musical education should be to bring people to a higher understanding and a clearer appreciation of music itself, we shall grudge the spending of either money or time on anything which fails to promote that ideal.

One way in which we can further it, incidentally without any particular expense, is through the hours (if any) at present devoted to so-called 'class singing.' Thanks to the Board of Education this has apparently come to stay. We need not worry overmuch as to the exact purposes it was intended officially to fulfil. But whatever it does it must be alive and informative. Whoever takes charge of it must beware of effecting merely ad captandum shows for the delectation of parents, or even of inspectors. Neither must he fall into the error, common amongst theologians, of trying to create a mountain of philosophic marvel out of a molehill of commonplace simplicity.

I once heard a lesson on the diatonic scale given in such a way as to suggest initiation into some wonderful occult mystery. I began to wonder what sort of magic preparations, incantations, and the like, would be needed to introduce the class to such complex and subtle things as Rule, Britannia or the British Grenadiers. Incidentally, all the 'elements of music'—names and position of notes, scales, time-signatures, intervals, &c.—should be taught in these classes, and the more simply and naturally the better. They are far more easily taught and learnt under such conditions than at the pianoforte, while along with these can be carried on, perhaps, the most important things of all—ear-training and musical dictation, and, above all, rhythm.

But there is a worse evil to be avoided than either 'stunts' or 'mysteries.' The very name 'class-singing' carries with it a danger, in that what should be a secondary, though contributive, matter may be regarded as of primary importance, and the class degenerate into a mere musical joy-ride, in which the learning of songs is the real objective. Not that singing in class is in any way a bad thing; but only when it is regarded as an end in itself and not as contributory to a definite educational plan. If the 'class-singing' effects no more than its name actually implies, it is simply a branch of recreation, and as such belongs not to 'in-school' but 'out-of-school' activities.

Another very important means of education—to which the funds usually adapted to the buying of pianofortes could be far more usefully applied, and one which is slowly but surely making its way into our schools—is the pianola (under which term I include any variety of pianoforte-playing device now on the market or in process of invention).

Only a few years ago the suggestion that a pianola should be introduced into a public school for any serious purpose would have been turned down flatly and finally. Educational authorities have the solemn responsibilities of tradition so heavily on their consciences that they are naturally rather nervous about making experiments with things that have not already stood the test of time, and accumulated those outward signs of it which correspond with the ivy and lichen on the school building.

But there is another reason, which has its roots deep down in the scholastic soil and which has hitherto affected the whole question of musical education. It is the prevalent idea of the importance attaching to the actual doing of things by the pupils themselves. It is part of the whole idea of school-life, and touches the sphere of music, inasmuch as music, once introduced into the curriculum, becomes attainted with the ideas attaching to other activities of the place. As it is considered of less importance that a boy should know something of football than that he should actually play the game himself, so it is considered of less importance that he should know anything about music than that he should expend his musical energies in actually playing on some instrument or other. After all, there is 'something to show for it,' and that is an important asset both from the schoolmaster's and parents' point of view.

Any one passing that portion of the school buildings set apart for music, and hearing some half-dozen pianofortes all going simultaneously at various pitches and in different keys, through the changing tumult of which may cut the wail of perhaps a couple of shakily-handled violins, may reasonably come to the conclusion that a vast amount of work is being done in the musical line. Whereas, of course, the actual amount of profit accruing may be no more than would result from turning the wheel of an empty chaff-cutting machine—a very great deal of 'practising' in schools being a species of what was picturesquely known during the war as 'eye-wash.' This theory that people, especially youngsters, must do things themselves—though of course excellent with regard to football or carpentry—has simply been misapplied to music. Consequently the active side has been exploited almost to the exclusion, at any rate to the paralysing, of the more important receptive side.

For one person who can perform there are hundreds who can listen, and perhaps it is this fact which—by a mistaken analogy taken from the professional football ground, where (it is deplored) thousands merely look on while a select few actually play—has caused educational authorities to over-emphasise the importance of the performer as against the listener in matters musical.

But the pianola and its near relation the gramophone have made tremendous strides in recent years, and their usefulness for educational purposes is beyond question. And yet, in too many cases, it seems not to have dawned on responsible people that these instruments are capable of anything beyond a merely frivolous, merely entertaining usage. For years the public school boy has been allowed to have his private gramophone in his study for his own delectation and that of his friends. And this is one of the worst things we are up against. At present, with the private gramophone running riot, and the crowd of jazz bands and other rag-time shows, all over the country, it is only natural that the line of least resistance should be followed, and that our musical youth should be in the position of the nice little boy who has been allowed to play with yokels and street boys, and whose dismayed mother wonders where on earth he has picked up all those bad words and vulgar expressions, to say nothing of 'that accent.'

But we have got to use the gramophone and the pianola for demonstration and instruction, and show that these instruments can speak the language of the great poets as well as the colloquial slang of the streets. There never was a time when so much fine music was being written, or so much rubbish turned out. And the purveyors of rubbish will be ahead of us so long as we ourselves continue to use obsolete weapons and leave the newer ones to them.

But whatever position the Arts may have in the school curriculum of the future, music will probably stand the best chance, if only on the ground—scarcely ideal, but at all events practical—of its communal possibilities. And it is up to us to take the widest possible view of our opportunities.

We must cultivate a race of listeners whose ears and understandings are not only open to the accumulated heritage of some three hundred years of progress, but who will be prepared to take the same intelligent interest in the highly-organized musical culture of their own time.

The Musician's Bookshelf

The Philosophy of Music. By William Pole. With an Introduction by Edward J. Dent. Supplementary Essay by Hamilton Hartridge, M.D.

[Kegan Paul, 10s. 6d.]

The title suggests aesthetics. But Dr. Pole (1814-1900) used 'philosophy' in the 18th century sense. His twenty-one shortish chapters deal with all the general bases of music from the elements of acoustics to counterpoint and the 'falling-off of the interest' in the same 'in modern days.' Dr. Pole's philosophy was rather scientific and historical than aesthetic.

The book was first published in 1879 (based on lectures of 1877), and was reprinted in 1895. It merits a new edition. It is a good book. Perhaps the editors are too loyal in having exactly reprinted it. The ancients rewrote their books of science and information generation by generation. Possibly a Philosophy of Music by Mr. Dent, incorporating Pole, would have been still more valuable. Dr. Pole, choosing a last picturesque example to illustrate his chapter on 'Compound Harmonies,' goes not to Wagner, but to 'M. Gounod.' It is a little sidelight on the provincialism of musical England of fifty years ago, and is rather unnecessarily quaint in a 1924 book of practical edification. And then, Mr. Dent, whose introductory pages are admirable, and who deserves the harshest blame for his neglect to assemble his scattered periodical writings—the best musical criticism of these times—could give us a very fascinating Philosophy.

We have been too long in admitting that Dr. Pole's book has borne the passage of nearly half a century most surprisingly well. It remains sound and thoroughly good reading. We are left much admiring the author's cool head and the calm and firm progression of his argument. We have said that it is not primarily aesthetic. Aesthetic philosophy, indeed, would appear to have presented itself to him as rather endangering foothold, and towards the end of the chapter on 'Melody,' he edges off:

... in fact, no one has made any successful attempt to analyse what are the particular features that constitute pleasing melody, or to explain why we like some melodies in preference to others; why some are popular and attractive, while others are passed over with indifference.

But there is a very certain philosophical attitude prompted by his concatenation of musical facts, and it is suggested a few lines below the above quotation:

At any rate, for our present object we may be pretty certain that the structure of melody does not follow any rules which can be referred to a physical origin.

That is the trend of the book—towards recognition of the fact that music is, all said and done, an art. In a paragraph to which Mr. Dent specially calls attention, Pole says:

... although the fabric of music has its foundation laid in natural phenomena, yet its superstructure is almost entirely a work of art. ... This result, differing so essentially from the ideas heretofore generally held among musical men, can hardly be expected to be received by them without hesitation. The idea of the necessary natural origin of all musical forms and rules, groundless as it is, has taken such firm hold that it cannot be eradicated quickly.

Such ideas have been assiduously cultivated since Pole's time—witness the teaching of a Vincent d'Indy, with its fantastic search for natural or supernatural sanctions for the form of such a tool of his craft as the Minor mode. Pole, on this vexed topic of the Minor mode, would simply say that modern music here adopted that ancient mode, the Hypo-Dorian, which most contrasted with our major, the old Lydian. (He insists that the modes which lived on into modern music were not the Church modes, but the Greek modes which had survived in folk-music.) When harmony became popular, the Lydian mode became the standard, because that was the only mode whose tonic, dominant, and subdominant harmonies were all perfect major triads. The Hypo-Dorian survived alongside as being the completest contrast, for alone its corresponding harmonies were all minor triads.

The temper of this book we find charming. Philosophical in a broad sense Dr. Pole undoubtedly was, unlike the authors of most handbooks on the theory of music, who are rarely inclined to allow that :

... it is quite possible that rules for composition at present in force may become as obsolete in the music of the future as those of the Middle Ages are now. Instances are abundant where, certain rules having been supposed to be established on natural principles, it has only required the pen of a man of genius to abolish them for ever.

And in a university lecture-room fifty years ago this, on the subject of consecutive fifths, must have appeared almost like flying in the face of Providence :

We are bound to distrust here the appeal to the ear which we have so often protested against. It cannot be denied that a succession of perfect fifths in counterpoint sounds very objectionable to musicians. But it must be recollected that from the first moment any musician began to study composition he was taught to hold consecutive fifths in abhorrence . . . . If there is really any physical or physiological cause for the antipathy it ought to be capable of being shown . . . . We know by experience that these fifths do not sound offensive to those who happen to be ignorant of the rule against them.

Dr. Hartridge's concluding pages supplement Pole's chapters on acoustics, which were, however, in the first place securely based on Helmholtz. C.

The History of Pianoforte Music. By Herbert Westerby. [Kegan Paul, 12s. 6d.]

Here is a volume which, at a first glance, seems to say all there is to be said about pianoforte music. The second glance, however, shows that the author has by no means achieved the impossible. Mr. Westerby has tried to combine two methods of dealing with his subject, each of which would, in completeness, require a volume to itself as large as this one. He has tried to roll into one a dictionary and an evolutionary history, with a touch of æsthetic discussion thrown in. However, since this is clearly his intention, and seeing that a successful compromise of this nature should be welcome indeed, his book must be accepted in this light.

Its shortcomings as such are due mainly to faults of organization and proportion. Mr. Westerby rightly divides the main substance of the book into (1) harpsichord and clavichord music, (2) the [so-called] Classic Period, (3) the Romantic Period, and (4) the Era of National Music. His apportioning of the greatest space to each of the last two groups, and of the least to the Classic Period, seems equally sound. But the 'dictionary' aspect assumes such proportions (the Index of Composers shows about eight hundred names!) that the technical, evolutionary side suffers considerably.

The worst case of faulty proportion is the last section, in which the Modern British School receives fourteen pages, as compared with the generous thirty-four pages given to the comparatively insignificant Scandinavian School. (Of some thirty music-type examples of the latter, about twenty might have been written by Grieg, and the remainder have little significance.) Other chapters which contrast unfavourably with the latter are : Chopin and Polish music (lumped together into a dozen pages); the Russians (sixteen pages); the French School (ten pages); Spanish and Portuguese music (disposed of within a paltry five pages).

Perhaps the most disorganized part of the book is Part I. Strangely enough this is the consequence of excessive organization. Its fifty-two pages are divided into eleven distinct chapters, a proceeding which results in continual fresh starts, redundancies, and the like. For example, the Harmonious Blacksmith Variations are quoted in the chapter on the old harpsichord suites—nearly thirty pages before the real discussion of Handel.

There is little to criticise, apart from many small details, in this first part. Chapter 8 deals effectively with the later English harpsichord composers. Mr. Westerby also writes well on Bach's technique, describing it (not without qualification) as generally organ technique.

Scarlatti is very clearly and concisely treated, though the consideration he receives is far from proportionate to his significance.

Part 2, the Classic Period, does not call for much comment. The chapter on the Clementi group is, perhaps, notably well-written. Particularly instructive is the paragraph which discriminates between the relative significance of Clementi's technique and style, and those of 'the more orchestrally-minded Haydn and Mozart.' Mr. Westerby gives little more than the needful attention to Beethoven's pianoforte music in its formal and generally musical aspect.

We now come to the section to which Mr. Westerby gives the front rank—Romanticism. Here we find Schumann assumes the greatest prominence; yet, in spite of a generous allowance of musical quotations throughout the book, not one example is given from Schumann's works. Again—'The Variation form has played an exceedingly important part in the evolution of pianoforte music, especially in its technical aspect.' Here also we are denied a single musical quotation. A great deal too much room in this part is taken up with matter which belongs rather to the general musical history, e.g., the chapter dealing with the formal rather than technical evolution of the concerto.

A readable chapter on Magyar music is valuable. It draws attention to the influence of the 'zimbalon (a kind of dulcimer),' and says that :

... much of the effectiveness of the new technique, as inspired by Liszt, must have been suggested by the attempts to reproduce the music of the Magyar.

Perhaps the greatest anomaly in the book is that Chopin is disposed of in nine pages, without a single musical quotation. Yet, even in that space, Mr. Westerby finds room for good comments on the Preludes, the influence of Bach on Chopin, and Chopin's principles in pianoforte playing and tempo rubato.

The chief discrepancies in proportion in this final 'National' section have already been cited. There seems to be a complete failure to appreciate the significance of Debussy and Ravel, and, perhaps in a lesser degree, the modern British composers. Russia comes off little better, especially Scriabin, whose latest Opus number to be cited is 35, though the following sentence is welcome :

... it is hardly an exaggeration to say that a new pianistic world opens to us in the compositions of the new Russian composers for pianoforte generally.

Surely it is about time we faced the question as to the kind of noises the pianoforte really can make! The first step in this direction is to recognise the enormous significance of Debussy, Ravel, and, most of all, Scriabin. Mr. Westerby certainly goes part way : and his book does, I believe, fill a large, empty space. If considerably revised, it would prove a valuable work of reference to pianists. C. M. C.

Sussex Church Music in the Past. By K. H. Macdermott (Rector of Selsey).

[The Author, Selsey, Sussex. 5s. 6d.]

Somerset Composers, Musicians, and Music. By Harold A. Jeboult.

[Somerset Folk Press, 16, Harpur Street, W.C.1.]

The collection and publication of local records is a pious work that merits all possible encouragement. Hardly a corner of our country is without interest, and much of this interest is national as well as local.

Mr. Macdermott has an attractive field. His subtitle, 'An account of the old Singers and Minstrels, the Bands, Psalmodies, and Hymn-Books of Sussex Churches from the end of the 17th century to the latter half of the 19th century,' whets the appetite. He gives some excellent illustrations of old instruments used in the county—serpents, pitchpipes, vamp-horns, &c., facsimiles of old music books, and portraits of some of the worthies who used them. Apropos of pitchpipes, we read that it was the custom of some choirs, on the pipe sounding the key, to sing their proper notes to the words 'Praise ye the Lord,' or simply the word 'Praise.' In a large and less than usually efficient choir, the starting of an anthem must have been quite a lengthy adventure. Among the twenty-four kinds of instruments used in the Sussex churches, one is surprised to find the banjo. But even its plunkety-plunk was a more musical sound than that of the vamp-horn—a kind of megaphone that served a good many purposes. The Sussex specimen—apparently one of the only half-dozen in England—is preserved in Ashurst Church:

It is painted green, and bears an inscription in yellow lettering: 'Praise him upon ye Strings and Pipe, 1770, Palmer fecit.' Inside the bell, about 8½ inches from the end, are stretched several intersecting wires, the purpose of which it is difficult to tell. They are too thick to vibrate, so cannot have been intended to increase the tone by sounding sympathetic notes.

Tradition says that the vamp-horn was used from the church tower to call the cattle home, to summon people from the fields to the services of the church, to call for assistance in time of danger, to supply a wordless bass to the harmony, for use by the town crier, and a dozen other purposes where blatancy is a virtue rather than a crime. As to the name, one naturally thinks of the 'vamp' in our modern musical slang sense of rough-and-ready filling-in, without remembering that it derives from the French avant-pied, a term originally applied to a piece of leather added to the front part of a boot to give strength—'thus "vamping" came to mean making the best of anything by helping it out in some way.'

Among Mr. Macdermott's anecdotes are two that seem to belong to almost every quarter of England—that concerning the old string player and his 'Gi' I the rosin, Bill,' and the even better one about the choirmaster who, annoyed at some of the men singing a kind of collation of tenor and bass, expostulated, 'If you want to sing bass, sing bass: if you want to sing tenor, sing tenor; but don't let us have none of your shandygaff!' All who collect records of these fascinating byways of music should add Mr. Macdermott's book to their store.

Mr. Jeboult's material is of a less racy kind, of course, but he contrives to impart interest to a record of which Somerset musicians should be proud. The county's roll is a long and honourable one, with John Bull as the chief glory, and such worthies as Richard Edwardes, Creighton, Loder, Milgrove, Greatheed, James Turle, E. G. Monk, and others to follow. Among some sons of Somerset who were inglorious and unfortunately anything but mute were Thomas Haynes Bayley and John Pridham. We may forgive the former, seeing that he is the cause of one of Andrew Lang's most delightful essays; and we have almost forgotten the latter's Battle of Delhi. Mr. Jeboult not only gives all available biographical information concerning the musicians who were born, lived, or died in Somerset; he adds a practical touch by telling us what compositions of theirs are available, and by whom published, and even adds a list of gramophone records of Somerset music. Altogether a worthy bit of work, which opens well with a preface by another of Somerset's sons, H. C. Colles. The close of this Foreword is worth quoting, because it has a message for country-folk who too readily regard themselves as being musically off the map. Mr. Colles says:

Near the end of his discourse Mr. Jeboult suggests that 'in view of the particularly rural conditions and lack of large towns' the county of Somerset is not in a favourable position to play a part in the future evolution of music. These are, in fact, just the conditions which are favourable. It is the urban conditions which level down the character of modern musical art, so that what is produced in London is indistinguishable from the products of Paris and Berlin. No doubt we exiles from Somerset who live in the barren wastes of London make for ourselves some compensation in hearing, by means of our orchestras, our itinerant pianists, violinists, and singers, the cosmopolitan music of the present day; but we are without local incentive or the inspiration of surroundings. Those who live between the Blackdown and the Quantock Hills have still the greater opportunity.

That is well said. With the competitive festivals helping country-folk to find their feet once again as performers, we may have good hopes of a revival on the creative side. Could any music be more genuinely British than that produced by composers expressing something of their county's scenery, history, and spirit, with or without the aid of folk-song?

H. G.

Proceedings of the Musical Association, 1922-23.

[Leeds: Whitehead & Miller. 21s.]

If evidence be needed as to the life and vigour enjoyed by this fifty-year old Society, it will be found in the annual volumes of Proceedings. These slim books have long been among the highly treasured and most useful volumes of the musicians' shelves, and never more so than to-day. The six lectures in the present volume are by Caroline A. Lejeune ('Opera in the 18th Century'); Sir Frederick Bridge ('County Cryes'); Gustav Holst ('The Tercentenary of Byrd and Weelkes'); Adrian C. Boulton ('The Orchestral Problem of the Future'); Arthur Bliss ('Some Aspects of the Present Musical Situation'); and A. H. Fox-Strangways ('Translation of Songs'). With difficulty we resist the temptation to quote some of the points made in these lively papers and discussions; the choice is too embarrassing in its wealth. There is the less need, too, as a précis of each paper has appeared in this journal. Somebody says that a guinea is a lot to pay for the Proceedings. Right; but it is a small sum to pay for membership of the Association, with the right of entry (taking a friend, if you like) to its meetings and the annual volume.

Organs and Tuning: A Practical Handbook for Organists. By Thomas Elliston (fourth edition). [Weekes & Co. 25s.]

Mr. Elliston's book continues to grow. It began as a modest affair of a hundred and fifty pages, added fifty more in its second edition, a further hundred and thirty in its third, and now reaches the total of seven hundred and fifty-eight! The increase is made up of Addenda, mainly culled from all sorts of sources, journalistic and otherwise. It is a wonderful book of reference for all such as handle the organ, either as tuners or players.

THE FINGERING OF SCALES ON THE PIANOFORTE

By ALAN E. F. DICKINSON.

There appears to be considerable controversy amongst pianoforte teachers concerning the fingering of scales. There is the 'old' and the 'new' method. The present article is an attempt to make explicit the principles of either method, and by criticising each to suggest a third, which shall combine the best in each.

In the good old 'German' days there was the one right fingering for each scale, and Frederick had to learn the lot before he could touch a Beethoven Sonata, though perhaps F sharp minor (harmonic and melodic) might come a little later if he was very feeble-minded. We shall have to return to the aspect of discipline. At present the point to notice is that the aim was the best fingering in each case. This raises the question, What is the best?

The principles on which we must give an answer are surely quite simple and beyond dispute. Commonsense dictates the same fingering for every octave, the disuse of the 'fifth' finger (except for the final note of a right hand ascending or left hand descending scale), and that the change of position of the hand should not occur more than the necessary twice in an octave. These principles combined mean that the fingering of each octave in every ascending scale for the right hand, and every descending scale for the left, must be one of the following seven combinations:

```

1 2 3 1 2 3 4 1
  2 3           1 2
    3 1         2 3
      1 2       3 1
        2 3     1 2
          3 4   2 3
            4 1 3 4

```

Commonsense also indicates the use of the same fingering, exactly reversed, in the right hand descending and left hand ascending scales. The main problem then arises, how by fingering to minimise the bump which tends to occur whenever the thumb is passed under the finger (and thereby also to minimise the bump on the return journey, when the finger is passed over the thumb). All due regard being paid to the 'rotary' principle in this connection, it remains obvious that the thumb comes under most easily when the note preceding is a black note, the thumb itself playing a white. Here, then, is our definition: that fingering is the best in each case which makes a proper use of the black notes, 'proper' being interpreted as above. Does the old method give us the best in this sense?

Let us confine ourselves to the major scales and take the right hand (ascending) scales first. C major, having no black notes, will not be affected by our definition, and, therefore, so far as we have gone, any fingering will do provided that the dictates of commonsense, already stated and applied, are observed. G and F major may each be fingered in two ways. In G major, G must be played with the thumb, since it follows the only black note in the scale, but F# may be fingered 3 or 4, and thus we have 1 2 3 1 2 3 4 1 or 1 2 3 4 1 2 3 1, of which the old method has chosen the former, for reasons which will be made clear later. Similarly, F major may be 1 2 3 4 1 2 3 1 or 4 1 2 3 1 2 3 4, and the old method gives us the former. In the case of D, E, A, and B major there is only one possible fingering—1 2 3 1 2 3 4 1—and the old method has taken it. Similarly, all scales starting with a flat, having at least two black notes to use—to facilitate the passing under of the thumb—can only be fingered each in one way, viz.:

```

D flat major  2 3 1 2 3 4 1 2
E             3 1 2 3 4 1 2 3
G             2 3 4 1 2 3 1 2
A             3 4 1 2 3 1 2 3
B             4 1 2 3 1 2 3 4

```

The old method has in each case followed this fingering in principle, the only point of divergence being the use of the 'second' finger on the first note of the first octave of E♭, A♭ (with the third on B♭ in the first octave), and B♭—a very small point and not worth discussing. Thus, as regards the right hand, the old school can vindicate its claim to provide the best in each case.

On similar lines we can determine the fingering for the left hand. The issue being considered as the passing under of the thumb, as opposed to the complementary process, the passing over of the finger, we must take the descending scale. As before, C major is so far indeterminate. G and F major respectively offer 2 3 1 2 3 4 1 2 or 3 4 1 2 3 1 2 3 and 3 1 2 3 4 1 2 3 or 3 4 1 2 3 1 2 3. The remainder must be:

```

B 1 2 3 4 1 2 3 1      B♭ 3 1 2 3 4 1 2 3
A 2 3 4 1 2 3 1 2      A♭ 3 1 2 3 4 1 2 3
E 1 2 3 1 2 3 4 1      G♭ 4 1 2 3 1 2 3 4
D 2 3 1 2 3 4 1 2      E♭ 3 1 2 3 4 1 2 3
                        D♭ 3 1 2 3 4 1 2 3

```

The old school concurs in most cases (not to mention certain divergences as regards the first note of the first octave, similar to those which occurred for the right hand), but in the case of A, G, F, and D it offers entirely different fingering, namely, 1 2 3 1 2 3 4 1 in each case. Either, then, it has not been consistent in carrying out its principle of 'the best in each case,' or, as has clearly happened, it has allowed that principle to be superseded by another, that of uniformity—uniformity, that is, between the fingering of either hand—exact in the case of A, G, and D, and nearly exact in the case of F. We shall have to return to the conflict of principles later. For the moment we need only see that since the excellence for the right hand of the 1 2 3 1 2 3 4 1 fingering in the case of A, G, and D depends on the last note but one being black, this excellence disappears for the left hand, where the last note but one in the parallel (descending) scale is white; similarly, mutatis mutandis for F.

We may now turn to the 'new' method, which works on the principle, not of 'the best in each case,' but of uniformity as regards the position of the hand between one scale and another. How this works out

(Continued on page 438.)

Come, Phillis, come into these bowers

BY THOMAS FORD

(1607)

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED; NEW YORK: THE H. W. GRAY CO., SOLE AGENTS FOR THE U.S.A.

Con spirito

SOPRANO
Come, Phil - lis, come in - to these bowers, Here shel - ter is from

ALTO
Come, Phil - lis, come in - to these bowers, Here shel - ter is from

TENOR
Come, Phil - lis, come in - to these bowers, Here shel - ter is .. from

BASS
Come, Phil - lis, come in - to these bowers, Here shel - ter is from

f

Con spirito. ♩ = 72

(For practice only)

mf
sharp - est showers; Cool gales of wind breathe in these shades,

mf
sharp - est showers; Cool . . gales of wind breathe in these shades,

mf
sharp - est . . showers; Cool gales of . . wind breathe in these shades,

mf
sharp - est showers; Cool . . gales of wind . . breathe in these shades,

mf

f Dan - ger none this place in - vades. mf Here sit and note the chirp - ing birds, mf Plead - ing my love, plead - ing my love in

A little slower

chirp - ing birds, p Plead - ing my love, plead - ing my love in

Tempo 1mo.

mf si - lent . . words. mf Here sit and note the chirp - ing birds, p Plead - ing my love, plead - ing my love in

A little slower

dim. e rall.

p Plead - ing my love, plead - ing my love in si - lent . . words.
dim. e rall.
p Plead - ing my love, plead - ing my love in si - lent . . words.
dim. e rall.
p Plead - ing my love, plead - ing my love in si - lent words.
dim. e rall.
p Plead - ing my love, plead - ing my love in si - lent words.
A little slower
p dim. e rall.

f Come, Phil - lis, come, bright hea - ven's eye Can - not up - on thy
f Come, Phil - lis, come, bright hea - ven's eye Can - not up - on thy
f Come, Phil - lis, come, bright hea - ven's eye Can - not up - on . . thy
f Come, Phil - lis, come, bright hea - ven's eye Can - not up - on thy
f

mf beau - ty pry; Glad Ech - o in dis - tin - guish'd voice
mf beau - ty pry; Glad . . . Ech - o in dis - tin - guish'd voice
mf beau - ty . . pry; Glad Ech - o . . in dis - tin - guish'd voice
mf beau - ty pry; Glad . . . Ech - o in . . . dis - tin - guish'd voice
mf

Nam - ing thee will here re - joice. Then come and hear her mer -

Nam - ing thee will here re - joice. Then come and hear her mer -

Nam - ing thee will here re - joice. Then come and hear . . her mer -

Nam - ing thee will here re - joice. Then come and hear her mer -

A little slower

mer - ry lays Crown - ing thy name, crown - ing thy name with

mer - ry lays Crown - ing thy.. name, crown - ing thy name with

- - ry lays Crown - ing thy name, crown - ing thy.. name with

- ry lays Crown - ing thy name, crown - ing thy name with

A little slower

Tempo 1mo. mf

last - ing ... praise. Then come and hear her mer - ry lays,

mf

last - ing ... praise. Then come and hear her mer - ry lays,

mf

last - ing praise. Then come and hear... her mer - ry lays,

mf

last - ing praise. Then come and hear her mer - - ry lays,

Tempo 1mo.  $\text{♩} = 72$  mf

A little slower p mf cres. rall.

Crown - ing thy name, crown - ing thy name with last - ing ... praise.

p mf cres. rall.

Crown - ing thy name, crown - ing thy name with last - ing ... praise.

p mf cres. rall.

Crown - ing thy name, crown - ing thy name with last - ing praise.

p mf cres. rall.

Crown - ing thy name, crown - ing thy name with last - ing praise.

A little slower p mf cres. rall.

(Continued from page 432.)

may best be shown by tabulating the actual fingering, as follows:

	Right hand ascending.	Left hand ascending.
F#	23412312	43213214
G# → A♭ and G	34123123	32132143
A# → B♭ and A	41231234	21321432
B	12312341	13214321
C# → D♭ and C	23123412	32143213
D# → E♭ and D	31234123	21432132
E# → F and E	12341231	14321321

The advantages of this system are obvious. It is very easy to memorise the two positions of the hand in the root-scale, F sharp, and once the root-scale is learnt all the rest are as good as learnt. But (the necessary reversion being made to convert the fingering of the left hand as for a descending scale) it will be found that this system does not give us the best fingering for G, A, D, or E in the case of the right hand, or for B♭, E♭, or F in the case of the left. Here, then, is the conflict of two principles of fingering: one bids us learn the best in each case, no matter the trouble; the other would have us save the trouble (for other activities) and learn a fingering which will 'serve' for any case.

If we must do the one or the other, let us learn the best in each case. To 'have' a certain fingering for any scale means that whenever it occurs it will, other things being equal, be used; not to have the best in any case means that whenever that case occurs we are going to work at a disadvantage. Not to take the trouble of learning the best is, therefore, false economy in the long run. This criticism will apply not only to the new school as a whole, but also to the procedure of the old school in carrying out the principle of economy or uniformity in the case of A, G, D, and F, at the cost of excellence.

But we shall lose nothing except discipline by discovering as much uniformity as possible in what has been proved to be the best, and, where there are alternatives, in choosing one on the principle of uniformity, as indeed the old school chose (in the case of C, G, and F). I therefore suggest a scheme by which the best fingering in each case may most easily be learnt:

Right hand ascending.	Left hand descending.
1. Keys with sharp signatures.	1. Keys with flat signatures.
(C) } D } E } G } 1 2 3 1 2 3 4 1 A } B }	(C) } B♭ } A♭ } F } 3 1 2 3 4 1 2 3 E♭ } D♭ }
2. Keys with flat signatures, i.e., the remainder.	2. Keys with sharp signatures, i.e., the remainder.
(C) 1 2 3 1 2 3 4 1 D♭ 2 3 1 2 3 4 1 2 E♭ 3 1 2 3 4 1 2 3 F 1 2 3 4 1 2 3 1 G♭ 2 3 4 1 2 3 1 2 A♭ 3 4 1 2 3 1 2 3 B♭ 4 1 2 3 1 2 3 4 i.e., the 'new' method.	(C) 3 1 2 3 4 1 2 3 B 1 2 3 4 1 2 3 1 A 2 3 4 1 2 3 1 2 G 3 4 1 2 3 1 2 3 F# 4 1 2 3 1 2 3 4 E 1 2 3 1 2 3 4 1 D 2 3 1 2 3 4 1 2 i.e., the 'new' method.

I submit that the general outline of this scheme is easily memorised, and that the details will follow with equal ease. The only complications are:

- (1.) The new method is applied to the flat keys in the right hand, the sharp in the left.
- (2.) The same scale is called G♭ for the right hand, F# for the left. But such an outlandish key might well receive special treatment, and in this case the fingering is so obviously the only possible one that confusion cannot arise.

When all this has been said and done, opposition will still come from two quarters. On the one hand, some of the old brigade will deplore the loss of discipline involved in an easier method. On the other, some teachers will regard any search after a new system of scale-fingering as vain, on the ground that all scales in the abstract are 'unnecessary.'

We may answer the old brigade as we should answer any schoolmasters who deprecate any simplification of the rules of Latin grammar—on their own ground. Learning scales or grammar is not the only kind of discipline, nor the highest. The real schooling comes when technical difficulties are over, and the student is trying to understand. What can test our power of mind more than the process of translating a line of Catullus or Virgil into English, or of interpreting every nuance of a Bach Fugue or a Scriabin Sonata on the pianoforte? And the sooner the grammar is learnt, the sooner begins that training of the mind which is the hardest discipline in the world.

Against the second objection it may be urged:

- (1.) A scale is probably the easiest sequence of several notes to memorise, and therefore the most obvious material for concentrating on technical points, such as variations of rhythm and tone; but for such concentration absolute familiarity with the mere fingering is essential, and it is in the long run an economy, as we have seen, to learn the right fingering in each case.
- (2.) In point of fact, scale-passages of every description occur frequently in the works of all the classical composers for the pianoforte, from Byrd to Brahms. It is therefore an advantage to have already related the fingering of all scales, to obviate the necessity for learning each scale that occurs in a 'piece' as a new one.
- (3.) Obvious arguments on behalf of muscular dexterity.

On the whole, then, the objections on either count can be met satisfactorily, and the writer only wishes to add a reminder that his scheme is merely concerned with the fingering of scales in so far as it affects equality of touch, and that he has no intention of disputing the use of any exercises which may conduce to smooth and strong scale-playing.

The programmes of the Prague and Salzburg Festivals (May 31 to June 2, and early in August) show a welcome improvement on last year's scheme in regard to British music. Among the chosen works are Bax's Symphony in E flat and Sonata for violin and pianoforte; Warlock's The Curlew, for tenor, flute, cor anglais, and string quartet; Vaughan Williams's On Wenlock Edge; and Ireland's Sonata for violoncello and pianoforte.

MACKENZIE'S NEW OPERA

BY HERBERT HUGHES

Sir Alexander Campbell Mackenzie is in his seventy-sixth year, and the chief wonder in The Eve of St. John, which was produced by the British National Opera Company at Liverpool, is its youthfulness. There is not a note of fatigue in its composition. We inevitably thought of Verdi producing miraculous pages in his seventy-ninth year, and although, of course, there are worlds of differences in the two cases—the new opera was written about three years ago—we could not but feel that this achievement of the Scots musician, a good two-thirds of whose life has been spent in administrative work, is a very remarkable one. In the libretto by Eleanor Farjeon the composer had an admirable book—a story compounded of superstition and the supernatural, of sly humour and shrewd commonsense. The author did not permit you to lose the thread of the thing for a minute, even in her most imaginative flights, and the composer clearly started off with the determination that he, too, was going to keep at least one toe on the ground. There is no hero, nothing even faintly resembling heroism. There is, indeed, more than a little fear to begin with. A tinker and a poacher have lost their way in the forest on St. John's Eve, and meet by the banks of a stream. (The old pagan feast of the Celtic race, Beltaine, occurs in some places on the eve of May Day, in others on the twenty-fourth of June; some far-seeing, propagandist bishop of the Middle Ages was, I think, responsible for the latter date.) The locale in this case is a tributary of the River Severn. The forest 'echoes with eerie sounds.' The tinker and the poacher had not met before, and are very glad of each other's company. They proceed to light a fire; but it should be noted that although it was, so to speak, an official date for bonfires, they were not consciously performing any act of celebration; their thoughts were chiefly on that tot of hot rum about which they sing a lusty song. It was at the moment when Tim the Tinker goes to the stream for water that the first critical thing happens. Dan the Poacher picks up his axe and goes to a tree looking for a suitable branch for firewood. Now there is a lady inside that tree, and her name is Sylvana. He strikes one blow, and a voice is heard saying, very musically, 'Come in! come in!' Dan drops his axe, puzzled. He calls out to the Tinker, and asks him if he spoke. The Tinker answers in the negative, and then announces that he has dropped his precious pot and that it is floating away down the river. He runs out. Dan returns to his tree remarking that to-night he is full of fancies; he passes his hand over his head, resolutely picks up his axe again and strikes two or three sharp blows in succession. Sylvana opens a door in the tree-trunk and, looking out, asks if he had knocked. Naturally he is surprised and terrified, especially as the Tinker has just gone off and left him. But the lady is very sweet, and there follows a pretty love scene in music going allegretto, during which she offers him a spray of elder-blossom. He remarks that it is a flower of magic moods, and she very winsomely replies, 'Why, so it is; the magic of the woods. And you are of the woods. How could I wish you ill who know and love my trees? Do you fear me still?' Already Dan has begun to weaken, visibly more so as her recitative develops into a song and the song into an ecstatic duet. Tim re-enters while Dan is speaking, and stares at them amazed. 'Hullo! who's your friend?' he asks. Dan's memory has gone, Sylvana is rude to Tim, there are unpleasant misunderstandings, and the two lovers go off together. 'Here's a plight,' says Tim, 'I've lost my friend, I've lost my temper, and I've lost my pot!'

It is at this second critical stage in the story that the other principal lady, Sabrina, rises from the stream, holding up the kettle. 'Excuse me,' she asks—also very musically—'Isn't this your kettle?' More astonishment, more seductive wiles, more recitative developing into more song. Tim is less easy to woo than Dan, however, and it is just at the moment when he is, somewhat guardedly, about to kiss her, that Dan re-enters with the first lady. The interruption forms a contretemps that is frankly comic, a mood maintained to the end, which is what I mean by saying that Mackenzie right through the work kept at least one toe on the ground. It is not described as a comic opera, yet it undoubtedly is one in spite of the magic of elder-blossom and the allure of faery. When the wooing of Tim is interrupted by Dan, the two men stand back to back sulking; they quarrel a little; their quarrel is patched up by the ladies; there is a ballet of nixies, frogs, and wood-nymphs; and there are love potions. The action never flags, and the story is carried along with the momentum of song or ballet or chorus—of which there is a good resonant one near the end. But Tim at an anxious moment has plucked the sprig of elder from Dan's coat, and the third critical stage is reached when Dan with clearer understanding refuses to drink his love potion, and is able to dash the goblet from Tim's hand. Suddenly a cock crows without. It is the signal for disbandment and retreat; there are shrieks and tumult which die away; the shadowy shapes disappear; and the spell, such as it was, is over. Day breaks gradually, and the stage is empty save for Dan and Tim. Tim is crouched half in and half out of the river among the reeds. Dan is leaning against that same old tree-trunk. Both are motionless until birds begin to twitter in the tree; then they turn their eyes and gaze at one another, but do not otherwise move, for a few moments. 'Dan,' says Tim, 'how did ye sleep?' 'I had a dream,' says Dan. 'I had a nightmare,' says Tim; 'How came I in the stream? I'm sodden to the marrow.' Mutual astonishment, a little philosophising, and each goes off home, wishing the other joy. It is full daylight; the birds are singing on all sides; and the curtain falls on an empty stage.

Simply viewed as construction the opera is an excellent one. The book has more than one moment of fine lyrical beauty, and the thread of comic fancy that runs through it prevents it becoming what Byron would have called 'too damned poetical.' As a work of dramatic art it did not seem to me to strike a false note, although in the music you might have heard a good many unfashionable ones. Mackenzie has given us several good diatonic melodies—the Tinker's first song 'Beyond a doubt' is one, and the Poacher's 'The Woodman's life is free as air,' with a recurring five-bar phrase, is another. At the Liverpool production, under Julius Harrison, which on the whole was a good one—taking all the exigencies of rehearsal and transport into mind—I did not feel that the principal singers quite realised the opportunities this score gives them (in places) for pure legato singing. The acting however was good, and Miss Doris Lemon and Miss Muriel Brunskill were very graceful figures as the dryad and naiad respectively. Mr. William Michael was the Tinker and Mr. Hyde the Poacher. It is easy enough to say that the harmonic method of the music is Weberesque, and that may be true, though you might find one or two Wagnerian phrases creeping into the love scenes; but the general effect is one of impulse and freshness. In the Ballet music, which consists of formalistic set dances (though the excellent stage-management somewhat minimised this), Mackenzie, I feel, descends unnecessarily to a familiar idiom. The old Alhambra ballet seemed to return for a few minutes, and the effect was odd. But even that for a septuagenarian requires some doing.

Gramophone Notes

By 'DISCUS'

ÆOLIAN VOCALION

The only orchestral record this month is on the light side—four pleasant movements from Dèlibes's Ballet Suite La Source, played by the Regent Symphony Orchestra (12-in. d.s.). A good military band record of well-worn music is that of H.M. Life Guards playing a selection from The Tales of Hoffmann (12-in. d.s.).

Just now personal as well as musical interest attaches to a 10-in. d. s., of Two Japanese Dances, a French Dance, and a Strathsprey and Reel, arranged for string quartet, by J. B. McEwen. They are delightful, and lose nothing at the hands of the players—the Spencer Dyke Quartet.

Spohr and Bach side by side! The unusual association is met with in a 12-in. d.s. of the sisters Jelly d'Arányi and Adila Fachiri. Spohr is represented by an unaccompanied Larghetto from a Sonata for two violins—tuneful, but a bit oversweet, as usual; and Bach by the long and rattling Gigue from the Sonata in C, for two violins, with pianoforte accompaniment, played by Ethel Hobday. This is a good companion to the same player's record of the slow movement from Bach's double Concerto.

Sapellnikov is heard to advantage in a 10-in. d.s., playing the Brahms Hungarian Dance, No. 6, and an early Scherzo of Mendelssohn—Op. 16, No. 2. The latter is a particularly crisp affair—so good that one can quite believe in the likelihood of a Mendelssohn revival so far as certain sides of his work are concerned.

From the purely vocal point of view, the best song record this month is a 12-in. d.s. of Malcolm McEachern in four of W. G. James's Australian Bush Songs. McEachern's fine voice leaves all the much-boasted foreign operatic stars out of sight. He sings poor stuff too often, but he sings, instead of barking. You are never in doubt as to the notes concerned, and very few of his words miss you. Above all, it all sounds easy—one of the tests of good singing. Think of the heavy weather ninety per cent. of our singers make of everything they do!

Here, for example, is Virgilio Lazzari in a song from Gounod's Faust—'The Calf of Gold' (sung in Italian). There is plenty of pace and energy, but a first-rate singer ought to be able to achieve that pace without losing so much firmness in the vocal line. Compare this record with that of McEachern in the same song (issued recently by Æolian Vocalion), and you will, I think, agree that the Scot shows the way. The orchestral part in this Lazzari record is admirable.

Eric Marshall sings a bad song by W. H. Squire (The Watchman), and a not much better one by Tosti—L'Ultima Canzona. His soft singing is delightful in its expressive quality, but when he increases his power he presses the tone and loses appeal—the commonest vocal fault to-day, and one that unfortunately gives no annoyance to the general public. If it did, and they showed that it did, singers would cure themselves in a jiffy (12-in. d.s.).

Olga Haley gives some excellent singing in Duparc's Chanson Triste (in French) and Schubert's Whither (10-in. d.s.). But only occasionally are we aware that the latter is being sung in English.

COLUMBIA

Beethoven's eighth Symphony is one of the lesser played of the nine, though, if I remember aright, it used to run the fourth and seventh pretty close in popularity. Here it is recorded in seven parts, played by the London Symphony Orchestra under Weingartner, the odd eighth side being filled up by the entr'acte, 'Ferdinand and Miranda,' from the conductor's Tempest—an unimaginative setting of Shakespeare it must be, judging from this sample.

The seventh of Holst's Planets—'Neptune' ('The Mystic')—has now been issued. It is not a complete success, because its most magical moment is the close, wherein the sounds of an invisible female chorus come stealing on the ear, and even more entrancingly tremble away into silence. Even in the concert-room the passage is a bit speculative. At the first Queen's Hall performance it just missed fire; at the second it threw a spell over us. The gramophone is not yet reliable in the matter of choral singing, even of the straightforward sort, so we need not be surprised to find it beaten by this elusive ending of 'Neptune.'

The plum of this month's Columbia output is surely the Mozart C major Quartet, played by the Léner Quartet, and recorded in eight parts. I hope this marks the end of the old policy of recording snippets of chamber music. The set is a delight. One hesitates to suggest a fault in the performance of these players, especially when heard via the gramophone, but it seems to me that the first violin is a shade over-prominent. If this Mozart music doesn't cure your hump, the only remedy is a surgical operation. By the way, listening to the enigmatic harmonies of the opening, one recalls with interest that they caused pained head-shakings among the 'correct' musicians of the period.

Pianoforte records of William Murdoch are not so plentiful that we can afford to have him wasting one on Beethoven's Sonata in G major—the little, early work, sometimes called Sonatina. The record may be useful for teaching purposes, as the work is an established war-horse for the young. But it is rather feeble music, despite its august origin. The Cherniavsky Trio improves on last month's record with an arrangement of Braga's familiar Angels' Serenade and the Scherzo from Beethoven's Trio in B flat (No. 7). The players would have done even better had they given the Serenade a miss in favour of another movement of the Trio.

Yet another record of Saint-Saëns's Introduction and Rondo Capriccioso for violin. Gramophonists who collect records of this work will find the latest —by Leo Strockov—one of the very best.

H.M.V.

The bulls-eye this month is Petrouchka, recorded complete on four 12-in. d.s., played by the Albert Hall Orchestra, conducted by Eugène Goossens. Having heard the music several times in conjunction with the Ballet, I am not in a position to judge it as pure music. But there is so much that is attractive in every way that I cannot doubt of its appeal to the uninitiated, even though the appeal might not be complete or immediate. Stravinsky's score depends so much on instrumental colour that anything like failure in the recording would have been disastrous. Fortunately the reproduction is one of the best achievements of the H.M.V. The success opens up a question that I have touched on before. My experience is that some of the best orchestral recording is done with extremely modern music, in which the instruments are allowed to preserve—even to assert—their individuality. This is the case even in some complex examples. The scoring in some of the classical symphonies contains a good deal of doubling of parts, and I believe that accounts for the fact that Beethoven's Symphonies generally come out less well than most modern orchestral works. These Petrouchka records are a triumph for all concerned.

Suggia is recorded on a 12-in. d.s., playing an Allemande by Senaillé and a Spanish Dance by Popper—delightful playing, but mighty poor music. Renée Chemet is not much better furnished so far as material goes—Kreisler's arrangement of Dvorák's Songs my Mother taught Me and Achernley's A Dream Song (10-in. d.s.). I repeat my monthly question: Are there swell string players going to play music worthy of their skill?

Pianists are more conscientious. Here is Cortôt, for example. He doesn't play a third-rate show piece or an arrangement of a song; not he! In this case he gives us on two 12-in. d.s. the whole of Debussy's Children's Corner, and throws in, to fill up the fourth side, La Cathédrale Engloutie. The playing is what we expect from Cortôt. These are among the best of recent pianoforte records.

Less good is a 12-in. d.s. of Arthur de Greef's performance of Liszt's twelfth Hungarian Rhapsody. He hits as I have heard few pianists hit when being recorded, and a lot of the tone is quite painful. Pianoforte records will be a gamble until a specially constructed instrument is used, or players learn to moderate their transports. Perhaps a solution will be found in a pianoforte with tone on the muffled side, seeing that the normal good tone so often comes out tinny.

The vocal records are of Joseph Hislop (the 'Prize Song' and 'Lohengrin's Narrative'); Robert Radford (Ye twice ten hundred deities and a little-known recit. and air of Arne); Kirkby Lunn (Percy Pitt's Love is a Dream and Holst's The Heart Worships); Carmen Hill (Quilter's Fuchsia Tree and Peel's Where go the boats?—pleasant vocally, but where go the words?); and Selma Kurz (Gounod's Serenade and Chopin's E flat Nocturne—two bad choices; a serenade ought to be sung by a man, even in Leap Year, though I am aware that this one is often sung by women, like Annie Laurie. But the practice is not made the less absurd by being common. The Nocturne makes a poorish song, being transposed to a lower key, and proclaiming its instrumental nature throughout; and the singing is only moderately successful, the delicate ornamentation being far from clear. There must surely be two or three soprano songs left for Kurz to sing before she need lay violent hands on the pianist's repertory. I add that a charming feature of the Serenade is John Amadio's flute obbligato).

Competition Festival Record

So many Festivals have taken place during the past two months that adequate reporting of them is impossible. We give below a bird's-eye view of the season up to the middle of April. The actual dates of the various meetings were announced in our March and April issues.—The ELIZABETHAN FESTIVAL, with a very largely increased entry, appears to have established itself. It stands alone, surely, as an educational meeting, and also in the wealth and diversity of fine music it sets folk studying. A good omen was the widespread interest shown, excellent choirs coming from Taunton, Petersfield, and other places far from London. The organization needs tightening up, but one of the qualities of the Festival's defects in this direction is a kind of homely freedom that somehow sorts well with the profuse genius of the Elizabethans. None the less, we hope the quality will remain and the defects disappear. Alan May, the onlie begetter of the Festival, works like a Trojan, but he needs more help, and, above all, a band of experienced stewards. Will a few enthusiastic, leisured amateurs note?—Among the newer Festivals, BEDFORD continues to show astonishing growth. It is already one of the largest in the country, and among its many strong points perhaps the strongest is the attention given to the needs of the children. From all parts of the county schools of various types and sizes flock into the Festival, and already the work of the past two years is showing fine results. A visit to Bedford on a children's day is a real tonic.—WOODBRIDGE'S one-day Festival (its second) discovered some excellent chamber music players. The choral side suffered from the antagonistic attitude of the local education authority. These narrow, short-sighted officials should read the Education Office Report on British Music, and see how highly the really important people value the Competition Festival movement.—CLARE, in another quarter of Suffolk, is blessed with wiser officers, and as a result a crowded day's work was largely made up of schools from surrounding villages. Good work was shown, and the signs point to this jolly little Festival finding one day too short.—WINCHESTER drops the word 'competitive' from its programme, and lays accent on the festival side. Massed performance was a fine climax to each of the four days. A start was made with a children's day, and very successful it was, with two halls busy with competitions all the morning, and a massed concert in the afternoon. A similar plan was followed with the village and town choirs on the three following days. The test-pieces were taken from works; the choirs competed in the morning, rehearsed under Mr. Adrian C. Boulton in the afternoon, and joined forces in the evening. The works chosen were 'Spring' from Haydn's The Seasons, a Bach Cantata (one the old man wrote for some High Mightiness's birthday; for this occasion it had a new text by Stuart Wilson), and Parry's The Lotos Eaters. There was a first-rate orchestra, and the soloists included Dorothy Silk, Adila Fachiri, and other first-raters.—ENFIELD showed some falling-off in choral entries, but again proved itself to be a capital Festival, with practically all the competitors on the very youthful side. As in former years the standard of the best choirs, both in singing and sight-reading, was high.—RETFORD was busy for three days with some excellent work by schools, and a lot of capital robust material from neighbouring villages. It is worth mentioning that in one of the school classes for sight-singing, the four competing choirs scored 100, 98, 93, and 90 marks respectively.—Children had a field-day at ROMFORD, when about thirty schools from that quarter of Essex sang against each other from 9.30 till mid-day, and joined forces at the prize-giving in the afternoon. The best of the choirs reached an excellent standard.—BELFAST had its usual success, although there was a slight decline in choral entries, due to bad trade and influenza. Sight-singing was compulsory in almost all classes, and the poor results in general show the need for such drastic action. The singing of the best of the children's choirs and the performance by the Queen's Island Male-Voice Choir of Elgar's The Reveille were worth a long journey. Three successful concerts by prize-winners (as against one last year) set the seal on a fine four days' work.—The new Festival at LEEDS was well provided with competitors who kept the judges busy from March 22 to 29. Manchester Orpheus Glee Society (Mr. G. Sidney Smith) carried off the male-voice prize, with Bantock's Lucifer in Starlight. There was a very good children's day.—Earlier in the month CARLISLE had held a very successful four days' Festival. Mr. Norman Allin sang at two concerts given on the Wednesday by Rural Choirs and Business Choirs. Concert performance is a leading aim of this Festival.—Other recent competitions held in the North have been MORPETH (the Wansbeck Festival); SALTAIRE (the Shipley and District Musical Festival), where the Bradford City Police beat Hebden Bridge, the holders of the Male-Voice Shield, by one mark; HEXHAM (the Tynedale Musical Competition), a two-day Festival that brought distinction to the Prudhoe Gleemen and massed the competitors for a performance of Hiawatha's Wedding-Feast; a PERTSHIRE week with three thousand competitors; and festivals of juvenile choral singing held by the MANCHESTER District Tonic Sol-fa Association and LIVERPOOL and district secondary schools.—BRISTOL EISTEDDFOD is one of those long and multiform festivals that find a public ready to make use of every elaboration and subdivision. Folk dancing thrives here; so does every form of choral singing; so do soloists. There were two hundred pianists. A new feature was public speaking on a subject announced half-an-hour beforehand.—The LONDON Musical Competition Festival was held at Central Hall on March 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, and 31 and April 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5. Prizes were distributed in four sessions about a week later. According to the syllabus there were at least a hundred and thirty-six first prizes. The hon. secretary had to deal with three thousand eight hundred entries, about ten thousand competitors, and twenty-three adjudicators. Choirs came from Portsmouth and the Isle of Man, and intermediate districts. Looking through the Festival programme one observes first its completeness and then its 'extra' features—the winning girl guides' choir to broadcast its singing; a conductors' class; the division of London into two regions for soloists; elementary solo sight-singing in camera; a grand pianoforte to be won; a quick-study contest for pianists; elocution at sight; classes in theory and composition. In the middle of it all came the London transport strike, but the Festival did not perceptibly suffer.

'HUM YOUR NOTES, PLEASE'

At a recent festival a choir was called to order by the adjudicator for humming its opening chord before starting the test-piece. We are glad to see in the March Lute a spirited protest against the adjudicator's action. More than once we have known choirs uncertain of their starting notes because the pianoforte on which the chord was struck was a long way off, or because of some distracting noise at the moment (a leather-lunged cornet player outside was a just cause and impediment on one occasion). Surely the singers should not be denied the right of quietly testing themselves. Moreover, as the Lute points out, 'the pianoforte may be stringy, or even out of tune (it is always harmonically out of tune with voices). Some voices tune true, others tune pianoforte-wise, the 5th to one is  $4\frac{1}{2}$ , the third to another may be  $2\frac{1}{2}$ .' Our contemporary urges conductors to hold back the start till they are sure of every singer having the starting note true. A proportion of singers cannot sing a note mentally; they must hear it. 'If you could squirt a chord at them, all might be well, but a mechanical chord squirter has not yet been invented. Wherefore, take the wise and prudent course of getting them to squirt it at you in some fashion.' In the case of thoroughly experienced singers, chord-squirting may not be necessary; a mere whisper of the keynote on the conductor's pitch-pipe will be enough. But most competing choirs are inexperienced. They are there to do their best and learn, and they can hardly do either if they are denied such simple and harmless props as the preliminary hum. And who minds? For our part we like that soft chord that comes stealing down towards our seat of judgment, even though it may put us out in our addition and subtraction of the previous choir's marks. (Besides, let us confess that in some cases it is the most musical part of a choir's performance. Why do them out of their tidbit?) So we say 'Hear!' to the Lute when it ends: 'It may happen that an adjudicator will go purple, see red, or take a fit, or fumble for a morphia tablet. That, dear friends, is the adjudicator's funeral, not yours. Your job is to start in tune; the adjudicator's is to start adjudicating when you have started singing—not before.'

A SUCCESSFUL CLASS FOR COMPOSERS

Composition so far plays but a moderate part in the Festivals. It is worth noting, therefore, that at the London Festival there was a large entry and an encouraging standard. The committee offered a prize of £10 for a string quartet movement, and Mr. W. W. Cobbett one of £2 for a song with string accompaniment. There were twenty-nine and eleven entries respectively. Mr. Maurice Jason, of Aylesbury (a former student of the R.C.M.), swept the board, taking both prizes, and coming a close second in the quartet class. Mr. John E. West adjudicated.

COMPETITIONS IN MAY

GLASGOW (Musical Festival Association).—April 26-May 10. Mr. D. Glen MacKemmie, 168, Hope Street.
STOUR CHORAL UNION.—Chipping Norton, April 29-May 1. Mrs. Whitmore Jones, Chastleton, Moreton-in-the-Marsh.
MARY WAKEFIELD WESTMORLAND FESTIVAL.—Kendal, April 30-May 2. Mr. Geoffrey Tower, 'Festival,' Burneside, Kendal.
WEST LOTHIAN.—Linlithgow, May 1 and 2. Mrs. K. Mackenzie, Longcroft, Linlithgow.
PORTADOWN.—April 28-May 2. Miss Winifred E. Hadden, Magharee, Portadown.
ESSEX MUSICAL ASSOCIATION.—Colchester, May 3-8. Rev. E. P. Luard, Birch Rectory, Colchester.
CROYDON.—May 5-10. Mr. Thomas Cook, 7, Katherine Street.

BALLYMENA.—May 5-9. Mr. W. Wier, Ingleside, Ballymena.

DUNGANNON.—May 7-9. Mrs. Neill, Dungannon.

DORSET CHORAL ASSOCIATION.—Bournemouth, May 6 onwards. Miss F. Kindersley, The Privets, St. Martin's Road, Dorchester.

PETERSFIELD.—May 5-8. Miss Grace M. Hoskyns, Brookside, Bedhampton, Hants.

EAST GRINSTEAD.—May 7. Miss Helen M. Beale, Standen, East Grinstead.

MIDLAND MUSICAL COMPETITION FESTIVAL.—Birmingham, May 10-24. Mr. G. J. Bowker, Queen's College, Birmingham.

SURREY.—Guildford, May 10-15. Miss C. Egerton, St. George's Hill, Weybridge.

STRATFORD AND E. LONDON.—May 10-17 and 24. Mr. John Graham, 74, Park Hall Road, N.2.

PEOPLE'S PALACE, E. LONDON.—May 13-24. Rev. C. J. Beresford, 392, Commercial Road, E.1.

ESKDALE TOURNAMENT OF SONG.—Whitby, May 13-15. Misses C. and M. Yeoman, Woodlands, Sleights, Yorks.

GALLOWAY.—Newton Stewart, May 14, 15. Miss Duncan, Danevale, Castle Douglas, Scotland.

SWALEDALE TOURNAMENT OF SONG.—Richmond, Yorks, May 14, 15. Miss Ruth Roper, Pottergate, Richmond.

PONTEFRAC.—May 14, 15, and 20-24. Mr. A. M. Storr, Baxtergate, Pontefract.

SOUTH SOMERSET.—Yeovil, May 14, 15. Mr. B. B. Swaffield, 3, Hendford Grove, Yeovil.

KENT.—Dover, May 14-17. Mr. Leslie B. Mackay, 378, High Street, Rochester.

NORTHERN COUNTIES OF SCOTLAND.—Inverness, May 15-17. Mr. J. M. McGeachan, 40, Rangemore Road, Inverness.

MORECAMBE.—May 15-17. Mr. W. C. Fawcett, 25, Victoria Street, Morecambe.

KENSINGTON, W. LONDON.—May 15-17. Miss Mary Fletcher, 13, Ladbroke Terrace.

PORTSMOUTH MUSICAL COMPETITION FESTIVAL.—May 15-17. Mr. T. E. Plater, 7, Palmerston Road, Southsea.

STIRLINGSHIRE.—Falkirk, May 14-17. Mr. A. Callander, 97, High Street, Falkirk.

NORTH AND EAST HERTS.—Hitchin, May 16, 17. Miss J. Barlow, Stanstead Abbots, Herts.

WILTSHIRE.—Devizes, May 17-21. Miss Wilson Fox, Langton House, Churchfields, Salisbury.

MID-SOMERSET.—Bath, May 16-24. Mr. H. Bowen, 13, Daniel Street, Bath.

BORDER FESTIVAL.—Galashiels and Hawick, May 19-24. Mr. J. M. Duthie, Burgh Schoolhouse, Galashiels.

COLERAINE.—May 20-22. Mr. William Knox, 12, Lodge Road, Coleraine.

BERKS, BUCKS, AND OXON.—Reading, May 21-24. Mrs. Commeline, The Rectory, Beaconsfield.

CORNWALL.—Penzance, May 21-23. Lady Mary Trefusis, Trefusis, Falmouth.

NORFOLK.—Norwich, May 21-24. Mrs. W. Tillett, 2, Claremont Road, Norwich.

HULL.—May 21-24. Mr. John Coulson, 14, Salthouse Lane, Hull.

UPPER WARD OF LANARKSHIRE.—Lanark, May 22-24. Mr. A. C. McNair, The Cottage, Biggar, N.B.

WHARFEDALE.—Ilkley, May 28-31. Mr. A. T. Akeroyd, Kirk Ella, Harrogate.

LYTHAM ST. ANNE'S.—Lytham, May 28-31. Mr. H. Hughes, 79, Rossall Road, Lytham.

BUXTON AND NORTH DERBYSHIRE.—May 29-31. Mr. John B. Brade, 63A, Spring Gardens, Buxton.

CARRICKFERGUS.—May 29-31. Mr. T. R. Cambridge, High Street, Carrickfergus.

ISLE OF WIGHT.—Ryde, May 29-31. Mr. Oscar J. Feben, The Bungalow, 16, Belvedere Street, Ryde.

LEAGUE OF ARTS.—The Guildhouse, Eccleston Square, London, May 30, 31. Mr. and Mrs. Andrew O. Gibbon, 160, Hammersmith Road, W.6.

The Handel-Elgar Overture was played at Cape Town on March 27 under Mr. Theo. Wendt, the occasion being the 387th subscription concert of the Cape Town Orchestra.

Church and Organ Music

ROYAL COLLEGE OF ORGANISTS

LECTURES ON CHOIR-TRAINING

Candidates for the Examination of Choir-Training, and all members of the College, are cordially invited to attend the following lectures :

Monday, May 12, 1924, at 2.0 p.m., Mr. Sydney H. Nicholson, M.A., Mus. Bac. Subject, 'Congregational Singing.'

At 5.30 p.m., Mr. E. T. Cook, Mus. Bac. Subject, 'Plainsong.'

Tuesday, May 13, at 3.0 p.m., Dr. Ernest Bullock. Subject, 'Practical Choir-Training.'

At 5.30 p.m., Dr. W. A. Aiken. Subject, 'The Voice.'

F.R.C.O. (CHM.) ; A.R.C.O. (CHM.)

The Examinations in the above diploma will be held at the College on Wednesday, May 14, at 10 a.m.

H. A. HARDING, Hon. Secretary.

THE WORSHIPFUL COMPANY OF PARISH CLERKS AND ITS ORGAN

BY ANDREW FREEMAN

Amongst the many ecclesiastical institutions that are gradually falling into disuse must be reckoned the Parish Clerk—for, though there are still many holders of this ancient and honourable office, the glory of it has long since passed away. Most of its former and more important duties have either fallen into abeyance or have been taken over by other officials. When a vacancy is filled it is usually for reasons of sentiment.

Since there is in Domesday Book a reference to the Clerks' Guild at Canterbury, we may assume that there were similar fellowships in other large towns at the same early period, if not before. But there is no record of such an institution in London until the year 1233, when, as Stow tells us, the parish clerks of London were incorporated and registered at the Guildhall.

Henry VI. granted them a Charter in 1442, and James I. granted them a new one in 1610. Under the terms of the latter they were required '... to make weekly returns for the bills of mortality and of the deaths of freemen. The master and wardens had power granted to them to examine clerks as to whether they could sing the Psalms of David according to the usual tunes used in the parish churches, and whether they were sufficiently qualified to make their weekly returns.*'

Their present Charter dates from 1640.

The original home of the Fraternity was at Bishopsgate: its site marked by Clerks' Place and Wrestlers' Court. For a long time they were allowed to enjoy a moderate competency undisturbed, but in the reign of Edward VI. they were mercilessly despoiled of their possessions, heavily fined, and unjustly imprisoned. However, they outlived these difficult times, and either purchased or leased a new hall in Brode Lane, Vintry, in 1562. Rather over a century later the Great Fire of 1666 sent them to new quarters, which were specially built for them and completed in 1671. Here, in Silver Street, Wood Street, they have been housed ever since, despite one or two rather unpleasantly dangerous fires and a severe shaking from a bomb dropped during an aerial attack on the City.

Many interesting relics of bygone days are contained in the three rooms which the Company reserves for its own use, including some excellent pictures of benefactors and former members, some 17th century chairs, an ancient clock, and some old stained glass with heraldic devices. But the most handsome fitment in the whole suite is undoubtedly the organ—a delightful little instrument in perfect accord with its environment.

* The Parish Clerk. P. H. Ditchfield, p. 109.

Since, however, this is not the first organ owned by the Fraternity, it would be well to start with the earliest mention of its predecessor, namely, with a Court Minute dated January 16, 1664:

'Whereas there was lately an Organ brought in & sett vp in o<sup>r</sup> Comon Hall, vpon tryall, for the service

'Three guiny's peeces of gold, towards the beautifeing of the Organ, Vpon Condi<sup>c</sup>on that he shall not be chosen at any time hereafter To the Office of an Assistant to this Company, or any office therein,' and the other ordering that

'... the repair of the Organ be left to the Master & Wardens: Mr. Sadler & the Organist or such persons as they shall think fitt.'

These Minutes belong to 1671 and 1712 respectively.

Photo. by]

[Andrew Freeman

THE ORGAN IN THE HALL OF THE WORSHIPFUL COMPANY OF PARISH CLERKS, LONDON

of this Company, The better to enable them to pforme a Service incumbent on them before the Lord Mayor & Aldemen of this City of London on Michās day &c: And alsoe the better to enable them whoe already are, or wch hereafter shalbe Parrish Clerks of this City in pforming their Dutyes in their seual & respective Parrishes to wch they stand related, The whole Court of Assistants here prsent, having taken the matter into a serious Consideracon, Doe Order that the sd Organ now Standing in their Comon Hall shal be bought, at such reasonable rate as Mr: John Bedford one of the Assistants of this Compy: shall agree for the same.'

The instrument thus procured cost twenty pounds. It seems to have lasted till the present one was set up in its place, for there is no reference in the Minutes to the purchase of another in between. Indeed, the only specific mention of the organ apart from its inclusion in the Annual Inventory of the Company's effects ('The Organ & an Organ stoole, and an Organ Desk'), is contained in a couple of Minutes, one recording the payment by 'Mr. Louis Burnett, Clerke of the Parish of St. Martin in the fields,' of

The reference to an organist reminds us that for a long period of years one or other of the members was annually elected to that position. None of the many who filled the position seems to have made his mark in the musical world, but amongst the names I noticed that of Edmund Gelding, or Gilding, who was also organist of St. Martin's, Ludgate, at the time of his decease, in 1782. Edward Henry Purcell was a candidate for the office in 1741, but failed to secure even one of the nineteen votes cast.

After seventy years of use the old organ began to show itself incapable of responding to the moderate demands made upon it. Accordingly, on October 24, 1737, 'the Court took into consideration the providing a New Organ for the Company,' and empowered a committee 'to treat and agree for Mr. Milner's Organ or any other, on the best terms they can.'

On January 16 following, the Court ordered the payment of 'Mr. Bridges Bill for putting up the Organ & Carpenters Work about the same, amounting to Seven pounds & seventeen shillings.' The actual cost of the new instrument does not appear, but the old one was 'given to Mr. Rich<sup>d</sup> Bridge on Condition of his Tuning & keeping in Repair the present New Organ . . . for seven years.'

Richard Bridge, who learned his craft in the establishment of Renatus Harris, seems to have been building organs from about 1730 to 1757. It is possible, therefore, that he was actual maker of this one, but Mr. Kirkland, who restored it in 1911, was unable to find any marks by which its original builder could be identified. I think, indeed, that this is the first time Bridge's name has been associated with it, even as keeper and repairer.

This restoration, which followed on a period of upwards of seventy years of disuse, was carried out on scrupulously conservative lines. The aim was to put the instrument into good order, and make it once more playable. No alteration whatever was made in its tonal scheme, while such repairs as were effected in pipe-work and mechanism were limited to those that were absolutely necessary. The result is that it now sounds very much as it did when it was first installed nearly two hundred years ago. Very much, but not quite!—for all metal pipes deteriorate with the lapse of time and the hard wear of tuning, and it would not be fair to Bridge, or to any of his contemporaries, to say that these pipes represent him at his best. But they are very good, for all that, and there is a piquancy about their tone which is really rather captivating.

One peculiarity in the specification will be noticed—the Vox Humana, which forms the bass of the Trumpet. It would be recognised for what it is even if the label were missing, but after playing on it one cannot help wondering if it was ever used at the old-time singing practices of the brethren, and if so, whether it served as a warning or an example in the matter of voice-production. There can be no doubt which purpose it would serve to-day, for its use (within reason) invariably causes a smile.

The organ consists of one manual only (compass GG to D), fifty-six notes, and the following stops :

	NO.	FT.
Open diapason (Treble) ... ..	8	26
{ Stopped diapason (Treble) ... ..	8	26
{ Stopped diapason (Bass) ... ..	8	30
{ Principal (Treble) ... ..	4	26
{ Principal (Bass) ... ..	4	30
Flute ... ..	4	56
Fifteenth ... ..	2	56
{ Cornet Mixture (Treble) ... ..	III.	78
{ Sesquialtera (Bass) ... ..	III.	90
{ Trumpet (Treble) ... ..	8	26
{ Vox Humana (Bass) ... ..	8	30

The treble stops commence on middle C sharp, as in most old organs. Only two stops go right through. The old black keyboard remains. The white sharps have a black inlay along their lengths which adds considerably to their attractiveness. When not in use the keyboards slide in, and the whole of the front below the impost is closed in with folding-doors. There are no accessory movements.

The organ case is a handsome example of its period, well-proportioned and excellently carved. The front pipes, most of which speak, are divided into three compartments: over all is a broken triangular pediment with mouldings that are both rich and bold, and with a large shield as centre-piece. The front pipes are gilded, and so, too, is a good deal of the carving. Here and there the gold is rather worn, and the wood-work (oak) has been unnecessarily painted; but the general effect is very pleasing, and even beautiful. One would indeed have to travel a good many miles in order to find an old English organ so well-preserved and so handsome as this little instrument which for more than nine score years has graced the Hall of the Worshipful Company of Parish Clerks.

Photo. by

[Andrew Freeman]

THE KEYBOARD OF THE ORGAN IN THE HALL OF
THE WORSHIPFUL COMPANY OF PARISH CLERKS, LONDON

SOUTHWARK DIOCESAN PLAINSONG ASSOCIATION

The Festival will take place at Southwark Cathedral on June 12 at 8 p.m. The hon. secretary, Mr. Godfrey Seats (18, Ballina Street, S.E.23), will be glad if all who intend to take part will let him know soon, stating how many copies of the service book they will need.

WESTMINSTER CATHEDRAL RECITALS

Three recitals of unusual interest are arranged for May, the players being Mr. Lynnwood Farnam (15th), Dr. W. G. Alcock (22nd), and M. Marcel Dupré (29th). Dupré will improvise variations, fugue, and toccata on a theme provided by Dr. Alcock. The recitals are at 6.30.

How does this programme played by a boy aged twelve strike the reader?—Prelude in G, Bach; Petite Pastorale, Ravel; Sketches in C and D flat, Schumann; Festive March, Smart; Five Variations on a Scotch Air, Stuart Archer. The twelve-year-old is Horace W. King, and he played the above at Acton Hill Wesleyan Church on March 12. We hope he played as well as report says he did, and we wish him all success and immunity from swelled head.

The new organ recently built by Messrs. Harrison & Harrison for All Saints', Clifton, Bristol, was dedicated on March 24. A recital was given by the organist of the Church, Mr. W. E. Kirby, on the following evening. His programme included Bach's D minor Toccata and Fugue and three Chorale Preludes, Harwood's first Sonata, and works by Parry, Mozart, Debussy, &c. The instrument is the gift of Mrs. H. H. Wills in memory of her husband, and is a three-manual of fifty-seven stops.

The Stuart Foord String Quartet gave a recital at St. Lawrence Jewry on March 20, playing Cecil Hazlehurst's Quartet in C minor. Mr. Stuart Foord and Mr. Eric Brough played the Franck Sonata, and the former also gave Debussy's Reflets dans l'Eau.

At Ripon Cathedral, on April 10, the St. Matthew Passion was sung by the Cathedral and Oratorio Choirs combined. Dr. C. H. Moody conducted, and gave a short address on the work. Mr. A. E. Durnford was the violin soloist, and Mr. Cecil Richards was at the organ.

Mr. W. A. Roberts lectured on Bach's organ music before the Liverpool and District Organists' and Choirmasters' Association on April 7. Illustrations were played by Mr. Walter Wright and Mr. Harry Ellis.

Mr. Herbert Hodge will play the test-pieces for the Royal College of Organists' July examinations at his recitals on Tuesdays (mid-day) during May, at St. Nicholas Cole Abbey.

Mozart's Requiem was sung by an augmented choir at Hexham Abbey on April 9, conducted by Mr. N. S. Wallbank, with Dr. C. H. Moody at the organ.

Dvorák's Stabat Mater was sung at St. Matthias's, Richmond Hill, on Good Friday, by the Oratorio Choir of eighty, under the direction of Mr. Ambrose Porter.

Messrs. Rushworth & Dreaper have built an organ for the Church of the Saviour, Blackburn—a two-manual of seventeen stops.

Among the works lately issued in Braille by the National Institute for the Blind is the Little Organ Book of Bach.

ORGAN RECITALS

Mr. Allan Brown, City Temple—Finale in B flat, Wolstenholme; Toccata in F, Bach; Präludium (Sonata No. 20), Rheinberger; Introduction and Passacaglia (Sonata No. 8), Rheinberger.

Dr. W. H. Speer, Calvert Memorial Church, Hastings—Sonata in F minor, W. H. Speer; Sonata in E flat (first movement), Bach; March and Hymn of Crusaders ('St. Elisabeth'), Liszt.

Mr. Alban Hamer, Bloemfontein Cathedral—Suite Gothique, Boëllmann; 'Meum ac Vestrum Sacrificium,' de la Tombelle; Fantasy-Prelude, Charles Macpherson.

Dr. A. W. Wilson, Manchester Cathedral—Chorale Preludes by Bach, Brahms, and Parry; Fugue (Pastoral Sonata), Rheinberger; Sonata No. 5, Mendelssohn.

Dr. Alan Gray, Manchester Cathedral—Fantasia in G, Parry; Meditation, Hillemacher; Idyll on Kipling's 'Recessional,' Gray; Prelude and Fugue in A minor, Bach; Two Chorale Preludes, Brahms; Final, Franck.

Mr. W. Greenhouse Allt, East United Free Church, Broxburn—Gavotte, Bach; Réverie on 'University,' Harvey Grace; Prelude on 'Rhosymedre,' Vaughan Williams; Grand Chœur in G, Hollins.

Mr. Cyril Pearce, Park Lane Wesleyan Church, Norwich—Evening Song, Bairnstow; Intermezzo and Scherzoso (Sonata No. 8), Rheinberger; Fantasia and Fugue in C minor, Bach; Imperial March, Elgar.

Dr. Harold E. Darke, St. John's, Southwick Crescent—Fantasia in F minor, Mozart; 'Chant de Mai,' Jongen; Three Chorale Preludes, Parry; Sonata No. 1, Harwood.

Sir Walford Davies, St. John's, Southwick Crescent—Overture, 'Arminius,' Handel; Choral, 'Schmücke dich, O liebe Seele,' Bach; Sonata in E flat, Bach; Fugue on the name of B A C H, Schumann.

Mr. Norman Greenwood, St. John's, Southwick Crescent—Fantasia (Sonata No. 12), Rheinberger; Prelude and Fugue in E minor, Bach; Choral in E, Franck; Fantasia, Saint-Saëns; Toccata and Fugue in G, Parry.

Mr. Harold Helman, Parish Church, Retford—Symphony in C, minor, Holloway; Concert Variations, Bonnet; Scherzo in A flat, Bairnstow; 'Plaint' and 'Cradle Song,' Harvey Grace; Triumphal March, Liszt; Sonata, Reubke.

Mr. William Robson, St. George's Presbyterian Church, Stockton-on-Tees—Recessional, Alan Gray; Sonata in B flat minor, Vockner; Two Preludes on Old Irish Church Melodies, Stanford.

Mr. R. M. Cadman, Trent College Chapel—Fugue in E flat, Bach; Two Preludes on Old Irish Church Melodies, Stanford; Two Chorale Preludes, Parry; Scherzoso (Sonata No. 8), Rheinberger.

Mr. H. Cyril Robinson, St. John's, Barmouth—Sonata No. 1, Mendelssohn; Dithyramb, Harwood; 'Pomp and Circumstance' No. 4, Elgar.

Mr. F. Dalrymple, Tredegarville Baptist Church, Cardiff—Prelude and Fugue in E minor, Bach; Dithyramb, Harwood; Toccata and Fugue ('The Wanderer'), Parry; Presto (Sonata in G), Elgar.

Mr. W. Hunt, St. George's, Belfast—Sonata in A minor, Borowski; Funeral March and Hymn of Seraphs, Guilmant; Allegro Marziale, Frank Bridge.

Mr. Wilfred Arlom, Christ Church-St. Lawrence, Sydney—Sonata No. 8, Rheinberger; Prelude, Fugue, and Variation, and Choral No. 3, Franck; Preludes on 'York' and 'St. Mary,' Charles Wood; Choral Improvisation on 'In dulci Jubilo,' Karg-Elert.

APPOINTMENTS

Mr. John Nelson, organist, St. Alban's, Cheetwood, Manchester.

Dr. T. E. Pearson, organist and choirmaster, Halifax Parish Church.

Mr. Ernest W. Pettit, organist and choirmaster, New College Chapel, Hampstead.

Letters to the Editor

THE BRITISH FEDERATION OF MUSICAL COMPETITION FESTIVALS

SIR,—May we be allowed to bring before your readers the effective work being done by the Competition Festivals at the present time?

These festivals originated in the early 'eighties, and have been growing steadily in numbers and importance until now they form one of the most potent factors in the musical life of the country. Their principal aim is the encouragement of choral singing in schools, villages, clubs, institutes, factories, business houses, and wherever people gather together for social and educational purposes. The movement has led to the formation of hundreds of such choirs, which but for its influence would not now be in existence.

The finest music is performed, and the marked improvement shown by competing choirs after a few appearances at their local festivals is surprising. Festival adjudicators are chosen from leading musicians whose instructive and impartial criticism is of practical help to each competing choir.

It is estimated that last year there were 250,000 competitors, as well as large and appreciative audiences.

The movement grew so rapidly that it became evident that there must be a centre from which guidance, information, and practical help could be obtained, especially by newly-formed and not fully developed festivals. To meet this need the British Federation of Musical Competition Festivals (an Association not for profit) was incorporated in 1921. To our mind the work already accomplished by it completely justifies its existence.

Already it has spread from the United Kingdom to the Dominions Overseas, and will thus form another link in the chain of mutual interests which binds us together.

It is a great national—in fact Imperial—work in which each one of your readers can share by encouraging his or her local festival as well as by assisting the funds of the Federation by substantial donations to the Capital Fund, or by subscribing annually to its General Fund. It is hoped that a capital sum of £150,000 will be built up by generous gifts of the larger donors. In addition to this there should be at least sixty thousand lovers of music willing to subscribe annually to the General Fund.

The personnel of the General Board, comprising as it does not only musicians of experience but also members of undoubted administrative ability, ensures that the funds of the Federation will be employed both economically and in the best interests of music.

Intending donors are asked to make their cheques payable to the hon. treasurer, Mr. George J. Bowker, A.C.A., and to send them to the Secretary, British Federation of Musical Competition Festivals, 3, Central Buildings, Westminster, S.W.1, who will be very glad to give further information.—Yours, &c.,

(Signed) W. H. HADOW (Chairman),

HUGH P. ALLEN,
WALFORD DAVIES,
LONDON RONALD,
R. R. TERRY,
GRANVILLE BANTOCK,
H. PLUNKET GEEENE,
H. FAIRFAX JONES

(Secretary).

3, Central Buildings,
Westminster, S.W.1.
March 26, 1924.

FREE COUNTERPOINT

SIR,—Dr. Arthur G. Claypole's admirable article in the April Musical Times should be of great value to students; but it prompts me to suggest some hints and examples which probably may further assist those who are 'going through the mill,' and who feel the need of stimulation, as all of us do at times.

In my early student days I was never advised nor encouraged to look for passages capable of imitation in harmony and counterpoint. My master never mentioned the matter, with the result that I was almost always at a loss to know how to start, and when I had started I did not know whither I was going—there was no objective. What is the use of advising people first to write the cadence and then lead up to it? To write a suitable cadence we need to have some idea as to what precedes it, even in a contrapuntal exercise.

Now we have Buck's Unfigured Harmony, Kitson's Art of Counterpoint, and Morris's Contrapuntal Technique of the 16th Century, but they were not published in the days of which I speak.

I want to suggest the great value of setting words, even in the fairly early stages, as a means towards organic unity. Take the following example, No. 16 on page 131 of Buck's Unfigured Harmony:

Ex. 1.

Sweet as the winds . . . that gent - ly
fly To sweep the Spring's en - am - ell'd floor.

In the working, I believe it would be difficult to say which part Dr. Buck set, if one did not know beforehand:

Ex. 2.

W. J. C.

Sweet as the winds that gent - ly fly
Sweet as the winds . . . that gent - ly
Sweet as the winds that gent - ly . . . fly . . .
Sweet as the winds that gent - ly . . . fly . . . To

To sweep . . . the Spring's en - am - ell'd floor.
fly To sweep the Spring's en - am - ell'd floor.
To sweep the Spring's en - am - ell'd floor.
sweep . . . the Spring's en - am - ell'd floor.

The student soon finds out the value of rests when setting (or singing) words. Sir Walter Parratt (who used to tell his pupils to 'play their rests') once said that he preferred music without words; but the addition of words to a given subject will often suggest points capable of imitation and development, and thus help the tyro where he needs assistance.

In learning Fugue, words are of great advantage if well chosen. We need words which will chop up into short, self-contained sections and combine into 'one glorious whole,' and with which we can juggle, e.g.:

'Thou shalt shew me the path of life; in Thy presence is the fulness of joy; and at Thy right hand there is pleasure, for evermore. And when I wake up after Thy likeness, I shall be satisfied.'

Many students look upon words in an examination test as a bugbear, and grumble in consequence; whereas, like fingering at the pianoforte or organ, they can be looked upon as 'guides, counsellors, and friends.' See how they can suggest suitable and descriptive phrases:

Ex. 3. ROUND FOR EQUAL VOICES.

W. J. C.

See'st thou that cloud . . . as sil - ver clear,
Plump soft and swell . . . ing ev - ry - where, 'Tis Ju - lia's bed And she sleeps there.

(HERRICK.)

Finally, I think all who take up paper-work should be encouraged to compose, and thus express themselves, however crudely, almost from the beginning. Composition oils the wheels of harmony and counterpoint, and harmony and counterpoint should oil the wheels of composition. None but a lunatic would practise nothing but technical exercises upon an instrument, but I have known keen students 'choked off' composition, and kept for two or three years to text-books (students are, on occasion, apt to follow the advice of those set over them), with the result that when they wanted to compose they found it extremely difficult to express themselves without some kind of cantus firmus or set part.

I know that composition, and the criticism thereof in lessons, takes time, but it is well worth the extra time in the long run. I wonder how many R.C.O. candidates work the Composition tests? Precious few, I fancy, because they are mainly text-book men, and that is why the new syllabus may be unpopular at first. But it is development along right lines for those who have eyes to see, for it means the evolution of the musical ability beyond the standard of the R.C.O. examinations, and preparation for future work on the part of the candidate.—Yours, &c.,

WILLIAM J. COMLEY.

SIR,—I have read with interest the article on 'Free Counterpoint' which appears in the April issue of the Musical Times. I trust that you may be able to afford space for the discussion of one or two points raised therein. The writer of the article regrets the passing of the monstrosity known as strict counterpoint, with its stodgy semibreve Canti Fermi; for, says he, such exercises 'develop the capability of writing in a flowing polyphonic style' (the italics are mine).

I think it is high time that such pious and misleading platitudes as the above were knocked on the head once and for all. Dr. Claypole is simply re-echoing the parrot-cry we all know so well.

Will Dr. Claypole explain how it is that the R.C.O. examiners, commenting on the work of F.R.C.O. candidates in the January examination, express themselves as follows:—

'Counterpoint.—The strict counterpoint was generally good, the free counterpoint poor. Fugue.—There is the same old difficulty in making the free parts interesting and relevant [my italics].'

Much the same remarks are repeated twice yearly as the examinations come round. How do Dr. Claypole and other votaries of strict counterpoint justify strict counterpoint as a means of attaining freedom?

I now turn to Dr. Claypole's workings of a florid C.F., to which he adds three parts in free counterpoint. These model workings are assumed to be good. On the very next page Mr. Harvey Grace gives excerpts from Rheinberger's Organ Sonatas, and I cannot help contrasting Rheinberger's music with Dr. Claypole's exercises. I confess that the latter leave me utterly cold. Of the four workings submitted, the third alone seems to be at all musical, and even in this there is little spontaneity.

It would be interesting from a psychological point of view to learn how such music (?) is arrived at. It certainly requires a particular type of mind to concoct such stuff. No wonder that British composers are unable to write operas—serious or light—if the training they receive is summed up in the kind of puzzles exemplified by Dr. Claypole's workings.

If it be argued that the ability to work such exercises has nothing to do with composition, one may indeed ask, Why study at all? I see nothing in Dr. Claypole's examples of what he calls 'inventive genius.' There is certainly no music. Perhaps it is what Dr. Kitson terms 'abstract work.' All I can say is that such 'abstract work' has no raison d'être. It reminds us of the old method of teaching modern languages, whereby the student learnt a terrific number of rules but could not write—let alone say—half-a-dozen words connectedly in the foreign tongue.

The student of composition has a right to demand that he shall be taught the living language of music, so as to be able to turn to good account commercially whatever talents he may possess. The kind of 'music' which Dr. Claypole holds up as 'model workings' (assuming them to be good) is neither 'fish, flesh, nor fowl,' and nobody wants it.

In conclusion, I wish to state that I have written in no spirit of discourtesy towards Dr. Claypole, with whom I am not acquainted. But in view of the lively discussions going on at the present time on the subject of popularising music, I think the subject needs to be considerably ventilated.

Just as you, Mr. Editor, rightly castigate Felix and a particularly inane type of waltz, so do I think that similar inanities in the realm of 'highbrow' work should not get off scot-free. 'Highbrow' work of the type of Rheinberger's Organ Sonatas, containing as these do beautiful melodies, is all right; jig-saw puzzles are not.—Yours, &c.,

17, Bellevue Road, S.W. 17.

CLAUDE LANDI.

HANDEL'S 'DELICIOUS PROFANITY'?

SIR.—If Mr. Herbert Brown's letter in your last issue on 'The Neglect of Handel' means anything at all, it means that we are not to regard such works as The Messiah as anything but works 'of wondrous poetry and supreme imaginative power.'

He speaks of Handel as being 'deliciously profane,' but yet as having been 'claimed as the exclusive property of the Church . . . planted on a pious pedestal and paraded before the multitude as one who had dedicated his art . . . to the propagation of the Gospel.'

It is perfectly true that to adjust secular tunes to sacred words showed a hopeless lack of musical sense and of innate reverence in those who connived at these things. But Handel was not responsible for this; and I consider that Mr. Brown has confused the issue by mentioning this side of the question. Summing up, he says: 'In short, such of his music as was not ruthlessly jettisoned became invested with a sickly Sabbath-day, death-bed repentance flavour.' Further, he backs up his argument with a quotation from Mr. R. A. Streatfeild, who remarked that 'Handel the preacher is laid for ever in his tomb.'

In other words, Handel was a hypocrite, and he discoursed in music of Divine things with his tongue in his cheek!

The merest child who has read the life of Handel and the wondrous history of the composition and first performance of The Messiah knows better than this. If Mr. Brown has persuaded himself that Handel was insincere (which he must have been if this contention be true), then he is in the minority of one—broadly speaking. At any rate, such a bold contention needs more justification than he has given us in his rhetorical letter, and will convince no one but the cynic.

Further, if he could persuade the public (as seemingly he is anxious to do) that they would appreciate their Handel better if they swept away 'into outer darkness all the cumbrous and suffocating tradition of ages,' then it is quite certain that the public would neglect Handel far more than they do now. For it is these very 'traditions'—if they are to be so called—which to a great extent sustain the popularity of such works as The Messiah.

We none of us care to be living in a fool's paradise. But Mr. Brown has not proved to us that Handel's paradise is a 'fool's paradise'!

Sincerity is an obvious thing. Like honesty, there is no mistaking it. It will always appeal to John Bull, at any rate. And Handel was nothing if not sincere. His sincerity is apparent in every bar. It is only the clever cynic who believes in nothing, and in nobody.—Yours, &c.,

Ruardean, Gloucestershire.

CLAUDE W. PARNELL.

CYRIL SCOTT AND DEBUSSY

SIR,—In your review of Mr. Cyril Scott's new book, My Years of Indiscretion, there is a quotation stating that Debussy 'was neither an unpleasant personality nor an impressive one. I think he was one of those few Frenchmen who sacrifice French politeness to sincerity.' My own personal experience of the French composer was that he was remarkably 'shy' and 'timid,' and appeared rather annoyed if anyone asked him questions about his own works. But he immediately brightened up when the conversation drifted towards the modern international musical movement. No French musician had a more complete knowledge of published foreign modern musical scores, and especially of works he never had an opportunity of hearing publicly performed. He seemed to be as much an omnivorous reader of modern scores as the leisured woman is of new novels from the circulating libraries. His acquaintance with the scores of British, American, and even Dutch composers was astonishing. I have heard him 'hum' melodies from Mackenzie's Colomba and The Rose of Sharon with as much freshness as anyone who had attended a performance the night before. No British musician except their composers had a more complete knowledge of two rarely-performed works—Parry's oratorio Saul, and Stanford's opera The Canterbury Pilgrims. He knew all the Gilbert-Sullivan operas, but had witnessed a performance of only one, H.M.S. Pinafore, when he was a boy on a visit to relatives in London. He was always an 'ideal' Frenchman as regards politeness, and was equally courteous to the duke and the dustman. His great weakness was that he had a strong objection to being 'mistaken' for a musician in the streets, and never would carry any music or a portable musical instrument unless it was 'properly' concealed.—Yours, &c.,

ANDREW DE TERNANT.

36, Somerleyton Road, S.W. 9.

SOME MSS. OF THE LATE F. J. CROWEST'S—
WHAT HAS BECOME OF THEM?

SIR,—Some time before his death the late Frederic J. Crowest wrote to me stating that he had then in MS. two books in the Music Story Series (Walter Scott Publishing Co.). I have watched, but without result, for the publication of these books. They were Story of the Pianoforte and Story of Church Music.

Could any reader enlighten me? Does anyone know what became of these manuscripts; and is there any likelihood of the books being issued, for I consider this series and the Master Musicians (edited by the late F. J. Crowest) as invaluable to all serious musicians? I understand that the Walter Scott Publishing Co. is no longer in existence, so perhaps some other firm could publish the above-mentioned books, for I fully believe that there would be a good demand for them in the States. His other books are very popular, and justly so. Therefore I should be glad to hear from anyone who has knowledge of the late Mr. Crowest's affairs regarding these matters.—Yours, &c.,

FREDERICK SHORT
(Organist and Choirmaster).

St. Paul's Church,
Brooklyn, N.Y., U.S.A.

MUSIC IN WORSHIP

SIR,—Your correspondent Mr. Charles L. Frank, writing in the April issue on the vexed question of the relative merits of Hymns A. & M. and the English Hymnal, seems to have neglected the important and all too apparent fact that congregational hymn singing is practically entirely a matter of association.

Why is it that far less than half of the six hundred odd hymns in A. & M. are never used in the average church to-day? It is not because the other half are bad, nor because those used are all good, but simply because the latter are familiar. Surely the better the music the meeter it is for worship in church. And so long as tunes are sung because of their familiarity, instead of their musical merit, so much the worse for the Church.

In quoting the tune 'St. Clement' (A. & M. 477) and saying it has 'been known and used for many years,' Mr. Frank almost admits (unconsciously, perhaps) this 'association' aspect of church hymn singing. One might cite the 'Old Hundredth' (A. & M. 166) as another instance. The original setting of this, with its long notes at the beginning and end of each line and its magnificent last line, has infinitely more breadth and dignity than the modernised version in general use, but how often is it used? The tune 'Veni, Emanuel' is another case in point. How such a distorted arrangement as that in A. & M. (No. 49) is tolerated by right-minded church-people is a mystery to me.

The English Hymnal, in giving these and many other tunes in their original forms, in addition to any number of magnificent unfamiliar and unknown ones, has done a great service to the Church, and the sooner this is generally realised, and the sooner hymn-tunes are judged on their merit and not on worthless, sentimental grounds of association, the better it will be for every one concerned.—Yours, &c.,

F. H. B.

AGENTS AND TEACHERS

SIR,—The following facts should be of interest and serve as a warning to singing teachers in general. As a teacher of professional students exclusively, it is my business to put them in touch with agents and managers. Latterly one of the former has taken a teacher of singing under his wing to whom applicants for work are recommended for 'finishing lessons.' Another of the tribe combines the two callings of concert agent and teacher of singing. In the latter case advertisements have been appearing inviting singers to apply to a West End concert direction for vacancies in a musical production. Some of my pupils replied, and in every instance received a proposal to take finishing lessons with a view to appearing at a concert, conditionally upon guaranteeing a substantial sum for tickets. It would be interesting to know if other teachers have had similar experiences, and what steps they have taken in the matter.—Yours, &c.,

CLIFTON COOKE.

Guilford Street, W.C.1.

E

'BROWS, HIGH AND LOW'

DEAR SIR,—After reading about 'bad music,' an article written by Feste in the Ad Libitum column, I feel prompted to write to you.

Reading between the lines it seems evident that Feste wants us all to worship and praise 'highbrow' music.

It is people like Feste, in fact all highbrows, seem to want us to say 'Glorious,' 'Delightful,' 'Splendid,' to a lot of discord without good strain of melody. Not only does 'Classical' music 'torture' the performer, but in 9 cases out of 10 'tortures' the listener. I've had some. He appears to make humour out of Hubert David that tuneful writer of 'They just wore a string of beads etc' but he don't make humour out of the individual who is 'writhing in agony' over a 'Highbrowsky Sonata.'

Because people do not like 'Classy' music it does not mean that they are 'musically uneducated' as 'Feste' seems to think, and other 'great' musicians, what ought to know better. It shows that the people generally, like tuneful music and that they have an ear for beautiful sounds not 'musical science and gymnastics' which are a feature of the classics. I used endeavour to be a 'classic' pianist myself a few years back, but I know better now, I refuse to be hypnotised by these 'great masters' that their music is the best, I have studied what my own ears like. I do not want all to like what I like—popular music. But I'm going to see that the Highbrows do not attack popular music without getting a return blow. They have no right to attempt to stamp out the delights of popular music.—Yours truly,

'THE TRAVELLER.'

26, Londesboro' Rd., Stoke Newington.

[We insert the above, in order that our correspondent may have no cause to complain that his 'return blow' was suppressed. We would remind him, however, of the obvious fact that the most popular music in the world—that is, the music most widely performed during the longest period—is almost entirely the work of the classical composers for whom he has no use. We print the letter exactly as it was received, lest an attempt to amend its composition be regarded as yet more 'highbrowism.' It may be worth while to add that we do not overlook the possibility of its being an elaborate and moderately successful joke.—EDITOR.]

'SHORT CUTS AND ROYAL ROADS'

SIR,—I have read with interest in your March issue an article by 'Feste' under the above heading. The situation there set forth is indeed deplorable, and I am afraid we here in the United States contribute an undue amount of unintelligent endeavour in this direction. Our music teaching is, of course, less regulated than yours, for we have no central authority like the Associated Board of the Royal Academy and Royal College, which sends out examiners and tries to set up some sort of standard. But I am certain no one here would have the hardihood to publish the following lines for children, no matter how young:

There was a little sparrow who sat upon a cat,

And pecked all its whiskers away—

Said the pussy to the birdlet, 'You pickey-peckey brat,

Do you think you're finding needles in the hay?'

The source of all this misguided effort is found in the fact that those who originate it are oblivious of the important fact that young children should not see notation of any kind (including Tonic Sol-fa) until they have had a considerable experience of music as such through singing by ear and until, also, they have reached an age where notation can be taught to them as it actually is. The teaching of Tonic Sol-fa or of any other notation to children at the age of four or five takes away something very much more important—namely, an untrammelled experience of beautiful music as such, from which their musical sensibilities are aroused and quickened, their tastes fixed, and their lives made happier. Children who have had this simple experience of music from the age of four to the age of seven are quite ready to understand notation as it is, and to apply it to the experience of music already acquired. On a recent visit to Council Schools in London and schools in other parts of England, I was struck by the facility with which some very small children could read in Tonic Sol-fa, while at the same time there was an absence of spontaneous expression on the part of the children, and an absence, also, of any idea of the beauty and meaning of the music; that is to say, the children were singing the notes but not the music. In one school I heard in the infant department children sing an absurd song to Browning's words 'The year's at the spring,' which was difficult, quite silly, and dependent entirely for its sense on an elaborate and fulsome pianoforte part. The children understood very little of the words and (fortunately) very little of the music.

May I point out two interesting facts: The German children, as stated by Cecil Sharp in his pamphlet Folk-Song, do not see notation in schools until they are eleven years old. By that time they have had five or six years of singing by ear folk-songs, patriotic songs, &c. They are then taught notation, and they absorb it with great rapidity. Singing among adult Germans is extremely common. In France young children are taught Solfège very thoroughly and carefully year by year, beginning at the age of five. Solfège is not by any means music, but a very careful and thorough drill in time values, pitch distances, &c. Choral singing in France is, and has been for many years, at a very low ebb.—Yours, &c.,

21, Lexington Road, THOMAS WHITNEY SURETTE.
Concord, Massachusetts.

'RECOVERY OF THE LOST VOICE'

SIR,—I have read with interest the article in your April issue by Harold Hollinshead. Like him, I have for over twenty years studied this subject exhaustively, and for more than twelve years my teaching has been based on the realisation that it is the wrong position of the larynx which is causing all the terrible destruction of fine voices in this country, and the alarming amount of throat trouble amongst singers—whose throats naturally ought to be the strongest, and, if they were not wrongly used, would be practically immune from any kind of trouble.

So far I am in absolute agreement with Mr. Hollinshead. Where I totally disagree with him is in his statement that the larynx should be low in the throat. On the contrary, I maintain, and I am in a position to prove, that in singing it should be raised to the utmost. The only occasion upon which the larynx should be lowered is in yawning, and that anyone can realise is an impossible position for singing. The worst example of lowering the larynx is the average English contralto, who through lowering and stretching produces a sound which is the most unnatural imaginable, and who has two, and sometimes three, distinct voices—i.e., 'registers'—which are caused entirely by a lowered larynx.

Mr. Hollinshead speaks of lowering the larynx as though it were unknown, whereas it is the commonest form of wrong teaching all over the country—for, being wrong, it is the easiest thing to do, and is the cause of all the loss of voice and all throat troubles that singers and speakers suffer from.

Regarding the Garcia discovery of the laryngoscope, I would like to say that it did incalculable harm to singing and singers, for, before the laryngoscope can be used, the throat must be opened and the larynx lowered, and I maintain that it is a physical impossibility to see a larynx in the right position for singing with a laryngoscope.

May I add a word about the Italian School? The Italians never had, strictly speaking, a school for the technique of the voice, and amongst the good traditions handed down from them is one far from good which has done great harm to English singers, and is based on a complete fallacy, namely, the injunction to 'open the throat.' The Italians as a nation use the throat rightly by gift of nature, and one has only to hear them speak to realise that the larynx with them is up and not down. When they sing the larynx is still further raised, as singing is an exaggeration of speaking, and this raising of the larynx gives an open and absolutely free tone which (to one who has not had to acquire it) actually feels as though the throat were open. If the larynx is lowered, the raising of the soft palate shuts off the cavity at the back of the nose, and more than half the resonance of the voice is lost, besides causing serious damage to the nose, and subsequently to the throat and chest. That there are singers who do this dangerous thing and escape ill consequences to their health (although the voice will inevitably be damaged) cannot be denied, but for each one who escapes there are hundreds—and this is a modest estimate—who are ruined both in voice and health.

May I add that the raising of the larynx gives the most perfect breath-control, as it is the larynx and nothing else that controls the emission of the breath as sound.

I have made no statement for which I cannot give irrefutable proof, and am willing to submit to any test which Mr. Hollinshead cares to suggest.—Yours, &c.,

7, Clifton Gardens, W.9.

ETHEL AUBREY.

April, 1924.

Sharps and Flats

In the name of all that is beautiful, all that is imaginative, virile, glowingly glorious, and subtly sensitive, what in the world can be better than being a Welshwoman or a Welshman?—Leigh Henry.

... That dear old domestic animal, the piano.—Sir Walford Davies.

The piano is the curse of modern vocal music. . . . At the same time, it must be realised that we cannot do without the piano; but while admitting that fact . . . on the other hand, I will admit that the piano played by a genius can be wonderful; but, on the other hand . . . —Sir Richard Terry.

It is amazing how many enemies the piano has survived . . . and we believe that it will also survive Sir Walford Davies and Sir Richard Terry.—Morning Post.

During the entire voyage I only came in contact with English people, and had ample occasion to become acquainted with them and to convince myself how pleasant, amusing, and tactful they are as long as you learn to know them as men and not as politicians.—Siegfried Wagner.

The great foe to be fought is broadcasting. The music-lover is after all a small percentage of the population . . . the remainder are not sufficiently interested to be dragged out of their chairs, and prefer tinned Melba to listening to the artist herself.—Famous West End Impresario.

The greatest menace to the concert world is broadcasting.—Rudolph Mayer.

I refuse to broadcast. If people want to hear Harry Lauder they must pay at the door.—Sir Harry Lauder.

When Richter saw me conduct for the first time in London he said: 'I am glad you have the music in your head and not your head in the music.'—Siegfried Wagner.

Here we had not merely music emphatically Russian in character, but also comprising works of the advanced younger type which the musical Die-hards continually affirm in the press as being something which 'the man in the street' does not want, and these more extreme items were those which evoked an enthusiasm seldom encountered in auditions of those hoary annuals of academic classical canonisation which the same Die-hards affirm as being the natural sustenance of the nebulous figment of those nightmares which build mare's nests in their whiskers, and which they term commonsense.—Leigh Henry.

The Summer School of Folk-Song and Dance will be held at Cambridge from August 2-23. As the school can accommodate in any one week only a limited number, applications will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, preference being given to those applying for the longer courses. Full particulars from The Secretary, E.F.D.S., 7, Sicilian House, Sicilian Avenue, W.C.1.

The Amateurs' Exchange

Under this heading we insert, free of charge, announcements by amateur musicians who wish to co-operate with others.

Accompanist (A.R.C.M.) wishes to meet vocalist or instrumentalist for mutual practice. Croydon or Streatham district.—G. M., c/o Musical Times.

Experienced 'cellist is invited to join pianist and violinist for the practice and study of modern trios, &c.—CROMA, c/o Musical Times.

Peel Orchestra has vacancies for instrumentalists. Excellent musical library. Inquiries invited.—Hon. secretary, G. E. BARBER, 19, John Street, Bedford Row, W.C.1.

Bass vocalist wishes to meet singers for duets and quartets. Croydon district.—L. REEVE, 'Aysgarth,' Shirley Road, Croydon.

Violinist (young man, eighteen) wishes to meet good accompanist for mutual practice. Portswood district.—'MERLIN,' Belmont Road, Southampton.

Young lady violinist (beginner) wishes to meet pianist for mutual practice. S.W. district.—WEEKES, c/o Musical Times.

Soprano wishes to join quartet or trio for mutual practice. Western district.—V. K., c/o Musical Times.

Young lady pianist (advanced) wishes to meet lady or gentleman violinist or mandolinist for mutual practice. Near London Bridge.—S., c/o Musical Times.

'Cellist (lady) wishes to meet pianist for mutual practice, solo and trio.—E. L. T., 74, Erpingham Road, Putney, S.W.15.

THE MUSICAL NATURE OF SPEECH AND SONG

Sir Richard Paget lectured on the above subject before the Musical Association on March 11, illustrating his remarks with a number of interesting experiments with various models, &c. He said that although the nature of vowel sounds was debated as far back as 1779, the first really scientific explanation was given in 1828 by an Englishman—Willis, of Cambridge. He found that each vowel sound in human speech was characterised by a distinct resonant note made in the cavity of the mouth. The next interesting contribution was made about 1860, by Helmholtz, the action of whose resonator was important in connection with the voice. A cavity had a resonating note of its own, which, however, did not depend on the size of the cavity, but on the relation between the size of the cavity and the size of the opening. Helmholtz developed an elaborate theory of vowel sound production on the same lines as Willis, but he came to the conclusion that some sounds depended on a single resonant note while others depended on two resonances set up in the mouth at the same time. Among later investigators, Dr. Aikin developed this idea of the resonance of the different vowel sounds, and devised what he called the 'resonator scale.' This was, said the lecturer, from his point of view a device for standardising vowel sound production. Some two or three years ago he noticed that in the case of his own voice every vowel sound was due to two resonances set up inside his mouth. They were most easily heard when the vowel sounds were whispered. The larynx had nothing to do with the production of vowel sound; it simply served to make sounds carry farther.

All speech, whether whispered or voiced, was a purely musical phenomenon. There was no such thing as noise in human speech. If that be true, one curious result followed—that all people who could understand human speech must have a perfect ear for music, and must have the sense of pitch very highly developed. That was not to say that they could all recognise tune, but they had the capacity. It was only that their minds had not been directed to consider the sounds they heard as music. They considered them as speech sounds and not as music.

Much of this work had a direct bearing on voice-production, though much more experiment was necessary. It was, however, certain that the pitch of the voice was mainly determined by the tension and length of the vocal cords. The volume of sound was mainly determined by the amplitude of air set in vibration, and the size of the resonator through which the vibrating air passed. It was also determined by the freedom of passage which the resonator offered to the sound coming from the larynx. The vowel character of the sound was determined by the resonant pitch of the front and back cavities, the tongue being the dividing stop. The quality of voice was determined by the perfection of the larynx action. It depended upon the whole cavity being utilised to give the maximum resonance possible in the form of two notes required to produce the vocal character. As to the position of the voice, about which many singers and teachers talked much, sound-waves could not be directed except by surfaces large in comparison with the wave-length of the sound—that was a well-ascertained fact. Now the wave-lengths of the human voice varied from 1-ft. for C<sup>III</sup> to 20-ft. for A<sub>1</sub>, but the cavities of the mouth were very small in comparison with waves of that length, so it was absolutely certain that in the mouth resonators there was no direction of sound. People might feel that they were sending the sound to the roof of the mouth or back of the head, but that was not doing it.

A great deal was said, and there were great differences of opinion, regarding the importance or otherwise of the nasal cavity in speaking. It was easy to determine whether the nasal cavity was in operation or not in a particular case by pinching the nose; if it was not, then one heard no difference. In normal vowel formation there was no nasal resonance. There was, however, another effect often called nasal quality which did not depend on the nose, but on the construction of the pharynx, which introduced certain resonances otherwise absent from the voice. Of course much more experiment with models was necessary before a rational explanation could be given of the extraordinary nuances which occurred in human voice-production. More absurdities had been talked and written, and more fantastic theories had been advanced about the acoustics of voice-production, than about any other subject.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC

The students' orchestral concert at Queen's Hall on Tuesday, April 1, opened with Chopin's Funeral March, played in memory of Sir Frederick Bridge, Sir Walter Parratt, and Sir Charles Stanford, all of whom had passed away within the preceding fortnight.

The outstanding item of the programme was B. J. Dale's Song of Praise, for chorus, semi-chorus, and orchestra—a fine but difficult work, which was specially composed for and first produced at a festival service in St. Paul's Cathedral. The work is one of great complexity in parts, but both choir and orchestra acquitted themselves well under Sir Henry Wood's baton.

A Suite (MS.) for small orchestra by William Alwyn, a present pupil, consisted of four short sketches, and is a work of much promise.

In the first movement of Lalo's Violoncello Concerto, Mr. Douglas Cameron proved himself an excellent 'cellist, and Miss Sybil Barlow and Miss Doris Sheppard gave a good account of themselves in Pianoforte Concertos by Saint-Saëns and Paderewski. The other items included Bach's third Brandenburg Concerto for strings, Handel's solo, 'The trumpet shall sound,' sung by Mr. Roy Henderson (trumpet, Mr. Eric Pritchard), and Handel's Organ Concerto in G minor, which brought the concert to an end.

At the chamber concert given in Duke's Hall on April 3, the A Cappella Choir, conducted by Mr. Ernest Read, gave an admirable performance of Bach's Motet, Be not afraid, and also contributed a selection of Madrigals by Sweelinck, Gesualdo, Weelkes, and Wilbye. The chamber music included Dvorák's Pianoforte Quartet, the Theme and Variations from Tchaikovsky's Trio in A minor, and also MS. compositions by Olive Pull, Ivy Rainier, and William Alwyn, present students.

ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC

H.R.H. The Prince of Wales, as President, has approved the Council's nomination of the following as Fellows of the Royal College of Music (F.R.C.M.): Sir Edward Elgar, Sir Henry Wood, Prof. W. H. Bell (Principal of the South African College of Music, Cape Town), Mr. Hamilton Harty, and Prof. Donald F. Tovey, of whom none are members of the Royal College of Music. The following approved nominations for the Fellowship represent such as have been closely connected with the College, either as students or in an official capacity: Sir Walford Davies, Sir Dan Godfrey, Sir Landon Ronald, Mr. Frank Bridge, Mr. Eugène Goossens, Mr. Fritz Hart (Principal of the Melbourne Conservatoire, Australia), Mr. Gustav Holst, Mr. John Ireland, Mr. Perceval Kirby (Professor, University of Johannesburg, S.A.), Mr. W. H. Leslie (Member of the Council, Master of the Musicians' Company), Mr. W. Barclay Squire (Librarian, R.C.M.), and Mr. Leopold Stokowski (Conductor, Philadelphia Orchestra, U.S.A.).

It was indeed under a great shadow that the College came to the close of the Easter term. Sir Frederick Bridge, Sir Walter Parratt, and Sir Charles Stanford, whose intimate connection with the College dated from its very earliest days, all passed away within a few days of each other, and in mourning the personal loss of these beloved friends, the College is proud to know that the nation has paid them the signal honours reserved for her great sons.

A happier recollection 'it is to record that the energies of the students, and not least in those branches in which the deceased musicians were pre-eminent, continue in full flood. The concerts and recitals given during the term numbered no less than twenty-seven, and included a performance of Vaughan Williams's London Symphony, under Mr. Adrian C. Boult, which may rank with the finest achievements of the College Orchestra in recent years; and a violoncello and pianoforte recital by Miss Gena Milne and Mr. Angus Morrison, which would have attracted considerable attention if given in, say, Wigmore or Æolian Hall.

The second and final stage of the Cobbett Competition for Chamber Music took place at the end of the term. The generous Mr. Cobbett had yet once again given prizes amounting to fifty guineas for the composition and performance of new short chamber works. In the first stage of the competition prizes of fifteen and ten guineas were awarded, as previously announced, to Mr. H. Davies Adams and Mr. Strickland Constable respectively for two Fantasies for string quartet. The parts of these prize works were distributed to quartets of string players for rehearsal, with the stipulation that the works were to be prepared independently of assistance. Five sets of players, reduced by illness to four, entered, and performed the works before a board consisting of the donor, Dr. Vaughan Williams, Mr. H. C. Colles, and the Director; the composers also attended, and listened attentively in heroic silence. Some of the performances proved to be so even in merit that it was found necessary to divide the prizes, and awards were made to quartets led by Miss Joan Cartell and Miss Leila Hermitage.

A very welcome variation of the ordinary routine of College and Academy life should not pass without mention. The Director, some members of the Council, and the Board of Professors of the College, entertained Sir Alexander Mackenzie at dinner last term, on the occasion of his approaching retirement. There was an intimate and friendly significance about the occasion, for the hosts were all personal friends of Sir Alexander, and so far from panegyrics and sad farewells, the speeches were entirely conversational, and gave Sir Alexander the opportunity to promise that now he would really have time to do some work. Perhaps the boldest effort of the evening was Sir Hugh Allen's daring in congratulating Sir Alexander on having, during his long stay in England, absorbed some of the South.

Wireless Notes

BY 'CALIBAN'

A change of pen-name. 'Ariel,' I find, has already been bagged by my confrère of the Daily Mail, and I am loath that he should be held responsible for any of my views. The choice of an alternative has not been arrived at hastily. Something from The Tempest seemed appropriate, for wireless recalls the island which was '... full of noises,

Sounds and sweet airs, that give delight, and hurt not.'

And as these words were spoken by Caliban, there is my choice of name, more by token that he is described in the dramatis personæ as 'a savage and deformed slave.'

Want of space last month prevented my discussion of the B.B.C. Symphony Concerts. I hope it is not too late to say a few words about them. First, their success seems to have been in an unexpected direction. The audiences at London orchestral concerts this season have been on the small side, and I, for one, thought the B.B.C. concerts would be even smaller than the average. They did not seem likely to attract to Central Hall the habitués of Queen's Hall, and one naturally expected that wireless enthusiasts would stay at home and listen harder than ever. Instead, there were large audiences, obviously including a very large proportion of people who rarely go to concerts of any kind. The majority were clearly wireless 'fans.' One safely deduced that from the fervour which they applauded the 'Uncle' in charge. Surely never did a public character receive so many cheers for doing so little. 'London calling,' he said to those of us who stayed at home. Roars of applause from those who didn't. 'Stand by for a moment; we must change the amplifier.' (Loud and prolonged cheers.) The climax came with the familiar, 'Good-night, everybody, good-night!' which was hailed with rapture. I mention the fact because it has some bearing on the musical future of wireless. We have been told that musical performances, above all of the solo type, would suffer from a lack of intimate appeal. But the odd thing is, that we constantly have proof of the extraordinary facility with which some speakers and performers get en rapport with their vast unseen audience. My wireless experiences of the past few months, in all sorts of directions—listening to music, plays, operas, news, speakers, 'Big Ben,' &c.—have convinced me that the invention has in it possibilities, artistic, social, and political, before which the imagination reels. A platitude? Yes, but I am still reeling, and can't repress it. (All the same, I hope our magicians will not attempt to pass on to their customers the nightingale's song. Everything in its place: the bird's trill in a drawing-room is as anomalous as a gramophone in a moonlit glade.) The Symphony Concerts, then, were a popular success in the hall. In the home they were only moderately satisfactory. This was mainly due to the choice of place. Had the B.B.C. set out to find the worst hall for the purpose, it would, I think, have selected the Central. The pronounced echo makes it bad for ordinary concert purposes, so one cannot expect it to give good wireless results. The experiment was worth trying for several reasons, but the outcome shows clearly that the time must arrive, and soon, when the B.B.C. will have its own properly equipped concert-halls for various types of performance.

Excellent orchestral results have been obtained from Savoy Hill. Particularly good was the concert conducted by Dan Godfrey, jun. We have had, too, effective transmission of Bliss's Conversations. The programme of Old English music (Kendall String Quartet, Cecil Dixon, and Philip Wilson—the latter as speaker only, being barred by illness from singing) was delightful.

(Had I written notes last month I should have expressed gratitude for a performance of a Brahms Sonata for clarinet and pianoforte by two players whose names I forget—a real joy, and a good example of what the wireless can do in giving us attractive works of a type that the average concert rarely touches.)

The attempt to broadcast the St. John Passion on Good Friday showed that so far the wireless, like the gramophone, is not able to deal satisfactorily with choral singing.

The orchestral part came through well, as did the solos. But I wish the tenor had not sentimentalised the Narrator's part. There is much that calls for no more than plain delivery. It was irritating to hear, for example, such a phrase as 'It was written in Hebrew, in Greek, and in Latin,' delivered molto affettuoso. The fact is, wireless enormously increases performers' responsibilities. This is obvious, of course, but there are signs that some of them fail to realise it. Thus, it would be a pity if the thousands who heard Murdoch one evening play the Chopin A flat Impromptu thought that such a breakneck pace was right. Most of the melodic outline simply disappeared. The average concert-goer would know that such a pace was ruinous, whereas thousands of wireless listeners might be deluded into trying the same slapdash methods.

I had hoped to touch on the attitude of some of my fellow critics towards wireless music, but space has run short, and I must wait till next month. But I squeeze in a line to congratulate the B.B.C. on the steady improvement in the choice and arrangement of its musical programmes.

London Concerts

GERRARD WILLIAMS'S 'KATE'

Kate; or, Love will Find out a Way, at the Kingsway Theatre, was a modern attempt to carry on the tradition of the old English ballad-opera, an attempt which the vogue of The Beggar's Opera at Hammersmith very naturally fathered. Unfortunately we have to speak of Kate in the past.

'The gunner and his mate
Lov'd Mall, Meg and Marian, and Margery,
But none of us car'd for Kate,'

as Stephano sang. But no, it was not quite that. There was much that was likeable about Kate. We wanted to care about her. We felt a resentment against the factors that prevented us from caring more.

Note this difference between two ballad operas. The Beggar's Opera was always Mr. Gay's, the librettist's, opera. Kate was Mr. Gerrard Williams's, the composer's. Of course, that is very flattering to the increased importance of the musician in two hundred years. Still, even in these enlightened days the librettist cannot confidently leave everything to the music. A public that thought about music and nothing else would have taken to Kate as to hot cakes. But who can think of music and nothing else at this sort of entertainment?

Pepusch and Gerrard Williams worked differently. The former's tunes were current, in the air. The tunes of Kate were those English folk-tunes which the most part of the folk have so completely forgotten that when we discover them (and in the past twenty years alert, clever folk have been discovering them and delighting in them) they come no more naturally to us than if they were Hungarian. Never mind. The tunes of Kate were delicious, some three-score of them, the pick of Cecil Sharp's and allied collections. And Mr. Gerrard Williams's working-up of them was full of taste and pretty craft.

Kate is over, dropped, dead. But that is no reason why Gerrard Williams's Kate music should be. It, in fact, is not. The word has gone round that it is to emerge again, fitted to a different text. The sins of the Kingsway text (which was cautiously anonymous) need hardly be gone into now—de mortuis &c. The innocent author had simply set out to provide a row of pegs on which the folk-tunes could be hung. But in ballad-opera there are gaps between the tunes. How those gaps yawned! And in ballad-opera you can hear the words of the songs. These are likely to sound inept if the author has simply put down anything that came first, on the ground that all words are the same in opera. These points are mentioned here for the sake of those who would fain glean in the harvest-field of The Beggar's Opera.

Even the most rapt music-lover must have seen the stage-craft of Gay's writing—of the lively, real, arresting situation presented straightway by that appalling Peachum family.

The libretto of Kate made an attempt to present a nautical, smuggling, hearty English village of the late Georgian time. It is a long time since Trafalgar, and a good deal of curious learning and taste would have been necessary to do the thing properly. It was deadly conventional and unreal—the merest theatrical pinchbeck. The hero was a naval officer, and they called him Jack. 'Jack,' however, belonged exclusively to the lower deck until quite recent times. Kate's lover would have been Johnnie. C.

THE NINTH SYMPHONY

Was it by accident or design that the Ninth Symphony was played twice within five days (March 20 and 24)? Anyhow, this double celebration of the centenary of the first performance of the Symphony (Vienna, May, 1824) thereby took on something of the character of a grand sporting event—Weingartner v. Kussevitsky.

The first performance was that of the Royal Philharmonic Society, conducted by Felix Weingartner. The second was at the London Symphony Orchestra's ninth concert, under Serge Kussevitsky. Common to the two concerts were the circumstances that the Philharmonic Choir sang, that Miss Balfour was the contralto, and that the hall was full. Otherwise everything was as different as it could be. Did a section of the Philharmonic audience, more used perhaps to Daly's Theatre than to Philharmonic concerts, bring shame on a hitherto respectable institution by coming in with applause at the wrong place in the Scherzo? The L.S.O. audience rose so far superior as to refrain from all applause until the end of the work—the sensible thing, of course, to do, though it had never happened before at a London performance of the Ninth Symphony. This was the least of the differences.

It is ninety-nine years since the Philharmonic Society first played the work. How shines a good deed in a naughty world! The Philharmonic's relations with the doomed Beethoven were such as to make it perpetually an honour to be associated with the Society. Everyone knows the tale. More obscure is Beethoven's behaviour in dedicating the Society's Symphony to someone else (the King of Prussia) too. But as the Philharmonic of 1824 did not mind, it would be impertinent in others to be less magnanimous.

There can be no doubt that Weingartner's performance was the finest that had been given in London for many years. Whatever may be said against Weingartner—that his Wagner is dry, or that he fondly fancies in the face of all evidence that the world wants to hear his own compositions—when he conducts Beethoven we cannot mistake how distinguished a musician he is. The flow of the music seems so natural that he might easily be thought to be having little to do with it. The Symphony made the effect that night of a mighty scroll solemnly unwound, or perhaps of a grand and effortless pageant of nature, sunrise or what not. He had slightly modified the scoring. That was nothing much. What was so extraordinarily reassuring and satisfying was the obvious rightness of the tempi from first to last. The instruments had just the proper time in which to say their say according to their natures. Of course some of the vocal music sounded strained and awkward, but by this time we are all prepared for that in the Ninth Symphony, and so the drawback is discounted.

This performance, all sobriety and just measure, was given a foil a few nights after by Kussevitsky. This told us, if we had not realised them before, what the merits of Weingartner had been. At the same time, whatever Kussevitsky's extravagance and inequality, his performance did at moments open up sublime vistas; without generally attaining to them, it suggested wondrous new possibilities thrilling to the imagination, whereas Weingartner simply had accomplished with preciseness just what he had intended. Kussevitsky's qualities are well-appreciated in London—the way in which he sacrifices himself and all that is in him to the cause of the moment's music; his ardour and strength; and his way of communicating his powerful energy to the players and singers under him. Of his perfect sincerity no one could doubt, and if his Beethoven was feverish and frantic that was his convinced feeling on the Symphony. We do not believe he was consciously 'stunting,' whatever his unconventionalities. These were enormous, and fairly kept one on the qui vive. Kussevisky seemed to want to transfer Beethoven's allegiance from the Hapsburgs of a hundred years ago, to some more savage and oriental rule. The drama in the music as it is normally taken was too tame. We must have darker shadows, and the light should be the flames of incendiaries. In this temper the Allegro made a wonderful beginning, in midnight and foreboding. But Beethoven would not quite support Kussevisky's pitch. The music made it clear that such a violent strain had not been anticipated. For instance, in the first movement there are the conversational wood-wind passages of this sort:

Kussevisky had a singular difficulty in lightening his atmosphere of terror quickly enough to make the comparative unconcern of these innocent voices seem plausible.

The Scherzo of the Ninth Symphony is weirdness itself. With this our conductor was not content. It had to have, gallop as it would, a few cuts with the lash. Driven thus, the Trio became pretty well inarticulate. In the slow movement, Kussevisky behaved like Bernard Shaw with Joan of Arc. Mr. Shaw, drawing a full-length portrait of Joan of Arc, could not believe it would not be an improvement to introduce himself in the foreground. So, as this Adagio poured out its soul, Kussevisky busied himself encouraging it to express more and more.

Where this sort of conducting indubitably scored was in the choral movements. By the time we came to the Finale the choir, inspired by Kussevisky's self-immolation, were likewise prepared to do or die. It all ended in a wondrous, barbaric clamour. The mild author of the Ode to Joy uttered a recommendation of fraternisation. This expression of it might have been a war-dance of Attila's legions.

But (in spite of the sopranos' A's) what a mighty Finale! It is surely the clinching declaration of Beethoven's genius. After those three stupendous symphonic movements, must not the composer's mind have paused? For whatever orthodox Finale could properly complete such an edifice? No one else would have had Beethoven's courage. But he trusted to his feeling at the end of the slow movement that orthodox symphonic music must for once go by the board. It was as though a man of distinguished cultivation, who had always spoken with proper, well-chosen terms, were faced suddenly by one of the turning-points of life and felt that no words he had ever used before could meet the case—he must burst out with something more vigorously low than ever before, with some simply primitive and heroic vulgarity. So Beethoven opened his doors in this Finale to all comers, regardless of their manners, and ended the tale of his symphonies with that extraordinary bang and clatter of circus-music.

C.

THE ROYAL CHORAL SOCIETY

The Society's system of having a variety of conductors affords greater scope to the choir and increased interest to the audience. When, in addition, we find in two successive programmes Holst's Hymn of Jesus, The Dream of Gerontius, and Vaughan Williams's Sea Symphony, with but one old-fashioned work—The Hymn of Praise—to balance these, it must surely seem to some faithful attenders of the older school that the times are changing disturbingly. It is all to the good, of course; but some of the performances are not so good as we might expect. All the drawbacks of the choir's size and constitution, and of the hall in which it sings, have been discussed before. There remain vocal and temperamental weaknesses that no conductor can overcome.

Mr. Adrian C. Boulton, on March 29, drew from the choir some of its very best tone, and all of its most painstaking concern for effect, in the Sea Symphony. He whipped up the singers to an uncommon show of spirit, too, so that we got the tang of the salt spray: it was a dilute solution, but of recognisable flavour. Slight jars and groundings on snags and shoals of intonation made us uncomfortable at moments, but the ship sustained them bravely.

It is an uncommonly bold and captivating work. Who could set Whitman in this mood? Vaughan Williams has made us all his admirers by showing what might be done with these rhapsodical strains. The Royal Choral singers ought to have a share of praise for their pluck in again tackling this difficult, not altogether grateful, music. The task was a little eased by the omission of the choral work in the Scherzo, in which, and throughout the afternoon, the orchestra wrought seriously and (as far as the ear can decide in this Black Hole of a hall) to very useful purpose.

Miss Dorothy Silk and Mr. Topliss Green caught the moods of the music in the solo parts. Miss Silk's voice, though not large, seems to fill a big area better than does Mr. Green's. The merit of both artists lies first in musicianly sensitiveness, and only secondarily in vocal quality, though Miss Silk's purity of tone is always a joy.

The after-dish was the Hymn of Praise, a too familiar mixture of solidity and light confectionery. By the manner of its presentation—competent and unexciting—and by the pleasant singing of Mr. Archibald Winter in the tenor music and Miss Kathleen Ryan as Miss Silk's partner in the duet, it served as compensation for the rigours of the preceding hour, to the not inconsiderable portion of the audience which always looks as if it were musing lovingly on its memories of the Hymn's first performance, and of how charmingly Mendelssohn conducted.

W. R. A.

THE GLASGOW ORPHEUS CHOIR

A kind of 'hen and egg' query as to the evolution of this choir keeps running in the mind. Which came first—the man with the Barrie-like spirit, the Peter Pan of choralism, Hugh Robertson, or that body of singers with the quite unremarkable voices but with a spirit so perfectly in affinity with their conductor's that you never can tell who started a part-song off in just exactly the right way, and who is responsible for its going through, a little gem of organization. When you organize the spirit, you tread dangerously. Perhaps it is because Robertson and his choir have such an astonishing superabundance of spirits (and, I think, more than a trace of Scots mysticism and what amounts almost to musical second-sight) that you never are conscious of the organization at all—it never obtrudes. The 'crack' choir (cause of much misgiving at times to musicians) is one thing: the Glasgow Orpheus another—as different as chalk from cheese.

On its visit to London, on April 12, the Choir travelled over-night, gave an hour's concert in the morning to the Prime Minister and his friends (that hard-working Scot and keen music-lover came in the afternoon and refreshed himself with over two hours more of the singers' delightful art), and, besides the afternoon concert, gave another in the evening, and then sped home, pursued by the cheers of several thousand charmed fellow-Scots and Southrons. Both programmes were made up of smallish things, with, of course, a lot of Scottish airs in arrangements—not all of these up to the finest standard of musicianship, by the way. Then soloist members—Miss Boyd Steven, Mr. W. Smith, and Mr. Albert Froggatt—sang, and Mr. Alec Gourlay played strathspeys and reels till every foot itched to be at in the aisles. All this for the Scot in exile, to whose soul the familiar tunes are meat and drink. The Outlander, too, if he be not spoilt, loves them almost as well—when the Orpheus just puts its whole heart into them. Art comes into it, too; but (best praise you can give) you don't think about that till afterwards.

A few of the classics of the choral repertoire were added—some of the best-known Elgar works, Brahms's Death of Tennyson, Morley's My Bonny Lass (with what an effervescence of happiness!), and so on. It would be worth any conductor's travelling a hundred miles to hear Boughton's Faery Chorus, from The Immortal Hour, sung as these people do it, with the lightest, most loving and lovable rhythmic lilt imaginable.

Next year we may have some bigger works, in which we want to test the Choir's mettle. But, saving the one point that the voices are not very big, and that they sometimes (the men's a little, notably) don't quite attain the robustness and the ring that distinguish some choirs we know, there need be no fear that the Orpheus will disappoint us in any way. These singers know their powers—indeed, a great deal of their success comes from the conductor's knowing to a hair's breadth exactly where lies his choir's strength, and from his acting upon the knowledge with the precision of an operating surgeon, the insight of a philosopher and dreamer, and the driving power of a benevolent autocrat. You can't analyse power of this kind—it just grows, and grips you as surely as it grips and holds this choir, which in Robertson's hands is an expressive medium of the highest sensitiveness, that affords some of the purest pleasure music can give.

W. R. A.

OTHER CHORAL CONCERTS

The South London Philharmonic Society maintains its own traditions, which some day will doubtless be appreciated by South London as they deserve. The St. Matthew Passion should have brought more people to Goldsmiths' College than it did on April 12. The choral singing, under Mr. W. H. Kerridge, was of high quality.

The Alexandra Palace Choral and Orchestral Society performed Bach's Mass in B minor at the Palace on March 22. Mr. Allen Gill drew some magnificent effects from his well-trained forces in some of the broader choruses.

Dvorák's Spectre's Bride was the principal work in the Crystal Palace Choral and Orchestral Society's programme on April 5. Choir and orchestra combined in an admirable performance under Mr. Walter W. Hedgcock. Only two professionals were needed to assist the amateur players.

Barclay's Bank Musical Society gave a concert at Queen's Hall on April 9. The male-voice choir, under Mr. Herbert W. Pierce, sang Stanford's Songs of the Fleet and Bantock's Lucifer in Starlight, and the orchestra played German's Welsh Rhapsody and other works under Mr. Herbert J. Rouse. Everything went excellently.

The concert given by the Philharmonic Choir at Queen's Hall in March was repeated at Central Hall on April 5 with an audience of children from secondary schools. It was a stiff programme for the young—Blest Pair of Sirens, the Delius C minor Pianoforte Concerto, Holst's Hymn of Jesus, Franck's Psyche, and Beethoven's Pianoforte and Choir Fantasia.

The annual concert of the Wandsworth Male-Voice Choir at Battersea Town Hall, on March 27, was in part a dress rehearsal for the Choir's success in the London Festival two days later. In an excellent programme Elgar's Whether I find thee and Bantock's My love is like a red, red rose were the pieces prepared for competition. Mr. J. C. Clarke conducted.

Bromley Choral Society brought a good and popular season to an end on April 1 with Acis and Galatea and Walpurgis Night, acceptably sung under Mr. Frederick Fertil.

AN ORCHESTRA OF WOMEN

The new British Women's Symphony Orchestra acquitted itself well at Queen's Hall on April 3. Worse orchestras, and better, have played on the same platform. No one expected these young aspirants to produce the same effect as male players who have been playing all kinds of difficult music under all kinds of conductors for half their lives. The important fact is that a Women's Symphony Orchestra, complete in every branch, exists and is able to tackle music like Dame Ethel Smyth's On the Cliffs of Cornwall (which the composer conducted) and Elgar's Violoncello Concerto. To accompany Miss Beatrice Harrison in this work was a test of flexibility that found some weak points in the orchestral technique. A more finely-pointed beat on the part of Miss Gwynne Kimpton might produce a quicker responsiveness. All the programme was British. It included three of Elgar's Sea Pictures, sung by Lady Maud Warrender, and a string piece by Miss Phyllis Norman Parker.

FOURTH GOOSSENS CONCERT

Owing to the non-arrival of the parts of Arthur Bliss's String Quartet, of which there is only one set, and that in utmost demand in America, the work had to be omitted from the programme at Æolian Hall on April 4, its place being taken by Dohnányi's Quartet in D flat. This was played by the Philharmonic, with Mr. James Lockyer for viola in place of Mr. Jeremy. I do not believe that the work is a strong favourite even with the most enthusiastic of Dohnányi's admirers. Its polyphony is a trifle too facile, and its lyricism too flowing to make any deep impression. One critic compares it with Rheinberger and Fauré—not a bad parallel if neither composer is envisaged at his best. Miss Dora Labbette was the vocalist in Vaughan Williams's three Chaucer Rondels, Merciles Beauty, whose pseudo-archaic melodiousness masks the science, not to say the sophistication, of a more recent period. Even whilst yielding to the charm of their prim beauty one is inclined to resent something that is not spontaneous in them, a too self-conscious revivalism. With the addition of Messrs. André Mangeot and G. Barbirolli, and the substitution of Mr. Eugene Goossens as viola, the same players gave the latter's String Sextet, a work which steadily improves on acquaintance.

There were two novelties. The first consisted of three Preludes for pianoforte, Ships, by Eugene Goossens, who played them himself. A fussy, business-like 'Tug,' a weather-beaten, mournful 'Tramp,' and a portentous 'Liner' constitute the triptych. The first attracted by its amusing realism, the second by a touch of romantic colouring. Both proved of much greater interest than the third. I cannot help thinking that a touch of vulgarity would have made the 'Liner' more convincing. The other novelty was the setting of Herrick's The Unlesioned Lover in a group of Herbert Bedford's unaccompanied songs, presented by Miss Labbette. The poem seemed a little too formal for its treatment, and the other songs of the group gave more pleasure.

E. E.

SOME SINGERS OF THE MONTH

Madame Margaret Matzenauer, a mezzo-soprano from the New York Opera, sang at the Albert Hall on March 30. Her music was (apart from two lapses) better than is usual on such occasions. She proved to be an eminent singer. Her breath was perfectly controlled. This made for a buoyant play with volumes from the most finely-tapered minimum to a nobly-swelling vehemence, with an infinite number of shades between. It was not showy singing. Indeed, the Albert Hall audience was left rather cold. But it was deliciously musical—singing for the connoisseur. It was even musicianly in feeling—if not so to an inspired, at least to an intelligent degree. The only technical faults were a few strained high notes and a shake that did not shake quite rapidly enough.

Mr. Plunket Greene sang to a full and captivated audience at Æolian Hall. We may say at once that his singing does not yield much sheer musical pleasure. On the other hand the famous artist powerfully appeals to a side of us which singers who consider nothing but tone never touch. His programme was a model, as usual. The first group was mainly Schubert and Schumann. Three of the latter's songs were among his great successes: The Dead Friend's Glass, The Greeting, The Cards. The English group included the names of Parry, Gurney, Vaughan Williams, Harty, Howells, C. A. Gibbs, and Stanford. (There is, he reminded us, a treasury in Stanford's songs.) At the end came chanties and folk-songs. A great deal of Mr. Plunket Greene's singing was toneless. He showed, however, that tone is not absolutely essential. A worse grievance was that every now and then (particularly in quick songs) he took the bit between his teeth and galloped through a piece regardless of rhythm, sense, or precise notes. Vaughan Williams's Roadside Fire went to pieces under this perverse treatment. But, with all our grumblings, the fact remains that at his happy moments he is a singularly touching interpreter. The music of a song may be lost, but he makes a work of art in delivering, with that wistful air of his and distinguished diction, the whole sense of the poem. Mr. Liddle accompanied. Some of the singularities of his performance must be put down to the singer. But his mis-reading of the accompaniment of Schubert's Hurdy-Gurdy Man was purely his own doing. Is a hurdy-gurdy capable of such rubato?

Elena Gerhardt, at Queen's Hall, on April 1, sang Schubert—a nice choice of the familiar and the comparatively unfamiliar (the latter including Tom on the bridge morosely leaning and the beautiful In Spring—quiet sit I on the hillock's slope). Mr. Harold Craxton accompanied with the most beautiful sympathy and graceful expression, though he was a degree too much in the background. Madame Gerhardt has a wonderful London public which attends her concerts in crowds, and worships her whatever she does. Her followers appear to be as fascinated as those of the poet Bunthorne in the play. While this singer's art is in some ways distinguished, it would be a pity if leaders of opinion were to convince their disciples that it is wholly exemplary. Madame Gerhardt was at her best on April 1, and even so, her breath supply was only barely sufficient. It indeed was not sufficient for her high notes, which were hard, as the result of too little support. Madame Gerhardt often sang nobly, in spite of this serious technical shortcoming, but her performance of Great is Jehovah exposed it unmercifully. We should advise her not to sing songs of such requirements, were it not that the general public appeared not to be aware of any imperfection. In her elaborate care over diction Madame Gerhardt sets a good example, but even on this point she is always a warning. Singers should take note of the beauty that results from this carefulness, while observing also how possible it is to make carefulness too complaisantly conspicuous.

Mr. John Goss gave a second concert, again with interesting and out-of-the-way music, at Wigmore Hall, on March 28. There were some good, sturdy tunes in E. J. Moeran's Norfolk Folk-Songs. Norman Peterkin's new songs showed a pretty talent, and there was a performance of Peter Warlock's Curlew cycle. Mr. Goss has many accomplishments. We urge him to cultivate a brighter variety of tone-colour. His fineness of diction, his solid tone, and unaffected manner are all attractive.

Miss Megan Foster began her concert at Æolian Hall with some old English lyrics set by modern composers. Then came poems of Verlaine in versions of Fauré, Debussy, and Hahn; poems of Tagore in American settings (Carpenter and Hagemann); five Goethe songs of Schubert; and finally a series of children's songs by Grovlez, Howells, Bax, and Herbert Hughes. This programme showed the clever enterprise of the charming singer. She concerns herself mainly with the less strenuous sorts of song. In her light pathos, her irony, and her sunny liveliness she is an artist in whom we can frankly delight.

Miss Edith Furmedge, a contralto, sang on March 21, and excited considerable interest in her prospects. Her gifts are well above the ordinary. It is a stately voice. (The singer's stately presence was no disadvantage either.) She has the power to sing with the depth of a full contralto and the means to relieve the heaviness of such singing at appropriate moments. There was a fine fervour, a ready interpretative wit. Miss Furmedge's voice was placed where it could tell most vividly, and there was a ring of decision in her tones. In the Alto Rhapsody of Brahms she made a particular impression. The way of this singer towards a still higher accomplishment will be by closer attention to detail. She needs to loosen certain vowels and sharpen her diction. And she showed a habit of lungeing at detached upper notes. Her v's, among other consonants, needed vivifying. Certain items of Miss Furmedge's programme were a trifle disconcerting, as indicating a not very assured taste.

Miss Dora Stevens, who was accompanied by Mr. Craxton and by Mr. Pougnet's Quartet, on April 2 sang some pieces of Joseph Jongen, and, in her English selection, by Bax, Alec Rowley, Arthur Sandford, and Martin Shaw. She sang conspicuously better than we had ever heard her before. The voice has a charming quality, the high notes in particular being lustrous. Miss Stevens's diction is still too laboured. The knack of a more glib utterance would save her much trouble and be pleasanter to hear.

It is a compliment to Mr. Howard Fry, who sang on March 31, to tell him that at moments he reminded us of the delightful American baritone J. C. Thomas. Accompanied by Mr. Reginald Paul, he sang the six sacred songs of Beethoven's Op. 48, Arias of Berlioz and Verdi, and songs of Vaughan Williams and Stanford. Mr. Fry has the true lyric baritone quality. His voice is warm and his diction good (but he must lighten his short words, 'is,' 'it,' and so on). It will be interesting to see if he can develop the power, the flashing lingual brilliance, and the pealing high notes of the most eminent singers of his type.

'Shepherd! thy demeanour vary'—so runs the line in the old song of Thomas Browne, which figured in Miss Rosa Alba's programme. This advice might have been taken to heart by the singer. Miss Alba began by seeming prepossessing. After a time she rather lost her hold because of her stereotyped style. She sang with a full, bright soprano voice of considerable range, but she did not manage to turn it to any very subtle use, or make it reflect a very marked personality. She must be reproached for slurring, and may be told that assistance in reaching high notes is not given by the craning of the neck.

Miss Sheila MacDonald sang at Queen's Hall. On her previous appearance she was criticised for the hardness of her high notes. The criticism has not been acted upon. Again these notes jarred. She also damaged some of her phrases by an extravagant use of aspirates. Aspirates will slip into the runs of the most scrupulous singer. Used sparsely, and at the right moment, they are effective. With this singer they were a trying mannerism.

Miss Margarita Mackerras began her recital at Wigmore Hall with Bach's Aria for soprano, flute, viola, and continuo, Stein, der über alle Schätze, which she sang really well. Later on, in Brahms, Bantock, and other music, a certain monotony crept in. Agreeable as the voice was, and cultivated the singer, it was all too much on one level. When some abandonment was required, the singer seemed to be restrained by considerations of gentility.

Miss Mary Pollock sang at Æolian Hall. She was so nervous that we probably did not hear her do her best. Still, there was evidence of a good voice and a good manner, which could do with more polish. Miss Pollock was better suited to the lighter side of her programme. When tackling the grandiose she was overweighted. Far from being alone in this, she does not realise how much an illusion of spontaneity counts towards gratifying an audience.

Miss Alma Simpson (soprano), at Æolian Hall, put alongside Bach and Brahms some singularly poor songs of American provenance. The pictorial kind of song apparently appealed most to this singer, who was not equipped for any analytical exercise. She fluttered and warbled her way through her selection, and it was all quite superficial, and often faulty.

Miss Hanna Granfelt, a Finnish soprano, sang twice at Wigmore Hall. Her expression was over-sentimental, her technics unassured. She was best in songs of her countrymen. She made an air of Bellini sound like a too long and too difficult exercise.

H. J. K.

Music in the Provinces

ABERYSTWYTH.—At the College concert on March 21 Bach's D major Overture, Handel's Overture to Otho, and Mozart's Pianoforte Concerto in A were played, Mrs. Arthur Williams being the pianist. The Bangor Trio played the Andante and Scherzo from Hurlstone's Trio in G, and combined with members of the orchestra in the Allegro and Variations from Brahms's Sextet in B flat.

BEN RHYDDING.—'Georgian and Early Victorian Opera' was the scheme of a concert given by the Operatic Choir on March 22, under Mrs. W. P. Haigh. Besides a concert version of The Bohemian Girl, excerpts were given from operas by Gluck, Mozart, Handel, and Gounod.

BIRMINGHAM AND DISTRICT.—It is announced that Mr. Adrian C. Boulton has been appointed conductor and director to the City of Birmingham Orchestra for the season. Mr. Eugène Goossens will be among the guest conductors. Mr. Boulton will reside at Birmingham, and it is proposed to engage part of the Orchestra on a permanent basis with a view to rehearsals daily. As an experiment two of the symphony programmes will be given twice on the same night; the first performance at 6 o'clock and the second at 8.30. The Children's Concerts, which have been a regular feature of the City Orchestra's work since its institution, are to be still further developed, and it is proposed to establish an amateur orchestra as an auxiliary to the professional orchestra on special occasions. The City Orchestra gave the last Symphony Concert of the season on March 26. Mr. Appleby Matthews conducted, and the programme included Franck's Symphony. On March 31 the Annual Plebiscite Concert was given, Tchaikovsky's Pathetic, the Tannhäuser Overture, and Debussy's L'Après-Midi d'un Faune were amongst the chosen pieces. At a Sunday concert, on March 16, Mr. Appleby Matthews conducted Three Sketches by Paul Beard—a Tango, a Piemontese, and a Humoresque. They are capably-written little pieces, and reveal a sound knowledge of orchestration. The following Sunday a group of Russian folk-tunes by Liadov and Massenet's Phedre Overture were given. The Sunday concert on March 30 was the last of the season by the City Orchestra. The last Mid-day concert was given on April 10, when a small orchestra, conducted by Mr. Johan Hoch, played the Brandenburg Concertos Nos. 5 and 6, and the second Overture-Suite for strings and flute. At a concert given by the City of Birmingham Choir, first performances of Bantock's Golden Journey to Samarkand, and Gerrard Williams's A Cycle of the Sea were given. Both works are interesting and colourful, and have the merit of musicianly handling. At this concert Mr. Robert Parker and Miss Mary Foster were the soloists. Conducted by Mr. Adrian C. Boulton, the Festival Choral Society gave a performance of Verdi's Requiem. The choir sang well, and Miss Carrie Tubb, Miss Rose Myrtil, Mr. Frank Mullings, and Mr. Norman Allin were the soloists. The Worcestershire Orchestral and Ladies' Choral Society gave its nineteenth concert on April 5. Sir Ivor Atkins conducted, and Brahms's fourth Symphony was the chief item in the programme.

BRIDGWATER.—The Choral Society was assisted by Mr. John Coates at its spring concert on April 10. Mr. Arthur Trowbridge conducted, and the choir sang Callcott's Love wakes and weeps, Rutland Boughton's Piper's Song, Parry's My delight and thy delight, Geoffrey Shaw's Worship, Holst's Song of the Blacksmith, Fletcher's Follow me down to Carlow, and madrigals by Byrd, Gibbons, and Dowland.

BRISTOL.—On March 15 Hiawatha was performed by Bristol South Choral Society, with a choir of sixty and an orchestra of twenty, under Mr. R. T. Young. A recital of works by Arnold Bax was given at Victoria Rooms on March 18 by Mr. John Coates, Miss Olive Franks, Miss Bessie Rawlins (violin), and Miss Harriet Cohen (pianoforte). Mr. Bax was present, and played the accompaniments. The programme included the second Violin Sonata. At the Symphony concert on March 19 Madame Suggia played Dvorák's Concerto in B minor for 'cello and orchestra. The orchestra played Ravel's Mother Goose Suite and Brahms's fourth Symphony, under Mr. Eugène Goossens. Stapleton Hill Choral Society performed Elijah on March 31, conducted by Mr. S. A. Harris. Horfield Choral Society gave Judas Maccabeus on April 2. Mr. Herbert Hunt and Mr. Ralph T. Morgan have given a programme for the Children's Concert Society. They played an Air with Variations by Rheinberger, a Bach Aria (violin and organ), Bach's Organ Prelude and Fugue in C minor, and Elgar's Sonata in G, and added explanatory remarks. At the concluding concert of the Philharmonic Society, on April 5, Elgar's The Music-Makers and Sea Pictures, Vaughan Williams's Mass in G minor, Parry's Jerusalem, and a Beethoven Violin Concerto were performed. Miss Margaret Fairless was the violinist, Miss Phyllis Lett the vocalist, and Mr. Arnold Barter conducted.

CAMBORNE.—Beethoven's fourth Symphony and the Bach Concerto in D minor for two violins were in the programme which the Cornwall Symphony Orchestra gave at Camborne on March 30 and 31, and afterwards at Truro. Dr. C. Rivers conducted.

CAMBRIDGE.—The chief events in an unusually active term were two performances of the B minor Mass by the C.U.M.S.—in the Guildhall, under Mr. J. F. Shepherdson, and in Ely Cathedral the following day, under Dr. Cyril Rootham. The C.U.M.S. gave the third of its new series of popular orchestral concerts, and two chamber concerts (the first by the Spencer Dyke String Quartet, and the second including Schubert's Octet and Mozart's Clarinet Quintet) have been given under the aegis of the same Society. College musical societies in many cases hold weekly meetings on Sunday evenings; amongst these informal concerts may be mentioned that given by the Newnham College Musical Society in King's College Hall on March 9. Dr. Wood's Passion according to St. Mark was sung in King's College Chapel on Friday, March 7, and Brahms's Song of Destiny, with other vocal and instrumental music, was performed in Christ's College Chapel on two successive Sunday evenings. The Informal Musical Society continues to flourish, and has given three very good chamber concerts this term. Dr. Gray, at Trinity, and Mr. Philip Dove, at Queens', have given fortnightly organ recitals. On March 6, Dr. Rootham conducted a performance of his Achilles in Scyros in the Guildhall.

CARDIFF.—In the series of historical performances of the Beethoven Symphonies, organized by Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Ware, the Eroica was played on March 26, by an orchestra of fifty. Mr. W. H. Reed gave a lecture on the Symphony, and Mrs. Ware played the Elgar 'Cello Concerto.

COLCHESTER.—Mr. W. F. Kingdon conducted the Musical Society in a well-chosen programme on April 3, the works sung by the choir being Blest Pair of Sirens, Brahms's Song of Destiny, and Cowen's John Gilpin.

DARLINGTON.—The Darlington Bach Choir gave its third recital on March 26. The Choir sang Cantata No. 65, The Sages of Sheba, the Motet The Spirit also helpeth us, and two anthems of Byrd. The Orchestra played the Suite in B minor, and, with Mr. E. Broadley, the Pianoforte Concerto in D minor. Dr. Arthur Kitson conducted.

DEAL AND WALMER.—A series of monthly symphony concerts has been inaugurated this year by Lieut. Walton O'Donnell and the orchestra of the Royal Marines. The January programme included Tchaikovsky's fifth Symphony and Smetana's Vltava; that of February, the New World Symphony and Les Préludes. On March 29 the largest audience of the season heard the Jupiter Symphony and Tchaikovsky's Romeo and Juliet.

EDINBURGH.—On March 15, at the Paterson orchestral concert for children, an exposition of musical forms was given by Mr. Herbert Wiseman, who conducted the orchestra in a Bach Air (counterpoint), Jarnefeldt's Prelude (canon), The Magic Flute Overture (fugal writing), and Mozart's Pianoforte Concerto in D, with Mr. Philip Halstead as soloist. The North British Railway Musical Association, conducted by Mr. Archibald Russell, numbered a hundred voices at its concert on March 15. The programme included Bach's O Sacred Head and Wilbye's Flora gave me fairest flowers. In his pianoforte recital on March 15, Mr. Harold Samuel included music by Bach, Handel, Mozart, Beethoven, Schumann, and Debussy. The Reid orchestral concert season closed on March 15, when two Brahms Pianoforte Concertos were played. Mr. Johannes Roentgen was the soloist in the D minor and Prof. Tovey in the B flat Concerto, and also in Dohnányi's Variations on a Theme of Childhood. Holst's Fugal Overture was also played. On March 16, Prof. Tovey was the soloist in Dr. Arthur Somervell's Highland Concerto. The composer conducted this and his Normandy Variations. After an interval of thirteen years, The Dream of Gerontius was performed by the Royal Choral Union on March 17, in Usher Hall. Mr. Greenhouse Allt conducted, and the soloists were Miss Muriel Brunskill, Mr. Arthur Jordan, and Mr. Philip Malcolm. The Fellows Orchestra collaborated, with Mr. Ralph T. Langdon at the organ.—On March 17, the fifth—and last—of Prof. Tovey's University Historical Concerts included Brahms's Pianoforte Quartet in C minor, Beethoven's String Quartet in E flat, and Mozart's Pianoforte Quartet in G minor, given by Prof. Tovey and the Edinburgh String Quartet.—In the Music Hall, on March 18, the Scottish Girls' Friendly Society Choir and the Girl Guides' Choir, trained by Mr. Alexander Maitland, combined to sing Bach's cantata, The Angels, and severally sang part-songs.—Leith Amateurs' Orchestral Society, at its first annual concert since the war, played Beethoven's first Symphony, Mr. W. Gilchrist Cochrane conducting.—On the same date, in Synod Hall, Mr. Moonie's Choir closed the season with a programme of part-songs, including MacCunn's There is a garden, Festa's Down in a flowery vale, and Stevens's From Oberon in Fairyland. Mr. Horace Fellows played Edgar Barratt's Hebridean Legend.—St. Andrew Amateur Orchestral Society, now in its fortieth season, conducted by Mr. R. de la Haye, played the Oberon Overture, the Overture to The Mastersingers, and Beethoven's first Symphony. The Orchestra numbered sixty players.—On March 29, Mr. Gavin Godfrey's choir, the latest addition to local organizations, gave its first concert. The choir numbered two hundred voices, and sang Hiawatha's Wedding-Feast and part-songs. A small orchestra assisted, and Mr. Arthur Jordan was the principal singer.

EXETER.—The March concert of the Chamber Music Club was confined to music composed by members, and was something in the nature of an experiment. The principal items were: A quartet arrangement for four voices of Barbara Allen and a song, May in the Greenwood, by P. B. Tomblings; two violin pieces and a Phantasy Trio in A minor for pianoforte, violin, and 'cello, by Dr. Ernest Bullock; a song by Dr. H. J. Edwards; 'cello music by S. W. A. Moyle; and a vocal quartet, My Bonnie Bell, by Dr. Tozer.

GUILDFORD.—The March subscription concert had a particularly interesting programme—the Jupiter Symphony; Mozart's Clarinet Concerto, played by Mr. Haydn Draper; Walford Davies's Suite, Songs of Nature; and Nicholas Gatty's Orpheus with his Lute, given for the first time with orchestra. Mr. Claude Powell conducted, and everything went well.

HALIFAX.—Bach's Jesu, Priceless Treasure was sung by St. Paul's Choral Society, under Mr. T. Newbould, on April 10, at St. Paul's Church.

HANLEY.—Chief among recent events has been the admirable performance of The Dream of Gerontius by the Stoke-on-Trent Choral Society on March 6. Mr. Ernest C. Redfern conducted, and the solo parts were taken by Miss Mary Foster, Mr. John Adams, and Mr. Harold Williams. The concert opened with the Bach-Elgar Fugue, and included the Alto Rhapsody of Brahms.

HULL.—The Vocal Society, conducted by Dr. Henry Coward, gave an admirable performance of The Song of Hiawatha on March 19.—The programme of the Philharmonic Society on April 3 was chosen by plebiscite. It included the New World Symphony, the Magic Flute and Meistersinger Overtures, and the Casse-Noisette Suite. Sir Henry Wood conducted.

KIDDERMINSTER.—The Choral Society gave its last concert of the season on April 11, when the programme included Holst's Two Psalms and Dvorák's Te Deum. Mr. J. Irving Glover conducted.

KIRKCALDY.—On March 19 the Musical Society performed Brahms's Requiem in the Adam Smith Hall. Mr. Charles M. Cowe conducted the choir and orchestra, and the principal singers were Miss Hilda Blake and Mr. Herbert Heyner. Stanford's The Revenge was also performed.

LEEDS.—The outstanding event of the season has been the performance of the Mass in G minor of Dr. Vaughan Williams by the Philharmonic Choir under the direction of Mr. Norman Strafford. The singing was of fine quality, and the Mass made a deep impression. The Choir also gave Stanford's The Blue Bird and some of Dr. Whittaker's northern folk-song arrangements.—Recitals have been given by Mr. Frederick Dawson and Miss Jean Sterling Mackinlay.

LIVERPOOL.—Sir Edward Elgar was the conductor at the Philharmonic concert on March 11, when, besides the recently-scored Handel Overture in D minor and three of the orchestrally-accompanied Sea Pictures, the Symphony in E flat was played, and the programme closed with The Wand of Youth Suite. Miss Olga Haley was the singer.

—The present series of Vickers concerts closed on March 15 with the appearance of the De Reszke Singers, who sang folk-songs, Elgar part-songs, negro spirituals, and nursery-rhyme parodies by Herbert Hughes. Miss Dora Labbette also sang.—Mr. Zacharewitsch and Miss Ethel Midgley gave a violin and pianoforte recital in Crane Hall on March 19.—The British Music Society gave a recital on March 22 of works of Mr. Herbert Howells. The String Quartet, Lady Audrey's Suite, a Pianoforte Quartet (the first of the Carnegie publications), two carol anthems, and a pianoforte miniature suite, Sarum Sketches, were performed. The McCullagh Quartet provided the strings.—The Banner of St. George and Rogers's The Storm were sung by the Post Office Choral Society on March 22, conducted by Mr. Matthews Williams.—At the last of the Rushworth & Dreaper orchestral concerts for young people, on March 22, Miss E. Allen lectured on 'The Rainbow of Sound.' The Overtures to The Mastersingers and William Tell were played, under the direction of Mr. G. E. Stuteley.—Aintree Institute Choral Society, assisted by an orchestra, performed A Tale of Old Japan on April 10. Mr. P. Hilton Radcliffe conducted.—At Birkenhead, on April 5, the Oxtan and Cloughton Orchestral Society played the Brahms Violin Concerto with Mr. Albert Sammons, and the Overture to The Mastersingers. Mr. J. E. Matthews conducted.

MANCHESTER AND DISTRICT.—The seventeenth Hallé concert consisted of the second Act of Tristan and the first Act of The Valkyrie, in which Mesdames Agnes Nicholls and Rose Myrtil, and Messrs. Frank Mullings, Norman Allin, and Clifford Moon took part. In the Love Duet from Tristan Miss Nicholls and Mr. Mullings ventured on an intimate tenderness of style which was something of a revelation even to the most experienced Wagnerians in the hall.—At the eighteenth concert, on February 28, Hofmann played the G major of Beethoven; for the first time we heard Bax's Garden of Fand; and one of Richter's old war-horses—Dvorák's Symphonic Variations—was heard after a fourteen years' silence.—March 6 brought the Bach B minor Mass (an epidemic of coughing affecting platform and audience alike). Sung for the third successive season, it failed to reach the high standard of 1923. The soloists were Mesdames Caroline Hatchard and Muriel Brunskill, and Messrs. Arthur Winter and Horace Stevens.—The twentieth concert, on March 13, was notable from the fact that Mr. Alfred Barker, winner of a recent competition between the younger violinists of the Hallé Orchestra, played the test-piece—Bruch's G minor Concerto—in a manner calculated to win enthusiastic praise from the most exacting critics. Beethoven's Pastoral Symphony, Strauss's Don Juan, and Brahms's Gaudeamus Igitur (otherwise Academic Festival) Overture—which was in the nature of a good 'breaking-up' finale—provided a programme making a wide appeal.—The Pension Fund concert on March 20 consisted of The Mastersingers Overture, Strauss's Heldenleben, Saint-Saëns's Carneval des Animaux, and the Choral Symphony of Beethoven.—If only from the fact that they were additions to the remarkably small number of choral concerts in a great choir-singing neighbourhood mention should be made of the Brand Lane Hiawatha trilogy on March 15 under Sir Henry Wood, and the Manchester Vocal Society's performance of Bach's Sing ye to the Lord, on March 19, under Mr. H. M.

Dawber.—During March the B.N.O.C. has given an extensive répertoire at the Opera House. Manchester, unlike some other places, has a strong liking for Verdi's Otello and Falstaff; the former had one performance. The house very probably would have been full had more performances been given, instead of some of the operas which form the stock-in-trade of companies incapable of doing Otello. Probably the experience will not be lost on the management in future visits. In the domain of chamber music it must be recorded that the Tuesday noon-tide series is still 'not out' with a score of over four hundred; that the Catterall Quartet, on March 12, gave what we believe to be the first 'one-composer' chamber concert—a Brahms evening with the Quartet (Op. 51), the early Sextet (Op. 18), and the mature Quintet (Op. 88). For the first time, also, we had an authoritatively annotated programme from the pen of Mr. Samuel Langford. At the fourth Hamilton Harty chamber concert Elgar's A minor Quintet was played by the Edith Robinson Quartet and Mr. Harty. These players have in the past two seasons advanced to a position of more definite prominence than before. Mr. Harty's conception of chamber music extends to what is suitable for a chamber orchestra, and on March 17 he proved the justness of his theories as to the superior adaptability for the chamber rather than the concert-hall of such things as the Grieg Holberg Suite; Mozart's D minor Divertimento for strings and horns, and the Elegiac Serenade of Tchaikovsky. He and the audience also discovered that in the Lesser Free Trade Hall we have the ideal chamber for such music in this city. During April the seventh and eighth recitals of the Beethoven Pianoforte Sonatas were continued by Mr. Robert Gregory and Mr. Isidor Cohn.

OSSETT.—German's Richard III. Overture opened the concert of the Orchestral Society on March 25. Mr. Alfred Hemingway conducted.

OVERTON (HANTS).—The Glee Class, conducted by Mr. Arthur C. Bennett, gave a miscellaneous concert on March 25. The programme included Stanford's Phaultrag Crohoore, Benjamin Cooke's In the merry month of May, and West's arrangement of John Peel.

PAISLEY.—Caractacus was given by the Choral Union in the George A. Clark Town Hall on March 27. The difficulties of the score were creditably overcome by the choir and the Fellows Orchestra under the guidance of Dr. W. Rigby.

PENRITH.—Dvorák's The Spectre's Bride was performed at the annual concert of the Penrith Musical Society on March 28. Stanford's Songs of the Fleet were sung by Mr. Charles Knowles. Mr. James Pollard conducted a most successful concert.

SCARBOROUGH.—Hamilton Harty's The Mystic Trumpeter was performed by the Scarborough Musical Society on March 19, Mr. O. C. Keaton conducting. The Leeds Symphony Orchestra assisted.

SELBY.—The Philharmonic Society gave Caractacus with great effect on March 24, in spite of a shortage of male voices and of orchestral players. Mr. Arthur Simpson conducted.

SHEFFIELD.—Members of Chesterfield and Barnsley Choral Societies joined the Sheffield Amateur Musical Society on April 1 for the performance of Berlioz's Faust, under Dr. Staton. The final concerts of the Five o'Clock series brought Bach's Concerto in D minor for three pianofortes and strings and a Chanson Celtique for viola by Cecil Forsyth, played by Mr. Allan Smith.

SHREWSBURY.—The Philharmonic Society, conducted by Mr. F. G. Rowland, gave its third concert of the season on March 27, with a programme that included The Revenge and Blest Pair of Sirens. Madame Rebé Hellier was vocalist, and Miss Joyce Rollitt played the Grieg Pianoforte Concerto.

TORQUAY.—The Winter Orchestra played Max Bruch's Violin Concerto in G minor, with Mr. Albert Sammons, on April 9, and Rimsky-Korsakov's Capriccio Espagnole. Mr. Ernest Goss conducted.

WELLINGBOROUGH.—The Orchestral Society's programme on April 1 included Beethoven's Prometheus Overture, the Grieg Pianoforte Concerto with Miss Constance Julian as soloist, Eric Coates's Miniature Suite, Purcell's Dioclesian Overture, and the first movement of Franck's Pianoforte Quintet. The conductor was the Rev. Greville Cooke.

WOKING.—The Woking Music Club's first season of six chamber concerts with well-known players and singers has been not only an artistic but a financial success, with the result that the subscription is being lowered. Among the visitors have been the Philharmonic Quartet, the English Trio, Miss Isolde Menges, Miss Irene Scharrer, Miss Helen Henschel, and Miss Phyllis Lett.

YORK.—The Rhoda Backhouse String Quartet visited York on March 22, and played McEwen's Biscay Quartet and one of Mozart in C.

IRELAND

On March 28, the Belfast Philharmonic Society gave a fine performance of Samson and Delilah under the direction of Mr. Godfrey Brown. It is of interest to add that a Belfast lady, Miss Riddell, has recently bequeathed a sum of £500 to this deserving musical society.

The Derry Feis, on March 27 and 28, was very successful, but the adjudicators—Mr. Hamilton Harty, Prof. Dunhill, and Mr. Clyde Twelvetrees—regretted to have to state that the standard was not so good as it might be. Miss Dorothy Stokes, of Dublin, won the Dove Pianoforte Cup outright for the third year in succession, and was warmly complimented by the adjudicators for her really fine interpretation.

Miss Petite O'Hara and Miss Rhoda Coghill gave a recital at the Dawson Street Hall, Dublin, on March 10, winning much approval for the Debussy Sonata and the Brahms D minor Sonata. On March 23, Miss Florence Austral was one of the attractions at a Theatre Royal concert, her singing of Dr. Harington's Drink to me only being particularly good.

A band recital by the Garda Scotchana (Civic Guard Band), under the direction of Inspector D. J. Delaney, was held in the Theatre Royal, Dublin, on April 6. The occasion was memorable for the first appearance in Ireland of Miss Margaret McNulty, Irish contralto, just returned from Italy. Mr. Delaney's Fantasia on Irish traditional airs (dedicated to General O'Duffy) was much appreciated.

The Beggar's Opera, under the direction of Eugène Goossens, Sen., had a successful week at the Gaiety Theatre, Dublin, from April 7-12, and opened another week's engagement at the Grand Opera House, Belfast, on April 14.

Mr. Percy Whitehead gave a song recital at the Abbey Theatre on April 14, with Mrs. Boxwell at the pianoforte.

Musical Notes from Abroad

GERMANY

A NEW OPERA BY FRANZ SCHREKER

Many critics and other musicians had gone to Cologne to attend the first performance of Irrelohe. This had been all too hastily proclaimed as the best opera written by Franz Schreker, whom many look upon as the greatest German opera composer. This time, however, even his friends and followers had to admit his lack of originality. The plot—his own—is superior to the music. This does not mean that it is good. It is highly erotic—like other opera texts by Schreker—and in other ways discomforting.

There was a time when Schreker was said to have transcended Wagner. But, alas, after the veil of sweet, mixed sound has fallen, Wagner's glory remains undimmed. All the symphonic music in Irrelohe is full of Wagner, and of Richard Strauss (who, of course, had lost his prestige when Schreker ascended the opera-throne of Germany). Now the king has become a vassal, and we only hope that under the discipline of self-criticism he will find it in him to create better works than this. But if Irrelohe is of no real value, it nevertheless received a distinguished performance under the baton of Otto Klemperer, who will shortly belong to Berlin.

'JENUSA' AT THE BERLIN STAATSOOPER

The Czecho-Slovakian composer, Leos Janacek, now nearing the seventieth year of his age, is one of the strangest figures among European musicians. He knows nothing of the world, nothing of commercialism in music, but devotes himself exclusively to the idea of creating a musical genre which, growing from folk-music, reflects at the same time all that is or was modern in the art. It is not, however, a pure reflex of other moderns, but a real synthesis of popular song and modern methods. In his Jenusa, Janacek aims at the utmost unity of word and musical text, and goes even farther than most of his fellow-composers. The spirit of Smetana has, with him, undergone a change by an intellectual force rather unusual with musicians rooted in the soil of popular music. His choruses are full of life, and his orchestration has a colour of its own. He tries to get rid of the Aria, without at the same time fully denying it. So we notice a transitional art more typical of the race to which Janacek belongs than most music produced in his country.

All these qualities became evident by the very good performance recently given under the excellent leadership of Erich Kleiber, the eminent young general-director of the Staatsoper.

OPERAIC AFFAIRS AT BERLIN

The operatic life of Berlin is at the moment charged with intrigue. To the detached observer this may be rather entertaining, but is a condition which may hold serious consequences for all who are more intimately connected with the numerous competing schemes. It may, however, be said that of Berlin's four opera-houses two are in a critical state. We are still suffering under the moral reactions of the war. The activities of those who, probably because they have nothing to lose, reveal no sense of responsibility, are not confined to the region of opera.

A NEW HANDEL BIOGRAPHY

From Dr. Hugo Leichtentritt, whose pen has given us many informing books, comes a big volume on Handel (the Deutsche Verlagsanstalt, Stuttgart and Berlin). It is the result of very laborious research. Dr. Leichtentritt pursues his text to the farthest sources, and in his hands the sponge may be said to be squeezed dry. His book, appearing just at a period of Handel renaissance in Germany, will stimulate a wide interest. The author's scrupulous exactitude makes for monotony, but his style often attains to real beauty of diction.

ADOLF WEISSMANN.

NEW YORK

Once a year that unparalleled organization the Toronto Mendelssohn Choir comes to visit us. Disregarding their law of never appearing under any conductor but their own, these singers gave at their first concert this year Beethoven's ninth Symphony, with the assistance of the Philadelphia Orchestra under the baton of Leopold Stokowski. It was a very remarkable performance, Mr. Stokowski's reading being almost martial in its intensity of vigour. This did not interfere with our enjoyment of the first two movements, but the lovely Adagio was taken too fast and (the martial spirit still prevailing) much of the poetry of this most beautiful of all Beethoven's Adagios was lost. The triumph was, of course, in the last movement, with the Toronto Choir under Mr. Stokowski's magnetic leadership singing this difficult music with fine energy and precision. The first part of the programme was devoted to a cappella music (Palestrina, Byrd, and Bach selections), Dr. Fricker conducting. The second concert was given entirely under Dr. Fricker's baton, the Philadelphia Orchestra furnishing such accompaniments as were needed. The feature of this second evening was excerpts from Bach's B minor Mass. This wonderful choir sings with such perfection of attack, so much dignity and sincerity in the solemn music, and with such strength and power when these are called for, that there seems to be nothing to criticise and only praise can be given.

Another association which visits us annually is the Cleveland Orchestra, which never presents a hackneyed programme. Mr. Sokoloff trains his men to play with great technical skill and full understanding of the music, the features of this year's concert being D'Indy's Symphony in B flat minor and Debussy's Iberia. The Symphony is considered D'Indy's best work, and if the melodic invention is not of supreme beauty, the workmanship in its development is most admirable.

Stravinsky has been popular in New York this winter. Mr. Damrosch has played Le Chant de Rossignol four times; the Philharmonic Society has given it twice, and repeated hearings call for more. Le Sacre du Printemps has been played twice by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the first time to a well-filled but not crowded house, the second time to an audience that filled every available inch of standing room, hundreds being turned from the doors. And still they call for more repetitions. Renard was given only once by the International Guild of Composers, but with Mr. Stokowski and his little orchestra and the four admirable singers to claim and hold our attention as they did, it is a shout that goes up this time for another and yet another hearing.

D'Indy, Debussy, and Stravinsky might open their eyes in astonishment could they read the name of Deems Taylor as their successor in line. Yet this young American has done things that the other three have never done nor could do. Some listeners had to study hard to understand the Frenchmen and the Russian, and when their work was understood well enough to evoke articulate delight, such expressions as 'splendid,' 'magnificent,' &c., proved that we had had an intellectual feast. D'Indy loves classicism, Debussy is poetic, Stravinsky is a humorist, and in Le Sacre du Printemps he is pagan, but Taylor is human, and his humanity, added to his wit and philosophical musings, shows all through his clever interpretations of Alice's adventures Through the Looking Glass. Mr. Taylor has long been admired for his songs, but of late years he has ventured into orchestration. This last composition presents so much melodic interest, along with such original and striking themes, so well developed and revealing a profound knowledge of the resources of the orchestra, that we are lost in admiration of the work and its composer, who arouses our best emotions at the same time that he inspires appreciation of his intellectual ability.

The last of the Metropolitan revivals was Der Freischütz. It did not prove as interesting, nor will it probably last as long in the repertoire as did Oberon. The revival of the latter a few years ago was very delightful, but Der Freischütz is less appealing and more commonplace than the lighter opera. It was produced with magnificent scenery by Urban, and, as in Oberon, all the speaking parts were set to music by Mr. Bodanzky—sometimes a recitative with only a chord for a background, and sometimes a very near approach to a song. Elizabeth Rethberg made a very acceptable Agatha, but one listener could hardly forget Parepa-Rosa, when she was heard here in the part some five or six decades ago. The real vocal and histrionic success in the opera was made by Michael Bohnen, as Kasper, and the wolf's glen was a veritable 'Hell's Kitchen.' The introduction of Weber's Invitation to the Dance gave the Ballet exceptional opportunities.

M. H. FLINT.

TORONTO

The Mendelssohn Choir of Toronto recently established itself more firmly than ever in the eyes of America. New York critics claim for this body priority over any other similar organization on this continent. A thing the Americans seem unable to understand is that it should be possible for so huge a choir to attend three rehearsals a week throughout the winter, and to sing almost every night for two whole weeks in the aggregate, simply for the love of music. In New York choirs have to be paid. The tour this year included Buffalo, New York (two nights), Philadelphia, and Baltimore. Mr. Stokowski created a deep impression with his performance of the Beethoven Choral Symphony in Carnegie Hall on the first evening, using of course his own orchestra. On the following evening Dr. Fricker was given a most enthusiastic reception with a mixed programme that contained four excerpts from the Bach B minor Mass. Buffalo and Baltimore heard a cappella programmes. Mr. Tertius Noble's opinion is worth recording. 'A thousand congratulations on your splendid triumph. I enjoyed the gorgeous work of the choir—every moment of it. What control! . . . Again a thousand thanks for your inspiring choral singing. It is good to let New Yorkers see what can be done when a man who knows his job is at the head of a great choral body.'

Three New Symphony 'Twilights' have given us the Brahms Symphony No. 3, the Magic Flute and William Tell Overtures, the '1812' and the Beethoven Pastoral Symphony. The three soloists were Moses Garten in the Beethoven F major Romanza, Alfred Heather in 'Lohengrin's Farewell,' and Leo Smith in the Elgar Violoncello Concerto. Kreisler, ever welcome, rather strangely chose the Grieg C minor Sonata and the Tchaikovsky D major Concerto in the same programme. As usual his house was packed, and his popular Viennese tit-bits were in great demand.

The Hambourg Concert Society gave a splendid evening of chamber music in Massey Hall, when the Trio (Messrs. Geza de Kresz, Reginald Stewart, and Boris Hambourg) played the Beethoven E flat, Op. 70, No. 2. Geza de Kresz and Norah Drewett were heard in the favourite César Franck Sonata.

The New York Symphony Orchestra chose an all-Wagner programme for its return visit. American orchestras (with the exception of the Philadelphia) are losing ground now that we have our own regular concerts. Galli-Curci, Ignaz Friedman, and Ernest Seitz have been heard in recital. Sophie Braslau completely captured her audience for the second time this season. The Eaton Choral Society (Percy Fletcher), the Murray Kay Choral Society (W. Crawford), and the Masonic Male-Voice Choir (E. R. Bowles) have held yearly concerts. Florence MacBeth, of the Chicago Opera, assisted the first-named Society.

T. J. Crawford, St. Paul's, Bloor Street, E., is giving a special Rheinberger recital this month, playing Sonatas Nos. 5, 6, and 13. H. C. F.

VIENNA

THE OPERATIC AND ORCHESTRAL SITUATION

After a postponement of several months the Staatsoper has produced, as its third novelty of the season, Fredigundis, the latest opera by Franz Schmidt, the Viennese composer whose Notre Dame has held its place in the répertoire of the Staatsoper (but of no other German opera-house) for ten years past. Fredigundis had been a dismal failure at its first and only Berlin performance last season, and the same fate was easily to be foretold for it at Vienna. Its fault is lack of dramatic music. It disappeared after three poorly attended presentations. Clemens Krauss conducted. He goes to Frankfurt as operatic director next season. Herr Krauss's loss will be severely felt at the Staatsoper, where he has been the only young and really efficient conductor. There is some speculation as to his successor. One of the competitors, Dr. Fritz Stiedry, formerly from Berlin, is no longer in the field, as he is to succeed Felix Weingartner as director of the Volksoper.

Weingartner has decided to sever his connection with the Volksoper, the destinies of which he has governed for five years, considerably to the detriment of his own financial interests. His frequent foreign tours and consequent absence from his post have often been severely criticised, but are easily explained by the ridiculously small monthly salary which he drew at his theatre, and which was probably only a fraction of the nightly fees readily paid him on his English, Spanish, or South American tours. Moreover, the frequent opposition and interference which he encountered from the financial backers of the Volksoper—of whom each sought to further his own private ends—were such as to dull his enterprise on behalf of what is at best an operatic theatre of provincial standard.

Weingartner's more important work at Vienna is the conductorship of the Philharmonic Orchestra which he has held for sixteen years. It is hoped to retain him for at least a portion of these important concerts. The majority of the Orchestra is favourable to him, and prefers him to Richard Strauss, whose anxiety for Weingartner's Philharmonic post is an open secret. In the orchestral field, the withdrawal of Clemens Krauss from the Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde series (which he has been sharing with Knappertsbusch and Reichwein) will result in several changes. Reichwein is designated as the successor of Ferdinand Löwe (whose often-heralded retirement will occur at the end of the season) with the Konzertverein cycle, and Knappertsbusch has fallen short of expectations. Thus the post of director of the Gesellschaftskonzerte will be vacant shortly, and also that of the Singverein heretofore held by Furtwängler (who is giving up his Vienna duties) and Reichwein. For once, Vienna is a good field for aspiring conductors this year, and new men will probably come to the front.

ORCHESTRAL NOVELTIES

Rudolf Nilius, who had frequently been named as the prospective successor to Löwe's position, has concluded his cycle of chamber orchestra concerts with two programmes chiefly devoted to novelties by Viennese composers, including an Overture to a Marionette Play by Hans Gal, which lays rather more stress on lyrical warmth than on the parodistic vein customary with this sort of (generally Stravinskian) music. Further, Nilius produced a Suite by Karl Weigl entitled Pictures and Stories, which is an orchestral version of one of Weigl's earlier pianoforte compositions; also an orchestral setting of Wilhelm Grosz's earlier Love Songs. The fact that so many of the younger Viennese composers, so far from striving for progressive development, indulge in a habit of ever again reverting to their early out-put, and of making orchestral settings of works which should more properly be regarded by their creators merely as initial and transitory stages of their artistic career, cannot but inspire a certain mistrust in their discrimination and earnestness of purpose. It is a deplorable spectacle to see an unusually gifted and capable young man like Grosz unceasingly cultivating the light genre, and more deplorable still to see Erich Korngold engaged in reshaping over and over again the same old melodies. Some of his very earliest songs (written in the time of his career as a child-prodigy) have only recently been orchestrated by him, and produced at one of Nilius's concerts. One movement of his Pianoforte Quintet consists of variations on his Songs of Parting, and the last movement of his String Quartet is an elaboration on motives from his Much Ado about Nothing Suite. Nilius has gradually come to be regarded as the principal advocate of the young Vienna composers (albeit only composers of the lighter and more conservative vein), but he is deserving of greater praise as one of the few orchestral leaders who love to roam in the realm of rarely-heard classic music. In his quest of all but forgotten classic gems he has recently found, and produced, for the first time anywhere, six Menuets by Mozart. They were written presumably round about 1770. The manuscript was but a few months ago unearthed in the St. Peter Monastery at Salzburg. They are short pieces, of eminent melodic charm, and interesting from a formal point of view in that two examples deviate from the classic scheme through the complete absence of a Trio.

Foreign conductors have rather rarely found their way to Vienna during the last few months. Jenő Hubay, the eminent violin instructor from Budapest, appeared in the double capacity of composer and conductor in the performance of a choral work, Vita Nuova, based on Dante's work. It is remarkable for an obsolescence and naiveté which defy criticism, and which reveal Hubay on the plane of modernism established by a Hildach. The purpose of a special concert of the Philharmonic, directed by a Swiss conductor, Georges Fouilloux, was to demonstrate French music with the aid of so classic a composition as César Franck's D minor Symphony (which is thirty-five years old) and Lalo's Symphonie Espagnole. A concert of Celtic music, conducted by Mr. Alick Maclean, was a unique and interesting experience. Apart from Mendelssohn's Hebrides Overture and Scotch Symphony, and the Prelude to Act 3 of Tristan (which are Celtic music merely in the sense of their local atmosphere), the programme contained Edward German's Cymric Rhapsody, a symphonic prelude by Gillean Duart—who is none other than Mr. Maclean himself—entitled The Mayflower, and an old Celtic folk-song for violin and orchestra which proved the most popular piece of the evening. Mr. Maclean's success as a conductor was undisputed, and deservedly so; he conducted with authority and rare musicianship.

Aside from the three last-named concerts, the foreign element in the musical life of the city has recently been supplied by our Czecho-Slovak neighbours. Now that the old friction between the German and Czech element of what was once the Austro-Hungarian monarchy is no longer existent—and music has had a considerable part in bridging old animosities—Czech musicians are gladly welcomed at Vienna. The Smetana Centenary was the occasion for a rather makeshift production of his opera Dalibor at the Staatsoper, and for a great festival concert conducted by Franz Schalk. For weeks previously Smetana had figured prominently on the programmes of several Czech artists and chamber music parties, such as the Sevcik and the famous Bohemian String Quartet and the Zika Quartet, the last-named a new and excellent organization. The celebrated Teachers' Choral Society, from Prague, under Metod Dalezil, created a great impression, and Oscar Nedbal and Anton Bednar, both Czech conductors, were successful protagonists of Czech orchestral music—perhaps the most distinctly 'national' output of any race. Bednar gave us the first cyclic performance of Dvorák's Slavic Dances, of which the second series (Op. 72) was new to Vienna. It was composed in 1886, and differs from the first in that it includes not only Czech dances but also Polish, Yugoslav, and Ukrainian melodies.

Obituary

We regret to record the following deaths:

MARTIN SOUTHWELL SKEFFINGTON, on March 30, aged eighty-one. He was for a long time head partner in the firm of Skeffington & Son, publishers of theological and kindred works. His keen interest in music was manifested in many ways. He was for many years honorary organist at St. Barnabas, Kensington, conductor of the Kensington Choral Society, and composed and edited a good deal of Church music.

HENRY POPE, of Bristol, in his eighty-seventh year. For more than twenty years he was principal bass with the Carl Rosa and Mapleson Opera Companies. He was also a favourite singer at the 'Popular Concerts' in the 'seventies and 'eighties, as well as in oratorio performances at the Albert Hall and Crystal Palace.

ADA PETHERICK, suddenly, on March 21. She was well-known as organist and pianoforte teacher in the Croydon district, and was a member of the 'Petherick Quartet'—four sisters who gave recitals at various London concert halls.

FLORENCE MARY LUCY CAMPBELL (Madame Campbell Perugini), at Caversham, on March 9. She was a granddaughter of Leonardo Perugini, a famous Italian teacher of singing, and was herself well known as a teacher.

Dr. T. R. G. JOZÉ, of Dublin, who died on March 20, at the age of seventy. For over forty years he was senior professor at the Royal Irish Academy of Music, Dublin.

Miscellaneous

A Summer School for the Study of the Arts of the Middle Ages will be held at Glastonbury from August 2 to 16, followed by a Festival (August 19-23 and 25-30) of musical and dramatic works which have been influenced by mediæval thought and feeling. Particulars from Mr. Fred J. Gilbert, High Street, Glastonbury.

The South London Philharmonic Society promises an excellent programme of British music at Goldsmiths' College, New Cross, on May 24, at 7.30. The programme will include Balfour Gardiner's News from Whydah, a Purcell Suite for strings, and Elgar's Violin Concerto (Mr. Albert Sammons).

Answers to Correspondents

Questions must be of general musical interest. They must be stated simply and briefly, and if several are sent, each must be written on a separate slip. We cannot undertake to reply by post.

Q.—(1.) I have read somewhere of books of short interludes with alternative endings, so that they may be played singly or connectedly as occasion demands. I want such things, being an organist with no gift for improvisation. Most published things of the kind are feeble and obvious. (2.) Can you suggest suitable pieces for playing before a wedding—moderately difficult and not Wagner transcriptions? (3.) A few good settings of the Te Deum that will stand repetition, such as Somerville in F?—INTERLUDE.

A.—(1.) Several of the numbers in Ernest Chausson's set of pieces for the Vespers of Virgins have alternative endings of the kind you describe. They are part of the 'Répertoire Moderne' of the Schola Cantorum, in which series you will find also some excellent pieces of varying length, founded on fragments of plainsong, by Ropartz, d'Indy, and other French composers. Excellent pieces of the length you require are the set of a hundred by Gigout, recently published by Chester, in four sets of twenty-five. Some are modal, and all are good. See also Au pied de l'Autel by Ropartz, a set of pieces, mostly short, and Gigout's Album Grégorien (two hundred and thirty short, modal pieces), and a further set of a hundred short pieces. Novello's stock all these save the Chester publication, and they also publish books of Short Preludes, most of which are excellent. (2.) A list would include pretty well the whole of the fairly light and moderately difficult part of the organ repertory. Now that the contracting parties realise that the ceremony is binding without the Lohengrin and Midsummer Night's Dream transcriptions, any good organ music may be used. We have even known happy couples stepping down the aisle to the strains of a Bach Chorale Prelude. (3.) Look at Ireland in F, Alcock in B flat and A, Macpherson in E flat (Novello).

Q.—My friend and I are desirous of composing a harvest cantata. Can you tell us the best way of getting it published?—T.

A.—Between the desire to compose and the business of publication, there is a long, long road, as you will find. When you have covered the whole distance, send the MS. to a publisher who issues that type of work, and hope for the best.

ANSWERS IN BRIEF

E. L. M.—The Joseph Dale about whom you inquire was probably the music publisher of that name. His business was founded about 1770. Another Joseph Dale, probably a son, was in the business about forty years later. The first Joseph composed a good deal, but we find no record of his having been Master of the King's Musick.

G. L.—(1.) Joseph Robson, the organ-builder, was a partner of Benjamin Flight. The firm known as Flight & Robson had premises for a time in St. Martin's Lane. They dissolved partnership in 1832, Robson's share of the business being acquired by Gray & Davison. We find no trace of 'Robson & Son, 101, St. Martin's Lane.' (2.) Redhead's Story of the Cross is published by Pitman, Hart & Co.

C. F. D.—(1.) The Bachgesellschaft edition of Bach is, we fancy, not now easy to obtain. The volumes cost about £1 1s. each. The edition is mainly useful for library and editorial purposes. The average pianist and organist would be as well suited, and at lower cost, by any good English edition. (2.) The possibilities of such articles as you suggest are already being considered by the writer in question.

J. F.—We cannot give in this column biographies of composers so well known as Rheinberger. Refer to vol. 4 of Grove.

F.R.C.O. STUDENT.—The phrasing of the 'Wedge' counter-subject is largely a matter of taste. Bach left few such marks, so editors usually supply indications, which are intended to be merely suggestive. Phrase as you feel inclined, but be consistent throughout the work. The only unforgivable sin in the matter of phrasing is to use none.

M. A. C.—Probably by Vittoria, but write to the organist of the church at which you heard it. Organists are usually pleased to give information of the kind.

A. W. W.—There is a largish collection of pianoforte duets by Schumann in the Peters edition. It contains all his best work in this field, we think. Novello's can supply it.

D. J. B.—(1.) No preventive, so far as we know. Try dusting the finger-tips with Talcum or powdered chalk. (2.) Keep the nails as short as is consistent with comfort. (3.) No; the finger-tips must go through the sore stage and get hardened to the job.

J. E. L.—We cannot suggest lecture schemes. So much depends on the type of audience, facilities for illustration, and (not least) your ability to work the scheme out. But there is no lack of subjects. The three you mention will do as well as any. There are, however, no books directly concerned with them; you must dig out your matter from your library.

W. G. H.—Why not get a skilled reviser to touch up your MS. before sending it to a publisher? It would stand a better chance of acceptance. See our advertisement columns for names of such revisers.

R. W.—Send typed copies of your song words to likely composers, or to publishers of popular songs. The latter are glad to come across suitable words to hand on to the composers associated with their house.

A. H. H.—We should think that the wrist section of any recognised system of hand gymnastics would meet your case. But expert advice seems to be called for.

FELLOWSHIP.—Pedal Scales and Arpeggios, by H. F. Ellingford (Novello), and Pedal Scales, &c., by Clemens, in two books (Breitkopf & Härtel). But the kind of study matters less than the way you work at it. Thoroughness must be your motto.

ELMUS.—(1.) The L.R.A.M. examinations are held only in London. There is no academical dress. (2.) Best's Variations on Men of Harlech are published by Messrs. Augener.

B. C. W.—School Choir Training, by Margaret Nicholls (Novello), is an excellent practical course of lessons on voice-production for children's classes.

Can any reader oblige with some particulars of the mechanical organ for which Mozart wrote his two Fantasias?

DURING THE LAST MONTH.

Published by NOVELLO & CO., LIMITED.

BESLY, M.—"The night is come." A National Evening Hymn. (No. 1120, Novello's Parish Choir Book.) 4d.

BOYCE, ETHEL.—Four Birds:
No. 1. "The Bullfinch." (No. 209, Novello's Two-part Songs.) 4d.

No. 2. "The Peacock" (Pavane). (No. 210, Novello's Two-part Songs.) 3d.

No. 3. "The Willow Wrens." (No. 211, Novello's Two-part Songs.) 3d.

No. 4. "The Swallow." (No. 212, Novello's Two-part Songs.) 3d.

CAREY, FLORENCE.—"I will lay me down in peace." Vesper. 1½d.

CRASTON, E. S.—"Thou shalt rejoice in every good thing." Harvest Anthem. 4d.

EMPIRE SONG BOOK. A collection of suitable music for Children's Festivals. 1s. Vocal parts (Staff and Tonic Sol-fa combined). 6d.

FORD, THOMAS.—"Come, Phillis, come into these bowers." Madrigal. (No. 975, The Musical Times.) 2d.

FOSTER, MYLES B.—"The Song of the Gale." Part-Song. 1st Violin, 4d.; 2nd Violin, 4d.; Viola, 4d.; Violoncello, 4d.; Basso, 4d.

HARRISON, H.—"Montana Semita Caeli" ("Lord, as the mountains strong"). Hymn for Morning, Evening or General Use. 6d.

HICKIN, WELTON.—"Pianoforte Accompaniment." (No. 99, Novello's Music Primers and Education Series.) Paper cover, 4s.; paper boards, 5s.

JARVIS, F. A.—"I heard the Voice of Jesus." Hymn-Anthem. For Tenor Solo and Chorus. 3d.

MEERS, E. G.—Prelude and Fugue on "The old folks at home." For Organ. 2s.

MENDELSSOHN. — "You spotted snakes" ("A Midsummer Night's Dream"). Arranged as a Two-part Song. (No. 213, Novello's Two-part Songs.) 4d.

RATHBONE, G.—"The Pied Piper of Hamelin." Cantata for Children. Book of Words, 6s. 6d. net per 100.

SCHOOL MUSIC REVIEW, No. 383, contains the following music in both notations.—"The Scissor-Man." Two-Part Song by GEORGE RATHBONE. 2d.

SCHOOL SONGS. Published in two forms. A. Voice Parts in Staff and Tonic Sol-fa Notations, with Pianoforte Accompaniment (8vo). B. Voice Parts only, in Tonic Sol-fa Notation. A. B.

No. 943. "England and her Colonies." Unison Song.

PERCY E. FLETCHER 3d. —
No. 944. "An Empire Song." Unison Song. PERCY E. FLETCHER 3d. —

No. 1162. "Come, let us all this day." Unison Song. BACH — 1½d.

No. 1351. "Sir Eglamore." Unison Song. H. BALFOUR GARDINER — 3d.

No. 1364. "A Sad Story." Unison Song. G. RATHBONE — 2d.

SHARP, CECIL J., and H. C. MACILWAINE.—Morris Book. Part 3. Revised Edition. Paper cover, 4s.; cloth, 5s. 6d.

SHARP, CECIL J.—Morris Dance Tunes. Sets 5 and 6. Revised Edition. 3s. each.

TONIC SOL-FA SERIES:

No. 2447. "Come again, sweet days." Madrigal. JOHN DOWLAND 2d.

No. 2448. "The Goslings." Humorous Part-Song. Arranged for S.S.A. SIR FREDERICK BRIDGE 3d.

No. 2449. "Ye humble souls that seek the Lord." Easter Anthem. H. A. CHAMBERS 2d.

WILLIS-DIXON, A. — "Flow'r of our Land." Memorial Hymn. 2d.

PUBLISHED FOR

THE H. W. GRAY CO., NEW YORK.

BANKS, H. C., Jr.—"The Cuckoo." For Organ.

BECKER, R. L.—"Clair de Lune." For Organ.
— "Serenata." For Organ.

GILBERT, H. M.—"Beyond the starry skies." Parts for Strings and Harp. $1.00 (4s.).

— "Star of the Coming Day." Anthem for Easter or General Use. 20 cents (10d.).

JENNINGS, A. B., Jr.—"The Good Shepherd." Anthem. 15 cents (8d.).

UTKIN, P. C.—"Thine, O Lord, is the greatness." Anthem for Easter or General Use. 15 cents (8d.).

MARSH, C. H.—Colour Prints for Organ:

No. 1. "The Bow-Moon."
No. 2. "The Monkey Bridge."
No. 3. "Evening Snow at Fuji Kawa."
No. 4. "A young girl in the wind."

— "Fête des Fées" (Scherzo). For Organ.

(Continued on page 464.)

DURING THE LAST MONTH—(Continued).

- WILLAN, HEALEY.—Six Motets :
 No. 1. "Hail, Gladdening Light." 12 cents (6d.).
 No. 2. "O how glorious." 10 cents (4d.).
 No. 3. "Very Bread, Good Shepherd, tend us." 10 cents (4d.).
 No. 4. "O Sacred Feast." 10 cents (4d.).
 No. 5. "O how sweet, O Lord." 10 cents (4d.).
 No. 6. "Let us worship and fall down." 10 cents (4d.).

- VOYNICH, E. L.—"Lenten is come." Trio for S.S.A. (unaccompanied). 12 cents (6d.).
 —"The Fool's Song." For S.S.A.A. (unaccompanied). 12 cents (6d.).
 —"The School-Boy." Air with Variations for S.S.A.A. unaccompanied. 15 cents (8d.).

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
Walter Parratt ... ..	401
Charles Villiers Stanford ... ..	401
The New Principal of the Royal Academy of Music (with Portrait) ... ..	403
A Commentary upon Mendelssohn. By Hubert J. Foss ... ..	404
Hawatha as Opera (Illustrated) ... ..	407
Ad Libitum. By 'Feste' ... ..	409
Rheinberger's Organ Sonatas. By Harvey Grace ... ..	412
The Present Position of Welsh Music. By Llewelyn C. Lloyd ... ..	416
Personality and the Artist. By L. N. Higgins ... ..	418
Purcell's Church Music. By H. D. Statham ... ..	419
New Light on Early Tudor Composers. No. XXXI. Edward Higgins. By W. H. Grattan Flood ... ..	420
Occasional Notes ... ..	421
Music in the Foreign Press. By M.-D. Calvocoressi ... ..	422
The Incomplete Orchestra. By Arthur T. Froggatt ... ..	424
Music and the Cinema. By Richard Holt ... ..	426
Music in Public Schools. By Alban Claughton ... ..	427
The Musician's Bookshelf ... ..	429
The Fingering of Scales on the Pianoforte. By Alan E. F. Dickinson ... ..	432
Mackenzie's New Opera. By Herbert Hughes ... ..	439
Gramophone Notes. By 'Discus' ... ..	440
Competition Festival Record ... ..	441
Church and Organ Music ... ..	443
Royal College of Organists ... ..	443
The Worshipful Company of Parish Clerks and its Organ. By Andrew Freeman (Illustrated) ... ..	443
Letters to the Editor ... ..	446
Sharps and Flats ... ..	450
The Amateurs' Exchange ... ..	451
The Musical Nature of Speech and Song ... ..	451
Royal Academy of Music ... ..	451
Royal College of Music ... ..	452
Wireless Notes. By 'Caliban' ... ..	452
London Concerts ... ..	453
Music in the Provinces ... ..	456
Music in Ireland ... ..	459
Musical Notes from Abroad ... ..	459
Answers to Correspondents ... ..	462

MUSIC.

- 'Come, Phillis, come into these bowers.' Madrigal.
 By THOMAS FORD ... .. 433

TWO EXTRA SUPPLEMENTS are given with this Number:

1. Portrait of John Blackwood McEwen.
2. 'The night is come.' A National Evening Hymn. By Maurice Besly.

CONTRALTO (Lady) wishes to join a Quartet Party. "W." 6, Dartmouth Park Road, N.W.5.

L.R.A.M. wishes to buy Teaching Connection; piano or singing. Address, "Voice," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

PARTNER REQUIRED for School of Music in the South of England. Apply, "B. A. C.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

THE CHANT COMMUNION SERVICE

WITH EUCHARISTIC HYMNS.

The Creed and Gloria in Excelsis, arranged in verses and pointed both for Anglican and Gregorian chanting.

Suitable for Mission, Village, and Parish Choirs, or for a Congregation without the aid of a Choir.

ARRANGED BY THE

REV. C. W. A. BROOKE, M.A.

PRICE SIXPENCE.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

The Pied Piper of Hamelin

BY ROBERT BROWNING.

SET TO MUSIC FOR CHILDREN'S VOICES

BY
 GEORGE RATHBONE

(Composer of "VOGELWIED," "SINGING LEAVES," "ORPHEUS," and other popular works for Children's Voices.)

Price, Staff Notation, Two Shillings. Tonic Sol-fa, One Shilling.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., AURAL TESTS. Special important paper. Success assured. This paper gives details how to work. Send 4s. 6d. to "Aural Tests," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

ESSAY.—A.R.C.O., on "English Folk-Song and Dance." Excellent Series of Six Model Essays—valuable hints. Secure Success. Send 4s. 6d. to "Essays," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

SINGING.—A long-felt want. Very many lessons saved by SPECIAL NEW PAPER. Students taught how to obtain the full singing voice. Enclose P.O. 5s. to "Singing," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

SIGHT-READING and MEMORISING Lessons by correspondence, under the personal direction of Mr. Charles A. Gillett. These lessons have given remarkable results as testified by pianists of all grades. The moderate fee of one guinea includes not only the written lesson, but also Postal Consultations on individual difficulties. Write or call, 11, South Molton Street, Bond Street, W.1.

PIPE ORGANS ENLARGED, Repaired, and Tuned. Attractive Terms. Henry Morgan & Son, Church Organ Builders, 19, Cowdrey Road, Wimbledon, London. Founded 1896.

WANTED.—ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER for St. John's Presbyterian Church, Kensington. Salary, £75 per annum. Applications to Dr. J. C. Philip, 5, Queen Anne's Gardens, Bedford Park, W.4.

BASS WANTED.—Parish Church, West Acton. £15. Vicar, St. Martin's Vicarage, Creffield Road, West Acton.

ALTO REQUIRED for Holy Trinity Church, West Hill, Putney Heath. Good reader essential. Sundays only. £16. G. H. Godwin, "Hampton," Sutherland Grove, S.W.18.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER WANTED for the Parish Church of St. Mary, Sunbury-on-Thames. Sung Mass. Apply for full particulars to the Vicar.

HOLY TRINITY, WINCHESTER.—WANTED, June 21, Organist, experienced. Churchman. Sung Eucharist. £60-£80. Excellent opportunities. Apply, Rev. E. Heriz-Smith, Holy Trinity Rectory, Winchester.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER WANTED for St. Michael Episcopal Church, Helensburgh. 3-Manual Organ. Salary about £100. Apply to Geo. E. Fleming, Woodlee, Helensburgh.

SPECIAL BARGAIN.—Mason & Hamlin Three-Manual Organ, 26 Stops. C. and R. pedal board. Seen London. Write, "J. C.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

NOVELLO'S PARISH CHOIR BOOK.

Te Deum Laudamus.

(For Chant, Unison, and Gregorian Settings, see separate sections.)

1054. ADLAM, FRANK, in D .. .. 4d.	6. *GARRETT, G. M., in F .. .. 4d.	119. *OUSELEY, F., in D .. .. 4d.
286. ADLAM, FRANK, in E flat .. .. 6d.	439. GERMAN, J. E., in F .. .. 8d.	728. POINTER, JOHN, in B flat .. .. 4d.
1048. ADLAM, FRANK, in F (easy) .. .. 4d.	248. *GOSS, JOHN, in F .. .. 4d.	778. PULLEIN, JOHN, in B flat .. .. 4d.
652. §ALCOCK, W. G., in B flat .. .. 6d.	274. *GOSS, JOHN, in A .. .. 4d.	722. READ, F. J., in D .. .. 4d.
5. ALLEN, G., in D .. .. 4d.	340. §GOSS, JOHN, in D (Thanksgiving) 8d.	33. REAY, S., in F .. .. 4d.
14. ARMES, PHILIP, in G .. .. 4d.	729. GRAY, ALAN, in G .. .. 6d.	882. RIDSDALE (Festal) .. .. 8d.
985. ARMES, PHILIP, in G .. .. 8d.	10. HAKING, R., in C .. .. 2d.	1010. ROBERTS, J. V., in D .. .. 4d.
16. ARNOLD, G. B., in C .. .. 4d.	993. HALL, KING, in B flat .. .. 6d.	1013. ROBERTS, J. V., in E .. .. 6d.
877. ARNOTT, A. D., in F .. .. 1s.	504. HALL, E. VINE, in D .. .. 4d.	1016. ROBERTS, J. V., in F .. .. 6d.
411. ATTWATER, J. P., in B flat .. .. 6d.	693. HALL, E. V., in G (Congregational) 4d.	1019. ROBERTS, J. V., in G .. .. 6d.
163. BAKER, A. S., in C .. .. 6d.	693b. Do. Melody only .. .. 1½d.	834. ROSS, W. G., in A .. .. 4d.
1040. *BAKER, HENRY, in F .. .. 4d.	572. HOPKINS, E. J., in A .. .. 8d.	627. SELBY, B. L., in G .. .. 6d.
743. BENNETT, GEORGE J., in E flat .. 6d.	15. *HOPKINS, J. L., in G .. .. 4d.	906. SELBY, B. L., in G minor .. .. 4d.
997. BENNETT, G. J., in B flat .. .. 6d.	963. HOWELL, H., in E .. .. 4d.	409. SHAW, J., in G .. .. 4d.
18. BEST, W. T., in C .. .. 4d.	378. HUNTLEY, G. F., in E flat .. .. 6d.	32. §SMART, HENRY, in F .. .. 4d.
546. §BLAIR, HUGH, in D (Festal) .. 8d.	44. HUTCHINSON, T., in E flat .. .. 2d.	375. SMITH, BOYTON, in E flat .. .. 6d.
786. BLAIR, HUGH, in E flat .. .. 4d.	750. IRLAND, JOHN, in F .. .. 4d.	955. SMITH, B. (with Jubilate), in D .. 4d.
724. BOOTH, JOSIAH, in D .. .. 6d.	29. IRONS, H. S., in G .. .. 4d.	956. SMITH, BOYTON, in G (No. 5) .. 4d.
346. §BREWER, A. H., in B flat .. .. 6d.	726. KEETON, HAYDN, in B flat .. .. 4d.	388. SOMERVELL, A., in F .. .. 4d.
588. §BREWER, A. H., in E flat .. .. 6d.	647. KEMPTON, THOMAS, in B flat .. 6d.	19. *STAINER, J., in C .. .. 4d.
145. BROWN, A. H., in A .. .. 4d.	680. KING, CHARLES, in C .. .. 6d.	136. STAINER, J., in G (Congregational) 4d.
842. BULLIVANT, G., in E flat (Festal) 6d.	552. KING, OLIVER (with Jubilate), in D 8d.	273. STEANE, BRUCE, in F .. .. 4d.
1078. BUNNETT, E., in A .. .. 4d.	131. LANE, E. BURRITT, in F .. .. 4d.	1. STEGGALL, C., in A .. .. 4d.
1084. BUNNETT, E., in E .. .. 4d.	684. LEE, E. MARKHAM, in C .. .. 4d.	666. STEGGALL, C., in F (Congregational) 3d.
1098. BUNNETT, E., in G .. .. 4d.	449. LEMARE, E. H., in F .. .. 6d.	24. STEPHENS, C. E., in C .. .. 4d.
754. BUTTON, H. ELLIOT, in E flat .. 4d.	27. LITTLETON, ALFRED H., in E flat 2d.	21. STEWART, R. P., in G .. .. 4d.
9. CALKIN, J. B., in D .. .. 4d.	151. LUTKIN, P. C., in C .. .. 6d.	2. *SULLIVAN, ARTHUR, in D .. .. 2d.
798. CAMBRIDGE, F., in B flat .. .. 4d.	17. MACFARREN, WALTER, in C .. .. 6d.	474. THORNE, E. H. (with Jubilate), in G 8d.
12. CLARKE, J. HAMILTON, in F .. .. 2d.	988. MACFARREN, W., in A .. .. 6d.	983. THORNE, E. H., in E flat .. .. 6d.
730. COBB, G. F., in G .. .. 4d.	228. MACPHERSON, CHARLES, in F .. .. 6d.	23. TILLEARD, J., in F .. .. 2d.
416. COLERIDGE-TAYLOR, S., in F .. .. 6d.	758. MACPHERSON, CHARLES, in E flat 6d.	73. TILLEARD, J., in G (Festal) .. 2d.
860. COULDREY, H. R., in D .. .. 4d.	153. MACPHERSON, STEWART, in E flat 6d.	1008. TOMBLIN, R. G., in A flat .. .. 4d.
751. CUMMINGS, W. H., in D .. .. 4d.	83. *MARCHANT, ARTHUR W., in E flat 4d.	66. TOOP, AUG., in D .. .. 6d.
679. DAWRE, R., in F (Festal form) .. 6d.	362. §MARTIN, GEORGE C., in A .. .. 8d.	144. TOZER, FERRIS, in D .. .. 4d.
1058. DUNCAN, E., in G .. .. 6d.	659. MARTIN, GEORGE C., in C .. .. 1s.	617. TOZER, FERRIS, in F .. .. 3d.
26. *DYKES, J. B., in F .. .. 2d.	578. MATTHEWS, T. R., in G .. .. 2d.	805. TOZER, FERRIS, in E flat .. .. 4d.
41. ELLIOTT, J. W., in F .. .. 4d.	579. MATTHEWS, T. R., in E .. .. 2d.	41. TRIMMELL, T. T., in D (Festal) 4d.
49. ELLIOTT, J. W., in D .. .. 4d.	39. MILLER, C. E., in D .. .. 4d.	109. WALMISLEY, T. F., in C .. .. 4d.
672. FARRANT, R., in G minor .. .. 6d.	262. MONK, M. J., in G .. .. 6d.	708. WAREING, HERBERT W., in G .. 6d.
40. FISHER, ARTHUR E., in D .. .. 4d.	13. MONK, W. H., in A .. .. 4d.	589. WARREN, R. H., in E flat .. .. 6d.
63. FISHER, ARTHUR E., in A .. .. 6d.	34. MORLEY, T., in F .. .. 4d.	1047. WATKINS, DAVID, in B flat .. 4d.
472. FORD, E., in F .. .. 4d.	807. MOSETHAL, J. (with Jubilate), in E 8d.	45. §WESTBURY, G. H., in A .. .. 4d.
392. FOSTER, MYLES B., in C .. .. 6d.	614. NAYLOR, E. W., in A .. .. 5d.	43. WEST, JOHN E., in B flat .. .. 4d.
36. GADSBY, H., in E flat .. .. 4d.	25. NUNN, J. H., in F .. .. 2d.	912. WEST, JOHN E., in F .. .. 6d.
207. GALE, C. R., in F .. .. 6d.	11. OUSELEY, F., in F .. .. 4d.	70. §WEST, JOHN E., in G .. .. 4d.
		558. WILLIAMS, C. LEE, in A .. .. 8d.
		780. WOLSTENHOLME, W., in A flat .. 4d.
		37. *WOODWARD, H. H., in E flat .. 4d.

Te Deum Laudamus (CHANT SETTINGS).

523. BARNBY, J. (with other Canticles) 6d.	246. *GOSS, JOHN, in C .. .. 3d.	819. ROBERTS, J. V., in A .. .. 2d.
443. BARTHOLOMEW (nine Chants) .. 6d.	249. GOSS, JOHN, in D .. .. 4d.	820. ROBERTS, J. V., in B flat .. .. 2d.
1032. BEST, W. T., in G .. .. 4d.	10. HAKING, R., in C .. .. 2d.	106. ROBERTS, J. V., in C .. .. 2d.
1085. BUNNETT, E., in E .. .. 4d.	693. HALL, E. VINE, in G (Congregational) 4d.	105. ROBERTS, J. V., in D .. .. 2d.
1093. BUNNETT, E., in F .. .. 4d.	693b. Do. Melody only .. .. 1½d.	822. ROBERTS, J. V., in E .. .. 2d.
644. *BUTTON, H. ELLIOT .. .. 2d.	447. HAMILTON-GELL, A. W., in G .. 2d.	821. ROBERTS, J. V., in E flat .. .. 2d.
38. CARNALL, ARTHUR .. .. 4d.	22. HERBERT, E., in D .. .. 4d.	104. ROBERTS, J. V., in F .. .. 2d.
1004. CHAMBERS, H. A., in A .. .. 4d.	158. HOPKINS, E. J., in F .. .. 4d.	107. ROBERTS, J. V., in G .. .. 2d.
308. CHIPP, E. T., in D .. .. 4d.	29. IRONS, H. S., in G .. .. 4d.	88. *SMITH, BOYTON, in F .. .. 2d.
312. CHIPP, E. T., in E flat .. .. 4d.	456. LITTLETON, A. H., in D .. .. 4d.	954. SMITH, B. (No. 3, with Jubilate), in G 4d.
311. CHIPP, E. T., in C .. .. 4d.	17. MACFARREN, W., in C .. .. 4d.	188. SMITH, BOYTON, in E flat .. .. 4d.
976. COULDREY, H. R. (No. 2, in D) .. 3d.	164. MACPHERSON, G., in E flat .. .. 2d.	413. STAINER, J., in A flat .. .. 4d.
973. COULDREY, H. R., in B flat .. .. 4d.	964. *OAKELEY, H. S. (Quadruple), in F 2d.	86. SUMNER, in E (Soprano voices) .. 4d.
880. DEANE, J. H., in E .. .. 3d.	11. OUSELEY, F., in F .. .. 4d.	20. THORNE, E. H., in C .. .. 4d.
881. DEANE, J. H., in G .. .. 3d.	119. *OUSELEY, F., in D .. .. 4d.	294. TURLE, JAMES, in E flat .. .. 2d.
371. BYRE, A. J., in D (Quadruple) .. 3d.	231. PETTMAN, EDGAR, No. 1 .. .. 2d.	51. VINCENT, C., in D .. .. 4d.
408. FIELD, J. T., in A .. .. 6d.	238. PETTMAN, EDGAR, No. 2 .. .. 2d.	914. WEST, JOHN E., in G .. .. 2d.
516. GAUNTLETT, H. J., in G .. .. 4d.	42. PRATTEN, W., in E .. .. 4d.

Te Deum Laudamus (UNISON SETTINGS).

5. ALLEN, G., in D .. .. 4d.	10. HAKING, R., in C .. .. 2d.	28. REDHEAD, R., in D (Congregational) 4d.
14. ARMES, PHILIP, in G .. .. 4d.	147. HAMILTON-GELL, A. W., in G .. 2d.	497. SELBY, B. L., in D .. .. 4d.
3. *BARNBY, J., in D .. .. 4d.	765. HOPKINS, E. J., in B flat .. .. 4d.	136. STAINER, J., in G (Congregational) 4d.
4. *BARNBY, J., in B flat .. .. 4d.	8. MACFARREN, G. A., in G .. .. 2d.	1. STEGGALL, C., in A .. .. 4d.
346. BREWER, A. H., in B flat (partly) 4d.	579. MATTHEWS, T. R., in E .. .. 4d.	666. STEGGALL, C., in F (Congregational) 3d.
9. CALKIN, J. B., in D .. .. 4d.	7. *MONK, E. G., in A .. .. 4d.	24. STEPHENS, C. E., in C .. .. 4d.
30. CHIPP, E. T., in D .. .. 4d.	437. NAYLOR, E. W., in E flat .. .. 4d.	20. THORNE, E. H., in C .. .. 4d.
63. FISHER, A. E., in A (partly) .. 6d.	119. *OUSELEY, F., in D .. .. 4d.
267. GOSS, JOHN, in A .. .. 3d.	11. OUSELEY, F., in F .. .. 4d.

Te Deum Laudamus (GREGORIAN TONES).

230. AMBROSIAN MELODY .. .. 4d.	380. JORDAN, W. (5th Tone) .. .. 2d.	300. STAINER, J. (2nd Series) .. .. 4d.
893. AMBROSIAN MELODY .. .. 4d.	953. SMITH, B., in B flat (Plain Song) 2d.	382. STAINER, J. (3rd Series) .. .. 4d.
905. Do. (Ed. by J. F. Bridge) .. 4d.	237. STAINER, J. (1st Series) .. .. 3d.	255. STAINER, J. (4th Series) .. .. 4d.

§ Orchestral Parts may be had. Those marked thus * may be had in Tonic Sol-fa.

NOVELLO'S PARISH CHOIR BOOK.

Benedicite, omnia opera.

1050. ADLAM, FRANK, in F .. .. 2d.	58. FROST, PERCY H., in D .. .. 3d.	232. PETTMAN, EDGAR, in E flat .. .. 2d.
501. BAIRSTOW, E. C., in E flat .. .. 4d.	93. GADSBY, HENRY, in G ( Chant form ) .. .. 2d.	225. PETTMAN, EDGAR, in C and E flat .. .. 3d.
427. BENNETT, G. J., in D ( Unison ) .. .. 4d.	488. GALE, CLEMENT R., in D .. .. 2d.	802. PULLEIN, JOHN, in E flat .. .. 14d.
61. BENNETT, G. J., in E flat .. .. 2d.	55. GLADSTONE, F. E., in C ( Chant form ) .. .. 2d.	157. ROBERTS, J. V., in B flat .. .. 6d.
62. BENNETT, G. J., in G .. .. 2d.	67. GLADSTONE, F. E., in G ( Unison ) .. .. 2d.	626. SLATER, W., in F .. .. 2d.
101. BEST, W. T., in C .. .. 2d.	428. GODFREY, A. E., in C .. .. 4d.	74. SMITH, BOYTON, in A flat .. .. 2d.
102. BLAIR, HUGH, in G .. .. 2d.	493. GODFREY, A. E. (No. 2), in G .. .. 4d.	420. SMITH, C. W., in C ( arr. for 5 or 4 v. ) .. .. 3d.
94. BUNNETT, E., in E ( Chant ) .. .. 21.	493. H. B. C. ( Chant ) .. .. 2d.	195. STAINER, J., in D ( Chant ) .. .. 2d.
1086. BUNNETT, E., in F ( Chant ) .. .. 3d.	196. HERVEY, F. A. J., in A flat ( Chant ) .. .. 2d.	301. STAINER & BLAXLAND ( Chant form ) .. .. 2d.
1095. BUNNETT, E., in F ( Chant ) .. .. 3d.	943. HOYTE, W. S., in D .. .. 2d.	425. STAINER, DE LACY, GIBBS, & C. .. .. 2d.
631. BUNTON, H. ELLIOT, in D .. .. 2d.	944. HOYTE, W. S., in D .. .. 2d.	930. STAINER, TURLE, and IRONS .. .. 3d.
932. BUTTON, H. ELLIOT ( shortd. form ) .. .. 2d.	103. HUGHES, W., in E flat .. .. 2d.	424. STAINER, WINN, and WALKER .. .. 2d.
732. COBB, G. F., in G .. .. 3d.	422. ILIFFE, F., in E flat ( Chant ) .. .. 2d.	500. STEWART, C. HYLTON, in C .. .. 4d.
973. COULDREY, H. R., in G and D .. .. 4d.	429. LEMARE, E. H., in B flat .. .. 4d.	620. TOZER, FERRIS, in G ( easy ) .. .. 3d.
974. COULDREY, H. R. (No. 2), in D and A .. .. 2d.	426. LLOYD, C. H., in E flat ( Chant form ) .. .. 3d.	622. TOZER, FERRIS, in A ( shortened form ) .. .. 3d.
651. ELLIOTT, J. W., in G .. .. 2d.	901. LUCAS, P. T. ( shortened form ) .. .. 2d.	931. VARIOUS COMPOSERS (8 Chants ) .. .. 2d.
295. ELLIOTT, J. W., in G .. .. 3d.	625. MACPHERSON, C., in F .. .. 6d.	199. WEST, JOHN E., in C .. .. 2d.
374. ELLIOTT, J. W., in G .. .. 6d.	96. MARTIN, GEORGE C., in F .. .. 6d.	570. WEST, JOHN E., in G .. .. 6d.
343. ELLIOTT, M. B., in G .. .. 2d.	98. MARTIN, GEORGE C., in G .. .. 6d.	846. WESTBURY, G. H., in C .. .. 2d.
499. ELLIOTT, R. B., in G .. .. 2d.	100. MARTIN, GEORGE C., in E flat .. .. 6d.	851. WILLAN, HEALEY, in D ( shortd. form ) .. .. 2d.
65. EYRE, A. J. (No. 2), in F .. .. 2d.	210. MATTHEWS, T. R., in E flat .. .. 2d.	85. WOOD, W. G., in D .. .. 2d.
371. EYRE, A. J., in E flat .. .. 3d.	770. MERDECKE ( Chiefly Unison ) .. .. 3d.	387. WRIGLEY, G. F., in G ( Quadruple ) .. .. 2d.
328. FOSTER, MYLES B., in F ( Chant form ) .. .. 6d.	421. MILLER, C. E. (No. 2), in G ( Chant ) .. .. 3d.

The Office of the Holy Communion.

479. ADAMS, THOMAS, in D .. .. 8d.	352. JOULE, B. ST. J. B., in C ( Monotone ) .. .. 2d.
667. ADAMS, THOMAS, in G .. .. 8d.	682. KING, CHARLES, in C .. .. 6d.
1051. ADLAM, FRANK, in F ( easy setting ) .. .. 8d.	1006. MACFARREN, G. A., in G ( Unison ) .. .. 6d.
1053. Ditto, in G .. .. 6d.	666. MAUNDER, J. H., in F ( Simple setting ) .. .. 8d.
1055. Ditto, in D .. .. 8d.	369. *MERDECKE ( Harmonized by J. Stainer ) .. .. 8d.
1056. Ditto, in E flat ( Missa de Sanctis ) .. .. 1s.	784. MERDECKE (Edited by Basil Harwood) .. .. 8d.
711. AGUTTER, B., in E minor .. .. 8d.	784A. Ditto, Melody only .. .. 3d.
1042. BAKER, HENRY, in F .. .. 8d.	855. MERDECKE (Edited by G. C. Martin) .. .. 8d.
746. BENNETT, G. J., in E flat .. .. 8d.	835. MISSA DE ANGELIS (Edited by Basil Harwood) .. .. 8d.
1034. BEST, W. T. ( Simple setting ) .. .. 6d.	835A. Ditto Melody only .. .. 3d.
235. *BLISS, W. H. The Communicants' Choral Card .. .. 2d.	801. MISSA REGIA (Edited by F. Burgess) .. .. 8d.
695. BREWER, A. H., in E flat .. .. 8d.	900. MISSA SIMPLEX (Edited by F. Burgess) .. .. 8d.
863. BROOKE, C. W. A. ( Arranged by ) ( Chant with Hymns ) .. .. 6d.	630. MOIR, FRANK L., in E flat .. .. 8d.
741. BROWN, A. H., in A .. .. 6d.	1024. MONK, E. G., in A ( Unison ) .. .. 6d.
234. BRYANS, F. R. A Simple Choral Communion Card .. .. 4d.	965. MOORE, HAROLD, in B flat .. .. 8d.
1089. BUNNETT, E., in E .. .. 1s.	221. OUSELEY, F., in C ( Easy ) .. .. 4d.
1066. BUTTON, H. ELLIOT ( mostly in Unison ) .. .. 8d.	716. POINTER, JOHN, in B flat .. .. 8d.
966. CHAMBERS, H. A., in G ( Simple setting ) .. .. 8d.	1030. REAY, S., in F .. .. 8d.
576. CLEMONS, W. J., No. 3, in A flat .. .. 3d.	483. SELBY, B. L., in E flat ( for Treble voices ) .. .. 6d.
677. COBB, G. F. ( Plain Chant. Voice part ) .. .. 2d.	484. SELBY, B. L., in E flat ( for Four voices ) .. .. 8d.
701 to 703. COBB, G. F., in C .. .. 8d.	438. SHAW, J., in G .. .. 8d.
734. COBB, G. F., in G .. .. 3d.	390. SOMERVELL, A., in F .. .. 6d.
861. DUMONT ( Ascribed to ). Missa Regia. (Ed. by F. Burgess) .. .. 8d.	565. STAINER, J., in A .. .. 8d.
1060. DUNCAN, E., in G .. .. 8d.	355. STEANE, BRUCE, in F .. .. 8d.
829. *DYKES, J. B., in F .. .. 4d.	1027. STEWART, R. P., in G .. .. 6d.
356. ELLIOTT, J. W., in F .. .. 8d.	534. THORNE, E. H., in E flat .. .. 8d.
714. FOSTER, M. B., in F ( Simple Setting ) .. .. 8d.	1001. THORNE, E. H., in G .. .. 8d.
705. *HALL, E. VINE, in D ( Unison ) .. .. 6d.	790. TOMBLIN, R. G., in C .. .. 8d.
263. HAYNE, LEIGHTON GEORGE, in G .. .. 6d.	266. TRIMMELL, T. T., in C ( Festival ) .. .. 4d.
1046. HEWITT, C. H., in E flat ( easy setting ) .. .. 8d.	785. WESTBURY, G. H., in A .. .. 8d.
936. HUTTON, E. A. ( arr. by ) ( Chant Service ) .. .. 6d.	713. WILLAN, HEALEY, in G .. .. 8d.

Most of the above settings have the Benedictus qui venit and Agnus Dei included.

Kyrie eleison.

495. BUTTON, H. ELLIOT. Four Kyries .. .. 2d.	453. LEMARE, E. H. Six Kyries .. .. 4d.	482. STAINER, J. Four Kyries .. .. 3d.
130. CALKIN, G. Six Kyries .. .. 2d.	454. LEMARE, E. H. Five Kyries .. .. 4d.	69. *SULLIVAN, in D ( with Jubilate ) .. .. 4d.
341. CLIPPINGDALE, J. Six Kyries .. .. 2d.	509. MACFARREN, W. ( with Jubilate ), in C .. .. 2d.	460. TILLEARD, J., in F ( with Jubilate ) .. .. 2d.
973. COULDREY, H. R. Four Kyries ( with Te Deum, &amp;c. ) .. .. 4d.	990. MACFARREN, W. ( with Jubilate ), in A .. .. 6d.	137. TRIMMELL, T. T., in F ( with Creed ) .. .. 4d.
753. CUMMINGS ( with Sanctus ), in D .. .. 2d.	401. MACPHERSON, C., in E flat .. .. 14d.	266. Ditto in C ( with Sanctus and Creed ) .. .. 2d.
674. FARRANT, R., in G minor .. .. 4d.	154. MACPHERSON, S., in E flat .. .. 6d.	295. TURLE, JAMES ( with Jubilate ) .. .. 2d.
430. GODFREY, A. E. Three Kyries .. .. 2d.	505. MACPHERSON, S., in B flat .. .. 6d.	909. *VARIOUS COMPOSERS (26 Settings ) .. .. 8d.
555. GREENISH, F. R. Six Kyries .. .. 2d.	582. MATTHEWS, T. R. Four settings .. .. 2d.	575. VARIOUS COMPOSERS (4 Settings ) .. .. 2d.
414. ILIFFE, F. Six Kyries .. .. 2d.	535. SELBY, B. L., in F .. .. 2d.	400. WEST, JOHN E., in E flat .. .. 14d.
682. KING, CHARLES, in C ( with Creed ) .. .. 6d.	188. SMITH, B. ( with Te Deum ), in E flat .. .. 4d.	642. WEST, JOHN E., in F .. .. 14d.
214. KING, OLIVER. Five Kyries .. .. 4d.		558. WILLIAMS, C. LEE ( with Te Deum ) .. .. 8d.

Athanasian Creed.

174. BEST, W. T., in F .. .. 4d.	664. BRIDGE, J. ( arr. ) ( Anthem Version ) .. .. 4d.	845. MACPHERSON, C. ( unaccompanied ) .. .. 2d.
155. BIRCH, E. H., in G .. .. 4d.	827. GREGORIAN (8th Tone, 1st ending) .. .. 14d.	351. STAINER, J. ( Plain song. Unison ) .. .. 4d.

Offertory Sentences.

333. FIELD, J. T. ( Nos. 1 to 5 ) .. .. 4d.	886. HIGGS, H. M. (20 Settings ) .. .. 1s. 6d.	1009. ROBERTS, J. V. (4 settings ) .. .. 3d.
334. FIELD, J. T. ( Nos. 6 to 9 ) .. .. 4d.	270. JORDAN, W. .. .. 2d.	330. STAINER, J. (9 Settings ) .. .. 4d.
335. FIELD, J. T. ( Nos. 10 to 15 ) .. .. 4d.	149. KNIGHT, H. (20 Settings ) .. .. 8d.	223. TOZER, FERRIS (20 Settings ) .. .. 6d.
336. FIELD, J. T. ( Nos. 16 to 20 ) .. .. 4d.	287. MARTIN, GEORGE C. (13 Settings ) .. .. 8d.	616. TOZER, FERRIS (Six) .. .. 3d.
876. HALL, E. V. (7 Settings ) .. .. 4d.	605. METCALFE, J. P. (15 Settings ) .. .. 6d.

§ Orchestral Parts may be had. Those marked thus * may be had in Tonic Sol-fa.

The Night is come

A NATIONAL EVENING HYMN

WORDS BY SIR THOMAS BROWNE

(1605—1682)

MUSIC BY

MAURICE BESLY

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED; NEW YORK: THE H. W. GRAY CO., SOLE AGENTS FOR THE U.S.A.

In vigorous unison throughout.  $\text{♩} = 88$

1. The night is come, like to the day, De-part not Thou, great God, . . . a-way. Let not my sins, black as the night, E-clipse the . . lus-tre of Thy . . light: Keep still in my Hor-i-zon; for to me The Sun makes not the day, . . . but Thee.

THE NIGHT IS COME

2. Thou, Whose na - ture can - not sleep, . . On my tem - ples Cen - - try keep;

Guard me 'gainst those watch-ful foes, Whose eyes are . . o - pen while mine . . close. Let no . . dreams my head in - fest But such as . . Ja - cob's tem - - ples blest.

3. While I do rest, my Soul ad - vance; . . Make my sleep a ho - - ly trance; That I may, my rest being wrought, A -

THE NIGHT IS COME

- wake in - to some ho - ly thought; And with as . . ac - tive

vig - our run My course as . . doth the nim - ble sun.

4. Sleep is a death; O make me try, By sleep - ing, what it is . . to die; And as gent - ly lay my head

On my . . grave, as . . now . . my bed. How - ere I . . rest, great

THE NIGHT IS COME

God, let me A - wake a - gain at last . . . with Thee;

with grandeur
5. And thus as - sured, be - hold I lie Se - cure - ly, or to a -

- wake . . . or die, These are my drow - sie days; in vain I

(working up to ff climax)
do now . . . wake to . . . sleep a - gain: O come that hour, when

I shall nev - er Sleep a - gain, but wake for ev - - er.

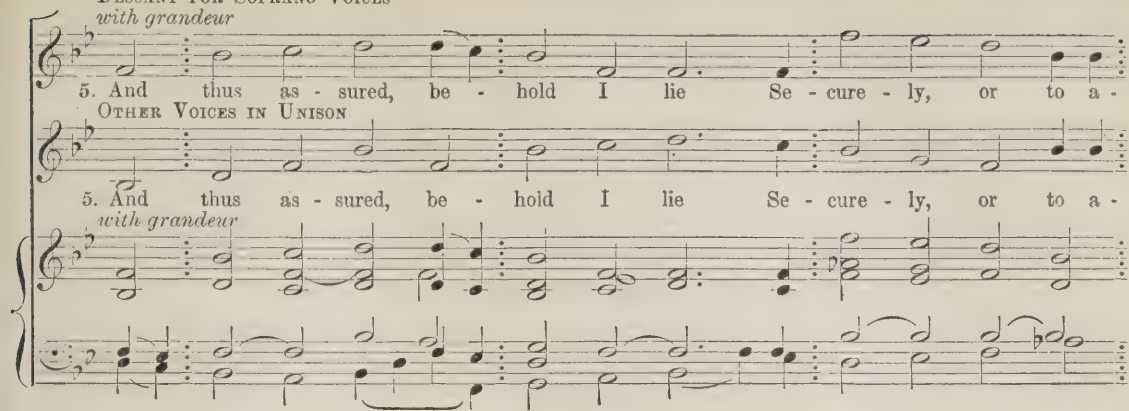

OPTIONAL LAST VERSE
DESCANT FOR SOPRANO VOICES
with grandeur

THE NIGHT IS COME

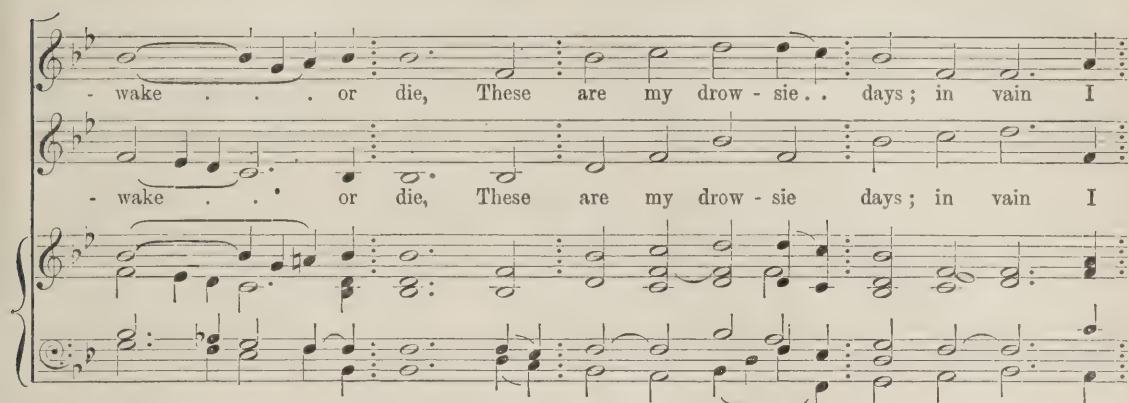

5. And thus as - sured, be - hold I lie Se - cure - ly, or to a -
OTHER VOICES IN UNISON

5. And thus as - sured, be - hold I lie Se - cure - ly, or to a -
with grandeur

- wake . . . or die, These are my drow - sie . . . days ; in vain I

- wake . . . or die, These are my drow - sie days ; in vain I do now wake to . . . sleep a - gain : O come that hour, when do now . . . wake to . . . sleep a - gain : O come that hour, when

(working up to ff climax)

Ped.

I . . shall nev - er Sleep a - gain, . . . but wake for ev - - er.

I shall nev - er Sleep a - gain, but wake for ev - - er.

NOVELLO'S PARISH CHOIR BOOK.

Magnificat and Nunc dimittis (CHANT SETTINGS).

523. BARNBY, J. ( with other Canticles ) .. 6d.	518. LE PATOUREL, H., and J. TURLE .. 4d.	239. *STAINER, J., in F ( Irregular ) .. 6d.
139. BARNBY, J., in E .. .. 4d.	259. LITTLETON, A. H., in D .. .. 2d.	1003. THORNE, E. H., in E flat & B flat .. 2d.
1035. BEST, W. T., in E and A .. .. 4d.	510. MACFARREN, W., in C .. .. 3d.	97. TRIMNELL, T. TALLIS, in D .. 4d.
496. BROWN, A. H., in E ( Festival days ) .. 2d.	81. MACPHERSON, C., in F ( Irregular ) .. 6d.	160. TURLE, J., and ELVEY, G. ... 4d.
138. CRUICKSHANK, in B♭ ( Irregular ) .. 4d.	99. MARTIN, G. C., in D ( Irregular ) .. 4d.	296. TURLE, JAMES, in E flat .. .. 3d.
132. EDWARDS, CHAS., in G ( Irregular ) .. 4d.	165. MARTIN, G. C., in E flat .. .. 4d.	977. WESLEY, S. S., in F ( Four voices ) .. 3d.
253. FIELD, J. T., in D .. .. 4d.	367. SMITH, BOYTON, in E flat .. .. 2d.	480. WEST, JOHN E., in E flat .. .. 4d.
173. HOPKINS, E. J., in F ( Congregatnl. ) .. 4d.	152. *STAINER, J. (No. 2) ( Congregational ) .. 4d.	77. WILLIAMS, C. LEE, in D ( simple ) .. 4d.

Magnificat and Nunc dimittis (UNISON SETTINGS).

185. ADAMS, T., in C ( chiefly ) .. .. 4d.	342. GOSS, JOHN, in A .. .. 4d.	669. READ, J. F., in C ( partly ) .. .. 4d.
289. ADLAM, FRANK, in G .. .. 4d.	725. HALL, E. V., in D .. .. 4d.	134. SPARK, WILLIAM, in D .. .. 4d.
52. BARNBY, J., in C .. .. 4d.	767. HOPKINS, E. J., in B flat .. .. 3d.	372. STATHAM, F. R., in E flat .. .. 4d.
78. *BENNETT, G. J., in D ( partly ) .. 4d.	810. LEE, E. MARKHAM, in D .. .. 4d.	170. TRIMNELL, T. T., in E flat ( partly ) .. 4d.
283. BREWER, A. H., in F ( partly ) .. 4d.	1007. MACFARREN, G. A., in G .. .. 4d.	319. TRIMNELL, T. T., in C ( partly ) .. 4d.
675. COBB, G. F., in E flat ( partly ) .. 4d.	236. MACFARREN, W., in C .. .. 4d.	987. WESLEY, S. S., in F .. .. 3d.
132. EDWARDS, C., in G ( partly ) .. 4d.	445. MATTHEWS, T. R., in D .. .. 4d.
450. GADSBY, H., in D .. .. 6d.	1025. MONK, E. G., in A .. .. 4d.

Magnificat and Nunc dimittis (GREGORIAN TONES).

476. ADAMS, T. .. .. 2d.	60. BENNETT, GEORGE J. .. .. 4d.	279. STAINER, J. ( 3rd Series ) .. .. 3d.
477. ADAMS, T. .. .. 2d.	451. HAYNES, BATTISON .. .. 4d.	201. STAINER, J. ( 4th Series ) .. .. 3d.
478. ADAMS, T. .. .. 2d.	215. JORDAN, W. ( 6th Tone ) .. .. 2d.	455. STAINER, J., in D ( Magnificat only ) .. 3d.
384. ADAMS, T. .. .. 2d.	587. SELBY, B. L. .. .. 4d.	97. TRIMNELL, T. TALLIS, in D .. 4d.
385. ADAMS, T. .. .. 2d.	260. STAINER, J. ( 1st Series ) .. .. 4d.	* ( Parisian Theme ) .. .. 4d.
381. ADAMS, T. .. .. 2d.	271. STAINER, J. ( 2nd Series ) .. .. 3d.

Magnificat and Nunc dimittis.

(SET TO GREGORIAN TONES WITH VERSES IN FAUX BOURDON).—(8 SETTINGS.)

EDITED BY FRANCIS BURGESS AND ROYLE SHORE.

888. TALLIS, THOMAS (No. 1) .. .. 3d.	892. BYRD, WILLIAM (No. 5) .. .. 4d.	899. CAUSTON, WILLIAM, and an un-
889. TOMKINS, THOMAS (No. 2) .. .. 4d.	897. GIBBONS, ORLANDO (No. 6) .. .. 4d.	known EDWARDINE COMPOSER
897. HOLMES, JOHN (No. 3) .. .. 4d.	898. WHITEBROKE, WILLIAM, and KNIGHT	(No. 8) .. .. 3d.
891. MORLEY, THOMAS (No. 4) .. .. 4d.	(No. 7) .. .. 4d.

(The People's Part to the above eight settings. Complete, price Threepence.)

Magnificat and Nunc dimittis.

(SET TO GREGORIAN TONES WITH VERSES IN FAUX BOURDON.)

SECOND SERIES.

EDITED BY ROYLE SHORE.

1036. GIBBONS, ORLANDO, and an unknown EDWARDINE	1038. GIBBONS, ORLANDO, and JOHN HOLMES (No. 5A) .. .. 3d.
COMPOSER (No. 1A) .. .. 3d.	1039. TALLIS, THOMAS, and NATHANIEL GILES (No. 6A) .. .. 3d.
1037. TOMKINS, THOMAS (No. 2A) .. .. 3d.	1063. FAYRFAX, ROBERT, and WILLIAM MUNDY (No. 7A) .. .. 4d.
1062. FAYRFAX, ROBERT, and an unknown EDWARDINE
COMPOSER (No. 4A) .. .. 4d.

Cantate Domino and Deus Misereatur.

523. BARNBY, J. ( Chant ) .. .. 6d.	676. COBB, G. F., in C .. .. 4d.	567. McGRATH, A. J., in D .. .. 8d.
172. BAYLEY, WM., in F .. .. 8d.	315. ELVEY, G., in D .. .. 8d.	191. STEGGALL, CHARLES, in C .. .. 8d.
1091. BUNNETT, E., in E .. .. 4d.	304. *GOSS, JOHN, in C ( Unison ) .. .. 8d.	233. TOZER, FERRIS, in F .. .. 6d.
1097. BUNNETT, E., in F .. .. 4d.	874. HAYES, W., in E flat .. .. 8d.	243. TRIMNELL, T. TALLIS, in E .. .. 6d.
	359. *MAMMATT, E., in B flat .. .. 8d.

Salutaris Hostia and Communion Hymns.

1053. { ADLAM, FRANK. Jesu, Master, Thou art near us .. .. }	966. CHAMBERS, H. A. Jesu, gentlest Saviour ( Service in G ) .. 8d.
{ ADLAM, FRANK. Holy Saviour, Lord of Love .. .. }	677. COBB, G. F. O Salutaris Hostia ( Plain Chant Service ) .. 2d.
( Service in G ) .. .. }	702. COBB, G. F. O Salutaris Hostia, in C .. .. 4d.
1055. { ADLAM, FRANK. O Salutaris Hostia ( Service in D ) .. .. }	736. COBB, G. F. O Salutaris Hostia, in G .. .. 4d.
{ ADLAM, FRANK. O Salutaris Hostia .. .. }	714. FOSTER, M. B. O God unseen, yet ever near ( Service in F ) .. 8d.
ADLAM, FRANK. O Jesu, Thou the beauty art .. .. }	498. GARRETT, G. M. My God, and is Thy table spread .. 13d.
ADLAM, FRANK. Author of life divine .. .. }	1046. HEWITT, C. H. Thee we adore ( Service in E flat ) .. .. 8d.
ADLAM, FRANK. Jesu, gentlest Saviour .. .. }	666. *MAUNDER, J. H. Bread of Heaven, on Thee we feed
( Service in F ) .. .. }	( Service in F ) .. .. 8d.
ALFORD, DEAN. Father, see Thy children .. .. }	355. STEANE, B. Bread of Heaven, on Thee we feed ( Service
BARNBY, J. Lord, knowing Thy love .. .. }	in F) .. .. 8d.
BROOKE, C. W. A. When children saw Thee coming, Lord .. .. }	1027. STEWART, R. P. Into Thy hands ( Introit ) ( Service in G ) .. 6d.
GARRETT, G. M. O God of mercy, God of might .. .. } HENMAN, W. See, Father, Thy beloved Son .. .. }
LISSANT, G. B. Accept our alms. O Lord, this day .. .. }
MARTIN, G. C. Faith of our fathers .. .. }
SWISS AIR, A. Faith of our fathers .. .. }
TOWNEND, F. B. Remember Me, shew forth My death .. .. }
TURLE, J. According to Thy gracious Word .. .. }
WEST, JOHN E. Bread of the world .. .. }

§ Orchestral Parts may be had. Those marked thus * may be had in Tonic Sol-fa.

PIANOS

GRAND and UPRIGHT

By High Grade Makers.

NEW AND SECOND-HAND FOR SALE OR HIRE PURCHASE.

CHAS. STILES & CO.

74-76, SOUTHAMPTON ROW
LONDON, W.C.1.

Phone: MUSEUM 439.

BECHSTEIN PIANOS

THE BECHSTEIN PIANO needs little recommendation to cultured tastes. Its beautiful tone and incomparable touch—qualities which have gained for it the esteem of every music-lover, and have set a standard to the world—are as exquisite and as characteristic as ever.

Write or call for Catalogue.

126, NEW BOND STREET
LONDON, W.1.

TELEPHONE: MAYFAIR 2653.

STEINWAY

MUSIC LOVERS
CAN OBTAIN
PERFECT RESULTS
ONLY FROM THE PERFECT INSTRUMENT
THE STEINWAY.

115-117, WIGMORE STREET,
LONDON, W.1.

MOLLENHAUER FLUTES AND PICCOLOS

MESSRS. J. MOLLENHAUER & SONS possess a hundred years' world-wide reputation as makers of first-class Wood-Wind Instruments. Their Flutes and Piccolos are unrivalled in purity of tone, pleasing intonation, and solidity of mechanism, and are consequently used by the leading artists in every land.

Catalogue from—

FAUPEL BROTHERS,

4 & 5, OLD CHANGE, CHEAPSIDE, LONDON, E.C.4.

Telephone: City 5693.

Far Eastern inquiries to be addressed to our Hong-Kong office,
P.O. Box 631, Hong-Kong.

WILL BE PUBLISHED ON MAY 8.

God is our Refuge and Strength ANTHEM

COMPOSED FOR

THE 270TH FESTIVAL OF THE SONS OF THE CLERGY.

BY

W. G. ALCOCK

(M.V.O., Mus. D.)

Organist of Salisbury Cathedral.

Price Two Shillings.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

HAWKES & SON

have pleasure in announcing that they are now the SOLE AND EXCLUSIVE AGENTS IN THE BRITISH EMPIRE
FOR THE

“VIENNA PHILHARMONIC EDITION”

OF

MINIATURE POCKET SCORES

INCLUDING CLASSICAL AND MODERN WORKS.

These Scores are beautifully engraved and printed, and are invaluable to both the Musician and the Student.

A complete Catalogue is in preparation, a copy of which will be dispatched as soon as ready, upon receipt of a post-card.

HAWKES & SON,

DENMAN STREET, PICCADILLY CIRCUS, LONDON, W.1.

NEW PUBLICATIONS

By T. TERTIUS NOBLE.

- 816. NIGHT. S.A.T.B.
- 817. TO MY LOVE. T.T.B.B.
- 818. WHEN I AM DEAD, MY DEAREST. S.A.T.B.
- 819. SAVE, LORD, OR WE PERISH. S.A.T.B.
- 820. SAVE, LORD, OR WE PERISH. T.T.B.B.
- 821. BUT NOW, THUS SAITH THE LORD. S.A.T.B.

Price Fourpence each.

- 822. MAGNIFICAT AND NUNC DIMITTIS IN B FLAT.

Price Sixpence.

BANKS & SON, MUSIC PUBLISHERS, YORK.

OXFORD BOOKS.

Contrapuntal Technique in the 16th Century.

By R. O. MORRIS.

IN this book the general characteristics of 16th Century Counterpoint are fully described, a separate chapter being devoted to each of the principal aspects—modal, rhythmic, harmonic, &c. There is also a chapter in which the chief points of difference between the English Tudor composers and their Flemish and Italian contemporaries are explained. The rules given are illustrated by 200 musical examples, drawn from all the greatest composers of the period.

8s. 6d. net.

The Evolution of Harmony

By C. H. KITSON,

Professor of Music at the University of Dublin.

THIS treatise on the material of music, its gradual growth, and elementary use, is a study, rather than an advanced text-book, of harmony. 2nd edition. With numerous musical examples.

12s. 6d. net.

WRITE FOR A MUSIC LIST.

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS.

ORGANISTS AND CHOIRMASTERS

A beautiful reproduction in photogravure of "The Choristers," mounted on a folio containing an excerpt from the Te Deum in the original old Missal lettering and notation, will be sent free on application.

WHO are desirous of having the Choirs under their control correctly attired, cannot do better than purchase their outfits at this House, the oldest and best-known Choir Outfitters in the world. Write for our new list, illustrating everything needed for Choir wear.

Patterns of materials, and, if desired, sample garments, will be sent on request. On receipt of particulars of number of men and boys in the Choir, we will gladly submit an inclusive estimate for the entire outfit.

Please mark envelopes "Dept. M. M."

The House of Vanheems

47-48 BERNERS ST., W.1.

(Three minutes from Oxford Circus.)

ANTHEMS FOR ASCENSIONTIDE.

*Above all praise and all majesty .. ..	Mendelssohn	2d.	Let not your heart be troubled (Double Chorus unac.) .. ..	M. B. Foster	4d.
Achieved is the glorious work .. ..	Haydn	1½d.	*Let not your heart (Four-part) .. ..	M. B. Foster	4d.
*Achieved is the glorious work (2nd Chorus) ..	Haydn	2d.	*Let their celestial concerts all unite .. ..	Handel	2d.
*All glory to the Lamb .. ..	Spohr	2d.	*Lift up your heads .. ..	Handel and J. L. Hopkins, each	2d.
Awake up, my glory .. ..	M. Wise	4d.	*Lift up your heads .. ..	S. Coleridge-Taylor	4d.
*Christ became obedient unto death .. ..	J. F. Bridge	2d.	Lift up your heads .. ..	W. Turner	3d.
Christ is not entered into the Holy Places ..	E. Faning	2d.	*Look, ye saints .. ..	M. B. Foster	4d.
Come, ye children .. ..	H. J. King	4d.	O all ye people, clap your hands .. ..	H. Purcell	3d.
For it became Him .. ..	O. King	2d.	*O clap your hands .. ..	J. Stainer	3d.
God is gone up .. ..	*Croft, 6d.; W. B. Gilbert	3d.	O clap your hands .. ..	T. T. Trimmell	4d.
*God, my King .. ..	Bach	2d.	*O God, the King of Glory .. ..	H. Smart	6d.
Grant, we beseech Thee .. ..	H. Lahee	2d.	*O God, when Thou appearest .. ..	J. Mozart	4d.
Grant, we beseech Thee (Collect) .. ..	A. R. Gaul	4d.	*O how amiable .. ..	J. Barnby	4d.
*Hallelujah unto God's Almighty Son .. ..	Beethoven	4d.	*O Lord our Governour .. ..	H. Gadsby	4d.
*How excellent Thy Name, O Lord .. ..	Handel	2d.	*O Lord our Governour .. ..	Marcello	2d.
*If ye then be risen with Christ .. ..	I. Atkins	6d.	*O risen Lord .. ..	J. Barnby	2d.
If ye then be risen .. ..	*F. O. Carr and J. Naylor, ea.	4d.	*Open to me the gates .. ..	F. Adlam	6d.
If ye then be risen (Two parts) .. ..	F. W. Wadeley, 2d.; M. B. Foster	4d.	*Rejoice in the Lord .. ..	J. B. Calkin	2d.
In My Father's house .. ..	H. E. Button and J. M. Crament, ea.	4d.	*Sing unto God .. ..	F. Bevan	4d.
In that day .. ..	G. Elvey	6d.	*Ten thousand times ten thousand .. ..	E. V. Hall	4d.
In that day (Open ye the gates) .. ..	F. C. Maker	4d.	The earth is the Lord's .. ..	T. T. Trimmell	6d.
*It shall come to pass .. ..	B. Tours	2d.	*The Lord is exalted .. ..	J. E. West	2d.
I will not leave you comfortless .. ..	W. Byrd	4d.	The Lord is King .. ..	H. Gadsby, 8d.; H. J. King, 6d.; W. King	3d.
*King all-glorious .. ..	J. Barnby	8d.	Thou art a priest for ever .. ..	S. Wesley	4d.
King all-glorious (with Chorus arr. for four voices)	J. Barnby	6d.	*Unfold, ye portals .. ..	Ch. Gounod	4d.
*Leave us not, neither forsake us .. ..	J. Stainer	2d.	*Where Thou reignest .. ..	Schubert	4d.
Let not your heart .. ..	E. Faning and G. Gardner, each	4d.	Who is this so weak and helpless .. ..	Rayner	3d.

ANTHEMS FOR WHITSUNTIDE.

And all the people saw .. ..	J. Stainer	8d.	If ye love Me .. ..	H. W. Wareing and W. J. Westbrook, each	4d.
*And suddenly there came .. ..	H. J. Wood	4d.	*In divers tongues .. ..	.. ..	3d.
And when the day of Pentecost .. ..	C. W. Smith	4d.	In My Father's house .. ..	J. M. Crament	3d.
*As pants the hart .. ..	Spohr	2d.	It shall come to pass .. ..	*B. Tours, 2d.; G. Garrett	8d.
*As the hart pants .. ..	Mendelssohn	2d.	Let God arise .. ..	T. T. Trimmell, 6d.; Greene	8d.
Behold, I send the promise .. ..	J. V. Roberts	6d.	*Let not your heart be troubled .. ..	H. G. Trembath	2d.
*Come, Holy Ghost .. ..	Attwood	2d.	Look down, Holy Dove .. ..	B. Luard-Selby	4d.
Ditto (Three-part, S.S.A.) .. ..	Attwood	6d.	*O clap your hands .. ..	J. Stainer	8d.
Come, Holy Ghost .. ..	Elvey and J. L. Hatton, each	6d.	*O give thanks .. ..	G. Elvey	4d.
Come, Holy Ghost .. ..	C. L. Williams and *Palestrina, each	3d.	*O God, my soul thirsteth .. ..	F. R. Greenish	4d.
Come, Thou Holy Spirit .. ..	J. F. Barnett	4d.	*O Holy Ghost, into our minds .. ..	G. A. Macfarren	2d.
Do not I fill heaven and earth .. ..	H. Blair	4d.	*Oh! for a closer walk with God .. ..	M. B. Foster	2d.
*Eye hath not seen (Two-part setting) .. ..	M. B. Foster	4d.	Ditto .. ..	H. A. Chambers	4d.
*Eye hath not seen (Four-part setting) .. ..	M. B. Foster	4d.	O taste and see .. ..	*Sullivan, 2d.; *Goss and A. H. Mann, each	4d.
Fear thou not .. ..	J. Booth	2d.	O Thou, the true and only Light .. ..	Mendelssohn	3d.
Give thanks unto God .. ..	Spohr	6d.	O where shall wisdom be found .. ..	Boyce	8d.
Glorious and powerful God .. ..	O. Gibbons	4d.	*Our blest Redeemer .. ..	E. V. Hall	4d.
*God came from Teman .. ..	C. Steggall	6d.	*Peace I leave .. ..	J. V. Roberts	4d.
*God is a Spirit .. ..	W. S. Bennett	2d.	*Praised be the Lord daily .. ..	J. B. Calkin	2d.
*Ditto (Two-part, S.S.) .. ..	Bennett	2d.	Sing to the Lord .. ..	Smart	1s. 6d.
Ditto (Male Voice, A.T.B.B.) .. ..	Bennett	3d.	*Spirit of mercy, truth, and love H.A. Chambers, B. Luard-Selby, ea.	2d.
Gracious Spirit, Holy Ghost .. ..	H. Blair	4d.	The eyes of all wait upon Thee .. ..	Gibbons	6d.
*Great is the Lord .. ..	W. Hayes	6d.	*The Glory of the God of Israel .. ..	T. Adams	4d.
*Grieve not the Holy Spirit .. ..	J. Stainer	4d.	*The Lord came from Sinai .. ..	J. E. West	4d.
Hail! breath of life .. ..	T. Adams	2d.	The Lord descended .. ..	Hayes	2d.
Happy is the man .. ..	E. Prout	1s.	The Lord is in His Holy Temple .. ..	J. Stainer	6d.
He that dwelleth in the secret place .. ..	J. Booth	6d.	The Lord is in His Holy Temple J.W. Elliott; E. H. Thorne, ea.	2d.
*Holy Spirit, come, O come (Ad Spiritum Sanctum) G. C. Martin	2d.		The love of God is shed abroad .. ..	S. Reay	2d.
I was in the spirit .. ..	Blow	8d.	There is no condemnation .. ..	H. S. Irons	4d.
*I will magnify Thee .. ..	Bunnett, 4d.; J. H. Parry	4d.	The Spirit of God .. ..	A. W. Marchant	4d.
*I will not leave you comfortless .. ..	B. Steane	3d.	*The wilderness .. ..	J. Goss, 3d.; *S. S. Wesley	8d.
*I will pray the Father .. ..	G. W. Torrance	2d.	*When God of old came down from Heaven .. ..	E. V. Hall	4d.
If I go not away .. ..	A. J. Caldicott, 4d.; *T. Adams	2d.	We will rejoice .. ..	Croft	6d.
If ye love Me .. ..	Bunnett, 4d.; B. Steane, 3d.; C. S. Heap	2d.	When the Day of Pentecost .. ..	A. Kempton	4d.
*If ye love Me .. ..	W. H. Monk, Tallis, and R. P. Stewart, each	2d.	Whosoever drinketh .. ..	J. T. Field	2d.

ANTHEMS FOR TRINITYTIDE.

*Almighty and everlasting God .. ..	Gibbons	2d.	In sweet consent .. ..	E. H. Thorne	4d.
Almighty God, Who hast promised .. ..	H. E. Button	1½d.	In the fear of the Lord .. ..	J. V. Roberts	4d.
*Angel Spirits, ever blessed .. ..	Tchaikovsky	3d.	Let the peace of God .. ..	J. Stainer	6d.
Ascribe unto the Lord .. ..	S. S. Wesley	6d.	*Let Thy merciful ears .. ..	A. R. Gaul	2d.
Behold, God is great .. ..	E. W. Naylor	6d.	*Light of the world .. ..	E. Elgar	4d.
*Beloved, if God so loved us .. ..	J. Barnby	6d.	Lord of all power and might .. ..	E. T. Chipp	4d.
Beloved, let us love one another .. ..	G. F. Cobb	2d.	*Lord of all power and might .. ..	W. Mason	2d.
Be ye all of one mind .. ..	A. E. Godfrey	4d.	Lord of all power and might (men's voices) ..	J. Barnby	3d.
Blessed is the man .. ..	J. Goss	6d.	Lord, we pray Thee .. ..	H. A. Chambers and *J. V. Roberts, ea.	2d.
Blessing and glory .. ..	Boyce	2d.	O Father blest .. ..	J. Barnby	2d.
*Blessing, glory .. ..	Bach	8d.	O God, Who hast prepared .. ..	A. R. Gaul	3d.
Come, ye children .. ..	J. Booth	4d.	O joyful Light .. ..	B. Tours	6d.
God came from Teman .. ..	C. Steggall	6d.	*O Lord, my trust .. ..	K. Hall	2d.
*God so loved the world .. ..	M. Kingstons	6d.	O taste and see .. ..	*J. Goss and A. H. Mann, each	4d.
Grant, O Lord .. ..	Mozart	2d.	O taste and see .. ..	A. Sullivan	2d.
Grant to us, Lord .. ..	H. E. Button	1½d.	O where shall wisdom be found? .. ..	Boyce	8d.
*Hail, gladdening Light .. ..	J. T. Field, 3d.; *G. C. Martin	6d.	Ponder my words, O Lord .. ..	A. D. Culley	2d.
*Holy, holy, holy .. ..	Crotch	4d.	*Praise His awful Name .. ..	Spohr	3d.
Holy, Lord God Almighty .. ..	T. Bateson	6d.	Rejoice in the Lord .. ..	G. C. Martin	8d.
*How goodly are Thy tents .. ..	F. Ouseley	6d.	*See what love hath the Father .. ..	Mendelssohn	2d.
*How lovely are Thy dwellings .. ..	Spohr	2d.	Sing to the Lord .. ..	Mendelssohn	1s.
*Hymn to the Trinity .. ..	Tchaikovsky	2d.	*Stand up and bless .. ..	J. Goss	6d.
I am Alpha and Omega .. ..	Ch. Gounod and J. V. Roberts, each	4d.	Teach me Thy way .. ..	W. H. Gladstone, 2d.; F. L. Moir	4d.
*I am Alpha and Omega .. ..	J. Stainer	2d.	*The Lord hath been mindful .. ..	S. S. Wesley	4d.
I beheld, and lo! .. ..	Blow	8d.	*The Lord is my Shepherd .. ..	G. A. Macfarren	2d.
I know that the Lord is great .. ..	F. Ouseley	3d.	*The Lord is my Shepherd .. ..	J. Shaw	4d.
I saw the Lord .. ..	C. Harris, 4d.; *J. Stainer	3d.	The Lord will comfort Zion .. ..	H. Hiles	8d.
I will magnify .. ..	J. Shaw	4d.	Thou art worthy, O Lord .. ..	F. E. Gladstone	4d.
I will sing of Thy power .. ..	Greene	6d.	Thou shalt shew me the path of life .. ..	A. Gray	2d.
*I will sing of Thy power .. ..	A. Sullivan	3d.	Three in One and One in Three (S.S.) ..	F. W. Wadeley	3d.
I will sing unto the Lord .. ..	H. Wareing	2d.	We humbly beseech Thee .. ..	H. E. Button	1½d.
*In humble faith .. ..	G. Garrett	2d.	Whosoever is born of God .. ..	H. Oakley	4d.
*In Jewry is God known .. ..	J. Clarke-Whitfield	2d.	Who can comprehend Thee .. ..	Mozart	4d.

* Anthems marked thus (*) may be had in Tonic Sol-fa, 1½ d. to 3d. each.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

NOVELLO'S HYMNS AND TUNES

FOR

SUNDAY SCHOOL ANNIVERSARY SERVICES.

PUBLISHED IN BOTH NOTATIONS COMBINED.

Five Sets, each containing Ten Hymns and Tunes, price 6*d.* each set; Words only, 6*s.* 6*d.* per 100.

The following may be had separately, price 1½*d.* each.

	Words by	Music by
1. COME, CHILDREN, ON AND FORWARD ...	... F. BEVAN ...	... G. C. MARTIN
2. FOR THE FRESHNESS OF THE MORNING (Flower Service)	... W. ST. HILL BOURNE...	... Lady EUAN-SMITH
3. I LOVE TO HEAR THE STORY ...	... EMILY H. MILLER ...	... F. CLAY
4. COME, O COME, IN PIOUS LAYS ...	... G. WITHER ...	... J. STAINER
5. {THINE FOR EVER! GOD OF LOVE... NOW THE DAYLIGHT GOES AWAY ...	... MARY F. MAUDE ... ... F. R. HAVERGAL ...	... W. C. HARVEY ... J. ADCOCK
6. JESU, WHOM THY CHILDREN LOVE ...	... J. F. WHEELER ...	... H. E. BUTTON
7. SWEETLY O'ER THE MEADOWS FAIR ... (Flower Service)	... F. A. CHALLINOR ...	... F. A. CHALLINOR
8. WOULD YOU GAIN THE BEST IN LIFE ...	... H. R. PALMER ...	... C. J. MAY
9. ON OUR WAY REJOICING ...	... J. S. B. MONSELL ...	... W. B. GILBERT
10. AGAIN THE MORN OF GLADNESS...	... J. ELLERTON ...	... J. STAINER
11. THE ANGEL'S SONG ...	... F. R. HAVERGAL ...	... A. RANDEGGER
12. FORWARD, CHRISTIAN CHILDREN ...	... HELEN W. SELBY ...	... A. MOFFAT
13. THE GOLDEN SHORE ...	... E. OXENFORD ...	... J. STAINER
14. SAVIOUR, BLESSED SAVIOUR ...	... G. THRING ...	... JOHN E. WEST
15. ENTER WITH THANKSGIVING ...	... W. ST. HILL BOURNE ...	... F. H. COWEN
16. MAN SHALL NOT LIVE BY BREAD ALONE ...	... W. H. DRAPER ...	... J. V. ROBERTS
17. STARS, THAT ON YOUR WONDROUS WAY ...	... J. BOGUE ...	... J. STAINER
18. THE DAY IS PAST AND OVER ...	... J. M. NEALE ...	... J. BARNBY
19. WE MARCH, WE MARCH TO VICTORY ...	... G. MOULTRIE...	... J. BARNBY
20. HARK! HARK! THE ORGAN LOUDLY PEALS	... G. THRING ...	... G. J. BENNETT
21. O WHAT CAN LITTLE HANDS DO...	... G. W. HINSDALE ...	... H. E. BUTTON
22. THE ROSEATE HUES OF EARLY DAWN...	... C. F. ALEXANDER ...	... A. SULLIVAN
23. LORD, THY CHILDREN GUIDE AND KEEP	... W. W. HOW ...	... A. S. COOPER
24. {THE BEAUTIFUL LAND ... JESUS, TENDER SHEPHERD, HEAR ME...	... E. OXENFORD ... ... M. L. DUNCAN ...	... J. STAINER ... H. PARKER
25. THE BOYS AND GIRLS OF ENGLAND ...	... J. COMPSTON ...	... J. STAINER
26. THE CITY OF LIGHT ...	... F. ADLER ...	... E. J. TROUP
27. {GOD IS IN HEAVEN! CAN HE HEAR GENTLE JESUS, MEEK AND MILD...	... A. GILBERT ... ... C. WESLEY ...	... H. E. BUTTON ... J. STAINER
28. HE DWELLS AMONG THE LILIES (Flower Service)	... W. ST. HILL BOURNE ...	... Lady EUAN-SMITH
29. THE CROWN IS WAITING ...	... E. OXENFORD ...	... J. STAINER
30. RAISE YOUR STANDARD, BROTHERS ...	... G. SPILLER ...	... E. J. TROUP
31. FLOWERS (Flower Service) ...	... F. R. HAVERGAL ...	... A. RANDEGGER
32. THE GOOD SHEPHERD...	... E. OXENFORD...	... J. STAINER
33. ABOVE THE CLEAR BLUE SKY ...	... M. BOURDILLON ...	... H. E. CRIMP
34. WHEN LOVE DRAWS NEAR ...	... L. WHITEHEAD ...	... E. J. TROUP
35. COME SING WITH HOLY GLADNESS ...	... J. J. DANIEL ...	... G. W. TORRANCE
36. WE WILL PRAISE THEE ...	... E. OXENFORD ...	... J. STAINER
37. WHAT CAN I GIVE JESUS (Flower Service)...	... A. C. BENSON ...	... A. M. GOODHART
38. COME, PRAISE OUR LORD AND SAVIOUR ...	... W. W. HOW ...	... H. A. CHAMBERS
39. NOW THE DAY IS OVER ...	... S. BARING-GOULD ...	... F. W. BLUNT
40. WE THANK THEE LORD FOR THIS FAIR EARTH	... G. E. L. COTTON ...	... W. C. HARVEY
41. THE LESSON OF LOVE ...	... ...	... J. BARNBY
42. COME, FRIENDS, THE WORLD WANTS MENDING ...	... ...	... E. J. TROUP
43. CREATOR, GOD, AND LORD ...	... MARY BRADFORD WHITING ...	... J. H. MAUNDER
44. O GOD, WE COME BEFORE THEE (Flower Service)	... J. GIBSON ...	... Tune—"ELLACOMBE"

(To be continued.)

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

COMPETITION FESTIVAL MUSIC

PUBLISHED BY NOVELLO & CO., LTD.

VIOLIN SOLOS WITH PIANOFORTE ACCOMPANIMENT.

	s.	d.		s.	d.
AUSTIN, E. Sweet Night ... ..	2	3	IRELAND, J. Bagatelle ... ..	3	0
BERGER, F. Cavatina ... ..	2	3	LEMARE, E. H. Andantino ... ..	3	0
— Romanzetta ... ..	3	0	MacCUNN, H. Romance in G ... ..	3	0
BOHM, C. Rigaudon (Six Morceaux de Salon) ... ..	2	3	MACDONALD, R. H. Romance ... ..	3	0
— Capriccio (Ditto) ... ..	2	3	MACKENZIE, A. C. Distant Chimes (Op. 89) ... ..	3	0
— Finale (Ditto) ... ..	2	3	— Zingaresca (Op. 37, No. 1) ... ..	3	0
CARSE, A. Gavotte in G ... ..	2	3	McNAUGHT, W. Barcarolle ... ..	3	0
COLERIDGE-TAYLOR, S. Eastern Dance ("Nero") ... ..	3	0	NESVERA, J. Berceuse Bohémienne ... ..	1	6
COWEN, F. H. Minuet d'Amour ... ..	3	0	NEWTON, E. Cavatina in G ... ..	2	3
DAVID, F. Barcarolle ... ..	1	6	O'DONNELL, B. W. A Slumber Song ... ..	3	0
DOLMETSCH, A. Barcarolle and Menuet ... ..	1	6	PARRY, C. H. H. From Suite in D—Capriccioso ... ..	2	3
D'OZANNE, A. DUTEIL. Air à Danser (Op. 21) ... ..	3	0	— From Suite in F. Slow Minuet ... ..	2	3
DVORÁK. Allegretto grazioso (Symphony No. 4) ... ..	3	0	— " " Gigue ... ..	2	3
ELGAR, E. Chanson de Matin ... ..	3	0	RAFF, Cavatina ... ..	1	6
— Chanson de Nuit ... ..	2	3	SAURET, E. Gondoliera (Op. 39, No. 2) ... ..	3	0
GERMAN, E. Pastorale (Romeo and Juliet) ... ..	3	0	— Mazourka (Op. 49, No. 3) ... ..	3	0
— Three Dances (Henry VIII.) ... ..	4	6	TSCHAIKOWSKY. Andante Cantabile (Op. 11) ... ..	3	0
GOUNOD. Julex from "Mors et Vita" ... ..	3	0	— Chant sans Paroles (Op. 2, No. 3) ... ..	2	3
HAYNES, BATTISON. Idyll ... ..	3	0	WOLSTENHOLME, W. Allegretto ... ..	2	3
HOLBROOKE, J. Souvenir de Printemps (Op. 23, No. 6) ... ..	3	0	— Meditation ... ..	2	3

PIANOFORTE SOLOS.

	s.	d.		s.	d.
ARENSKY, A. Prelude in F minor (Op. 42, No. 1) ... ..	3	0	HUMMEL, J. N. Rondo in E flat (Op. 11) (Klindworth) ... ..	3	0
— Romance in A flat (Op. 42, No. 2) ... ..	3	0	— Rondo in B minor (Op. 109) (Klindworth) ... ..	3	0
BACH, Bourrée in C ... ..	2	3	LANGE, G. Two Hungarian Dances (Op. 266):
— Gavotte in B minor from Violin Sonata (Saint-Saëns) ... ..	2	0	1. Isteni Czárdás ... ..	2	3
BEETHOVEN. Andante in F (Klindworth) ... ..	3	0	2. Rozsábokor Czárdás ... ..	2	3
— Two Rondos (Op. 51, No. 1 in C, No. 2 in G) (Klindworth)			MENDELSSOHN. Perpetuum mobile (Op. 119) ... ..	3	0
No. 1, 2s. 3d.; No. 2 ... ..	3	0	— Prelude and Fugue in E minor (Klindworth) ... ..	3	0
COLERIDGE-TAYLOR, S. Valse de la Reine ... ..	2	3	— Scherzo in G minor from Octet (Op. 20) (Kühl) ... ..	3	0
DALCROZE, JAKUES. Four Characteristic Dances ... ..	3	0	RUBINSTEIN. Barcarolle (Op. 30) ... ..	2	3
ELGAR, E. Chanson de Nuit ... ..	2	3	— Melody in F... ..	1	6
— Chanson de Matin ... ..	2	3	SAINT-SAËNS. Gavotte in C minor ... ..	2	3
ESIPOFF, S. Ballade. G minor ... ..	3	0	— Mazurka in G minor ... ..	3	0
— Cantique d'Amour ... ..	3	0	SCHUBERT. Impromptu in B flat (Klindworth) ... ..	3	0
FLETCHER, PERCY E. Valse Lyrique ("Smile of Spring") ... ..	2	3	SCHUMANN. Arabesque in C major (Op. 18) ... ..	1	6
HANDEL. Aria con Variazioni ("The Harmonious Blacksmith") (Klindworth) ... ..	2	3	— Three Romances (Op. 28) ... ..	1	6
— Fugue in E minor (Klindworth) ... ..	2	3	SCOTT-BAKER, H. Pantomime ... ..	3	0
HAYDN. Andante con Variations in F minor (Klindworth) ... ..	3	0	STRELEZKI. Miniature ... ..	2	3
HENSELT, A. Si oiseau j'étais, A toi je volerais! (Op. 2, No. 5) (Pachmann) ... ..	2	3	— Valse Impromptu ... ..	2	3
— Wiegenlied (Op. 45) (Chanson de Berceau) (Pachmann) ... ..	2	3	TSCHAIKOWSKY. Marche Militaire ... ..	3	0
HOFMANN, H. From Golden Days (Op. 34, No. 3) ... ..	1	6	— Valse Scherzo in A major ... ..	3	0
— Puck (Op. 37, No. 9) ... ..	2	3	WEBER. Rondo brillant (E flat) (Op. 62) (Klindworth) ... ..	3	0
			WEST, A. H. Toccata ... ..	3	0

SONGS.

SOPRANO.	s.	d.	TENOR.	s.	d.
DVORÁK. Invocation ... ..	2	0	FARRAR, E. O Mistress Mine ... ..	2	0
ELGAR, E. Oh soft was the song ... ..	2	0	MACKENZIE, A. C. While my lady sleepeth ... ..	1	6
FARRAR, E. Brittany ... ..	1	6	PARRY, C. H. H. God breaketh the battle ... ..	2	0
MACKENZIE, A. C. Cross and Crown ... ..	2	0	SOMERVILLE, R. Invocation to the Dawn... ..	2	0
PURCELL. Evening Hymn ... ..	2	0	WAGNER. Walter's Prize Song ... ..	2	0
CONTRALTO.			BASS.
COLERIDGE-TAYLOR, S. Soul's Expression ... ..	4	0	BENEDICT. Rage, thou angry storm ... ..	2	0
DVORÁK. Inflammatus ... ..	2	0	DALE, B. J. O mistress mine ... ..	2	0
ELGAR, E. A child asleep ... ..	2	0	GREENE, Dr. M. Like the young God of wine ... ..	2	0
GLUCK. Thou art gone, alas, for ever ... ..	2	0	HARTY, HAMILTON. Homeward ... ..	2	0
PARRY, C. H. H. Ballad of Meshullemeth ... ..	2	0	SMYTH, E. M. Chryssilla ... ..	2	0

Specimens of every kind of music will be forwarded on application. To ensure a satisfactory selection, the Syllabus of the last Festival should accompany the request

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

COMPETITION FESTIVAL MUSIC

PUBLISHED BY NOVELLO & CO., LTD.

MIXED VOICES.

BANTOCK, GRANVILLE. Awake, awake ... .. 4d.	GERMAN, E. Chase, The ... .. 4d.
Grass of Parnassus ... .. 4d.	London Town ... .. 6d.
On Himalay... .. 4d.	My bonnie lass, she smileth ... .. 4d.
BRAHMS. Dirge of Darthula, The (Op. 42, No. 3) ... .. 6d.	PARRY, C. H. H. Music, when soft voices die ... .. 3d.
COLERIDGE-TAYLOR. Evening Star, The ... .. 2d.	My delight and thy delight ... .. 4d.
Lee Shore, The ... .. 4d.	There rolls the deep ... .. 3d.
CORNELIUS, P. O death! thou art the tranquil night (Op. 11, No. 1) ... .. 6d.	Sweet day, so cool... .. 3d.
Hero's rest (Op. 19) ... .. 4d.	REED, W. H. My lady fell a-sighing ... .. 4d.
ELGAR, E. After many a dusty mile (arr.) ... .. 4d.	STANFORD, C. V. Corydon, arise ... .. 4d.
Death on the hills ... .. 8d.	Phœbe ... .. 4d.
Feasting I watch (arr.) ... .. 4d.	WEST, JOHN E. Woodmen, shepherds, come away ... .. 4d.
Go, song of mine ... .. 8d.	WILLIAMS, C. LEE. Song of the Pedlar ... .. 4d.
Shower, The ... .. 6d.	WILLIAMS, R. VAUGHAN. Fain would I change that note ... .. 3d.
FLETCHER, PERCY E. Folly's Song ... .. 4d.	WOOD, CHARLES. Full fathom five ... .. 3d.
GARDINER, H. BALFOUR. Cargoes ... .. 4d.
Old song resung, An ... .. 6d.

ELIZABETHAN MADRIGALS.

BATESON. Hark! hear you not ... .. 4d.	MORLEY. Arise, awake, you silly shepherds ... .. 4d.
BENET. All creatures now are merry-minded ... .. 4d.	Shoot, false love, I care not ... .. 4d.
BYRD. I joy not in no earthly bliss ... .. 4d.	TOMKINS. Oyes! has any found a lad... .. 2d.
This sweet and merry month of May... .. 4d.	Weep no more ... .. 2d.
FARMER. I thought my love, that I should overtake you ... .. 4d.	WEELKES. As Vesta was from Latmos' Hill descending ... .. 4d.
GIBBONS, ORLANDO. Ah! dere heart ... .. 2d.	Lady, your eye ... .. 4d.
I tremble not at noise of war ... .. 4d.	WILBYE. Adieu, sweet Amarillis ... .. 3d.
MARSTON Nymphs and shepherds ... .. 4d.	Alas! what hope of speeding ... .. 3d.
	Lady Oriana, The... .. 4d.

MALE VOICES (T.T.B.B.).

BANTOCK, GRANVILLE. Festival Song ... .. 6d.	FLETCHER, PERCY E. Sailor's Return, The ... .. 6d.
Give a rouse ... .. 4d.	Vision of Belshazzah, The ... .. 4d.
How sleep the brave ... .. 4d.	GARDINER, H. BALFOUR. Sir Eglamore ... .. 1d.
CARSE, A. The tide rises, the tide falls ... .. 3d.	GERMAN, E. O peaceful night ... .. 4d.
CORNELIUS, P. Rider's Song, The ... .. 6d.	Sleeping ... .. 4d.
DAVIES, H. WALFORD. Hymn before Action ... .. 4d.	LLOYD, C. H. Wet sheet and a flowing sea ... .. 4d.
DUNHILL, T. F. Full fathom five ... .. 4d.	SCHUMANN. Night March, The (Op. 62, No. 1) ... .. 4d.
It was a lover and his lass ... .. 4d.	Song of Freedom (Op. 62, No. 2) ... .. 4d.
Who is Sylvia? ... .. 3d.	WILLIAMS, R. VAUGHAN. Bushes and briars (Folk-Song) ... .. 3d.
Wind and the rain, The ... .. 4d.	WOOD, CHARLES. Down in yon summer vale ... .. 3d.
ELGAR, E. Reveille, The ... .. 8d.
Wanderer, The ... .. 4d.
Zut! zut! zut! ... .. 4d.

FEMALE VOICES.

ATKINS, IVOR. Sea Song, A. (S.A.) ... .. 4d.	FLETCHER, PERCY E. *Dream, baby. (S.S.A.) ... .. 4d.
BERLIOZ. Ophelia. (S.A.)... .. 4d.	*Oh the merry May. (S.S.A.) ... .. 4d.
BOUGHTON, RUTLAND Piper's Song. (S.S.A.)... .. 3d.	GERMAN, E. Beauteous morn. (S.S.A.) ... .. 4d.
BRAHMS. *Barcarolle (Op. 44, No. 3). (S.S.A.A.) ... .. 2d.	O lovely May. (S.S.A.) ... .. 4d.
Gardener, The (Op. 17, No. 3). (S.S.A.) ... .. 4d.	HOLST, G. *Now sleeps the crimson petal. (S.S.A.A.) ... .. 3d.
*Now all the roses (Op. 44, No. 7). (S.S.A.A.) ... .. 4d.	*O swallow, swallow. (S.S.A.) ... .. 3d.
COLERIDGE-TAYLOR, S. Encinctured with a twine of leaves. (S.S.A.) ... .. 4d.	*Splendour falls, The. (S.S.A.A.) ... .. 4d.
From the green heart of the waters. (S.S.A.) ... .. 4d.	*Sweet and low. (S.S.A.A.) ... .. 4d.
DAVIES, H. WALFORD. Cradle Song, A. (S.S.A.) ... .. 4d.	*Tears, idle tears (S.S.A.A.) ... .. 3d.
Lamb, The. (S.S.A.) ... .. 4d.	SHAW, GEOFFREY. Three Hymns from Pan's Anniversary:—
Shepherd, The. (S.S.A.) ... .. 4d.	Of Pan we sing. (S.S.A.)... .. 6d.
ELGAR, E. Christmas greeting, A. (S.A.) ... .. 8d.	Pan is our all. (S.S.A.A.) ... .. 4d.
My love dwelt in a northern land (arr.). (S.S.A.) ... .. 4d.	If yet Pan's orgies. (S.S.A.A.) ... .. 4d.
Stars of the summer night. (S.A.) ... .. 8d.	WILLIAMS, R. VAUGHAN. Sound sleep. (S.S.A.) ... .. 6d.
	WOOD, CHARLES. La Fileuse. (S.A.) ... .. 4d.

ELIZABETHAN MADRIGALS (ARRANGED).

*BATESON. Nightingale, The. (S.S.A.) ... .. 2d.	MORLEY. *My bonny lass she smileth. (S.S.A.A.) ... .. 4d.
*BYRDE. Looke downe, O Lord. (S.S.A.A.) ... .. 3d.	*Now is the month of maying. (S.S.A.A.) ... .. 3d.
*EDWARDS. In going to my lonely bed (S.S.A.A.)... .. 3d.	WEELKES. *Nightingale, The. (S.S.A.) ... .. 3d.
*GIBBONS, ORLANDO. The silver swan. (S.S.A.A.) ... .. 2d.	WILBYE. *Seek sweet content. (S.S.A.) Adapted from the madrigal—"Fly love, to heaven"—... .. 2d.

* Unaccompanied.

UNISON SONG FOR MASSED VOICES.

Words by WHITTIER.

WORSHIP.
PRICE TWOPENCE.

Music by GEOFFREY SHAW.

Specimens of every kind of music will be forwarded on application. To ensure a satisfactory selection, the Syllabus of the last Festival should accompany the request.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

NOVELLO'S HANDBOOKS FOR MUSICIANS.

EDITED BY ERNEST NEWMAN.

CHORAL TECHNIQUE AND INTERPRETATION

BY

HENRY COWARD.

MUS. DOC., OXON.

*Published as a Net Book.Price, Cloth, gilt, Seven Shillings and Sixpence net.*THE TEACHING AND ACCOMPANIMENT OF PLAINSONG

BY

FRANCIS BURGESS.

Published as a Net Book.Price, Cloth, gilt, Five Shillings and Sixpence net.

THE

Interpretation of the Music of the 17th &amp; 18th Centuries

AS REVEALED BY CONTEMPORARY EVIDENCE

BY

ARNOLD DOLMETSCH.

Published as a Net Book.Price, Cloth, gilt, Fifteen Shillings net.

APPENDIX

CONTAINING TWENTY-TWO ILLUSTRATIVE PIECES.

Price Five Shillings and Sixpence.

THE

SOURCES OF KEYBOARD MUSIC IN ENGLAND

BY

CHARLES VAN DEN BORREN.

Professor of the Université Nouvelle of Brussels.

TRANSLATED FROM THE FRENCH BY

JAMES E. MATTHEW.

Published as a Net Book.Price, Cloth, gilt, Ten Shillings and Sixpence net.

THE THEORY OF HARMONY

An Inquiry into the Natural Principles of Harmony, with an examination of the chief systems of Harmony from Rameau to the present day.

BY

MATTHEW SHIRLAW,

MUS.D., F.R.C.O.

(Lecturer in Music, University of Edinburgh, &c.)Published as a Net Book.Price, Cloth, gilt, Fifteen Shillings net.

THE ORGAN WORKS OF BACH

BY

HARVEY GRACE.

With an Introduction by ERNEST NEWMAN.

Published as a Net Book.Price, Cloth, Nine Shillings net.

LONDON : NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

JUST PUBLISHED.

EMPIRE SONG BOOK

A COLLECTION OF SUITABLE MUSIC FOR CHILDREN'S FESTIVALS WHICH IS SO ARRANGED THAT IT MAY BE PERFORMED WITH OR WITHOUT ACTIONS.

"SHE STANDS A THOUSAND-WINTERED TREE"

"AN EMPIRE SONG"

AND THE MEDLEYS

COMPOSED BY
PERCY E. FLETCHER.

(PRICE ONE SHILLING.)

Vocal Parts (Staff and Tonic Sol-fa Notations combined), Sixpence.

Orchestral Parts may be obtained.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

JUST PUBLISHED.

SECOND EDITION—REVISED AND ENTIRELY RE-WRITTEN
PART III. OF

THE MORRIS BOOK

WITH A DESCRIPTION OF DANCES AS PERFORMED BY

THE MORRIS MEN

OF ENGLAND

BY

CECIL J. SHARP

AND

HERBERT C. MACILWAINE

Price 4s. Cloth, 5s. 6d.

MORRIS DANCE TUNES

SETS 5 AND 6 (Revised Editions)

FOR USE IN CONNECTION WITH THE ABOVE.

Price 3s. each.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

EURHYTHM: THOUGHT IN ACTION

The Principles and Practice of Vocal and Physical Therapy.

DESIGNED FOR THE USE OF TEACHERS AND STUDENTS OF VOCAL AND PHYSICAL EDUCATION

By H. H. HULBERT

CAPT. R.A.M.C., M.A. OXFORD, M.R.C.S., L.R.C.P., ETC.

176 Pages, Octavo Size, Cloth, Gilt Lettered . . . . PRICE SEVEN SHILLINGS NET.

SHORT SYNOPSIS OF CHAPTERS.

I.—DEFINITION OF EURHYTHM. II.—THE ENGLISH PHYSIQUE AND ARTISTIC MOVEMENT. Science and games of skill—Movements of novice and master-man—Co-ordination in movement—Discipline of games. III.—THE POISE OF THE BODY AND TONICITY. Common deformities—Correct poise—Correct figure—Lumbar curve the centre of balance—Degrees of tonicity—Position of attention—Special exercises. IV.—THE SCIENCE OF APPRECIATION AND THE CONCEPTION OF THE BEAUTIFUL. Power of imagery—Knowledge of self—Kinds of appreciation—The five senses and experience—Sense of touch in music and games. V.—THE ART OF EXPRESSION AND CONTROL. Three nervous levels—Will and movement—The guiding sensation of movement—feeling—Self-control of the actor and public speaker—Euphonics. VI.—THE CENTRAL APPARATUS OF SPEECH. VII.—THE SOUNDS OF THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE. VIII.—BREATHING FOR VOICE. Diagrammatic sketch of apparatus—Different kinds of breathing—Effects of types of breathing on voice hygiene and figure. IX.—THE ARTICULATORY APPARATUS. X.—THE LARYNX. XI.—HYGIENE FOR VOICE-USERS AND ORDINARY HEALTH EXERCISES. Voice-user's throat—Physiological congestion of throat—Voice-training prevents voice-user's throat—Loss of health through civilization—Physical exercises for health—Positions: movements of arms, head, body, and legs: balance exercises, jumping, and marching. XII.—EURHYTHMICS.—THE PRACTICE OF EURHYTHMICS.

"It was very much wanted, and now that it has arrived it proves to be the best book on the subject we have ever seen. . . . One would like to dwell lovingly on every stage of this monumental work did space permit, but it will only allow of a general commendation of every word from the beginning . . . to the end, which consists of music to accompany the rhythmic physical exercises."—The Morning Post, February 17, 1922.

"No teacher of singing should be without this wonderful book."—Musical Opinion.

"This is a thoughtful and thought-compelling book which touches life at most points. Eurhythm the author defines as perfect harmony, and discusses with a fine enthusiasm the practical means of bringing about in the individual this desirable condition. The book should be of great value to teachers of singing and physical education, while the intelligent student can also derive great benefit from a careful reading."—Glasgow Herald.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

SEVENTH AND REVISED EDITION.

A HANDBOOK OF EXAMINATIONS IN MUSIC

CONTAINING

600 QUESTIONS WITH ANSWERS

BY

ERNEST A. DICKS,

Fellow of the Royal College of Organists.

PREFACE TO THE SEVENTH EDITION.

Through the kindness of Dr. E. H. Turpin the seventh edition of the Handbook of Examinations in Music includes the latest type of Papers set by Trinity College of Music, London, in their scheme of Local Examinations in Musical Knowledge.

The work will also be found to have been considerably enlarged by the addition of fifty specimen questions, with answers. They have been designed for the most part after the manner of those set in the Theory Paper for the L.R.A.M. Diploma, and also that required by candidates for the Higher Practical Examinations held by Trinity College of Music, London. The author earnestly hopes that these additions will considerably enhance the value of the Handbook, and render it increasingly helpful to students.

E. A. D.

Price, cloth, Five Shillings and Sixpence.

THE QUESTIONS (separately),

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

A VALUABLE BOOK FOR TEACHERS AND STUDENTS.

TECHNIQUE AND EXPRESSION

IN

PIANOFORTE PLAYING

BY

FRANKLIN TAYLOR.

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

In the course of my experience as a teacher of the pianoforte, an experience extending over many years, certain ideas have from time to time suggested themselves to me which have proved useful—to myself, as enabling me to express more clearly that which I desired my pupils to understand, and to my pupils, as tending to facilitate their comprehension of the various difficulties they have had to encounter, at the same time leading them to perceive the most practical means of overcoming them, and thus accelerating their general rate of progress.

These suggestions relate to both the mechanical and intellectual sides of the study of pianoforte-playing, or briefly, to Technique and Expression, the chief matters implied by the first of these terms being the production of various qualities of tone, the choice of suitable fingering, and the best methods of attacking certain difficulties; while the second, which may perhaps be more aptly designated the means of expression, includes rhythm, phrasing, variety and gradation of tone, the use of the pedals, et cetera.

WITH NUMEROUS MUSICAL EXAMPLES FROM THE
WORKS OF THE GREAT MASTERS.

PRICE, CLOTH GILT, SEVEN SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE NET.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JOSEPH WILLIAMS, LTD.

PART-SONGS INCLUDED IN SYLLABUS

OF
THE EMPIRE MUSICAL FESTIVAL,
CRYSTAL PALACE, MAY, 1924.

CHAMPIONSHIP SECTION (MALE VOICES).

R. VAUGHAN WILLIAMS (arr.). O.N. Sol-fa

"Down among the dead men" (T.T.B.B.)... 6d. 3d.

CHAMPIONSHIP SECTION (FEMALE VOICES).

CHRIS. M. EDMUNDS.

"To primroses filled with morning dew" (3v.) 6d. 3d.

CHAMPIONSHIP SECTION (CHILDREN'S CHOIRS).

CYRIL JENKINS.

"Lady Moon" Both Notations (combined) 4d.

ARNE.

"By dimpled brook and fountain brim" ... 4d. —

PART SONGS.

* SIX SONGS FROM SHAKESPEARE.

GEOFFREY SHAW.

1. What shall he have that kill'd the deer (S.A.T.B.) ... 4d.

2. When icicles hang by the wall (S.A.T.B.) ... 4d.

3. Over hill, over dale (S.A.) ... 2d.

4. Ye spotted snakes (S.A.T.B.) ... 4d.

5. Hey Robin, jolly Robin (T.B.) ... 4d.

6. When that I was and a little tiny boy (S.A.T.B.)... 4d.

COMPLETE, TWO SHILLINGS NET.

* EDWARD ELGAR.

"From the Bavarian Highlands" (Choral Suite)

S.A.T.B. Nos. 1 to 6.

Complete O.N., 4s. ; Sol-fa, 1s. 3d.

* Band Parts may be had on hire.

DEPT. I., JOSEPH WILLIAMS, LIMITED,

32, GREAT PORTLAND STREET, LONDON, W.1.

No. 98.—NOVELLO'S MUSIC PRIMERS.

ELEMENTS

OF

MUSICAL APPRECIATION.

BY

W. J. FOXELL,

M.A., Mus. Bac., Lond.

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE.

London: NOVELLO &amp; COMPANY, Limited.

AN EVENING HYMN

ON A GROUND

("NOW THAT THE SUN")

WORDS BY

DR. WILLIAM FULLER

MELODY AND BASS BY

HENRY PURCELL

EDITED AND AN ACCOMPANIMENT WRITTEN BY

HARVEY GRACE.

TWO KEYS

Price ... Two Shillings each.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

SIX NEW PART-SONGS FOR MIXED VOICES

(S.A.T.B.)

'In these works the publishers have hit upon the unique idea of arranging famous compositions as Part-Songs for mixed voices. Thus we have 'Welcome to May,' which, on investigation, proves to be none other than Mendelssohn's 'Bees' Wedding,' in which the soprano, contralto, tenor, and bass, are called upon to be busy bees, Schumann's 'Traumerei' under the title of 'Dreaming,' and our old friend Raff's 'Cavatina' in an effective new dress with the title 'At Eventide.' The 'Song of the Volga Boatmen' and the 'Londonderry Air' are treated in similar fashion. The sixth work, 'The Fruits of Love' is an original composition with a suggestion of the modern. The adaptations of the familiar melodies for part-song purposes are remarkably successful, and will undoubtedly find favour with choirmasters on the look out for uncommon material.'

From the "Musical Mirror."

WELCOME TO MAY

Founded on Mendelssohn's "The Bees' Wedding" O.N. S.F. 80028 3d. 2d.

DREAMING

Founded of Schumann's "Traumerei" ... 80035 3d. 2d.

EVENTIDE

Founded of Raff's "Cavatina" ... 80029 4d. 2d.

LONDONDERRY AIR

Founded on the traditional Irish Melody ... O.N. S.F. 80028 3d. 2d.

SONG of the VOLGA BOATMEN

Founded on the traditional Russian Folk-Song 80033 3d. 2d.

FRUITS OF LOVE

With Bass-Solo. By LESLIE WOODGATE 80036 3d. 2d.

Any of the above may be seen through our "On approval" Dept., or Sample Copies will be sent post free, at half-price, to bona-fide Choirmasters or Conductors sending card.

Send for complete Choral and Vocal Catalogue, C. 201, post free.

PAXTON'S

(W. PAXTON &amp; Co., LTD.)

22, HIGH STREET,
NEW OXFORD STREET,
- - LONDON, W.C.1.

ALBUMS FOR THE ORGAN

PRICE FIVE SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE EACH. CLOTH, SEVEN SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE EACH.

No.	No. 1.	No. 5.
1. Interlude ... .. Th. Dubois	1. Jour de Noces ... .. J. Stuart Archer	1. Nocturne ... .. Thomas F. Dunhill
2. Chanson de Matin ... .. Edward Elgar	2. Festival Prelude on "Ein feste Burg" ... .. W. Faulkes	2. Postludium ... .. William Faulkes
3. Fantasia on the old melody "Urbs Beata" ... .. W. Faulkes	3. Legend ... .. Harvey Grace	3. Andante Tranquillo ... .. H. M. Higgs
4. There is a green hill far away ... .. Ch. Gounod	4. Allegretto Pastorale ... .. Alfred Hollins	4. In Springtime ... .. Alfred Hollins
5. Marche Triomphale ... .. Alexandre Guilmant	5. Benediction Nuptiale ... .. John N. Ireland	5. Madrigal ... .. Edwin H. Lemare
6. Ave Maria ... .. A. Henselt	6. Sursum Corda ... .. John N. Ireland	6. Triumphal March ... .. J. Lemmens
7. Grand Chœur No. 2 ... .. Alfred Hollins	7. Alla Marcia ... .. Edwin H. Lemare	7. Allegro in B flat ... .. F. Mendelssohn-Bartholdy
8. Andantino in D flat ... .. Edwin H. Lemare	8. Adagio Cantabile ... .. J. Lemmens	8. Choral Prelude on "Rockingham" ... .. C. Hubert H. Parry
9. Chanson Triste ... .. P. Tchaikowsky	9. Fanfare ... .. B. Luard-Selby	9. Præludium Pastorale ... .. J. Stainer
10. Prelude to "Lohengrin," Act I ... .. R. Wagner	10. Intermezzo ... .. John E. West	10. Romance in F minor ... .. Tchaikowsky
11. Romanza ... .. W. Wolstenholme	11. Easter Morn ... .. W. Wolstenholme	11. Romance in A flat ... .. H. Sandiford Turner
12. Allegretto in E flat ... .. W. Wolstenholme	12. Finale in B flat ... .. W. Wolstenholme	12. Festal Commemoration ... .. John E. West
No. 2.	No. 6.	No. 7 (Funeral Music).
1. Chanson de Nuit ... .. Edward Elgar	1. Nocturne ... .. Thomas F. Dunhill	1. Funeral March (Pianoforte Sonata, Op. 26) ... .. Beethoven
2. Alla Marcia ... .. Myles B. Foster	2. Postludium ... .. William Faulkes	2. Blest are they that mourn (Requiem) ... .. Brahms
3. Minuetto ... .. Alexandre Guilmant	3. Andante Tranquillo ... .. H. M. Higgs	3. Funeral March (Pianoforte Sonata, Op. 35) ... .. Chopin
4. Lied ... .. H. Hofmann	4. In Springtime ... .. Alfred Hollins	4. Funeral March ... .. William Faulkes
5. Barcarolle ... .. H. Hofmann	5. Madrigal ... .. Edwin H. Lemare	5. Funeral March ("Saul") ... .. Handel
6. Spring Song ... .. Alfred Hollins	6. Triumphal March ... .. J. Lemmens	6. I know that my Redeemer liveth ("Messiah") ... .. Handel
7. The Curfew ... .. Edward J. Horsman	7. Allegro in B flat ... .. F. Mendelssohn-Bartholdy	7. Funeral March ("Lieder ohne Worte") ... .. Mendelssohn
8. Pastoral in E ... .. Edwin H. Lemare	8. Choral Prelude on "Rockingham" ... .. C. Hubert H. Parry	8. O rest in the Lord ("Elijah") ... .. Mendelssohn
9. Ave Maria d'Arcadelt ... .. Franz Liszt	9. Præludium Pastorale ... .. J. Stainer	9. Marche Solennelle ... .. Schubert
10. Cantique d'Amour ... .. Theo. Wendt	10. Romance in F minor ... .. Tchaikowsky	10. Marche Funèbre ... .. Tchaikowsky
11. The Seraph's Strain ... .. W. Wolstenholme	11. Romance in A flat ... .. H. Sandiford Turner	11. Finale from "Symphonie Pathétique" ... .. Tchaikowsky
12. Le Carillon ... .. W. Wolstenholme	12. Festal Commemoration ... .. John E. West	12. Lament ... .. John E. West
No. 3.	No. 8 (Christmas Music).	No. 9 (Christmas Music).
1. Scherzo in A flat ... .. Edward C. Bairstow	1. Funeral March (Pianoforte Sonata, Op. 26) ... .. Beethoven	1. Chorale Prelude, "In dulci jubilo" ... .. J. S. Bach
2. Melody ... .. S. Coleridge-Taylor	2. Blest are they that mourn (Requiem) ... .. Brahms	2. Pastoral Symphony ("Christmas Oratorio") ... .. J. S. Bach
3. Serenade ... .. H. Hofmann	3. Funeral March (Pianoforte Sonata, Op. 35) ... .. Chopin	3. Quem Vidistis, Pastores ... .. W. T. Best
4. Bridal March ... .. Alfred Hollins	4. Funeral March ... .. William Faulkes	4. Venite in Bethlehem ... .. W. T. Best
5. Berceuse ... .. Edwin H. Lemare	5. Funeral March ("Saul") ... .. Handel	5. December—Christmas Morn ... .. Frederic H. Cowen
6. Melodie in E ... .. S. Rachmaninoff	6. I know that my Redeemer liveth ("Messiah") ... .. Handel	6. Fantasia on Old Christmas Carols ... .. William Faulkes
7. Aubade ... .. A. Strelitzky	7. Funeral March ("Lieder ohne Worte") ... .. Mendelssohn	7. For unto us a Child is born ("Messiah") ... .. Handel
8. Nocturne in C sharp minor ... .. P. Tchaikowsky	8. O rest in the Lord ("Elijah") ... .. Mendelssohn	8. Pastoral ... .. Theodore Kullak
9. Procession to the Minster ("Lohengrin") ... .. R. Wagner	9. Marche Solennelle ... .. Schubert	9. Chorus of Shepherds ... .. J. Lemmens
10. Passacaglia ... .. John E. West	10. Marche Funèbre ... .. Tchaikowsky	10. Christmas Pastoral ... .. Gustav Merkel
11. Fantasia upon the Plain-song Melody "Ad cenam Agni" ... .. Healey Willan	11. Finale from "Symphonie Pathétique" ... .. Tchaikowsky	11. A Christmas Pastoral ... .. B. Luard-Selby
12. Allegretto in A flat ... .. W. Wolstenholme	12. Lament ... .. John E. West	12. Fantasy on Two Christmas Carols ("The First Nowell" and "Good King Wenceslas.") ... .. John E. West
No. 4.	No. 10 (Christmas Music).	No. 11 (Christmas Music).
1. Arietta ... .. S. Coleridge-Taylor	1. Chorale Prelude, "In dulci jubilo" ... .. J. S. Bach	1. Pastoral Symphony ("Christmas Oratorio") ... .. J. S. Bach
2. Souvenir de Printemps ... .. Joseph Holbrooke	2. Pastoral Symphony ("Christmas Oratorio") ... .. J. S. Bach	2. Quem Vidistis, Pastores ... .. W. T. Best
3. Andante in D ... .. Alfred Hollins	3. Quem Vidistis, Pastores ... .. W. T. Best	3. Venite in Bethlehem ... .. W. T. Best
4. Pavane in A ... .. Bernard Johnson	4. Venite in Bethlehem ... .. W. T. Best	4. December—Christmas Morn ... .. Frederic H. Cowen
5. Harmonies du Soir ... .. Sigfrid Karg-Elert	5. December—Christmas Morn ... .. Frederic H. Cowen	5. Fantasia on Old Christmas Carols ... .. William Faulkes
6. An Etou Memorial March ... .. C. H. Lloyd	6. Fantasia on Old Christmas Carols ... .. William Faulkes	6. For unto us a Child is born ("Messiah") ... .. Handel
7. Allegro alla Marcia ... .. A. L. Peace	7. For unto us a Child is born ("Messiah") ... .. Handel	7. Pastoral ... .. Theodore Kullak
8. Visione ... .. J. Rheinberger	8. Pastoral ... .. Theodore Kullak	8. Chorus of Shepherds ... .. J. Lemmens
9. Chant sans Paroles ... .. P. Tchaikowsky	9. Chorus of Shepherds ... .. J. Lemmens	9. Christmas Pastoral ... .. Gustav Merkel
10. Prelude to Act III. ("Die Meistersinger") ... .. R. Wagner	10. Christmas Pastoral ... .. Gustav Merkel	10. A Christmas Pastoral ... .. B. Luard-Selby
11. Allegro Pomposo ... .. John E. West	11. A Christmas Pastoral ... .. B. Luard-Selby	11. Fantasy on Two Christmas Carols ("The First Nowell" and "Good King Wenceslas.") ... .. John E. West
12. Canzona ... .. W. Wolstenholme	12. Fantasy on Two Christmas Carols ("The First Nowell" and "Good King Wenceslas.") ... .. John E. West

SHORT PRELUDES FOR THE ORGAN

PRICE ONE SHILLING AND SIXPENCE EACH BOOK.

These Short Preludes are intended for use chiefly as Introductory Voluntaries to Divine Service, more especially in those churches where the time allowed for such is, of necessity, somewhat limited.

No.	Book I.	Book IV.
1. Andante Grazioso ... .. Thomas Adams	1. "Elevation"—Andante e Legato ... .. Thomas Adams	1. "Elevation"—Andante e Legato ... .. Thomas Adams
2. Andante ... .. W. G. Alcock	2. Andante Religioso ... .. Myles B. Foster	2. Andante Religioso ... .. Myles B. Foster
3. Largamente ... .. George J. Bennett	3. Simplicity"—Andante ... .. Barry M. Gilhoy	3. Simplicity"—Andante ... .. Barry M. Gilhoy
4. Andante Religioso ... .. Myles B. Foster	4. Largamente ... .. R. G. Hailing	4. Largamente ... .. R. G. Hailing
5. Andantino ... .. Alfred Hollins	5. "Dialogue"—Andante Grazioso ... .. Charles H. Lloyd	5. "Dialogue"—Andante Grazioso ... .. Charles H. Lloyd
6. Adagio Cantabile ... .. Alfred Hollins	6. Andantino ... .. Arthur W. Marchant	6. Andantino ... .. Arthur W. Marchant
7. Larghetto ... .. Charles J. May	7. Con Moto Moderato ... .. William Sewell	7. Con Moto Moderato ... .. William Sewell
8. Andante con Moto ... .. John E. West	8. Andante Amabile ... .. William Sewell	8. Andante Amabile ... .. William Sewell
9. Andantino quasi Allegretto ... .. John E. West	9. Andante ... .. Clement M. Spurling	9. Andante ... .. Clement M. Spurling
10. Andante ... .. W. Wolstenholme	10. Andante Sostenuto ... .. F. Cunningham Woods	10. Andante Sostenuto ... .. F. Cunningham Woods
Book II.	Book V.	Book VI.
1. Andante con Moto ... .. Thomas Adams	1. "Invocation"—Andante Grazioso ... .. Thomas Adams	1. Dolente ... .. Edmund T. Chipp
2. Con Moto ... .. W. G. Alcock	2. Andante con Moto ... .. Percy E. Fletcher	2. Andante Sostenuto ... .. Myles B. Foster
3. Moderato ... .. H. A. Chambers	3. Poco Adagio ... .. Myles B. Foster	3. Andantino ... .. R. G. Hailing
4. Marziale, poco Lento ... .. Myles B. Foster	4. Andante Espressivo ... .. Ignace Gibsons	4. Con Moto ... .. Alfred Hollins
5. Moderato ... .. Alfred Hollins	5. Adagio ... .. Alfred Hollins	5. "Communion"—Cantabile ... .. J. Lemmens
6. Andantino ... .. Alfred Hollins	6. Poco Lento ... .. Charles H. Lloyd	6. Andante Religioso ... .. Arthur W. Marchant
7. Adagio ... .. Charles J. May	7. Andante Dolente ... .. Arthur W. Marchant	7. Lento ... .. Charles J. May
8. "Hymnus"—Andante e Sostenuto ... .. John E. West	8. Andantino con Tenerezza ... .. William Sewell	8. Larghetto ... .. Albert Robins
9. Andante Serioso ... .. John E. West	9. Andante con Moto ... .. Clement M. Spurling	9. Adagio e Mesto ... .. William Sewell
10. Adagio ... .. W. Wolstenholme	10. Adagio Molto ... .. F. Cunningham Woods	10. Andante Affettuoso ... .. William Sewell
Book III.	Book VII.	Book VIII.
1. Moderato e Legato ... .. Thomas Adams	1. Dolente ... .. Edmund T. Chipp	1. Dolente ... .. Edmund T. Chipp
2. Moderato ... .. W. G. Alcock	2. Andante Sostenuto ... .. Myles B. Foster	2. Andante Sostenuto ... .. Myles B. Foster
3. Andante con Moto ... .. George J. Bennett	3. Andantino ... .. R. G. Hailing	3. Andantino ... .. R. G. Hailing
4. Andante ... .. H. A. Chambers	4. Con Moto ... .. Alfred Hollins	4. Con Moto ... .. Alfred Hollins
5. Grazioso molto Espressivo ... .. Myles B. Foster	5. "Communion"—Cantabile ... .. J. Lemmens	5. "Communion"—Cantabile ... .. J. Lemmens
6. "Song without Words"—Con Moto ... .. Alfred Hollins	6. Andante Religioso ... .. Arthur W. Marchant	6. Andante Religioso ... .. Arthur W. Marchant
7. Andante ... .. Alfred Hollins	7. Lento ... .. Charles J. May	7. Lento ... .. Charles J. May
8. Andante Dolente ... .. John E. West	8. Larghetto ... .. Albert Robins	8. Larghetto ... .. Albert Robins
9. Andante Pastorale ... .. John E. West	9. Adagio e Mesto ... .. William Sewell	9. Adagio e Mesto ... .. William Sewell
10. Adagio ... .. W. Wolstenholme	10. Andante Affettuoso ... .. William Sewell	10. Andante Affettuoso ... .. William Sewell

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

NOVELLO'S PIANOFORTE ALBUMS.

In Numbers, each 1s. 6d., except Nos. 26, 27, and 28; or, Cloth Volumes, each 6s.

VOLUME I.

- No. 1.—BACH. Twenty pieces from Petits Préludes, Suites Anglaises. Partita Nos. 1 to 3, &c.
No. 2.—BACH. Twenty Pieces from Suites Anglaises, Suites Françaises. Partita Nos. 4 and 5, &c.
No. 3.—BACH. Twenty Pieces from Petits Préludes, Concertos, Suites Anglaises, &c.

VOLUME II.

- No. 4.—HANDEL. Twenty-four Pieces from Suites 1 to 7, Sonatas, "Harmonious Blacksmith," &c.
No. 5.—HANDEL. Twenty-four Pieces from Suites 8 to 12, Gavottes, &c.
No. 6.—HANDEL. Twenty-four Pieces from Suites 13 to 16, Water Music, &c.

VOLUME III.

- No. 7.—MARCHES. Fifteen Pieces, including Mendelssohn's Hero's March, Rakoczy March, Bridal March ("Lohengrin"), &c.
No. 8.—MARCHES. Fifteen Pieces, including Meyerbeer's Coronation March, Cornelius March, Pilgrims' March, &c.
No. 9.—MARCHES. Fifteen Pieces, including Mendelssohn's Wedding March, March "Tannhäuser," &c.

VOLUME IV.

- No. 10.—GAVOTTES, MINUETS, ETC. Sixteen Pieces, including Rameau's Gavotte, Zimmermann's Gavotte, Calkin's Minuet, Silas's Bourrée, &c.
No. 11.—GAVOTTES, MINUETS, ETC. Sixteen Pieces, including Gluck's Gavotte, W. Macfarren's Bourrée, Bach's Bourrée, &c.
No. 12.—GAVOTTES, MINUETS, ETC. Sixteen Pieces, including W. Macfarren's 2nd Gavotte, Benedict's Gavotte, Mozart's Minuet, &c.

VOLUME V.

- No. 13.—WOLLENHAUPT, J. Ten Pieces, including Marche Hongroise, Scherzo Brillant, &c.
No. 14.—WOLLENHAUPT, J. Ten Pieces, including "La Gazelle," "Mazepa Galop," &c.
No. 15.—WOLLENHAUPT, J. Ten Pieces, including "Les Clochettes," "Feu Follet," &c.
No. 16.—SCHWEIZER, OTTO. Eight Scottish Airs (arranged for four hands).

VOLUME VI.

- No. 17.—SPINDLER, FRITZ. Nine Pieces, including "Murmuring Rivulet," The Pilgrims' Chorus ("Tannhäuser"), &c.
No. 18.—SPINDLER, FRITZ. Nine Pieces, including "L'Oisillon," "Le Carillon," "The Evening Star" ("Tannhäuser"), &c.
No. 19.—SPINDLER, FRITZ. Ten Pieces, including "Jeu des Ondes," Valse Mélodieuse, Spinning Song, ("Flying Dutchman"), &c.

VOLUME VII.

- No. 20.—GOETZ, HERMANN. Five Compositions.
No. 21.—GOETZ, HERMANN. Four Compositions.
No. 22.—GOETZ, HERMANN. Six Compositions.

VOLUME VIII.

- No. 23.—RHEINBERGER, JOSEF. Seven Compositions.
No. 24.—RHEINBERGER, JOSEF. Eleven Compositions.
No. 25.—RHEINBERGER, JOSEF. Seven Compositions.
No. 26.—TOURS, BÉTRHOLD. Juvenile Album, Eight Characteristic Pieces (Duets), 3s.

VOLUME IX.

- Nos. 27 and 28.—MOSCHELES, I. "Domestic Life." Twelve Characteristic Duets, Two Books, each, 3s.

VOLUME X.

- No. 29.—KJERULF, HALFDAN. Nine Pieces. Op. 4, Nos. 1 to 3; Op. 12, Nos. 1 to 6.
No. 30.—KJERULF, HALFDAN. Ten Pieces. Op. 24, Nos. 1 to 4; Op. 27, Nos. 1 and 2; Op. 28, Nos. 1 to 4.
No. 31.—KJERULF, HALFDAN. Op. 28, Nos. 5 and 6; Op. 29; and Twenty Songs arranged.

VOLUME XI.

- Nos. 32, 33, and 34. The National Dance Music of Scotland. Arranged for the Pianoforte by Alexander Mackenzie; with additions by his son, A. C. Mackenzie.

VOLUME XII.

- No. 35.—MACKENZIE, A. C. Eight Pieces. Op. 13, Nos. 1 to 5; Op. 15, Nos. 1 to 3.
No. 36.—MACKENZIE, A. C. Nine Pieces. Op. 20, Nos. 1 to 6; Op. 23, Nos. 1 to 3.
No. 37.—MACKENZIE, A. C. Six Songs. Transcribed for the Pianoforte by Giuseppe Buonamici.

- No. 38.—ALTSCHUL, RUDOLF. Fifty Hungarian National Songs.

VOLUME XIV.

- No. 41.—LIADOFF, ANATOLE. Twenty-one Pieces. Op. 2, Nos. 1 to 14; Op. 3, Nos. 1, 3, 4, and 6; Op. 6; Op. 15, Nos. 1 and 2.
No. 42.—LIADOFF, ANATOLE. Seven Pieces. Op. 4, Nos. 1 to 4; Op. 7, Nos. 1 and 2; Op. 11.
No. 43.—LIADOFF, ANATOLE. Ten Pieces. Op. 8; Op. 9, Nos. 1 and 2; Op. 10, Nos. 1, 2, and 3; Op. 13, Nos. 1 to 4.

VOLUME XV.

- No. 44.—CUI, CÉSAR. Thirteen Pieces. Op. 20, Nos. 1 to 12; Op. 21, No. 3.
No. 45.—CUI, CÉSAR. Eleven Pieces. Op. 21, No. 4; Op. 22, Nos. 1, 2, and 3; Op. 31, No. 2; Op. 39, Nos. 1 to 6.
No. 46.—CUI, CÉSAR. Seven Pieces. Op. 22, No. 4; Op. 29, No. 1; Op. 30, No. 1; Op. 35, Nos. 1 and 2; Op. 40, Nos. 2 and 4.

VOLUME XVI.

- No. 47.—SCHUBERT, FRANZ. Four Impromptus. Op. 90.
No. 48.—SCHUBERT, FRANZ. Four Impromptus. Op. 142.
No. 49.—SCHUBERT, FRANZ. Moments Musicaux. (Op. 94), and Adagio and Rondo (Op. 145).

VOLUME XVII.

- No. 50.—SCHUBERT, FRANZ. Three Sets of Variations, Andante, and Klavierstück.
No. 51.—SCHUBERT, FRANZ. Adagio, Allegretto, and March in E major, &c.
No. 52.—SCHUBERT, FRANZ. Five Klavierstücke and Two Scherzi.

VOLUME XVIII.

- No. 53.—HOFMANN, H. "The Trumpeter of Säckingen" (Op. 52) and Two Valses Caprices (Op. 2).
No. 54.—HOFMANN, H. "Italian Love Tale" (Op. 19) and Five other Pieces.
No. 55.—HOFMANN, H. Fourteen Pieces.

"Such settings as these cannot do otherwise than tend to popularise the Church Service."—Musical Standard, June 6th, 1891.

"Good, effective, easy, and dignified."—Musical Times, April 1, 1891.

"Admirably adapted to meet the requirements of the majority of choirs and congregations." "Deserve extensive recognition and use."—Musical News, September 4 and 25, 1891.

Also recommended by the Guardian, Church Times, &c., &c.

POPULAR CHURCH MUSIC

BY

J. H. MAUNDER

HARVEST ANTHEMS.

	Staff Notation.	Tonic Sol-fa.
Sing to the Lord of Harvest ... ..	4d.	3d.
While the earth remaineth ... ..	4d.	3d.
Blessed be the Name of the Lord ... ..	4d.	3d.

SERVICES.

SERVICE IN G ... ..	2s.	1s. 4d.
Or, separately:—
Te Deum ... ..	4d.	3d.
Benedicite, omnia Opera ... ..	3d.	3d.
Benedictus ... ..	3d.	3d.
Jubilate ... ..	4d.	3d.
Office for the Holy Communion ... ..	rod.	8d.
Pater Noster from the above ... ..	3d.	3d.
Amen ditto ... ..	1½d.	1½d.
Magnificat and Nunc dimittis ... ..	4d.	3d.
SERVICE IN CHANT FORM (No. 1) ... ..	1s. 4d.	rod.
Or, separately:—
Te Deum, &c., with Kyrie ... ..	4d.	3d.
Office for the Holy Communion ... ..	8d.	6d.
Magnificat and Nunc dimittis ... ..	4d.	3d.
Te Deum in B flat ... ..	4d.	3d.
Magnificat and Nunc dimittis in C (partly Unison) ... ..	4d.	2d.
Magnificat and Nunc dimittis in D ... ..	4d.	3d.

ORGAN.

Voix Seraphique (for Recitals) ... ..	2s. 6d.	—
CHURCH CANTATA.
Penitence, Pardon, and Peace (for general use) ... ..	2s.	1s. 4d.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

A SHORT AND EASY

COMMUNION SERVICE

IN E FLAT

(Including Ninefold Kyrie, Benedictus qui venit, and Agnus Dei).

COMPOSED BY

BASIL HARWOOD.

PRICE ONE SHILLING.

Voice Part only, for Congregational use, 6d.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

CHURCH MUSIC by C. J. RIDSDALE.

COMMUNION SERVICES.

	s.	d.
No. 1.—"Cantio Dominica" ... ..	1	0
No. 2.—(In 3 parts, s.t.b., with florid Organ Part) ... ..	1	0
No. 3.—For Village use ... ..	0	9
"Now let the faithful Choir." Sequence or Anthem for Dedication Fest. or All Saints (4 parts) ... ..	0	6
Words only, 3d. per doz. ... ..
"Ave Maria, Blessed Maid." Festivals of B.V.M. Bass Solo and Chorus Refrain ... ..	1	6
Violoncello Obbligato, 6d. ... ..
Festal Te Deum ... ..	0	6

PLAINSONG.

Three Festal Magnificats, Interludes, and Faux Bourdons ... ..	0	9
Missa in Dominics, Voice Part, 3d. Organ Accompaniment, 2s.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JUST PUBLISHED.

CHORALES

HARMONIZED BY

JOHANN SEBASTIAN BACH

COLLECTED AND ARRANGED IN MELODIC ORDER

BY

H. ELLIOT BUTTON.

This Collection of Chorales harmonized by Bach contains, it is believed, all those that he arranged for voices. It includes also an Index by means of which any Chorale can easily be found if the first few notes of the melody are known.

Price ... .. Cloth, Ten Shillings and Sixpence.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

FOUR ENGLISH DANCES

SET 1.

COMPOSED BY

FREDERIC H. COWEN.

	s.	d.
Full Score ... ..	16	0
String Parts ... ..	9	0
Wind Parts ... ..	17	8
Ditto (small orchestra) ... ..	13	2
Military Band ... ..	19	0
Pianoforte Solo ... ..	4	0
Violin and Pianoforte ... ..	4	6
Quintet (Pianoforte and Strings) ... .. each	4	0
Extra Strings, 8d. each.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

OLD

ENGLISH DANCES

SET 2.

COMPOSED BY

FREDERIC H. COWEN.

	s.	d.
Full Score ... ..	25	0
String Parts ... ..	14	3
Wind Parts ... ..	30	3
Pianoforte Solo ... ..	4	0
From the above: "MINUET D'AMOUR."
Pianoforte Solo, 2s. 3d.; Violin and Pianoforte, 3s.;
Quintet for Pianoforte and Strings, 4s.
Extra Strings, 8d. each.
Full Score ... ..	5	6
String Parts ... ..	2	0
Wind Parts ... ..	3	8
Military Band ... ..	7	6

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

FOUR CHARACTERISTIC WALTZES

1. VALSE BOHEMIENNE.

3. VALSE DE LA REINE.

2. VALSE RUSTIQUE.

4. VALSE MAURESQUE.

COMPOSED BY

S. COLERIDGE-TAYLOR.

(Op. 22).

PIANOFORTE SOLO.

PRICE, COMPLETE, FOUR SHILLINGS; SEPARATELY, 2s. 3d. EACH.

	s.	d.		s.	d.
Violin and Pianoforte ... .. complete	4	6	Full Score (Full Orchestra) ... ..	11	6
Violin and Pianoforte ... .. separately, each	2	3	Full Score (Small Orchestra), MS.
String Parts for Full or Small Orchestra ... ..	9	0	Arrangements, as Quintets, for Pianoforte and
Wind Parts for Small Orchestra ... ..	10	5	Strings, each Number ... ..	3	0
Ditto, for Full Orchestra ... ..	17	5	Separate String Parts, 8d. each.
			Military Band Arrangement ... ..	19	0

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

JOHN SEBASTIAN BACH

48 PRELUDES AND FUGUES

(THE WELL-TEMPERED CLAVICHORD)

A NEW EDITION, EDITED BY HAROLD BROOKE.

IN TWO PARTS.

Price Four Shillings each.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

AN IMPORTANT CONTRIBUTION TO MUSICAL LITERATURE.

ALFREDO CASELLA

THE EVOLUTION OF MUSIC THROUGHOUT THE HISTORY OF THE PERFECT CADENCE

PART I.—THE DIATONIC PERIOD.

(THE PRIMITIVES, THE RENASCENCE, THE CLASSICS, AND THE ROMANTICS.)

PART II.—THE TRANSITORY PERIOD.

(POST-WAGNERIANS, NEO-CLASSICS, PRECURSORS OF THE MODERN ERA, ETC.)

PART III.—THE PRESENT PERIOD.

(POLYMODALITY, TONAL SIMULTANEITY, AND ATONALITY.)

(Italian, English, and French Texts.)

Price - SEVEN SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE NET.

This is one of the most original and comprehensive theoretico-aesthetic books on music published for a long time. It is well known that Alfredo Casella is not only one of the foremost modern Italian composers, but that his knowledge of musical science and literature in all its aspects is scarcely matched by any of his contemporaries.

The aim of this book is to trace the gradual formation and development during the course of centuries of the principal elements of modern music, and it does so by the author's ingenious comments on a selection of a hundred perfect cadences, chosen from representative compositions ranging from the 13th century to the present day. As a theoretical and historical essay on the evolution of modern music the book is as valuable as it is fascinating as an anthology of characteristic musical phrases gleaned from the masterpieces of every age.

Both the introductory treatise and the comments on the musical examples, in spite of the complexity of the subject, are very clearly and simply written; the book is by no means intended for the specialist only, but will be perused with interest and enjoyment by every lover of music who evinces curiosity in the development of the art.

J. & W. CHESTER, LTD., 11, Great Marlborough St., London, W.1.

THE MUSICAL TIMES

AND SINGING-CLASS CIRCULAR

FOUNDED IN 1844

PUBLISHED ON THE FIRST OF EVERY MONTH

No. 976.—Vol. 65

Registered at the General Post
Office for Canadian Postage

JUNE 1 1924

Price 6d.; Postage 2d.

Annual Subscription, post-free, 7s. 6d.

ROYAL CHORAL SOCIETY.

Patron: HIS MAJESTY THE KING.

General Conductor: MR. H. L. BALFOUR, MUS. BAC.

(Season 1924—1925.)

There are now VACANCIES in the CHOIR for SOPRANOS, CONTRALTOS, TENORS, and BASSES. Applicants should have STRONG VOICES of GOOD QUALITY, and must be prepared to pass an examination in SIGHT-READING. Address, The Secretary, Royal Choral Society, Royal Albert Hall, S.W.7.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

YORK GATE, MARYLEBONE ROAD, LONDON, N.W.1.

Instituted 1822. Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1830.

Patron: HIS MAJESTY THE KING.

President: H.R.H. THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT, K.G.

Principal: SIR A. C. MACKENZIE, K.C.V.O., Mus. Doc., F.R.C.M.

Acting Principal: JOHN B. MC EWEN, M.A., F.R.A.M.

MIDSUMMER HALF-TERM will begin on Monday, June 16. Entrance Examination on or about Thursday, June 12.

A SPECIAL COURSE FOR THE TRAINING OF CONDUCTORS has been instituted.

A SPECIAL TEACHERS' TRAINING COURSE has been arranged to meet the requirements of the Teachers' Registration Council.

The FOURTH LECTURE by Dr. F. G. SHINN, on the Chamber Music of Brahms and Dvorák, will be given on Wednesday, June 4, at 3.15.

ORCHESTRAL CONCERT, Queen's Hall, Tuesday, June 17, at 3.

CHAMBER CONCERT by Junior Pupils, Wednesday, June 25, at 3.

FORTNIGHTLY CONCERTS, Saturdays, June 14 and 28, at 8.

L.R.A.M. September Examination: last day for entry, June 30.

J. A. CREIGHTON, Secretary.

THE ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

PRINCE CONSORT ROAD, SOUTH KENSINGTON, S.W.7.

(Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1883.)

Patron: HIS MAJESTY THE KING.

President: H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, K.G.

Director: SIR HUGH P. ALLEN, M.A., Mus. Doc.

Honorary Secretary: GEORGE A. MACMILLAN, Esq., D.Litt.

Registrar: CLAUDE AVELING, Esq., M.A.

The College offers a Complete Course of Musical Education to pupils of both sexes, both professional and amateur. Upwards of seventy Scholarships and Exhibitions are founded which provide free musical education.

SPECIAL CLASSES for CONDUCTING and TRAINING of TEACHERS have been instituted.

The OPERATIC and BALLET CLASSES have the use of the fully equipped College OPERA THEATRE with SUNKEN ORCHESTRA.

Examinations for the Associateship of the College (A.R.C.M.) in all subjects held three times a year in December, April, and September.

THREE CHOIRS FESTIVAL, HEREFORD.

CONDUCTOR - - DR. PERCY C. HULL.

SEPTEMBER 7th to 12th inclusive.

Prospectus on application to—

SECRETARY, MUSICAL FESTIVAL, HEREFORD.

Guildhall School of Music.

(CORPORATION OF LONDON.)

VICTORIA EMBANKMENT, E.C.4.

PRINCIPAL: SIR LANDON RONALD, F.R.A.M., F.R.C.M., &c.

PRIVATE LESSONS in all Musical Subjects, and STAGE TRAINING in Elocution, Gesture, Dancing, Opera.

Complete Musical Education at inclusive fees, £9 9s. and £12 12s. Opera Class, Saturdays. Special Training Course for Teachers (approved by Teachers' Registration Council).

Prospectus and Syllabus of Local Centres and Schools Examinations (open to general public) free.

Telephone: Cent. 4459.

H. SAXE WYNDHAM, Secretary.

The Royal College of Organists.

The SOLO-PLAYING TESTS for the next F.R.C.O. EXAMINATION are:

Prelude and Fugue in E minor ("Wedge"), J. S. Bach. (Novello, Book 8, p. 98; Augener, p. 227; Peters, Vol. 2, No. 9.)

Canon in B minor, Schumann. Op. 56. (Any edition.)

Andante in F, from the 6th Quartet, Mozart. Best's Arrangements, No. 2, p. 12 (Novello). This arrangement only.

The selected pieces and the book set for the Essay for the July, 1924, A.R.C.O. Examination, differ from those set for January, 1924.

All Candidates for the next Examinations must send in their Names for FELLOWSHIP by JUNE 5th, for ASSOCIATESHIP by JUNE 12th. In the case of NEW MEMBERS proposal forms duly filled up must be sent in before JUNE 2nd. No names will be entered after the above dates.

Regulations, list of College Publications, Lectures, &c., may be had on application.

The College is open daily from 10 to 4; Saturdays, 10 to 1.

Examples indicating the character and approximate difficulty of the NEW TESTS, to be set for the first time at the July, 1924, Examinations, may now be obtained at the College.

Associateship or Fellowship, 6d. each (post free).

H. A. HARDING, Hon. Secretary.

Kensington Gore, S.W.7.

ROYAL MANCHESTER COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

Founded 1893. Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1923.

Patron: HER MAJESTY QUEEN ALEXANDRA.

President: H.R.H. THE DUKE OF YORK, K.G.

Principal: Dr. ADOLPH BRODSKY.

Registrar: STANLEY WITHERS, M.A.

Students are required to enter upon a complete course of Musical instruction, and are not admitted for a shorter period than one year.

Fee for the year, £36. Special fee for Organ Course, £30, and for Wind Instrument Course, £18.

Systematic Course for the Training of Teachers included in the curriculum.

The Prospectus, with Scholarship information, Diploma Regulations, and Entry Forms, on application.

MR. HERBERT HODGE will give an Organ Recital (1.8.6th), at St. Nicholas Cole Abbey, on June 3, and every Tuesday at 1 p.m.

THE ASSOCIATED BOARD OF THE R.A.M. AND THE R.C.M. FOR LOCAL EXAMINATIONS IN MUSIC.

Patron: HIS MAJESTY THE KING.
President: H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, K.G.

LOCAL CENTRE EXAMINATIONS (SYLLABUS A).

Written Examinations held in March and November at all Centres. Practical Examinations in March-April and November-December at all Centres. Entries for the November-December Examinations close Wednesday, October 15th, 1924.

"SCHOOL" EXAMINATIONS (SYLLABUS B).

Held throughout the British Isles three times a year, viz., March-April, June-July, and October-November. Entries for the October-November Examinations close Wednesday, October 8th, 1924.

ELOCUTION EXAMINATIONS will be held at certain fixed centres in March-April, June-July, and October-November each year. For full particulars see special Elocution Syllabus.

Examination Music and Scales for Pianoforte and for Violin, and Past Written Papers are published officially by the Board, and can be obtained from the Central Office, or through any Music Seller.

The Board offers annually SIX EXHIBITIONS tenable at The R.A.M. or The R.C.M. for Two or Three Years.

Syllabuses A and B, Elocution Syllabus, Entry Forms, and any further information, may be obtained post-free from:

THE SECRETARY, 14 & 15, Bedford Square, London, W.C.1.

MANCHESTER SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

Principal: ALBERT J. CROSS, A.R.A.M.

FOUNDED 1892.

The oldest Institution in Manchester devoted solely to the interests of Music.

All branches of Music taught. Day and Evening Private Lessons. Opera Class. Full Orchestral Class. Intermediate and Elementary String Orchestras, Classes for Ensemble Playing, Elocution, Choral Singing, Harmony, &c.

Single Subjects taught. Prospectus from 16, Albert Square.

GLASGOW ATHENÆUM SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

SESSION 1923-24.

The Session consists of Three Terms: September 10 to December 1, December 3 to March 8, and March 10 to June 6.

Complete Musical Curriculum. Day and Evening Classes. Single Subjects taught.

Prospectus and further information may be obtained from:

STUART S. FORSYTH, Secretary,
ATHENÆUM BUILDINGS, GLASGOW.

96 and 95, WIMPOLE STREET, W.1.

TOBIAS MATTHAY PIANOFORTE SCHOOL

Instruction under his teachers, and under his own supervision.

Open to Professionals and Amateurs, and also to Children.

The Staff consists of thirty-nine senior Professors of thorough experience and platform reputation, all trained by the founder.

Special Short Courses for Teachers during term and vacation.

LECTURE-LESSON Class by Mr. MATTHAY on the practical teaching of Technique and Interpretation, diagnosis and correction of faults, musical analysis and synthesis, &c., alternate Wednesday evenings.

Mr. FREDERICK MOORE takes alternate Wednesdays.

COMPLETE TRAINING COURSE FOR TEACHERS.

(Approved by the Teachers' Registration Council.)

This ONE-YEAR Course may be joined at the beginning of ANY TERM.

For further particulars please apply, Mrs. MARION COLE, Secretary.

Tobias Matthay Pianoforte School,

96 and 95, Wimpole Street, W.1.

PRELIMINARY NOTICE.

A VACATION COURSE for Teachers will be held early in September, under the direction of Mr. Ernest Read. Particulars will be announced later.

Mrs. Marion Cole, Secretary.

BIRMINGHAM & MIDLAND INSTITUTE SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

Visitor ... Sir EDWARD ELGAR, O.M., Mus.Doc., LL.D.
Director ... GRANVILLE BANTOCK, M.A., D.Mus. (Ed.).

SESSION 1923-1924.

The Session consists of AUTUMN TERM (September 20 to December 18); WINTER TERM (January 19 to April 9); SUMMER TERM (April 11 to July 9).

Instruction in all branches of Music, Students' Choir and Orchestra, Chamber Music, Students' Rehearsals, and Concerts.

Prospectus and further information may be obtained from—

H. M. FRANCIS, Secretary.

Paradise Street, Birmingham.

THE LONDON CHOIR SCHOOL

(CHAMPION HILL SCHOOL).

GROVE LANE, DENMARK HILL, S.E.5.

(Twelve minutes from Victoria, L.B.S.C. Railway;

L.C.C. Trams 56, 58, 62, and 84 pass the door.)

Director: CARLTON BORROW, A.R.C.O.

Solo and Chorus Boys for Services, Oratorios, Madrigal Societies, Concerts, &c. Solo and Chorus Altos (male), Tenors, and Basses for Temporary Engagements.

Telephone: Brixton 2124.

Apply, Secretary.

THE LONDON SCHOOL OF SINGING.

20A, HENRIETTA STREET, CAVENDISH SQUARE, W.1.

The School provides complete instruction and training in all branches of Vocal Art, for both Professional and Amateur; and specialises in the production and artistic development of the voice.

A special short course for beginners has now been arranged.

Auditions and advice free.

Lessons in Pianoforte and Theory.

For particulars and appointment please apply to Secretary.

Telephone: Mayfair 3819.

THE LONDON COLLEGE FOR CHORISTERS.

6 and 7, BLOMFIELD CRESCENT, PADDINGTON, W.2.

Founder: Mr. JAMES BATES.

Solo Boys and Chorus Boys supplied at short notice for Church Services, &c. Telephone: Paddington 5990. Sec., ARTHUR G. BATES.

JOHN B. WOOD, MUS. BAC.

C. G. WOOD, MUS. BAC., L.R.A.M.

THE IDEAL CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

EXPERT TUTORS.

THEORY OF MUSIC, HARMONY,
COMPOSITION, ART OF TEACHING,
INTERPRETATION,
FORM AND MEMORY TRAINING
FOR MUSICIANS.

Correspondents from all parts of the world and ex-students of the Principal Musical Institutions have been enrolled as pupils.

Write,

6, BOLTON ROAD, FARNWORTH, BOLTON.

WIGMORE HALL STUDIOS.—These splendidly appointed Studios are the recognised centre of the best musical activities in London. Forty-five rooms. Grand Piano in every room. Lift, telephone and every comfort and convenience. Low inclusive rates. One morning or afternoon per week the minimum time arranged for. Apply, 38, Wigmore Street, W.1.

MR. FIELD HYDE'S SUMMER HOLIDAY COURSE

Will be held at LIVERPOOL,
JULY 31ST TO AUGUST 9TH.

An intensive ten days' Holiday Course, under ideal conditions, covering

The Whole Art of Voice-Training.
The Teaching of Interpretation.

THIS COURSE IS UNIVERSALLY ADMITTED TO BE UNIQUE.

There is nothing else like it for all who are interested in Voice-Training from any standpoint. A fuller advertisement will appear in the July issue of this journal, or particulars may be obtained from the Secretary,

FIELD HYDE VACATION COURSE,
34, UPPER GEORGE STREET, LONDON, W.1.

PIANO PLAYING KEPT UP without keyboard practising

NOT the least of the many benefits which the use of my System confers upon pianists is that of being able to keep "in practice" without keyboard practising.

Even when circumstances make keyboard work impossible for several months, definite progress is often made in touch, increased powers of execution, and in general command over the keyboard.

This is one of the many reasons why pianists of all grades of proficiency take my Postal Course.

Many eminent musicians, including the late SIR FREDERICK BRIDGE, have used and highly recommended my System—the ORIGINAL POSTAL SYSTEM. More than 17,000 successful Pupils add their testimony.

"From Brain to Keyboard"
Macdonald Smith's System
of Pianoforte Playing.

My illustrated book, "Light on Pianoforte Playing," will be gladly sent to any pianist. It fully explains the principles and advantages of the methods used in the System. When applying, please do not omit to state whether comparative beginner, average, or advanced pianist. The book will be sent free of charge, and post free.

M. MACDONALD SMITH, 19, BLOOMSBURY Sq., LONDON, W.C.1.

MENTAL-HEARING

How to acquire it.

By WALTER H. WATSON, F.R.C.O.

THE ability to HEAR MENTALLY seems to be possessed by few students, as the following from a well-known Musical Paper proves:

"Harmony on paper is a dead thing except to those who can hear what they see—the possession of about one student in a thousand."

Mental-hearing will enable the student to hear in his mind the sounds of the notes he is writing on the paper; they will not be mere soundless signs, but each will convey a definite sound to him, and until they do so all written harmony is a waste of time.

The acquisition of Mental-hearing will materially assist the practical work of the pianoforte and organ student, for if the student can hear mentally he will be encouraged to study mentally. Mental-hearing is the key to mental study, and Mental study is the key to more rapid progress. The mastery of this subject will also improve the student's sight-reading, memorising, and transposing.

Mental-hearing is a necessity for candidates for Diplomas such as L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., A.R.C.O., &c., and this work will also be of the greatest help to pupils preparing aural tests for the Associated Board Examinations.

Particulars of Correspondence Course of seven Lessons from

W. H. WATSON, GORDON COTTAGE, ELGIN.

Musical Education is admittedly incomplete without such a knowledge of Harmony as will furnish the means for understanding music in respect of the Chords, Ornaments, Keys, Modulations, and Phrases.

Text-book Harmony is only concerned with Figured Basses, and the accompaniment of simple melodies. The more generally needed use of Harmony for purposes of analysis and interpretation will be found set forth in simple and easily understood language in the 112 pages of

HARMONY FOR PIANISTS

or Harmony in Pianoforte Idiom without written exercises

By DR. PERCY RIDEOUT, D.Mus., Lond.

A Course of Ten Correspondence Lessons, and Examination Papers.

For further particulars call or write:

THE CHARLES A. GILLET
Pianoforte School,

11, SOUTH MOLTON ST., BOND ST., LONDON, W.1.

PAPER WORK BY MUS. B., F.R.C.O.

OVER 1100 SPECIMEN WORKINGS.

"Your lessons and ideas splendid."

"Your excellent models make my attempts look cold."

RECENT SUCCESSES.

2s. 6d. per lesson and postage.

"E. B.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

CORRESPONDENCE or ORAL COURSES

In preparation of all PAPER WORK required for Mus. B., R.C.O., R.A.M., R.C.M., and T.C.L. Examinations.

Also Courses of preparation for the AURAL TESTS of the above-named Examinations.

GEO. H. SKAER, Mus. B., DUNELM.,
50, Park Road, Wandsworth, S.W.18.

MODERN CORR. COLLEGE

Principal: ARTHUR McALISTER, B.A. (CANTAB.).

LABOR OMNIA VINCIT.

YOU

CAN GET TO THE

TOP

ONE FEE
for the WHOLE SERIES.

Final Mus. Bac.

Exercise.

1st Mus. Bac.

Matric.

F.R.C.O.

A.R.C.O.

MATRIC.

104

F.R.C.O. and Mus. Bac. :

What would they be WORTH to YOU?

"ST. MORITZ," 201, ILKESTON ROAD, NOTTINGHAM.

MODERN CORR. COLLEGE

Principal: ARTHUR McALISTER, B.A. (CANTAB.).

A. Mus. T.C.L. .

No practical work required.

RECENT SUCCESS:

Art of Teaching	-	-	-	-	85%
Counterpoint	-	-	-	-	94%
Rudiments	-	-	-	-	89%

A.R.C.O. . .

Success at the 5th attempt.

After failing four times (under other tuition) a student joined the M.C.C., March, 1923,

PASSED, July, 1923.

January, 1924. SUCCESSES

6

F.R.C.O. . .

A SUCCESSFUL STUDENT WRITES:

"The whole Course can be well recommended as a RAPID and CERTAIN WAY to SUCCESS."

MEMORY TRAINING. SIGHT-READING.

Guarantee Courses:

ELOCUTION - Aural Training and Sight-Singing.

SINGING - Musical Appreciation, &c.

FREE Guide to Matric., Mus. Bac., A.R.C.O., L.R.A.M., &c.

"ST. MORITZ," 201, ILKESTON ROAD, NOTTINGHAM.

THE REAL USE of RELAXATION and its Control fully Developed

AND THE

ONLY teaching based on the application of "PURE WEIGHT TOUCH" to ALL phases of technique, ensuring REMARKABLE BEAUTY of TONE with COMPLETE CONTROL OVER EVERY POSSIBLE GRADATION, combined with INCREASED SPEED, GREATER EASE, REDUCED PRACTICE. There is no drudgery whatever. STIFFNESS and FATIGUE RAPIDLY OVERCOME.

12 SPECIALISED CORRESPONDENCE LESSONS WITH THE CLOSEST INDIVIDUAL ATTENTION TO EACH PUPIL.

The enormous number of letters of appreciation from pianists of all grades, including members of the musical profession holding diplomas from the leading institutions, and also graduates of the Universities, PROVE CONCLUSIVELY that the Gillett teaching is acknowledged a DECIDED STEP FORWARD.

Take your first step in the right direction to-day, and write or call for FREE BROCHURE and testimonials.

Private Lessons and Consultations Day and Evening.

CHARLES A. GILLETT

PIANOFORTE SCHOOL

11, SOUTH MOLTON STREET, NEW BOND STREET,
LONDON, W.1.

UNIVERSITY OF DURHAM. INTERMEDIATE MUS. BAC.

Unsuccessful Candidates should send their workings for criticism and advice free of charge.

"HINTS TO CANDIDATES" (a series which may make all the difference), 10s. 6d. post free.

"R.," Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

DEGREES IN MUSIC.

Oxford Preliminary Arts and Durham Matriculation.

Also B.A. and B.Sc.

EXPERT TUITION BY CORRESPONDENCE.

For terms, testimonials, &c., address

Mr. J. CHARLESTON, B.A.,

14, ELSHAM ROAD, KENSINGTON, W.14.

L.R.A.M. AND A.R.C.M.

TEACHING SINGING AND ELOCUTION EXAMINATIONS.

Numerous Successes both in Singing and Elocution Exams. at
L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M.

Special Correspondence Course and personal tuition.
Complete preparation.

Also Special Short Instructional Courses in Voice-Production and
The Art of Teaching Singing, to meet particular requirements of the General Practitioner in Music.

MR. W. LEE WEBSTER, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M.

INGLESIDE, PARK ROAD, NOTTINGHAM.

MUSICAL COMPOSITIONS REVISED.

LYRICS SET TO MUSIC, MELODIES HARMONIZED, MUSIC TRANSPOSED
AND COPIED, BAND PARTS WRITTEN, MSS. PREPARED FOR PUBLICA-TION BY A MASTER HAND, ACCOMPANIMENTS OF DISTINCTION
WRITTEN TO SONGS.

For terms, write, A. CARRINGTON BRIGGS,
Glennholme, The Common, Hesse, E. Yorks.

ROYAL ALBERT HALL, LONDON.

ANNUAL

Commemoration Festival Performance IN MEMORY 1914-1918

WILL TAKE PLACE ON

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 11TH NEXT (Armistice Night).

A WORLD REQUIEM

Conducted by the Composer, JOHN FOULDS.

Proceeds will be devoted to Earl Haig's appeal for ex-Service men of all ranks (British Legion).

MEN SINGERS WANTED FOR CHOIR

(Ladies' section now full).

Music provided. Membership entails attendance at ten rehearsals at least. Inquirers kindly state experience, and address,

Hon. Choir-Superintendent, JOHN WATERER,
50c, Crooms Hill, S.E.10.

Will members of Cenotaph Choir who have not yet heard from Superintendent, please send their names and addresses to him?

NOTTINGHAM

COMPETITIVE MUSICAL FESTIVAL.

Thursday, Friday, and Saturday,

OCTOBER 23rd, 24th, and 25th, 1924.

ADJUDICATORS:

SIR RICHARD TERRY, D.Mus.

HARVEY GRACE. GRANVILLE HUMPHREYS.
FREDERIC DAWSON, SPENCER DYKE, F.R.A.M.

Full particulars published in the SYLLABUS (price 6d.), to be obtained from the Hon. Sec.,

W. F. BARTON, 28, Park Row, Nottingham.

LONDON SEMI-NATIONAL EISTEDDFOD, CENTRAL HALL, WESTMINSTER.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 20th, 1924.

MALE-VOICE CHOIR - PRIZE £75.
(Consolation Gifts of £5 5s. and £3 3s. to Conductors of 2nd and 3rd Choirs.)

MIXED CHOIRS - PRIZE £25.

CHAMPIONSHIP VIOLIN SOLO - PRIZE £10 10s.

SYLLABUS (Post free, two penny stamps) of Hon. Secs.,

J. DAVIES, 107, Falmouth Road, London, S.E.1.

D. B. JONES, 24, Distin Street, Lambeth, London, S.E.11.

COUNTY BOROUGH OF HUDDERSFIELD.

"MRS. SUNDERLAND" MUSICAL COMPETITIONS.

SPECIAL PRIZES FOR ORIGINAL MUSICAL COMPOSITIONS.

Open to Natives of Yorkshire or ten years' Residents.

QUARTET FOR MIXED VOICES, suitable for Competition
Test-Piece (unaccompanied). First Prize, £5 5s., and £5 towards cost of publication. Second Prize, £2 2s.

INSTRUMENTAL TRIO (Pianoforte, Violin, and Violon-cello), suitable for Competition Test-Piece. First Prize, £5 5s., and £5 towards cost of publication. Second Prize,
£2 2s.

HYMN TUNE (to specified words). First Prize, £1 1s.
Second Prize, 10s. 6d.

Compositions to be forwarded to the Secretary not later than July 1st.

For further particulars apply to

T. THORP, Secretary, Technical College, Huddersfield.

“Could not memorise a single note . . . .
Can now play Scriabin from memory.”

THIS is just one letter typical of hundreds received from pianists and organists who have overcome their memorising difficulties through taking the Mackinnon Musical Memory Course.

Players who have previously been unable to master the simplest piece, after taking the Course learn difficult music easily and quickly. And this is not all. The thorough grasp of the music given by the Mackinnon System of Memory Training banishes nervousness. Players who have never been able to do themselves justice before an audience play without fear of breakdown.

Technique is improved. A new sense of freedom results in full artistic self-expression for the first time.

The Course consists of Six clearly written Correspondence Lessons. Only fifteen minutes' daily practice is required. There is no drudgery of any kind.

Send Coupon below for free booklet, to-day.

MACKINNON'S MUSICAL MEMORY COURSE.

EMPIRE HOUSE, 175, PICCADILLY, W.1.

IN SIX POSTAL LESSONS - FEE, £3 : 3 : 0

— GUARANTEE —

If within four weeks from the receipt of the first lesson, and before the receipt of the second, any Student feels that he or she has not made definite progress as a result of taking the Course, such Student's fees will be refunded in full.

Just a few of the appreciative letters received daily. You can be equally successful :

From a Cathedral Organist.

“Many students of the organ find it difficult to accompany the Psalms satisfactorily. To those who find it so, I recommend this memory Course.”

From a Pianist.

“Your method makes one feel it is impossible to break down.”

From a Teacher.

“Prior to your lessons I found it impossible to memorise any piece. I can now learn and play with confidence and ease.”

From a Church Organist.

“Of the greatest assistance, cannot fail to play from memory where your instructions are followed.”

POST THIS COUPON TO-DAY.....

MACKINNON'S “MUSICAL MEMORY,” Empire House, 175, Piccadilly, W.1.

Please send me, free, and post free, your booklet on “MEMORY TRAINING.”

Name.....

Address.....

INDIVIDUAL COACHING by
Correspondence, in Paper Work,
for all Degrees and Diplomas in Music.

Preparation may now be commenced
for L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M., September, also for Durham Mus. Bac., 1st and
Final, September.

Revision Lessons for July, A. and
F.R.C.O., and Trinity College Diplomas.

DR. NORMAN SPRANKLING

Mus. Doc. (London), L.R.A.M.,

48, LINDEN ROAD, REDLAND, BRISTOL.

'PHONE: BRISTOL 3033.

The extraordinary success of
Dr. Sprankling's System is due very largely to the fact that the tuition is entirely INDIVIDUAL.

Instead of forming a fixed and rigid
"Course" of lessons, each lesson is sent with a view to the special requirements
of the individual student.

By this method, all weak points are at once concentrated upon, and each student is individually given a grip of everything essential to success, in the shortest possible time.

PERSONAL LESSONS ALSO IN BRISTOL AND LONDON.

CALISTHENICS

FOR THE MUSCLES USED IN SINGING

As taught and perfected for 20 years.

Astonishing increase of POWER, QUALITY, RANGE,
and EASE of SINGING assured by five minutes' practice
twice (better three times) daily.

By Correspondence, Fee £2 2s., for Three Lessons.

No more sore or relaxed throat, or strained voice.

THOS. CHURCH SAXBY, L.Mus.T.C.L.,
UNDERCLIFFE, LEWES.

MR. ALBERT GARCIA

LESSONS IN VOICE PRODUCTION AND SINGING.

Special Coaching in Opera, Oratorio, and for Recitals.

Pupils prepared for A.R.C.M. and L.R.A.M. Exams.

"A number of Mr. Albert Garcia's pupils sang excellently at the concert which they gave on Wednesday evening. It was particularly pleasant to hear voices so well placed and well poised, smooth and even in tone from the lowest to the highest notes, showing a control which too few learn to exercise."—Daily Telegraph.

"One takes it that a concert by pupils fulfils its object if it demonstrates—as the one given at Wigmore Hall by singers studying with Mr. Albert Garcia certainly did—the excellence of that master's method."—Era.

"Mr. Garcia—himself a fine artist and the inheritor of a great tradition and a great name—has some most promising pupils, and such singers as Miss Rosa Burn and Mr. Frederick Lippold show in what an excellent school they have been trained."—Daily Telegraph.

For Auditions, Appointments, &c., write,
59, Queen's Road, St. John's Wood, N.W.8.
(Hampstead 4597.)

MR. CHARLES TREE

Will give a few Special Lessons to any keenly interested who will be up for the Exhibition.

"GOLDEN LEGEND."—Portsmouth, May 7, 1924.—"Mr. Tree infused a wealth of dramatic feeling into Lucifer."—Times.
Newcastle Chronicle.—"The art of Mr. Tree is as unmistakable as it is all-embracing."

Mr. Tree begs to contradict the rumour that his lectures prevent his accepting Concert Engagements. The lectures are given to show that the work of 35 years has no ill-effect on the correctly placed voice, and to help both teacher and student to a better understanding of "correct placement." To-day not 2% of voices last even twenty years.

Birmingham Post, April 19, 1924.—"Is he an exceptional singer or is he the product of a method that can readily be imparted to all and sundry?" Here is the point—"True speech into song" can be imparted to all who can be singers. All of us cannot be singers in the true sense of the word, but there ought to be hundreds of thousands singing with ease at the age of 60 years or more."

"How to ACQUIRE EASE OF VOICE-PRODUCTION" AND ITS COMPANION, "BEL CANTO" EXERCISES, 5/2 and 3/7 post free.
 (If difficult to obtain, write direct.)

Accommodation may be had at—

Bolton Mansions Hotel, Bolton Gardens, S.W.5.

Courtfield Gardens Hotel, Courtfield Gardens, S.W.5.

New Address: 12, Bolton Gardens, S.W.5. (Kensington 5852.)

MR. W. H. BREARE

VOCAL ADVISER AND TEACHER OF SINGING
 TO STUDENTS AND THE PROFESSION.

Author of "Vocalism," "Elocution: Its First Principles," "Vocal Faults and their Remedies." Now Published: "Vocal Technique: How it feels to Sing."

3s. 6d. each. Postage: 1 Book, 9d.; 2 or 3, 1s.; Set of 4, 1s. 3d.

"The most complete guide to singing in English."—"Lancelot," in the Referee.

"One of the sanest of sane expositions."—Musical Courier, N.Y.

"Is a reliable expert in all branches."—Gentlewoman.

"A magnificent guide to both teachers and students."—Eastern Morning News.

"Do not hesitate to commend."—Glasgow Herald.

"His technical knowledge is minute, wide, and accurate: what he has to say is well worthy of consideration by public singers and music teachers."—Aberdeen Free Press.

"Common-sense in all he utters."—Leeds Mercury.

"Is an acknowledged authority. . . ."—Western Morning News.

"I have not the slightest fear of contradiction when I say that no one knows more about the voice and vocal production than Mr. W. H. Breare."—"Counterpoint," in the Newcastle Journal.

Address: "HERALD" BUILDINGS, HARROGATE.

TO CONCERT DIRECTORS.

ARTHUR MANGELSDORFF

(British-born).

The well-known Pianist is arranging a Recital Tour of the various seaside and holiday resorts.

He will be pleased to negotiate for a Recital or part programme.

Managers of suitable Concert-Hall also please send scale of charges for hiring.

Please address all communications to

ARTHUR ELLARSHAW, 497, Coventry Road, Birmingham.

THE TECHNIQUER

FOR STRETCH, STRENGTH, AND SUPPLENESS.

We have . . . investigated . . . 'THE TECHNIQUER' . . . and it seems to us it entirely meets the needs of an instrumentalist in a scientific and reliable manner. The inventor . . . backs his claims by . . . convincing testimonials from such well-known men as Lamond, Pouishoff, Dyke, Walenn, and many others. To those who have small stretch or but little time for practice, we advise they should look into the matter for themselves. Mr. Pitcher . . . an L.R.A.M. as a public performer, approaches the matter from a highly scientific and experienced point of view."—Extract from The Strand, March, 1924.

"Hand Development," with numerous photos, 1s. 6d.

Send for full particulars, &c.—

Miss F. J. FITCH, A.R.C.M., A.R.C.O. (Sec.),

21, Boundary Road, N.W.8.

'Phone: Maida Vale 1715.

TO PIANISTS, ORGANISTS, VIOLINISTS, ETC.

The "Simplexa" Pocket Finger Trainer

(Registered).

A MOST EFFICIENT APPLIANCE FOR INCREASING STRETCH, INDEPENDENCE, FLEXIBILITY, AND STRENGTH OF FINGERS.

Post free 1s. 6d., with full instructions.

DELAHAYE & CO., 16, SOUTHWARK STREET, LONDON BRIDGE.

PROFESSIONAL NOTICES.

MISS LYDIA JOHN

(A.R.A.M., L.R.A.M.), CONTRALTO.

Concerts, Oratorios, Organ Recitals, &c.

Recital-Lectures of Folk-Songs, Elizabethan Songs, &c.

Pupils received for Voice-Production and Singing.

Prepared for L.R.A.M., Associated Board, &c.

15, Albion Road, London, N.W.6.

Tel.: Hampstead, N.W.6.

JAMES BARR

Alto Lay-Vicar (Soprano) Westminster Abbey.

Accompanist. Lessons in Sight-Reading.

Professional Coach. Opera, Oratorio, &c.

12, Salford Road, S.W.2.

'Phone: Streatham 384.

FRANK CARLETON

(TENOR).

CONCERTS, ORATORIOS, ETC.

Address: 58, Hazel Street, Audenshaw, near Manchester.

MR. HORACE CURTIS

(Tenor Soloist, St. Michael's, Cornhill).

Oratorios, &c.

34, Ravenslea Road, Balham, S.W.12.

WM. J. HIGGINBOTTOM

L.R.A.M. (Perf.), BARITONE.

Oratorios and Concerts. Cultivation of Singing Voice.

Complete Preparation L.R.A.M. Diploma.

Old Whittington, Chesterfield, Derbyshire.

ARTHUR LEES

BASS.

Concerts, Recitals, Masonics, Oratorios, &c.

"Ravenscroft," 120, Waldegrave Road, Brighton.

MR. HERBERT TRACEY

BASS.

8, Cavendish Mansions, E.5.

London Wall 4033.

MISS THELMA DANDRIDGE (A.R.C.M.), 'CELLIST.

Concerts, Pupils, &c., apply to "Inversnaid," Chinbrook Road, Grove Park, S.E.12. ('Phone: Lee Green 1707.)

LEONARD SALISBURY (A.R.C.M.)

Founder of "The Gresham Singers,"

Receives Pupils in Voice-Culture and Singing,

at 14, Hanover Street, Regent Street, W.1.

'Tele.: Streatham 2525.

ARTHUR MANGELSDORFF

SOLO PIANIST.

For terms, vacant dates, &c., apply to

ARTHUR ELLARSHAW, 497, Coventry Road, Birmingham.

THE TRAINING OF TEACHERS.

CORRESPONDENCE COURSES IN

VOICE-PRODUCTION, covering the whole subject.

FORM AND TEACHING, TOUCH, ACCOMPANIMENT,

MUSICAL APPRECIATION, AND AURAL TRAINING.

Nearly 1000 Successes at L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., &c.

MR. R. J. PITCHER, Mus. Bac., F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M.
 (Double Dip. Singing and Piano), L.R.A.M., Class A, Performer and Teacher.

Prof. Singing G.S.M., 1905-1915. Special Lect. on Mus. Appreciation to L.C.C.

"Recit. and its Rendering," 1s. 6d. "Vade Mecum for Singers," 6d.

Send for prospectus, 21, Boundary Road, N.W.8.

'Phone: 1715 Maida Vale.

MUSICAL REVISER TO MESSRS. NOVELLO FOR THIRTY-NINE YEARS.

COMPOSERS' MSS.

REVISED AND PREPARED FOR PRINTING

H. ELLIOT BUTTON, "Harewood," Ardwick Road, N.W.2.

* * * The late Sir HUBERT PARRY and Sir FREDERICK BRIDGE permitted their names to appear, along with those of the following composers to whom reference is kindly permitted:—Sir EDWARD ELGAR, O.M.; Sir HENRY WALFORD DAVIES, Mus. Doc.

MR. J. PERCY BAKER, Mus.B., Dunelm.,

F.R.A.M., gives Postal Tuition and prepares for Examinations.

Personal Lessons (Pianoforte and Theory), at 14, Hanover Square, W.1.

Address, 12, Longley Road, Tooting Graveney, S.W.17.

DR. ALLISON instructed by Post Candidates who OBTAINED DEGREES OF MUS. B. and Mus. D. at Oxford, Cambridge, Dublin, London, and Durham Universities, Diplomas of L.R.A.M. (April, 1924), L.R.A.M., F.R.C.O., L. Mus. L.C.M., A.R.C.M., Gold Medals, Silver Medals, Scholarships, Prizes, Certificates, and valuable professional appointments. Dr. Allison is willing to teach those who neither require nor desire to pass examinations. Harmony, Counterpoint, Orchestration, and Analysis of Compositions by Post, to correspondents anywhere. Personal instruction in Theory, Singing, and Piano. 24, Park Range, Victoria Park, Manchester.

REVISION OF MUSICAL COMPOSITIONS.

Dr. Horton Allison, 24, Park Range, Victoria Park, Manchester.

CAPTAIN PERCY BAKER, M.C., F.R.C.O., L. Mus. T.C.L. (Author of "Compend of Musical Knowledge," "Studies in History and Form," &c.). Specialist in Tuition by post for T.C.L. and R.C.O. Essay Models, Sight Reading Courses. Study Aids, 9d. Studies in Modulation, 3s.

Send for interesting Pamphlets on Methods.

HAZELDENE, TEWKESBURY.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:—

- (1.) L.R.A.M. Paper Work.
- (2.) A.R.C.M. Paper Work.
- (3.) Interesting Courses of Study in Rudiments, Harmony, Form, &c.

L.R.A.M. Exams. 1910-24 ... 244 Correspondence Pupils successful.
A.R.C.M. Exams. 1914-24 ... 64 " " "

MR. E. H. BIBBY, Mus. Bac., L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M.,
Waterloo Buildings, Piccadilly, Manchester.

In response to many requests, MR. BIBBY begs to announce that he has prepared the following additional CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:

- (1.) The "Mus. Bac." Degree.
- (2.) A.R.C.O. and F.R.C.O. Paper Work.
- (3.) A.T.C.L. and L.T.C.L. Paper Work.
- (4.) The Associated Board Examinations in Rudiments, Harmony, and Counterpoint.

(Address as above.)

MISS J. BLAKE, A.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. (Regd.)
Teacher of Singing, prepares pupils L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. Exams., as Teacher or Performer. Highest recommendations.—Studio, 139, New Bond Street, W.1.

L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. SPECIAL COACHING by
ARTHUR ELLARSHAW, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. Pianist.
Paper-work Postal. Address, 497, Coventry Road, Birmingham.

DR. A. C. PHILLIPS EMBLING, Mus. Doc.,
Dunelm. (1921), Mus. Bac., Oxon., F.R.C.O. Lessons by post for Diplomas and Degrees. 64, Wokingham Road, Reading.

FREDERICK GREEN, L.R.A.M., ETC. Voice
Specialist, Vocal Coach, and Adjudicator. Preparation for L.R.A.M. c/o Rushworth & Dreaper, 11, Islington, Liverpool.

DR. CUTHBERT HARRIS, Mus. Doc., Dunelm.,
F.R.C.O. SPECIALIST IN CORRESPONDENCE
TUITION. 405 Successes in Mus. D., Mus. B., F.R.C.O., and
A.R.C.O., &c. 58, Avondale Road, Gorleston-on-Sea.

DR. HARRIS REVISES AND PREPARES MSS.
FOR PUBLICATION. Accompaniments to Songs written.

MISS H. HEALE COACHES for all EXAM-
INATIONS IN MUSIC (at private residence or at West-End Studio), in Pianoforte, Harmony, Counterpoint, Fugue, Form,
Orchestration, "Teaching," Modulation, Transposition, &c. For
Terms, &c., apply Dunraven House, 41, Albert Bridge Road, S.W.11.

HERBERT HODGE, F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M.,
Organist and Choirmaster, St. Nicholas Cole Abbey, Queen
Victoria Street, London, has, since 1908, made a speciality of coaching Candidates for the Organ Playing Examinations of the Royal College of Organists, and can arrange a private course of instruction
(for single lessons) to organists visiting London, at St. Nicholas
Cole Abbey. Many recent F.R.C.O. and A.R.C.O. successes.
5, Streatham Place, S.W.2. Telephone: Streatham 2195.

DR. A. G. IGGULDEN, Mus. Doc. Dunelm., F.R.C.O.,
SPECIALIST IN CORRESPONDENCE COACHING.
Latest Successes: Durham, March, 1924—2 in 1st Mus. Bac. Sept., 1923
—2 out of the 3 Mus. Doc. passes, and 4 out of the 6 Final Mus. Bac.
passes. Also 2 Exercises, after prelim. course in composition. Over 150 Successes at Durham alone. The Durdans, Reigate.

DR. KNOWLES (Manchester 1919, Durham 1920)
specialises in preparing candidates by post for the Paper-work of all examinations in music. Solutions, with methods of working.
Address, 45, Churchgate, Bolton, Lancs.

MR. GORDON JACOB, A.R.C.M., gives lessons
personally or by correspondence in Harmony, Counterpoint,
Fugue, Form, and all theoretical subjects.
Special Course in Modern Orchestration.
MUSIC SCORED for any combination of instruments required.
Incidental Music, &c., written or arranged.
1, Homefield Road, S.W.19.

DR. F. J. KARN (Mus. Bac. Cantab.; Mus. Doc.
Toronto) continues to give lessons in Harmony and other
Theoretical subjects, and prepares for all Musical Examinations.
Compositions revised and Analyses written. Candidates prepared by
Dr. Karn have gained the Mus. Bac. and Mus. Doc. degrees at the Universities and diplomas from the Musical Colleges.
Address: 106, Haverstock Hill, London, N.W.3.

MADAME LARKCOM, F.R.A.M., Prof. Singing,
R. A. Music, has resumed her lessons in Singing at the Wigmore Hall Studios, 40, Wigmore Street, W.1.

J. H. MAKINSON, F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M., A.T.C.L.
Correspondence Tuition in Paper Work (T.C.L. and other Diplomas). Terms moderate. Kent House, Lake Road, Ambleside.

MISS F. HELENA MARKS, Author of "The Sonata: Its Form and Meaning," prepares for L.R.A.M.,
A.R.C.M., and all other examinations, Pianoforte, Harmony, "Form
and Teaching," &c. Personal or Correspondence Lessons in all Paper-Work subjects, including those for L.R.A.M., "Aural Training
and Sight-Singing," and A.R.C.M. in "The Teaching of Musical Appreciation," &c. Pupils received and visited for the Pianoforte.
Many recent successes L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., &c.
10, Matheson Road, London, W.14.

DR. H. H. L. MIDDLETON, Mus. Doc., F.R.C.O.,
L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. Twenty-five years' experience in Private
Tuition and Coaching for Degrees. More than 500 of Dr. Middleton's
Pupils have obtained Degrees at the Universities, R.A.M., R.C.M.,
and R.C.O. Address, 60, Berners Street, W.1.

W. J. FREDERICK PUGH, L.R.A.M., Pre-
pares for L.R.A.M. (Aural Culture and Voice Culture Diplomas), A.R.C.M. (Appreciation Diploma). Recent Successes, 34,
Wilmington Avenue, Chiswick, W.4.

MADAME MERRITT ROGERS coaches for A.L.C.M. Pianoforte, Violin, Singing, £2 2s. per term inclusive. Successes 100%. 10, Tillotson Road, Valentines, Ilford.

DR. TAYLOR'S POSTAL PUPILS HAVE passed Mus. Bac. 1st and final. A.R.C.O.; L.R.A.M.;
A.T.C.L. Pupil gained the Stillie Bursary at Glasgow for Counterpoint. Latest success, A.R.C.O. for 1924. Portland
Place, Lancaster.

DR. PERCY WOOD, Mus. Doc. Oxon., F.R.C.O.
SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:

- (1) Elementary Harmony and Counterpoint.
- (2) F.R.C.O. and A.R.C.O.
- (3) L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M.
- (4) Mus. Bac. Degree.

Several recent Mus. B. successes at Durham.

R.C.O. EXAMINER says: "Your system is undoubtedly an excellent one."

SUCCESS GUARANTEED—given any pupils with the requisite musical ability for the examination in view.

R.C.O. SUCCESSSES IN PAPER WORK:

6 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1914.	11 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1914.
6 F.R.C.O., July, 1914.	12 A.R.C.O., July, 1914.
4 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1915.	5 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1915.
5 F.R.C.O., July, 1915.	9 A.R.C.O., July, 1915.
2 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1916.	3 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1916.
3 F.R.C.O., July, 1916.	5 A.R.C.O., July, 1916.
2 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1917.	2 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1917.
3 F.R.C.O., July, 1917.	4 A.R.C.O., July, 1917.
2 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1918.	2 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1918.
4 F.R.C.O., July, 1918.	2 A.R.C.O., July, 1918.
1 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1919.	3 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1919.
3 F.R.C.O., July, 1919.	3 A.R.C.O., July, 1919.
4 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1920.	10 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1920.
3 F.R.C.O., July, 1920.	6 A.R.C.O., July, 1920.
3 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1921.	7 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1921.
6 F.R.C.O., July, 1921.	8 A.R.C.O., July, 1921.
5 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1922.	5 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1922.
4 F.R.C.O., July, 1922.	5 A.R.C.O., July, 1922.
8 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1923.	6 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1923.
7 F.R.C.O., July, 1923.	10 A.R.C.O., July, 1923.
7 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1924.	9 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1924.

"Tralee," Warwick Road, Cliftonville, Margate.

AN EMINENT MASTER, whose Pupils are artists of International repute, will train and "present" a promising voice on exceptional terms. Write, "Influential," 195,
Oxford Street, W.1.

HENRY M. BYRON, CONCERT AND RECITAL
DIRECTOR. Established 1890. Unknown talent write.
Address: 75, Church Road, Leyton, London, E.10.

EASTBOURNE.

DOWNSMEADE BOARDING SCHOOL FOR BOYS. Modern education with special musical education if desired. Prospectus on application to the Headmaster, F. E. Wilson, F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M.

SOLO and CHORUS BOYS supplied (CITY OF LONDON CHOIR COLLEGE). Apply to Francis Sutton, F.R.C.O., St. Stephen's Walbrook, E.C.4.

DURHAM CATHEDRAL.

CHORISTERSHIPS.

Board, Lodging, Education, and Medical Attendance Free. Candidates must have a good voice and correct ear, and should be between eight and eleven years of age. Education for the Public Schools. Apply to the Rev. The Precentor, The College, Durham.

WANTED.—A SOPRANO as LEADER at St. John's Road Presbyterian Church Choir. Two Services Sunday, and one weekly practice. Salary, £30. Apply by letter to Dr. Fowles, 26, Bertram Road, Hendon.

CHRIST CHURCH, Victoria Street.—WANTED immediately, ALTOS, TENORS, and BASSES, paid and voluntary according to ability. Apply to Organist, any Wednesday or Saturday evening at 7.

WORCESTER CATHEDRAL.—There is a VACANCY for a TENOR LAY-CLERK. Applicants must be Communicant Members of the Church of England. Stipend, £100 per annum. Applications, with three recent testimonials (one to include reference to sight-reading), to The Chapter Clerk, 16, High Street, Worcester.

TENOR REQUIRED for St. Paul's, Knightsbridge. £20-£25. Good reader essential. Communicant. Write, W. Ratcliffe, 10, Waldegrave Park, Twickenham.

ST. BARNABAS, Kensington.—Required Tenor (stipend £25). Write, Ewart Dartrey, 8, Cambridge Gardens, Kilburn, N.W.6.

VOLUNTEERS WANTED.—Ladies and Gentlemen for Choir, W.C. District. Two Sunday Services; Friday practice. Also 2 Violins to help at Evening Service. Please write to Rector, Holy Trinity Rectory, 27, John Street, Bedford Row, W.C.1.

BASS WANTED. £15. Vicar, St. Martin's Vicarage, Creffield Road, West Acton.

ST. JOHN'S COLLEGE, OXFORD.

ORGAN EXHIBITION.

An election will be made to an Organ Exhibition at St. John's College, Oxford, early in June.

The duties of the Organist, who must become a member of the College in October next and must read either for the Degree of B.A. or for that of B. Mus., will be to play at the Chapel services on Sundays and weekdays throughout Term, and to train the Choir. The stipend is £90 a year, and there is no limit of age for candidates, who are requested to send their applications to the President of the College, the Rev. H. A. James, D.D., not later than June 7, with testimonials of character and of musical ability.

A musical examination will be held on Saturday, June 14, at 10 a.m., when a paper will be set on Harmony and Counterpoint: there will also be a practical examination in the afternoon, consisting of an Organ piece offered by the candidate, the accompaniment of Hymns and Anglican chants, Extemporization, Transposition, and Sight-reading.

The successful candidate will also be required to pass the College Entrance Examination held from July 3 to 5, information about which can be obtained from the Senior Tutor, St. John's College, Oxford.

WANTED.—ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER for Holy Trinity Church. Good Churchman. Hele 3-manual organ, electric blower. Salary, £95. Apply, with references, to Vicar, Exmouth.

KEEN ORGANIST-CHOIRMASTER wanted for Evangelical Church where good vocal and instrumental music is appreciated. Must be good with boys. Congregational services, orchestral and choral opportunities. Apply, with copies of references, to the Rev. G. E. Higgins, St. Luke's Vicarage, Ashmore Road, W.9.

ST. MARY'S CHURCH, SOUTHAMPTON.

WANTED—an ASSISTANT-CHOIRMASTER and ORGANIST. Applicants must be Communicants of the Church of England and under 30 years of age. Diplomas essential. Private teaching can be obtained. The selected candidate will be eligible for a certain teaching appointment in Music. Full particulars on receipt of a stamped addressed envelope to Prof. Leake, 18, The Avenue, Southampton.

WANTED in September next, ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER for the Wesleyan Church, Chapel Street, Penzance. Apply, by letter, with copies of testimonials, also stating experience and salary required, to the Rev. A. E. Nightingale, Richmond House, Penzance.

WANTED, a keen CHOIRMASTER and ORGANIST for the Royal Dockyard Church, Chatham. Salary, £40 per annum. Application to be made to the Rev. John Archibald, Royal Navy Dockyard Church.

ST. LUKE'S, Redcliffe Square.—Assistant-Organist required. Practice on a large three-manual organ offered in return for services. Apply by letter to Mr. James N. Bell, A.R.C.M., 53, Redcliffe Gardens, S.W.10.

ORGANIST, F.R.C.O., free to deputise or accept permanency. G. A. Howard, 25, Chiswick Road, W.4.

ORGANIST-CHOIRMASTER, A.R.C.O., L.R.A.M., open to deputise in or near London, week-days or Sundays, day-time or evening. Wide experience of best Church music. First-class choir-trainer. Percy Rendell, "Kenmore," Old Park Villas, Palmers Green, N.13.

AN ORGAN RECITAL will be given by Mr. Herbert Hodge at St. Stephen's Walbrook, on June 12th, at 1.10 p.m.

R.C.O. EXAMINATIONS.

SINGLE LESSONS (covering all the requirements) and PRACTICE on facsimile R.C.O. instrument. Many recent successes. Address: ALLAN BROWN, F.R.C.O., 298, High Road, Balham, S.W.17. 'Phone: Battersea 926.

FOR SALE.—Very beautiful ORGAN (Bishop), Two-Manuals, Pedals, 16 Stops. Apply, "P. H.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

WANTED.—Two-Manual ORGAN, Pneumatic Action, new or good second-hand. Church seats 200. Tenders invited. Dobinson, 132, Stockport Road, Mossley, Lancs.

ORGANS (New and Second-hand) for SALE.— Electric and pneumatic action up-to-date. Built or reconstructed. Bedwell & Son, The Cambridge Organ Works, Cambridge.

CHURCH ORGANS STANDARDISED.—Two Manuals, Pneumatic Pedals, various sizes; specially built. Five to fifteen stops. Introduced to meet the requirements of the times at minimum of cost. W. E. Richardson & Sons, Central Organ Works, Manchester, S.W.

FOR SALE.—New 2-manual Pipe Organ, 20 to 30 stops. All modern accessories. Suitable for Church or large Hall. W. E. Richardson & Sons, Central Organ Works, Manchester, S.W.

ON SALE, owing to removal.—Four-Manual Reed ORGAN, French Build, 44 Stops and Sets of Reeds. Fine workmanship. "F.R.C.O.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

LARGE CHURCH ORGAN FOR SALE.—Two- Manual (26 Stops) and Pedals. Good Condition. Available immediately, or can remain indefinitely. Complete with blower. Clarendon Hall Baptist Church, Leicester.

FOR SALE.—ORGAN, 133 Pipes, 6 Stops; over- all dimension, 12-ft.: width, 6-ft. 4-in., depth, 3-ft. Now worked by hand blower; water or electric power easily attachable. Eminently suitable for a School or Chapel. Photograph can be seen. Apply, Fryer, Kalyis House, Maidenhead.

PIPE ORGANS ENLARGED, Repaired, and Tuned. Attractive Terms. Henry Morgan & Son, Church Organ Builders, 19, Cowdrey Road, Wimbledon, London. Founded 1896.

ADJUSTABLE ORGAN BENCH for SALE, in excellent condition. Accept £6 10s. Address: Secretary, 298, High Road, Balham, S.W.17.

ORGAN PEDAL PIANO ATTACHMENT, Radiating and Concave. Splendid condition. £7. Dawson, 2, West View, New Park, Harrogate.

PIANOFORTE TUNING. Postal lesson given by expert Tuner. Equal to personal instruction. Great success, little cost. Write for terms, Cawson, Bankfield House, 117, Armley Road, Leeds.

L. R.A.M. wishes to buy Teaching Connection; piano or singing, London preferred. Address, "Voice," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

MUSIC COMPOSERS and LYRIC WRITERS. The Cosmos Publishing Co. are open to consider Songs, &c., with a view to publication. Send MSS. with stamp for reply, to Glenholme, The Common, Hessele.

MUSIC COPIED neatly and accurately. Transposition, Band-Parts, &c. Gordon Jacob, A.R.C.M., 1, Homefield Road, S.W.19.

MUSIC COPIED, neat work, Transposition and Duplicating. E. W. Cartwright, 17, Belvedere Rd., Bournemouth.

MUSIC COPIED. Orchestral Parts. Transposition. "N. L.," 16, Shrewsbury Road, West Kirby, Cheshire.

MUSIC PRINTING. Representative wanted on liberal commission, with good connection amongst Music Publishers. State qualifications, "O. F.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

COMPOSERS. Cash offered for good, short Instrumental Pieces. Write "Editor," 26, Tenison St., S.E.1.

ORGAN MUSIC, PIANO MUSIC. Cheap.
Best composers. Also 2-manual ORGAN. Organist, 168, Ivydale Road, Peckham.

THE UNKNOWN TRUTH ABOUT THE VOICE AND ITS DEVELOPMENT. By E. DAVIDSON PALMER, Mus. Bac., Oxon. Showing the prevailing Error in the Training of Men's Voices, and the primary cause of Voice-Failure in Singers and Public Speakers. Post free, 1s. (Postal Order). Address: 11, Grazebrook Road, Stoke Newington, N.16.

RUDYARD KIPLING'S RECESSIONAL HYMN,
Set to Music by ROWLAND H. WILLIAMS. Price 2d., post free. Special Prices for quantities. ESCOTT & Co., Ltd., 67, Newman Street, London, W.1.

BARITONES and BASSES should buy new song, "BEAUTY'S DAUGHTER" (Oakley). Compass B flat to E flat. Price 2s. Weekes & Co., 14, Hanover St., W.1, and all music-sellers.

OXENFORD'S LYRICS.

MR. EDWARD OXFORD.

Author of "I Fear no Foe," and Thousands of other Songs, &c.
Submits Fox-trots and other Up-to-date and Profitable Lyrics.
Specialty: New words written to songs.

HADDENHAM, BUCKS. Postage refunded.

PIANO PEDALS, with Octave Coupler

This wonderful invention supersedes all Piano Pedals, and is a Master Patent.

St. George's Hall, Liverpool,
5th April, 1921.

"The simplicity of the attachment, and the clever sixteen-feet, eight-feet, or both combined, 'OPTIONAL OCTAVE' contrivance, astonished me.

"I was delighted with the Pedal touch and with the variety in that touch, which your Attachment makes possible. It is very responsive to the movements of the feet, and is reliable."

HERBERT F. ELLINGFORD, Mus. Bac., Oxon., F.R.C.O.

Terms: 17 guineas net cash, or monthly payments made.

Write for Lists, Prices, and Clients' Opinions, and References to

THE MALKIN PATENT PEDAL CO., LTD.,
NEWCASTLE-UNDER-LYME.

London address: 11, Ashlake Road, Streatham, S.W.16.

U.S.A.—FOR SALE.—The sole rights to manufacture, import, or sell in the United States.

THE PSYCHOLOGY OF MUSIC.

Music without Psychology is Medicine without Physiology

The above book opens a new world of research. 8vo, 200 pages. Illustrated, cloth bound. Price 4s. 6d.

Chapter 1, The Definition of Music; 2, The Theory of Music; 3, The Science of Music; 4, The Nervous System; 5, The Mind and the Body; 6, The Mind and its Properties; 7, The Stream of Consciousness; 8, Music and Consciousness; 9, Weber's Law of Relativity; 10, The Keynote or Surti; 11, Moods and Modes; 12, Janya Ragas; 13, Timbre or Colour; 14, The Form of Indian Music; 15, The Form of Western Music; 16, Graces or Embellishments; 17, Language and Music; 18, Pitch and Rhythm; 19, Dancing; 20, Music and Education; 21, Music and Notation; 22, The Mysteries of Music.

Apply to the Author,

H. P. KRISHNA RAO, B.A.,

No. 26, Sankarapuram, Bangalore City, S. India.

JUST PUBLISHED.

God is our Refuge and Strength ANTHEM

COMPOSED FOR

THE 270TH FESTIVAL OF THE SONS OF THE CLERGY.

BY

W. G. ALCOCK

(M.V.O., Mus. D.),

Organist of Salisbury Cathedral.

Price Two Shillings,

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

BECHSTEIN PIANOS

THE BECHSTEIN PIANO needs little recommendation to cultured tastes. Its beautiful tone and incomparable touch—qualities which have gained for it the esteem of every music-lover, and have set a standard to the world—are as exquisite and as characteristic as ever.

Write or call for Catalogue.

126, NEW BOND STREET
LONDON, W.1.

TELEPHONE: MAYFAIR 2653.

PIANOS

GRAND and UPRIGHT

By High Grade Makers.

NEW AND SECOND-HAND FOR SALE OR HIRE PURCHASE.

CHAS. STILES & CO.

74-76, SOUTHAMPTON ROW
LONDON, W.C.1.

Phone: MUSEUM 439.

STEINWAY

MUSIC LOVERS
CAN OBTAIN
PERFECT RESULTS
ONLY FROM THE PERFECT INSTRUMENT
THE STEINWAY.

115-117, WIGMORE STREET,
LONDON, W.1.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

YORK GATE, MARYLEBONE ROAD, LONDON, N.W.1.

Instituted 1822. Incorporated by Royal Charter 1830.

Patron: HIS MAJESTY THE KING.

President: H.R.H. THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT, K.G.

Principal: Sir A. C. MACKENZIE, K.C.V.O., Mus.Doc., F.R.C.M.

Acting Principal: JOHN B. McEWEEN, Esq., M.A., F.R.A.M.

LICENTIATESHIP EXAMINATION.

EASTER, 1924.

The following CANDIDATES were SUCCESSFUL:

HARMONY, COUNTERPOINT, and COMPOSITION.—As TEACHER: Ellis White.

EXAMINERS: F. Corder, A. J. Greenish, Mus.D. (Cantab.), Stewart Macpherson.

SINGING.—As TEACHERS: Barbara Korb, Ruth Oldman-Brownlee, Olive Madeline Perrott, Lily Margaret Sharp, Dorothy Amy Troit.

As PERFORMERS: Ethel Mary Ashmore, Evelyn Banbery, Vera N. Barnes, Anita Joan Corben, Dorothy Holden Craig, Harriet Egan-Skinner, Violet Finking, Lena Griffith, Mabel Hague, Ada Lilian Harris, Kathleen Isobel Hay, Blodwen Hughes, Edith Maud McCarthy, Grace W. Murray, Albert Ostery, Jun., Lilian Ottman, Gertrude Pearson, Emily Margaret Perry, Gertrude Riall, Muriel May Simpson, Madeline Isabella Rynie Thomson, Marguerite Thornton, Violet Muriel Warne, Alice May Whyte, Edith Mary Grace Williams.

EXAMINERS: Henry Beauchamp, John Booth, Edward Iles, Frederic King, Charles Phillips, Selina Pitt Soper, Marcus Thomson.

PIANOFORTE.—As TEACHERS: Gladys Adams, Alma Katharine Addy, Gladys J. Agarwala, Frances Estelle Anderson, Ethel Avery, Dorothy Mercia Bailey, Randolph George Ball, Lesley K. Bamford, Winifred Maud Barber, Kathleen Barkla, Gertrude Barlow, Hilda Marie Irene Barnes, Constance Mary Barrett, Hilda Batey, Ada Bentley, Mary Biggart, Cecilia Ellen Blay, Irene Mary Bowden, Jean Pollock Boyd, Vera W. Brasher, Phyllis Galsworthy Brice, Jessie Alice Brown, Stella Adeline Brown, Janetta Martin Bruce, Ida Kathleen Blackford Bryan, Mary Cecilia Buckley, Ellen Butterworth, Mabel A. Carnell, William Alan Carter, Walter Cathcart, Evelyn Norah Champion, Eileen A. F. Chapman, Roy Whitridge Chisholm, Marian Mildred Clingan, Monica Norah Coffey, Joan Kathleen Cooper, Mary Cowpe, Hilda Marion Cox, Mary Elizabeth Cranston, Margaret Alen Crook, Phyllis Crowe, Laura Crowthier, Violet E. Curran, Vera Maud Davey, Meta Davis, Ina Dawe, Dorothy Ada Dell, Arthur Albert Dodd, Florence Ivy Downing, Doris Muriel Kathleen Duggan, Dorothy Mabel Dunkley, Ella Mary Dunn, Marjorie Alexandra Eck, Marjorie Eimersen, Annie Elliott, Florence Margaret Eriksen, Gladys Edith Everden, Annie Farquhar, Olive Gwendolen Field, Cyril John Tucker Fogwell, Elsie Nora Fountain, Kathleen Agnes Gilpin-Hudson, Evelyn Glover, Dorothy I. J. Goddard, Gwendolen Bertha Goodwin, Florence Louie Gordon, Georgina MacLaren Gorrie, Florence Margaret Howitt Grant, Bertha Greenwood, Muriel Frances Irene Guest, Bertha Jessie Hagart, Mary A. Hall, Frances Evelyn Hancock, Frederick William Hardie, Barbara May Ferguson Harris, Bessie Harwell, Elsie Rose Hathaway, Ethel Head, Eleanor Grace Heathcock, Hilda Gertrude Hibbert, Dora Hingle, Mildred A. Hobson, Alice Horan, Vera Lucie Adey Horton, Dorothy Augusta Horwood, Dorothy Edith Hoskin, Marie Louise Howland, Muriel Hutchinson Humphrys, Ivy Blanche Innes, Lilian M. A. James, Lydia Martindale Jefferson, Bertram Llewellyn Jones, Katherine Phyllis Jones, Lily Juncker, Elizabeth Howell Kay, Margaret Robertson Kemp, Samuel Kerry, Johanna Gertrude Kiersey, Rachel Maude Laina, Marjorie Lanchester, Edith Mary Lane, Muriel Latter, Dorothy Kathleen Lawrance, Nesta Jane Lewis, Mary Lipshitz, Rene Blanche Luton, Ethel Lythgoe, Elizabeth S. Mackay, Gertrude Maria Mackinlay, Marjory Helen Maplesden, Jessie Freeman Marks, Dora Louise Martin, Charles Mason, Elsie Frances Mason, Elsie Marion Hope Mason, Gwendolyn Lilian Masters, Elsie Matthews, May Young McCandless, Helen Hay McKenzie, Jessie McLeod, Jane McMillan, William Merrill, Edith Margaret Middlemass, Kathleen Miles, Elsie Jean Millard, Ellen Monge, Harry Proctor Moorhouse, Dorothy Irene Lilian Morris, Dorcas M. H. Morton, Marjorie Moss, Esmé Mott, Barbara Annie Muirhead, Dorothy Mary Neville, Lilian Niblett, Freda Louise Nield, Olive Lucy Nieper, Evelyn Amy Nobbs, Helen Mary Norman, Eileen O'Donnell, Alice Elizabeth Oldendorff, Julia B. A. Ommer, Bertram John Orsman, Ivy May Page, Elizabeth Murray Pairman, Gwynneth Betty Parfitt-Lloyd, Laura Frances Stewart Sandeman Peddie, Elisabeth Pokrovsky, Hilda Edith Mary Pond, Gwendoline Frances Porter, Margaret Pralle, Mary Ellis Pritchard, Annie Procter, Sampson Aubrey Pryor, Annie Hall Rankin, Euphemia Iris Rees, Nan Rees, Frances Mary Richards, Doris Richardson, Bessie Lena Sage, William Henry Scriven, Mabel Margaret Shephard, D. Miriam I. Shields, Maud Emily Hilda Short, Beryl Eva Rosalie Silley, Maude Nanette Simon, Jessie Mary Sindall, Muriel Louie Slinn, Harold Smethurst, Elfrida Marie Smith, Eric Arthur Smith, Frances Oldershaw Smith, Marjorie Smith, Edith Margaret Standage, Violet Muriel Stubington, Dorothy Ellen Tanton, Edith Isabel Thompson, Dorothy Vaughan Tidmarsh, Eileen Toomey, Dorothy Elsie Truman, Jessie Olive Utley, Ivy Vart, Arthur Edwin Veal, Arthur Allan Vickers, William L. Vickery, Maude Edna Walford, Constance Jessie Warren, Doreen Joyce Watts, Sarah Christabel Watts, Elsie E. Webb, Ivy Gladys Wellington, Miriam Ada West, Muriel Elizabeth Wiles, Hilda Williams, Ruby Constance Williams, Beatrice Elizabeth Willis, Grace Willsher, Eva Margaret Winchester, Helena Augusta Sophia Withers, Mary Elizabeth Woolerton, Effie Hunter Wyper.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC—continued.

As PERFORMERS: Marjorie Asplin, Stephanie C. Black, Winifred Mary Bowley, Tom Bromley, Enid Lethbridge Brook, Dorothy Grace Callender, Hilda Francis, Kathleen Annie Grainger, Edward Charles Holmes, Margery Moore, Cyril Arthur Pearce, Olive Pull, Alexandra Annie Reynolds.

EXAMINERS: Carlo Albanesi, Victor Booth, Ambrose Coviello, Harold Craxton, Isabel Gray, Ivy Herbert, Welton Hickin, W. J. Kipps, T. B. Knott, Herbert Lake, Vivian Langrish, Leo Livens, Tobias Matthey, Frederick Moore, Claude Pollard, Charles F. Reddie, Felix Swinstead, Lawrance Taylor, Egerton Tidmarsh, Percy Waller, Septimus Webbe, Cuthbert Whitmore.

ORGAN.—Frank Bainton Porkess, Frank Siminon (Christmas, 1923).

EXAMINERS: G. D. Cunningham, Stanley Marchant, Mus.D. (Oxon.), H. W. Richards, Mus. D. (Dunelm.) (Christmas, 1923), Reginald Steggall.

ORCHESTRAL INSTRUMENTS: VIOLIN.—As TEACHERS: Rosalind Atkinson, Joyce Anne Beckett, Edwina Palmer, Margaret Lamont Smart, Betty Toop.

As PERFORMERS: E. Violet Elwin, Evelyn Mary Moore, Joan Murrell.

VIOLONCELLO.—As TEACHERS: Marjorie Jeanne Hopkins, Kathleen Graham Norwell.

EXAMINERS: F. Corder, Spencer Dyke, James T. Lockyer, Mario di Lorenzi, Gwendolen Mason, Herbert Walenn, H. Wessely, W. E. Whitehouse, Rowsby Woof.

PIANOFORTE ACCOMPANIMENT.—Meiricwen Jones.

EXAMINERS: Victor Booth, F. Corder, Welton Hickin, Cuthbert Whitmore.

AURAL TRAINING and SIGHT-SINGING.—Eileen Marjorie Sinker, Gertrude Sullens, Ellen Featherstone Thompson, Masie Gwendoline Tidy.

EXAMINERS: A. J. Greenish, Mus. D. (Cantab.), Ernest Read, Frederick G. Shinn, Mus. D. (Dunelm.).

VOICE-CULTURE and CLASS-SINGING.—Mary Agnes Garriock, Kate Madeleine Guthrie, Phyllis Poynter, Thomas Cuthbertson Leithead Pritchard, Dorothy Williams.

EXAMINERS: A. J. Greenish, Mus. D. (Cantab.), Stewart Macpherson, H. W. Richards, Mus. D. (Dunelm.).

ELOCUTION.—As TEACHERS: Frederick Robert Donat, Christian Menzies, Amy Prothesa Rean, E. Edith Haslam Thomas.

EXAMINERS: A. Acton Bond, Wilton Cole, F. Corder, Mrs. Tobias Matthey, Constance Newell, Katie Thomas.

J. A. CREIGHTON, Secretary.

The Pied Piper of Hamelin

BY

ROBERT BROWNING.

SET TO MUSIC FOR CHILDREN'S VOICES

BY

GEORGE RATHBONE

(Composer of "VOGELWIED," "SINGING LEAVES," "ORPHEUS," and other popular works for Children's Voices.)

Price, Staff Notation, Two Shillings. Tonic Sol-fa, One Shilling.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

No. 98.—NOVELLO'S MUSIC PRIMERS.

ELEMENTS

OF

MUSICAL APPRECIATION.

BY

W. J. FOXELL,

M.A., Mus. Bac., Lond.

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE.

London: NOVELLO &amp; COMPANY, Limited.

THE "DISCUS" ORGAN BLOWER

Is installed and giving complete satisfaction in over a thousand Cathedrals, Churches, Theatres, and Cinemas in Great Britain alone. This fact is eloquent, as well as convincing testimony, to its efficiency and durability. It is the most satisfactory method of mechanical organ blowing, and as the motive power may be oil, gas, or electric motor, the "Discus" is suitable for churches in any locality. The application of a "Discus" equipment to an organ ensures a steady supply of wind being instantly available, and enables the organist to obtain the best possible effects from the instrument. The "Discus" blower is the most scientifically designed machine for organ blowing purposes on the market. It is made of metal throughout, of the best quality combined with high grade workmanship. Being entirely free of complicated mechanism, a minimum of attention is required, and very many years of satisfactory services ensured. Efficiency and reliability are fully guaranteed with each "Discus" equipment we instal.

AS SUPPLIED TO WESTMINSTER ABBEY, YORK MINSTER, ETC., ETC.

WRITE FOR NEW BOOKLET.

*Sole Makers, Watkins & Watson, Organ Blowing Specialists for the past thirty years.
Designers and Manufacturers of all types of Hydraulic Engines, Gears, and Fittings for Organ Blowing.*

ESTIMATES SUBMITTED FREE.

WRITE TO

B. WATKINS AND WATSON
WHITE LION STREET, LONDON, N.1.

Telegrams: "HYDISBLOW, ISLING, LONDON."

Telephone: NORTH 2039

MOLLENHAUER FLUTES AND PICCOLOS

MESSRS. J. MOLLENHAUER & SONS possess a hundred years' world-wide reputation as makers of first-class Wood-Wind Instruments. Their Flutes and Piccolos are unrivalled in purity of tone, pleasing intonation, and solidity of mechanism, and are consequently used by the leading artists in every land.

Catalogue from—

FAUPEL BROTHERS,

4 & 5, OLD CHANGE, CHEAPSIDE, LONDON, E.C.4.

Telephone: City 5693.

Far Eastern inquiries to be addressed to our Hong-Kong office,
P.O. Box 631, Hong-Kong.

NEW PUBLICATIONS

By T. TERTIUS NOBLE.

- 816. NIGHT. S.A.T.B.
- 817. TO MY LOVE. T.T.B.B.
- 818. WHEN I AM DEAD, MY DEAREST. S.A.T.B.
- 819. SAVE, LORD, OR WE PERISH. S.A.T.B.
- 820. SAVE, LORD, OR WE PERISH. T.T.B.B.
- 821. BUT NOW, THUS SAITH THE LORD. S.A.T.B.

Price Fourpence each.

- 822. MAGNIFICAT AND NUNC DIMITTIS IN B FLAT.

Price Sixpence.

BANKS & SON, MUSIC PUBLISHERS, YORK.

A NEW EDITION OF

THE ART OF COUNTERPOINT

BY

C. H. KITSON

Professor of Music in the University of Dublin,

HAS JUST BEEN PUBLISHED.

THE first edition of this treatise was published in 1907. In this, the second edition, many revisions and additions have been made. The first part of the book deals with the technique of 16th-century or 'strict' Counterpoint. Several modal examples have been added, and there is a chapter on the English School. The second part of the book is practically new, and deals with modern or free Counterpoint.

Pp. 344, with numerous examples, price 10s. net.

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS.

Produced at Covent Garden, May 14, 1923

THE PERFECT FOOL

OPERA IN ONE ACT

WORDS AND MUSIC BY

GUSTAV HOLST

Op. 39

PRICE ... .. SIX SHILLINGS.

Libretto One Shilling

THE BALLET FROM "THE PERFECT FOOL."

Full Score, 15s.; Pianoforte Solo, 3s.; Pianoforte Duet, 4s.

SOME PRESS OPINIONS.

THE TIMES

The ballet music . . . is the most brilliant thing in a work glittering with brilliant moments. . . . There is one delicious musical moment, an almost Purcellian "round" for three voices. . . . and it is not an isolated moment.

THE DAILY TELEGRAPH

It is a safe and a proud thing to say that in the whole history of opera no composer has produced a more perfectly fitting score and libretto than Gustav Holst has produced in this opera. . . . In very truth this is a perfect little opera, a veritable masterpiece after its kind, of wit and humour. . . . Brilliantly clever and amusing.

THE MORNING POST

The Perfect Fool would be a better title for Mr. Holst's opera. . . . Mr. Holst shows the rare and precious ability to make a musical joke that everyone can see—or hear. . . . The whole thing is something entirely fresh, and follows a well-defined line of its own. . . . Actually there is not a weak page in the score, and though story and music differ from the expected, the way they are handled with originality and power constitute the opera a little masterpiece.

THE DAILY MAIL

The Perfect Fool . . . ought to have a sweeping success if musical people can command enough sense of humour and if people of humour have ears open to the splendour of the music. . . . Splendid music, and playfully mocking, allusive, fantastic libretto. . . . And there are numbers of first-rate tunes—for Holst is a prime melodist.

DAILY NEWS

It will appeal strongly to musicians all over the world who are familiar with operatic literature.

DAILY EXPRESS

His rhythmical capacity serves him extremely well in the ballet music, which is, indeed, some of the best that has been written in opera for a long time.

REFEREE

A ballet of such originality and interest, accompanied by such masterly music, that interest was excited and admiration aroused. . . . Musically this ballet is the finest portion of the work. . . . The instrumentation is a marvel of suggestion and humour.

PALL MALL GAZETTE

Holst has provided excellent entertainment in company with some remarkably good music. The latter is rich in the two essentials of tune and rhythm. . . . There are many tunes—the Wizard's "Wooing Song," for example—which are so simple and accessible that one is unconsciously whistling them after a single hearing. . . . There are many gems. The ballet-music, of course, is fairly well known by now, but the "Round" of the three girls fetching water was a charming moment, and the unaccompanied chorus towards the end a piece of real virtuosity.

DAILY CHRONICLE

A brilliant little fantasy. . . . The ballet music is most effective, particularly the exquisite Dance of the Spirit of Water.

BIRMINGHAM POST

Highly diverting in a vein entirely its own. . . . Plain, pure, unbending Holst from beginning to end, the writing masterly in its directness, and the scoring amazingly pointed and suggestive.

WESTERN DAILY PRESS

We may reasonably hope that Mr. Holst's all too short opera will take its place permanently in that small but brilliant constellation of comic-operas on the grand scale of which The Mastersingers and The Marriage of Figaro are the bright particular stars.

MUSICAL NEWS AND HERALD

The Perfect Fool is the finest piece of real musical humour that has appeared for a long time.

THE MUSICAL STANDARD

The Perfect Fool is the best thing Holst has given us. . . . Themes of quite extraordinary beauty, arresting to the ear, and haunting the memory even after a first hearing.

SUNDAY TIMES

Indeed, he has performed a notable feat of alchemy. He has taken of the common objects of opera, grown hoary and wearisome in service, and accomplished, with enharmonic subtlety, their transmutation and combination into something new and significant.

TRINITY COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

President:

THE RT. HON. THE EARL OF SHAFTESBURY, K.P., G.C.V.O.

Director of Studies: C. W. PEARCE, M.A., Mus. D.

Director of Examinations: E. F. HORNER, Mus. D.

June 4th and 18th, at 3 p.m.—Students' Concerts.

June 11th, at 3 p.m.—Pianoforte and Vocal Recital by Miss EMMELINE MEDD HALL and Miss FRANCES HALL.

June 25th, at 3 p.m.—Special Violin Recital by Students in Mr. L. PECSKAI'S Class.

June 19th and 23rd, at 7.45 p.m.—The Opera Class, under the direction of Mr. CAIRNS JAMES, will perform at the King's Hall, Covent Garden, W.C., a Comedy Opera entitled "The Village Coquettes, or a Rustic Romance." Dialogue and Lyrics by Charles Dickens, reconstructed by Mr. AVALON COLLARD. The music selected and composed by the late SIR FREDERICK BRIDGE.

June 25th.—Last day of entry for the Diploma Examinations to be held in July next.

July 5th.—Last day of entry for the next open competition for Scholarships.

There are between Forty and Fifty Scholarships tenable at the College and open to all British subjects up to certain age limits, and the Cambridge Pianoforte Scholarship, value £100 per annum; also Eighteen Scholarships which provide complete preparation for the Degree of Bachelor of Music.

Particulars of the Teaching Department, with list of Professors, Fees, Scholarships regulations, &c., and the Syllabuses of the Diploma and Local Examinations, free on application to the undersigned.

C. N. H. RODWELL, Secretary.

Mandeville Place, Manchester Square, London, W.1.

MACDOWELL

SOME FAMOUS PIANO ALBUMS.

			s.	d.
FOREST IDYLS.	Op. 19	... ..	4	6
LES ORIENTALES.	Op. 37	... ..	3	0
TWELVE STUDIES.	Op. 39.
Two Books	... ..	each	3	6
WOODLAND SKETCHES.	Op. 51.
(Or in Two Books, 3s. each.)	complete		5	0
SEA PIECES.	Op. 55	... ..	6	0
(Or in Two Books, 3s. 3d. each.)	complete		6	0
FIRESIDE TALES.	Op. 61	... ..	4	6
NEW ENGLAND IDYLS.	Op. 62
(Or in Two Books, 3s. 3d. each.)	complete		6	0
FORGOTTEN FAIRY TALES	...		3	0

"MacDowell has in his music proved himself as great a poet of Nature as Wordsworth proved himself in verse. One has only to think of the 'SEA PIECES,' 'WOODLAND SKETCHES,' 'NEW ENGLAND IDYLS,' 'FORGOTTEN FAIRY TALES,' and a new world of romance is opened up."—Musical Opinion.

ELKIN & CO., LTD..

8 & 10, BEAK STREET, REGENT STREET,
LONDON, W.1.

AND OF ALL MUSIC SELLERS.

BROADWOOD PIANOS

BOSWORTH & CO., LTD.

MIND-POWER IN MUSIC.

FOR STUDENTS,

TEACHERS, AND PERFORMERS.

BY

E. DOUGLAS TAYLER.

Price 1s. 3d. net.

This Text-Book covers a wide range of psychology as applied to music, and will prove of great help in overcoming any difficulties which may occur in the study of music.

BOSWORTH & CO., LTD.,

8, HEDDON STREET, REGENT STREET, LONDON, W.1.

JUST PUBLISHED.

No. 99.—NOVELLO'S MUSIC PRIMERS.

PIANOFORTE ACCOMPANIMENT

BY

WELTON HICKIN

Fellow and Professor, Royal Academy of Music.

CONTENTS.

Technical Proficiency—Artistic Imagination—Ensemble—Balance of Tone—Phrasing—Vital Notes—Pedalling—Recitations with Music—Reading at Sight—Transposition—Harmonization—Recitative—Modulation—Accompaniment studied in detail, &c.

PRICE ... FOUR SHILLINGS.

Paper Boards, 5s.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

The Musical Times

AND SINGING-CLASS CIRCULAR

JUNE 1 1924

(FOR LIST OF CONTENTS SEE PAGE 559.)

A COMMENTARY UPON MENDELSSOHN

BY HUBERT J. FOSS

(Continued from May number, page 406.)

In music none has been more comfortable than Mendelssohn, save his lesser satellites. The easy financial circumstances of his life reacted in the strongest degree upon his mind, and became a visible characteristic from end to end and in every aspect of his music. You have this pretty figure of a man who could sketch, play all games, dance, ride, and swim, improvise and play and memorise anything, all with consummate grace and skill. Just so, too, he could compose, and nearly always as he remained content with his circumstances, so he remained content to express them in his music. Mendelssohn was nothing if he was not a gentleman.* A more polite musician has never been. The roughness of Bottom and the Bergamask dancers is portrayed indeed, but with the gentle air of drawing-room charades. Occasionally through the mists of pleasant gentility there could be seen a man; of these times I can speak later in high praise. But frequently the central ideas are infected; the fundamental law of contrast becomes merely an agitato that can only cause a pleasant flutter, until placidity is restored by the returning suavity of the familiar (familiar, indeed, when born) first subject. So, too, in construction, there is along with a genuine constructive ability, an unwillingness or inability to press things home, and often the moment comes when, though grace sanctions the recapitulation, commonsense condemns it; form is too often a technical and not a spiritual thing in Mendelssohn.

The desire for comfort can be traced further. There is that endless outpouring of sweet melodies, a stream that never brings itself to cease, however poorly it trickles. Sometimes it is like the water that, falling over the concrete rocks at the exhibition, flows down the vent and so up the pipe to the head of the fall. How we long for some harmonic idea, some pure rhythm, some simplicity of musical conception! Then, too, the rippling and beating accompaniments, the production of sustained tone with a percussion instrument. Apart from the endless procession of tonic, dominant, and subdominant, producing an effect like that of a marching column of soldiers which stretches out of sight, there is the absence in the composer of a purely rhythmic belief in the figures he has created. They are background, and the musical idea of them never seems to seize his brain nor the rhythmic element in them to beat his imagination into a passion. For all his faculty of utilising to the full his material, Mendelssohn seems never to have thought musically of his ideas once he had decided on them as subjects. Finally, there is the continual reliance placed upon the sixth and third—most easily appreciated of all intervals, and therefore most easily tired of. Compare with Chopin's tenth, or Schubert's low third, or Brahms's heavy triads, or Liszt's full chords, these recurring thirds, figures in sixths, and common chords broken into the same intervals, that endlessly contented Mendelssohn. One longs again for the bare fifth, the unaccompanied melody, the clear point of physical assonance given by an isolated chord.

There are obvious points of touch between Mendelssohn and another true Victorian, Tennyson, and I am convinced that a closer examination than can be hinted at here would lead not only to an interesting study, but also to the revelation of several good points which our modern reactions and our fathers' adulation have hidden. There is indication that Tennyson to-day is being treated by both parties as a poet rather than as a saint or a sinner, and the same is beginning to occur with Mendelssohn. The criticism of Mr. Colles, that Mendelssohn 'just missed appealing strongly to men of all times because in the greater number of his works he was content to have expressed himself in the most perfect way possible,' has an obvious application to Tennyson. Further, we see a lack of intellect in both men that compares oddly with their artistic positions. Browning seems to have begun writing at an intellectual point far ahead of that at which Tennyson had said his say; and so we think of Berlioz with Mendelssohn. In this connection comes in the point of popularity already dealt with. Tennyson is clearly comparable to Mendelssohn in the matter of common and universal ideas. But we can enlarge this point. Both had unseeing eyes, not in observation, but in the deductions that follow it; for both, combined with their gentlemanlike nobility and high-minded superiority, had natures that accept rather than inquire, and receive rather than discover. Neither was touched by that healthy spirit of scepticism which came upon men as tongues of fire as the century wore on. We can say that both were inclined to believe what they were told, and not to use their faculties of sensation to discover the truth or knowledge of the letter. Other points of contact are their respective stocks of humour, and their avowed philosophy of μηδὲν ἄγαν. We can even press the point down to moods. The poem, Ask me no more; the moon may draw the sea, closely corresponds, artistically, to the Lied Ohne Worte:

* See Samuel Butler's comments, and the last of the letters collected in his essay 'The Aunt, the Nieces, and the Dog,' in The Humour of Homer.

and the Notturmo is indeed near to the mood of:

And oft in ramblings on the wold
When April nights began to blow,
And April's crescent glimmered cold,
I saw the village lights below.

Compare the beautiful, useless verse in some of the Idylls with the perfect suavity of the Reformation Symphony. Again, how Tennysonian is Melusine, and how like Mendelssohn the all-too-admirable St. Agnes' Eve!

The careful examination for critical purposes of all Mendelssohn's output is too long a process to justify the slender material value it would yield. That is not to say that there are no musical discoveries to be made in his extensive production, but it is an assertion that neither Mendelssohn's musical characteristics, nor the places where he transcended his normal self and capabilities, are considerable in number or scope. A closer examination, therefore, of a few of his works will give a big enough basis for judgement to allow anyone not engaged on an exhaustive book to select and generalise. I propose to discuss here only the Hebrides Overture, the Prelude and Fugue in E minor, and the Violin Concerto, and to derive from them enough musical practice to exemplify the theory displayed above.

Of Mendelssohn's Overtures, those that have breath left in them breathe it only in the concert-room and in the theatre. The live ones, then, are virtually symphonic poems or one-movement symphonies. It is significant that the four big and successful Overtures were written when Mendelssohn had produced only one orchestral three-movement work that has survived at all, i.e., the Pianoforte Concerto in G minor—not one of his important works. His three Symphonies and his Violin Concerto came later, and it would be possible to consider the Overtures as examples of the successful handling of a smaller form in preparation for bigger symphonic work. In the region of symphonic music, however, Mendelssohn never surpassed the Hebrides Overture, and it is clear that he needed both a shorter space than the full symphony to fill with the development of his ideas, and also the stimulus of outside suggestion—either that of a subject, as in these Overtures, or that of words and dramatic situations, as in Elijah and St. Paul.

The Hebrides Overture is the best exponent in all Mendelssohn's music of the influence of external objects upon his imagination. The term programme-music has come to be expanded with an unpleasant vagueness of meaning to music which is better called characteristic, and even to dramatic music—to all music, that is, which has a definite and stated connection with any objects outside its own province. Such a use of the term programme-music might include in its embrace the three Symphonies of Mendelssohn's maturity, and an enormous quantity of the music written since Mendelssohn's time, from Schumann's Carneval down to Delius's First Cuckoo. But as Parry says, in Grove, in his article on the Symphony:

... though Mendelssohn often adopted the appearance of programme, and gained some advantages by it, he never—in order to express his external ideas with more poetical consistency—relaxed any of the familiar principles of structure which are regarded as orthodox. He was, in fact, a thorough-going classicist. He accepted formulas with perfect equanimity, and aimed at resting the value of his works upon the vivacity of his ideas and the great mastery he had obtained in technical expression and clearness and certainty of orchestration.

This sentence, though written about the Symphonies, applies so forcibly to the Overtures—and particularly to the Hebrides Overture—that the repetition is amply justified, containing as it does some pungent general criticism of Mendelssohn. In the Hebrides, Mendelssohn wrote music whose conception had been influenced by things seen, and though that influence had been strong, and had produced an occasional effect in the written music which approaches the imitative, yet the music is music only from the first to the last bar, and not a fulfilment of a programme. This conception is only slightly different in degree and not at all in kind from the normal conception of Beethoven and others. The attitude of Wagner throws some light on both the question of programme-music and the musical value of the Hebrides Overture. 'I dislike [he said on one occasion] everything in music that requires a verbal explanation beyond the actual sound.' On another occasion, he said: 'Mendelssohn is a landscape painter of the first order, and the Hebrides Overture is his masterpiece.' The passages in the work which may bring images or reminiscences to the minds of the hearers, such as that which Wagner picks out as descriptive of the sea winds over the seas, have musical beauty, and their communicative power, however full of association, is not based upon imitation but is purely musical. Another good example is the tremolando passage between the first and second subjects.

The Hebrides Overture as a whole, then, is fine music with a definite character lent it not by its title, but first by its conception and secondly by its scoring. Built upon a simple rhythmic phrase, the work is a complete development of this idea, and it stands as a highly imaginative and full statement of that phrase's possibilities. The work shows more of Mendelssohn's good qualities and less of his bad than any other in his catalogue, and, more than any other work, tends towards the refutation of the just criticism of Mr. Colles quoted above—for this Overture is not only a perfect way of expression, it is also imaginative music of a high order. But while it can be said that in the Hebrides Overture Mendelssohn had beautiful things to say and said them beautifully, with the result that the Overture is a work of the first interest, it is equally true that in emotional range and content it does not rise to comparison with such works as those of Bach, Beethoven, or Mozart which we would not be without. The place of the Hebrides Overture in music is that to which Wagner has assigned it. It is a masterpiece of landscape painting, and so, only of its own kind, a masterpiece of music.

Of the technical points which arise in connection with this work, the first is the fact that Mendelssohn, employing the traditional first-movement form, has managed with great constructive skill to make of the one movement a complete, whole, and sufficient work. We observe, further, that an analysis of the work would be bound to rely more upon the actual sound than upon accepted formal principles which too often guide the analyst. For, at the outset, the principal subject is a mosaic of phrases: yet, withal, one virtue of the Overture is its economy of material—a virtue Mendelssohn commonly displayed. The first slight motive has something about it both descriptive and characteristic, a pregnant simplicity which at once catches the attention; it is a significant musical utterance:

But the inspiration cannot last. The second subject when it appears is only a pleasant tune.

It provides material for emotional ebb and flow, is even in some ways descriptive, but its content is summed up by that weak and typical cadential phrase for which commonsense, one would have thought, would have asked for some alleviating colour in the scoring. It is interesting that the first phrase should throughout arouse Mendelssohn to a finer treatment than all the rest of the material. The re-entry of the first subject after the second is fully stated is most effective, back in the true spirit of the Overture; and so always with this melodic germ. The conventional major close with the assertive triads on the brass is the only stumbling-block I find in the whole work; and even so, Mendelssohn puts this flamboyant and vulgar passage, so doubtfully introduced, to intelligent use in the development.

The phrase:

is one that seems to me to sum up in its inherent energy the force of the whole Overture. The force of this—again a simple—motive is far greater than that usually displayed by Mendelssohn. Immediately after its introduction we have two curiously conflicting passages—the re-entry of the second subject, than which nothing conceivable could better display its natural unfitness, and then the tranquillo section, perfect introduction of familiar notes in unfamiliar guise, perfectly laid out, and continuing for exactly the perfect length. Another exquisite touch is the long scale which brings us to the reprise. The continuation of the flute-run here, and the immediate trill on the strings, are beautiful points of colour. Again, heralding the tonic statement of the second subject, there is that long oboe note—bold in a work so full of oboe colour—to which Wagner drew attention. Finally, there is the Coda, a section with a greater importance and length than most Codas, as it is used to put finality to the work in its single movement. It is, musically, a tour de force, largely consisting of very able passage-work reminiscent of the matter already heard, and constantly employing the semiquaver phrases on the strings that have done so much already to link the work together; but it would be hard to find a passage in classical music where matter apparently so unrelated was used to form an effective ending to a work. The long trumpet notes, the loud staccatos, and the flute-run, make a close of great beauty.

(To be continued.)

SLENDER REPUTATIONS

BY ALEXANDER BRENT-SMITH

How strange it is that some men who toiled long and painfully to achieve greatness, succeeded in doing nothing more notable than filling pages of catalogues with a wearisome record of their industry, while others, idlers and improvident, by a lucky thought won for themselves the guerdon of temporary immortality! The reputation least desired yet perhaps most widely achieved is that of a young lady of Minorca, whose sole title to fame is, so Edward Lear assures us, that her aunt was a very fast walker. To gain a reputation second-hand is risky (I am not thinking of Siegfried Wagner), but when that second-hand becomes an aunt the risk degenerates into a calamity. Think of the horror of being compelled to bear the reputations of all one's aunts, and having to own to being a spiteful cat, a dangerous gossip, a bad loser at croquet, and an untidy needlewoman. No, the lady of Minorca won her great reputation very easily, and she is to be congratulated that she was none the worse for it.

When we study history, the ridiculous ease with which some men have picked up immortal crowns, compared with the hopeless struggles of others who have had to be content with picking up crusts from the gutter, is immediately apparent. A cursory glance at any anthology of verse will be sufficient for our purpose. We shall find the great names duly represented by poems which we more or less know and respect, but real familiarity, even though it be accompanied by contempt, will be reserved for Mr. Charles Wolfe. I do not suppose that one person in a thousand knows who he was. Well, he was an Irish clergyman who wrote The Burial of Sir John Moore, a poem with little value either as history or as poetry. Written more than a hundred years ago, it has been printed in every English Reader from that day until this and will probably continue to be printed until the decline and fall of the British Empire. Perhaps he wrote many poems, all of which, with this exception, were failures, just as Boccherini wrote stacks of chamber music of which all is forgotten except the justly famous Minuet in A.

Exactly what Jarnefelt's musical output is, I cannot discover, but fortune has been kinder to him than to many men who would seem to be equally, or more, deserving. I suppose that there is not any orchestra, English or foreign, professional or amateur, which has not performed the famous Praeludium at some time or other.

All composers are not so fortunate as Boccherini or Jarnefelt. Joachim Raff, in industry and ability, surpassed both these composers, but of all his vast output scarcely anything except his Cavatina is remembered to-day. Carl Czerny, the most tireless waster of good paper, has earned nothing from posterity but a sigh or a sob from a desperate infant. There is another composer, still living, who has already passed Czerny's opus figure and is romping through the early thousands, for all the world like a cricketer whose ambition it is to score the envied three thousand runs in one season. I cannot but admire the altruistic spirit of these fellows. Here are men technically capable of writing the profoundest symphonies, willingly sacrificing their unquestionable right to immortality in their desire to supply the musical needs of adolescent humanity. They worked hard, and they deservedly won the just reward of their labour.

There is another class of fame-winners—men who had little talent, did little work, and yet won a lifelong immortality, which is after all what most of us desire. Facile princeps in this little band of Immortals is Charles D. Blake, who, as every one knows, wrote a Grand March. Was it born grand, or had it grandness thrust upon it? If so, by whom? By the composer? He knew better. By the public? The public is not such a fool. It must then have been the printer, with an uproarious sense of humour. Nor far behind Charles D. Blake would walk Frederick Scotson-Clarke, whose Marches though undeservedly popular never arrogated the title 'Grand.' Conspicuous by the honest simplicity of his countenance would be seen William Jackson (of Exeter). Our forefathers who ranked Jackson next to the writer of the Pentateuch were fearful lest their inspired William should be mistaken for Jackson of London, or Jackson of Timbuctoo, so to prevent confusion they always added, after his name, the pious parenthesis—(of Exeter).

Others in this immortal company are the composers of spurious works such as Weber's last waltz, Beethoven's Adieu to the Piano, and works of varying merit such as Narcissus, All Souls' Day, Abide with me, and The Maiden's Prayer.

What, then, have these men done to obtain everlasting life? They did nothing heroic, as did Lord Nelson; they added nothing to the philosophy of life, as did Pasteur and Newton; they contributed nothing to the happiness or misery of life, as did Aristophanes and Napoleon. True, but perhaps they gave mankind something that mankind was wanting. They are the inventors not of Rolls-Royce cars, or equatorial telescopes, but of small patents which are very useful to us in our daily lives, though by no means indispensable.

It is given to few men to invent the spinning-jenny, the linotype, the steam-engine, and the root of all modern evil—the internal combustion engine. Beethoven may be the Nasmyth of music, but Nasmyth-hammers are useless when it is a question of hanging up a picture on the wall, and the Beethoven-Hammerclavier is apt to be out of place at a village social. So also Wagner may be the Marconi of music, but there will always be use in the world for the modest half-penny pencil.

We must therefore thank heaven for the inconspicuous (though not always modest) inventors who have given us our every-day conveniences—safety-pins, pocket-knives, tie-clips, and, some might even add, fountain-pens. These are the counterparts of those useful but little-valued composers who have given us music which even the most fumble-fisted can play with pleasure at any time, in any place, to any person, and under any conditions. They write to be heard of men, and certainly they have their reward.

ON BROADCASTING NEW MUSIC

BY M.-D. CALVOCORESSI

Some little time ago Mr. Ernest Newman wrote in the Sunday Times:

The time has certainly come when wireless could bring to music-lovers all over the country a number of works that otherwise they would have no chance of hearing. To take a recent instance: perhaps some five or six hundred people, at the most, heard Pierrot Lunaire a few weeks ago; these people may possibly understand our critical wrangles over the work, but I fail to see how the five million other readers of the principal London papers can, or how they can be expected to be interested in these wrangles. Now why cannot the B.B.C. look a little ahead on occasions of this kind, and arrange to broadcast the performance of such a work as Pierrot Lunaire. There is not a music-lover from Land's End to John o' Groats who would not listen eagerly to a thing of this kind. The recent performance of Bartók's Violin Sonata was another case of the same sort.

Mr. Newman being a critic by whose utterances we all set great store, I confess that I felt concerned to find his views so greatly at variance with mine. To me, mechanical reproductions of music are both excruciating and meaningless. I have so far refrained from writing on this topic because, apparently, so many people whose opinion I value hold other views; I sometimes feared I was over-sensitive to ugliness of tone, and inclined to exaggerate the importance of inaccuracies in reproduction.

But by the time when the suggestion came forth concerning new, difficult works such as Pierrot Lunaire or Bartók's Violin Sonatas, I had accumulated evidence enough to satisfy me that I did not stand altogether alone in my dislike and distrust. I shall not attempt to make capital out of my dislike: but I feel justified in venturing to declare that in my opinion nothing could be more dangerous than the diffusion, by mechanical agencies, of works whose appraisal calls for special attention and caution, on account of the unusual things they contain.

In Pierrot Lunaire, for instance, Schönberg resorts to the blurred, barely perceptible tones that arise when pianoforte strings, released but not struck, vibrate by sympathy. In his Kammer-Symphonie he divides a run on arpeggios between a clarinet in B flat, one in D, and one in A. The importance of such details may be slight, but they are part of his scheme, and it would be unfair not to give the scheme a full chance. We may doubt how far the audience will ever hear the pianoforte 'harmonics'; and we may hold that in the case of the three clarinets, differences between the quality of individual instruments and between the tone-producing capacity of individual players may do either far more or far less than the composer bargained for: but we know for certain that it is in actual performance only that these and many other effects stand a chance of showing us what they are really worth. A good many things delay the diffusion of the more difficult and unusual examples of contemporary music. As many things, and even more, stand in the way of their being considered with judicial sympathy when they happen to be played. The least that partisans of fair play should expect and insist upon is that music to which so much harm is done by misrepresentations attendant on both indiscriminate, hyperbolic praise and abuse should not further suffer through being misrepresented when introduced to audiences.

This, of course, is not always easy, even in the concert-room. Many of us, listening to certain things by Schönberg, Kréněk, or almost any other 'difficult' composer, have felt that performances which were textually accurate fell short nevertheless in certain purely material respects. There may have been something wanting in the balance of tone, in the quality of tone, in the definiteness and emphasis of the punctuation. Or atonal sequences of notes may have called in vain for subtle differences of pitch which notation cannot show—differences corresponding to those which performers instinctively allow for in tonal music when dealing with, say, a leading-note, a subdominant, or a chromatic passing-note. A very few shortcomings of this kind are enough to induce a good deal of perplexity. Of three performances I heard of Stravinsky's Symphonies for Wind Instruments (by three different orchestras, each under a different conductor), one made me realise forthwith how needlessly bewildering the other two had been—but the remedy, of course, is not always to hand.

Unless you are to appraise or enjoy music as a mere abstraction, you cannot deal with it as you deal with Euclid, working and progressing on straight lines that are not drawn straight, and circles that are shaped like vegetable marrows. There are cases when experience and imagination rectify shortcomings in performance, as when you hear a piece played on a pianoforte that is out of tune, or when a wrong note is struck for which you mentally substitute the right note. But how many of us could detect wrong notes, or wrong balance of tone, and similar shortcomings, in a first performance of a complex work by Schönberg or Stravinsky—that is, if we are not reading the score while we listen? And how many of the people for whom broadcasting is primarily intended, could do so under any conditions?

Granting that actual performance may fall short, we see, looming in the distance, the conclusion that nothing is quite safe but the ideal performance which the expert may imagine while reading a score. I am not dealing here with the question of reading versus listening, but I shall revert to it further (though without attempting to discuss it).

My present point is that whereas there are unknown quantities in forthcoming actual performances, which accordingly may hit or miss the mark, there are known quantities in mechanical reproductions of performances which enable us to foretell that the mark will be missed very often, if not always. A time may come when this will no longer be the case. I shall by then be ready to take back all that I am now saying.

Now for my evidence, which refers to both mechanical reproduction (talking-machines) and to mechanical transmission. I consider it needless to quote from the columns of the Musical Times, in which my readers will doubtless have noticed due restrictions as well as due praise.

In Musical Opinion (November, 1923), 'Schaunard' wrote:

The only term befitting is nastiness. A musical performance may be as greatly improved by the wireless receiver as it is at present rather worsened. One thing alone is almost certain: it will never be made to sound exactly the same when heard through receiving instruments as it does to the listener within the room. The gramophone is a similar case.

In the Monthly Musical Record (April, 1924), 'R. C.' writes:

The popular vogue for music by wireless has brought about a new series of Symphony concerts. Mr. Percy Pitt at the first of these conducted French music—Vincent d'Indy's Istar Variations and Ravel's Mother Goose. At the second, Sir Landon Ronald conducted Elgar's E flat Symphony. This I chose to listen to by my fireside. I found that the score was a necessary adjunct. Without the score the music seemed remote, much was lost, and what was made of it by those who did not already know the work I cannot think. But with the score in hand there was decidedly a pleasure to be had—what ear missed the eye made up, and vice versa.

I shall not try my readers' patience by exhausting my file of similar extracts. Curiously enough, I recently found my views confirmed in a later article by Mr. Ernest Newman (Sunday Times, March 15):

In the Daily Graphic I gave a number of instances in which the wireless quite altered the scoring of the Tannhäuser Overture, and my list could have been extended greatly. If what I heard on that and other occasions is the best that wireless can do, then I can only say that what the listener-in hears of a big orchestral work is the merest travesty of the original. Captain Eckersley is quite correct in saying that it is near enough to give the average listener a fair idea of the work; if a man just wants to be sure of the tunes, does not mind the harmonies being often perverted, and is quite satisfied with orchestral timbres of which the composer never dreamed, then wireless is good enough for him, and none of us will grudge him the pleasure he gets out of it. But I repeat that, for the critical musician, the transmission is a travesty of the original. It may be better that two million people, many of whom would be otherwise shut out from music, should get a great work in an imperfect form than not get it at all. But nothing is to be gained by our denying the obvious imperfections of the present wireless transmission of music on the large scale.

The only writer who has attempted to enumerate the imperfections of the talking-machine is, I believe, M. Roland Manuel, who gave in the Paris Ménestrel (May 25, 1923), the following list, warning us that it is at best approximate:

Perfectly reproduced: plucked strings (i.e., the guitar, the harp, the pizzicati), bells, and generally speaking all percussion instruments, including the pianoforte when used as such.

Satisfactorily reproduced: saxophones, brass instruments, piccolo, clarinet, bassoon, baritone and bass voices.

Indifferently reproduced: oboe, strings col arco, tenor voices.

Badly reproduced: flutes, female voices.

The phonograph, he adds, deals unkindly with nonchalant rhythms and harmonic or orchestral subtleties. It utterly deforms Debussy's tone-pictures. Mozart's music is too light for it, Wagner's too heavy. Rimsky-Korsakov's comes out particularly well.

Comparing my own experiences with those of other people as illustrated in the above extracts, I come to the conclusion that mechanical reproduction and transmission may serve some of the purposes of score reading (not all). For picking to pieces and memorising music, for other accessory processes among the many that go to the forming and testing of judgments, it may be of some use; also, perhaps, for reverting to music heard before in actual performance, when memory will partly make up for shortcomings.

I should certainly never attempt to form an estimate of a work on the strength of mechanical performance. I do not much like to do so even on the strength of score-reading only, although I often enjoy reading the scores of works which I know and love.

I fully realise how hard it must be to long for music and to lack the possibility to listen, to read, or to play. As a substitute for the real thing, I consider the piano-player far preferable to any sound-reproducing agency. Transcriptions of orchestral or chamber music will be found to give all that is useful in what is given by sound-reproducing agencies—that is, the design and a rough-and-ready approximation of certain values and contrasts.

I emphatically repeat that I look with great misgivings upon the use of mechanical reproduction as sole, chief, or earliest foundation for the education of musical taste and for technical musical education. I understand that attempts are being made to teach orchestration and instrumentation by means of mechanical reproductions of tones, single or in combination. I can only hope that results will prove far different from what I anticipate. Anyhow, experience will probably correct any false impressions or gaps originating in deficiencies such as are referred to by M. Manuel and others. With regard to the introduction by similar means of new music, the danger is greater and the remedy may be more distant. Mr. Ernest Newman's article of March 16 seems to me to prove that he too is aware of the dangers that might attend the mechanical dissemination of works such as Pierrot Lunaire or Bartók's Violin Sonatas.

LIMITATIONS AND ART

By HERBERT ANTCLIFFE

In his curiously provocative little Essay on Modern Unaccompanied Song, Mr. Herbert Bedford remarks that 'the tendency of the boundaries of musical expression being to widen, to circumscribe one's musical means of expressiveness would be not unlike a poet voluntarily curtailing his vocabulary, let us say by ruling out of bounds all words except those of Saxon origin.' He has just previously laid the blame of the failure of Perosi as a composer on his attempt to imitate the style of Palestrina. The instance is scarcely a happy one, for Perosi's failure is not so much an artistic one as a national one, and is comparable with, say, Elgar's failure in Russia. Each of these composers has a strong body of support for his claims among those best able to judge of his success or failure, and each has failed to impress outside certain circles. However that may be, the context serves to show what he means. To imitate a style with which one is not, both by nature and training, in sympathy, is to court failure, and it is possible that the ex-Sistine choirmaster may have made this mistake. But this is something very different from a mere limitation of the means employed in giving expression to our ideas or feelings. The utility or otherwise of limitations is regulated partly by their character, and partly by the manner of their imposition.

Every art and every activity has its natural limitations which prevent it encroaching upon the ground of other arts or activities; and to these are added the personal limitations of the artist, self-imposed or imposed by nature. And these limitations are not necessarily an evil. The fence which prevents us from wandering unwittingly into a field full of wild cattle, or from approaching too near the edge of a dangerous cliff, is not an evil, neither is the limitation of the tone-power of our neighbour's pianoforte. Some limitations even of our means of expression—especially where width rather than intensity of expression is limited—are, in fact, a real gain. A wide area of expression may mean diffuseness just where directness is most needed.

The character and direction, and sometimes the narrowness, of the limitations imposed by nature or circumstances upon the artist, make what we call his personality or his individuality—which are not quite the same thing, for the personality must have something in common with that of other persons, while the individuality is that which separates and distinguishes him from all others. We resent the removal of such limitations if it in any way alters the personal character of the work; and quite rightly, for in a work of art qua art such personal character in all details is of greater importance than is anything else.

Some will go so far in their regard for the characterising qualities of limitation, as to object to the alteration of the pianoforte works of Beethoven, by giving them the benefit of the extended gamut of modern instruments. Whether Beethoven's evident chafing at the limited scale possessed by the instruments of his day resulted in any added characterisation in those works I am personally very doubtful. All sincere lovers of the man and his music, however, will object to the removal of the characteristics which are the result of his natural limitations—of his wild, nature-loving, though ill-sorted and unsatisfied temperament, of his longing for human sympathy and affection, and his boorish manners which drove them from him, even of his deafness which limited his rhythmic variety and sometimes perverted his sense of what he was writing—in order to give him the suave facility of a Felix Mendelssohn. The personal and circumstantial limitations of Sebastian Bach made him the writer of the Church Cantatas and the Concerti, which we would not willingly give up for anything else, however much we may agree in general with Wagner's sneer at the writers of Psalms. And the limitations of Haydn and Mozart made them the most transparent writers of all time, and also the founders of modern instrumentation as employed alike by Wagner, Brahms, Elgar, Debussy, Stravinsky, and the maddest youngsters of to-day.

Self-imposed limitations (I do not speak of limitations of technique, whether imposed by natural defects, by lack of opportunity, or by sheer neglect to acquire it, for in any case these are always a drawback) are those relating to instrumentation, form, use of words or other extraneous matter, tonality, and possibly one or two other matters. Such limitations are always useful as studies and exercises, and frequently in no other capacity. What composer is there who will not say that the necessity of trying to get an effect from a small orchestra for which he is longing to employ a large one has not given him a greater command of tone-quality and the other effects of good orchestration; or having to write in a prescribed and circumscribed form like that of the fugue has not, as one of the most successful of our younger composers has said, 'made writing easy'? And what composer will not equally say that most of what he wrote in these circumstances, even though at the time he considered it to be fine music, is now of no value to anyone except himself, and to himself only for the facility it has given him?

There are many cases, however, where limitation of means of expression has proved a real incentive to composition, occasionally in quantity, but more often in quality. Difficulties which require a strong effort of the will to overcome are needed by many people to make them achieve more than the humdrum work of everyday life. The slow, deliberate, steady effort, the careful, sustained shaping of phrases and lines and stanzas, or of chords and musical ideas, results in a higher artistic and more intense and effective expression than would be reached if one followed the line of least resistance. Were it not for the limitations deliberately imposed, the art of such people would be wasted and evaporated in the ether.

Still others find in the limitations imposed for some definite end a cause of study of the nature of those limitations which extends their expressive power in other directions. Perosi has been mentioned as an instance of its doubtful success, but there can be no doubt of its efficiency in the case of Vaughan Williams in his Mass, his Merciles Beauty, or his still smaller The Sky above the Roof. It is the use of certain limitations in each of these works that makes it so completely expressive as well as strangely beautiful. In modern literature there is the almost more striking instance of Robert Bridges and his classical poems, and in an earlier period of the many who were inspired to write verses of rare charm simply by the challenge held out by the restrictions of form. When Bridges dispenses with the restrictions of word and style which the choice of classical subjects implies, he nearly always falls from the high standard of nobility and significance of utterance with which these invest his best work. Turning again to music we find that Scriabin, until he devised his restricted and arbitrary gamuts, produced works that will not compare with The Divine Poem or Vers la flamme. These scales or chords, it is true, break away from the trammels of the diatonic and chromatic scales, but only to forge newer and heavier ones in their place.

Even Mr. Bedford finds inspiration or technical assistance in the limitations imposed by 'song-ina-single-line,' for he can scarcely deny that the putting aside of all the assistance which an instrument or a number of instruments supply does 'circumscribe one's musical means of expressiveness,' for an accompaniment or a ritornello is often the most effective means of creating an atmosphere or suggesting a mood which the voice alone cannot do or does only with difficulty. Always the putting off of one set of limitations implies the taking up of a new set, it may be more or less narrow, but always with the idea that the new ones will be more helpful to us in writing in the style we desire than the old ones. The history of art is, in fact, one long list of limitations and the way they have been overcome—not by removal, but by utilisation. Palestrina created or re-formed the highest style of Church music by the imposition of limitations of material and treatment; Haydn created the most permanent styles of symphonic and chamber music by the imposition (conscious or unconscious) of certain formularies, and by the limitation to four instruments of a certain type of music; Wagner revised the conditions of music-drama by the limitation of the methods of characterisation; even the invention of recitative was the discovery of the advantage of certain limitations in the methods of musical narration. Wherever we turn to find new or different styles of utterance, we find that they are created by the fact that limitations exist and that the artists who create them use such limitations; and the finer the style the narrower are its limitations.

Ad Libitum

By 'FESTE'

A heavy post has descended on me. Most of the writers are still concerned with that question of popular music, and some of them send some awful examples. More than one suggests the establishment of a kind of pillory, in which from month to month may be exhibited extracts from 'winners,' &c. But such a feature would occupy more space than can be spared, and would call for an undue amount of music-type setting. Moreover, as this journal is not read by the kind of folk who like rubbish—or, at all events, that particular kind of rubbish—there seems to be little advantage in a systematic exposure. (But there is at least one reader who likes the Felix brand: our friend 'The Traveller,' who returns to the charge once more in the correspondence column. I don't like his taste, but I admire his courageous sticking to his guns. There are too many people merely pretending to like good music: snobs obsessed by big names. I prefer 'The Traveller's' out-and-out attitude. Some day he will be converted, and will make a fine, red-hot apostle.)

Among the examples sent mention must be made of Arbutus, by M. A. E. Davis, described in large type as 'The Greatest of all Intermezzi,' and alleged to be played 'with the utmost enthusiasm by nearly every orchestra in the kingdom.' 'In demand everywhere'; 'The piece with the lovely 'cello melody.' The advertisement gives a few bars of this 'melody'—a puerile strain—and then follows it up with this:

EX. 1.

'Another beautiful example (Chords).'

I like that parenthetical information—(chords): but why stop there? Why not tell us some more? Thus, in the next bar (triplets); and Mr. (or Mrs., or Miss) Davis's skilful use of ped. and staccato surely calls for some bracketed notice.

The only other musical example I can find room for is a particularly nauseating specimen of Church music. It is set to a Communion hymn, and I mention with regret (but not surprise) that the composer is a clergyman. The opening two lines are just dull commonplace, and 'had the reverend gentleman been content to continue on a plane where he was clearly at home the result would have been merely one more addition to the thousands of futile hymn-tunes. But in the second half he aspired—in fact, he aspired, with a glance at The Rosary on the way, thus:

EX. 2.

This 'tune' is published in what appears to be a Church journal (the title is missing) under the heading, in red and black capitals, 'Church Music of To-day,' and a foot-note sets forth the rates at which copies of the 'tune' will be supplied 'in order to bring new Church music within the reach of every parish'—rather less than a ha'penny a copy. The composer is the Rev. F. Last Bedwell, and, noting his middle name, we are reminded of the homely proverb about the shoemaker. Let us hope Mr. Bedwell will stick to his.

My protest against the misuse of the word 'lyric' has brought some letters. One comes from Mrs. Hubi-Newcombe (amicable, slightly incoherent and quaint in grammar, like her letter on page 545 of this issue), pointing out that I appear to doubt the quality and number of her lyrics. She tells me that in quoting two thousand as the number she has sold, she was below the actual figure. That settles the number. As to quality, she assures me that 'the majority are "poems" even more than they are "songs."' I can only repeat what I said last month: that the greatest of English lyrical poets have been able to leave us only a mere handful of examples of this rare and difficult art, and that any writer able to produce real lyrics by the thousand is greater than Keats, Shelley, and Wordsworth combined. Mrs. Hubi-Newcombe has written over two thousand lyrics, therefore, &c. On the other hand, we may not agree as to the application of the term 'lyric.' In fact, it is clear that we don't.

For there is perhaps no literary term that is more loosely employed. Here, for example, is a specimen sent me by one of my correspondents. I quote the introductory paragraph:

JUST A GIRL THAT MEN FORGET

A lesson in song. The truest story ever told. An appealing musical sermon that has won the commendation of press and pulpit throughout the nation. A particularly timely ballad, combining a lyric [there it is!] of unusual sentiment and charm with a melody that is catchy as it is beautiful.

HERE IS THE GREAT VERSE *

Dear little girl, they call you a flirt,
A flapper with up-to-date ways,
You may shine brightly, but just like a lamp,
You'll burn out one of these days.
Then your old-fashioned sister will come into view,
With a husband and kiddies, but what about you?

Ah! What, indeed? However, in the second verse the lyricist holds out prospect of an ending no less happy and domestic than that of your old-fashioned sister, so the moral of this musical sermon (commended by press and pulpit) is that after all, dear little girl, you may have your fling. Don't worry about that minatory 'great verse'; what counts is the

SECOND VERSE

Wall-flower girl, now dry all those tears,
For you won't be left all alone,
Some day you'll find yourself upon a throne,
Queen of a sweet little home,
And you, gay little flapper, you'll live and you'll learn,
When you've gone down the pathway that has no return.

We need not inquire too closely into the question of the throne and the sweet little home being found down the pathway that has no return. And after all, this 'lyric' is no worse than heaps of other puerilities put forth bearing that distinguished label.

In a Reading newspaper I note the following:

The congregation were much impressed by the unaccompanied rendition by Miss — of a syncopated Litany to the Blessed Virgin in Latin.

It sounds an odd mixture, and syncopation is not easily made apparent in an unaccompanied single part. Perhaps a Reading reader who happened to be amongst those impressed by the 'rendition' will send along some particulars.

'A humble though ardent devotee of the orchestra' writes concerning Dr. Froggatt's article on 'The Incomplete Orchestra' in the May issue of the Musical Times. 'Does Dr. Froggatt advocate no orchestral practices at all unless comprised of the instruments he names?' asks my correspondent. He goes on to say that he is one of a small party that meets on Saturday nights, not for public practice, but for 'musical enjoyment in tone-colour that we cannot get in our homes with mere pianoforte and solo instruments.' The force consists of brass and strings—no wood-wind—with a pianoforte to fill up.

Dr. Froggatt, being a human being as well as a musician, would, I am sure, be the last to suggest that these stout fellows should worry themselves a jot about their 'incompleteness.' There is no better musical fun than this scratch band work; in many ways it even beats that other fine game, choral singing. I never spent jollier evenings than in directing such a force some years ago—five violins, one violoncello, one double-bass, two flutes, and a cornet, with yours to command at a pianoforte so tin-kettlish that it might well have been regarded as representing the 'kitchen' department of the orchestra. Our little force played almost entirely by ear, though copies were used with suspicious ostentation. The worst reader was the double-bass, and I well remember his vigour in straightforward tonic and dominant passages, and his retirement into private life when agility was needed, or chromatic situations suddenly developed. Not that he admitted failure. At such moments I noticed that his copy had to be put straight, or his pince-nez required adjusting—the latter a conveniently-frequent need, as he sawed away with vigour and was of a fat and exuding habit of body. Such a player Beethoven must have had in mind when he wrote the 'Village Festival' part of the Pastoral Symphony. You may have all the rest of the work—the joyful feelings on arriving at the truly-rural surroundings, the very mild thunderstorm, the babbling brooklet, and twittering wild-fo, and so forth; but leave me the bit of the 'Village Festival' where the amateur bassoonist blows out his little three- and four-note tonic and dominant phrase. Just such an one was my double-bass, and I never hear that funny bassoon passage without seeing him vigorously laying his bow across the strings when he saw all clear ahead.

My correspondent says he wants my opinion on his incomplete orchestra. He has it above. 'I feel,' he goes on, 'that you would be sympathetic, and I can imagine you saying, "Bless you, my children! Carry on! (so long as I'm not there to hear you)."

* This is not a satirical comment of mine, but the actual heading.

He is right except as to his closing words. So far as my blessing is helpful, he and his mates have it. I hope they will carry on, but so far from wishing not to hear them, I should like to join in the fun. I have had some dalliance with the bass trombone, and have played the cymbals—the latter with some uncertainty in the matter of entry, but (I was told) with a good deal of dash when well in. If I were with our friends on one of their Saturday night tone-colour revels, they would find me willing enough to listen, and even, without much pressing, ready to take a hand myself. But if it be with the trombone, the bass must be good, honest tonic and dominant, and moving at the right slow and dignified pace. Any light and wanton departures from this will find me (like my old double-bass player) otherwise engaged. If this somewhat fitful type of performance doesn't suit them, they must give me the cymbals and a free hand.

NEW LIGHT ON EARLY TUDOR COMPOSERS

BY W. H. GRATTAN FLOOD

XXXII.—WILLIAM PARSONS

There is considerable confusion over the composers Parsons, as two of the same name were practically contemporaneous. However, William Parsons was evidently of a slightly earlier period, as he flourished under Henry VIII. and Queen Mary; Robert Parsons did not come into prominence till 1560.

According to the late Prof. Wooldridge, in his article on the 'Psalter' in Grove's Dictionary, William Parsons was 'an excellent composer,' as is evidenced by his admirable setting of tunes in Day's Whole Psalmes in foure partes, published in 1563. This rare publication, in four volumes—of which only a few copies can be traced—contains a hundred and forty-one compositions, of which eighty-one are by Parsons, who seems to have been the editor.

Up to the present, however, notwithstanding the admitted excellence of Parsons's compositions, his biography has been a blank. None of our musical historians could penetrate the veil which hid the life-work of this remarkable Tudor composer, and hence the facts now gleaned may prove of interest if not of permanent value.

William Parsons was born about the year 1516, and he seems to have essayed composition as early as 1536. One thing is certain: there is an interesting Latin Motet of his in a Bodleian MS. (Bodl. e. 423) dating from 1537. Another Motet of his, also in Latin, may be dated as from the year 1546, before the death of Henry VIII.

In 1551 Parsons was engaged by the Dean and Chapter of Wells as assistant-choirmaster and copyist. The then Dean was Dr. William Turner, who had been installed vice Dr. John Goodman deprived, and evidently Parsons became an accommodating servant of the 'reformed' Dean. In the Communar's Paper Book of Wells for the year 1553 we find that on February 11 the sum of 16s. 4d. was paid to William Parsons 'for divers songs and books by him made and to be made.'

For the year 1553 the sum of 12s. was paid to Parsons by the Dean and Chapter of Wells 'for divers songs by him made and to be made.' On August 29, 1553, he was paid 5s. 'for 15 books containing 3 Masses and a Primer'; and another significant entry is a payment of 4s. 8d. for 'a book of the Common Prayer for the quyer.'

In 1553, with the advent of Queen Mary, Dr. John Goodman was restored to the Deanery, but was again deprived in 1559, and William Turner was re-installed as Dean. Meantime, like the historic Vicar of Bray, Parsons kept his post at Wells, and in the Communar's Book for 1558 there is a fairly lengthy account of payments to William Parsons, including the following items:

For making and pricking of certayne songs in English, 20s.

For iiij psalter books, bought at Bristol, paid for every psalter book ijs ijd, 8s. 8d.

For two Bibles in English, and 4d. for carriage of them from Bristol, 22s.

Parsons remained at Wells until 1561, but after that date we have no record of him till his collaboration in the publication of Day's Whole Psalmes in foure partes, in 1563, of which a second edition was published in 1565.

It may be of interest to note that this remarkable, harmonized version of the Psalms included a hundred and forty-one compositions. Of these, as before stated, eighty-one are by William Parsons, while of the remainder twenty-seven are by Thomas Causton, seventeen by J. Hake, eleven by R. Brimble, and four by N. Southerton.

As to Parsons's share in this harmonized Psalter—of which he was in reality the editor—Prof. Wooldridge says:

The style of Parsons is somewhat severe, sometimes even harsh, but always strong and solid. . . . The importance of this Psalter, at once the first and the most liberal of its kind, entitles it to a complete example of its workmanship. The tune chosen is that to the 137th Psalm, an excellent specimen of the English imitations of the French melodies, and interesting also as being one of the two tunes which, appearing among the first printed in Crespin's edition of Sternhold, are in use at this day. It was evidently a favourite with Parsons, who has set it three times—twice placing it in the tenor, and once in the upper voice.

However, in a foot-note, he adds:

It must be confessed that this tune is more beautiful without the setting. Parsons has not only avoided every kind of modulation, but has even refused closes which the ear desires, and which he might have taken without having recourse to chromatic notes. It remained for later musicians to bring out the beauty of the melody.

I can find no trace of William Parsons after the year 1563, and evidently he died soon afterwards. His namesake, Robert Parsons, drowned himself on January 25, 1570.

THE PASSING OF A TRADITION

BY THOMAS ARMSTRONG

Death has lately robbed us of two organists who were not only distinguished men, but were also two of the last figures surviving from a school of musicianship that is now, for good and evil, almost extinct. In the musical world, as in other worlds, much bad tradition is dying, and many fine experiments are being made, but without being laudator temporis acti, one can see a great deal of good grain going with the chaff.

The organist of fifty years ago was trained 'in the workshops.' He began life as a choir-boy at some cathedral—Sir Frederick Bridge began it at six years of age—and remained, after his voice broke, as an 'articled pupil,' until finally he became a master himself, and found an organ-loft in which he could teach to others the art that he had inherited, and to which, perhaps, he had himself added something. He was closely associated with music, therefore, from his most impressionable years, as a performer and not merely as a listener, and was unconsciously absorbing a musical atmosphere of a fine sort. His later training included the whole of an organist's and choir-master's duties, pianoforte playing, and theoretical work. The system is very different, of course, from the modern one. The boy of to-day has lessons from a local teacher, who gives him an hour a week, or from a master at his school, and when he is sufficiently advanced goes to one of the great central schools. Here he has the best training in his special study, organ or pianoforte, or whatever it is, and class training in general musical subjects, and acquires in the corridors and elsewhere what enthusiasts call 'a wide musical interest,' and critics 'a useless smattering of all sorts of things.' There are advantages in both methods, of course. No system at all can instil talent or suppress it altogether, but the new system can and does impart to the really unmusical a shallow brilliance that at first sight resembles talent, while the older method made no attempt to do this. But the older training had a thoroughness which the newer lacks, and had about it more of an air of practical, determined craftsmanship. And a large part of any art is, after all, a matter of craft. Just as in the old schools of painting there was a sort of inherited craftsmanship, a thing of oils and pigments, quite apart from 'message,' which is now lost to painters, so in music there was very definitely an inherited craftsmanship which is not acquired under the new system as it was under the old.

The system did not provide for the training of specialists in other branches of music than the organist's; but it did provide the best possible foundation for subsequent specialisation, and there was seldom any failure to recognise those whose talents fitted them for such training. The inevitable result of the modern system which provides it for all who ask for it, is that many young men go through their courses of conducting, composition, or pianoforte playing, without the necessary grounding, and without its being discovered that they have neither the temperament, the musicianship, nor the personality that are necessary. They find themselves, of course, at the end of their training, unable to do anything well enough to compel the respect of others or to support themselves, and it's a case of 'Heaven help them!' if they have no private means.

The chief defect of the system was that the cathedrals, which were the centres of teaching, were generally isolated in small provincial towns where opportunities for hearing music and keeping abreast of its developments were small. But there were compensations even in this, and, indeed, until lately it was impossible to keep abreast of musical progress at all in England: you had to go to Germany if you wanted that sort of education. The cathedral training did provide a 'soaking in music,' which is so important for the young musician, though it was in a limited range of music. The organ-loft was a real centre for a considerable district: there were good performances of much of the best cathedral music, and of oratorio; and in many cases a very high standard of musicianship was set by the master. There was an intensely practical atmosphere: there were no dabblers, no dilettante young men such as are seen in the corridors of London concert-halls, carrying scores that they cannot read. There was nothing amateur about it. The apprentice did not listen to a lecture on choir-training: he watched it being done, and took his turn at it. He did not read a book on organ accompaniment: he had to do it, and that sometimes with an irascible master standing at his side, ready, should he hesitate, to elbow him off the seat before he had time to upset the choir.

It was the practical atmosphere that was so fine. Methods of teaching were, no doubt, primitive, and Dr. —'s 'Chorister's Singing Method' was too often simply the cane; but more was learnt by experience than could be got from the most admirable 'psychological' lectures. Some branches of training were, no doubt, neglected altogether. Ear-training did not exist. People who had been in touch with music from childhood could not but have trained ears; they acquired them by natural and unaided growth, which would have been helped by attention. The standard of organ-playing, too, was lower than it is now, though this was much more an affair of the possibilities of the instrument than of musicianship or training. Fifty years ago it was considered a feat to play Mendelssohn's fourth Sonata: the youngest of us must know organs on which it is a feat to play it now—where one needs to be, indeed, pulsator organorum, and to punch the keys down. What every man did learn—at any rate, in the organ-loft that I knew—was to write good 'strict five-part, fifth species'—'after all,' as one of our great men has said lately, 'the root of the whole matter.' Many vocal compositions of to-day consist of two tunes, one sung in octaves by trebles and tenors, the other sung in octaves by altos and basses. This is not because the composer,—as sometimes Vaughan Williams—out of a complete choral technique, wants this particular effect, but because he can think of only two tunes, and is beside himself to find something for the inner parts to do. I shall, of course, be told that in spite of this the church music of the late 19th century, with a few exceptions, was as bad as it could be, and I do not wish to deny this. But the badness was not a matter of technique, which after all is the only thing that training can touch. The music is bad because it reflects the weak, sentimental, and insincere religion of its time, from which only deeper natures could escape. Bad as it is—some of it—practical musicians know that it 'comes off.' Its effects, such as they are, are intentional and successful, and this is what gives it its tenacity. There is much music more admirable in spirit, which, however worthy, cannot by any amount of skill and practice be made to 'come off,' and such music is quite useless.

And what has happened to our 'playing from score'? One remembers the skill and fine taste with which accompaniments were played from the scores of Boyce and Arnold, sometimes with all the parts, including the soprano, in their old clefs. One remembers the scorn with which a young cathedral organist was regarded who had to have recourse to an octavo edition because he could not use the score. It is a small point, of course, but it is an indication. For even if they were heavy and inconvenient, there was a spaciousness about those nobly-printed, leather volumes. They had been subscribed for, generations ago, by the Dean and Chapter; or, if the clergy were too mean, by the organist himself, and had been used by his successors ever since. But now, in many cathedrals, with the arrival of a new-comer, they are 'dispossessed, aside-thrust, chuck'd down' into some cellar, to rot there in the damp. No doubt an octavo performance is just as good, and is attended with fewer risks, but 'safety first' is of all mottoes the most despicable; and though one can live a decent, christian life in a Pimlico boarding-house, there is still a quality about the Cotswold manor with all its lack of 'conveniences.'

Other things have gone too. The traditional style of accompanying is largely lost. Appoggiaturas in fugue subjects, door-knockers in vacant beats, mercifully, are no more: but gone too are the breadth of style, the readings inherited from composers themselves, and, very largely, that ability to 'conduct by accompaniment,' so firmly and so unobtrusively, which all Sir George Elvey's pupils seem to have had.

In short, 'the grand manner' is gone, and, as Meredith says at the end of Beauchamp's Career 'This is what we have in exchange for Beauchamp.' Whether we regret the exchange or not will be largely a matter of our own training and inclination. At any rate the most conservative of us will probably admit that some bad has perished with the good.

AN EXPERIMENT IN MUNICIPAL MUSIC

An interesting experiment in Sunday evening concerts was carried out at Rochdale during last winter, and some details of the series may be of value to other municipalities which are thinking of extending their musical activities.

Before last season the Rochdale Corporation had confined its scheme to ten organ recitals during the winter, and a very fine level of programme has been maintained for over a hundred recitals by the Borough organist, Mr. Frank Greenwood. The dwindling audiences at these recitals in recent years have, however, suggested that some greater variety of Sunday evening music would be welcome, and accordingly a proposal was made to the Town Council that a series of ten miscellaneous concerts should be arranged to run alternately with the organ recitals. This proposal was accepted on the following terms: That the Corporation grant the free use of the Town Hall and pay for printing of programmes, advertising, and attendants; that there be a uniform admission price of sixpence, including programme and tax; and that any loss as between the net admissions and the cost of the artists' fees, hire of pianoforte, &c., be met privately by the proposer of the concerts. The entire direction of the concerts—choice of artists, programmes, &c.—was left by the Corporation to the promoter, with the result that the concerts were rather more daring than is usually the case with those which are controlled by a public body. The performances started at 8.15, and finished between 9.15 and 9.30, and a very high standard of music was upheld. The series of ten concerts was laid out as follows: two orchestral and three choral concerts with soloists (vocal or instrumental) at each; three vocal and pianoforte recitals; and two trio concerts with a vocalist at each. The hearty co-operation of local orchestras and choirs was of great value to the promoter, and enabled him to make the series far more representative than would otherwise have been possible.

A few details of the music will be of interest as proving that, if it is adequately performed, the finest music may be offered without hesitation to a 'popular' audience. Amongst the works given during the season were:

Orchestral.—Symphony in C minor (Beethoven); the Unfinished Symphony.

Choral.—Alto Rhapsody (Brahms); War Song of the Saracens, Villon's Ballade, and Cavalier Tunes (Bantock); Songs from the Greek Anthology (Elgar).

Chamber music.—Trio in B flat, Op. 97 (Beethoven); Trio in A minor (Tchaikovsky).

Pianoforte solos.—Sonata in A flat, Op. 26 (Beethoven); Scherzo in B flat minor, Five Studies, Nocturne in D flat, Bolero (Chopin); Rhapsodie Espagnole (Liszt); Chaconne (Bach-Busoni).

Songs.—Three Michelangelo Lieder; Und willst du deinen Liebsten sterben sehen (Hugo Wolf); Nacht und Träume, Auf dem Wasser zu singen; Du bist die Ruh, Die Allmacht, Der Doppelgänger, Der Tod und das Mädchen, Das Fischermädchen, Haiden-Roslein (Schubert), Auf dem Kirchhofe, Das Mädchen spricht, Die Mainacht, Meine Liebe ist grün (Brahms); Les Roses d'Ispahan, Après un rêve (Fauré); Aubade (Lalo); Les papillons (Chausson); Romance (Debussy); Bredon Hill, Loveliest of Trees, Is my team ploughing? Requiescat (George Butterworth); Three Songs of Travel and Silent Noon (Vaughan Williams).

For such programmes as these there was immense enthusiasm. The hall when packed to its utmost will accommodate 975 persons. The average attendance at the ten concerts was 920. The doors were opened at 7.30, and an hour before that time people began to stand in the queue. The following specimen programme, given on March 9, attracted an audience of 970:

Songs ...	(a) 'Nacht und Träume' ...	Schubert
	(b) 'Auf dem Wasser zu singen' ...	"
	(c) 'Du bist die Ruh' ...	"
	(d) 'Die Allmacht' ...	"
	Miss Alison King.

Trio for pianoforte, violin, and 'cello in B flat
(Op. 97) ...	Beethoven
Mr. Hamilton Harty, Mr. Don Hyden,
Mr. Clyde Twelvetees.

Songs ...	(a) 'Auf dem Kirchhofe' ...	Brahms
	(b) 'Das Mädchen spricht' ...	"
	(c) 'Die Mainacht' ...	"
	(d) 'Meine Liebe ist grün' ...	"
	Miss Alison King.

The songs were sung in German, English translations and explanatory notes being printed on the programme.

From the artistic point of view, as showing the power of great music to move a large, popular audience in a Lancashire industrial town, the concerts have proved a revelation to many who anticipated that the programmes would be too 'highbrow.'

A word in conclusion on the financial side. The Corporation's liability, as set out in the opening paragraph, has been £62 17s. (programmes, £34; advertising, £16 2s.; attendants, £12 15s.). The private liability has been £15 18s. 9d., as shown by the following balance-sheet:

RECEIPTS.			EXPENSES.
	£	s. d.		£	s. d.
9202 Admissions at 6d.	230	1 0	Artists' Fees	158	3 6
Less Entertainment Tax	57	10 3	Hire of Piano
		172 10 9	(8 Concerts)	30	0 0
Deficit (paid by promoter)	...	15 18 9	Bank Charge	0	6 0
		£188 9 6		£188 9 6

Thus the entire loss was £78 15s. 9d. on the ten concerts, of which £62 17s. is paid out of the rates and £15 18s. 9d. defrayed privately. It will be seen that had it not been for the Tax the concerts would have been practically free of cost to the rates. The hire of a pianoforte is also a large item, but the promoter preferred to secure a Steinway grand rather than save money by using a totally inadequate upright.

The fame of the concerts has spread throughout the North of England, and many inquiries have been received as to the details of finance and management. It is hoped that this brief outline may therefore be of interest and assistance to any towns where such Sunday evening music is contemplated.

NOTES ON MONTEVERDE'S 'ORFEO'

BY FRANK HOWES

Early in March of this year a performance of Monteverde's opera, Orfeo, took place in London, at the Institut Français, Cromwell Gardens. It seems strange that so famous a work had not previously put its head out of the history books, but this was claimed to be its first performance in this country. M. Louis Bourgeois was responsible for the production, which was given in concert-form with pianoforte accompaniment, and himself took the name part, as he had done twenty years previously at the first performance in France under Vincent d'Indy. D'Indy's abbreviated edition was used at both these revivals. Something more will have to be said about the editions of the work that are now available, for there is no complete edition that corresponds with the full text as Monteverde printed it in 1609 and 1615, nor is there any version with an English text, otherwise there would surely have been some performance before this.

The interest of M. Bourgeois's performance is very great in more than one direction. I suppose that in the minds of most musical people the name Monteverde calls up a cluster of associations something like this: 'Monteverde, Oh, yes! the dominant seventh man, tremolando on strings; ancestor of opera, father of Gluck and Wagner; a bold fellow, ruthless with his discords and suspensions.' Even in the history books he is a vivid enough personality to leave on the mind so much information, which, when you come to think of it, is a good deal. Compare it with what you remember of Simon de Montfort or the Venerable Bede, and you see that he belongs to another category. He is more like the remoter, but equally, vivid, Archimedes. But it is one thing to be vivid in history and another to be vital in Cromwell Gardens in 1924. This none the less was the chief interest (primus inter pares is perhaps more accurate) for one listener at any rate on March 8. Here, apparently, we had an opera that could be staged successfully to-day. The subject in one form or another appeals to the mind and heart now as much as it always has and always will. Holst has written Savitri and Boughton Alkestis within the last few years, which shows us that at the moment it is this aspect of the Love and Death theme, rather than the Tristan aspect—the classical more than the romantic—which appeals to our present temper. Orpheus himself, in Monteverde's opera, is alive enough, both musically and dramatically, to carry the whole thing through. His song of triumphant joy in Act 4 stands out for its splendid vitality. The difficulties that attend the production of an ordinary Greek play in the disposition of the chorus do not arise in Orfeo, for Monteverde has put it on the stage, first and last, as a company of nymphs and shepherds, who at the end dance a 'Moresca,' and in the middle as a chorus of spirits in the infernal regions, and he has provided them with appropriate music in four and five parts. But if the form of the Greek chorus has been dissolved, the character largely remains. 'No human effort is attempted in vain,' they chant—unlike Gluck's spirits, who are passing no moral judgments when they sing:

On these meadows are all happy-hearted.

The most serious change that would have to be made if the opera was produced to-day would be in the orchestration. The list of instruments—of which several are not to be found in the ordinary reference books, is as follows:

Two gravicembali.
Two contrabassi de viola.
Twelve viole da brazzo.
One double-harp. (Parry* says 'two harps'.)
Two violini piccoli alla Francese (the first appearance of our modern violin in Italian music).
Two chitaroni (lutes) (in the score he requires three).
Two organi di legno (probably small positive organs of flue pipes).
Three bassi di gamba.
Four trombones (though in the score he prescribes five).
One regal (reed organ).
Two cornets.
One flautino alla Vigesima seconda. (What does this mean? Two flutes are required by the score in Act I.)
One clarino con tre trombe sordine.

How are we to modernise this? For it would be practically impossible to reproduce the performance of 1607. It would hardly be worth while, for example, to mobilize three lutenists, especially if we had a harpsichord which would serve to provide the plucked-string tone-colour. We could either hand the whole score over to Sir Edward Elgar and get him to give us a modern version complete with tubas and triangles—this would be the course that Monteverde himself would have wished to see adopted—or, unable to divest ourselves entirely of our antiquarian scruples, we might prefer to keep as near the original as possible, and merely make a few substitutions for the impossibly obsolete instruments.

* Musical Association Proceedings, February, 1916.

Plenty of brass is already provided. If for the organo di legno we substitute a couple of horns, we can then dispense with the cornets. This, with three trombones and a couple of trumpets, will give a complete family of brass on which, if required, the 'Sinfonia a 7' could be played. Ex. 1 would sound well on brass! D'Indy, indeed, assigns it to five trombones, but in the original no instrumentation is specified the first time this ritornello appears; at its second appearance it is directed to be played pp on strings and organo di legno. This short passage is a foreshadowing of the leit-motif principle, for it is only heard when Orpheus is about to deal with supernatural beings; we might call it in Wagnerian terms the 'approach to the gods' theme. It is first heard in Act 3, on the approach of Orpheus to the underworld, and during his appeal to Charon, and it occurs again in Act 5, just before the appearance of Apollo to bear his son away to heaven:

EX. 1.

To return to the orchestration: for the regal, if we did not care for a harmonium, we might substitute two oboes and two bassoons. Two flutes are required in Act 2, and will therefore be available elsewhere when necessary, and the strings will follow the ordinary modern arrangement. It would be better than falling back on a pianoforte to have a good, modern harpsichord (for even two of the old specimens would probably not be powerful enough to be effective), and a harp would be necessary for the big rhapsodical scena in Act 3. This sounds a rather unbalanced collection of instruments, but there will be no tutti passages. Monteverde has not scored the work. Often enough he merely writes ritornello, and leaves us to guess from the clefs what instruments he intended to take part. At other times he writes at the head of the number, Al suono del organo di legno ed un chitarone, or whatever it may be. The services of a skilful arranger would be needed, in any case, to translate the original instrumentation into the modest compromise with modern scoring that I have suggested. D'Indy indicates in his edition the scoring he used at his performance of the work at the Schola Cantorum at Paris in 1904, but I imagine that there is no other 'full score' of the work in existence.

The treatment of the plot is such that modern editors cut the work in several different ways and still leave it an intelligible whole. As Monteverde set it, Euridice has only eighteen bars to sing in the whole work—a short recitative in Act 1 answering Orpheus's protestations of love and happiness, and again a few bars in Act 4 as she fades from his sight. But the Greek convention of a Messenger is adopted to announce the death of Euridice, and her part is important in Act 2. Hope is also personified, and intervenes at the beginning of Act 3, and the whole opera is prefaced by a prologue spoken by Music herself (a soprano). Charon, Pluto, and Proserpina take a hand in the unfolding of the plot, which follows the classical story until the loss of Euridice, where a twist is given to stave off a too unhappy ending. In Act 5 Orpheus expresses not so much abandonment of grief as resignation, and Apollo (his father) appears in a cloud and together they ascend to heaven singing a florid duet. Whereupon the chorus of shepherds sings a happy chorus, and banishes all possible traces of sadness in a lively dance. D'Indy has completely omitted Acts 1 and 5, and still retains the essentials of the play. If a happy ending is desired still more may be cut, and the play end with Orpheus's wonderful song of joy.

This may be a suitable place to say something of the differences between the available modern editions, for not one is complete. Eitner's (Breitkopf & Härtel, 1881, Gesellschaft für Musikforschung) is a scholarly edition and gives most of the music, but for some reason omits short passages of recitative at the beginning of Acts 3 and 4. The text is entirely reliable, for where necessary emendations (such as accidentals) have been made the original is also quoted in foot-notes, and the original edition is followed in all respects with the greatest care. I say the 'original' edition and am not strictly truthful, for the edition with which I compared it was not the first edition of 1609, but the second of 1615, of which there is a perfect copy in the Bodleian Library. Eitner's filling-in of the unfigured bass is a little more elaborate than that of the recent edition by Malipiero (Chester, 1923), who makes a special point of reducing his suggestions to the minimum and printing them in small type, but it is always perfectly restrained and nowhere resembles the pianoforte accompaniment provided by Giacomo Orefice in the Milan (Italian Association of the Friends of Music), 1909, edition. D'Indy's edition (1905), to which reference has already been made, was prepared for the special purpose of an actual performance and is very incomplete, but it has a French text which is likely to be intelligible to more Englishmen than the Italian of all the other editions. Further, it is entirely practical, for some of the original vocal writing presents very great difficulties, of which we may cite as an example the very characteristic repetitions of the same notes. D'Indy has translated some of these into turns and other ornaments, but has omitted the first part of Orpheus's big scene in Act 3, which, he says, is 'presque impossible à rendre avec des paroles françaises.' How much more then with English? Even Monteverde thought this solo difficult, for he has written two versions of it, one over the other in the score, of which the top line is very much less florid than the bottom. He gives a stage direction: Orfeo, al suono del organo di legno ed un chitarone, canta una sola delle due parti. This is the first phrase in the two versions as they appear in the score (Eitner) :

Ex. 2.

Pos - sen - te spir - to . . .

to.

Vln.

Monteverde made for himself a reputation as an innovator ; the modern listener can appreciate that only by an effort of the imagination, his feelings being rather those of the man who discovered that Hamlet was full of quotations. He cannot help being interested in hearing the germs of much that was to come later, even if he is paying attention to it as a work of art and not as to a guide in a museum or to a demonstration in musical history. The resemblances to more modern works leap out at you, and there is no need to search carefully for far-fetched parallels, such for example as the one which likens the opening Toccata to the Prelude of Rhinogold because both are built on a single tonic chord in root position throughout their entire length. The general effect of much of the harmony suggests Purcell in its astringent quality, though the short sections and the abrupt modulations to related keys are characteristic of the earlier period. The opening of Orpheus's song of joy suggested Handel to me when I heard it, by virtue of its rhythm and breadth of style, but on playing it over afterwards the harmony sounded more prophetic of Purcell :

Ex. 3.

Qual o nor . . . di te sia

A favourite progression of Brahms occurs :

Ex. 4.

in qui campi di pròu - te di do - lo - re

and recalls a passage in the F major Symphony.

His use of ritornellos, of which I have already quoted one example, is the precursor of the leit-motif, in that it is a deliberate attempt to produce a definite emotional atmosphere for dramatic purposes by instrumental means, though of course the association of the phrase of music with particular events and characters is as yet very loose.

One of the most remarkable features of the work is the great flexibility and power of the recitative, which is very light, and carries the drama forward more rapidly than does a good deal of the recitative in later works. Opera, we are told, arose out of an attempt to declaim Greek drama, and there is a certain nimbleness about Orfeo which it probably owes to this cause. We almost wish that Wagner had sent Wotan to school with Orfeo to learn how to tell a story in recitative. But poor Wotan spoke neither Greek nor Italian—presque impossible, as D'Indy says.

M. Bourgeois has given us a taste of a work that is truly described as epoch-making, and it has stimulated our appetite for the complete thing. Will not someone interested in chamber opera stage it for us?

THE BOURNEMOUTH MUSICAL FESTIVAL

At Easter the third Municipal Musical Festival began at Bournemouth, and lasted for a fortnight. It was predominantly a festival of orchestral music, varied only by three recitals and two choral performances of Parry's Judith. Three of the usual Thursday afternoon symphony concerts fell in the Festival period ; in addition, Sir Henry Wood came down to conduct one concert, and there were two or three concerts which, though they did not contain symphonies in their programmes, included concertos or other works of symphonic scale. Altogether twenty-four concerts were given, which allowed scope for plenty of variety, of which Sir Dan Godfrey availed himself to the full. By so doing he enabled regular attenders to make interesting comparisons, work out some sums in addition and subtraction, and arrive at a few general conclusions. The classics were conspicuously absent. Bach appeared only at Mr. Samuel's recital (excluding, for the moment, Elgar's arrangement of the C minor Organ Fugue); Brahms only at the recital of Messrs. Sammons and Murdoch; Beethoven was represented only by the Leonora No. 3 Overture, which at a 'popular' evening concert secured more immediate and enthusiastic applause than any other single work; Mozart came off rather better with one or two arias and the A major Pianoforte Concerto which Mr. Gordon Bryan played at the last concert; Handel had an aria and an Elgarized Overture; Haydn did not appear at all; Wagner was packed into a concert of his own, and did not overflow into many others.

The great German classics were not given at the Festival because they are played all the year round at Bournemouth Winter Gardens, and Sir Dan Godfrey had other plans which he wished to execute. Without turning his concerts into curiosity-shops, he was able to give a very large number of modern English works. On Easter Monday, for instance, a dozen composers were represented, and seven of them were there in person to conduct. Indeed, the chief interest of the Festival lay in the comprehensive survey of British music which it was possible to make. For within fifteen days representative works of every British composer of eminence who has flourished in the last half-century were played, from right-wing composers like Stanford and Elgar, through moderate Liberals like Roger Quilter, Ethel Smyth, and the early Vaughan Williams, to Radicals like Frank Bridge, Mensheviks like Ireland and Bax, and thorough-going Bolsheviks like Eugène Goossens. Most of these works were unmistakably British in feeling, yet it was quite impossible to detect a common British idiom. What did appear very clearly, however, was the tendency of the younger school of composers to turn to Nature rather than human nature for their inspiration. Work after work, from Bantock's Hebridean Symphony and Frank Bridge's The Sea, to E. J. Moeran's symphonic impression In a Mountain Country and S. H. Braithwaite's Snow Picture, were purely pictorial, and many other compositions, like Foulds's Music Pictures and Goossens's Four Conceits, were translations into terms of sound of visual images. On the other hand, Elgar, Parry, and Ethel Smyth are interested not so much in what is observable by the eye as in what may be understood by the insight of a sympathetic mind. There were works intermediate between these two types, Bax's November Woods, Ethel Smyth's The Cliffs of Cornwall, and Maurice Besly's Chelsea China Suite, for example, where the visual picture is not merely set down in full score, but where the imagination sketches in some 'character'—but in these the vision, not the character, is the primary essence of the music. The Britisher, apparently, is essentially an 'extrovert' even in his music. How far the decline in religious enthusiasm and the chaos of contemporary philosophy are responsible for this state of things is an interesting speculation. But it is certainly curious that our own English renaissance in music springs from an exactly opposite mental outlook to that which gave birth to the great German movement which began before Bach and continued till Brahms.

Another interesting feature of the Festival was the amount of good, light music that Sir Dan has found to balance the musical diet of a holiday resort. I have written at some length on what was interesting at the Festival; to that must be added in brief the statement that every concert was enjoyable. Balance in a programme is all-important for enjoyment, and there was one most amusing occasion when Tchaikovsky's 1812 Overture drastically restored the equilibrium of a stiffish programme to the delight of everybody, including even the horn-spectacled cognoscenti who were present. The orchestral playing was excellent throughout, and the great virtue of Sir Dan as a conductor is that whether he likes the music or not he always gives an adequate and faithful performance of it. And it must not be supposed that he likes all the works that he gives. Indeed, perhaps the greatest value of this Festival to Music (with a capital M) is that the processes of natural selection can take place by allowing every kind of new work to be heard for a second or third time. First performances get most newspaper attention, but it is these repetitions of seldom-performed works that are really more important for everyone concerned. Impressions of the Festival that remain vivid after several weeks' interval are: among the less familiar works, Bantock's Hebridean Symphony and Braithwaite's Snow Picture; among 'effects,' the use of the pianoforte as an orchestral instrument by Howells and Braithwaite, and the use of quarter-tones as a dissolving view between two pictures by Foulds; in the realm of virtuosity, the wonders performed by the two Bournemouth drummers who preside over ten percussion instruments; among great performances, Sir Dan Godfrey's readings of Elgar's Enigma Variations and first Symphony; among tortured and ungrateful music—but no, nil nisi bonum de vivis.

F. H.

Occasional Notes

We congratulate The Gramophone on the completion of its first volume. The ordinary musical journal covers so much ground and surveys so wide a field, that with the best will in the world it cannot spare the space necessary for full discussion of gramophone matters. Only a journal devoted entirely to the subject can meet the situation, and Mr. Compton Mackenzie's venture does so in a thoroughly live manner. We are asked to state that, owing to the ever-growing calls on its space, it will begin its new volume (June) doubled in size and price (1s. instead of 6d.).

The Archbishop of Canterbury has conferred the degree of Doctor of Music on the Rev. G. R. Woodward. The honour is well-deserved, for Dr. Woodward has done long and valuable service on behalf of Church music. Such collections as The Cowley Carol Book and Songs of Syon have not only brought to light and into regular use much delightful old poetry and music; they have also played no small part in setting an improved standard in hymnody. The mention of poetry reminds us of

Dr. Woodward's distinguished work as translator of mediæval hymns and carols, and we are glad to hear that he has in the press yet another collection. It will be called The Cambridge Carol Book, the bulk of text and music being drawn from Cambridge writers, past and present: Thomas Tussle, Neale, G. H. Palmer, Charles Wood, &c.

The appointment of Sir Edward Elgar to the post of Master of the King's Musick is welcome on two grounds. First, it disposes of the doubts as to the continuance of the ancient office. Music in this country receives so little encouragement from high quarters that the abolition of one of the few State musical posts would have been a real grievance. The post being saved, it could not be bestowed more fittingly than on Sir Edward Elgar. As The Times remarked, the office is best regarded as a musical equivalent of the Poet Laureateship, and, this being so, Sir Edward is clearly marked out as our Musical Laureate. With so distinguished a composer as Master, music, and above all, British music, may well receive more consideration at Court than has hitherto been the case.

The broadcasting of the King's speech at Wembley led to an unconsciously amusing article in the Daily News by Alicia Adelaide Needham. The heading alone was worth the money:

OCTAVE RANGE
WOMAN MUSICIAN ANALYSES KING'S MUSICAL TONES

Then follows this note with its delightful non sequitur:

Mrs. Needham, as a musician, gives below her impression of the musical quality of the King's voice. She is the only woman who has conducted the Irish and Scots Guards bands at the Albert Hall.

Mrs. Needham heard the ceremony as 'one of a silent company of two hundred in a hospitable shop.' Having dropped a bouquet to H.R.H. ('then the Prince spoke, beautiful, clear, refined, and splendid, a wonderful voice to match our wonderful Prince'), she goes on:

Immediately after the King replied. I soon forgot to try to catch his words, as I was absorbed in listening to the music of his voice and jotting down its compass.

Then (in large type, and in the fattest of musical notation, as befits so momentous a pronouncement):

So many people have only three or four notes in the speaking voice, but the King has a splendid octave range. Very often it drops a sixth, sometimes a seventh, finishing afterwards on the key-note:

KING'S VOICE, AS MRS. NEEDHAM HEARD IT.

We heard the King's speech later in the day, and we have also a very good gramophone record of his voice, but it doesn't really sound like Mrs. Needham's chant, which has a strong suggestion of Fate taking an extra good wallop at the door. Still, we know what Mrs. Needham means, though she should have contented herself with merely mentioning the downward drop of the Royal voice. Quite a lot of readers of the Daily News know what a drop of a sixth sounds like, without taking the paper to the pianoforte and playing it.

However, now that the Daily News shows itself able to spare so much space for one of the things that don't matter, perhaps the Editor may be able to dole out a few more lines for musical criticism and news. For one reader who was interested in hearing a woman musician's 'analysis' of the King's voice there are dozens who would like to hear a good deal more from the Daily News's musical critic.

That excellent body the League of Arts promises three performances of Purcell's Dido and Æneas in Hyde Park on the afternoons (Saturdays) of July 5, 12, and 19. Amateur singers or orchestral players who wish to take part should apply for particulars at once to the Secretary, The Guildhouse, 12, Berwick Street, S.W.1. It is hoped that at least five hundred singers and players will be available. The League's fixtures for June are as follows: Sing-Song, led by Geoffrey Shaw and the League Choir (7); a Pageant of Dancing by the Mayfair School of Dancing (14); Folk-Dances by the English Folk-Dance Society, directed by Cecil Sharp (21); and a Song Festival and Display by two thousand Girl Guides, conducted by Martin Shaw (28). All these shows take place in Hyde Park, and will be given twice, at 3 and 7 p.m. Now it's up to the Clerk of the Weather!

The Hereford (Three Choirs) Festival is fixed for September 7, 9, 10, 11, and 12, with an attractive scheme that includes a new work by Edgar Bainton (The Tower), the B minor Mass, Brahms's Requiem and fourth Symphony, Parry's Blest Pair of Sirens, Elgar's Go, song of mine, Gerontius, The Kingdom, and the Violoncello Concerto, besides the customary Elijah and The Messiah. The only item that makes us lift a questioning eyebrow is Rossini's Stabat Mater, which will surely sound tawdry than ever in such company. On the purely orchestral side there will be new works by Atkins, Brewer, Reed, and Brent-Smith, and among the songs is Vaughan Williams's On Wenlock Edge. The list of soloists is long and strong. Dr. Percy Hull will be conductor.

Several interesting musical events will take place in Westminster Abbey during June and July. On June 2, at 8, a recital of unaccompanied Motets by the Special Service Choir will take place. On June 30, at 8, there will be a special evensong at which the music will be chosen entirely from the works of Stanford. This service is one of a series of annual commemorations of great Church composers. It had been intended to make the 1924 service a Croft celebration, but the death of Stanford made a change of plan inevitable. The Abbey Choir will be assisted by the Special Service Choir. Tickets for June 2 and 30 may be had from the Secretary, W.A.S.C., The Song School, Westminster Abbey (stamped, addressed envelope).

A service that should be of unique interest is promised for July 7, at 6, when a programme, mainly unaccompanied, will be sung by a body about five hundred strong, drawn from the choirs of the Abbey, St. Paul's Cathedral, the Chapel Royal, and St. George's Chapel; Canterbury, Chichester, Chelmsford, Ely, Peterborough, Rochester, St. Albans, Southwark, and Winchester Cathedrals; and from various College Chapels of Oxford and Cambridge. Rarely can such a collection of trained boys and men have been got together. The details of the programme are not yet settled, but we understand that it will be illustrative of the main periods of Church music. This notable service is in aid of King Edward's Hospital Fund, and it is hoped that all who apply for tickets will send a generous contribution.

Wembley visitors who examine the Queen's Doll's-House will observe that in the music-room are volumes of music. They may be interested to know that these tiny books (prepared by Messrs. Novello) are the real thing, and not mere covers. Here is a list of this diminutive library :

'Distant Chimes' ... ..	Mackenzie.
'Pavane' ... ..	German.
'The Hardy Tin Soldiers' ... ..	York Bowen.
'Highland Dance' ... ..	McEwen.
'Solemn Melody' ... ..	Walford Davies.
Suite in F ... ..	Parry.
'The Rachray Man' ... ..	Hamilton Harty.
'Crossing the Bar' ... ..	Bridge.
'The Days of Old' ... ..	Holbrooke.
'The Adoration' ... ..	Ireland.
'Madame Noy' ... ..	Bliss.
Four Songs ... ..	Holst.
Three Songs ... ..	Lord Berners.
'Four Conceits' ... ..	Goossens.
'Nereid' ... ..	Bax.
'A Toy Story' ... ..	Stanford.
'Adoration' ... ..	Frank Bridge.
'Fairy Lullaby' ... ..	Quilter.
'Country Dance' ... ..	Bainton.
'The Nightingale' ... ..	Delius.
'Margaret' ... ..	Austin.
'The Talisman' ... ..	Maddison.
'The Dancer' ... ..	Smyth.
'Childhood' ... ..	Cowen.
'The Knight's Leap' ... ..	Parratt.
'Songlets for Children' ... ..	Lady Arthur Hill.
'Nursery Songs' ... ..	Sharp.

We give an illustration of the Parry volume, and a facsimile of the four pages of the Gigue therefrom :

A new kind of sight-test for eagle-eyed readers !

Music in the Foreign Press

A MEMORY OF THE FIRST PERFORMANCE OF FRANCK'S VIOLIN SONATA

In Les Tablettes de la Schola (March), appeared an obituary by Vincent d'Indy of Madame Bordes-Pène, the gifted pianist whose artistic career was prematurely cut short in 1890 by an attack of paralysis. It was she and Ysaye who gave the first performance of Franck's Violin Sonata.

We all remember that winter afternoon. Night was falling. The hall of the Brussels Musée Moderne, where the concert was taking place, could not be lit up. By the time when the third movement of the Sonata was reached, it had become impossible to read the music. The organizers hesitated awhile. Was the end of the performance to be postponed? But Ysaye rapped his desk with his bow, and shouted, 'Ahead, quick!'—and the two admirable musicians boldly proceeded to play the Finale. The darkness was such that they remained invisible even to the first rank of the audience.

TRIVIALITY IN MUSIC

The March issue of Der Aufakt is devoted to various articles on the trivial aspects of music. Dr. Einstein writes on triviality, Dr. Nettl on street-songs, Erwin Schulhoff on drawing-room dance-tunes, Erwin Schul on operetta, and Erwin Hoff (these coincidences are really remarkable!) on public-house music. Paul Hindemith relates little stories of the concert-room. The problem, What is trivial in music, and why? remains unsolved. Dr. Einstein's article, however, provides a few slight clues.

Triviality in music hardly existed before the 19th century, when began to appear the perverted versions of folk-tunes which could crop up only in big cities. Whenever a period of ripeness of expression is reached, banality may ensue. Banality constitutes a recognition of the boundaries of expression, coupled with an incapacity to fill the acknowledged forms with live matter. Triviality is a protest from the proletarian, and there was no proletariat before the 19th century. The one instance of conscious triviality in first-rate music occurs in the final prestissimo of Beethoven's Choral Symphony.

MODERN HARMONY

In the same issue a contrast is provided by Bruno Weigl, who deals in grim earnest with questions of modern harmony.

SMETANA'S CENTENARY

Most of us know very few of Smetana's works, and are in no position to form a sound appraisal of his music. The scarcity of critical literature on the subject of his works renders the articles now appearing in Central Europe on the occasion of the centenary of his birth doubly useful to investigators in other countries. Among these should be mentioned contributions by Dr. E. Rychnowsky in Die Musik (March), the Musikblätter des Anbruch (March), and Der Aufakt (February); by E. Janetschek in the Zeitschrift für Musik (March), and Hába's 'Smetana and Modern Music,' in the Musikblätter des Anbruch (March).

There is also, for those who can deal with Czech, a special number (March) of the Prag Hudební Vychova.

WELLESZ'S 'ALKESTIS'

The same issue of the Anbruch contains an essay by Dr. Alfred Rosenzweig on Wellesz's Alkestis, recently performed at Mannheim.

In the April issue, Dr. Hermann Erpf notices the performance, and offers various remarks on points of interest in the work.

RE-ENTER THE 'NEUE MUSIK ZEITUNG'

On April 1 the Neue Musik Zeitung resumed publication. The issue contains hitherto unpublished or only partly published letters from Beethoven, the most important being one to Blöchliger, which refers to Beethoven's nephew Karl, and one to Sir George Smart, of March 6, 1827, printed for the first time in full. Comments are provided by Dr. Max Unger.

The first instalment of an essay on 'Style in Music,' by Dr. Ernst Bücken, should also be mentioned. I shall revert to it after the whole essay has appeared.

OTHER BEETHOVEN LETTERS

In Le Ménestrel (March 28), Jean Chantavoine publishes two letters from Beethoven—one to Rettich, referring to the dispatch of orchestral parts, and the other to Maurice Schlesinger, referring to the payment of eighty gold ducats for the copyright of the Quartets Opp. 132 and 135. It mentions projected quartets and a quintet, which were never written.

FLORENT SCHMITT

P. O. Ferroud's essay on Florent Schmitt in the Revue Musicale (April) is by far the fullest and best ever devoted to this composer's music. The writer defines the idiosyncrasies of this music accurately and fully. He gives sound reasons for his admiration. The appended complete catalogue of this composer's output will surprise most readers, for few people know the amount and variety of Schmitt's published works.

MÉHUL'S OPERAS

The April Zeitschrift für Musikwissenschaft contains a long and interesting essay on 'Méhul's Operas' by Heinrich Strobel. The writer's conclusion is:

Among the French dramatic composers of the post-Gluck period, Méhul stands closest to Gluck. He has exercised a considerable influence on German romantic opera with Mélidore and Ariodant. His comic-operas cannot stand comparison with Grétry's, Dalayrac's, or even Boieldieu's.

STRAVINSKY'S 'NOCES' AND THE PUBLIC

In La Prora (March), Vittorio Rieti writes:

The story of the genesis of Stravinsky's Noces is most strange. The work was written in 1917 for a normal orchestra, then remodelled several times; it ended by being scored for four pianofortes and numerous percussion instruments. But several years elapsed between its completion and the production. Meanwhile, the number of people who admired The Rite of Spring had considerably increased. Noces was ready; but the chronological order was not followed, and Stravinsky's supporters were given Mavra to confront instead. They expected a potent alcohol, and were offered a cup of sweet chocolate with cream. By way of a sop to believers in Stravinsky's 'second manner'—the manner of The Rite—Diaghilev eventually produced Noces. What the composer thinks of it all is not known.

MUSICAL JOURNALS OF ITALY

La Critica Musicale (delayed December issue) contains a useful list, compiled by Arnaldo Bonaventura, of Italian musical and theatrical periodicals from 1800 to the present day.

M.-D. CALVOCORESSI.

AN INHERENT DISABILITY OF MUSICAL CRITICISM

BY GEORGE M. COTTON

I.

Granting that musical criticism as we know it possesses a definite value, what warrant have we for assuming that this value is other than extrinsic? That is to say, are we justified in accepting it as being anything greater than a more or less agreeable literature which in fact does not touch in the smallest effective degree upon its chosen subject-matter? It must be admitted that the bulk of present-day musical criticism is simply a literary treatment of matters connected with performance, generally fortified by digression into history, anecdote, reminiscence, and the like. This is, briefly, musical criticism as we know it and as, for the most part, we accept it.

But if we ponder the question for a moment it will be clear that if a living interest in creative musical art is to be propagated, particularly amongst those sections of the musical public for whom attendance at good concerts is not always possible, and if composers are to be encouraged, or, where need be, admonished, by a critical appreciation of their work, musical criticism must become something else than a simple commentary on the qualities of performance. Something more satisfying than the current method will need to be evolved. Whether the present stage of development of the common musical sense is such as will allow of more direct means of conveying, in a literary form, musical ideas rather than ideas concerning music is a question which is perhaps worth considering. But there is a prior question which clamours for attention, namely, Is musical criticism practicable at all?

It is almost an axiom of criticism in its relation to works of art that the earnest critic will seek assiduously to view the subject of his criticism from the standpoint, not of an outsider (the 'consumer's' standpoint); not even the standpoint of a supremely judicial and highly-cultured outsider; but from the standpoint of the creator of the work himself. The complaint heard frequently (and not from composers alone) that criticism is too often merely destructive and almost never constructive, arises from the inability of the particular critic to realise this ideal attitude of mind towards his subject, and to refrain from plying his pen until he has schooled himself to think from that side and not from this side. The reviewer of a novel will not, if he be truly critical, set down his opinions and feelings as the novel-reader but as the novel-maker—the novel-maker with his prepossessions or dissatisfactions thrown off and wholly divested of his intense personal consciousness of his work. The practical value in the criticism will then, apart from legitimate comment on style, taste, and development—in fact, technique—be found in its detached and unprejudiced regard of the essential achievement of the writer: e.g., the play of character in the persons of the story as they are themselves played upon by and react to environment and incident deliberately created for them by their own creator. The point will not be so much, 'Has this novel succeeded as the novel of this author?' as 'Has this author succeeded as the author of this novel?'

Similarly the art critic will not say, 'What a tree!' or 'This flock of sheep is very fine!' (I do not suggest that his vocabulary is as poverty-stricken as would seem from these illustrative sentences.) Accepting the jumping-off place of the artist, he will rather ask himself before he writes a word, 'Is this tree reasonable and convincing as I imagine the artist to have seen it?'; and 'Do I correctly catch the vision of the painter when he gave immortality to this flock of sheep?' It is the aim and intention of the artist that count in such criticism, not the desires, prejudices, and predilections of the public. It were easy to elaborate upon the latter as themes, but it requires concentrated effort justly to set a valuation on the former. This is truism, and elementary at that; but for him who would be honestly critical it is truism that may not be disregarded or ignored.

It is worth repeating that far too much of current musical criticism (when it is not glorified reporting) is mere chatter, pleasant or unpleasant, witty, vain, or precious, revolving almost entirely around the details and distractions associated with performance. Accepting again the assistance of analogy (though my conclusion has the effect of annihilating analogy), the reviewer of novels or the critic of pictures who occupied nine-tenths of his available space with a dissertation on the nature of light and its mode of propagation, and who devoted the remaining one-tenth to a hasty and obviously timid sentence or two on the true corpus vile, would exhaust himself in less than a week. And the analogy is perfect, since a picture or a book 'performs' itself. It simply hangs on the wall or rests in the hand, and the operation of light-rays does the rest. The picture continues gaily to perform even when there is nobody to look at it, though it ceases with the light. The book starts performing the moment it is opened, provided it be not opened in the absence of light.

Colour, as used in painting, exists only in the presence of white light, but so long as that condition is satisfied the performance of the picture continues, and so continues without human intervention. Colour is not an entity, but is a potentiality, which informs all visible and not perfectly transparent matter, and which perhaps most fully informs the pigments chosen by the painter. Essentially, all that the latter essays is to combine potentialities on a canvas. This being done, they function uniformly in white light and the picture is in being. By the same process is literature 'performed,' though it is a simpler process, since the only relation involved is that between a comparatively light 'colour'—the paper, and a comparatively dark 'colour'—the print. In either case, the success of the performance depends solely upon the intensity of the right kind of light and the efficiency of the observer's or reader's eye, and the point to note is that this performance is automatic and incapable of direct control without prejudicially affecting the value of the work itself. In other words, it has nothing whatever to do with either the merits of the picture as a picture or the merits of the novel as a novel.

In music, however, performance is not automatic (in the first instance at least); it has to be effected by human intervention, and it has to be humanly controlled—fallibly in each case. Musical sound, as we are considering it, does not originate spontaneously. The waters have to be troubled before the angel will appear. Performance supplies the required agency, and almost inevitably the act of performance forces itself to the front and dominates the mind of the listener to the exclusion of more important considerations. It certainly diverts the attention of the serious critic from the music itself, and when it thrusts itself, as it does, into musical criticism, it is actually an irrelevancy of the first magnitude. For the pure criticism of music it is necessary to eliminate all consciousness of performance; to treat it as 'out of order'; to let the music per se remain in possession of the arena, thus reducing the influence of performance to the nil which is its value in the cited examples of the picture and the book. The mind is thus left free to regard the stuff itself apart from the mode of its presentation, just as we are, without effort, supremely unaware, when reading a book or gazing at a picture, of the mechanical functioning of the light reflected from their respective surfaces.

II.

Assuming, then, that musical criticism will endeavour to elude the impact of performance (which may nevertheless form a desirable subject for separate treatment), and to discard the manifold irrelevancies and distractions bound up with performance, what must be the mental state of the ideal critic? If we were to regard music as capable of being pressed into the company of the representative arts, the question here discussed would not arise. If a man write a concert-overture and call it Somerset, and if music be truly representative, actually there are two possibilities open to our critic. Should he know nothing of the tunes, topics, and topography of Somersetshire, he may always look up his Shakespeare, and thus 'prepare himself for getting, as he will honestly believe, into the shoes of the composer. If, on the other hand, he cares not a rap for decapitated Dukes, but loves that southern countryside, he may concentrate his mind on his recollections of its tunes and topics, and so make a very good attempt to live up to his understanding of the ideal. What a blow, then, to find later that the composer was all the time thinking of Cornwall—had, in fact, made public confession of his lack of a bump of locality; or that more likely he was simply writing music and was thinking of nothing on earth! How futile the whole proceeding! The labelling of abstract music may help to collect, and for a short time to retain collected, the wandering thoughts of the average audience at our present stage of culture, but it is obviously an obstacle to criticism. What of the listener from Pernambuco or Achnasheen who has never heard of either Duke or dukedom? It would actually seem as if he were, after all, in the more favourable condition for producing criticism, since his mind would at least be unencumbered by historical or topographical entanglements.

But supposing that any such risks have been eliminated by the specific announcement that it is the Duke whom the composer had in mind. Our serious critic is faced with the definite task of, as it were, checking the music in terms of the deceased as he appealed to the composer. But even with the knowledge obtainable of the Duke of Somerset in, say, Henry VI.—with, if you wish the easier hypothesis, even an accurate and sympathetic acquaintance with the countryside denoted by the tree—there is no critic in this universe who will succeed.

We all know what a tree is. We may all check our observation of the painted tree through our recollections of a real tree. We may then try to visualise the tree in the light in which the artist visualised it. Having accomplished so much we may pass on to our reservations and our criticism in approximately the right frame of mind. What we cannot yet do is to verify the musical treatment of a tree, or of a duke, or of a countryside, or of any thing—phenomenon or noumenon—so as to be in a position to 'auralise' it in assumed sympathy with the composer.

It is but a short step to the consideration of how the hypothetical critic is to deal with a new symphony—or with an old one for the matter of that—apart from questions of form, orchestration—in fact, technique again. How is he in all conscientiousness to write about the first hearing of a string quartet, confining himself to the quartet and repelling the interpretation given by the particular group of players who happen to be playing it? He has neither the capacity nor the opportunity for stepping into the shoes of the composer. It is a sheer impossibility for him to treat, in accordance with his axiom, of either the one or the other. For before he has dipped his pen he is up against the hitherto impenetrable barrier which separates musical expression from all the things of which he has had palpable or visual experience, or of which he is aware that others have had palpable or visual experience. A symphony can only be criticised in relation to other symphonies; a quartet only in relation to other quartets. But nobody will suggest that a composer writes 'about' other music. The critic in music cannot follow the critic of pictures. However proficient he may be in musical technique and in experience of music, he cannot divest himself of his own predilections and in exchange put on the predilections of the composer. He is mentally incapable of throwing himself overboard and in the same operation installing the composer on the bridge in his own stead. In short, it would appear that musical criticism in a sense analogous to criticism in other branches of art is an impossibility altogether. The phrase is verbally intelligible but intellectually inconceivable. The thing is neither musical, nor can it be criticism.

III.

Is this really so? We are unwilling to believe that music is to be placed carefully by itself, far from contact with a literary treatment of it having as its object practical exposition, suggestion, or admonition: argued and not merely opinionative praise or blame. But leaving aside the fact of the poverty of the vocabulary of musical criticism (which is another story), it would certainly appear that at present men cannot treat of music in any way whatsoever without the doubtful assistance of performance. How much more obvious is it then that criticism, which should discuss music in words, is inherently disabled? Placing on one side the inevitable defects bound up with performance, we are driven to the conclusion that no critic of music can adopt the axiom so frequently referred to herein, because the only relation available for his critical sense is the relation between the music which he hears and the music—not some other sounds—which he has previously heard; and this does not satisfy the requirement. It is as if the painting of a tree could not be criticised without our being subconsciously aware of all—not trees—but paintings of trees, and as if having successfully achieved that position we should be still prevented, by an inescapable and irremovable limitation of the mind, from understanding or attempting to understand how the artist saw the tree when he painted it. The result would appear to be, as already hinted, that there can practically be no such thing as genuine musical criticism; that no musician can hope to learn from our attempted criticism anything of musical value to him in connection with a work which he has not heard performed; and that no composer can hope to read anything truly helpful ('constructive') regarding his ideas, apart from their mode of presentation.

The time may yet come when, eliminating performance altogether and confining our acquaintance with, say, orchestral instruments, to a grounding in their technique and the characters of their various sounds, we shall, instead of trailing to concert-halls, sit comfortably at home by our own firesides, full score in hand, and 'listen' to the latest Elgar Symphony; or pick up a Bax or a Boughton at the bookstall wherewith to wile away the weariness of a railway journey. In the meantime we have to be our own critics as occasion may offer, and hear things for ourselves—but that again is to start off on the same vicious circle once more. We may satisfactorily criticise a conductor or a performer, but when it comes to the music itself likes and dislikes will out; personal feelings, influenced by 'interpretation,' will dominate, and we shall find ourselves as far away as ever from being able to hear, from the composer's end, the matter of his music. We may debate the artistic worth of his thematic material; we may determine whether it be original, banal, imitated, or 'cribbed.' We may groan 'Too long,' or sniff 'Too ambitious'; we may sigh 'Too short,' or simply content ourselves with a non-committal 'Too too.' But how much 'forradder' are we? We have no independent standard—that is, nothing independent of other music; there is no recognisable relation to our experience, except again our experience of other music: we cannot tell what the composer had in mind, and it is exceedingly doubtful if he himself could tell us, except that he might admit that he wanted to compose music. The circle closes again and again, and the endeavour to grasp even one loose end of it has always to be abandoned.

THE CURVES OF CARUSO

BY PROF. E. W. SCRIPTURE

For many years at Yale University I was engaged in tracing off the curves from gramophone discs and measuring the speech waves. One of these discs contained a record by Caruso of the song 'Di quella pira,' from Il Trovatore. The disc was made to rotate with extreme slowness—about once in four hours. The steel needle running in the groove moved a long, very light lever whose point traced the curve with an enlargement of three hundred times on a moving band of smoked paper. A piece of this tracing is shown on the next page. The line runs 'O teco almeno corro a morir!' The top line shows the last half of the e of 'teco.' Each of the groups of waves represents one vibration of the voice ; the small waves give the vocal character. The second line is occupied by  $c (=k)$ . Usually this would be a straight line ; here there are vibrations. All such vibrations represent vibrations from the larynx, that is, a tone of the voice. The usual  $c$  has no laryngeal vibrations. Since this  $c$  of Caruso's has slackens off the vibrations at the consonants instead of stopping them. Every omnibus driver knows that he should only slacken the speed of his motor when asked to stop, and should not really stop unless forced to do so ; after a full stop it is harder to get up speed again. This is precisely what Caruso did with his larynx. Instead of stopping and starting abruptly vibrations we have proof that he voiced this sound. The waves are not very strong, and the voicing is not loud ; nevertheless it is voiced. The same condition is found in the record of  $t$  (not shown in the Figure). These two sounds were sung by Caruso not like the usual unvoiced  $t$  and  $c$ , but as voiced sounds rather inclined toward  $d$  and  $g$ .

TRACING FROM A GRAMOPHONE RECORD BY ENRICO CARUSO

Let us consider now what this means as a matter of voice mechanics. In the phrase as usually sung the larynx vibrates during the three vowels and stops during the two consonants. Caruso, however, only and precisely, he simply slowed down at the consonants. The result was a smooth and pleasing vocal gesture instead of precise but mechanical sounds.

One evening I showed these curves to Caruso and his friends. I tried to explain to him the wonderful perfection of his art that produced such a result. Instead of feeling flattered he became indignant, and declared that he had sung 'O teco' correctly and not something that might sound somewhat like 'O dago.' He seemed to think that I was pointing out flaws in his singing.

Look now at line 14. It is from the first part of the vowel o. At the end of line 13 you will find the very beginning of this vowel. Before it there occurs the same c that we have just described. Just before this c in line 12 there are strong waves as of a vowel; these waves begin in the middle of line 11. There is no vowel here in the text. On carefully listening to the disc you will hear a short indefinite vowel before the c. If Caruso had started after a pause to sing a typical c with the k-sound he would have begun with silence. If you try it yourself you will find that you start with an open mouth and no sound; only at the end of the c can anything be heard. Caruso, however, makes this sound audible by putting a minute vowel before it, so minute that you do not really hear it, and yet you get an impression of the whole of the c. It was a consummate piece of art of which Caruso himself knew nothing. After my experience with 'O teco,' I did not dare to tell him of it.

Line 8 puzzled me greatly at first. It is not like any curve I have ever seen. According to the text it must be a vowel curve, yet such a curve is an impossibility. It looked like a vowel curve produced with a violent wobbling of the tracing apparatus. I knew that the apparatus could not wobble, or even jar, because it was suspended with as great care as a galvanometer, yet I traced this curve over several times. The result was always the same. On listening carefully to the gramophone disc, I could hear that there was a difference in Caruso's voice at this point. He seemed to be crying. There was a tear in his voice, and this curve is a picture of the tear. How he did it, or how anyone can put a tear into the voice, is beyond imagination—but here is the registration of such a tear.

Lines 15 and 18 give the endings of two vowels. You will notice how the waves become stronger just at the close. This is true of nearly all Caruso's vowels. He does not let them fade away at the end, but snaps them off with an extremely brief but marked increase of intensity.

There are many other such facts about Caruso's voice in the tracings. They may in a good sense be called the tricks of the trade. This means that the true artist does not do his singing in a mechanical manner but in a quite different way. One of these ways I almost hesitate to tell, but I will point it out briefly.

The horizontal length of a wave-group in the tracing depends on the pitch of the voice. A group horizontally long registers a low tone, one horizontally short a high tone. By measuring the length of each group in the song we can calculate the pitch of the voice at each instant. If the waves of any line, say the first, were all of the same horizontal length, the record would show that the vowel was sung on a constant pitch, as is indicated by the note in the music. Measurements of the waves throughout this record show that Caruso's voice never remains at the same pitch for more than an instant, but varies always slightly. He does not sing the exact notes indicated by the music as an organ or other mechanical instrument would. His voice rises and falls and twists around the tones instead of sticking to them. The result is that the song has nothing mechanical about it, but is full of life and emotion. This is the height of perfection in human artistic action. I did not tell Caruso anything about this. He would have suspected that I was intimating that he sang out of tune.

Still another secret of Caruso's voice—perhaps the most important one of all—lies in these curves. The melodious ring of his voice can be heard from the gramophone discs. Since the curves are accurate tracings from one of the discs, this quality lies before our eyes in the peculiar forms of the waves. Yet we cannot understand the peculiarity, because we cannot interpret the waves. They are like the hieroglyphic inscriptions that were quite meaningless until the Rosetta stone was discovered. The only way to interpret the waves is to analyse them by means of fine measurements and mathematical formulas. This is a task of such gigantic magnitude that it has not yet been carried out. When this has been done we shall know more of Caruso's secret.

Not only that. To understand fully Caruso's voice, we must make studies of the voices of other great singers. The peculiarities of the voices of Tamagno, Chaliapin, Farrar, and others must be analysed in the same way. We shall then know the qualities that constitute a great voice.

I spent a jolly evening with Caruso. He had a gramophone, and played negro melodies. He hummed to them like a child, and said they were his favourite music. He did not care to talk about operatic music; it bored him. Indeed, I sometimes had the feeling that he really cared no more for opera than he would have cared for any other trade by which he could have made as good a living. Perhaps he would have been just as happy keeping an osteria on the Bay of Naples. This, again, was one of the secrets of his art. His friends told me that he sang his parts on the stage without an effort, even almost carelessly. After an opera he would come off not in the least tired, but ready for a lark of any kind. They pointed out that the other singers went to their dressing-rooms reeking with perspiration. They had been working; Caruso had been playing. One who works with his voice cannot produce the wonderful tone that comes from a care-free soul. Caruso sang as thoughtlessly, as carelessly, and as beautifully as a bird. Perhaps it was just because he never thought about his voice that he sang so well.

The musicians have recorded their opinions of Caruso's way of singing. Richard Strauss once said, 'He sings the soul of the melody.' Leo Blech, the musical director of the State Opera at Berlin, writes, in his Memories of Caruso:

In the soulful expression of the melody his genius brought to light the deepest and the minutest elements that it could contain in the way of expression. . . . How could anyone think of all the technical devices? Where were breath control, phrasing, and register? Words, mere words! Here there were no devices; here there was only Art itself! And Art consisted in Expression. He possessed the ability to make one forget that he was singing. . . . He painted human fates in melodies and tones. . . . His singing was more than song; it was always Expression. . . . He was beyond all technique. He simply had a musical soul, which revealed itself in unforgettable dynamic expressions and vocal shadings.

What the musicians have tried to say in their figurative language is exactly the same as what has been stated in scientific prose as the results of the studies of the curves. In brief, there was nothing mechanical about his singing; it was a production of unconscious art of the most beautiful kind.

New Music

PIANOFORTE MUSIC

There is so much muddled and pretentious pianoforte writing to-day that clarity and wholesomeness are more than ever welcome. That is the feeling one has after running through Book I of Ernest Austin's Borrowed Melodies (Larway). Mr. Austin takes a dozen Scots folk-tunes and makes delightful little pianoforte pieces of them, averaging about a couple of pages in length, and of very moderate difficulty. Not often does a reviewer return again and again to the music he is at work upon, and play it for mere pleasure, as this present reviewer has done with Borrowed Melodies. I hope Mr. Austin will borrow lots more, and treat them all as well as he has treated these. (As a matter of fact, he is on the task now, and sets of Swedish and Welsh tunes are promised.)

Thomas Wood's The Orchard at Hunthay (Forsyth) has also a folk-song basis, the main theme being in that vein. The treatment is elaborate, and calls for a good pianist. There is real charm here of a wavy, delicate kind, and the writing shows a fine knowledge of keyboard effect.

A dashing bravura solo is Sydney Rosenbloom's Polonaise in A flat (Augener). It would not be a polonaise if it did not recall certain famous models here and there, but it is none the worse for that. Its player must have good technique in chords and octaves.

Martin Shaw's Three Sketches (Cramer) seem to suggest that the composer is less happy with pianoforte than with voice. He seems to need the stimulus of a poem, and the keyboard writing is not so good as in his song accompaniments.

John Heath's Reflexions (Winthrop Rogers) are of the troubled kind that express themselves through almost constant chromaticism and dissonance. There is so much good stuff in them that one wishes the composer could have said his say more simply, and with less of the monotony that is almost inevitable when the tonality is so restless.

Such a title as From Tudor Times (Elkin) raises definite expectations. H. Scott-Baker's Suite bearing this label does little to justify it. The first of its three pieces is called Maggiolata, is headed by a verse from Browning, and is frankly modern in style; No. 2 is a Galliard, with a quotation from Milton, and the main theme suggests an old dance, so we get warmer; No. 3 is called Aylesbury Fair, but the only Tudor touch is in the verse quoted from Dowland, 'Fine knacks for ladies,' &c. The music of all three pieces is spirited and well-written, though perhaps Aylesbury Fair is a little too long for the interest of its material. Mr. Scott-Baker has a good touch in light music, and shows it here, though to less advantage than in some other works.

Tchaikovsky's B flat minor Concerto has been arranged for two pianofortes by Walter Niemann (Steingraber, Leipzig; Bosworth). Dr. Niemann has prepared this version after careful examination of the edition revised by the composer, and of the marginal notes of his (Dr. Niemann's) father, a famous player of his day. The orchestral part is very conveniently laid out, and presents no undue difficulty, so where there are two pianofortes, and one first-rate player and one moderate ditto, the edition will be welcome.

Of Kaikhosru Sorabji's second Sonata (Curwen) this reviewer can only say what he has said before in dealing with the composer's works. The music is unplayable for all but virtuosi; it is of such complexity that mental hearing of it is impossible save in brief passages; and a painful reading of it at the keyboard is useless, because music so dissonant cannot be judged when played at any but its right speed, when the various conflicting elements fall into their place instead of sticking out. At times Mr. Sorabji appears to ask of the instrument rather more than it can do with clarity, but here again one speaks with diffidence. Perhaps in such passages clarity is not required. After looking at these bewildering pages one can only say that the proper medium for such music is the player-piano. If Mr. Sorabji wishes to write for the ordinary pianoforte, he should express himself in such a way that the ordinary, keen player should be able to tackle the result with at least as much success as he is able to achieve in tackling the classical pianoforte repertory. At present Mr. Sorabji is holding us at arm's length; if he has anything good to say, we want to come in and share it.

H. G.

VIOLIN MUSIC

Goby Eberhardt's method has been known for some years in Germany, and appreciated, as any such work must be, which considers in a thoughtful and logical manner the problems confronting the student of the violin. For the same reason an English edition would be welcomed in this country, but the edition which has just been issued by Messrs. D. Rahter, of Leipzig, can hardly be described as 'English.' The cover bears the inscription, 'Made in Germany,' and, unfortunately, it is not only the printing that was 'made in Germany.' The merest glance through these pages proves that the directions and instructions intended for use in Anglo-Saxon countries were also 'made in Germany.' Certainly it is not the English of Stratford-atte-Bow, though it may well be the English of Berlin or Leipzig. Oddly enough, the elementary knowledge of notes, time, and accidentals, has been translated into English as if no such matter had ever been whispered in a non-German treatise. But the lengthy discourse on teaching and learning (vol. iv.), which contains the gist of Eberhardt's teaching, is given only in German. As to the translations of the commentary to the studies, these are not only obscure but are often misleading. When we meet 'exercises for broken chords,' not being broken chords ourselves, we shall leave the exercises severely alone—which obviously is not what the author intends us to do. Or, again, when we are told that scales are to be practised in the three 'forms,' we shall vainly turn to the dictionary to find what 'form' means applied to a scale. What is the 'large' swing of the bow-arm, what of the 'lightning movement with rolling of the arm'? No violinist we ever heard 'rolled' his arm, and one wonders how it can be done. Many violinists have an unfortunate habit of pitching and tossing while playing—but to roll only one arm at a time is surely a new accomplishment.

The five volumes of the present edition do not take us very far. The first three are concerned with elementary matter, the fourth is purely letter-press, and the fifth consists of the 'musical part to the studying material'—whatever that may mean. It contains not a single exercise in double stopping nor in harmonics. But it gives studies in broken thirds—which broken thirds of Goby Eberhardt's appear endowed with an extraordinary personality of their own, for they are not made, but themselves perform extraordinary things, as is shown by the following heading: 'The natural arm movement (rolling) by broken thirds, fourths, and fifths.'

Of reprints, we have received only one this month—Kreutzer's Concerto (No. 18) in E minor, edited by Ries, and published by Augener. There is no need to point out the value of Kreutzer's and Rode's Concerti, which embody the principles of their authors' indispensable 'studies.' Musically, their work is negligible; but surely it might be possible to provide the best of these virtuoso Concerti with a more interesting accompaniment. The experiment may be well worth trying with the most favoured—say Vieuxtemps's in E and F sharp, Beriot's seventh and ninth, and, possibly, Rode's in E.

B. V.

ORGAN MUSIC

It seems a long while since Karg-Elert burst upon a delighted organ-world with his Choral Improvisations, and a good many of his admirers doubt if he has since done anything better. Yet the issue of a new work from his pen is still something of an event. After all, no other living German is to be compared with him as an organ composer. In his latest work, Cathedral Windows (Vitreaux Polychromes d'Anciennes Cathédrales) (Elkin), he leaves the Chorale for Plainsong. The six pieces are founded on a Kyrie, Resonet in laudibus, Lauda Sion, Ave Maria (two), and Adeste, Fideles—the last-named surely an intruder (however welcome) in a scheme that calls itself on the title-page 'Gregorian.' The themes are set out in plainsong notation at the beginning—a wise plan, for they are not always evident in the music itself. Karg-Elert makes no attempt to retain either the modal or rhythmical characteristics of the subjects. If he wishes to justify this, he can of course refer us to Bach, who often took the same line. There is, however, an important difference: Bach invariably lets us hear the theme more or less clearly, whereas Karg-Elert treats it fragmentarily, adorns it with gorgeous harmony, and in other ways makes it inconspicuous. This is not necessarily a fault. The proof of the pudding is in the eating, and what matters is not the composer's method, but what he produces by it. There can be no denying the beauty of most of this music. It is open to the charge of over-lusciousness, and there are the usual bizarre registration schemes. But the registration may be simplified with little, if any, loss of effect, and the rather gaudy harmonic colour ceases to bother one when the music is fairly familiar and is played straight through instead of being painfully read. The degree of difficulty is not extreme. A few features are of doubtful value. Thus in Resonet in laudibus a bare fourth very high on the manual is directed to be fixed down throughout the piece (alternatively a single note on small manuals); and some of the double pedal-passages, fff, in Lauda Sion, seem to be merely noisy, and not at all in keeping with the direction quasi campane. But the discreet player will not hesitate to modify such passages to suit his instrument and building. In Adeste, Fideles we have more than one reminder that in his early days the composer was much influenced by Grieg—

the Norwegian Bridal Procession must have been at the back of his mind when he wrote this very frisky Christmas piece. Cathedral Windows ought to receive a warm welcome; not a page is without its beauty of some kind, so what matters an occasional extravagance? (By the way, at the double-bar on page 3 the clef in the left-hand part should be changed from treble to bass.)

Book iv. of the Homeyer-Eckardt edition of Bach's organ works has been received (Steingraber, Leipzig; Bosworth). It consists of forty-five Chorale Preludes, arranged in alphabetical order. The plan makes reference easy, but it breaks up Bach's own order. There is everything to be said for keeping the Little Organ Book and the Preludes from the Clavierübung as Bach left them. Above all, the Little Organ Book is a collection that should never be broken. It is hardly too much to say that a player can never fully appreciate the Chorale Preludes unless he knows them in their relationship (a) to one another, and (b) to Bach's life and work as a whole. But if an alphabetical arrangement be adopted, it should be consistent and comprehensive, which the one under notice is not. Thus, only two of the three In dulci jubilo Preludes appear, the wonderful canonic one being absent; of the numerous treatments of Allein Gott only one is given, and of the two big works on Valet will ich dir geben only the one in B flat. Phrasing marks are generally absent; registration marks are few (no fault, this); there are helpful marks for fingering, but none for footing; and the preface includes a brief explanation of ornaments. The print is clear and the form handy. But now that all Bach's organ music may be had in an English edition, with the Chorale Preludes in Bach's order, there seems to be no call for a German version, save for comparison and reference.

A good arrangement of the Londonderry Air is that made by J. Stuart Archer (Paxton). Mr. Archer lays it out well, and his harmony is so generally and refreshingly diatonic that one grudges him the few accidentals that he does drop in.

His arrangement of the Bach air from the D major Overture (Paxton) is rather too faithful to the original. There is surely no reason for transferring the string bass literally to the pedal-board; some slight modification would make it easier to play with little or no loss of effect.

Mr. Archer has long since shown himself a good hand at the variation form. His Six Short Variations on an Irish Air (Paxton) have all the fluency and musicianship we expect. I am with him all the way through the five variations, but, so far, stick at the Finale alla Toccata. It owes rather too much to French models, and a good deal of its brilliance seems somewhat fussy. But the work as a whole is so good that this point (which is a matter of personal taste) need not be pressed. And, after all, if a player doesn't like the Finale he can end with the Romance (Var. 5).

The Old Folks at Home as a basis for an organ Prelude and Fugue seems a doubtful choice, but of course everything depends on the way it is worked. An effort by E. G. Meers does not convince, though most of the writing is fluent enough. It opens with a kind of chorale prelude treatment of the tune, for diapasens, and then goes on to treat fugally the phrase set to the lines 'For my heart is sad and weary, everywhere I roam.' The chief weakness is in Mr. Meers's too complacent use of well-worn sequential matter. The pedal solo at the end seems to be hiked in because the composer thought a fugue would not be respectable without it. It says nothing, with tremendous emphasis.

Much the same remarks apply to the composer's Prelude, Variation, and Fugue on an American Melody. The Fugue is rather more spirited, however, and there is some point in the pedal solo, though the grace-notes in the latter seem out of place. In the third variation The Old Folks at Home is neatly combined with the theme. The character and association of the melodies rule the pieces out for Church purposes; perhaps cinema organists may find extracts from them useful as incidental music in some films dealing with plantation life. But the composer has fallen between the two stools of Church and cinema. If he again tries his hand with plantation melodies, he should go out boldly for the cinema and concert-room, and give his very ordinary fugal writing a rest. The pieces are published by Novello.

Mr. Lemare knows better than to leave us in doubt as to whom he is catering for. His Encore Series of Transcriptions (H. W. Gray; Novello) has now reached its thirty-first number, and includes brief treatments of Home, sweet Home, Swanee River, Bonnie Doon, Old Black Joe, Loch Lomond, and a host of other favourites. Cinema audiences will enjoy these little pieces. They are not the best Lemare, but they are well adapted for their purpose, and there is no lack of neat touches in construction and registration.

Coleridge-Taylor's orchestral Suite Othello has been arranged by Herbert F. Ellingford (Metzler), and will be found useful by concert recitalists, as well as by cinema players who want longish pieces. The music is quite unsuited for Church use. There are five movements—Dance, Children's Intermezzo, Funeral March, Willow Song, and Military March. Mr. Ellingford has done his part well, as might be expected, but I wish this care had extended to the letterpress. In the Preface we are told that players 'may modify and amply accordingly'; on the next page is indicated a pedal 'of appropriate (sic) weight,' and on p. 26 the word 'preceding' has an extra 'e' thrown in.

Organ music written round hymn-tunes is useful in many ways. One way—sometimes overlooked—is that of making known (and even popularising) fine tunes that are not often sung. For example, think of the thousands of English church folk who have never sung Wachet auf, but who yet know and enjoy the tune through Bach's Prelude on it. The fact should make organ composers careful in their choice of tune. With what a thud, for instance, did Karg-Elert come down in writing a piece on the miserable American tune for Nearer, my God, to Thee (!) These reflections occur apropos of George Oldroyd's Three Hymn-Tune Meditations (Augener). Dr. Oldroyd leads off with a fluently-written piece on Webbe's tune to Come, Thou Holy Spirit, come, and then falls from grace in his second and third efforts—Monk's Abide with me and Oakeley's Sun of my soul. The fall is not so much in regard to choice of tune, but in the fact that his treatment tends to accentuate their somewhat sentimental character. In the former, the harmonization recalls Spohr, and in the latter the ornamentation of the melody is rather too obvious. Lots of players and people will like the pieces, of course; still . . .

H. G.

CHURCH MUSIC

W. G. Alcock's anthem, God is our Refuge and Strength (Novello), composed for the two hundred and seventieth Festival of the Sons of the Clergy, is a work of considerable dimensions occupying close on thirty pages. It is an elaborate affair, containing much eight-part writing, and with an organ part written throughout on three staves. The composer has made use of the Bible version of Psalm xlv., drawing upon the first six and the tenth verses. There is an introduction of about twenty bars, in which the first phrase of the hymn-tune St. Ann's fittingly appears in the pedal part. The first chorus is for double-choir, unaccompanied. In the next verse, 'Therefore we will not fear,' the writing is for four voices, with a freely-written organ part. In this and the following verse, 'Though the waters roar,' the harmonic treatment is bold and admirably varied, and there is some highly effective work for both voices and organ. Excellent relief is provided by the following movement for semi-chorus, 'There is a river,' which contains some expressive writing for the voices, mainly unaccompanied. A brief but dramatic treatment of 'The heathen raged,' for tenor and bass, is followed by an eight-part setting for unaccompanied double choir of 'Be still, and know that I am God.' The work concludes with a reference to the opening chorus, during which the first line of St. Ann's is again effectively introduced by the organ. Particularly happy is the last simple entry of the organ part during the final pianissimo chord of the voices. This anthem is one of the best things Dr. Alcock has so far given us, and choirs capable of singing in eight parts may confidently be recommended to make its acquaintance.

An Easter Anthem, The day draws on with golden light (Novello), is a fine, vigorous setting by Geoffrey Shaw of some 5th-century words taken from the English Hymnal. Although quite simple, Mr. Shaw's effective writing for the voices, in conjunction with an admirably devised organ part, should easily produce an excellent result.

From Banks & Son, York, come further numbers of their 'York Series' of Church music. Of three settings of the Magnificat and Nunc dimittis, that by Alec Rowley in A minor attracts by reason of its freshness of treatment and its general avoidance of the commonplace. The writing is straightforward in style, and presents few difficulties. There is a misprint in the organ part in the last bar of page 5. The chord G B in the right hand should apparently be D B.

In his two settings in A and F major, W. Griffith has nothing very new to say. The music, however, is capably written, and flows along easily and tunefully in a style that will probably prove attractive to many.

Alec Rowley's anthem, When the whole heart of man turns unto God, is an expressive setting for S.A.T.B. of words by Aiden Clarke. It is quite simple.

A setting of the Communion Service in D by Arthur J. Greenish—also from Banks & Son—may be recommended for use where simple music for this Office is required. It may be sung in unison throughout, but the Incarnatus in the Credo, the Sanctus, Benedictus qui venit, Agnus Dei, and Pater noster are given harmonized, and may be so rendered if preferred. A nine-fold form of the Kyrie is included. The music throughout, both for voices and organ, is in the best of taste.

Several numbers from the S.P.C.K. Church Music Series must be briefly considered. Archdeacon Gardner's Music in Free Rhythms for the Eucharist and Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis in Free Rhythms contain much in the method of treatment that is off the beaten track. The former is written throughout in four vocal parts with no separate organ part. It may be sung in harmony without, or with, the organ, or in unison throughout. The Evening Canticles may also be sung in unison, though occasional opportunities are afforded for singing in harmony. There is a misprint in the last chord of the fifth line on page 2.

A Simple Te Deum and Benedictus, by Geoffrey Shaw, is written in free chant form, and is intended for congregational singing. The people's part may be obtained separately, with the tune and words only. A note by the composer points out that the music may be sung in unison throughout by the people alone, or by people and choir in unison with organ accompaniment as written; or it may be sung by the people in unison throughout, with Fauxbourdon verses sung by the choir round the melody, as suggested in the text.

Percy W. Whitlock's Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis in G major contains much that is interesting and unconventional. The part-writing is frequently very free. Although quite short, this setting is undoubtedly effective.

Several short anthems, edited and arranged by W. H. Harris and H. G. Ley, should prove exceedingly useful. The former is responsible for Come, Holy Ghost (for Whitsuntide or Ember Days, with music attributed to T. Tallis (1515-85), and second verse and Descant supplied by the editor), and O Strength and Stay (for Evening, melody composed or adapted by L. Bourgeois for the Geneva Psalter, 1543). Those by Dr. Ley include the Evening Anthems, O God, be with us (words by P. Herbert, 1566, set to a Bayeux Church melody for four- and five-part unaccompanied voices, with tune sometimes in the tenor), Round me falls the night (melody by A. Drese (1620-1701), harmonies by S. S. Wesley, H. G. Ley, and J. S. Bach, for S.A.T.B. unaccompanied), and Darkening night the land doth cover (words translated from the Greek by Robert Bridges, melody by L. Bourgeois—sometimes in the tenor—harmonized by Goudimel, with an Amen adapted from Byrd's Ave Verum). Two other short evening anthems—O Gladsome Light, O grace of God the Father's face, translated from the Greek by Robert Bridges, and Abide with us, the orb of day doth vanish—are tunes by L. Bourgeois treated similarly to those above.

Choirs who use 'Wesley in E' may be glad to make the acquaintance of the Benedictus, Agnus, and Gloria which H. G. Ley has adapted for that Service. The publisher is J. G. Wiblin, 36, Hamilton Road, Oxford.

Come, O Creator Spirit, come (Joseph Williams) is a setting for five voices (S.S.A.T.B.) by Walter Gandy of the Mechlin Tune for Veni, Creator Spiritus. The first verse is for soprano solo; at verse 2 the second sopranos enter with the melody, while the first sopranos continue with a free part above. At each verse a new part enters below, till at the sixth verse the melody once more appears in the soprano. It is for unaccompanied singing and, needless to say, requires nicely-balanced parts.

From the H.W. Gray Co. come several anthems from their 'Church Music Review' Series. Particularly interesting to English musicians should be six Motets by Healey Willan. Their titles are: Hail, Gladdening Light; O how glorious; Very Bread, Good Shepherd tend us; O Sacred Feast; O how sweet, O Lord; and Let us worship and fall down. These unpretentious little works are tastefully written, and are quite easy to sing. They are intended for unaccompanied voices (S.A.T.B.), and are published separately. The same publishers issue an anthem by Peter Christian Lutkin for Easter or general use, Thine, O Lord, is the greatness. This contains an effective treatment of the Easter hymn The strife is o'er, and also a well-written fugal section. Some D flats are missing from the organ part on pages 2 and 11. These anthems may be had from Novello.

Two short settings of the Communion Service, Missa Sancti Benedicti in the Æolian Mode, by Dom Anselm Hughes, and Missa Sancti Francisci in Mode III., by George Oldroyd, may be recommended. They are both published by the Faith Press, and are intended for unaccompanied singing. Neither setting includes the Credo.

Under the title Free-Chant Canticles, the Faith Press publishes settings of the Canticles, by Sydney H. Nicholson, to free chants from the Unison Chant Book. The chants are an extended form of the Anglican Chant. Four sets of double chants are provided for each Canticle, except in the case of the Nunc Dimittis, when the single form is used. The whole of the Canticles may be sung in unison, but variety may be obtained by following the suggestions for certain verses to be sung in other ways.

Lastly, from the Faith Press comes an arrangement of Psalm 68, Exurgat Deus, set with Fauxbourdons for use in Procession, as sung in Westminster Abbey. G. G.

The Musician's Bookshelf

A History of the Royal Academy of Music from 1822 to 1922. By Frederick Corder.

[Anglo-French Music Co., 7s. 6d.]

This book is the outcome of the researches made by Mr. Corder in connection with the R.A.M. Centenary Celebrations. Although dated 1922, it appears to have been strangely overlooked—perhaps because of the absence of reviews (no copy was received by the Musical Times until very recently). Yet it is full of interest, historical and human, and those who know the nimbleness of Mr. Corder's pen will not be surprised to hear that scarcely a page is without its touch of humour. Inevitably the most interesting and amusing part of the book is that dealing with the early days of the Academy. The amount of quotable material is embarrassing. Let us take a glimpse at one point only—that of practice-room accommodation. Mr. Corder gives this extract from the Committee's first Annual Report:

It may, perhaps, be proper to notice a practice which has been introduced into the Academy, and which, being new in this country, has been exposed to much observation. The Committee alludes to that of several of the pupils practising their lessons in the same room at the same time. In justification of this arrangement the Committee might plead that unless every boy and girl had a room to themselves or very nearly so, it could not be otherwise. . . . But the Committee are more anxious to defend the measure than themselves, and have to state that in all the Conservatoires of Italy, from whence the most able professors have sprung, this is the uniform custom; and so far from being prejudicial, it is universally allowed to be highly beneficial; it forces attention, it prevents the pupil from trusting to his ear [!] and obliges him to attend to his notes. The opponents of the system in this country allow that it makes steady players, but they assert that it is destructive of taste. The answer to this objection is evident. The taste of the Italians is universally acknowledged; and no practice introduced into the seminaries which have produced their greatest masters can be prejudicial to that very quality for which they are pre-eminently distinguished.

The Italian obsession that shows itself here was very much in evidence in the early concerts of the Academy. At the first, for example, given a few months after the opening of the institution, the scheme opened with a Haydn 'Symphonia' (played on two pianofortes, oboe, four violins, and viola, 'cello, and bass, one each), the other items being by Marcello (two), Hummel, Cramer, Boscha (four!), Zingarelli, Viotti, Dussek, Vogt, and Jomelli. Poorish fare, this; as Mr. Corder says, 'Nothing to write home about,' though, he adds, we must remember that none of the performers were over twelve years of age.

Here, in a report in The Harmonicon of a performance of Figaro, is an early glimpse of a musician who was later to become Principal:

Cherubino, personated by a little boy, was in every way a blot on the piece. Had the memory of the audience not supplied the deficiency the dramatic effect of the Opera must have been utterly demolished.

Hapless youngster! His name was mercifully left blank on the programme, but he turns out to have been William Sterndale Bennett.

Going back to the question of choice of music in the early days of the Academy, it is interesting to find Cipriani Potter protesting in 1835 against the 'bad style of pianoforte music taught by the sub-Professors,'

... trivial Airs with Variations, instead of the Sonatas of Clementi, Dussek, Steibelt, &c.

Were the Sonatas of Haydn, Mozart, and Beethoven among the '&c.'? And Cipriani went on to show himself an optimist by declaring that ... at the next examination it is expected that the students will distinguish themselves by playing from Figured Bases.

'But [says Mr. Corder] they never have, to this day.'

Temptation to quote further must be resisted. The illustrations include portraits of the Founder, Crotch, Sullivan (in his Chapel Royal chorister garb), Potter, Lucas, Bennett, Macfarren, Mackenzie, &c., besides facsimiles of music and documents, and pictures of the old and new Academy buildings.

The book has an interest apart from its subject, for it throws many curious sidelights on the social and musical state of the country a century ago. Every institution should have its history written when it has passed its fiftieth year; the result is bound to be of value. When the historian happens to be a Frederick Corder, it will be entertaining as well.

H. G.

Volksmusik der Rumänen von Maramuren. By Béla Bartók.

[Munich: Drei Masken Verlag.]

This invaluable contribution to the study of the musical lore of South-Eastern Europe is the fourth of the Sammelbände für Vergleichende Musikwissenschaft, published under the editorship of Carl Stumpf and E. M. von Hornbostel. The songs and tunes it contains were collected in the various villages of the district visited by Bartók in 1913. Particularly curious and attractive are the 'Hora' songs; their boldness of design and rhythmic ingenuity will be noted with increased interest by students wishful to discover the origin of Bartók's own musical style and idiom, which owes almost as much to Rumanian folk-music as to Hungarian.

The brief but substantial introduction will prove useful to both musicians and students of folk-lore. But it is to musicians especially that it will come as a revelation, because it provides a sound, all-embracing scheme for the study of folk-music as music. The technique needful for this order of study is not yet established—a consequence being that most people who set out to write about folk-music are apt to wander a good deal unless they content themselves with a few safe generalities, statistics, and remarks about scales and rhythms. Others will concentrate upon demonstrating that the music they deal with is or is not reducible to the major-minor or to the pentatonic system.

There have been exceptions, of course. As illustrations of the proper way to deal with folk-music whose texture raises difficult or new problems, Mrs. Lineva's essays on Russian folk-tunes are altogether remarkable. Bartók's comments, as terse as they are apposite, cover the whole range of topics which the scientific examination of folk-tunes should include. The volume is beautifully printed.

M.-D. C.

Memories and Music. By Sir Dan Godfrey.

[Hutchinson, 18s.]

An artless volume. But then Sir Dan Godfrey is far from being the first excellent artist who, when it came to writing his reminiscences, thought, good workmanship of no account. We should like to hear Sir Dan's opinion of a concerto or symphony put together on similar lines. British or not British, it would have small chance of a hearing at Bournemouth Winter Gardens.

A sensitive and good fellow, he [Tivadar Nachez] was, being a naturalised Britisher, greatly distressed during the war, and settled for a time in Canada.

Such writing makes it impossible to fulfil the hope of Sir Charles Stanford—expressed in the course of his handsome introductory compliment to Sir Dan—that the public 'will give the same greeting to your book as they have so often given to your stick.' Sir Dan has, of course, had something else to do in life than cultivate a graceful pen. But his readers fairly have a grievance against him for not having called in the aid of some critical friend's blue pencil.

The reminiscences of a man of Sir Dan's gifts and experiences ought to have been material for a capital volume. Through this heavy book the eye lightly roves.

We like the candour of p. 1:

I did not choose music as a profession until I had reached the age of sixteen, and even then this decision was only made because I realised that my father's name would be of value to me in the musical profession, but of little avail in any other calling.

Follows an account of the famous Godfrey family of military bandmasters. Sir Dan's grandfather, Charles, joined the Coldstream Guards as a bassoonist in 1813. Sir Dan's father's first duty as bandmaster of the Grenadier Guards was to play the regiment to barracks on its return from the Crimea. Sir Dan

(Continued on page 532.)

Fear not, O land

ANTHEM FOR WHITSUNTIDE OR GENERAL USE FOR FOUR VOICES

Joel ii. 21, 26, 28, 23. (R.V.)

Music by A. HERBERT BREWER

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED; NEW YORK: THE H. W. GRAY CO., SOLE AGENTS FOR THE U.S.A.

Allegro moderato. ♩ = 116

ORGAN

f

SOPRANO

ALTO

FEAR NOT, O LAND, BE GLAD AND RE-JOICE, FOR THE LORD . . . HATH

TENOR

FEAR NOT, O LAND, BE GLAD AND RE-JOICE, FOR THE LORD . . . HATH

BASS

FEAR NOT, O LAND, BE GLAD AND RE-JOICE, FOR THE LORD . . . HATH

done great things, Fear not, O land, fear not, O land, be done great things, Fear . . not, O land, fear . . not, be done great things, Fear not, O land, fear not, O land, be done great things, Fear . . not, O land, fear . . not, be cres.

cres.

cres.

cres.

cres.

glad and re - joice, be glad and re - joice, for the Lord . . . hath glad and re - joice, be glad and re - joice, for the Lord . . . hath glad and re - joice, be glad and re - joice, for the Lord . . . hath glad and re - joice, be glad and re - joice, for the Lord . . . hath

ff

done great things.

done great things.

done great things.

done great things.

And ye shall

And ye shall

f mf

praise the name of the Lord your God, that hath dealt wondrously with praise the name of the Lord your God, that hath dealt . . . wondrously with cres. cres. mf

( 2 )

dealt wondrous-ly, wondrous-ly with you, wondrous-ly with dealt . . . wondrous-ly, wondrous-ly with you, . . . wondrous-ly with you, won - - - drous-ly with you,

dim. rall. p

Andante

you.

you.

you.

mp

And it shall come to pass . . . that I will pour out my

Andante. ♩ = 80

mp

And your sons and your daughters shall

And your daughters shall

Spi - rit . . up - on all flesh.

pro - phe - sy, your old men shall dream dreams, . .

pro - phe - sy, your old men shall dream dreams, .

mp your old men shall dream dreams, p your p your

pp your old men shall

pp your old men shall

pp young men . . shall see vis - ions, shall see . .

pp young men . . shall see vis - ions, shall see . .

p pp

Animato mf cres. dream . . dreams. Be glad then and re - mf cres. dream dreams. Be glad then and re - mp cres. vis - ions. Be glad then and re - joice, be mp cres. vis - ions. Be glad then and re - joice, be

Animato mp cres. mf cres.

joyce. Praise the Name of the Lord, praise the joyce. Praise the Name of the Lord, praise the glad and re-joyce. Praise the Name of the Lord, praise the glad and re-joyce. Praise the Name of the Lord, praise the

f cres. f cres. f cres. f cres.

f Voices alone cres.

Name of the Lord. Be glad then and re-joyce.
 Name of the Lord. Be glad then and re-joyce.
 Name of the Lord. Be glad then and re-joyce.
 Name of the Lord. Be glad then and re-joyce.

rall. rall. rall. rall.

ff rall.

Tempo 1mo.

Fear not, O land, be glad and re-joyce, for the Fear not, O land, be glad and re-joyce, for the Fear not, O land, be glad and re-joyce, for the Fear not, O land, be glad and re-joyce, for the

f f f f

Tempo 1mo.

cres.

Lord hath done great things, Fear not, O

cres.

Lord hath done great things, Fear not, O

cres.

Lord hath done great things, Fear not, O

cres.

land, be glad and re-joice, for the Lord . . . hath

cres.

land, . . be glad and re-joice, . . for the Lord hath

cres.

land, . . be . . glad and re-joice, . . for the Lord hath

cres.

land, . . be glad and re-joice, . . for the Lord hath

f cres.

done great things, Fear not, O land, fear not, O land, be

f cres.

done great things, Fear . . not, O land, fear . . not, be

f cres.

done great things, Fear not, O land, fear not, O land, be

f cres.

done great things, Fear . . not, O land, fear . . not, be

f cres.

glad and re - joice, be glad and re - joice, for the Lord . . . hath glad and re - joice, be glad and re - joice, for the Lord . . . hath glad and re - joice, be glad and re - joice, for the Lord . . . hath glad and re - joice, be glad and re - joice, for the Lord . . . hath done great things. . . . .

done great things. . . . .

done great things. . . . .

done great things. . . . .

Largamente

ff

rall.

(Continued from page 524.)

was born in 1868, and in 1885 entered the Royal College of Music, where the clarinet was his principal study. There Stanford, in a bad moment of an orchestral practice, once told him, 'You have no brains for thinking!' The young Godfrey's revenge was to pull up short in a rehearsal of one of Stanford's pieces—the great man had perpetrated an impracticable shake! Chapter 3 is given to South Africa, where Godfrey in 1891-92 conducted a touring opera company, and married. With chapter 4 we arrive at Bournemouth.

The Bournemouth Winter Gardens were built in 1876, failed for years to serve any very useful purpose, and then in 1893 were acquired by the Corporation, following the success in 1892 of a Corporation military band conducted by an Italian, Bertini. The Corporation approached Dan Godfrey, sen., with a view to his conducting at Bournemouth. The elder Dan neglected his correspondence, but the younger answered the letter instead. On Whit Monday, 1893, this younger Dan was established with a band of thirty in the Winter Gardens Pavilion, and an activity which in the following thirty years was to have a real bearing on modern English music was begun.

To start with, this Bournemouth music, which was to have such a name, was modest enough. In 1895 the band was increased to thirty-three. In 1904 Sir August Manns paid a visit, and persuaded the Corporation to grant another viola and double-bass. Tchaikovsky's Pathetic Symphony had been performed for the hundredth time on March 1, 1897. Low pitch was adopted in 1909. In 1912 a separate military band was established, relieving the symphony orchestra from playing on the pier.

There is hardly a hint of a grumble from Sir Dan, whose level temper is manifest throughout this book. But our impression is that if Bournemouth's music is famous, Bournemouth itself has done very little to earn that fame. The fame has been the work of Dan Godfrey, and seeing what the value of musical attractiveness has been to that well-to-do and popular resort, its support of its orchestra strikes us as having been somewhat meagre, not to say grudging, if it is considered what subsidies music gets in Continental watering-places of the importance of Bournemouth! Still, as we have said, Sir Dan does not complain. His strength all along has lain in his ability to make the most of things as they are, and if conjurers were found necessary to help keep the symphonies going, he was all for including the conjurers:

Miss Margaret Cooper also appeared at the British Music Concert, and Sir Hubert Parry asked me why on earth I had included her. I replied, 'To give more variety.' But this was not the whole truth. I wanted to make sure of a good audience, for I knew that British music, even in 1910, was not a sure magnet, and that Margaret Cooper's well-merited popularity would guarantee a 'full house' and welcome for our leading composers.

That charming paragraph, which honours Sir Dan's sense as well as his wit, earns forgiveness for many pages less amusing. Among the pages that seem to need some forgiveness are those giving a list of the orchestral instruments with descriptions of their timbres and their alleged colour analogies. Is it any use to read that the horn has 'a rich "poo" tone'? The oboe is said to be green. So is the English horn. But the bassoon is both brown and green. Why?

Then compensation is proper for a remark so very like nonsense as this (p. 132):

Handel did little more than, like the industrious German that he was, copy what he found already accepted in this country.

Scattered in the chapters on the musicians he has met are to be found some compensations. What musicians has Sir Dan Godfrey not met? In the last thirty years he has performed the whole corpus of modern British orchestral music, and its authors have nearly all gone down to Bournemouth to hear him do it. In an immense number of cases (Appendix B gives us the statistics) the performance was the first anywhere, and was, anyhow, during most of those thirty years, a rarity. Long before the rest of the country, Bournemouth came to regard it as a normal thing that a British composer should have his work performed and listened to.

Sir Dan's chapter 'Where British Music Stands,' is perhaps not so illuminating as was to be hoped from one with his unparalleled knowledge of the material. We read:

Frederick Delius is another with an individual style, yet one that did not fail to include certain characteristics that were proper . . .

—and go empty away. There is more entertainment in the personal notes. We draw near the great when we read that Mr. Edward German has at last discarded a grey frock-coat in favour of an orthodox morning coat, and that Sir Alexander Mackenzie is seen at his best . . . attired in a dressing-gown, with a Scottish night-cap on his head and his favourite 'cutty' in his mouth.

Of all the Bournemouth visitors, Sir Edward Elgar alone seems to have left behind no trait to record. 'He is not the kind of man with whom it is easy to get on terms of intimacy.' Sir Landon Ronald, while diffident as to his abilities as a composer, acknowledges that he bought a motor-car from the proceeds of The Garden of Allah, and 'his income is probably greater than that of any other conductor in this country.'

Prof. Granville Bantock learnt Persian before composing Omar Khayyám. 'His knowledge of the Bible is profound, and he can quote most effectively from it.' Dr. William Wallace during the war urged the Carnegie Trust to publish his ophthalmic treatise rather than a work of music, and when they declined he would not accept their musical award.

Mr. Holbrooke, reminded of an apparent oversight in his attire, lightly replied, 'Oh, I don't wear a collar.' Mr. Rutland Boughton wears a tie—a red one—but when conducting behaves like an autocrat, 'without meaning anything offensive.' Dr. Herbert Brewer is a keen motorist, but Sir Dan mistrusts his skill. Dame Ethel Smyth, after a first rehearsal, accused Sir Dan of having 'let her down.' Sir Dan soothingly assured her that it would be all right on the night, and so it was—luckily for him.

All these pages are amiable. Sir Dan, whose patience and charity must have been so often tried, cannot be detected in a single unkindness. Even when he recommends the composer of a 'Prospero' to apply himself to writing a 'Caliban,' we do not believe he had any double intention. C.

Handbuch der Orgel-Literatur. By Franz Sauer.

[Wiener Philharmonischer Verlag.]

This booklet is really little more than a guide to organ music composed or published in Germany. Very few English examples are included, among them being two pieces and an arrangement of Purcell—the Toccata in A, 'Sehr effektiv,' the Voluntary for double organ, and the Chaconne in F (the last being an arrangement). Then there is the first Sonata of Harwood (sic) and that of Hiles, the latter being followed by an approving 'Gut.' Lemare is represented by five works only—those published by Schott—and Henry Smart is included. Guilmant's Sonatas, Widor's Symphonies, and Saint-Saëns's organ works duly appear, but Vienne is absent; and although Joseph Jongen has yet to be discovered by Herr Sauer, he includes Arthur Honegger (who has written but two tiny pieces) and P. de Maleingreau. It will be seen from this that the book is very patchy. There is a good deal of useful information, however, brief biographical particulars being given in most cases. Critical comment is unevenly spread; sometimes there is quite a lot of it, sometimes none. The taste of the compiler seems to be indicated by the warm approval given to Reger, and by the fact that the Duet-Sonata of Merkel is hailed with a 'Sehr gut!' (Merkel's solo Sonatas, by the way, are not mentioned). Sections, all too short, are devoted to arrangements—organ music with other instruments, with voices, and books on the organ and its repertory. It is a pity that so important a task should have been merely nibbled at thus. H. G.

Lettres de Musiciens écrites en français du 15<sup>me</sup> au 20<sup>me</sup> siècles. Vol. I., 1480-1830. By Julien Tiersot.

[Turin: Bocca Frères, 30 fr.]

These letters, the originals of which are in the library of the Paris Conservatoire and other public collections, will prove interesting to specialists, and may now and then be found to provide good reading for an idle hour. As the compiler remarks, the letters from 15th-, 16th-, and 17th-century musicians refer chiefly to business matters, and it seems as if their chief concern was to collect what small sums of money their work brought in. But considering that sometimes a receipt or some such document is the only available proof of certain old musicians' identity or existence at a certain period, these scraps of information, however slight, are valuable. M. Tiersot's investigations have revealed much that few people knew of. Letters from Gluck, Rameau, Handel, Monteverde, Mozart, Haydn, Grétry, Piccini, Méhul, Cherubini, Lesueur, and Spontini, as well as from many lesser lights, are given. There are many reproductions of the originals, and other illustrations, such as reproductions of old designs, portraits, and medals. Reproductions of engravings and prints are excluded. M.-D. C.

About Elizabethan Virginal Music and its Composers. By Margaret H. Glyn.

[W. Reeves, 7s. 6d.]

Elizabethan vocal music nowadays has everywhere the beginnings, at least, of an adequate appreciation. There is more dubiousness about the contemporary instrumental music, which is commonly said to be experimental. This excellent little book—written by one thoroughly knowing her subject, and not simply taken by ephemeral enthusiasm—speaks up for the virginalists' art, not merely as a quaint, historical curiosity, but a thing of still living beauty. Most of the Virginal music remains still unpublished. Miss Glyn has made herself acquainted with all the available manuscripts. She feels that by ignoring this heritage of ours, English people are missing something that no other music can quite replace:

The English style contains an immense amount, expressively and technically, that has since developed in Continental music, and also features that are new to us now and have never been reproduced elsewhere. In its own period this music was a new style, far ahead of the rest of the world, and it is not the work of mere experimenters; it is that of artists who foreshadowed marvellously the possibilities of modern keyboard development, and whose music seems to demand the expressive pianoforte rather than the unexpressive virginal.

She is, then, all for the use of the virginalists' music as the basis of English students' pianoforte practice. She is not afraid of the false relations so characteristic of the English school. Ears in the 18th and 19th centuries lost sympathy for what Miss Glyn calls the 'inflectional habit,' which, indeed, was obsolescent in the 17th century. But the principle of 'scale inflection' was strong in Elizabethan times. It was a melodic feeling, and gave a scale that was major in rising, and had a flat seventh, sixth, and third in descending:

This is distinct from the harmonic principle, so that a major chord may be accompanied by its own minor-third in a falling scale . . . Once the ear becomes accustomed to the inflectional change, and the false relations frequently involved, this habit appears an essential and altogether natural, and even fascinating, part of the Elizabethan tradition.

Miss Glyn believes that the Lady Nevill Virginal Book was copied from Byrd's own MS., and that the corrections are in Byrd's handwriting:

It is seldom a matter of correcting what is entirely wrong, but of inserting little improvements that only Byrd's brain would have thought of.

Our author has examined in the New York Public Library 'one of the finest Virginal folios, which contains what may be an autograph of Orlando Gibbons'—a folio which only forty years ago was lost to England for the modest sum of ten guineas. The supposed Gibbons MS. consists of eight of the nine Fantazias in III. Parts for viols, transcribed for virginals, possibly by the composer himself.

Miss Glyn is very severe on the popular King's Hunt, usually ascribed to Bull. She insists that it is by Cosyn, much altered by copyists—'and by no means improved, one might say spoilt, in the process.' This pretty piece she feels to be of little consequence and almost childish. To realise the sort of man Bull was we must go to the Walsingham Variations.

Byrd, Bull, and Gibbons are the three heroes of the book. A whole chapter is also given to a lesser man, the delightful Farnaby, in virtue of his gift for melody. And in the last chapter there are notes on Weelkes, Tomkins, and Cosyn. The index gives a list of some six hundred virginal pieces of the best period, with references to their MS. source. C.

Musik des Südens. By Walter Dahms.

[Deutsche Verlags Anstalt, Berlin, Stuttgart.]

This is a big collection of essays, aphorisms, rhapsodies, and jottings, very much in the spirit and not a little after the manner of Nietzsche. The writer is full of enthusiasm and self-confidence. The reader will find that his utterances hit or miss the mark according as they happen to fit in with his own outlook on things musical. To anyone who is not essentially amenable to that order of writing, reading Herr Dahms's book will prove rather trying.

Roughly, the main thesis is that 'music of the South is music in which melody stands as an end in itself, free and care-free; music of the North stands for restraint, spirituality, and order. The function of genius is to merge both principles into one.'

Herr Dahms holds that 'music without tonality amounts to the same thing as painting without design or sculpture without form.' This assertion, occurring as it does in the course of a remarkable disquisition on the 'biology' of music, appears acceptable. The only trouble is that certain readers will take it literally—as the writer himself appears to have done. It is quite true that tonality is 'logic in music.' But what nobody has yet succeeded in demonstrating is whether musical logic must necessarily consist in the observance of certain principles of tonality. So long as people continue to fling assertions at one another, the wisest policy will be—considering the present course of music—to let them carry on their merry game, and seek solace, if need be, in the old, wise saying, E pur si muove. M.-D. C.

Gramophone Notes

By 'DISCUS'

ÆOLIAN VOCALION

Not much instrumental music of importance appears in this month's Vocalion list. Easily the best, and a first-rate record of delightful music, is a 12-in. d.-s. of the Allegro and Andante from Mozart's Trio No. 7, arranged for violin, viola, and pianoforte by Lionel Tertis, and played by him, Sammons, and Ethel Hobday. I think Mr. Tertis is better employed in making arrangements of this kind than in trying to increase the solo repertory of his instrument by laying predatory hands on violin and violoncello solos. Very few come through the ordeal unscathed; those written for violin lose brightness, and the violoncello solos become less rich with no compensating gain. There must be plenty of more or less neglected trios that bear adaptation well, and which give our incomparable viola player fine opportunities. Moreover, the viola as a solo instrument soon palls on most of us, whereas in works such as this arrangement, it actually gains by the contrasts set up by the other instruments.

Those who think the music of the Gilbert and Sullivan operas worth hearing for its own sake will be glad of a record of H.M. Life Guards Band playing a selection from The Sorcerer—a good reproduction of music that, divorced from text and dramatic action, is surely very ordinary stuff.

Good light music is Eric Coates's Suite, Joyous Youth, played by the Æolian Orchestra, conducted by the composer (two 12-in. d.-s.). The recording is excellent.

The best of the vocal records appears to be that of Evelyn Scotney's good, clean singing of Una voce and Proch's old-fashioned Theme and Variations. Kathleen Destournel makes pleasant hearing in Liza Lehmann's Four Bird Songs (12-in. d.-s.). Hardy Williamson sings some Flotow and On with the Motley, with a tone too hard for my liking (10-in. d.-s.). Watcyn Watcyns is unequal in a couple of songs—Now sleeps the crimson petal is handled too heavily; his excellent voice is used far better in Löhr's Alanna (10-in. d.-s.).

COLUMBIA

The procession of The Planets ends with a really fine record of 'Mercury' ('The Winged Messenger'), easily one of the best of the batch, with the deft scoring coming through well. On the reverse side is an equally good reproduction of the composer's Marching Song, an early work in popular style that ought to be heard more often.

A couple of 12-in. d.-s. of the Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Hamilton Harty, playing the Good Friday Music and Tristan's Vision, strike me as being below the average of orchestral records. It is not easy to say where the fault lies. Apparently the balance is wrong in some passages, but the chief failure is in the matter of clearness.

A 12-in. d.-s. of Mr. Harty and the Hallé Orchestra in some extracts from Strauss's Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme is much better, but as the music is poor and commonplace, the actual gain is small.

Another grumble! A month or so ago the Columbia Co. issued a string quartet, complete and uncut, and it seemed that the former policy of snippets was to be discontinued. But here is a backsliding in a record that gives us on one side the Allegro assai from Mozart's B flat Quartet, and on the other a mangled version of the Adagio molto e mesto from Beethoven's Rasounovsky in F. The players are the Léner Quartet, and there is little fault to be found with performance or reproduction.

The Court Symphony Orchestra is recorded in Haydn Wood's Three Famous Pictures and Evening Song. The pictures that are supposed to be translated into music are two by Fildes, The Doctor and The Village Wedding, and Franz Hals's The Laughing Cavalier. But as is usual in programme music, the works might well bear dozens of other labels. The rather ordinary music is well played and reproduced.

The 'Easter Hymn' from Cavalleria, sung by the Columbia opera chorus (10-in. d.-s.), comes out well. I wish all soprano solo records gave us as clean and musical voices as that of the lady who does the little bit of solo here. Frank Mullings sings two extracts from Pagliacci in the sobbing, painful manner that is becoming all too common. I wonder if the public really likes this sort of thing, seeing that all the opinions one hears are against it.

Nor is Charles Hackett happy in Schubert's Serenade and Who is Sylvia? One would have thought that the latter required above all things clean singing, but Mr. Hackett drags it, and scoops and slithers, and altogether seems less enthusiastic about Sylvia than a singer ought to be. The Serenade is also laboured. For some obscure reason the original pianoforte accompaniment gives place to a version for string quartet.

H.M.V.

The Centenary of the Choral Symphony could not have been celebrated better than by the H.M.V. issue of the complete work. Only a few of us can get to the rare performances of this masterpiece; now we can sit at home and hear it as often as we wish. This record is a real achievement, despite the fact that the choral sections leave something to be desired—an inevitable blemish in the present stage of recording. But the purely instrumental part is first-rate. The players are that vague body known as 'The Symphony' Orchestra, conducted by Albert Coates. The vocal soloists are duly heroic and efficient, but what do the solo-parts matter, anyway?

The real stuff in the Ninth is the first movement, the Scherzo, and the genesis and development of the great tune in the Finale. Give me these, and you may have all the rest of the Symphonies, with a good deal more of Beethoven thrown in.

After this record, one would not have expected anything else in the orchestral line. But this month's parcel contains yet another notable record in a 12-in. d.-s. of two Elgar transcriptions—Bach's beautiful C minor Organ Prelude and the Handel Overture in D minor that has made such a stir wherever it has been played. The performance is by the Albert Hall Orchestra, conducted by Elgar. The recording is fine, especially in the Handel.

A first-rate violin record is a 12-in. d.-s. of Thibaud in a couple of Granados's Spanish Dances, arranged by Kreisler and the player himself. Less good, because of the poorer quality of the music, is a 12-in. d.-s. of Marie Hall—Sinding's Romance and Sinigaglia's Capriccio all' antica.

Liszt's transcription of Schumann's love-song Dedication and an arrangement of the 'Serenade' from Mozart's Don Giovanni do not make very interesting pianoforte music, but Backhaus's playing of them is very well recorded.

There is a big batch of vocal music. The De Reszke Singers are very effective in four negro 'spirituals'—Scandalise my Name is quite dramatic. The tone is too nasal, but whether that be local colour or a matter of production must be left undecided. Tudor Davies sings 'In Native Worth' and 'Love sounds the alarm' (Acis and Galatea). The latter seems to suit him best, but even so he makes the alarm rather thin and piercing.

He is over-strenuous, too, when singing with Florence Austral and Bessie Jones in 'What then, Santuzza?' from Cavalleria. A good record, though.

Frieda Hempel sings Tchaikovsky's None but the weary heart and the old setting of Phyllis has such charming graces—not a very good effort, and the words don't come through.

I spoke above of Mullings's sobs, but they are nothing compared with those of Michele Fleta in airs from Rigoletto and Tosca. O for a few manly tenors, with emotion controlled, and a style that suggests ease instead of tremendous effort!

Joseph Hislop gets nearer the mark in his singing of two extracts from Rigoletto, and those who like this type of music will enjoy the record.

Chaliapin's singing of 'Madamina' from Don Giovanni is good, and is well reproduced, but I don't think it will rank among the pick of his records.

Finally, here is a really interesting record of a speech by the Right Hon. W. F. Massey, the New Zealand Premier. But when we leave the speech and turn on the New Zealand National Anthem, oh, what a fall is there! Why did somebody allow Mr. J. J. Wood to saddle his country with such a commonplace tune? Our own God Save the King rounds off the record. I have never had any doubt about its being a sterling good air, and, hearing it thus, after Mr. Wood's effort, I admire it more than ever.

To mark the centenary of the birth of the famous singer and teacher, Julius Stockhausen (1826-1906), the Town Council of Frankfort will publish his life. The editor (Frau Julia Wirth-Stockhausen, 50, Paul Erlich Strasse, Frankfort) will be grateful for the loan of any letters, programmes, documents, or reminiscences concerning Stockhausen and his parents.

PURCELL'S CHURCH MUSIC

By H. D. STATHAM

(Concluded from May number, page 420)

The question of the pace at which Purcell's Church music ought to be sung seems to the writer to be of some importance, for it is one that appears to have been constantly misunderstood both by editors and singers. Nearly all the more joyful anthems suffer unless they are taken at a brisk speed. This applies more particularly, though by no means entirely, to those anthems with orchestra, composed for the Chapel Royal. Perhaps modern editors, when suggesting the pace of the music, have been influenced by the fact that they have had to dig the anthems out of solemn folio tomes, and have read into the music a solemnity which is not really present. But 'who drives fat oxen should himself be fat' is a fallacious line of reasoning: nor need that which is found in solemn volumes necessarily be solemn, even though it may have received a prosy blessing from Burney or Hawkins. At any rate an examination of some octavo editions shows the metronome marking to be so slow that, if it is adhered to, the result is depressing in the extreme. More particularly is this so when the music is in triple time. In the following examples the speed suggestion in the octavo editions are given first, the writer's second. If only one speed indication is given it is the writer's:

Ex. 11.

$\text{♩} = 88; \text{♩} = 132.$  From O Give Thanks.

and His, &c. and His and His mer - cy en - dur - eth, His

and His

mer - cy en - dur - eth for

At the faster pace the real meaning of the alto part a few bars later becomes apparent: it is a joyful little shake thrown off as the climax is reached:

Ex. 12.

mp ev . . . er, His ff mer - cy

ev . . . er, for ev . . . er, mer - cy en - dur - eth for ev - er, His mer - cy

In the phrase 'quicken me,' from Thy Word is a Lantern, the absurd effect of the staccato 'O' is avoided if a faster speed is adopted than is customary.

It is marked, and is usually sung, Andante. The correct phrasing seems obvious :

Ex. 13. ♩ = 120

quick-en me, quick-en me, quick-en me,
O O

This passage is not really so trivial as it is commonly made to sound. Purcell evidently intended the voices to blend so well that they should seem like one voice mysteriously endowed with the power of singing in three-part harmony, or in four-part harmony when the phrase comes in the chorus. The Hallelujah at the end of this anthem again calls for a far greater speed than is usually adopted. It is obviously really in a lilting 6-8 rhythm :

Ex. 14.

♩ = 132 (or even faster).

Hal-le-lu-jah, Hal-le-lu-jah, Hal-le-lu-jah, Hal-le-lu-jah.

The quicker speed emphasises the charming effect of the change of rhythm at the end of this short phrase. Here are a few examples of speed indications taken at random from some of the bigger anthems :

Ex. 15.

♩ = 72 ; ♩ = 96.

My be-lov-ed spake... and said un-to me, My be-lov-ed spake... and said un-to me.

Ex. 16.

♩ = 56 ; ♩ = 84.

The fig-tree putteth forth her green figs, the fig tree putteth forth her green figs.

Ex. 17.

♩ = 96 ; ♩ = 120.

My be-lov-ed is mine and I am
His. Hal-le-lu-jah, Hal-le-lu-jah.

Ex. 18.

♩ = 92 ; ♩ = 116.

SOLO.

Sing un-to the Lord all,
all the whole earth.

Exx. 15, 16, and 17 are from My beloved spake, an anthem which should surely be sung at Easter by every Church choir capable of singing it. It is the most spring-like of anthems, full of fresh and beautiful tunes, and it suffers more than most when it is taken slowly and heavily. As to the writer's speed suggestions, they represent, of course, only his personal opinion : it is not possible to know exactly how the music was sung in Purcell's time. But there is no doubt that Elizabethan Church music was sung far too slowly* by many choirs in the past : and it may well be that this traditional method of singing the music too slowly has been applied to Restoration music as well.

Besides this question of the speed of the music, a pernicious tradition exists that Purcell's Church music is written almost entirely in short sections, and must be treated as though it was a series of separate numbers. Boyce carried this tradition to such length that he wrote instrumental introductions and endings to each of the apparent sections of the Te Deum in D, and more or less turned the work into the pattern of a Handel oratorio. Fortunately Sir Frederick Bridge was able to scotch this tradition to a certain extent when he published his fine edition of the Te Deum. An examination of the verses and choruses in the anthems shows clearly that, according to the sense of the words, a verse with a chorus following it is nearly always one complete number, even though a double-bar divide the two. In the anthem Thy Word is a Lantern, the verse 'quicken me' is repeated by the chorus ; and at the end of the anthem are the words 'They are the very joy of my heart. Hallelujah.' The chorus sings 'Hallelujah,' the soloists the rest of the sentence. In both places the soloists come to a full close, and there is a double-bar. In performance the tendency is for the soloists to rallentando, and for a distinct break in the time to be made before the chorus begins. The result is that the continuity of the work goes. Instead of a sort of antiphony between soloists and chorus, there is substituted a succession of short phrases, each drawing heavily to its conclusion. This may seem a small thing to cavil at, but these constant and irritating rallentandi check the flow of the music altogether. Listening to a choir that sings thus is like riding in a motor-car with a driver who is continually changing gear. It is an obvious weakness of Restoration composers to be constantly coming to a full close, but it is * A well-known lecturer illustrates this traditional method of slow singing amusingly on the gramophone by putting on a record of Byrd's Short Service in the proper key and at the proper speed, and then reducing the speed of the disc till the music is transposed down a minor third, when the traditional 'Cathedral' way of singing the music is given.

TO THE ENGLISH SINGERS

BUSHES AND BRIARS

ESSEX FOLK-SONG FREELY ARRANGED FOR UNACCOMPANIED CHORUS (OR SOLO VOICES)

BY

R. VAUGHAN WILLIAMS

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED; NEW YORK: THE H. W. GRAY, CO., SOLE AGENTS FOR THE U.S.A.

2nd SOPRANOS AND CONTRALTOS
Lento

(For practice only)

p

hear the small birds sing, And the lambs to . . skip and

1st SOPRANOS

pp

Ah (half-closed) * (close lips gradually) play.

TENORS

pp

Ah (half-closed) * (close lips gradually)

BARITONES AND BASSES

pp

Ah (half-closed) * (close lips gradually)

* Not an open "Ah" but the short "u," as in the word "but."

Copyright, 1924, by Novello and Company, Limited

An Arrangement for T.T.B.B. in THE ORPHEUS, No. 447; and in NOVELLO'S TONIC SOL-FA SERIES, No. 2405. (1)

BUSHES AND BRIARS

(p)

(lips closed)

mp

I o - ver - heard my own true love, Her voice it was so . . clear, "Long

(lips closed)

(lips closed)

pp

Ah (half closed)

time I . . have been wait - ing for The com - ing . . of my

pp

Ah (half closed)

Ah (half closed)

pp

(close lips gradually)

(lips closed)

dear. . . . . Some-times I am un -

pp

(close lips gradually) (lips closed)

(close lips gradually) (lips closed)

BUSHES AND BRIARS

(7)

pp
Ah (half closed)

- ea - sy, And troubled in my mind, Some - times I . . think I'll go to my

pp
Ah (half closed)

love And tell to . . him my mind ; . . And if I should go

pp
Ah (half closed)

pp
Ah (half closed)

cres. f dim.

cres. Ah (open) f dim.
to my love, My love he will say nay ; If I show to him my

cres. f dim.
Ah (open)

p cres. f dim.
Ah (open, BARITONES only.)

cres. f dim.

BUSHES AND BRIARS

pp rall. a tempo
pp
 (close lips gradually) (lips closed)
rall. a tempo
pp
 bold - - - ness, He'll ne'er love . . me a - gain."
rall. a tempo
pp
 (close lips gradually)
pp rall. a tempo
 (BASS) (close lips gradually)

molto rit. ppp
molto rit. pp ppp
 (lips closed) molto rit. ppp
pp molto rit. ppp
 (BASS AND BARITONE lips closed)
molto rit. ppp

one which might well be passed over lightly instead of being emphasised at every opportunity. If this treatment is unsatisfactory in a short anthem, it is disastrous in one of the large anthems with orchestral accompaniment. The splendid anthem Praise the Lord, O my soul is an example of the continuous use of the chorus and soloists with responsive (rather than contrasted) orchestral interludes. To make a rallentando* whenever the chorus or orchestra comes to a full close is to ruin the unity of the anthem. The whole first chorus, with its orchestral introduction, is one continuous movement laid out on very big lines; chorus and orchestra are not combatants in opposition, but friends. The end of the last movement suffers particularly if any rallentando is made. After some antiphonal decani and cantoris passages the voices finish thus:

Ex. 19.

Praise thou the Lord, O . . . my . . .

soul, (Orchestra.)

ff

and the orchestra bursts in at once with a passage overflowing with joy, taking the rhythm of the words 'Praise the Lord' from the first chorus. A double bar is placed at the end of this orchestral flourish, but it is vandalism to make any pause. The impetus of the music demands that the chorus should come in straightway with the ringing phrase in four-part harmony which seems to gather up the whole of what has gone before and drive it home:

Ex. 20.

Praise thou the Lord, O my soul, praise the Lord, O my soul, praise the Lord.

(A corresponding phrase brings a conclusion in F major.) There is real ecstasy about this, and sung with fire and conviction it carries one off his feet. Incidentally this last phrase seems to require a big rubato.)

* In Sir Frederick Bridge's edition of this anthem hardly any rallentandi are marked; but other editors of other anthems have not been so reticent.

In looking through Purcell's anthems one cannot fail to be struck by the number of dramatic recitatives for the bass. The best of these give splendid opportunities to a singer who can enter into the spirit of the music. They demand a very loose treatment, a generous expansiveness, and a free use of rubato and occasionally portamenti. Some idea of their spaciousness, and of the way that music and words move together as one, may be gathered from the following quotations:

Ex. 21.

(a)

Mine en - e - mies are dai - ly in hand to swal - low me up: for there be ma - ny that fight . . . against me, O . . .

(b)

Thou most . . . High - est.

(c)

For look how high the Heav'n is in compar - i - son of the earth, so great . . . is His mer - cy toward them that fear Him.

Purcell's Church music is sometimes accused of being too secular in its rhythms for Church use. Sir Hubert Parry, in the chapter on Restoration music in the Oxford History of Music, wrote, ' . . . one of his pitfalls [in writing Church music] was an overfondness for a lilting rhythm of shorts and longs,' and he considers that this rhythm is a secular one, and therefore out of place in Church music. But it is just this rhythm which is used almost continuously in the latter part of the Evening Hymn; yet it would be difficult to find many thinking musicians who would bring a charge of secularity against this exquisite work. In its Blake-like simplicity it is one of the most truly religious compositions that have ever been penned. Besides, can a definite line be drawn between sacred and secular music? Surely the chief requirements in Church music are that it should be vital as music, and that it should enhance the meaning of the words to which it is set. It is difficult to find any Church music of Purcell's that does not fulfil these requirements. Much music is even now sung by Cathedral choirs which is sentimental and meretricious, or academic and dull. Purcell's music is none of these things; whatever he wrote, even in his least inspired moments, has a touch of fire and steel about it. His rhythms may be too joyous and high-spirited for every occasion; but if joy and vitality have a place in religion, then Purcell's music is entitled to its place in English Church music. The Purcell repertoire of Cathedral choirs comprises usually three or four only of the less-inspired anthems. Organists should throw their net wider. Such masterpieces as Praise the Lord, O Jerusalem; **Praise the Lord, O my soul*, and all; My beloved spake; O ye people, clap your hands; Jehova quam multi; and the Evening Hymn (and there can be few things more moving than to hear this sung by half-a-dozen well-trained boys) should be heard, and heard frequently, in every Church where there is a choir capable of singing them. Of course there is the difficulty of having an orchestra, or not having one: but a good organist on a good organ can make the orchestral interludes thoroughly effective. Orchestra or no orchestra, musicians, and all who care for Church music, should have the opportunity for hearing this music. In these articles reference has been made only to those anthems published in octavo editions, and not by any means to all of them. Purcell wrote many anthems more in the Cathedral style than the above; but for this very reason they have probably been more constantly performed—and more adequately performed—than the spirited and joyous anthems. But while a certain amount of Purcell's Church music is too experimental for Church performance to-day, there yet remains a large proportion which should be sung but which remains unheard either because it is considered unsuitable (too dreary or too frivolous or too long) or else because there are no copies from which to sing it. It has been the object of these articles to try to show, in a necessarily sketchy way, that the music is not too long or too dreary, although it has often been made to appear so. Nor is it frivolous—call it rather gay and gallant. As to the copies from which the choirs are to sing, those, it is to be hoped, will come before long. A striking proof of the neglect into which Purcell's Church music has fallen can be seen in the recently published Manual of English Church Music by Archdeacon Gardner and Mr. Nicholson. In the list of Church music here given as being suitable for cathedrals, three only of Purcell's anthems are included, and two of these are, in the writer's opinion, to be numbered among his feeble productions. It should be understood that this list is not intended to be a comprehensive one including all music suitable for cathedrals; but even so, to allot to Purcell but three of his hundred anthems seems inadequate. Byrd is given fifteen, and as many might have been given to Purcell. Only we have not yet discovered Purcell the Church musician as we have discovered Byrd the Church musician.

* There are two anthems beginning Praise the Lord, O my soul.

Church and Organ Music

AN EDUCATIONAL BASIS FOR ORGAN RECITAL PROGRAMMES

By C. F. WATERS

Diverse indeed are the views concerning the construction of organ recital programmes. Some would have the items arranged in chronological order; others would insist on a relationship of keys; while many would decline to submit to any restrictions. Where recitals are infrequent there is much to be said in favour of a varied and comprehensive programme. There are, on the other hand, many places where recitals are given at regular intervals—once a week, or even oftener—and to substantially the same audience. With such an audience, familiar with, and interested in, organ music, the opportunity may be grasped for adopting a policy, such as is outlined below, which will have an instructive motive, and will aim at variety as between recitals rather than within each programme.

In the arrangement of a series of organ recitals, it should be possible to assign to each a definite subject for examination, be it the work of one composer, a 'school' or period, or some particular phase of organ composition. Bach recitals are now by no means uncommon, and while admitting the ample justification for recitals devoted to the works of so great a master, it will be well worth considering whether some other writer cannot be treated in the same way. The centenary or other anniversary of the birth or death of a composer will present an opportunity for interesting people in him, and the occasion will impress upon their minds the period and significance of his work. It is just this kind of impression which is so valuable, for a proper appreciation of music, or indeed any art, so largely depends upon a true historical conception. Among those writers whose work may reasonably be taken as a subject for a recital may be numbered Rheinberger, César Franck, Guilmant, and Parry. A note on the composer and his work, with special reference to the examples to be played, should appear on the programme, preferably at the beginning, in order to ensure closer examination than is normally invited by a foot-note. Such a note will stimulate the more enthusiastic among the audience to seek further information for themselves. The recitalist himself will gain by a concentrated study of one composer, assuming that one player is undertaking a series of recitals on various 'subjects.' Where different recitalists are contributing to a series, each may be invited to choose a subject in which his interest mainly lies—one may be a Bach exponent, another may be partial to Rheinberger, a third may be a César Franck devotee, and so on.

It is, however, only a small number of composers whose work alone would provide adequate material for a recital, and it will be necessary, therefore, to look for another 'subject.' The recital exclusively devoted to one composer may find a contrasted successor in a programme drawn from a school or period, such as the modern French school. Of a recent recital by one of this school, consisting of his own compositions, it was stated that it 'lacked verve and energy—there was too much of the pastorale, cantabile style.' The inclusion of some movements by other composers of the same school would have removed the feeling of monotony, while at the same time attention would have been confined to one 'school.' Other groups of composers and other periods will present themselves to the mind.

Greater variety may result from a programme not restricted to one composer, one school, or one period, but chosen to illustrate the development of one particular form. No form is more susceptible to treatment in this way than the chorale prelude. From Pachelbel to Karg-Elert is a long journey—with many stopping-places between! It will be impossible to choose one programme which will do justice to this form; more than one programme could be given to the Bach Chorale Preludes alone. And it will be equally impossible to give, within the limits of a paragraph, any but the most meagre account of the history and development of this form, so beloved of great masters of various times. Space may be found to indicate the methods adopted by Bach—the plain statement of the chorale with embellishments at the end of each line, the fugal treatment of the opening notes of each line, the contrapuntal accompaniment of the melody in long notes, or the construction of a movement taking some point in the chorale as a motive but with little direct allusion to the chorale. It may be recorded that in turning their thoughts to the instrument some of the great masters adopted this form. Brahms at the end of his life wrote some beautiful Preludes, and Parry left two invaluable sets of seven. Three or perhaps four well-chosen Bach Preludes, two by Brahms, two contrasted Preludes of Parry's, such as Martyrdom and Croft's 136th, and two by living composers, will constitute an interesting and informative programme.

The growth of the sonata may similarly be taken as the subject of a recital. One of the delightful Trio-Sonatas of Bach may take first place on the programme, attention being drawn to the binary form of the several movements—the precursor of the design developed by Beethoven in his Symphonies and Sonatas. It may be observed how frequently have Chorales been utilised in organ sonatas, and such an example as Mendelssohn's Sixth may suitably follow the Bach Trio-Sonata. The scheme would be incomplete without one of the twenty Rheinberger Sonatas. In the case of some, attention may be drawn to the use of sonata form with its exposition of two subjects, development, and recapitulation, by no means common in organ sonatas, while as regards others no doubt opportunity will be found to comment upon the combination of fugue with sonata form. A modern sonata will provide a fitting conclusion.

If the Harwood C sharp minor Sonata be selected, the explanatory paragraph will not fail to call attention to the use of an old hymn melody, first appearing disguised in the development section of the first movement, then used in conjunction with the fugue in the third movement, and finally in a plain statement as a conclusion to the whole work.

Other 'subjects' will occur to the thoughtful recitalist—the 'ground-bass' or the variation form in organ music, the influence of plainsong in organ composition, 'Pastorale' movements, music inspired by the Psalms, and so on. The audience to be found, for example, at the lunch-hour recitals at a City church requires something more than passing enjoyment. It has that desire for knowledge, that spirit of inquiry, which we venture to think is so prevalent in these days of the wireless, the gramophone, and the pianola. We organists, by presenting our goodly heritage in a definitely instructive manner, can do much to satisfy that desire and to quicken that spirit of inquiry.

THE ORGANISTS' BENEVOLENT LEAGUE

The fourteenth Annual Report has been issued. We are glad to note that this excellent organization continues to grow steadily. The year's receipts show an increase both in regard to donations and organ recital collections. The increase from recitals should, however, be larger, for, as the Report points out, 'the basis on which the League rests is an appeal to organists to give recitals; and that donations are only a subsidiary method of contributing.' A pathetic interest attaches to the Report, in that it gives verbatim the speech of Sir Frederick Bridge at the meeting of the League on February 20—one of the last speeches he made. We can hear the familiar voice, and feel the gusto, as we read such passages as these:

'If there is one thing for which I shall always be thankful it will be that I helped to found this Fund; it makes me happy when I think about it. . . . We have got the money now, and we ought to relieve all the cases we can which come before us. Our successors must look after the cases which come before them. I do not believe in making a fetish of a large sum, or of saving up money and doing nothing with it. If you do, some Government will come along and confiscate the lot! . . . I should like to place on record my special thanks to Mr. Shindler, because he does a great deal of work really, and he knows the people. He has a legal mind, which enables him to investigate the cases, and not to be humbugged. They would humbug me like a shot!

We hope this Report, containing as it does one of the last public utterances of the League's President, will bring in a very large number of new supporters.

PRIEST-ORGANISTS

At a meeting of the Association of Organists held recently at Bournemouth, with Dr. W. Prendergast, organist of Winchester Cathedral, in the chair, the following resolution was carried: 'That this Association strongly protests against the growing practice of appointing clergy to fill the position of organist and choirmaster.' It was pointed out (1) that three cathedrals have priest-organists; (2) that it is scarcely consistent with ordination vows for a priest to devote his time to the study and practice of music; (3) that the serious shortage of ordinands does not justify a priest's taking up work which a layman could do. At the same meeting the Archdeacon of Cheltenham, the Ven. George Gardner, gave a helpful address on 'Music in Worship,' pointing out that the first step towards better things was the improvement of public taste.

Bach's St. John Passion was sung twice during Holy Week at St. Andrew's, Plymouth; by the choir of the Church, eighty strong (St. Andrew's is reputed to have the largest parish church choir in the county). There was a professional orchestra, Mr. H. Moreton conducted, and Dr. Ernest Bullock was at the organ. The Church was filled to overflowing on both occasions.

MEMORIAL TO JOHN VARLEY ROBERTS

A memorial to the late organist of Magdalen College, Dr. John Varley Roberts, has been placed, by permission of the President and Fellows, in the College Chapel, by his daughter, Mrs. Wynn-Cuthbert. It consists of a plaque in bronze repoussé, affixed to the wall of the archway which supports the organ-loft. The inscription, in raised lettering, is as follows:

1882—1918.

To the glory of God, and the pious memory of John Varley Roberts, Doctor of Music, Hon. M.A., Organist of the College and Informator of the Choristers, and the life-long friend of both.

Then follow the first three bars of the music and the opening words of Dr. Roberts's anthem, Seek ye the Lord while He may be found.

Dr. Alcock, organist of Salisbury Cathedral, and Lady Mary Trefusis, hon. secretary of the Church-Music Society, were the chief guests at the annual dinner of the Exeter and District Organists' Association, on April 22, Dr. Ernest Bullock presiding. Dr. Harold Rhodes, president of the Torquay Association, was also present, and pointed out that the two objects of the Association were the promotion of fellowship and the improvement of the status of the organist. Dr. Alcock urged that organists should not only be players of the organ, but also authorities on music and musical advisers. They must realise that the Church was not built round the organ, but was of first importance. He also urged the elimination of all unworthy music, even if the small quantity remaining had to be performed over and over again. Lady Mary Trefusis thought the future of Church music was full of hope, and a good sign was that the musical members of the congregation were being considered more than in the past, though both clergy and organist should realise more the necessity for this. Mr. Constable, organist of Rangoon Cathedral, gave an interesting contrast between Cathedral music in the West and in the East.

Mr. Philip Miles gave a Rheinberger recital at St. Stephen's, Bow, recently. He played the B flat minor Sonata, the Cantilène from the D minor, the first movement of the A flat, the Fugue from the Pastoral, the Marcia Religiosa and Fugue from the E flat minor, the Introduction and Passacaglia from the E minor, and the Monologues in D and D flat. It is a good plan to draw thus on a number of Sonatas in order to achieve variety, though we hope players who give programmes devoted to Rheinberger will realise that contrast is even more easily obtained by drawing liberally on the various short pieces. Perhaps the ideal scheme would open and close with a group of well-contrasted miscellaneous pieces, with a complete Sonata as the central item.

The new organ at Bangor Abbey, co. Down, was dedicated on April 23, Dr. E. Norman Hay giving the opening recital. His programme included Bach's Prelude on In Thee is joy, the St. Anne Fugue, and the Scherzo from Guilman's fifth Sonata. The organ is a two-manual, with seventeen stops on the manuals and three on the pedals, built by Messrs. Evans & Barr, of Belfast.

At Purley Congregational Church, on May 8, a new organ was dedicated—a three-manual of thirty-four stops, built by Messrs. Henry Willis & Sons and Lewis & Co. Mr. Reginald Goss-Custard gave the opening recital, playing the first movement of Widor's sixth Symphony, Bach's Prelude and Fugue in A minor, Mendelssohn's Overture for a military band, &c.

On the Monday in Holy Week Charles Wood's Passion according to St. Mark was sung in Booterstown Parish Church, Dublin, by the combined choirs of St. Mary's, Donnybrook, and of the Church, under the direction of Mr. F. C. J. Swanton. This was the first performance of the work at Dublin. A very large congregation was present.

Mr. H. V. Spanner will give a recital at the National Institute for the Blind, Great Portland Street, on June 4, at 3. His programme will include the pieces set for the next F.R.C.O. examination.

On April 30 Mr. G. D. Cunningham made his first appearance as the Birmingham City organist. He gave a mid-day recital, and the Town Hall was filled to overflowing. His programme, which included works by Bach, Widor, Vienne, and Wagner, was given entirely from memory. A recital the following week drew an audience of at least equal dimensions.

Bach's Jesu, Priceless Treasure and selections from Dvorák's Stabat Mater were sung at Alnwick Parish Church on Good Friday, conducted by Mr. George C. Gray. Mr. Harry Pearly sang the tenor solos, and Mr. J. Burn was at the organ. A congregation of over a thousand was present.

The annual Festival of the London Sunday School Choir will take place at the Crystal Palace on June 7. At 2 p.m. the junior choir of five thousand will sing, and at 6, the adults will give a programme drawn from Bach, Handel, Mendelssohn, Wagner, &c.

A selection from Parsifal, consisting of the Prelude, Transformation Music, the Grail Scene from Act I, and the Good Friday Music, was given at High Pavement Chapel, Nottingham, on April 17. Mr. C. E. Blyton Dobson was the organist.

Bach's St. Matthew Passion (abridged) was sung in Malvern Priory Church on Good Friday. The soprano solos were sung by the Priory Choristers, the other soloists being Miss Millicent Russell, Mr. E. Howell, and Mr. Henry Brown.

Mr. Sydney H. Nicholson has been elected President of the Organists' Benevolent League, in succession to the founder, the late Sir Frederick Bridge.

ORGAN RECITALS

- Mr. Herbert F. Ellingford, St. Paul's, Portman Square—Adagio and Allegro (Sonata No. 2), Bach; Passacaglia, Bach; 'The Mastersingers' Overture; Overture, 'Lustspiel,' Smetana.
- Mr. Stanley Curtis, St. Paul's, Portman Square—Prelude and Fugue in C major, Bach; Three Chorale Preludes, Parry; Légende and Postlude, Vienne.
- Dr. F. H. Wood, Blackpool Parish Church—Marche Solennelle, E. H. Lemare; Nocturne in D flat, Baird; Suite for orchestra, 'Simon de Montfort,' F. H. Wood.
- Mr. Ernest F. Mather, St. Dunstan-in-the-East—Prelude in C minor, Bach; 'A rose breaks into bloom,' Brahms; 'Petites Litanies de Jésus,' Groveles; Psalm-Prelude No. 1, Howells.
- Mr. Norman Trafford, Town Hall, Leeds—Alla breve and Fugue in G, Bach; Divertissement, Vienne; Caprice Héroïque, Bonnet; Symphony No. 6, Widor.
- Mr. W. J. Lancaster, Bolton Parish Church—Pièce Héroïque, Franck; Sonata No. 1, Mendelssohn; Nocturne in B flat, Baird; Prelude and Fugue in B minor, Bach.
- Mr. G. Bernard Gilbert, Town Hall, Stratford—Overture to 'Occasional' Oratorio; Sonata No. 5 (slow movement), Rheinberger; Bourrée in E flat, Bach; March in B flat, E. Silas.
- Mr. Douglas Austen Dick, St. Cuthbert's United Free Church, Edinburgh—Scherzo in B flat, Wolstenholme; Imperial March, Elgar; Pax Vobiscum, Karg-Elert; Chorale Prelude on 'Darwell's 148th,' Darke.
- Mr. Gatty Sellars, Kingsway Hall, Kingsway—Rondino in D flat, Wolstenholme; Toccata and Fugue in D minor, Bach; Sonata No. 1, Mendelssohn.
- Dr. Thomas Keighley, Manchester Cathedral—Prelude and Fugue in G, Bach; Fantasia, Franck; Toccata in D minor, Intermezzo in D, and Toccata in A minor, Reger; 'The Pilgrim's Progress' (part 5), Ernest Austin.
- Mr. Henry Riding, St. Mary-the-Virgin, Aldermanbury—Kieff Processional, Moussorgsky; Prelude on 'Winchester New,' John E. West; Homage Hymn, Alec Rowley.
- Mr. Richard B. Hamilton, All Saints, Hoole—Toccata and Fugue in D minor, Bach; Legend, Harvey Grace; Festal Prelude, Alec Rowley.
- Dr. R. Walker Robson, Christ Church, Crouch End—'Chant de Mai,' Jongen; Prelude in E minor, Bach; Passacaglia in D minor, Reger.

- Mr. C. E. Blyton Dobson, High Pavement Chapel, Nottingham—Fugue (Pastoral Sonata), Rheinberger; 'Moonlight,' Lemare; Pavane in A, Johnson; Concert Toccata, Holloway.
- Mr. G. W. Harris Sellick, St. Mary Magdalene, Ashton-upon-Mersey—Sonata No. 5, Mendelssohn; Sketch in F minor, Schumann; Fugue in E flat and Passacaglia, Bach.
- Mr. G. A. Birch, Wincanton Parish Church—Imperial March, Elgar; Finale (Sonata No. 6), Mendelssohn; Toccata in F, Bach.
- Mr. J. Albert Sowerbutts, St. Lawrence Jewry—Prelude and Fugue in B minor, Stanford; Trio in G, on 'To God on High,' Bach; Sonata No. 11 (first movement), Rheinberger; Fantasia on 'Forty days and forty nights,' J. E. Wallace; Adagio and Finale (Symphony No. 3), Widor.
- Mr. Albert Orton, St. Anne's, Soho—A Bach programme (one of a series): Concerto No. 4; Trio, 'Lord Jesus Christ unto us turn'; Sonata in D minor; Prelude and Fugue in E minor; Prelude and Fugue in G; Chorale Preludes.
- Mr. A. P. Porter, St. Matthias', Richmond—Three Preludes on Psalm-Tunes, Charles Wood; Sonata No. 5, Mendelssohn; Fantasia in G minor, Alan Gray; 'Grande Pièce Symphonique,' Franck; Finale (Sonata No. 5), Rheinberger; Introduction, Passacaglia, and Fugue, Willan; Psalm-Prelude No. 2, Howells.
- Mr. W. Hunt, St. George's Parish Church, Belfast—Sonata No. 20, Rheinberger; Andante (String Quartet), Debussy; 'Villanelle,' Ireland.
- Mr. Frederick Mewton, St. Andrew's Cathedral, Sydney—Sonata in F minor, Stanford; Sonata in E minor, Merkel; Pæan, Harwood; Sonata, Elgar; Scherzo in A flat, Baird; Introduction, Passacaglia, and Fugue, Willan.
- Mr. W. Greenhouse Allt, St. Giles's Cathedral—'Chant de Printemps,' Bonnet; 'Pilgrim's Progress' (parts 1 and 2), Ernest Austin; Scherzo, Harvey Grace; 'Verdun,' Stanford.
- Mr. R. J. Pitcher, Cheriton Baptist Church, Folkestone—Prelude and Fugue in D minor, Mendelssohn; Sonata, Morandi; Finale (Symphony No. 4), Widor; Study in C, 'Ride of the Valkyries,' Pitcher.
- Mr. Stanley Lucas, Christ Church, Westminster—Sonata No. 6, Mendelssohn; Two Chorale Preludes, Parry; Symphony in C minor, Holloway.
- Mr. H. Moreton, Westminster Cathedral—Overture in C, Adams; Elegiac Romance, H. Moreton; Fugue in G, ('The Wanderer'), Parry; 'Paulus,' Malling; Allegro Moderato ('Verdun'), Stanford.
- Mr. W. W. Thompson, St. Margaret Pattens, Eastcheap—'Laud Deo,' Harvey Grace; Suite Ancienne, Holloway; Pæan, Julius Harrison.
- Mr. A. M. Hawkins, St. Andrew's, Ashley Place, S.W.—'Visione,' Rheinberger; Pastorale, Bonnet; 'In Modo Dorico,' Stanford.
- Mr. Herbert Hodge, St. Stephen's Walbrook—Prelude and Fugue in E minor ('The Wedge'), Bach; Allegro con brio (Sonata No. 4), Mendelssohn; Prelude on 'St. Michael,' West; Allegro in A minor, Gade; 'Solemn Festival,' Rheinberger.
- Mr. Philip Miles, St. Stephen's, Bow—Chorale No. 3, Pastorale, and Andantino in G minor, Franck; 'Chant de Mai,' Jongen; Slow movement (String Quartet), Debussy; Sonata No. 9, Rheinberger; Diptych, Harwood; Rhapsody No. 1, Herbert Howells; Three Preludes on Welsh Hymn-Tunes, Vaughan Williams.
- Mr. Harry Wall, St. Dunstan-in-the-East—Preludes on 'Jesus Christ, our Redeemer,' Bach, and 'What God doth,' Karg-Elert; Réverie on 'University,' Harvey Grace; Prelude on 'Shining Shore,' Shippén Barnes; Madrigal and Cortège, Vienne.
- Dr. Chastey Hector, Brighton Parish Church—Fugue in G, Krebs; 'Good Friday Music' ('Parsifal'), Fantasia and Toccata, and Allegretto (Sonata, Op. 149), Stanford.
- Mr. Harold M. Dawber, Bradford Cathedral—Three movements from 'Water Music,' Handel; Fugue, 'Ad nos, ad salutarem undam,' Liszt; Prelude on 'St. Mary's,' Charles Wood; Study, Goodhart; Caprice, Harvey Grace.

Mr. C. H. Trevor, St. Michael-at-the-North-Gate, Oxford—Choral Study in D minor, Karg-Elert; Prelude, 'Gott des Himmels,' Reger; Intermezzo and Scherzoso (Sonata No. 6), Rheinberger; Epilogue, Willan; Prelude, Fugue, and Variation, Franck; Prelude on 'Martyrs,' Harvey Grace; Thème Varié, Ropartz; Selection from 'Grande Pièce Symphonique,' Franck; Two Pieces founded on Plainsong Melodies, Dupré.

APPOINTMENT

Mr. Henry Poole, organist and choirmaster, St. Mary the Virgin, Sunbury-on-Thames.

Letters to the Editor

NEGLECT OF HANDEL

SIR,—Mr. Claude W. Parnell writes very severely in your May issue of me and of my letter, but although he states his case with much force and perspicuity, I really cannot see that he has done more than express a different opinion upon the matter, and I venture to think he has not by any means refuted or falsified the argument I advanced. In many respects, indeed, he seems seriously to have misinterpreted my letter, but as he (somewhat ungraciously, I think) declares himself doubtful whether my text means anything at all, it may possibly be that I did not well express myself, despite the 'rhetoric' which he states characterises my communication.

I suggested, and still maintain, that the reaction against Handel which the last thirty years have witnessed is the result of the abuse and misrepresentation which his music suffered at the hands of the religiosity-mongers of the 19th century. I quite fail to see therefore that my censure of the mischievous and inartistic practice of wedding his operatic melodies to sacred verses was other than germane to the issue, and I consider Mr. Parnell's remarks in this respect to be entirely unjustifiable. Certainly the last thing I intended to imply was that Handel was responsible for this or for any other of the lamentable abuses of his music. Moreover I cannot follow the reasoning which, from the assertion that the last century disguised a sublime genius as a local preacher, draws the inference that the genius in question is being disparaged as a hypocrite.

I can assure Mr. Parnell that, although it may perhaps be my misfortune to possess less intellectual capacity than the 'merest child,' I am thoroughly familiar with the life and music of Handel, and that I yield to none in my affection and admiration for the composer. But the impression which I derive from the study of Handel is that his music, like his character, was essentially heroic, and that he was no rapt pietist or industrious purveyor of religious propaganda. With the possible exception of The Messiah, the religious element is the merest background for the great and gorgeous dramas that are Handel's oratorios. It is idle to assert, as Rockstro and others have done, that Handel preaches musical sermons, and those who pretend to discern in his compositions an evangelical purpose can only do so, if at all, by a wilful and violent distortion and misapprehension of them. Handel certainly did not 'discourse of divine things with his tongue in his cheek,' but he systematically subordinated the religious element in his oratorios to the dramatic, poetic, and pictorial elements, and I suggest that this is palpably manifest throughout the superb pages of Samson, Belshazzar, Solomon, Deborah, Susannah, and the rest. If Handel's purpose had been didactic, if he had sought to popularise Christianity, he would not, I apprehend, have painted his heathen in such glowing colours, or depicted his pagans so vividly and so convincingly, that they frequently quite outshine his Christians. In The Messiah, I agree, the dramatic element is in part eliminated, and this oratorio is, in fact, altogether sui generis, but nevertheless, with profound deference to Mr. Parnell, my conception of The Messiah is as a supreme work of art and a triumph of imaginative power, not by any means as an exposition of the Christian faith or a disquisition upon the merits and rewards of godliness. Whether such a conception is as absurd and unwarrantable as Mr. Parnell would appear to suggest is, of course, entirely a matter for the 'taste and fancy' of the individual. I advanced the suggestion in my last letter for what it was worth, and because I think The Messiah, regarded in that aspect, would secure a much more genuine and less perfunctory appreciation than it enjoys in its conventional character.

Handel resorted definitely to the composition of oratorio after he had been broken in health and pocket by the intrigues of the theatre, the petty tyrannies of operatic 'stars,' and the infinite tracasserie of theatrical management. He was not impelled to compose oratorios from motives of religious fervour, and Edward FitzGerald believed that it was with great reluctance that he 'tied himself down to orthodoxy.' Opera abandoned, however, he selected a form which was then both fashionable and popular, comparatively remunerative, and well-suited to his colossal powers.

Whatever Handel's religious belief may have been, it was unquestionably of the kind which sensible men entertain but do not talk about. Himself a lover of toleration in these matters (vide Hawkins), he never sought to thrust piety or moral lessons down the public throat. Not in the least do I presume to impute insincerity to Handel, as Mr. Parnell suggests. If Handel were indeed the self-righteous psalm-smiter he has been represented to be, such an accusation would lie, but as he assuredly was not, no such charge can be preferred. The insincerity is all on the part of those who have so grossly misrepresented him. For, as I have endeavoured all along to demonstrate, there is nought amiss with Handel, but there is everything amiss with the unctuous Sunday-school atmosphere in which he was steeped by the century which succeeded his.

In conclusion, I would ask Mr. Parnell to credit his humble opponent with a little of that sincerity which he so justly commends. However heretical and abhorrent this view of Handel may seem to him, he is himself, I think, wrong in implying that I, and those whose views may coincide with mine, must necessarily be 'clever cynics who believe in nothing and in nobody.' At any rate, we do believe most intensely in Handel, but it is in the heroic and magnanimous Handel whom his works reveal, not in the smug and sanctimonious Handel whom the 'unco' guid' of a past era have falsely set up!—Yours, &c.,

Deal, Kent.

HERBERT S. BROWN.

May 1, 1924.

SIR,—It seems to me that Mr. Parnell reads into Mr. Brown's letter something that is not there. Mr. Brown would not speak of 'the wondrous poetry and supreme imaginative power of The Messiah' if he thought that Handel 'discoursed in music of Divine things with his tongue in his cheek.' The real weakness of Mr. Brown's position lies surely in his lament over Handel's fate in being 'adopted' by religious bodies, and in the 19th century insistence on his oratorios at the expense of his secular works, vocal and instrumental. Without this 'dire and cruel calamity' (as Mr. Brown calls it) Handel would have been almost entirely neglected. The real 'calamity' lies at the door of instrumentalists and opera-producers. Now that Germany has started reviving the operas, perhaps something will be done here. Meanwhile, it is illogical to blame for neglecting Handel the very people who have been most active in keeping alive at least one department of his work. It is hard to resist an impression that Mr. Brown is anti-Church rather than pro-Handel!

As to those adaptations, which both correspondents condemn: Handel himself had no scruples about adapting his own (or even other composers') secular music to Biblical words. Bach did even more daring things in this direction. Seeing, for example, how many of the sublimest pages of the B minor Mass are drawn from secular sources, can we seriously describe such adaptations as 'unholy and unnatural,' or as showing 'a hopeless lack of musical sense and of innate reverence'? And it must not be forgotten that some of the finest of the Lutheran Chorales—including O Sacred Head—were originally secular songs. So where are we?—Yours, &c.,

Bowes Park, N.

'HANDELIAN.'

THE FINGERING OF SCALES ON THE PIANOFORTE

SIR,—Mr. Alan Dickinson's interesting article on the above subject is very opportune.

With regard to learning by heart the fingering of the usual scales, there would appear to be no difficulty whatever, provided the following points be observed :

- (1.) Play the hands separately for one octave, using the thumb instead of the little finger.
- (2.) Use the same finger on the tonic for the lowest and highest note of each scale.
- (3.) Always play the fourth (the ring) finger on a black note (except, of course, in the scale of C major).

The above apply to the major and the harmonic minor forms of scale. The melodic minor scales require a little more thought. The following example of fingering some of the last-named scales is interesting. Thus :

L. H. C, F, G, B flat.
Ascending 2 1 4 3 2 1 3 2
2 1 3 2 1 4 3 2 Descending.

—Yours, &c.,
May, 1924.

ROBERT SWABY.

SIR,—Mr. Dickinson's article on this all-important subject, which appeared in your May issue, must have been of interest to many teachers of the pianoforte, but I venture to think that the system by which he attempts to solve the difficulty can scarcely prove successful.

His combination of the old system and the new only provides a third method no easier to master, and no better technically than its 'parents.' The attraction of the scheme is, I gather, that one set of fingering disposes of C, D, G, A, B in the right hand ascending, and C, B flat, A flat, F, E flat, D flat in the left hand descending. This plan might be useful if the remaining scales were similarly classified, though it still leaves much to be desired when the 'both hands together' stage is reached. With regard to the remaining scales, I see no advantage whatever in arranging them as Mr. Dickinson shows. For example, supposing the student intends to practise the scale of E, both hands together, he must select the right hand from one group, the left from another totally different, and having reversed the latter fingering, combine the two rules. I submit that the average pupil would shrink from memorising this complicated system, and much prefer the old plan of one fingering for each case. Moreover, in Mr. Dickinson's system, this old method of 'the best fingering in each case' still suffers from modification.

I think it is agreed that the old method is far and away the best, and cannot be improved upon. But if we can simplify it without altering its principles, well and good. I have before me a plan which effects this simplification as easily and naturally as could be desired. It has been evolved by Mr. B. Vine Westbrook, a well-known teacher of many years' experience, and I am confident that it will be considered simplicity itself.

Mr. Westbrook founds his scheme on the principle of scale classification, and here lies the only real solution of the problem. No doubt Mr. Dickinson set out with the same intention, but he has only half succeeded in carrying it out. This is the outline of Mr. Westbrook's scheme :

First we take the scales in their usual order, C, G, D, A, E, B, G flat, D flat, A flat, E flat, B flat, F, then we divide them into four classes without disturbing the order :

- Class 1.—C, G, D, A, E.
- Class 2.—B, G flat, D flat.
- Class 3.—A flat, E flat, B flat.
- Class 4.—F.

It will now be seen from the fingering of the old method that one rule will suffice for each class, in both hands. Let us present Mr. Westbrook's chart in its entirety :

- Class 1...C, G, D, A, E...1231234† ; right hand ascending, left hand descending.
- Class 2...B, G, D† ...4 over for three black notes.
3 over for two black notes.
1 on white notes.
- Class 3...A†, E†, B† ...1 on C and F in the right hand.
Begin 3 and 4 over in the left hand.
- Class 4...F ...1 on C and F in both hands.

The rules are simple, and though there are only four, they are sufficient for all purposes. I know from experience that pupils of all ages have no difficulty in memorising this system and afterwards applying it. (This system, and many other aids to technical study, are fully explained in Mr. Westbrook's wonderful little book, Scales and Chords, published by William Reeves, 2s. 6d.)—Yours, &c.,

5, Manor Court,
Forest Hill, S.E. 23.

CLIFTON PARKER.

SIR,—The method of fingering scales described by Mr. Dickinson in the May issue seems to derive from Mr. H. T. Leftwich (Musical Opinion, January, 1883). Mr. R. Dixon redescribed it (April, 1906), apparently thinking it new, and saying he had taught it successfully. I referred to it recently in an article on organ pedalling (Musical Opinion, September, 1920). I thought it was original till a haunting memory led me to look it up. I can hardly think Mr. Leftwich was the first to work the system out; there may well have been one logical teacher of the pianoforte before 1883.

May I digress? Pedal scales are ever so much more chaotic; and I have not found one method in which any sort of system or logical design is apparent. The fingering is very simple in practice. Thumbs naturally come on one of B, C, and one of E, F. All you have to remember is, 'Thumbs to the left in sharp, and to the right in flat keys.' In practice there is no trouble whatever in fingering all major-scale passages. Mr. Leftwich deals with the minor too. In pedalling as I worked it out, the main rule is, G always left heel, A always right heel, middle D left heel rising, right heel falling. A scale with any number of sharps is looking-glassed for the same number of flats. The scales are planned on the assumption that in actual music all runs do not begin and end on the key-note. Though most recitalists pedal beautifully without any particular system, the average organist often gets tangled, and plays consecutive naturals with one toe. There is far more need of some logical system for the pedals than for the manuals.—Yours, &c.,

J. SWINBURNE.

[Mr. G. Norman also writes (too late for publication) drawing attention to Mr. Vine Westbrook's book.—EDITOR.]

'THE VICAR OF BRAY'

SIR,—I found this tune in Röntgen's collection of Dutch folk-tunes, arranged by him for violin and pianoforte, entitled T<sup>e</sup> Waallonitje:

I had always believed, probably in common with many other people, that our Vicar of Bray was entirely English, but if this is an unadulterated folk-tune, and there seems no reason to doubt it, our jovial vicar was a Dutchman.—Yours, &c.,

N. C. UNDERHILL.

16, Wellington Square,
Oxford.

'RECOVERY OF THE LOST VOICE'

SIR,—Your correspondent, Miss Ethel Aubrey, speaks of the prevalence of throat troubles among singers. This is certainly quite as much due to impurities in the blood consequent on the consumption of the actively pernicious and physiologically worthless refuse that forms the diet of ninety-nine out of a hundred singers (as of every one else), as on misuse of the throat.

A singer's throat, having naturally considerable use, is stimulated, and the circulation of blood in it is much increased. If the blood is laden with uneliminated waste, impurities, and toxic matter, this will tend to deposit in the throat, arising from time to time what doctors and dietitians of the most modern views upon the relation of food and disease call an 'eliminative crisis,' which manifests itself as nasal or bronchial catarrh, sore throat, laryngitis, hoarseness, loss of voice, and so on—the respiratory tract, which includes the entire apparatus of breathing, from the nose and upper air-passages to the lungs, being one of the channels whereby toxic waste is eliminated from the system.

When in addition to ordinary erroneous feeding is added the notorious gluttony of singers, of whom certain, after eating a substantial meal an hour or an hour and a-half before a performance, will then stuff meat sandwiches which they wash down with copious libations of whisky and soda, or other fluid, small wonder is it that they suffer so much from catarrhal conditions, due to over-repletion, and are finished as singers before they reach the age at which they should be at their zenith.

The researches of eminent authorities such as Drs. Knaggs, Rabagliati, Robert Bell, Webb-Johnson, Hereward Carrington, and many others have shown that all forms of disease—catarrhal conditions among them—are due to the retention and excess of poisonous residual matter or toxins in the blood-stream and tissues, which excess they show is caused by bad food, wrong food, wrong combinations of food, and too much of it.—Yours, &c.,

May 4, 1924.

KAIKHOSRU SORABJI.

THE ACT OF TOUCH

SIR,—In a recently-published interview with Mr. Matthey, he is quoted as saying that his teaching of pianoforte technique is not a 'method.' He claims to elucidate the 'laws' which govern pianoforte playing, and dismisses so-called 'methods' as 'more or less fads supposed to be effective.'

One cannot contest the right of an individual to have faith in himself, but it is only fair to point out that Mr. Matthey's claims are not universally admitted, nor are they invulnerable when exposed to the attacks of criticism.

If we detect flaws in his arguments it does not mean that we ignore the value of his careful and minute analysis of pianoforte technique. At the same time the matter is of such interest and importance to teachers and players of the instrument that we must, for the sake of truth, look critically at his conclusions and state boldly where we differ from him.

(1.) The use of the word leverage. Of the three main methods of actuating the key—from the knuckle, from the wrist, and by arm-weight, the first two are described as acts of leverage. This discrimination is presumably due to the insufficiency of the weight of the finger and hand to do the work required. In the case of the arm there is weight enough and to spare. Arm-weight, therefore, is to be defined as the release of weight in a downward direction. In knuckle and wrist touches, leverage is employed, the recoil of the exertion which depresses the key being upwards against the hand and forearm respectively, and as the wrist and elbow are always retained in a mobile condition, that is, ready to be moved, the result is the movement of weight in an upward direction. The mechanism which effects this is the downward curving of the knuckle and wrist joints in excess of the distance permitted by the fall of the key, thereby causing a rise in the adjacent portions of the limb. Now this particular raising of weight is not in reality an act of leverage. It is true all movements of joints other than those due to relaxation are caused by muscular power transmitted from joint to joint on the principle of a lever, and the changes of shape are the result of various acts of leverage causing bending of the joints concerned. But in the conditions prescribed for the movements necessary in producing pianoforte tone, the implement concerned, be it finger or hand, lacks one essential component of a lever, namely, it has no fulcrum.

Although the principle of the lever is probably familiar, it will be well to recall some of its details. In the case of the balance, or pair of scales, we see the three forces at work which constitute the necessary elements of lever action, at the two pans and at the point of suspension of the lever bar. Any divergence in the weight of the pans causes movement of the bar round the point of suspension, and this point is the axis of revolution, or fulcrum. In other forms of lever, the fulcrum may be at either end of the bar. Thus when we lift a weight from the ground by bending the elbow, the lever bar is the forearm and hand. The fulcrum is at the elbow; power is applied to the forearm through the muscles, and the other end of the lever raises the weight. We could at the same time raise the fulcrum of this lever (the elbow), by actuating another lever with the shoulder as fulcrum, and if we simultaneously rise from a stooping position, yet another leverage system will raise this fulcrum (shoulder) to a higher level, and the fulcrum of this latter system will be the feet. However composite the system of different lever actions may be, there must ultimately be a stationary fulcrum to fulfil the requirements of the machine. If we are unable to lift the weight it will be either because the power we exert is insufficient, or because the feet sink into the ground. In the latter case the weight then becomes the fulcrum, and the work done is the compression of the ground.

Leverage then consists of the combined action of three mechanical forces, one of which is stationary (potential) and the other two moving (kinetic). Movements which do not depend on a force acting at the axis of revolution are gyratory, pendulous, and such like. Thus a pendulum of a clock or the fly-wheel of an engine are not machines in themselves; they serve as regulators of the acting machine to which they belong. The lever is a machine.

Now in Mr. Matthey's act of leverage, he stipulates that when the finger-tip has depressed the key the act is complete. The finger-tip is, therefore, not the fulcrum, as it is in motion throughout the act. Similarly the knuckle or wrist are kept mobile, and therefore are not the fulcrum, or otherwise these joints would be supported from a rigid basis. The fulcrum is clearly not between these extremities. Where then is the fulcrum? Not at the elbow or shoulder, for any rigidity of these joints would affect the mobility of the wrist. The only point that satisfies the requirements is the seat the player occupies, together with the support derived from his feet on the floor. This, I believe, is not claimed to be the case. Therefore Mr. Matthey's action of key depression from knuckle or wrist is not leverage at all.

(2.) Rotary exertion. This term indicates the presumed exertion needed to change what is held to be the natural position of the forearm and hand into the position required for pianoforte playing. It implies that the natural position is that required by harp-players, the thumb being uppermost, with the palm nearer the perpendicular than the horizontal plane. To gain the position in which the palm is facing downwards requires what is called 'Rotary Exertion.' It is not difficult to demonstrate the error of this statement. The natural position of any joint is scarcely capable of scientific definition. What, for instance, is the natural position of the legs, say, during sleep, or when sitting? We must at all events regard complete relaxation of the muscles as a necessary condition, since any instinctive or purposive control of the muscles will produce a special position of the joints. We must also eliminate any external cause which may modify their position, such as friction or support derived from contact with other surfaces. The natural position of a joint can then only be regarded as that which it assumes in circumstances of free suspension with no force affecting it except the strain of gravitational attraction. Now if we allow the arm to hang in this condition at the side of the body, the thumb will be directed forwards, the palm facing inwards. While it is in this condition Mr. Matthey raises the arm, and rests it on the knee, where he finds it still maintains the relative position, namely, the palm facing inwards, although the thumb now points upwards. He still calls this the natural position, in spite of having introduced a set of new and extraneous conditions. In the first place, the limb is now supported by the thigh, and its position is secured by friction of the surfaces in contact. In the second place, the hand is occupying the position due to its equilibrium, since the centre of gravity will be nearer the little finger than the thumb, causing the thumb to remain uppermost. From this attitude he raises the limb into the position required above the keyboard, and claims that an exertion of the rotary muscle is needed to allow the palm to face downwards. Now to raise the limb from its position of rest on the knee requires the use of the hinge joint of the elbow, the rotary muscle being still in a state of relaxation. The wrist too is not concerned with this action, and will also remain relaxed. The consequent result of the elbow action will therefore be that the unsupported hand will droop, the fingers will hang down and cause rotation of the fore-arm since the rotary muscles are relaxed, and the hand will find its natural position with the axis of the wrist joint in a horizontal line—that is, in the position required for pianoforte playing. It is clear that Mr. Matthay when bending the elbow, exerted the rotary muscle to prevent rotation of the fore-arm, or fixed the wrist joint to prevent the hand from drooping, or perhaps both. When, therefore, he states that rotary exertion is needed to put the hand in the necessary position over the keys, it is because he has unnecessarily introduced exertions which prevent its taking that position.

There are many other matters in Mr. Matthay's 'laws' which do not bear criticism, but as, comparatively, they are details, it is not of primary importance to draw attention to them.—Yours, &c.,

PERCY RIDEOUT.

55, Dora Road,
Wimbledon Park, S.W.
May, 1924.

THE DOH-MINOR—A WARNING

SIR,—As this controversy has become interesting to others besides the protagonists, may I venture to ask the advocates of Doh-minor on what grounds they claim that that notational method is superior to the Tonic Sol-fa notation, which has successfully stood the test of more than half a century of practical use, and follows—as the Doh-minor notation does not—the much older practice of the Staff Notation in dealing with the minor mode? This is a point on which both your correspondents have shirked answering Mr. Harrison's challenge; but they cannot escape from the logical conclusion that if Tonic Sol-fa uses a wrong minor notation, so also does the Staff. And this raises a practical difficulty, which it would be interesting to know how they overcome; How do they teach their pupils to find the place of Doh on the Staff? The Sol-faist has a simple rule which is applicable in all cases; but with Doh-minor methods it would seem to be necessary to know first whether the music is major or minor—and how is the young student to find that out?

Your lady correspondent's anecdote about her pupil doubtless suffers from the compression needful in press correspondence, but, as it stands, the most obvious inference is that her 'explanation' left a good deal to be desired. This inference receives collateral support from her remark that 'the Lah-minor does not and never can appeal to the intelligence of the student'—a statement which is highly suggestive regarding its author's mental attitude to the subject. As to her question ('What can be simpler . . .?') the answer is, firstly, that her device is not a modulator, and secondly that the Tonic Sol-fa scale chart is both simpler and more intelligible.

The root fallacy of the Doh-minor position seems to lie in regarding Doh and tonic as synonymous terms; whereas the former is a name implying relationship to other notes of the diatonic scale, and the latter is a title of office or function performed in a particular composition. To take an analogy from family life, Doh, ray, me, &c., are like father, son, uncle, &c., in expressing fixed internal relationships; A, B, C, &c., express absolute identity like John, Robert, Henry; while tonic might be likened to such a functional title as host. When the family circle meets at my father's home, he is our host; but when we visit my uncle I do not call him 'father' because he has become the host—our blood relationships remain unchanged though our social relation alters. In the same way, the inter-relationships of lah, doh, me, &c., remain unchanged whether they meet (so to speak) at Major House where Doh is their host or tonic, or at Minor Villa where Lah acts in that capacity, or for that matter at Dorian Cottage, where Ray fulfils a similar function.

It is the relative major and minor that are modes of the same diatonic scale—that belong to the same family circle; tonic major and minor are different modes of different scales, as is shown in Staff Notation by their different signatures. This has always been recognised by both Staff and Tonic Sol-fa notations; and a system that runs counter to it is psychologically unsound. What, then, is the motive for introducing Doh-minor? What evidence is there that Tonic Sol-fa fails to provide adequately for the minor mode?—Yours &c.,

J. GILBERT WIBLIN.

36, Hamilton Road, Oxford.

April, 1924.

INSTRUMENTAL ECONOMY

SIR,—In the broadest sense orchestral balance is achieved if, in the ff tutti, no one tone-colour predominates excessively over the others. It consists in a proper mixing of the colours, and in the correct proportioning of them.

The concert orchestra in its present form may be said to approach very closely to a state of perfection in the matter of balance: but the question arises, Does it attain this end with the greatest possible instrumental economy?

Orchestral concerts in this country do not pay, and in consequence there are too few of them. Furthermore, there is no permanent concert orchestra in existence. That is to say, no executive musician is able to obtain, in connection with concert work, a permanent engagement which will provide him with a settled salary.

It would obviously be a great help if the cost of orchestral concerts could be reduced without lowering their artistic standard; yet modern composers are steadily increasing the number of instruments for which they score their works. Musically the gain is small; financially the loss is great; therefore it would be better if composers, with whom the final decision must rest, would study to reduce the size of the orchestra rather than to augment it.

Orchestras should, of course, contain all the colours, but in less profusion than at present. It would surely be possible, for example, to cut down the string strength while maintaining the wood-wind department as at present constituted.

Rimsky-Korsakov gives the following string strengths:

	GRAND ORCHESTRE.	MOYEN ORCHESTRE.	PETIT ORCHESTRE
Violini I. ... ..	16	12	8
„ II. ... ..	14	10	6
Viole ... ..	12	8	4
Violoncelli ... ..	10	6	3
Contrabassi ... ..	8-10	4-6	2-3

Now if the 'Petit Orchestre' be taken as a basis, and wood-wind be added in pairs—two flutes, two oboes, two clarinets, and two bassoons; and if the brass and percussion be added according to the demands of the composition to be played, an orchestra will be formed which contains all the primary colours, and which requires but forty to forty-five executants.

Increasing this number can do no more than heighten effects of climax.

Bearing in mind the disadvantages of the very large orchestra from the financial point of view, clearly it is at present better to make more use of the small orchestra and to concentrate upon gaining perfection of execution rather than startlingly powerful *tutti*s—Yours, &c.,

17, Trafalgar Road,
Twickenham.

OLIVER STEWART.

FREE COUNTERPOINT

SIR,—I should not have thought it necessary to take much notice of Mr. Claude Landi's communication in the May issue if it were not for the fact that he has asked me a question, and possibly some of your readers may be awaiting an answer.

In view of my advocacy of strict counterpoint as a means of acquiring fluency in polyphonic writing, I am asked to explain the criticism of the R.C.O. examiners, that candidates who are good in strict counterpoint often produce poor results in fugue and free counterpoint. The question seems fair, and at first sight the examiners' report appears to deal the case for strict counterpoint a pretty considerable blow. If those who teach it were in the habit of regarding the study of it as the only thing necessary in order to compose, they would obviously be compelled to alter their views on the subject.

The reason, however, why one who is skilful at strict counterpoint fails so often to compose good fugues, lies in the fact that his musical education is lamentably incomplete and one-sided. It is a regrettable thing that so many students (possibly their teachers are really to blame) do not realise that they must acquire what I will describe as the ability to 'hear with the mind.' Without this, composition is impossible. Many candidates are incapable of harmonizing a melody effectively, either because they are unable to hear in their mind the underlying harmony, or because of their incapacity to transfer their ideas to paper: yet, after all, this is only the first step in the acquisition of the capability of expressing oneself in the language of music.

Given the conscientious candidate who possesses the ability to hear mentally, it is unlikely that it will be reported of him that although his strict counterpoint is good, his fugal writing is poor; rather will it be possible to maintain that his studies in strict counterpoint have gone a long way towards enabling him to acquire the 'capability of writing in a flowing, polyphonic style.'—Yours, &c., ARTHUR G. CLAYPOLE.

OLD VILLAGE CHURCH MUSICIANS

SIR,—The reviewer of Sussex Church Music in the Past in the May number of the Musical Times, aptly remarks that 'the collection and publication of local records is a pious work that merits all possible encouragement.' This is true, and I would like to suggest that the history of Church Music from about 1660 to 1860, the period roughly covered by my book, be undertaken for every county by some musical antiquary. The chief sources of information on the subject are the old MS. books and printed Psalmodies, and the ancient instruments still extant; and the very old men and women whose forbears were the singers and minstrels of former days. Unfortunately neglect and the kitchen fire are destroying one class of these sources, and death is claiming the other. It is therefore urgent that so interesting a period of Church music should find its historian without delay. A few writers have touched upon the subject in fiction (as Thomas Hardy in Under the Greenwood Tree), and some, like Canon Galpin, have dealt with it in fact, but not with reference to a whole county; and I believe my book is the first historic record of Church Music in the Past concerning a complete county. I have tried to persuade Dr. Bridge, of Chester, to undertake Cheshire; but who will be the historians of other counties? I will willingly advise anyone who will carry out the congenial task as to the best method of procedure, and assist in any way I can.—Yours, &c., K. H. MACDERMOTT.
Selsey Rectory, Chichester.
May, 1924.

ROYALTY SONGS

SIR,—Will you permit me to put before those of your readers who are undecided as to the advisability of 'royalty songs,' having read the remarks, and views of 'Feste' in the May issue?

If two songs, equally good, and equally effective and suitable to the vocaliste's taste and requirements, were put before her (one of the best singers), she would naturally choose the song that gave her a royalty upon copies sold, rather than the song devoid of such an offer.

E

The first and most popular vocalistes have many songs submitted to them, which they pass by for want of time and opportunity to consider them. Would not a singer, naturally 'gloss' through the 'royalty songs' in the first place, and finding a song exactly to her wishes, requirements, and taste, she would look no further, the non-royalty songs having their last 'resting place' in the W.P.B.

Thanking you for finding me a 'corner.'—Yours, &c.,

Overbury, Furze Lane, G. HUBI-NEWCOTTE.
Purley, Surrey.

May, 1924.

HOFFMANN AND AMERICA

SIR,—Apropos of the critical notice in your April issue of Josef Hoffmann, signed 'G. Y.,' we in America are comforted to hear that your critic finds Hoffmann's musical reputation is not founded entirely on American press boosting, but has substantial basis. He says, indeed, that one would hardly think Hoffmann had even been 'across the herring pond' (!)

We suspect some humour here. As real swank it is almost too good to be true.

But without taking 'G. Y.' too seriously in this, we would express our relief. Hoffmann and we are partially vindicated.

It would be too bad if we had really had a devastating effect upon him, because we really think he has a liking for us. And this is not unnatural, for you know, strange to say, despite our deplorable 'boosting' proclivities, we are, I think, to a large extent credited with checking the undue exploitation of his early precocious talent, and making possible its proper and natural development.

But artists who tarry long 'on this side the herring pond,' or who can point to American popularity (they are fairly numerous), had better beware. In England they are suspect. (By the way, I am so glad to meet once more that dear old phrase 'herring pond'—it is still extant, I see—truly some British institutions show permanence, despite unhappy war changes.)

However, 'G. Y.' must have his fling at us, for note his hint that certain defects he discovers in Hoffmann's art may be due to the abnormal size of American concert-halls. It is rather ungenerous in him to let this slur remain after finding subsequently that he heard the artist with entire satisfaction in the Albert Hall, which I believe is somewhat larger even than our own Carnegie. There is some humour in that also, but I fear it is of the unconscious sort.

—Yours, &c.,

STEWART A. TRENCH.

New York,

April 12, 1924.

'THE TRAVELLER' AGAIN

SIR,—Judging from remarks and comments on my letter to you in the Musical Times, I seem to be unique in my opinions of music.

Classical musicians and others have had such a lot to say about bad, rubbishy music (as they term it), that they would be astounded, in all probability, that I have discovered a new theme in opposition. I would like to explain more fully this theme, which is causing quite a stir in the musical world. For the sake of argument I will give this subject the heading of 'Classical versus Ordinary Music.' You will observe I have used the word 'ordinary,' because I have been told by yourself, through your paper, that classical music is popular. Now, as educated men and musicians have, without fear, termed ordinary music trash, slushy, &c., I am going to say that classic music is, to me, all humbug.

'Nonsense!' did you say? Well, I can at least give a reason why I think it is humbug.

For instance, performers of the classics (nearly all, at any rate) use a foreign name, which, by the way, seems to degrade English talent. Now, there is a reason for this. It may be to hypnotise the public, or to be above the commoner. When a performer makes weird noises on an instrument the audience bubbles with emotion, because they have been told it is simply grand. Why, I would rather hear the rhythm of the L. & N.W. Railway, as it speeds over the joints of its 60-ft. rails.

It is surprising how the public are influenced, without thinking for themselves. But it matters little to me what the public like; what I am mostly concerned about is that classic music is gradually encroaching in places such as cinemas, bandstands, and the like. However, I leave this hard subject for more educated minds to tackle.—Yours, &c.,

'THE TRAVELLER.'

26, Londesboro' Road, N.16.

May 8, 1924.

P.S.—I must thank you for your fairness in publishing my last letter, and trust that you will publish this one, so that your readers may commend or lecture me. I might add that these letters are candid and straightforward, and not intended for joking purposes.

Sixty Years Ago

From the Musical Times, June, 1864:

MEYERBEER

So full of life are the latest works of this world-renowned composer, that the news of his death during the past month, although occurring at the age of seventy-three, was received with as much surprise as if it had taken place in middle life. The long career of an artist so thoroughly true to himself, and so earnest in his endeavour to found a style of operatic composition which should be stamped with his own individuality, marks an epoch in the history of art almost as important as that of Gluck, who may indeed be called the originator of the true school of operatic writing. Educated first as a pianist, it was some time before Meyerbeer developed his genius as a composer; and even then the intoxicating effect of Rossini's music obscured his better judgment, and led him to produce some weak imitations of this composer's style, which are now, like most imitations, utterly forgotten. Although his Crociato proved to the world that his real strength did not lie in the pure Italian school, it was not until the production of Robert le Diable at Paris, in the year 1831, that he gave that unquestionable indication of the great dramatic faculty which reached its highest development in Les Huguenots. In Robert we have every character so exquisitely coloured by the music that the diversity of style may be forgiven; and regarding this work as a brilliant specimen of that transition age when his genius was rapidly advancing to a consciousness of its own power, we are inclined to believe that it will continue to maintain its reputation as one of the best operas of the romantic school. Les Huguenots, produced in 1836, stands at the head of his works; and were it not for that unapproachable dramatic genius Weber, would unquestionably occupy the highest place as a grand musical romance. Into this opera Meyerbeer has thrown all his matured power, and so skilfully contrasted the music that, although a work of great length, it never causes weariness; and indeed is not only the best, but the most popular of all his operas. Le Prophète and L'Etoile du Nord, although containing music of a high class, will never occupy the same place in public estimation as Les Huguenots; but his last work, Le Pardon de Ploermel, started at once into favour, and is, we think, destined to take a prominent position amongst his contributions to the operatic stage. Whether we may hear his long-promised work, L'Africaine, is, we believe, doubtful; for whispers are abroad that he has forbidden its representation. We know how sensitive he was—how keenly he felt the impossibility of adequately realising his dramatic conceptions, and how age stealthily crept upon him whilst he was vainly seeking for a heroine for his last new work. Although spared long enough to reach the consummation of his genius, we feel that he has departed too soon. Paris has mourned his loss with the true instinctive feeling of reverence for greatness; but London reads his death in the daily obituary, and only wonders whether he has provided for his family. Let us hope, however, that this absence of any demonstration of feeling may not be indicative of apathy; and that our earnest appreciation of the great works he has left us may be regarded as the English garland of immortelles to be placed with public honours upon his coffin.

Sharps and Flats

It has been the commercial cleverness of the 'Group of Six' to claim the honour of fighting as the advance guard of contemporary musicians. Their strength lay in popularising the legend that they represented the newest and the most daring tendencies in art to-day. Excellent strategy.—Emile Vuillermoz.

At four-and-three-quarter hours of Wagnerian opera recently I did not hear a semblance of real tone.—Whitney Tew.

Chords of the seventh and ninth are used with liberality, but they are not introduced for the sake of eccentricity. . . .—Wilson G. Smith.

The indulgence of the audience was asked because of the accident to his ankle, which prevented him from appearing last week. In the circumstances it is not fair to say anything about his singing.—Crescendo in the Star.

The Amateurs' Exchange

Under this heading we insert, free of charge, announcements by amateur musicians who wish to co-operate with others.

Amateur orchestra has vacancies for all instruments. Sundays, 11 a.m.—Thomas Lane Mission Room, Egerton Street, Sheffield.

Violinist (gentleman) wanted to join 'cellist and pianist for practice of classical trios. West London district.—R., 64, Wallingford Avenue, W.10.

Lady pianist wishes to meet violinist for practice of classical violin and pianoforte sonatas. N.W. London district.—F. G. F., c/o Musical Times.

'Cellist (gentleman) wishes to meet pianist or other instrumentalists for practice, Kensington district.—F. G., 52, West Cromwell Road, S.W.5.

Young lady wishes to join musical club. Also wishes to meet pianist for duets and pianoforte duos.—I. M. B., 12, Eaton Rise, Ealing, W.5.

Putney Brotherhood Orchestra. Violin, viola, and 'cello players, with some orchestral experience, are invited to call at Wesleyan Church, Upper Richmond Road, Mondays, 8 p.m.

Pianist (gentleman) wishes to accompany vocalist or instrumentalist, for mutual practice.—B. E. DENNIS, 65, London Wall, E.C.

Tenor and baritone vocalists wish to meet pianist (vocalist preferred) for mutual practice.—LEONARD ASCHÉ, 50, Heygate Street, S.E.17.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC

Despite the fact that the summer term is the last term of the academical year, there was an exceptionally large entry of new pupils, some coming from places so far as New Zealand, Japan, South Africa, and the United States. Sir Alexander Mackenzie having withdrawn from active direction of affairs, the training of the orchestra is now entirely in the hands of Sir Henry Wood, who conducts both the Tuesday and Friday rehearsals.

A course of four lectures on 'The History of Music' is being given by Dr. Frederick G. Shinn in Duke's Hall on Wednesday afternoons. The subjects are as follow: Brahms and his Chamber Music—As a Song Composer; Dvorák and his Chamber Music; Spain and its Music. The illustrations include chamber music and pianoforte and vocal solos.

The Sterndale Bennett Scholarship (for any branch of music) has been awarded to Frederic M. Jackson (pianoforte). The adjudicators were Messrs. Frederick Keel, Philip Cathie, and Stewart Macpherson (chairman).

Dr. Markham Lee has been appointed Lecturer in Music at University College, Leicester. He will, however, continue to reside in London, as the duties of the post will not preclude the carrying out of his other work.

ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC

The College reassembled for the summer term on Monday, May 5, when the Director, Sir Hugh Allen, in delivering his terminal address to the students, took the opportunity to pay tribute, in the name of the College, to the memory of the three great Professors recently passed away—Sir Walter Parratt, Sir Charles Stanford, and Sir Frederick Bridge.

Though the term is still young it has been found advisable, in view of the fact that a heavy list of fixtures looms ahead, to begin the concerts early, and it was found possible to arrange for three concerts and a Patron's Fund Rehearsal in May. Coming arrangements include, besides the regular chamber, orchestral, and informal concerts, students' recitals and Patron's Fund Rehearsals, some performances by the Ballet Class, and the production of Vaughan Williams's Hugh the Drover, by the Operatic Class.

The prizes in the Cobbett competition for performances of chamber music, mentioned in last month's issue, were duly distributed on May 7, in the presence of a large assembly of students. The donor himself, Mr. W. W. Cobbett, presented the prizes, and gave an interesting address on chamber music, with special reference to British composers. Mr. H. C. Colles gave a short lecture—or, rather, ten minutes' conversation—on the subject of chamber music, emphasising its very special place in the scheme of music, owing to the conditions under which it was composed and performed. The Director, in thanking Mr. Colles and Mr. Cobbett, was able to make the gratifying announcement that Mr. Cobbett was taking steps to enable this competition to be an annual institution.

TRINITY COLLEGE OF MUSIC

The inaugural address delivered to the College students and friends by Dr. J. C. Bridge (a vice-president of the College) proved most interesting and informing. The subject was 'Dr. Burney.' After the address, prizes were presented to a number of successful students, and a performance of a short programme of music followed.

A pianoforte and vocal recital given by Miss Maud Agnes Winter and Mr. John Savile, teachers at the College, was well attended and much enthusiasm was shown.

Two public functions held in connection with the distribution of certificates gained at the local examinations attracted much attention. That held at Chester (Chester centre) was presided over by Dr. Bridge, who in his address urged that it was the duty of parents to encourage their children to take up the playing of stringed instruments to a larger extent than prevailed. The second distribution was held at Central Hall, Westminster (London centre), where Princess Helena Victoria presented the prizes and certificates. Sir Wilfrid Collet (Governor of British Guiana), in moving a vote of thanks to the Princess, mentioned that he was a student of the College in 1878.

The second beautiful set of two memorial stained-glass windows has now been placed in position on the staircase leading to the second floor of the College buildings. These windows commemorate the 'wisdom, foresight, and disinterested labour' of the Founders of Trinity.

Owing to the illness of Dr. C. W. Pearce, Mr. J. Warriner has been appointed acting director of studies till the end of the present term. The many friends of Dr. Pearce will be glad to know that he is benefiting by the rest and change he is now taking.

It has been decided to make considerable alterations to the College library, including improved cases for the music and musical literature, a memorial window to the late Sir Frederick Bridge, and a general re-arrangement. When so altered the library will be known as the 'Bridge memorial library.'

Dr. E. Barrett Lane (the first gold medallist of the College, 1880) has been appointed Grand Organist of the United Grand Lodge of Freemasons of England for the ensuing year.

Mr. Walter Wilson Cobbett has received the diploma of F.T.C.L., honoris causa.

THE NEW RICHARD STRAUSS BALLET

BY PAUL BECHERT

The much-heralded new ballet by Richard Strauss entitled Schlagobers, or Whipped Cream, has at last had its première at the Vienna Staatsoper, under the personal supervision and musical direction of Richard Strauss. This long-deferred production had been preceded by endless discussions of the most varied nature. There had been many who found it 'beneath a man of Strauss's status' to indulge in the composition of a work which in the nature of things could at best be only superficial and amusing; others who had been alarmed by rumours of the alleged political, in fact reactionary, tendency of the story; and others still who felt that it was, to say the least, superfluous for the Vienna State opera-house to produce so innocent and insignificant a piece in an ambitious and lavishly mounted style. The ultimate production of the ballet has now set all such discussions at rest.

Did I say 'at rest'? The fact is that the realisation of the plan, so far from pouring oil on the waves, marked the beginning of a new campaign against the latest Straussian work from all three groups referred to above. Strange to say, all were right—and at the same time all three groups were utterly wrong. In refuting the various charges raised against its composer, the first is that which concerns us most, and at the same time that whose falsity may most easily be proved. Schlagobers has been almost unanimously condemned by the musical critics, and most prominently so by those who had up to its production counted among Richard Strauss's most unconditional admirers. In fact, the new piece has been least disappointing to those who, like the writer, had long ago recognised Strauss in his true importance and mission. To these, Schlagobers is the logical, indeed the inevitable, outcome of the checkered and purely eclectic career of Strauss, true type that he is of the 20th-century composer. The day is gone by when Strauss's life-work admitted of any illusion or self-deception. His was a development which had its rise in the romantic school of a Mendelssohn (as may be seen in his early chamber-music works), and later, in Guntram and Feuersnot, exhausted the possibilities of the Wagner idiom, turning to new fields in Salome and Elektra—his supreme artistic efforts. Der Rosenkavalier, Strauss's next operatic work, marked his first decisive step towards what the German language, in an intranslatable term, describes as Artistik. In it are contained preponderance of form over content, of means over matter, of dexterity and trifling playfulness over seriousness of purpose—indeed over purpose itself. Yet here there was still the old Straussian force and mastery, as even in Ariadne auf Naxos which followed—although the element of Artistik became forcibly evident for the first time in this work. Its mixture of opera seria and opera buffa is too clearly a matter of pure and indeed dazzling deftness, and the stylistic jest which it serves to introduce virtually drowns whatever seriousness the plot either calls for or permits. Such shortcomings are most obviously demonstrated in the second version (the so-called Viennese version) of Ariadne auf Naxos, which was especially composed for the Vienna Opera, and served to usher in the so-called 'Viennese period' of Strauss's life-work, which was destined to become so deleterious to his future artistic career. It is not an accident, perhaps, that his leaning towards trifling playfulness first manifested itself in Rosenkavalier—the first Straussian work to possess a Viennese flavour. Vienna, its atmosphere tinged with the sensuousness and the joy of living, had proved a fertilising and stimulating influence in the lives of a Beethoven or a Brahms, whose Teutonic ruggedness and rigidity were mellowed here, and their soul imbued with new and tender sentiment. But the superficial Vienna of to-day is not the city of several decades ago, and Strauss is not a North German. His eclectic genius quickly reacted to subtle and latent influences. Having passed through his romantic and Wagnerian periods he responded to the influence of Johann Strauss in Rosenkavalier and to that of the old Viennese baroque opera in Die Frau ohne Schatten. All the elements of trifling and playfulness which had heretofore been at work in him are now concentrated in his new ballet, Schlagobers.

But behold the mentality of the German intellectual who applies his intellectualism even to that most elusive and least intellectual of arts, Music. Even the most insincere and palpably artificial of Strauss's music had readily been accepted, even acclaimed, for the sake of its alleged 'ethical' and psychological meaning, for its false profundities and pseudo-philosophic scope. Even the Legend of Joseph, purely ballet music—and mediocre ballet music—that it is, was proclaimed a manifestation of genius, and invested with a deep psychological significance. It remained for his new ballet seriously to endanger Strauss's firmly fixed position in the affections of his Central European public—and very unjustly so.

To sum up, Schlagobers is the logical sequence of all that has preceded it in Strauss's career; indeed in some respects it must be ranked higher than all his recent products—including the ill-fated Alpine Symphony—as a 'human document' in the true sense of the word. In Schlagobers, the real Strauss as he is to-day is manifested openly and frankly for the first time. True, it is a deplorable coincidence that the première of this ballet synchronised almost exactly with Strauss's sixtieth birthday, for it is not the work that one would hope for from a towering genius who stands at the threshold of old age. Wagner's last work was Parsifal, weaker perhaps than his early, great creations, but still the product of a mature genius soaring high above the little vanities of his day. But how unreasonable to expect such a work of Richard Strauss, who had ever loved to play upon melodies and had seldom cared about ethical or æsthetic aspects! What a fine pose for the old wizard now to lift the mask, to throw all pretensions to the wind, and frankly to reveal himself as he really is—a playful, un-literary, un-intellectual Musikant!

The fact is that Schlagobers is a delightful and charming little work. No more than its name implies, it is light, foamy, airy stuff, satiating but not nourishing, and palatable only when served as a sweet dessert. And those who now bewail Strauss's 'debasement' are reminded that, so far from marking a departure from the customary Strauss idiom, it is in fact the Strauss idiom of his later period, properly applied for the very first time. Those who object to Strauss's stooping to ballet should recall that a Beethoven wrote his Men of Prometheus, and that a Mozart composed numerous jocular canons and songs of a flippant, even frivolous, sort. (True, he wrote them heedlessly, unconsciously of their musical value, while Strauss's equally innocent ballet was produced, on a large scale, and at his own behest, by an important Continental opera-house in which he occupies the responsible post of director. But comparisons are odious.)

The scenario of Schlagobers is Strauss's own work. It is simple and unassuming beyond description, notwithstanding certain rather obvious political associations—but it is the very simplicity, even childishness, of the book which makes Strauss's art all the more remarkable for being palatable through his music. The first scene takes us to a Vienna pastry shop in the Biedermeier period—charmingly characterised by a simple little G major melody of Haydn-like homeliness, which later assumes the character of a leitmotiv—where boys and girls, after indulging in the appetising whipped cream, execute a little 'Ländler,' reminiscent of a scene from the first Act of Ariadne. Meanwhile, one small boy, who is destined to become the 'hero' of the entire ballet, is seen to suffer from the discomforting consequences of his excessive appetite. The scene changes to the kitchen of the confectionery, where various sorts of pastries execute warlike dances to a strongly rhythmical Presto movement; whether or not their military exercises possess a certain vein of political parody we are left to decide for ourselves. The next scene introduces Tea, Coffee, Cocoa, and Sugar as acting—and dancing—persons. Princess Tea, springing from a huge box, dances to a charmingly exotic 5/8 rhythm which conjures up memories of Salome's dance as well as of the Unveiled Girls from the Legend of Joseph. It is one of the happiest numbers not only of the present work, but of any that Strauss has ever written. Prince Coffee enters to the strains of a Brazilian Tango, and is charmed by a lovely vision of a girl, while the orchestra performs a passionate Träumerei, with a long cadenza for the solo violin. In this scene the rasping sound of a coffee-roaster constitutes Strauss's latest addition to the contemporary orchestral ensemble. Prince Cocoa follows with a grotesque dance, and gives place to Don Zuckero (Sugar), who woos in turn Tea, Coffee, and Cocoa, and dances off to make way to what was apparently intended as the scenic pièce de résistance of the entire performance; a huge automaton in the garb of a cook is seen beating whipped cream, and the fruits of his endeavour assume the shape of forty-eight charming young girls who pour forth from the huge copper charger to execute a whirling dance which closes Act 1. This 'Whipped Cream Waltz,' scenically excellent, is one of the weaker musical numbers of the ballet. Act 2 leads us into the home of the little whipped-cream glutton, who is seen in his sick-bed as a result of his excessive appetite, attended by his mother and a kind old physician. The orchestra paints his woes with distorted and parodistic reminiscences of the 'Whipped Cream Waltz'—a realistic scene which does more credit to Strauss's descriptive dexterity than to his taste, although it does not very far deviate from his earlier feats when even more intimate physical functions were described in his Sinfonia domestica. The feverish visions of the little boy constitute the plot of the remaining scenes. We are transferred to the court of Princess Pralinée—the good fairy of the pastry shop—who performs a charming little waltz (a duplicate of the Rosenkavalier waltz, with its intermittent pauses), and is followed by the little Chocolate boys, who execute a dance to a Bavarian national tune and to elaborate variations based on its rhythmically interesting melody. In the next scene, Mlle. Marianne Chartreuse, impersonating France, springs from a big bottle, and is in turn courted by Ladislav Slivovitz (representing Poland) and Boris Wutki, the Russian. What follows is a drastically painted revolution of the minor, or proletarian, pastries who are instigated by the Mazes (the Jewish Passover bread!)—impersonated by five Oriental Magi, descendants of the five Jews from Salome—and finally appeased by Tea, Coffee, Cocoa, and especially by Munich Beer. Whereupon all are peacefully united at the court of Princess Pralinée. The revolution is illustrated musically by a big and excellently constructed Pasacaglia, where the motives of the various pastries, as they enter, are contrasted with the obstinate bass theme which symbolises the upheaval. It is one of the strongest and most dramatic numbers which Strauss has ever written, and the Riot Polka of this scene is almost uncanny in its weird grotesqueness.

The scenario, it will be seen, consists of a number of arbitrarily compiled scenes loosely linked, musically, by the groanings of the poor little patient, but otherwise lacking in logic, and devoid of even a semblance of plot, action, or meaning. The music of the ballet, however, is amusing without ever becoming trivial, and graceful without being too light in weight. It is ballet music, of course, and as such steers clear of the pseudo-philosophy and pseudo-ethics which so many have attempted to ascribe to Strauss's earlier works, including even the Legend of Joseph. Schlagobers is genuinely Straussian in its harmonies—the certain progressions of 3rds and 6ths being again in evidence—but it is genuinely Straussian also in its widely-flung melodic arches and brilliant and subtle orchestral colouring. Reminiscences from Rosenkavalier, Ariadne, and The Legend of Joseph, even from Salome, are quite frequent. But for once these essentially primitive melodic elements are thoroughly in place in a ballet which does not pretend to be more than a pleasing piece of music, sans ethics, psychology, philosophy, and literary ambition.

At Brantford (Ontario) the Brantford Oratorio Society of a hundred and twenty voices, assisted by the Brantford Symphony Orchestra of forty performers, gave its fifteenth concert before a crowded and enthusiastic audience, at the Grand Opera House, on May 1. In the first part of the programme the orchestra played Sydney Raynes's Overture, Endure to Conquer, and H. J. Taylor's Serenade for strings; the choir sang Sullivan's unaccompanied part-song, The long day closes, Stephenson's Ships that pass in the night, and Barnby's Sing a joyous roundelay. The second part of the programme consisted of the performance, for the first time in Canada, of Hubert Bath's The Legend of Nerbudda. Dr. Frederick C. Thomas conducted.

MILITARY BANDS AT WEMBLEY: IMPRESSIONS AT REHEARSAL

(Owing to the date of Empire Day we are unable to describe the massed band performances at Wembley in the present issue. We give below an impression of one of the rehearsals. The diagram is copied from an instruction paper that was issued to every performer. In most cases a position marked represents three or four players.)

A warm welcome, a most infectious spirit of enthusiasm, and an extraordinary degree of proficiency in technique and interpretation—these are but three of the impressions of a visit to one of the rehearsals which were being held at Hounslow Barracks in preparation for the massed bands concerts in Wembley Stadium. Years ago I remember different tone-colours, the end in view being that the audience should obtain as nearly as possible the same effect from all parts of the Stadium. This involves not only a somewhat new technique in conducting—we can imagine, for instance, the steadiness of head required to give a series of leads to instruments happening to be being thrilled by an impromptu competition between the Besses-o'-the-Barn Band, in the gardens at Bath, and a passing Great Western Railway train, in which the honours were overwhelmingly with the band. If a normal-sized band were capable of such a volume of sound, what, I felt, would be the effect of this vast body? I was prepared for something quite overpowering, and, incidentally, somewhat unwieldy. So far, however, from realising my anticipations, I was even more forcibly struck with the delicacy and precision of the playing than with the big effects which were obtained where necessary—but always with that satisfying feeling of a reserve of power yet untapped.

The band was seated in a complete circle, with the conductor on a platform (perilously small!) in the centre, the various groups of instruments being disposed with a view to general ensemble rather than to individualising the situation, say, clockwise round the platform!—but also the necessity for memorising all the scores. Lieut. Adkins and the other musical directors have made themselves extraordinarily proficient in the quick memorising of the details of the scores, even to the position of rehearsal letters, which is but one instance of the enthusiasm to which I have referred above. Amongst other things, I heard rehearsed a Bach Prelude and Fugue (G minor) and 'Mars' and 'Jupiter' from Holst's Planets—no easy task to memorise in detail even after many rehearsals, which, owing to the large amount of music to be studied in a short time, they had not had. In fact, I was told that little more than sectional rehearsals had been possible, and that the band was practically reading en masse.

On the level parade-ground where the rehearsals were held the sound tended to be more dispersed than in the Stadium; but it was remarkable how very little detail was slurred or lost, in spite of the opposition from various parts of the barracks by bugle and fife-and-drum practices and parades—somewhat irritating, but unavoidable. A feature which I found particularly interesting was the strange resemblance between the massed wood-wind tone in the open air and that of the strings in a concert-hall. It was even more striking than the more-expected similarity between saxophones and 'celli.

The whole experience was a revelation to me. Here undoubtedly is a new field for composers which they are only beginning to explore, with opportunities for tone-contrasts and combinations possibly even greater than in the modern concert-hall orchestra, and a mass of enthusiasts, both directors and players, to offer every encouragement and justify every effort. From glimpses obtained in 'Jupiter,' I believe there are great and fascinating possibilities even for the most 'atmospheric' and elusive music, which, on the face of it, might easily be imagined unsuited to a martial medium. There are most certainly almost infinite opportunities undreamed of by the mechanics who had until recently practically held the field in 'military band arrangements.'

One last word. Military training would seem to be a most valuable factor. These 'unwieldy' hundreds could be stopped at any moment and started again, with not even a suspicion of stragglers. What a contrast to some orchestral rehearsals one remembers!

GERRARD WILLIAMS.

THE BOURNVILLE CARILLON

The completion of the Bournville Carillon was celebrated on May 1, when M. Antoine Nauwelaerts, of Bruges, gave two recitals, each lasting nearly an hour.

The carillon, which is situated in the belfry of the school, has three separate mechanisms in the tower:

- (1.) The carillon of bells in the belfry;
- (2.) The playing mechanism or clavier;
- (3.) The clock and its chime-barrel.

It was first erected in 1906, when it consisted of twenty-two bells, cast by Messrs. Taylor, of Loughborough. In its completed form the carillon consists of thirty-seven bells—three full chromatic octaves, and a new clavier with the most up-to-date mechanism has been installed. There are also two chime-barrels operated by the carillon machine on which eight different tunes can be played.

M. Antoine Nauwelaerts, whose family has been connected with carillon-playing for more than a century, brought expert ability to a programme which included a Bach Prelude, Schubert's Ave Maria and Serenade, and pieces by Van Hoey and Van den Gheyn.

The evening was fine, and the two programmes given were listened to by a large audience.

G. W.

THE BALANCE OF EXPRESSION AND DESIGN IN MUSIC

On March 25 Sir Henry Hadow completed his series of three lectures on this subject to the Musical Association. He remarked that he found two difficulties in criticising contemporary music, one inherent in the works themselves, and the other inherent in himself. In the case of a classic, the whole of his compositions were available. It was otherwise with contemporaries. Their works were growing, and therefore any judgment about them must be delivered with a certain degree of tentativeness. When it was realised what enormous changes took place—always gradually, but very large in the long run—in the development of the great masters, it made us cautious about the present and even more about the future of any contemporary work. The idiom of music had altered much and rapidly in the last few years, and to understand what some of the younger people would be at, required an effort like that of learning a new language. This alteration in the idiom of music affected not only its texture and style but to some extent its emotional content also. If you expressed yourself as emotionally affected by music, it did not necessarily mean that a particular piece of music conveyed to you a particular kind of emotion, or indicated a particular emotional side of your own nature. It did not mean that a certain piece of music was sad because you were sad in listening to it, or that it was merry because you were merry in listening to it.

That did not impugn the fact that the greatest music had immense emotional effect. Music had got behind the specific representation of the other arts, and it did not follow that if you did not admire a piece of music, you were not emotionally affected by it. Discussing polytonality and atonality, Sir Henry asked, What were the limits that could be allowed; were any two notes or any two keys to be employed simultaneously? The question was more important to-day than in any three or four previous generations, because the direction of music had become vertical instead of horizontal. In Bach, for example, the essential point in musical composition was polyphony, and almost all the music of the 18th and 19th centuries, however it might seem to consist of harmonic blocks, was really built up on a woof of polyphonic texture; but to-day if we looked at a modern score, we would see that the essential idea of polyphonic parts had gone into the background. It was of importance that we should clearly see our way in estimating how far our present-day composers were successful in building their music on a scheme which hitherto had been regarded as discordant or incongruous. The test was whether the discordant combination had any meaning or not. If it had meaning, then no combination was inconceivable or not allowable; if not, if it had no significance, then clearly it must be altogether discarded. The question was whether we were going to apply that test of inner significance, whether this modern music justified itself, explained itself, reached its ideal of beauty, communicated its ideal of beauty or not. In music the audience counted for something. It was sometimes held that a composer could legitimately write for himself alone, but he ought not to be isolated, for all art was a manifestation of sympathy, and the audience might be fit though few. People might not see the point of the composer's message, but the idea of beauty which he had got to display must be communicated in some sense. Taking the musical work of the present day, composed by people who were talked about and seemed to count, we might divide the composers into three classes. First, there were those whose presence at the footlights rather bewildered us; we did not understand how they came to be there, or account for their vogue. Secondly, we had what must be in every age, but particularly in the present age of radio electricity, the grammarian sort of composer. Thirdly, there was the real man of genius who was helping advancement in a new medium. Many composers were losing sight of beauty, partly from fear of mere prettiness, which was a good kind of fear, and partly also because in music as in all other arts at the present day, many were trying above all to be impressive, to say something which would startle. It did not follow that every piece of music should be played with the utmost emotion any more than that every spoken sentence should be uttered at the top of the voice. A good deal of music struck the listener as a kind of profane swearing. The essence of swearing was disproportion; it was the saying of something which was more emphatic than the occasion demanded. Were not our ears getting a little bit dulled by over-chromaticism, by over-colouring, and especially by over-emphasis in the music which we heard? If we could sum up in a single formula the general tendencies of musical art at the present day, it would be right and fair to say that it was moving in the direction of design for its own sake rather than in the direction of the expression of any particular emotion, or in the depiction of any object or scene. There was, certainly, a good deal of 'programme' music still, but it was much less than a generation ago. The old romantic basis of music was definitely démolé to-day. It was impossible to define with absolute precision the boundaries of expression and design, because there must be a certain proportion between them. In each generation there was a pendulum swing, a certain oscillation of emphasis, and at present the oscillation was tending to experimenting in forms and in schemes of colour. That was hopeful for the future, because it was preparing for some great artist who would breathe a new spirit, a new kind of poetry into the medium prepared for his hand. The function it had to carry out was that of still further perfecting the instrument in its present form, which had only recently come into our hands, and with which we were still engaged in experimenting.

'HIAWATHA' AS A SPECTACLE

Hiawatha presents, on the face of it, so many obstacles to adaptation for the stage, that the impression produced by the recent performances given 'in operatic form' in aid of the National Institute for the Blind was surprisingly telling. True, the story is picturesquely set, its issues momentous. But it is related in narrative form, in the past tense, practically throughout by chorus, while to more than one of the principal characters no single utterance is allotted. Clearly the most that could be done was to turn it into a spectacle, with operatic trappings. That it was made effective as such is very largely due to the producer, Mr. Thomas Fairbairn, having brought perspicacity and imagination to his task.

It was probably by no accident that Longfellow wrote his epic in the literary form that fits it to a marvel. Authors have proclaimed before now—and they should know—that their themes are apt to take over control from them, so that they become, in effect, the very humble human servants of their own ideas. Race, its surroundings and destiny, were Longfellow's chief concern. Inevitably, if perhaps insensibly, they became that of the musician who was to mate note to word with extraordinarily illustrative fidelity, but with little or no eye for dramatic possibilities not then to be envisaged.

Probably some reflections of this kind were responsible for the adroit turning to account of the special conditions prevailing at the Albert Hall, and nowhere else. The crowd must become the sympathetic link with the audience—and here it could be done.

To claim the whole vast arena as well as the platform for stage, and to place at a remote distance, and masking the organ, the back-scene of snow-clad mountains, pine forest, and wigwam, was at one stroke to bring the drama of race to close quarters. Subtly the surrounding audience—or at all events those in the stalls and adjacent—were made to feel of the stage crowd, bound up with their fate.

To this, largely, was the success of the spectacle due; part also to the skilful and artistic management of the lighting, of which the singularly complete illusion of falling snow at the opening of the second 'Act' is a happy instance; part also to the grouping. The sea of hundreds of faces, of braves and squaws, with waving arms by way of foam-crests, raised to greet Hiawatha and Minnehaha, was a sight not soon to be forgotten. Far less was due to textual adaptations.

The present tense had been substituted for the narrative past in the version of the words printed, but—at all events on the first night—the Royal Choral Society's contingent of five hundred ignored the change in favour of words well-known to them. Pau-Puk-Keewis and Iagoo, in default of words to sing, mimed with passable credibility. A ballet was introduced in the scene of the Wedding-Feast. By such devices action was carried along between the isolated dramatic episodes. When these came, to afford the principals a chance—as, for example, Hiawatha, Minnehaha, and Nokomis, in the scene of Minnehaha's death—we had a glimpse of something altogether more vital.

The music was sufficiently well done to be taken for granted. Mr. Eugène Goossens is certainly to be congratulated on maintaining control in difficult circumstances, of which the only one where the production impinged detrimentally occurred at the first entrance of the chorus, with whoops that completely masked the Overture. The chorus not only sang tunelessly and with careful gradation, but kept up a wonderful flow of appropriate action. The music for the interpolated ballet, arranged by Madame Lydia Kyasht, and most gracefully danced by a corps of a hundred led by herself, was drawn from Coleridge-Taylor's Three Dream Dances and unpublished works, and was conducted by his son, Mr. H. Coleridge-Taylor.

The cast was varied during the week, among those taking leading rôles being Miss Ruth Vincent, Miss Kathleen Destournel, Miss Elizabeth Mellor, Miss Olive Jenkin, Mr. Horace Stevens, Mr. Harold Williams, Mr. Webster Millar, and Mr. Frank Mullings.

H. F.

Competition Festival Record

We have received and read with much interest the programme of the competition at Marlborough College. The classes were for house glees, solo singing (broken voices), ditto for unbroken voices, duets for two pianofortes, pianoforte sight-reading, solos for pianoforte, organ, stringed, wood-wind, and brass instruments, chamber music, and composition. Apparently the competitors chose their own pieces, and the choice generally showed excellent taste. It is worth noting that of the five brass soloists three elected to play the cornet, the pieces chosen being Softly awakes my heart, Schubert's Adieu, and (an ambitious youth this!) The Prize Song. The scheme gives an excellent idea of the fine musical work now being done in public schools.

GLASGOW (April 26-May 10) was better than ever—and even a little bigger, though any addition to the size of so huge a Festival must be regarded by the promoters as a doubtful blessing. Mere figures often signify little, but it should be recorded that the Festival ran for thirteen full days, with over sixty sessions, and that about a hundred and sixty choirs took part, the total number of competitors in all classes being round the twelve thousand mark. The full significance of these facts is realised only when it is added that no prizes are given. Very successful new classes were those for Scots folk-dancing, singing-games, and orchestras. In the last-named seven full orchestras and four stringed entered—large bands of about fifty to sixty players—and gave surprisingly good performances of the Don Giovanni Overture and Mozart's Serenade in G (complete). Audiences were large, the organization as usual first-rate—nothing forgotten, yet with no rigidity in the working—and the Festival wound up gloriously with a packed St. Andrew's Hall singing metrical psalms under the magnetic direction of Sir Walford Davies.—FALKIRK (May 13-17) reported a falling-off in choral classes, due chiefly to economic strain. Excellent work was done by junior choirs, the final day of the Festival being given up mainly to schools. The public interest was shown in large, keen audiences.—The Border Festival (May 16-24) was this year divided between HAWICK and GALASHIELS. Here again the strength was on the juvenile side, some first-rate school choirs being heard. Instrumental classes, moderate in size, produced some really promising young players.—At KENDAL, on April 30-May 2, the Westmorland Festival was held according to the long-standing plan now more and more widely adopted at younger festivals, which gives combined performance of great works precedence over competition. The Hallé Orchestra, under Mr. Adrian C. Boult, was engaged, and the large choir, formed of many local choirs, gave five movements from Brahms's Requiem, Bach's Gottes Zeit, Byrd's O praise the Lord, Parry's Never weather-beaten sail, and Brahms's All's well. These works formed part of two programmes. The instrumental works included Schumann's D minor Symphony and Debussy's Petite Suite. The music for competition included Vaughan Williams's The Lover's Ghost, Byrd's Though Amaryllis dance in green, and Weelkes's Nightingale. The music of Brahms's Requiem was sung in memory of the late Mrs. Argles, who was a sister of the founder of the Festival, Miss Mary Wakefield, and succeeded her as president.—A very successful four-days' competition was held at GAINSBOROUGH—the West Lindsey Musical Competition—on April 30 to May 3, the last day being devoted to folk-dancing. A sword-dance by a group of unemployed miners from Yorkshire was one of the features of the Festival.—The thirty-third Manx Festival at DOUGLAS was held during the last week of April, and was in every way a success. It is due to this well-organized Festival that the Isle of Man ranks high as a centre of music. Not many days after the Festival was over a printed twenty-page pamphlet was issued (copied from the Isle of Man Weekly Times) giving, for sixpence, a full report of the entries, results, and adjudicators' remarks. Other festivals might take note of this business-like and useful proceeding.

In Ireland the most important of numerous competitive festivals is the 'Feis Ceoil' at DUBLIN, held on May 12-17, with over nine hundred entries. Before this the 'FATHER Mathew Feis' had been held at Dublin for a week. A pianoforte scholarship, providing a year's free tuition, went to Miss Myra Jephson. The list of Irish Festivals includes that of PORTADOWN (April 28-May 2), BALLYMENA Feis (May 5-9), and DUNGANNON Musical Festival (May 6-9).

We regret that the pressure on our space and the growth of the competition movement compel us to pass over with summary mention such Festivals as those of STRATFORD and the PEOPLE'S PALACE in East London, both institutions that achieve an almost monotonous regularity of success and good work; and, of a different character, the PETERSFIELD Festival, which produces wonderful performances of Bach from village choirs. The list of coming festivals which we issued last month is an indication of the impossibility of giving adequate record. The great BIRMINGHAM Festival is in progress as we go to press.

London Concerts

AN ORCHESTRAL BALLAD

Though its bearer is seventy years of age, the name of Leos Janáček is practically a new one to the international world of music, revealed by the recent success of his opera, Jenufa. His orchestral ballad, The Fiddler's Child (Queen's Hall, May 3) contains internal evidence in support of his operatic prowess, for it deals with its subject in the manner of the theatre, and perhaps even the cinema, in its quaint literalness. It contains much that is musically good, arranged and combined according to dictates which are not themselves strictly musical. But this Moravian tone-poet has an idiom of his own, influenced though he may be by geographical currents. It has been said that the East begins not far from Vienna. Why not at Brünn? It is not difficult to discern a quasi-Eastern tinge to his Slavonic colour and rhythm. Moiseiwitsch's playing of the Tchaikovsky Concerto was at once impressive and disillusioning, being brilliant but, on the whole, intellectually shallow. (World-tours do not agree with him.) Mozart's Haffner Symphony and Strauss's Till Eulenspiegel prevailed over rival attractions, thanks to Sir Henry Wood.

E. E.

BEATRICE HARRISON AND HARRIET COHEN

Kodály's Sonata for 'cello (unaccompanied), and Bax's for 'cello and pianoforte, have both been discussed on the occasion of their first performance, the former by Beatrice Harrison at a meeting of the Contemporary Music Centre, the latter by the same 'cellist and Harriet Cohen at a joint recital they gave in February. A second hearing (Æolian Hall, May 8) shows that Kodály's tour de force improves on acquaintance. It may be urged that it relies to some extent on technical 'stunts.' Of course it does. For that matter, so does Bach's Chaconne! But it is also musical, charged with significance, and far superior to the same composer's work for violin and 'cello. Miss Harrison's grip of it has also improved. She makes it live more effectively than on the first occasion, and it is no small feat of 'cellistic virtuosity. A second hearing confirms rather than deepens the first impression of the Bax work, and especially of its rich slow movement. Miss Cohen's solos were a group of Bax, Ireland, and Goossens, which she gave with her usual poetic sensitiveness. Altogether an enjoyable and interesting recital.

E. E.

A RAVEL CONCERT

It is always delightful, for reasons of human interest, to see Maurice Ravel on the platform, though he is invariably the least spectacular figure at a Ravel concert. On this occasion (Æolian Hall, April 26) the novelty was Tzigane, for violin and pianoforte, completed a few days previously, and played with a mastery that was—in the circumstances—surprising, by Jelly d'Aranyi with Henri Gil-Marchex. It is one of those amiable performances by which Ravel proves, from time to time, that there are no monopolies in music. This idiom, with its strong emotional appeal, has hitherto been regarded as a Hungarian reserve—or, rather, since Hungarians will have it so, a gipsy perquisite. But Ravel, using the same idiom and the same technical means, achieves the same appeal to a degree which tricked some critics into declaring it the most 'inspired' piece of music he has written. It is a striking corroboration of a certain professor of composition who declares that inspiration, in the popular sense, is only another word for skill, not to say cunning. The piece bristles with technical difficulties, which Miss d'Aranyi surmounted with the most enviable aplomb. M. Gil-Marchex gave fine performances of the Couperin and Gaspard de la Nuit cycles, and Mlle. Marcelle Gérard, despite an exiguous voice, illustrated that incisiveness of Latin song-rendering to which some of our singers aspire, but rarely with convincing success. One new song, Ronsard à son Ame, was repeated. At the opening MM. Ravel and Gil-Marchex joined in the original duet version of Mother Goose, which at least one critic afterwards described as an arrangement. I wonder sometimes what would happen to me if I fell into the same error regarding some older work of no greater importance or charm. E. E.

THE BACH CHOIR

The Bach Choir's performance of the Mass in B minor, on May 13, at Westminster Central Hall, was the first the Choir had given of this work under Dr. Vaughan Williams. There was a very nearly full audience, for nowadays in London a choral society can offer nothing so attractive as one of the major works of Bach. The soloists were the Misses Flora Mann and Lillian Berger, and Messrs. John Adams, Arthur Cranmer, and Joseph Farrington. The organ and pianoforte, which were allotted an exceptionally important rôle in 'filling-in,' were played by Mr. Thalben Ball and Mr. G. T. Lofthouse.

We mean no disparagement to the performance if we say that it made the effect, in great part, of being experimental. The conductor and his choir with him were not applying a conventional formula to the music. They seemed to have approached it with fresh eyes, and to be singing it in obliviousness of any tradition. It resulted that, although technically the performance did not attain to faultlessness or great splendour, it possessed a peculiar spiritual interest. Again and again we were sharply reminded that this B minor Mass was taken by Dr. Vaughan Williams to be a Mass indeed. The work is perhaps most often rendered in, so to speak, a Renaissance spirit—grand, solid, proud in its unasailable science, proportions, and pomp. This time there was more of the spontaneous and instinctive Gothic feeling. Many things did not 'come off,' but we never felt any of Dr. Vaughan Williams's unconventionalities to be merely whimsical. The good reason for them could either be guessed at, or would, we felt, emerge next time.

What was unfortunately inadequate to the demands of the music was the solo singing, for though the singers were all earnest and good in their way, those tremendous arias simply will not tolerate merely well-meaning handling. The style was generally wrong, attempts being made to propitiate the stern spirit of the music by personal expressiveness, whereas a sublime style transcending mere personality as much as does the instrumental obbligato is proper. The pastoral baritone aria Et in Spiritum Sanctum, which is no doubt easier than the others, was certainly well sung by Mr. Cranmer, though still with undue traces of a romantic personal expression. C.

HAROLD SAMUEL

Mr. Harold Samuel's Bach week (May 12-17, at Æolian Hall) deserves an essay. In the want of proper space, the least that can be given is a passing note of admiration. This may for once voice the feelings of a concert-worn critic. In the yearly round nothing palls so much as the pianoforte recital. The multitude of mediocre recitals takes away the savour of the good ones, and the act of attendance is accompanied by a mental protest, however good the performer and however willing the critic is to be open-minded. Mr. Samuel's Bach recitals remove all this preliminary. They are an antidote to pianoforte recitals. No need here for reasoned praise of Bach's keyboard works, or of Mr. Samuel's playing except to say that it is one with the music. At the first recital this writer found all the artistic enjoyments that pianoforte-playing can give concentrated into one programme. The mental protest came later, when the remainder of the series was denied him.

M.

NOVELLO CHOIR

The better the singing, the more regret we felt! That was an unusual experience at Bishopsgate Institute on May 1, when the Novello Choir performed a long and varied programme of old and modern English music. The explanation of the paradox lies in the announcement of this as the last concert of the Choir, which now, after eighteen years of active and useful life, goes out of existence. It was founded by the late Dr. McNaught in 1905, and he conducted it until his death in 1918. Then Mr. Harold Brooke took up the direction, and now, owing to a variety of causes (including London's somewhat insufficient support of choral music), it comes to an end. The Choir always performed the best music, and performed it worthily, and whoever writes its epitaph can be laudatory and honest at the same time—which is not always possible.

The programme on this farewell occasion consisted of nine madrigals and twelve other choral pieces, with some solo songs interspersed by Miss Dorothy Robson. The occasion is historic, and the chief items of the programme are subjoined, so that members in years to come may be able to look back and recall their death-bed deeds:

Madrigals—

'Hark! Hear you not a heavenly harmony?'	Thomas Bateson
'Sister, awake!'	Thomas Bateson
'In going to my lonely bed'	Richard Edwards
'Sweet honey-sucking bees'	John Wilbye
'Weep, O mine eyes'	John Wilbye
'Ah! dear heart'	Orlando Gibbons
'Weep no more'	Thomas Tomkins
'Lady, your eye'	Thomas Weelkes
'All creatures now are merry-minded'	John Benet

Part-Songs—

Five part-songs from the Greek Anthology	Elgar
'Woodmen, shepherds, come away'	John E. West
'Proud Maisie'	John Pointer
'Corydon, arise'	C. V. Stanford
'Fain would I change that note'	John Ireland
'Who would true valour see'	Geoffrey Shaw
'When Allen-a-Dale'	R. L. de Pearsall
'Let me the canakin clink'	J. B. McEwen

The attack was firm, the balance better than for some time past, and, indeed, very good, the tone-quality satisfying, the expression refined. We felt that every member of the Choir was wide awake and keen, and though the conductor was on this evening evidently playing for safety rather than for surprises (rehearsals, it was said, had been interrupted by the bus strike), he made everything effective.

Why need good things come to an end? Somehow they do! And eighteen years, as things go, is not such a short lifetime for a musical body. Which prompts the question that could be asked nowhere so appropriately, or with so good an expectation of a prompt answer, as in these pages, Which is the oldest choral society in the country?

P. A. S.

SOME SINGERS OF THE MONTH

Miss Evelyn Scotney, who sang at the Albert Hall, was the best of the sopranos recently come from overseas. Her voice was bright and had flexibility. This latter gift made for some excellent coloratura singing, and Miss Scotney is to be congratulated on avoiding affectations in her style. Her one serious fault was a habit of 'pinching' detached high notes, so that the effect of them withered and died untimely. Notes that seemed destined to crown a scale or to be the shining centre of a vocal curve were, after all, rather bashfully uttered, lacking the support of wide-open throat-walls. Miss Scotney paid homage to good music by choosing examples of Liszt, Hugo Wolf, and Rachmaninov, but did not leave the other sort unrecognised.

She however ventured on nothing quite so unpretentiously familiar as O sole mio, one of the offerings of the baritone, Umberto Urbano, a singer whose Rigoletto was recently admired at Covent Garden. A wandering minstrel I would have been more appropriate—for Signor Urbano as he sang perambulated the platform from end to end.

In Verdi's Eri tu there was a full opportunity to admire this singer's admirable art. The tonal colour was dark, and the character of the voice generally such as responds most readily to the deeper emotions. He differed from the average Italian baritone in laying store not so much by lingual brilliance or lively resonance as by calculated effects of tonal depth and rich wording. He used his breath sparingly, but made full play with his palatal resources. Uncommon singer as he is, he was all the same a little disappointing at the Albert Hall to those who had known what he could do in opera.

From Madame Croiza, a French mezzo-soprano, at Wigmore Hall, we had some of the best of recent concert singing. She seemed to have the gift of hearing herself as others heard her. She was not stumbling in the dark, but took every step with dainty decisiveness and calm intention. Her programme, an 'anthology of French melodies,' was made up of familiar and charming things of Duparc, Fauré, and Debussy, and less familiar and rather less charming ones of Bréville, Roussel, and Séverac. There was much in her technics to admire—how, for instance, cutting off the ends of her phrases with throat open, she caught a noiseless breath and, without any sense of effort, continued steadily intensifying her tone. It was in character a lightly poised, forward voice, but it was not rigidly placed, and acquired beauty from the deeper resonances.

Another French singer, Mlle. Marcelle Gérard, who appeared at M. Ravel's concert, became very attractive when she had overcome her nervousness. Her singing was small, and leant towards speech rather than effusive songfulness. The beauty of it, a sufficient beauty, lay in the diction. This was not heavily sculptured, but was almost colloquial at times. At all times it was just what was wanted by Ravel's neat, witty music.

Miss Radiana Pazmor, at Wigmore Hall, used a good voice with fair skill. The tone flowed freely, the singer's scale was even. But the more we heard of her the more we were disconcerted by a manner and feeling impartially associated with very different composers. Bach and Beethoven to Fauré and Peter Warlock—all found a common denominator in this singer's style, which, in the long run, had to be accused of being mechanically monotonous.

Mr. Peter Dawson, who is principally known by his ballad-singing, showed us at Wigmore Hall that he knows lots of better music, and can sing it well too. No need for a programme when Mr. Dawson sang—his diction was superlative. His 'ee' vowel, in particular, was effectively bright, and his consonants were all clear and smart. Then there was a bold, rich tone and sensitive shading. A capital singer!

Mr. Percival Driver, who sang at Wigmore Hall, was not afraid of the sound of his own voice. His natural quality was heavy, and sometimes he overstepped reasonable limits in his efforts to storm us. But his confidence and assurance of purpose were uncommon attributes in a new singer. He has good material on which to base a career, but his singing needs a considerable refining. Too much work was done by the back of the tongue. He seldom attempted a mezza-voce, and his phrasing was too little elegant. The programme was mixed, but contained good things of Handel, Wolf, and Holst.

Madame Elena Gerhardt was at her best in her recital of Schumann and Strauss at Queen's Hall. Her singing of Wer machte dich so krank of the former was exemplary. She reached the very heart of the poem. Her least satisfactory singing was in the Provençal Song, which was marred by some hard notes.

Miss Ivy Phillips sang at Wigmore Hall with a mezzo-soprano voice of admirable quality, but she does not yet use it with any great skill. Between good top and bottom notes there was a weaker patch, and here she showed a disposition to 'clutch' her vowels with inappropriate muscles.

Miss Phillips furthermore often missed chances on open vowels of adding depth and variety to her tone. Much should be possible to this singer when she has exploited her resources more artistically. At its best her voice was big, free, and warm. She sang good music of Dowland, Monteverdi, and Gluck.

Miss Evelyn Tierney's singing at the same hall was small but ingeniously sweet. This quality captivated us at first, though after a time we felt the lack of variety. Her coloratur singing was flexible and pure, if not very brilliant. Miss Tierney sang Loewe's Niemand hat's gesehen in the right tripping way, and we liked her phrasing of Schumann's Nut-Tree.

An Australian dramatic soprano, Miss Gladys Cole, sang at Queen's Hall with orchestra. She essayed a series of great arias of Beethoven, Weber, and Wagner. It was a severe test, and it was passed, if not quite triumphantly, at least honourably well. The tone was round and firm, if not quite as resonant as it might have been. We liked the invigorating, open-air feeling in this singing. Miss Cole attacked her phrases with an open throat, and she skilfully linked her lyric and dramatic style. Her platform manner was exemplary.

Miss Olivia Hilder's singing at Wigmore Hall suffered too often from a sentimental depression expressed in a series of exaggerated slurs. In one song twenty such faults were counted. But the voice was of winning quality, and notwithstanding its full volume was uncommonly flexible. Her English, Italian, and German were better than the French. H. J. K.

ROYAL OPERA, COVENT GARDEN

As the Royal Opera Syndicate has denied us, and other musical papers, facilities for attending its present season of opera at Covent Garden, we are compelled to deny our readers any consideration of the works and performances.

Music in the Provinces

ABERYSTWYTH.—On May 14 the Ceredigion Choral Festival was inaugurated, and it is hoped that it will become an annual event like the Harlech Festival. A choir of eight hundred voices with the Welsh Symphony Orchestra performed The Messiah, and Dr. de Lloyd's arrangement of Llwyn On. The Orchestra played a movement from Schubert's seventh Symphony, two movements from Elgar's Wand of Youth, and a movement from the Symphony, From the New World. The conductors were Mr. J. T. Rees, Mr. Hubert Davies, and Sir Walford Davies.

BARNSTAPLE.—At a concert given by members of the Musical Society in aid of the funds, the choir sang Wesley's The Wilderness and Elgar's My love dwelt in a Northern Land, under Dr. H. J. Edwards, who joined Miss Anne Blackburne in Grieg's Violin Sonata in F.

BATH.—Bristol Symphony Orchestra visited the Cinema Hall of the Assembly Rooms, on April 18. Mr. Maurice Alexander conducted the 'Good Friday Music' from Parafal and the Pathetic Symphony. Madame Lily Payling was the singer.

BIRMINGHAM.—Mr. Appleby Matthews's Good Friday performance of Bach's St. Matthew Passion has become an institution in the town, and this year the audience reached embarrassing dimensions. There was a special rush for the cheaper seats, a thousand of which were available at ninepence each. The solos were sung by Miss Dorothy Silk, Miss Constance Taylor, Dr. Tom Goodey, and Mr. Keith Falconer.—On the same evening Gounod's Redemption was given by the Midland Musical Society. Mr. Cotton was the conductor, and the soloists were Miss Rebe Hillier, Miss Isobel Tebbs, and Messrs. Frank Lester, Leslie Bennett, and Geoffrey Dams.—On May 1, the Birmingham Catholic Choir gave Palestrina's Stabat Mater and Elgar's The Music-Makers. For a new organization the choir sang remarkably well.

Miss Doris Lawton sang very beautifully in the solo part of the Elgar work. Elgar's Sonata for violin and pianoforte was played by Mr. Paul Beard and Mr. Michael Mullinar. At the organ Mr. Cunningham gave an admirable idea of Elgar's orchestration.

BRAUNTON.—Walthew's The Pied Piper of Hamelin was given with orchestral accompaniment on April 23 by the Choral Society, under Miss Ivy Pugsley.

BRISTOL.—Rimsky-Korsakov's The Snow Maiden was performed by the Operatic School in Colston Hall Theatre throughout the week beginning May 5.—A series of Saturday concerts opened in Central Hall on May 10, and Messrs. Fry & Sons' choir and orchestra, conducted by Mr. Charles Read, gave a programme which included O Gladsome Light, Hail, bright abode, My love dwelt in a northern land, and German's Henry VIII. Dances.

BUDLEIGH SALTERTON.—The Revenge and part-songs comprised the spring concert of the Choral Society on April 29, Mr. Hugh Fowler conducting.

CARDIFF.—The Tabernacle Choir, conducted by Mr. E. J. Richards, sang Bach's Jesu, Priceless Treasure, on April 13, with Mr. F. J. Dalrymple at the organ.—At the College Concert on May 2 Brahms's Pianoforte Quartet was played by Sir Walford Davies, Mr. Hubert Davies, Mr. Kenneth Harding, and Mr. Arthur Williams. The College Orchestra played a Handel Overture.

CARLISLE.—The Choral Society, conducted by Dr. F. W. Wadely, concluded its season's work with a miscellaneous concert on May 1. The programme included The Music-Makers and the Coriolanus Overture.

CASTLE CARY, SOMERSET.—The Choral Society concluded its season on May 1 with creditable performances of A Tale of Old Japan and Parry's Pied Piper of Hamelin, under the direction of Mr. D. J. Gass.

DEAL AND WALMER.—At the fourth of Lieut. Walton O'Donnell's series of Symphony concerts, on May 1, the Pathetic Symphony was played. The programme also included Stanford's Irish Rhapsody and Lieut. O'Donnell's own Theme and Variations.

EASINGWOLD.—Barnby's sacred idyll, Rebekah, was performed at the Town Hall on April 23, by the Easingwold and District Musical Society. A choral Fantasia on Tannhäuser formed part of the same programme, which was given under Mr. John Groves.

EXETER.—Bach's Concerto in C minor for two violins and pianoforte, Elgar's choral songs From the Bavarian Highlands, and pianoforte music by Byrd and Brahms were given at the April meeting of the Chamber Music Club.—At its annual concert on April 25, the Male Choir showed marked progress in choice of music and manner of performance. The choir sang two of Vaughan Williams's folk-songs (Bushes and Briars and The Turtle Dove), Beauty was lying (C. H. Lloyd), Bishop's What shall he have that killed the deer? and Dowland's Now, O now I needs must part, arranged for A.T.T.B. by the conductor, Mr. W. J. Cotton.—Exeter String Orchestra played a Prelude by Julius Harrison for pianoforte and strings on May 8. Mr. Reginald Rudd was the soloist, and Mr. A. J. James conducted.

EXMOUTH.—Faust was performed by the Choral Society on April 23, with orchestra. Mr. Raymond Wilmot conducted, and the principal singers were Miss Rosa de Rayon, Miss Phyllis Rowsell, Mr. Arthur Cox, Mr. Leslie Wilmot, and Mr. Walter Belgrove.

GATESHEAD.—A new male choir has been formed, with Mr. G. W. Danskin as conductor.

LIVERPOOL.—A large number of London artists assisted on April 12 at a complimentary concert to Mr. Sam Vickers in recognition of the value of his efforts in providing music for the people. The programme was mainly operatic.—The Philharmonic Society, on April 15, gave a second performance this season of Bach's Mass in B minor. Sir Henry Wood conducted, and the solo singers were Miss Carrie Tubb, Miss Margaret Balfour, Mr. John Adams, and Mr. Horace Stevens.

MONTGOMERY.—At the fourth musical Festival in connection with the Montgomeryshire Recreation Association, on May 15, Sir Walford Davies and Mr. J. Morgan Nicholas (musical director) were the conductors. The Messiah, Bach's God's time is the best, and Parry's Blest Pair of Sirens were performed, the Welsh Symphony Orchestra taking part.

NEWCASTLE.—The Bach Choir sang the St. John Passion on April 15 in King's Hall, Armstrong College. Dr. Whittaker conducted. On May 1, Mendelssohn's To the Sons of Art was sung by the Glee and Madrigal Society, in memory of three great musicians recently deceased. Some pleasant madrigal singing was also given, Mr. R. W. Clark conducting. Newcastle saw the first performance in England, on May 2, of Isidore de Lara's highly-coloured romantic opera, The Three Musketeers, which has already achieved success on the Continent for several years.

NEWTOWN (MONTGOMERY).—The fourth annual County Musical Festival was held at the Pavilion, Newtown, on May 15. At two concerts the choir sang The Messiah, Blest Pair of Sirens, and Amser Duw goreu yw, which last is Bach's God's time is the best. The instrumental works were movements from Symphonies by Schubert (C major) and Dvorák (New World), and from Rachmaninov's C minor Pianoforte Concerto. Sir Walford Davies conducted.

OXFORD.—St. Aldates Choral Society performed the St. Matthew Passion on April 18, with the help of a string band. West Oxford Choral Society, conducted by Dr. W. H. Harris, sang Bach's God's time is the best and Mozart's Ave Verum on April 18, with Dr. Ley at the organ. At the close a cheque was presented to the conductor as a mark of regard, and in view of his approaching visit to Canada.

PLYMOUTH.—The Plymouth Corporation has just terminated a highly satisfactory concert season. Many notable vocalists and instrumentalists appeared during the sixty concerts that have been given since October last. These concerts form the principal regular musical entertainment of the town, and have done much to raise the taste for high-class music. They are under the direction of the Borough organist, Mr. H. Moreton, who has already given over two thousand eight hundred concerts and organ recitals. One notable programme supplied by members of the string band of the Royal Marines included Schumann and Svendsen Octets and a Mozart Quintet.

SIDMOUTH.—The Choral Society, with full orchestra, performed Barnett's The Ancient Mariner and Hubert Bath's The Wake of O'Connor on April 29, under Mr. J. A. Bellamy's direction.

SOUTHAMPTON.—The Philharmonic Society's programme on April 30 was as follows: A Sea Symphony, Vaughan Williams; Symphony in C minor, Beethoven; The Revenge, Stanford; and Overture, Die Meistersinger. Under Mr. George Leake everything was well performed, and the Society's ambition was justified in its results. The solo singers were Miss Dorothy Silk and Mr. Herbert Heyner.

STOURTON.—An excellent programme given in St. Andrew's Church, Stourton, on May 11, by the Leeds XXV. String Orchestra, included movements from Parry's English Suite and Holst's St. Paul's Suite.

STRATFORD-ON-AVON.—In connection with the Shakespeare Festival a choir of about forty boys from Bolingbroke L.C.C. School, London, gave a concert of the songs in Shakespeare's plays, on May 13. An interesting feature of the performance was the singing of different settings of the same song. The boys had been trained and were conducted by Mr. Maskell Hardy.

TORQUAY.—At the Symphony Concert conducted by Mr. G. W. Goss, on May 1, in the Pavilion, Mozart's Symphony in G minor, a Suite of Gipsy Pictures by Hugh Mallory, and a tone-poem, The Dying Swan, by J. C. Ames, were played. Miss Phyllis Lett was the singer.

WOBURN.—On April 30, the choral societies of Woburn, Fenny Stratford, Bletchley, Amphill, and neighbouring villages combined to hold their first musical Festival at St. Mary's Church, Woburn. The principal work chosen was The Hymn of Praise. Two performances were given, of an excellence that was a tribute to the training given by the conductor, Mr. J. Charles Williams, who is organist of the Church. An orchestra assisted in the accompaniments, and also played Schubert's Unfinished Symphony.

IRELAND

It has been a month of competition musical festivals all over the north of Ireland. The movement has done good work in awaking dormant talent, and improving the standards of both teaching and performance of music. Since its inception, in places like Portadown, Dungannon, Coleraine, Carrickfergus, not to mention larger and better-circumstanced centres like Londonderry and Belfast, the improvement in children's singing has been amazing. This applies both to diction and to the quality of tone. Before the movement got under way, very coarse tone was heard from boys and girls.

Belfast was visited on April 25 by the Hallé Orchestra, under Mr. Hamilton Harty, in Ulster Hall. The music included the Meistersinger Overture, Schubert's Symphony in C, the conductor's With the Wild Geese, three Berlioz Faust excerpts, and pieces by Rimsky-Korsakov and Moussorgsky. Disappointment was felt that Dame Agnes Nicholls was prevented from being present to sing Dove sono and the Finale to Götterdämmerung. The last-named has never been heard at Belfast, where the orchestral problem is largely one of wood-wind and brass players. Works of this calibre have been beyond local means so far.

On April 12, at the Metropolitan Hall, Dublin, Miss Culwick's Choral Society and Mr. J. Turner Huggard's Choral Society combined to perform Bantock's twelve-part unaccompanied choral work, Vanity of Vanities. Two performances were given—one (conducted by Mr. Turner Huggard) in the afternoon, and the second (conducted by Miss Culwick) in the evening. Both were equally successful.

On April 19, the Dublin Opera Company of favourite artists opened a week of popular opera at Queen's Theatre, under the direction of Mr. Vincent O'Brien.

Dubliners got the benefit of the Hallé Orchestra, on April 26-27, in the Theatre Royal, when two brilliant concerts were given under Mr. Hamilton Harty, whose With the Wild Geese was received with great enthusiasm.

Musical Notes from Abroad

GERMANY

CHAMBER MUSIC CONCERTS EVERYWHERE

It cannot be denied that present musical production is, on the whole, represented by chamber music. Though the principal reason for this may be found in the actual material conditions, which are not favourable to the development and the performance of orchestral music, yet the marked predilection for chamber music is one of the characteristic features of our epoch, hostile to mere sonority and tending to the expression of what is essential of the so-called ding an sich. This going back to the substance of things presupposes, of course, the existence of a substance. Let us take for granted that, latent or apparent, it exists. It would, however, be of great use to remember that sound is part of the substance of music, and that it is dangerous to counteract the effects of sonority by ignoring or despising them.

These considerations are suggested by recent events in German musical life. Very numerous are the quartets, old and new, which gave concerts—e.g., the Rosé Quartet, the Klingler Quartet, the Basch Quartet, the Budapest String Quartet, the Roth Quartet, the Havemann Quartet—all devoting their work, or at least the greater part of it, to the furthering of new music.

The Government, feeling responsible for the progress of art, has entrusted Prof. Gustav Havemann, of the Berlin Academy of Music, with the organization of a series of concerts designed to illustrate the development of chamber music. Recently, Prof. Havemann's Quartet presented us with the first performance in this town of Philip Jarnach's Quartet, which last year at Donaueschingen gained the hearty approval of connoisseurs. It was made abundantly clear at this second performance that the young and well-known composer, whose beautiful Quartet had first gained for him the attention of the musical world, has, in the space of a few years, out-distanced the greater part of his competitors in his free use of all the resources of modern music—resources which, in the hands of others, had so often produced only bizarre effects. Jarnach, a sincere composer, though in perfect harmony with his time, never subordinates his ideas to dogmatic principles. His linear counterpoint is made to submit to the control of new sonorities, and he is not ashamed of writing really beautiful music. The Quartet had a unanimous success.

OTHER CONCERTS

Mozart's Requiem set the musical fashion at Easter. Among those who paid homage to this work so full of delicate passages, Bruno Walter occupies the first rank. He is one of the few conductors able to take cognisance of the singer, as well as of the players of the orchestra. The same characteristics that distinguish him as a leader of opera, enabled him to give effect to all the composer's intentions in the Requiem, a work whose exalted ideal would so intimately appeal to this conductor's true musicianship.

America is now sending back those singers who left Germany in the critical conditions that marked the opening days of the season. Thus we again greeted Paul Bender and Joseph Schwarz, who demonstrated that they are still supreme in their faculty of inspiring the Lied with all the potency of poetic sentiment that so rarely is to be found in operatic singers.

Of course, the critical state of artistic life has not passed, but we have faith that latent æsthetic energies will not suffer the fruits of musical civilisation to be ruined by material necessities.

ADOLF WEISSMANN.

ROME

The Augusteum season closed with a series of excellent performances of Beethoven's Solemn Mass in D. This work had never before been heard in Italy, and notwithstanding the growing cult for Beethoven during the last fifty years in this country, no conductor had found courage to tackle it. The merit of seeing the possibilities of the Mass, and of overcoming its stupendous technical difficulties, belongs to Bernardo Molinari, who, after long and careful rehearsal, triumphantly brought off the first performance on April 13. Aided by Fernando Germani at the organ, and with Oscar Zuccarini, first violinist of the Augusteum, as soloist, Molinari directed his orchestra and choir of over three hundred and fifty voices with consummate skill, and gained a well-merited triumph from the Roman public, whose curiosity to hear the Beethoven Mass had been great. In fact, in a Catholic country, there must always be a cultured public sedulous to hear how the consummate expression of the Roman liturgy will be interpreted by one who, not professing that faith, might be supposed incapable of absolutely associating himself with the spirit of the words he sets to music. It is well-known that this difficulty was indeed a very real one for Beethoven, who, although he began the work in 1818 for the cardinalate chapel of the Archduke Rudolph, completed it only in 1822, and even then hesitated nearly another year before consigning it to the Cardinal. That Beethoven overcame his own difficulties and scruples is evidenced in the motto which he inscribed on the title-page:

'Coming from the heart, may this work go to the heart.' That his pious design held no germ of failure is evidenced in the clamorous success which, at a hundred years' distance, waited on its first performance in Italy.

Holy Week at Rome was marked by a sacred concert of some importance given by the Royal Philharmonic Society, in which Pergolesi's Stabat Mater preceded the Seven Words from the Cross of Bach's illustrious predecessor, Schütz. The last-named work, heard for the first time at Rome, had roused great interest, but it must be confessed that the reality fell short of expectation. Heavy and cumbrous in its movement, with no pleasing flashes of melodic inspiration, Schütz's score reveals all the musical vices of its time, in which geniality or spontaneous suggestion have no part.

'NERONE'

The long-promised, often-postponed, and eagerly-awaited first performance of Arrigo Boito's posthumous opera, Nerone, took place at the Scala at Milan on May 1. It had aroused the intense curiosity not only of Italy, but, it may truthfully be said, of the whole of musical Europe.

Perhaps it would be humanly impossible for an opera to come up to the expectations which have inevitably centred around a work which has evaded curiosity for so many years. The Nerone of Boito will certainly go down to history as that opera which most partook of deep, almost thrilling, mystery for a whole generation. Indeed, in the days immediately preceding its production, its problem became almost fantastic.

After his success with Mefistofele, Boito turned his attention to the subject of Nero. In the story of the opera, the dark history of the Neronian crimes and the tyrant's terrible remorse are intertwined with the simple and touching episode of the love of the persecuted Christian Faniel for the Pagan maiden, Rubria. The whole comprises the lyric-tragedy in five Acts which was to prove the torment of the composer's life. The libretto was published, if I do not err, in 1901, and from that date Boito zealously worked at its composition. The ideal of his maturity, it became the enfant terrible of his old age, and at his death it was truthfully said that he was almost more eminent for the work which had not been produced than for the Mefistofele to which he owed his fame.

The riot of contradictory statements let loose at his decease began at once to excite public interest in the mystery of his posthumous work. Some pretended that it was lying all complete and ready for production; others that it had been half-completed—abandoned—all-but finished, &c. It was finally announced that the literary executors of Boito had entrusted the production of Nerone to Arturo Toscanini, and then began the series of perennial promises and postponements, until we began to feel that the work was destined to remain a mystery.

At long last, however, light has been shed, and the riddle of Nerone revealed. Its four Acts, as completed by Boito, have been orchestrated by Tomassini (Boito left them in pianoforte score), and Toscanini has devoted himself heart and soul to the worthy production of the work.

For a month the Scala remained closed for rehearsals (at an estimated loss of a million lire), and Toscanini set himself to prepare the greatest choregraphic spectacle ever known in Italy. As the day of the general rehearsal approached, the air became electric, but Toscanini was determined that no indiscreet word should compromise the effect of the first night. No critic was permitted to enter the theatre until the night of the general rehearsal, when a few leading journalists were grudgingly admitted, under solemn oath not to divulge their impressions. A few copies of the pianoforte score were distributed at the last hour under the same conditions of secrecy. Invitations to the rehearsal were refused to Puccini, Giordano, and Pizzetti!

In the midst of so much mystery, it is not marvellous if the prices of the theatre went up by leaps and bounds. Officially, the house had been entirely sold out a month beforehand, and at prices almost fabulous. Being a subscribers' night, there were no boxes available; but the orchestra stalls cost 806 lire, and the 'gods' 257 lire. The sale of seats at second-hand, however, went on merrily. An American banker cheerfully paid 25,000 lire for a box, and the stalls went up to 7,000 lire!

So amid secrecy and solemn oaths of silence, the curtain finally rose on Nerone, and the elusive work found itself called to the bar of public opinion to justify the extraordinary interest aroused in its existence.

Has the music sustained this test? is a question which to-day it is impossible to answer. Time alone will prove whether Nerone is superior to Mefistofele. It must be said at once, however, that Toscanini has amply and admirably succeeded in his intent of producing the greatest chore-graphic spectacle of modern times. With all the vast resources of the Scala at disposal, unlimited means, and his own soaring ideal and imperious will, he has staged Nerone as no opera had ever yet been staged, even at the Scala, and with such wonderful and indescribable effects that often the magnificence of the scene rendered attention to the music impossible. But in so doing, can it be said that he has rendered a real service to the music?

To sum up, first impressions of the work seem to be these: Musically, it contains significant melodic pages of the highest value, which will materially add to the fame of their composer, whose gifts were more lyrical than orchestral. Structurally, it is often cumbrous and diffuse, and has need of vigorous and courageous cuts. Scenically, it will suffer greatly when no longer sustained by the unique resources of the Scala, and much will have to be modified ere its intrinsic content can supply the lack of extrinsic choregraphy.

To end, I may be allowed to quote from Adriano Belli, one of the foremost Roman critics, whose remarks were published in the Corriere on the morrow of the first performance:

'Many in the corridors asked themselves, "But if Boito always kept his Nerone so jealously hidden in his desk—doubting, perhaps, whether it could bear comparison with his first work—why carry it on the stage to-day? Were it not better not to penetrate the mystery surrounding that which the musical world called "the unknown Italian masterpiece"? Were it not better that this unknown quantity should persist unsolved in the history of our music, to increase the glory of the great poet-musician?" So spake they in the corridors: I give no answer. I should not know what to answer, nor would I desire to do so. But bending my head before the Artist, I think to myself that sometimes, in art as in life, it is happier to live in a dream.'

LEONARD PEYTON.

TORONTO

A new step in the development of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra was taken recently by the Mayor and Council, when a resolution was passed in favour of the venture, various committees being appointed from among the leading citizens to decide a definite policy for the future. Meanwhile audiences are steadily growing, even as the technique and artistic conception of the players improve. Three concerts this month have included the Beethoven Pastoral Symphony, the Flying Dutchman Overture, Volkmann's D minor Serenade for strings, and the Clarence Lucas Macbeth Overture. Mr. Lucas, who is well-known on both sides of the Atlantic, is a native of Brantford, Ontario, and was for many years associated with the Toronto College of Music. We are hoping to hear more of his works. Three Concertos received performance, viz., Elgar, by Mr. Leo Smith (violinocello); Mozart, by Mr. Alfred Fenboque (flute); and Rubinstein, by Mr. Ernest Seitz (pianoforte).

Three outstanding recitals, which finish the season so far as visiting artists are concerned, came from Pachmann, who courageously broke away from his usual absorption to play Mozart, Schubert, Mendelssohn, and Brahms; Jascha Heifetz, who chose the Beethoven Concerto and a number of small Bach arrangements; and Sophie Breslau, the young Russian who is recognised as one of the most brilliant concert contraltos known here for many years. The last-named showed her remarkable versatility in works of Gluck, Handel, Moussorgsky, Rachmaninov, and Rubinstein.

The annual concerts of the Hamilton Elgar Choir, given in conjunction with the Cleveland Symphony Orchestra (Nikolai Sokolov), provided Stanford's Songs of the Fleet, with Fred Patton as soloist, and smaller works of Elgar, Bach, Bantock, Balfour Gardiner, and César Cui. Mr. W. H. Hewlett, who has been connected with the Society for only two seasons, has already established his sterling musicianship in so definite a manner as to bring the Choir into the front rank of our Canadian choral organizations.

The Timothy Eaton Memorial Church and Old St. Anne's Choirs, under Dr. Ernest MacMillan, and also the Metropolitan Church Choir, under Dr. H. A. Fricker, both gave deeply impressive performances of Bach's St. Matthew Passion, the former with orchestra.

At the time of writing, the Ontario Musical Festival is in full swing with over seven thousand competitors. It is a pleasure to have with us such thorough musicians as Dr. James Lyon and Mr. Herbert Fryer, whose remarks are providing splendid inspiration for our students, more especially for the children, where most of our potential talent at present lies. We cannot be too grateful for the benefit of the experiences of such men as these, who come out to us from the Old Country. If there is one thing upon which the Dominion prides itself, it is in its desire to learn from those who know.

Mr. T. J. Crawford, organist of St. Paul's Church, Toronto, gave a very interesting Rheinberger Sonata Recital (Nos. 5, 6, and 13) on April 12, an undertaking inspired, we learn, by Mr. Harvey Grace's recent articles in this journal.

H. C. F.

VIENNA

Clemens Krauss—the young conductor from the Staatsoper who will soon leave that theatre to become operatic director at Frankfort, while retaining the leadership of the Tonkünstler Orchestra—has produced Josef Marx's Autumn Symphony, and gave the first Vienna performances of Ravel's La Valse and Schreker's Birthday of the Infanta Suite. Felix Weingartner (who bade the Volksoper farewell in an orchestrally remarkable performance of Parsifal) will also remain director of the Philharmonic Orchestra, but may conduct only a portion of next season's concerts. His last two concerts of the season with this organization included Borodin's rarely-heard B minor Symphony and Berlioz's Harold Symphony, in the solo of which Arnold Rosé, the famous violinist, made his début as a viola player. An extra concert of the Philharmonic Orchestra, under Franz Schalk, was very appropriately devoted to Bruckner's ninth Symphony, to commemorate the Bruckner centenary. The Philharmonic people who have in former years persistently refused to play the works of this long-neglected composer, have many old sins to atone for in this respect.

The Hakoah Orchestra, a Jewish national organization, performed Mendelssohn's Hymn of Praise and Rubinstein's oratorio The Tower of Babel, in conjunction with the Jewish Singing Society, under its conductor, S. Braslavsky. The Tower of Babel is a work composed of variegated elements ranging from Schumann to Wagner, and contains some Oriental colouring which anticipates later musical tendencies. Another unique concert was that given by the Vienna Mandolin Orchestra Society, under its leader, Rudolf Schmidhuber. In the deft playing of this well-trained body, the mandolin assumed the character almost of a 'legitimate' orchestral instrument, and it was surprising to note the great variety of tonal colours gained from the various instruments of the mandolin family, viz., the mandolincello, gitarrone, and others. The concerts of this Society may eventually exercise a great educational influence upon the vast number of those music-lovers who rarely if ever find an opportunity for hearing classical music in its original orchestral form. A similar influence may be hoped for from a new orchestra organized by music-loving citizens at Döbling, a suburb of Vienna which is consecrated by memories of Mozart, Beethoven, Schubert, Hugo Wolf, and Mahler. It was from just such modest beginnings that sprang the now historical and famous Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde of Vienna many decades ago.

CHAMBER MUSIC AND SOLOISTS

The Austrian section of the I.S.C.M. paid homage to Czech music at one of its monthly concerts. Three songs, Op. 2, by Jaroslav Novotny, and the song-cycle Meditace by K. B. Jirak (both excellently sung by Ruzena Herlinger), seemed to indicate that the contemporary lyric idiom of the Czechs has as yet not completely freed itself from classic or classicist examples, in diction as well as in melody and harmony.

An important event was the recent appearance of Arnold Schönberg as conductor of his chamber orchestra, which, with the exception of Konzertmeister Rudolf Kolisch, consists exclusively of semi-amateurs. Indeed, the sheer impossibility of securing from a professional orchestra the enormous number of long and exacting rehearsals which he demands, virtually forces Schönberg to recruit his players from non-professional circles. And an orchestra of enthusiastic semi-amateurs alone would supply the ideal and pliable instrument required to follow Schönberg unconditionally through the rather arbitrary tempi which he prefers for the Beethoven Violin Concerto, or through his chamber music setting of the 'Lied der Waldtaube' from his Gurrelieder. The event of the concert was the first performance anywhere of Schönberg's new Pianoforte Suite, Op. 23, which Eduard Steuermann played with so much clarity of conception and lucidity of contrapuntal texture as to make these six pieces almost fully intelligible at first hearing. As a matter of course, it is well-nigh impossible for the unprepared hearer to perceive much more than the principal 'voice' and a certain symmetry of sequences and imitations. The supreme freedom of Schönberg's contrapuntal idiom is here approached with surprising adherence to form almost in the classic sense. The six pieces of the Suite—Prelude, Gavotte, Musette, Intermezzo, Menuet, and Gigue—are clearly discernible as such in their formal architecture.

For the rest, other recent chamber music was considerably less complicated and less weighty. Werner Jüllig was heard in a new Violin Sonata which showed a fresh and unspoiled talent, and Othmar Wetchy displayed nice melodic invention in a piece of the same species. Angelo Kessissoglou, a Greek pianist, presented some rather dainty pianoforte pieces by Franz Salmhofer, which, like this composer's new Violoncello Sonata, added no new insight into the existing conception of his gifts. Emil Petschnig, apostle of musical conservatism, made a somewhat futile attempt at reviving the ballad style of Carl Löwe, by infusing it with a strong dosís of Brahms. It is certainly not in this direction that the musical reactionaries will find the way towards the 'redemption of genuinely German music.'

PAUL BECHERT.

Obituary

We tender our deepest sympathy to Dr. Charles Harriss, whose wife died at Ottawa on May 11. It was in the midst of his arduous preparations for the great choral concerts at Wembley—perhaps the proudest work of his life—that Dr. Harriss heard of his wife's serious illness. He hurried away to Canada, and reached home only the day before she died. Our message of condolence will be re-echoed from every part of the Empire where choral music is practised and the name of Charles Harriss stands for an old friend.

We regret to record the following deaths:

WILLIAM DRAYTON, at Wells, Somerset, in his eighty-ninth year. He was a pupil of Garcia, and a prominent bass singer, having sung in opera with Sims Reeves, Edward Lloyd, and other famous singers of a generation ago; a vicar-choral at Wells Cathedral from 1860 until his retirement in 1907; and sometime President of the Music Trades Association.

OTTO M. KLING, on May 7, at the age of fifty-seven. The son of a Swiss professor of music, he came to England in 1890 and directed the department of foreign music for Messrs. Novello during the years 1890-91. He then went to the London branch of Messrs. Breitkopf & Härtel as manager. When this establishment was closed, owing to the war, Mr. Kling acquired the business of Messrs. J. & W. Chester, at Brighton, and opened the now well-known centre in Great Marlborough Street. It was owing to the enterprise and success of his management that the firm of Chester has won its high prestige. Mr. Kling was, however, more than an able man of business. He had an artist's appreciation for all that is best in music, and was a believer in modern musical progress. Many living British composers owe some of their advancement to Mr. Kling's discernment and willing encouragement.

Miscellaneous

CARNEGIE UNITED KINGDOM TRUST

The adjudicators have recommended for publication the following works: Arthur Benjamin—Pastoral Fantasia for string quartet; Gerald Finzi—A Severn Rhapsody, for chamber orchestra; Armstrong Gibbs—The Blue Peter, a comic opera; Ivor Gurney—The Western Playland, a song-cycle setting of words by A. E. Housman; Cyril Scott—Quintet for pianoforte and strings; W. T. Walton—Quartet for pianoforte and strings; W. G. Whittaker—A Lyke-Wake Dirge, for chorus and orchestra. Composers are asked to note that works for adjudication in 1925 must reach the Secretary at Dunfermline not later than December 21, 1924. They are advised to write for particulars, as only certain kinds of works are eligible.

The 270th Festival of the Sons of the Clergy was attended by a large congregation at St. Paul's Cathedral on May 20. Both the music and the performance were worthy of the occasion. Chief among the musical interests was, of course, the new anthem God is our Refuge and Strength, composed for the Festival by Dr. W. G. Alcock. A few notes on this work are given on page 522 of the present issue. With a full orchestra to heighten its colour, the anthem made a broad and impressive effect under the conductorship of Dr. Alcock, and was still more to be admired in performance than in perusal of the score. The remainder of the Service, which included the Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis of Huntley in E flat and the 'Hallelujah' from Beethoven's Mount of Olives, was conducted by Dr. Charles Macpherson.

The British Music Society holds its fifth annual conference at Liverpool on June 24-28. The subjects for debate are 'The Amateur in Opera—a Problem for the Modern Composer'; 'Music in Education—the Necessity for a Musical Adviser in all Education Authorities'; 'The Value of Musical Criticism.' Various concerts will be held, one of them being a 'demonstration of the amateur's part in community music,' in the form of a performance by the Liverpool Amateur Orchestral Society and students of Liverpool College.

Unity Church Choral and Orchestral Society, Islington, concluded its second year with an orchestral concert at which Gade's tone-poem Ossian and Cherubini's Water-Carrier Overture were performed under Mr. Basil Viney. During the season the Society has twice given Cherubini's Requiem in C minor.

Answers to Correspondents

Questions must be of general musical interest. They must be stated simply and briefly, and if several are sent, each must be written on a separate slip. We cannot undertake to reply by post.

Q.—Being extremely fond of music I took up the pianoforte about seven months ago, but find it slow work. Can you suggest any way by which I may be able to make quicker progress, or recommend any books that may be helpful? I have been told The Teacher's Guide, by Mrs. Curwen, may assist me. Do you think likewise? I have the evenings free throughout the summer, and wish to make the most of them. My age is eighteen.—J. T.

A.—Your slow progress at the pianoforte is probably due to faulty methods. Get A Child's First Steps (Williams, 3s.) and The Pianist's First Music-Making (Anglo-French, three books, 3s. 6d., 3s. 6d., 3s.), all by Matthay. Study these carefully, and try to find out where you are astray.

Progress in any case, however, will be difficult if you are working by yourself. The book you mention is excellent, and might be used in conjunction with the above.

Q.—Is it possible to get a list of dates and names checked by payment of a reasonable fee? I notice in reading reviews of publications that the reviewers frequently detect an error in dates or names, even when the authors have obviously taken every precaution to be correct. If it was possible to obtain this service from the review staff (of, say, the Musical Times) before publication, instead of after, the readers of the publication would be spared, and the poor author himself saved considerable sackcloth and ashes.—‘TRINOMIAL.’

A.—It is usually only a single reviewer among many who happens to be dealing with a book upon his pet subject and is able to ‘floor’ the author on a few points of fact. It might be difficult to discover him beforehand among the crowd of reviewers, variously learned in the subject, who are ready to pounce upon any particular book. The most that could be done would be for an editor to put an author in touch with a known authority or refer him to known sources of information. If a number of reviewers find inaccuracies there is evidence that the author has not ‘taken every precaution to be correct.’

F. W. T.—The first part of your question is fully answered in the March number of the Musical Times in reply to ‘F. N.,’ supplemented by further information in the April number, under the reply to ‘W. B.’ For Bach, get Parry’s John Sebastian Bach (Putnams). Your second question is a little vague, so perhaps you will let us know if our reply is a bit off the mark. For pianoforte, Musical Interpretation, by Tobias Matthay (Williams), discusses the laws and principles of musical interpretation and their application in teaching and performing. Novello’s Primers, Chopin’s Ornamentation, by J. P. Dunn, and Beethoven’s Sonatas, by C. Egerton Lowe, may also help you. The latter includes hints on the performance of the Sonatas. As regards the organ, there is Dr. Hull’s Organ-Playing: its Technique and Expression (Augener). The interpretation of Bach’s organ works is fully treated in The Organ Works of Bach, by Harvey Grace (Novello), while the same writer’s French Organ Music (H. W. Gray Co.) is a comprehensive study of the works of French composers from the earliest times to the present day. For lives of composers, get Parry’s Studies of Great Composers (Routledge, 7s. 6d.). You might also consult the Mayfair Biographies, issued by Murdoch. Studies in Modern Music, by W. H. Hadow (Seeley), deal (in two volumes) with Berlioz, Schumann, Wagner, Chopin, Dvorák, and Brahms.

H. B.—Any song published before the ‘sixties is anybody’s property, to sing or to copy. Most songs, whether copyright or not, are free for all to sing. An embargo upon public performance of a song is usually temporary. In general we would say—‘risk it.’ Most owners of copyright songs that had a vogue thirty years ago would be very glad for you to sing them in public now.

R. G.—Analysis of complete works is outside the scope of this column. The form of Chopin’s Nocturne in A flat was discussed in the April number of the Musical Times, in reply to ‘H. H. H.’ The Sterndale Bennett piece we do not know. If the Mendelssohn Study in F minor is the well-known one with a melody over an arpeggio accompaniment, most decidedly you would use the pedal. Before entering for the examination you mention you would be well advised to read a little book, Musical Examinations: Dubious (Curwen, 2s.).

W. B.—As regards the Chopin Nocturne you will find your questions fully answered in the March number of this journal in reply to ‘Nemo.’ We have not a copy of the Heller piece.

A. P.—Names and addresses of private teachers are not given in this column. Surely a properly-placed advertisement would speedily give you the information you require.

C. E. D.—The general practice nowadays is to use the same pronunciation in singing as in speaking. Therefore, pronounce ‘bade’ as ‘bad.’

Mr. H. J. Jeal, organist of St. Nicholas Church, Thames Ditton, writes: ‘It may interest your correspondent, “G. L.” to know that the firm of Robson was in existence as late as 1860. The organ on which I play at St. Nicholas Church is by Robson, the inscription plate just above the manuals being “Thomas J. Robson, Organ Builder to Her Majesty, Appollonicon Rooms, 101, St. Martin’s Lane, W.C.,” and on the cast-iron weights for the bellows, “Robson, 1860.” The organ is a two-manual, ten stops on the Great organ, seven on the Swell, two on the Pedal, and usual couplers.’

W. D. D. writes: ‘Can you tell me if Mr. William Henry Thomas is still alive? He used to be organist at St. George’s Church, Tufnell Park, London, where I was with him as a boy. Any information will be welcome.’

H. O. P. E. asks where he can obtain words and music of an old song, Where the old mare [horse?] died, which he heard at a Hunt smoking concert in Kent thirty years ago.

CONTENTS.

PAGE

A Commentary upon Mendelssohn. By Hubert J. Foss ... ..	497
Slender Reputations. By Alexander Brent-Smith ...	499
On Broadcasting New Music. By M.-D. Calvocoressi	500
Limitations and Art. By Herbert Antcliffe ... ..	502
Ad Libitum. By ‘Feste’ ... ..	504
New Light on Early Tudor Composers. No. XXXII.
William Parsons. By W. H. Grattan Flood ... ..	506
The Passing of a Tradition. By Thomas Armstrong	507
An Experiment in Municipal Music ... ..	508
Notes on Monteverde’s Orfeo . By Frank Howes ...	511
The Bournemouth Musical Festival ... ..	511
Occasional Notes ... ..	512
Music in the Foreign Press. By M.-D. Calvocoressi	514
An Inherent Disability of Musical Criticism. By G. M. Cotton ... ..	515
The Curves of Caruso. By Prof. E. W. Scripture ...	517
New Music ... ..	520
The Musician’s Bookshelf ... ..	523
Gramophone Notes. By ‘Discus’ ... ..	534
Purcell’s Church Music. By H. D. Statham ... ..	535
Church and Organ Music ... ..	538
An Educational Basis for Organ Recital Programmes.
By C. F. Waters ... ..	538
Letters to the Editor ... ..	541
Sixty Years Ago ... ..	546
Sharps and Flats ... ..	546
The Amateurs’ Exchange ... ..	546
Royal Academy of Music ... ..	546
Royal College of Music ... ..	547
Trinity College of Music ... ..	547
The New Richard Strauss Ballet. By Paul Bechert	547
Military Bands at Wembley: Impressions at Rehearsal ... ..	549
The Bournville Carillon ... ..	550
The Balance of Expression and Design in Music	550
Hiawatha as a Spectacle ... ..	551
Competition Festival Record ... ..	551
London Concerts ... ..	552
Royal Opera, Covent Garden ... ..	554
Music in the Provinces ... ..	554
Music in Ireland ... ..	555
Musical Notes from Abroad ... ..	555
Obituary ... ..	558
Miscellaneous ... ..	558
Answers to Correspondents ... ..	558

MUSIC.

‘Fear not, O Land.’ Anthem for Whitsuntide or General Use. For Four Voices. By A. HERBERT BREWER ... ..	525
---	-----

EXTRA SUPPLEMENT given with this Number:

‘Bushes and Briars.’ Essex Folk-Song freely arranged for unaccompanied Chorus (or Solo Voices). By R. Vaughan Williams.

DURING THE LAST MONTH.

Published by NOVELLO &amp; CO., LIMITED.

ALCOCK, W. G.—“God is our Refuge and Strength.”
Festival Anthem. 2s.BREWER, A. H.—“Fear not, O land.” Anthem.
(No. 976, The Musical Times.) 2d.BRIDGE, SIR FREDERICK.—“When I was yet young, I sought wisdom.” Anthem. 4d.CORDON, I.—“Forward! be our watchword.” Hymn and Tune, “Endurance.” 3d.FLETCHER, PERCY E.—“The Shafts of Cupid.”
Song. In C, E flat, and F, for Low, Medium, and High Voice. 2s. each.GARDINER, H. BALFOUR.—“Sir Eglamore.” 1st Violin, 8d.; 2nd Violin, 8d.; Viola, 8d.; Violon-cello, 8d.; Basso, 8d.GINGOLD, BARONESS HÉLÈNE.—“Song of Songs.” Song. 2s.LEWIS, L. ELWYN.—“Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis” in F. 4d.SCHOOL MUSIC REVIEW, No. 384, contains the following music in both notations.—“Hope, the Hermit.” Unison Song. 17th Century. 2d.SCHOOL SONGS. Published in two forms. A. Voice Parts in Staff and Tonic Sol-fa Notations, with Pianoforte Accompaniment (8vo). B. Voice Parts only, in Tonic Sol-fa Notation. *A. B.*No. 909. “My shadow.” Two-part Song.
S. P. WADDINGTON — 1½d.No. 913. “My own Country.” Unison
Song. J. CLIFFE FORRESTER — 1½d.No. 941. “Piper’s Song.” Two-part Song.
RUTLAND BOUGHTON — 2d.No. 1299. “Laugh a bit.” Unison Song.
R. BERNARD ELLIOTT — 2d.SHAW, GEOFFREY.—“Variations on an Old English Melody” (Heartsease). For Organ. (No. 101,
Original Compositions for the Organ (New Series). 2s.

TONIC SOL-FA SERIES:

No. 2450. “Orpheus with his Lute.” Arranged for
S.S.A., by JOHN E. WEST.
ARTHUR S. SULLIVAN 3d.WARNEFORD, H. L.—Twenty-five Hymn-Tunes, with Harmonies in G to the Lord’s Prayer and Apostles’ Creed. 1s. 6d.WILLIS-DIXON, A.—Christmas Carol (“Hark! the Christmas Bells”). 2d.

—“The Exile.” Four-part Song for mixed voices. 2d.

WINFIELD, ETHEL.—Vesper Hymn (“The evening cometh.”) 3d.

PUBLISHED FOR

THE H. W. GRAY CO., NEW YORK.

SCHROEDER, W.—Three Psalms for Tenor or Soprano:
1. “I will lift mine eyes.” 2. “The Lord is my Shepherd.” 3. “How amiable are Thy Tabernacles.”
50 cents (2s.) net each.L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., AURAL TESTS. Special important paper. Success assured. This paper gives details how to work. Send 4s. 6d. to “Aural Tests,” c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.ESSAY.—A.R.C.O., on “English Folk-Song and Dance.” Excellent Series of Six Model Essays—valuable hints. Secure Success. Send 4s. 6d. to “Essays,” c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.SINGING.—A long-felt want. Very many lessons saved by SPECIAL NEW PAPER. Students taught how to obtain the full singing voice. Enclose P.O. 5s. to “Singing,” c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.MUSIC COPYING.—Mrs. Headlam-Morley, of 29, St. Mary’s Road, Wimbledon, requires at once a thoroughly competent copyist, who will work at the house under her supervision.BARGAINS.—Bechstein GRAND, 6-ft. 3-in.
Fine condition. 160 guineas; and Holt Two-Manual PEDAL
ORGAN, 11 full rows of Reeds. 125 guineas. “B. H.,” c/o Novello
& Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.HARMONIUM, ALEXANDRE, Oak Case with Ornamental pipe top, 4½ complete sets of reeds, powerful and excellent tone-quality. In perfect condition. Suitable for Church, Institution, or Cinema. £25. To be seen near Bristol.
Write, “C.,” 160, Brecknock Road, London, N.19.ORGAN MUSIC for SALE (mostly modern).
List from “E. G. H.,” 27, Lombard Street, Newark, Notts.ASSISTANT-ORGANIST (Voluntary) WANTED.
Friday practices, Services. Two-manual, 21 stops. Baptist.
Brixton. Write, Organist, 19, Ruskin Walk, Herne Hill, S.E.24.ORGANIST-CHOIRMASTER, F.R.C.O., Southampton, can exchange duty and residence, London and suburbs,
4 weeks or less, August or September. “H. M.,” c/o Novello & Co.,
Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.ORGANIST-CHOIRMASTER, F.R.C.O., 20 years’ experience, can take holiday duty in return for house accommodation. August or September, London or suburbs. “L. V.,” c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.JOHN ROBERTS has VACANCIES for a few PUPILS in VOICE PRODUCTION. “R. J.,” c/o Novello
& Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.TEACHER OF SINGING (Baritone Vocalist) offers services from 10 to 4 daily in any suitable musical sphere.
“Vocal,” c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

MUSICAL COMPOSITIONS REVISED

and prepared for publication or performance.
Melodies arranged for Piano.
Accompaniments written.
Orchestral Parts, special arrangements, criticism, &c.
By experienced Reviser and Composer. Write for terms:
A. E. HOLDAWAY
30, Turret Grove, Clapham, London, S.W.4.

THE MUSICAL TIMES

CHARGES FOR ADVERTISEMENTS:—

	£	s.	d.
Two Lines ... ..	0	3	0
Three Lines ... ..	0	3	4
For every additional Line ... ..	0	0	10
One inch (displayed) ... ..	0	10	0
Half a Column ... ..	2	0	0
A Column ... ..	4	0	0
A Page ... ..	7	10	0

Special Pages (Cover, &amp;c.) by arrangement.

A remittance should be sent with every Advertisement.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

To ensure insertion in their proper positions,
Advertisements for the next issue should reach the Office, 160, Wardour Street, London, W.1, not later than

THURSDAY, JUNE 19 (FIRST POST).

Dedicated to SIR JOHN JAMES BADDELEY.

THE OLD CRYES OF LONDON

BY

SIR FREDERICK BRIDGE

WITH NUMEROUS ILLUSTRATIONS AND MUSICAL EXAMPLES
AND A COLOURED FRONTISPICE.

Eighty-Eight Pages, Crown 4to    ...    ...    Price Seven Shillings net.

THE MORNING POST: "His book has a delightful antiquarian flavour, increased by its quaint illustrations, and the use of the old-style music type."

THE TIMES: "Under the title 'The Old Cryes of London' Sir Frederick Bridge has now written, and Messrs. Novello have published, a delightful little volume.

The best thing in this book is the author; and the next best things are the illustrations."

ARMY, NAVY, AND AIR FORCE GAZETTE: "A very unusually attractive book. It certainly forms a most welcome contribution to musical history."

THE REFEREE: "This contains a mine of antiquarian lore, reproductions of old woodcuts, and musical examples."

THE GUARDIAN: "Those individuals who were so unfortunate as to miss Sir Frederick Bridge's delightful lectures in the City on 'The Old Cryes of London' will derive both consolation and entertainment from this excellent volume."

THE CHRISTIAN WORLD: "This delightful little volume . . . an excellent piece of genial antiquarianism, musical, literary, and historical."

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

BOOKS BY PERCY A. SCHOLES.

THE valuable work done by Mr. Scholes in bringing before the large number of potential music-lovers some of the facts and interest of music is well-known to all musicians. In his latest book, "THE FIRST BOOK OF THE GRAMOPHONE RECORD," he analyses fifty well-known gramophone records so that the ordinary gramophone enthusiast may add to his enjoyment of them by adding to his knowledge. 3s. 6d. net.

THE LISTENER'S GUIDE TO MUSIC. Sixth edition.
From 3s. 6d. net.

THE LISTENER'S HISTORY OF MUSIC.
Vol. I., 6s. net.

THE BEGINNER'S GUIDE TO HARMONY.
From 2s. net.

THE COMPLETE BOOK OF THE GREAT MUSICIANS.

12s. 6d. net.

Also in three parts, from 4s. 6d. net each.

"MUSICAL APPRECIATION" IN SCHOOLS. Third edition.

1s. 6d. net.

A FULL LIST OF MR. SCHOLE'S AND OTHER POPULAR BOOKS ON MUSIC IS NOW READY. WRITE FOR IT TO-DAY.

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS.

NOVELLO'S HYMNS AND TUNES

FOR

SUNDAY SCHOOL ANNIVERSARY SERVICES.

PUBLISHED IN BOTH NOTATIONS COMBINED.

Five Sets, each containing Ten Hymns and Tunes, price 6*d.* each set ; Words only, 6*s.* 6*d.* per 100.

The following may be had separately, price 1½*d.* each.

	Words by	Music by
1. COME, CHILDREN, ON AND FORWARD ...	F. BEVAN ...	G. C. MARTIN
2. FOR THE FRESHNESS OF THE MORNING (Flower Service)	W. ST. HILL BOURNE...	Lady EUAN-SMITH
3. I LOVE TO HEAR THE STORY ...	EMILY H. MILLER ...	F. CLAY
4. COME, O COME, IN PIOUS LAYS ...	G. WITHER ...	J. STAINER
5. { THINE FOR EVER! GOD OF LOVE...	MARY F. MAUDE ...	W. C. HARVEY
5. { NOW THE DAYLIGHT GOES AWAY ...	F. R. HAVERGAL ...	J. ADCOCK
6. JESU, WHOM THY CHILDREN LOVE ...	J. F. WHEELER ...	H. E. BUTTON
7. SWEETLY O'ER THE MEADOWS FAIR ... (Flower Service)	F. A. CHALLINOR ...	F. A. CHALLINOR
8. WOULD YOU GAIN THE BEST IN LIFE ...	H. R. PALMER ...	C. J. MAY
9. ON OUR WAY REJOICING ...	J. S. B. MONSELL ...	W. B. GILBERT
10. AGAIN THE MORN OF GLADNESS...	J. ELLERTON ...	J. STAINER
11. THE ANGEL'S SONG ...	F. R. HAVERGAL ...	A. RANDEGGER
12. FORWARD, CHRISTIAN CHILDREN ...	HELEN W. SELBY ...	A. MOFFAT
13. THE GOLDEN SHORE ...	E. OXENFORD ...	J. STAINER
14. SAVIOUR, BLESSED SAVIOUR ...	G. THRING ...	JOHN E. WEST
15. ENTER WITH THANKSGIVING ...	W. ST. HILL BOURNE	F. H. COWEN
16. MAN SHALL NOT LIVE BY BREAD ALONE	W. H. DRAPER ...	J. V. ROBERTS
17. STARS, THAT ON YOUR WONDROUS WAY	J. BOGUE ...	J. STAINER
18. THE DAY IS PAST AND OVER ...	J. M. NEALE ...	J. BARNEY
19. WE MARCH, WE MARCH TO VICTORY ...	G. MOULTRIE ...	J. BARNEY
20. HARK! HARK! THE ORGAN LOUDLY PEALS	G. THRING ...	G. J. BENNETT
21. O WHAT CAN LITTLE HANDS DO...	G. W. HINSDALE ...	H. E. BUTTON
22. THE ROSEATE HUES OF EARLY DAWN...	C. F. ALEXANDER ...	A. SULLIVAN
23. LORD, THY CHILDREN GUIDE AND KEEP	W. W. HOW ...	A. S. COOPER
24. { THE BEAUTIFUL LAND ...	E. OXENFORD ...	J. STAINER
24. { JESUS, TENDER SHEPHERD, HEAR ME...	M. L. DUNCAN ...	H. PARKER
25. THE BOYS AND GIRLS OF ENGLAND ...	J. COMPTON ...	J. STAINER
26. THE CITY OF LIGHT ...	F. ADLER ...	E. J. TROUP
27. { GOD IS IN HEAVEN! CAN HE HEAR ...	A. GILBERT ...	H. E. BUTTON
27. { GENTLE JESUS, MEER AND MILD...	C. WESLEY ...	J. STAINER
28. HE DWELLS AMONG THE LILIES (Flower Service)	W. ST. HILL BOURNE	Lady EUAN-SMITH
29. THE CROWN IS WAITING ...	E. OXENFORD ...	J. STAINER
30. RAISE YOUR STANDARD, BROTHERS ...	G. SPILLER ...	E. J. TROUP
31. FLOWERS (Flower Service) ...	F. R. HAVERGAL ...	A. RANDEGGER
32. THE GOOD SHEPHERD... ..	E. OXENFORD...	J. STAINER
33. ABOVE THE CLEAR BLUE SKY ...	M. BOURDILLON ...	H. E. CRIMP
34. WHEN LOVE DRAWS NEAR ...	L. WHITEHEAD ...	E. J. TROUP
35. COME SING WITH HOLY GLADNESS ...	J. J. DANIELL ...	G. W. TORRANCE
36. WE WILL PRAISE THEE ...	E. OXENFORD ...	J. STAINER
37. WHAT CAN I GIVE JESUS (Flower Service)...	A. C. BENSON ...	A. M. GOODHART
38. COME, PRAISE OUR LORD AND SAVIOUR	W. W. HOW ...	H. A. CHAMBERS
39. NOW THE DAY IS OVER ...	S. BARING-GOULD ...	F. W. BLUNT
40. WE THANK THEE LORD FOR THIS FAIR EARTH	G. E. L. COTTON ...	W. C. HARVEY
41. THE LESSON OF LOVE ...	...	J. BARNEY
42. COME, FRIENDS, THE WORLD WANTS MENDING	...	E. J. TROUP
43. CREATOR, GOD, AND LORD ...	MARY BRADFORD WHITING ...	J. H. MAUNDER
44. O GOD, WE COME BEFORE THEE (Flower Service)	J. GIBSON ...	... Tune—"ELLACOMBE"

(To be continued.)

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

"Such settings as these cannot do otherwise than tend to popularise the Church Service."—Musical Standard, June 6th, 1891.
 "Good, effective, easy, and dignified."—Musical Times, April 1, 1891.
 "Admirably adapted to meet the requirements of the majority of choirs and congregations." "Deserve extensive recognition and use."—Musical News, September 4 and 25, 1891.
 Also recommended by the Guardian, Church Times, &c., &c.

POPULAR CHURCH MUSIC

BY

J. H. MAUNDER

HARVEST ANTHEMS.

	Staff	Tonic
	Notation.	Sol-fa.
Sing to the Lord of Harvest ... ..	4d.	3d.
While the earth remaineth ... ..	4d.	3d.
Blessed be the Name of the Lord ... ..	4d.	3d.

SERVICES.

SERVICE IN G ... ..	2s.	1s. 4d.
Or, separately :—
Te Deum ... ..	4d.	3d.
Benedicite, omnia Opera ... ..	3d.	3d.
Benedictus ... ..	3d.	3d.
Jubilate ... ..	4d.	3d.
Office for the Holy Communion ... ..	10d.	8d.
Pater Noster from the above ... ..	3d.	3d.
Amen ditto ... ..	1½d.	1½d.
Magnificat and Nunc dimittis ... ..	4d.	3d.
SERVICE IN CHANT FORM (No. 1) ... ..	1s. 4d.	10d.
Or, separately :—
Te Deum, &c., with Kyrie ... ..	4d.	3d.
Office for the Holy Communion ... ..	8d.	6d.
Magnificat and Nunc dimittis ... ..	4d.	3d.
Te Deum in B flat ... ..	4d.	3d.
Magnificat and Nunc dimittis in C (partly Unison) ... ..	4d.	2d.
Magnificat and Nunc dimittis in D ... ..	4d.	3d.

ORGAN.

Voix Seraphique (for Recitals) ... ..	2s. 6d.	—
CHURCH CANTATA.
Penitence, Pardon, and Peace (for general use) ... ..	2s.	1s. 4d.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

NATIONAL INSTITUTE EDITION.

WORKS OF BRITISH BLIND COMPOSERS

PUBLISHED FOR THE
NATIONAL INSTITUTE FOR THE BLIND
(Registered under the Blind Persons Act, 1920)

BY

RYALLS & JONES, LTD.,

107, GRANGE ROAD, BIRKENHEAD.

LONDON AGENTS:

EVANS & Co. (Wells Castle), LTD., 72, Wells Street, W.1.

"Teachers all over the land should make themselves thoroughly acquainted with the Edition."—

Mr. ERNEST FOWLES, F.R.A.M., in The Music Teacher.

PIANOFORTE LIST.

TWO SKETCHES:

"AUTUMN"; "WINTER."—C. G. BROAN. 2s.

FIVE LYRIC PIECES.—ALFRED J. THOMPSON. 3s.

NOEL.—WILLIAM WOLSTENHOLME. 2s.

TEN POETIC FANCIES (Books I. and II.).—HORACE F. WATLING. 3s. each.

VENETIAN BOAT SONG.—SINCLAIR LOGAN. 2s.

RONDO SCHERZANDO, in B flat.—FREDERICK W. PRIEST. 2s.

SKETCH SUGGESTED BY THE FLIGHT OF AN AEROPLANE.—H. G. OKE. 2s. 6d.

RONDO ALLA TARANTELLA in A flat.—ALFRED WRIGLEY. 2s.

THREE SKETCHES FOR A YOUNG PLAYER:

(1) "LITTLE SOLDIERS"; (2) "FAIRY TALE"; (3) "BEDTIME."—H. G. OKE. 2s. 6d.

MOODS OF A MIND: Book I., "REPOSE," "MERRIMENT," Book II., "SADNESS," "GLADNESS."—H. V. SPANNER. 2s. each book.

RUSTIC DANCE in D minor.—HORACE F. WATLING. 2s.

CAPRICE, in C.—SINCLAIR LOGAN. 2s.

SPANISH SERENADE.—WILLIAM WOLSTENHOLME. 2s.

ZINGARESCA.—LLEWELLYN WILLIAMS. 2s.

The underlined have been selected by the Æolian Co. for Pianola Records, which are now on sale.

JUST PUBLISHED.

CHORALES

HARMONIZED BY

JOHANN SEBASTIAN BACH

COLLECTED AND ARRANGED IN MELODIC ORDER

BY

H. ELLIOT BUTTON.

This Collection of Chorales harmonized by Bach contains, it is believed, all those that he arranged for voices. It includes also an Index by means of which any Chorale can easily be found if the first few notes of the melody are known.

Price ... .. Cloth, Ten Shillings and Sixpence.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

JUST PUBLISHED.

EMPIRE SONG BOOK

A COLLECTION OF SUITABLE MUSIC FOR CHILDREN'S FESTIVALS WHICH IS SO ARRANGED THAT IT MAY BE PERFORMED WITH OR WITHOUT ACTIONS.

“SHE STANDS A THOUSAND-WINTERED TREE”
“AN EMPIRE SONG”

AND THE MEDLEYS

COMPOSED BY
PERCY E. FLETCHER.

(PRICE ONE SHILLING.)

Vocal Parts (Staff and Tonic Sol-fa Notations combined), Sixpence.
Orchestral Parts may be obtained.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

JUST PUBLISHED.

SECOND EDITION—REVISED AND ENTIRELY RE-WRITTEN
PART III. OF

THE MORRIS BOOK

WITH A DESCRIPTION OF DANCES AS PERFORMED BY

THE MORRIS MEN

OF ENGLAND

BY

CECIL J. SHARP

AND

HERBERT C. MACILWAINE

Price 4s. Cloth, 5s. 6d.

MORRIS DANCE TUNES

SETS 5 AND 6 (Revised Editions)

FOR USE IN CONNECTION WITH THE ABOVE.

Price 3s. each.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

COMPETITION FESTIVAL MUSIC

PUBLISHED BY NOVELLO & CO., LTD.

VIOLIN SOLOS WITH PIANOFORTE ACCOMPANIMENT.

	s.	d.		s.	d.
BREWER, A. H. Auf Wiedersehen ... ..	3	0	MACCUNN, H. Romance in G ... ..	3	0
CARSE, A. Suite in four movements ... ..	4	0	MACKENZIE, A. C. Benedictus ... ..	3	0
COLERIDGE-TAYLOR, S. Ballade in D minor ... ..	3	0	— Distant Chimes (Op. 89) ... ..	3	0
— Four Characteristic Waltzes (Op. 22) ... ..	4	6	— Saltarello ... ..	3	0
COWEN, F. H. Minuet d'Amour ... ..	3	0	— Zingaresca (Op. 37, No. 1) ... ..	3	0
DAVIES, H. WOLFORD. Solemn Melody ... ..	2	3	MARKS, J. C. Réverie ... ..	3	0
ELGAR, E. Chanson de Matin (Op. 15, No. 1) ... ..	3	0	NESVERA, J. Berceuse Bohémienne ... ..	1	6
— Chanson de Nuit (Op. 15, No. 2) ... ..	2	3	NEWTON, E. Eight Easy Melodies ... ..	4	6
— Mazurka (Op. 10, No. 1) ... ..	3	0	PARRY, C. H. H. Bourrée (Suite in F, Lady Radnor's Suite) ... ..	2	3
GERMAN, E. Bourrée and Gigue (Much Ado About Nothing) ... ..	4	0	— Capriccioso (Suite in D) ... ..	2	3
— Pavane (Romeo and Juliet) ... ..	3	0	— Twelve Short Pieces, in 3 sets ... ..	each set	4	0
— Three Dances (Henry VIII.) ... ..	4	6	RAFF. Cavatina ... ..	1	6
GOUNOD. Julex from "Mors et Vita" ... ..	3	0	REED, W. H. A la Campagne ... ..	3	0
HAYNES, BATTISON. Idyll ... ..	3	0	SCHUMANN. Träumerei ... ..	1	6
HOLBROOKE, J. Souvenir de Printemps (Op. 23, No. 6) ... ..	3	0	SITT, H. Bunte Blätter (twelve easy pieces, in 4 books) ... ..	each book	3	0
IRELAND, J. Bagatelle ... ..	3	0	WARNER, H. W. Elegie ... ..	2	3
LEMARE, E. H. Andantino ... ..	3	0	WOLSTENHOLME, W. Allegretto ... ..	2	3
LLOYD, C. H. Six Easy Pieces ... ..	4	6

PIANOFORTE SOLOS.

	s.	d.		s.	d.
ARENSKY, A. Prelude in F minor (Op. 42, No. 1) ... ..	3	0	LANGE, G. Two Hungarian Dances (Op. 266) :
— Romance in A flat (Op. 42, No. 2) ... ..	3	0	1. Isteni Czárdás ... ..	2	3
BACH. Bourrée in C ... ..	2	3	2. Rozsabokar Czárdás ... ..	2	3
— Gavotte in B minor from Violin Sonata (Saint-Saëns) ... ..	2	0	MENDELSSOHN. Perpetuum mobile (Op. 119) ... ..	3	0
BEETHOVEN. Andante in F (Klindworth) ... ..	3	0	— Prelude and Fugue in E minor (Klindworth) ... ..	3	0
— Two Rondos (Op. 51, No. 1 in C, No. 2 in G) (Klindworth) ... ..	3	0	— Scherzo in G minor from Octet (Op. 20) (Kihl) ... ..	3	0
COLERIDGE-TAYLOR, S. Valse de la Reine ... ..	2	3	RUBINSTEIN. Barcarolle (Op. 30) ... ..	2	3
DALCROZE, J. Four Characteristic Dances ... ..	3	0	— Melody in F ... ..	1	6
ESPOFF, S. Ballade. G minor ... ..	3	0	SAINT-SAËNS. Gavotte in C minor ... ..	2	3
— Cantique d'Amour ... ..	3	0	— Mazurka in G minor ... ..	3	0
FLETCHER, PERCY E. Valse Lyrique ("Smile of Spring") ... ..	2	3	SCHUBERT. Impromptu in B flat (Klindworth) ... ..	3	0
HANDEL. Aria con Variazioni ("The Harmonious Blacksmith") (Klindworth) ... ..	2	3	SCHUMANN. Arabesque in C major (Op. 18) ... ..	1	6
— Fugue in E minor (Klindworth) ... ..	2	3	— Three Romances (Op. 28) ... ..	1	6
HAYDN. Andante con Variations in F minor (Klindworth) ... ..	3	0	SCOTT-BAKER, H. Pantomime ... ..	3	0
HENSELT, A. Si oiseau j'étais, A toi je volerais! (Op. 2, No. 5) (Pachmann) ... ..	2	3	SPINDLER, F. Husarenritt (Op. 140) ... ..	3	0
— Wiegeliend (Op. 45) (Chanson de Berceau) (Pachmann) ... ..	2	3	STRELEZKI. Miniature ... ..	2	3
HOFMANN, H. From Golden Days (Op. 34, No. 3) ... ..	1	6	— Valse Impromptu ... ..	2	3
— Puck (Op. 37, No. 9) ... ..	2	3	TSCHAIKOWSKY. Marche Militaire ... ..	3	0
HUMMEL, J. N. Rondo in E flat (Op. 11) (Klindworth) ... ..	3	0	— Valse Scherzo in A major ... ..	3	0
— Rondo in B minor (Op. 109) (Klindworth) ... ..	3	0	WEBER. Rondo brillant (E flat) (Op. 62) (Klindworth) ... ..	3	0
			WEBSTER, ERIC. Vignettes (Three Pieces) ... ..	3	0
			WENDT, T. Cantique d'Amour ... ..	2	3
			WEST, A. H. Toccata ... ..	3	0

SONGS.

SOPRANO.	s.	d.	TENOR.	s.	d.
DVORÁK. Invocation ... ..	2	0	FARRAR, E. O Mistress Mine ... ..	2	0
ELGAR, E. Oh soft was the song ... ..	2	0	MACKENZIE, A. C. While my lady sleepeth ... ..	1	6
FARRAR, E. Brittany ... ..	1	6	PARRY, C. H. H. God breaketh the battle ... ..	2	0
MACKENZIE, A. C. Cross and Crown ... ..	2	0	SOMERVILLE, R. Invocation to the Dawn ... ..	2	0
PURCELL. Evening Hymn ... ..	2	0	WAGNER. Walter's Prize Song ... ..	2	0
CONTRALTO.			BASS.
COLERIDGE-TAYLOR, S. Soul's Expression ... ..	4	0	BENEDICT. Rage, thou angry storm ... ..	2	0
DVORÁK. Inflammatus ... ..	2	0	DALE, B. J. O mistress mine ... ..	2	0
ELGAR, E. A child asleep ... ..	2	0	GREENE, M. Like the young God of wine ... ..	2	0
GLUCK. Thou art gone, alas, for ever ... ..	2	0	HARTY, HAMILTON. Homeward ... ..	2	0
PARRY, C. H. H. Ballad of Meshullemeth ... ..	2	0	SMYTH, E. M. Chryssilla ... ..	2	0

Specimens of every kind of music will be forwarded on application. To ensure a satisfactory selection, the Syllabus of the last Festival should accompany the request.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

COMPETITION FESTIVAL MUSIC

PUBLISHED BY NOVELLO & CO., LTD.

MIXED VOICES.

BAIRSTOW, E. C. Dawn of Song, The ... ..	4d.	McEWEN, J. B. Let me the canakin clink ... ..	6d.
BANTOCK, GRANVILLE. Awake, awake ... ..	4d.	Links o' love, The... ..	2d.
Grass of Parnassus ... ..	4d.	PARRY, C. H. H. Music, when soft voices die ... ..	3d.
On Himalay... ..	4d.	My delight and thy delight ... ..	4d.
BRAHMS. Dirge of Darthula, The (Op. 42, No. 3) ... ..	6d.	Sweet day, so cool... ..	3d.
COLERIDGE-TAYLOR. Evening Star, The ... ..	2d.	There rolls the deep ... ..	3d.
Lee Shore, The ... ..	4d.	REED, W. H. My lady fell a-sighing ... ..	4d.
CORNELIUS, P. Hero's rest (Op. 19) ... ..	4d.	SHAW, GEOFFREY. Who would true valour see ... ..	4d.
O death! thou art the tranquil night (Op. 11, No. 1) ... ..	6d.	STANFORD, C. V. Corydon, arise ... ..	4d.
ELGAR, E. After many a dusty mile (arr.) ... ..	4d.	Phæbe ... ..	4d.
Death on the hills ... ..	8d.	SULLIVAN, A. When love and beauty ... ..	8d.
Feasting I watch (arr.) ... ..	4d.	WALTHER, R. H. Sleep... ..	2d.
Go, song of mine ... ..	8d.	WEST, JOHN E. How eloquent ... ..	4d.
Shower, The ... ..	6d.	Woodmen, shepherds, come away ... ..	4d.
FLETCHER, PERCY E. Folly's Song ... ..	4d.	WILLIAMS, C. LEE. Song of the Pedlar ... ..	4d.
GARDINER, H. BALFOUR. Cargoes ... ..	4d.	WILLIAMS, R. VAUGHAN. Fain would I change that ... ..	3d.
Old song resung, An ... ..	6d.	note ... ..	3d.
GERMAN, E. Chase, The ... ..	4d.	WOOD, CHARLES. Full fathom five ... ..	3d.
London Town ... ..	6d.
My bonnie lass, she smileth ... ..	4d.

ELIZABETHAN MADRIGALS.

BATESON. Hark! hear you not... ..	4d.	MORLEY. Arise, awake, you silly shepherds ... ..	4d.
BENET. All creatures now are merry-minded ... ..	4d.	Shoot, false love, I care not ... ..	4d.
BYRD. I joy not in no earthly bliss ... ..	4d.	TOMKINS. Oyes! has any found a lad... ..	2d.
This sweet and merry month of May... ..	4d.	Weep no more ... ..	2d.
FARMER. I thought my love, that I should overtake you ... ..	4d.	WEELKES. As Vesta was from Latmos' Hill descending ... ..	4d.
GIBBONS, ORLANDO. Ah! dere heart ... ..	2d.	Lady, your eye ... ..	4d.
I tremble not at noise of war ... ..	4d.	WILBYE. Adieu, sweet Amarillis ... ..	3d.
MARSTON. Nymphs and shepherds ... ..	4d.	Alas! what hope of speeding ... ..	3d.
		Lady Oriana, The... ..	4d.

MALE VOICES (T.T.B.B.).

BANTOCK, GRANVILLE. Festival Song ... ..	6d.	FLETCHER, PERCY E. Sailor's Return, The ... ..	6d.
Give a rouse ... ..	4d.	Vision of Belshazzah, The ... ..	4d.
How sleep the brave ... ..	4d.	GARDINER, H. BALFOUR. Sir Eglamore ... ..	4d.
BOYCE, E. Dirge ... ..	3d.	GERMAN, E. O peaceful night ... ..	4d.
CARSE, A. The tide rises, the tide falls ... ..	3d.	Sleeping ... ..	4d.
CORNELIUS, P. Rider's Song, The ... ..	6d.	HEGAR, F. Phantom Host, The ... ..	8d.
DAVIES, H. WALFORD. Hymn before Action ... ..	4d.	LLOYD, C. H. Wet sheet and a flowing sea ... ..	4d.
DUNHILL, T. F. Full fathom five ... ..	4d.	SCHUMANN. Night March, The (Op. 62, No. 1) ... ..	4d.
It was a lover and his lass ... ..	4d.	Song of Freedom (Op. 62, No. 2) ... ..	4d.
Who is Sylvia? ... ..	3d.	SOMERVELL, A. Soldier, rest ... ..	4d.
Wind and the rain, The ... ..	4d.	WEST, JOHN E. John Peel (Old English Song) ... ..	4d.
ELGAR, E. Reveille, The ... ..	8d.	WILLIAMS, R. VAUGHAN. Bushes and briars (Folk-Song) ... ..	3d.
Wanderer, The ... ..	4d.	WOOD, CHARLES. Down in yon summer vale ... ..	3d.
Zut! zut! zut! ... ..	4d.

FEMALE VOICES.

ATKINS, IVOR. Sea Song, A. (S.A.) ... ..	4d.	FLETCHER, PERCY E. *Dream, baby, (S.S.A.) ... ..	4d.
BERLIOZ. Ophelia. (S.A.)... ..	4d.	*Oh the merry May, (S.S.A.) ... ..	4d.
BOUGHTON, RUTLAND. Piper's Song. (S.S.A.)... ..	3d.	GERMAN, E. Beauteous morn. (S.S.A.) ... ..	4d.
BRAHMS. *Barcarolle (Op. 44, No. 3). (S.S.A.A.) ... ..	2d.	O lovely May, (S.S.A.) ... ..	4d.
Gardener, The (Op. 17, No. 3). (S.S.A.) ... ..	4d.	HOLST, G. *Now sleeps the crimson petal. (S.S.A.A.) ... ..	3d.
*Now all the roses (Op. 44, No. 7). (S.S.A.A.) ... ..	4d.	*O swallow, swallow, (S.S.A.) ... ..	3d.
COLERIDGE-TAYLOR, S. Encinctured with a twine of leaves, (S.S.A.) ... ..	4d.	*Splendour falls, The. (S.S.A.A.) ... ..	4d.
From the green heart of the waters. (S.S.A.) ... ..	4d.	*Sweet and low, (S.S.A.A.) ... ..	4d.
DAVIES, H. WALFORD. Cradle Song, A. (S.S.A.) ... ..	4d.	*Tears, idle tears (S.S.A.A.) ... ..	3d.
Lamb, The. (S.S.A.) ... ..	4d.	SHAW, GEOFFREY. Three Hymns from Pan's Anniversary:—
Shepherd, The. (S.S.A.) ... ..	4d.	Of Pan we sing, (S.S.A.)... ..	6d.
ELGAR, E. Christmas greeting, A. (S.A.) ... ..	8d.	Pan is our all, (S.S.A.A.) ... ..	4d.
My love dwell in a northern land (arr.). (S.S.A.) ... ..	4d.	If yet Pan's orgies, (S.S.A.A.) ... ..	4d.
Stars of the summer night, (S.A.) ... ..	8d.	WILLIAMS, R. VAUGHAN. Sound sleep, (S.S.A.) ... ..	6d.
		WOOD, CHARLES. La Fileuse. (S.A.) ... ..	4d.

ELIZABETHAN MADRIGALS (ARRANGED).

*BATESON. Nightingale, The. (S.S.A.) ... ..	2d.	MORLEY. *My bonny lass she smileth. (S.S.A.A.) ... ..	4d.
*BYRDE. Looke downe, O Lord. (S.S.A.A.) ... ..	3d.	*Now is the month of maying. (S.S.A.A.) ... ..	3d.
*EDWARDS. In going to my lonely bed (S.S.A.A.)... ..	3d.	WEELKES. *Nightingale, The. (S.S.A.) ... ..	3d.
*GIBBONS, ORLANDO. The silver swan. (S.S.A.A.) ... ..	2d.	WILBYE. *Seek sweet content, (S.S.A.) Adapted from the madrigal—"Fly love, to heaven!" ... ..	2d.

* Unaccompanied.

UNISON SONG FOR MASSED VOICES.

Words by WHITTIER.

WORSHIP.
PRICE TWOPENCE.

Music by GEOFFREY SHAW.

Specimens of every kind of music will be forwarded on application. To ensure a satisfactory selection, the Syllabus of the last Festival should accompany the request.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

FOUR ENGLISH DANCES

SET 1.

COMPOSED BY

FREDERIC H. COWEN.

	s.	d.
Full Score ... ..	16	0
String Parts ... ..	9	0
Wind Parts ... ..	17	8
Ditto (small orchestra) ... ..	13	2
Military Band ... ..	19	0
Pianoforte Solo ... ..	4	0
Violin and Pianoforte ... ..	4	6
Quintet (Pianoforte and Strings) ... .. each	4	0
Extra Strings, 8d. each.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

OLD ENGLISH DANCES

SET 2.

COMPOSED BY

FREDERIC H. COWEN.

	s.	d.
Full Score ... ..	25	0
String Parts ... ..	14	3
Wind Parts ... ..	30	3
Pianoforte Solo ... ..	4	0
From the above: "MINUET D'AMOUR."
Pianoforte Solo, 2s. 3d.; Violin and Pianoforte, 3s.;
Quintet for Pianoforte and Strings, 4s.
Extra Strings, 8d. each.
Full Score ... ..	5	6
String Parts ... ..	2	0
Wind Parts ... ..	3	8
Military Band ... ..	7	6

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

FOUR CHARACTERISTIC WALTZES

1. VALSE BOHEMIENNE.

3. VALSE DE LA REINE.

2. VALSE RUSTIQUE.

4. VALSE MAURESQUE.

COMPOSED BY

S. COLERIDGE-TAYLOR.

(Op. 22).

PIANOFORTE SOLO.

PRICE, COMPLETE, FOUR SHILLINGS; SEPARATELY, 2s. 3d. EACH.

	s.	d.		s.	d.
Violin and Pianoforte ... .. complete	4	6	Full Score (Full Orchestra)...	11	6
Violin and Pianoforte ... .. separately, each	2	3	Full Score (Small Orchestra), MS.
String Parts for Full or Small Orchestra ... ..	9	0	Arrangements, as Quintets, for Pianoforte and
Wind Parts for Small Orchestra ... ..	10	5	Strings, each Number ... ..	3	0
Ditto, for Full Orchestra ... ..	17	5	Separate String Parts, 8d. each.
			Military Band Arrangement ... ..	19	0

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

PATERSON PUBLICATIONS

FOR CHORAL AND OPERATIC SOCIETIES.

IN THE PRESS.

J. S. BACH

THE Peasant Cantata

SOPRANO, BARITONE, CHORUS,
AND ORCHESTRA.

Staff ... 3/-
Sol-fa ... 1/6
Choruses ... 1/6

EQUALLY SUITABLE
FOR STAGE OR CONCERT
PERFORMANCE.

SPECIAL BALLET MUSIC is being prepared, selected from BACH'S
FRENCH AND ENGLISH SUITES.

J. S. BACH

THE Coffee Cantata

SOPRANO, TENOR, BARITONE,
CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA

Staff ... 2/6
Sol-fa ... 1/-
Choruses ... 1/-

FESTIVAL

CHURCH CHOIRS

BY H. WALFORD DAVIES.

BOOKLETS

Price 1/-

TWELVE
BOOKLETS.

ADVICE
TO COMPETITORS
BY LEADING ADJUDICATORS.

FESTIVAL

CHOIR SINGING

BY
H. S. ROBERTON.

BOOKLETS

Price 2/-

IN THE PRESS.

J. S. BACH

THE Hundredth Psalm

ARRANGED BY IVOR ATKINS
AND

J. MICHAEL DIACK.
FOR SEMI-CHORUS AND CHORUS.

Staff, 2/- Sol-fa, 1/-

HAMISH MacCUNN'S
Bonny Kilmeny

SOLI, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA.

Staff, 2/6 Sol-fa, 1/-

TWENTY-FOUR

English Hymns

ADAPTED TO

BACH'S CHORALES.

Complete, 2/-

In 12 numbers, either notation,
3d. each.

TO CHORAL CONDUCTORS:

We are always pleased to send single copies on Sale or Return.

PATERSON, SONS & CO., Ltd., GLASGOW, 152, Buchanan Street.

JOSEPH WILLIAMS LIMITED.

(ESTABLISHED 1808.)

SPECIAL OFFER THE OLD ENGLISH EDITION

EDITED BY J. E. P. ARKWRIGHT.

A unique collection of 25 volumes of a series of Vocal Works of OLD ENGLISH COMPOSERS,

Including: Dr. Arne, George Kirbye, Wm. Byrd, Thos. Weelkes, Francis Pilkington, Robt. White, Dr. J. Blow, &c.

Each volume is accompanied by Introductions and Biographical Notices, the whole edition comprising over 1,500 pages of music and text.

Secure this Beautiful Collection on the Instalment plan.

SIR RICHARD R. TERRY, in The Queen, says: "But the greatest work for English music—to my mind—was the enterprise of Joseph Williams in publishing their 'Old English Edition' of nearly 200 works by Tudor and Jacobean composers, under the editorship of that consummate scholar, J. E. P. Arkwright."

Write for complete list and particulars at once.

Address: OLD ENGLISH EDITION—

London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS LTD., 32, Great Portland Street, W.1.

EURHYTHM: THOUGHT IN ACTION

The Principles and Practice of Vocal and Physical Therapy.

DESIGNED FOR THE USE OF TEACHERS AND STUDENTS OF VOCAL AND PHYSICAL EDUCATION

By H. H. HULBERT

CAPT. R.A.M.C., M.A. OXFORD, M.R.C.S., L.R.C.P., ETC.

176 Pages, Octavo Size, Cloth, Gilt Lettered - - - - PRICE SEVEN SHILLINGS NET.

SHORT SYNOPSIS OF CHAPTERS.

I.—DEFINITION OF EURHYTHM. II.—THE ENGLISH PHYSIQUE AND ARTISTIC MOVEMENT. Science and games of skill—Movements of novice and master-man—Co-ordination in movement—Discipline of games. III.—THE POISE OF THE BODY AND TONICITY. Common deformities—Correct poise—Correct figure—Lumbar curve the centre of balance—Degrees of tonicity—Position of attention—Special exercises. IV.—THE SCIENCE OF APPRECIATION AND THE CONCEPTION OF THE BEAUTIFUL. Power of imagery—Knowledge of self—Kinds of appreciation—The five senses and experience—Sense of touch in music and games. V.—THE ART OF EXPRESSION AND CONTROL. Three nervous levels—Will and movement—The guiding sensation of movement—feeling—Self-control of the actor and public speaker—Euphonetics. VI.—THE CENTRAL APPARATUS OF SPEECH. VII.—THE SOUNDS OF THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE. VIII.—BREATHING FOR VOICE. Diagrammatic sketch of apparatus—Different kinds of breathing—Effects of types of breathing on voice hygiene and figure. IX.—THE ARTICULATORY APPARATUS. X.—THE LARYNX. XI.—HYGIENE FOR VOICE-USERS AND ORDINARY HEALTH EXERCISES. Voice-user's throat—Physiological congestion of throat—Voice-training prevents voice-user's throat—Loss of health through civilization—Physical exercises for health—Positions: movements of arms, head, body, and legs; balance exercises, jumping, and marching. XII.—EURHYTHMICS.—THE PRACTICE OF EURHYTHMICS.

"It was very much wanted, and now that it has arrived it proves to be the best book on the subject we have ever seen. . . . One would like to dwell lovingly on every stage of this monumental work did space permit, but it will only allow of a general commendation of every word from the beginning . . . to the end, which consists of music to accompany the rhythmic physical exercises."—The Morning Post, February 17, 1922.

"No teacher of singing should be without this wonderful book."—Musical Opinion.

"This is a thoughtful and thought-compelling book which touches life at most points. Eurhythm the author defines as perfect harmony, and discusses with a fine enthusiasm the practical means of bringing about in the individual this desirable condition. The book should be of great value to teachers of singing and physical education, while the intelligent student can also derive great benefit from a careful reading."—Glasgow Herald.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

AN EVENING HYMN

ON A GROUND

("NOW THAT THE SUN")

WORDS BY

DR. WILLIAM FULLER

MELODY AND BASS BY

HENRY PURCELL

EDITED AND AN ACCOMPANIMENT WRITTEN BY

HARVEY GRACE.

TWO KEYS

Price ... Two Shillings each.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JUST PUBLISHED.

THE SHAFTS OF CUPID

SONG.

THE WORDS BY

FRED G. BOWLES.

THE MUSIC BY

PERCY E. FLETCHER.

IN THREE KEYS.

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS EACH.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

ORGANISTS, PLEASE NOTE!

EIGHT USEFUL TRANSCRIPTIONS—
by well-known Organist Composers.

There is a widespread call for organ arrangements of popular classics that have been brought up to date with a view to meeting the requirements of the player of the modern organ. The organist of average ability can get good results from works which, though perhaps not originally intended for the organ, lend themselves admirably to effective playing on that instrument. The eight famous works enumerated below have been arranged with care and artistic insight by eminent composer-organists of the day in such a manner as to obtain the best results whether played on large or small organs.

'Londonderry Air,' arranged by J. Stuart Archer, price 1s.; 'Minuet in G minor,' Handel, price 1s.; 'Slow Movement from "Moonlight Sonata",' Beethoven, price 1s.; 'Aria from Suite in D,' Bach, price 9d.; 'Minuet from E flat Symphony,' Mozart, price 1s.; 'Marche aux Flambeaux,' Scotson-Clark, price 1s.; 'Largo,' Handel, price 9d.; 'Fingal's Cave' Overture, Mendelssohn, price 2s., Grade: Easy to Moderately Difficult.

VARIATIONS OF DISTINCTION—

Two Sets by J. STUART ARCHER.

Dedicated to the famous French organist, Marcel Dupré, and played by him at the opening of the Westminster Cathedral organ, 'Five Short Variations on a Scots Air' are at once scholarly and musically attractive. The composer, who is well known for this type of work, has taken the familiar tune 'Gala Water,' and draped around it a decorative dressing admirable in form and development, and showing a fund of inventive resource.

In 'Six Short Variations on an Irish Air' the theme employed is the traditional tune to which the hymn 'At the marriage-feast in Cana' is sung in the Decies part of the province of Munster. The original air which the composer gives out in his introduction is an appealing lento theme. This is next developed in an Andante, which gives place to a Duet, followed by a Scherzino and Fughetta. The original theme is then restated in the form of a Romance, with added beauty in chordal development, ending in a spirited Finale in toccata form.

'Five Short Variations on a Scots Air' ('Gala Water'). Price 2s.

'Six Short Variations on an Irish Air.' Price 2s. 6d. Both of Moderate Difficulty.

TWO ORGAN WORKS OF MERIT—

'Carillon' and 'Cradle Song,'

By PURCELL J. MANSFIELD.

Mr. Purcell J. Mansfield enjoys an enviable reputation as organist and composer, and he has produced a considerable number of popular organ works of good style. These two works are in his happiest vein. In 'Carillon,' a toccata theme, the bell impression is cleverly suggested, an effective touch being lent by a re-statement of the opening Allegro in Maestoso tempo as a finale. 'Cradle Song' is a melodious inspiration in which notable use is made of the flute and oboe stops.

'Carillon,' Grade: Moderate. Price 2s. 'Cradle Song,' Grade: Moderately Easy. Price 1s. 6d.

'EIGHT SHORT PIECES FOR ORGAN'—

A useful album for players needing pedal practice, by J. STUART ARCHER.

This volume is designed to fill an undoubted gap in organ music for unadvanced players by the use of easy and progressive pedal obligatos. As the composer points out, beginners at the organ usually possess a certain amount of manual technique, but directly the simplest pedal obligato is added they find themselves faced with a difficulty which is only overcome after a considerable amount of sustained effort. To provide those who are not gifted with over much application with some readily mastered pieces, as well as to encourage those who find their first steps in serious study irksome, Mr. Stuart Archer has written eight well-varied and tuneful pieces—'Quasi Minuetto,' 'Moderato in D,' 'Andante in F,' 'Ostinato,' 'Andante in G,' 'Wedding Song,' 'Romance,' and 'March in C.' Though the pedal part is rendered as simple as possible the music as a whole is of a calibre to repay serious attention.

'Eight Short Pieces with Easy and Progressive Pedal Obligatos' (2-7 notes), by J. Stuart Archer. Grade: Moderately Easy to Moderate. Price 3s.

The above publications can be obtained of all Music Dealers or the Publishers:—

W. PAXTON & CO., LTD., 22, HIGH STREET.

NEW OXFORD STREET, LONDON, W.C.1.

Send for complete Organ Catalogue, C. 501, post free. Ask to see copies through our 'On Approval' department.

JOHN SEBASTIAN BACH

48 PRELUDES AND FUGUES

(THE WELL-TEMPERED CLAVICHORD)

A NEW EDITION, EDITED BY HAROLD BROOKE.

IN TWO PARTS.

Price Four Shillings each.

Or, Complete, Cloth, Price Twelve Shillings and Sixpence.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

ORIGINAL COMPOSITIONS FOR THE ORGAN. (NEW SERIES.)

No.	RECENT NUMBERS	s. d.
76.	TOCCATA AND FUGUE ("The Wanderer") C. Hubert H. Parry	3 6
77.	ANDANTE RELIGIOSO ... .. Alec Rowley	1 6
78.	SCHERZO ... .. G. J. Bennett	2 3
79.	THREE PRELUDES ... .. G. J. Bennett	2 3
80.	DÉSÉSPOIR ... .. Ch. Quef	1 6
81.	CAPRICE IN D FLAT ... .. J. A. Sowerbutts	2 3
82.	THREE PSALM-PRELUDES, No. 1 ... .. H. Howells	1 6
83.	" " " No. 2 ... .. H. Howells	1 6
84.	" " " No. 3 ... .. H. Howells	1 6
85.	THEMA OSTINATA ... .. C. C. Palmer	1 6
86.	COVENANTERS' MARCH... .. R. G. Hailing	1 6
87.	CHORAL MELODY ... .. C. F. Waters	1 6
88.	CONCERT OVERTURE IN F MINOR ... .. Alfred Hollins	3 0
89.	HOMAGE TO HANDEL ... .. S. Karg-Elert	3 6
90.	THREE SHORT AND EASY POSTLUDES (2nd Set) F. W. Wadely	2 3
91.	INTERMEZZI (No. 1, Pastorale) ... .. C. V. Stanford	2 0
92.	" (No. 2, Marcia Eroica) ... .. C. V. Stanford	2 0
93.	" (No. 3, Hush Song) ... .. C. V. Stanford	2 0
94.	" (No. 4, Intermezzo Founded upon an Irish air) ... .. C. V. Stanford	2 0
95.	CHORAL IMPROVISATION ON "DER HÖLLE PFORTEN SIND ZERSTÖRT" ... .. S. Karg-Elert	2 0
96.	CHORAL IMPROVISATION ON "GELOBT SEI GOTT IM HÖCHSTEN THRON" ... .. S. Karg-Elert	2 0
97.	SEVEN PASTELS FROM THE LAKE OF CONSTANCE S. Karg-Elert	5 6
98.	PRELUDE AND FUGUE IN C ... .. C. V. Stanford	2 0
99.	PRELUDE AND FUGUE IN C MINOR ... .. C. V. Stanford	2 0
100.	PRELUDE AND FUGUE IN B MINOR ... .. C. V. Stanford	2 0
101.	VARIATIONS ON AN OLD ENGLISH MELODY ("Heartsease") Geoffrey Shaw	2 0

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

A LITTLE ORGAN BOOK

IN MEMORY OF

HUBERT PARRY.

A Collection of Pieces for the Organ, including a hitherto unpublished work by the late

SIR C. HUBERT H. PARRY.

The following composers have contributed to this memorial Publication:

WALTER G. ALCOCK. IVOR ATKINS. G. THALBEN BALL.
A. HERBERT BREWER. FRANK BRIDGE. HAROLD DARKE.
H. WALFORD DAVIES. ALAN GRAY. HENRY G. LEY.
CHARLES MACPHERSON. CHARLES V. STANFORD. CHARLES WOOD.

Cloth Gilt, 10s. 6d. net. Paper Boards, 6s. 6d. net.

From all Music Sellers, or the Publishers,

H. F. W. DEANE & SONS

The Year Book Press Limited,

31, MUSEUM STREET, LONDON, W.C.1.

THE SINGER'S ART.

A. J. LARKCOM, F.R.A.M.

MANUAL FOR SINGERS AND TEACHERS.

Recommended for Study for the L.R.A.M. Teacher's Diploma.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

ENGLISH LYRICS

SET TO MUSIC BY

C. HUBERT H. PARRY.

EACH SET, PRICE FOUR SHILLINGS

FIRST SET.

- |                                    |                          |                                   |                    |
|------------------------------------|--------------------------|-----------------------------------|--------------------|
| 1. *My true love hath my heart ... | Sir Philip Sidney | 3. Where shall the lover rest ... | Scott       |
| 2. Good-night ...                  | Shelley           | 4. Willow, Willow, Willow ...     | Shakespeare |

SECOND SET.

- |                                      |                    |                                     |                    |
|--------------------------------------|--------------------|-------------------------------------|--------------------|
| 1. O Mistress Mine ...               | Shakespeare | 3. No longer mourn for me ...       | Shakespeare |
| 2. Take, O take those lips away ...  | Shakespeare | 4. Blow, blow, thou winter wind ... | Shakespeare |
| 5. When icicles hang by the wall ... | Shakespeare |                                     |                    |

THIRD SET.

- |  |                 |                               |                       |
|--|-----------------|-------------------------------|-----------------------|
| 1. *To Lucasta, on going to the wars ... | Lovelace | 4. *Why so pale and wan ...   | Suckling       |
| 2. If thou would'st ease thine heart ... | Beddoes  | 5. Through the ivory gate ... | Julian Sturgis |
| 3. *To Althea, from prison ...           | Lovelace | 6. Of all the torments ...    | William Walsh  |

FOURTH SET.

- |  |                               |  |              |
|--|-------------------------------|--|--------------|
| 1. *Thine eyes still shined for me ... | Emerson                | 4. Weep you no more ...                    | Anon. |
| 2. *When lovers meet again ...         | Langdon Elwyn Mitchell | 5. There be none of beauty's daughters ... | Byron |
| 3. *When we two parted ...             | Byron                  | 6. Bright star ...                         | Keats |

FIFTH SET.

- |                               |                       |                                   |                                |
|-------------------------------|-----------------------|-----------------------------------|--------------------------------|
| 1. *A stray nymph of Dian ... | Julian Sturgis | 4. Lay a garland on my hearse ... | Beaumont &amp; Fletcher |
| 2. *Proud Maisie ...          | Scott          | 5. Love and laughter ...          | Arthur Butler           |
| 3. *Crabbed age and youth ... | Shakespeare    | 6. A girl to her glass ...        | Julian Sturgis          |
| 7. A Lullaby ...              | E. O. Jones    |                                   |                                |

SIXTH SET.

- |                                       |                    |                                      |                         |
|---------------------------------------|--------------------|--------------------------------------|-------------------------|
| 1. *When comes my Gwen ...            | E. O. Jones | 4. *A lover's garland ...            | Alfred P. Graves |
| 2. *And yet I love her till I die ... | Anon.       | 5. At the hour the long day ends ... | Alfred P. Graves |
| 3. *Love is a bable ...               | Anon.       | 6. Under the greenwood tree ...      | Shakespeare      |

SEVENTH SET.

- |  |                       |  |                       |
|--|-----------------------|--|-----------------------|
| 1. On a time the amorous Silvy ...       | Anon.          | 4. O never say that I was false of heart ... | Shakespeare    |
| 2. Follow a shadow ...                   | Ben Jonson     | 5. Julia ...                                 | Herrick        |
| 3. Ye little birds that sit and sing ... | Thomas Heywood | 6. *Sleep ...                                | Julian Sturgis |

EIGHTH SET.

- |                            |                               |                         |                        |
|----------------------------|-------------------------------|-------------------------|------------------------|
| 1. Whence ...              | Julian Sturgis         | 4. Dirge in woods ...   | George Meredith |
| 2. Nightfall in winter ... | Langdon Elwyn Mitchell | 5. Looking backward ... | Julian Sturgis  |
| 3. Marian ...              | George Meredith        | 6. Grapes ...           | Julian Sturgis  |

NINTH SET.

- |                                    |                          |                        |                          |
|------------------------------------|--------------------------|------------------------|--------------------------|
| 1. Three aspects ...               | Mary E. Coleridge | 4. Whether I live ...  | Mary E. Coleridge |
| 2. A fairy town (St. Andrew's) ... | Mary E. Coleridge | 5. Armida's garden ... | Mary E. Coleridge |
| 3. The witches' wood ...           | Mary E. Coleridge | 6. *The maiden ...     | Mary E. Coleridge |
| 7. There ...                       | Mary E. Coleridge |                        |                          |

TENTH SET.

- |  |                           |                                   |                               |
|--|---------------------------|-----------------------------------|-------------------------------|
| 1. My heart is like a singing bird ... | Christina Rossetti | 4. The child and the twilight ... | Langdon Elwyn Mitchell |
| 2. Gone were but the winter cold ...   | Allan Cunningham   | 5. From a city window ...         | Langdon Elwyn Mitchell |
| 3. A moment of farewell ...            | Julian Sturgis     | 6. One silent night of late ...   | Herrick                |

ELEVENTH SET.

- |                                    |                               |  |                               |
|------------------------------------|-------------------------------|--|-------------------------------|
| 1. One golden thread ...           | Julia Chatterton       | 5. The faithful lover ...                | Alfred Perceval Graves |
| 2. The spirit of the Spring ...    | Alfred Perceval Graves | 6. If I might ride on puissant wing ...  | Julian Sturgis         |
| 3. What part of dread eternity ... | Author unknown         | 7. Why art thou slow ...                 | Massinger              |
| 4. The blackbird ...               | Alfred Perceval Graves | 8. She is my love beyond all thought ... | Alfred P. Graves       |

TWELFTH SET.

- |                                  |                         |                                 |                  |
|----------------------------------|-------------------------|---------------------------------|------------------|
| 1. When the dew is falling ...   | Julia Chatterton | 4. When the sun's great orb ... | H. Warner |
| 2. To Blossoms ...               | Herrick          | 5. Dream pedlary ...            | Beddoes   |
| 3. Rosaline ...                  | Lodge            | 6. O World, O Life, O Time ...  | Shelley   |
| 7. The sound of hidden music ... | Julia Chatterton |                                 |                  |

* Published separately, price 1s. 6d.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

NEW YORK: THE H. W. GRAY CO., SOLE AGENTS FOR THE U.S.A.

NOVELLO'S HANDBOOKS FOR MUSICIANS.

EDITED BY ERNEST NEWMAN.

CHORAL TECHNIQUE AND INTERPRETATION

BY

HENRY COWARD.

MUS. DOCT., OXON.

*Published as a Net Book.Price, Cloth, gilt, Seven Shillings and Sixpence net.*THE TEACHING AND ACCOMPANIMENT OF PLAINSONG

BY

FRANCIS BURGESS.

*Published as a Net Book.Price, Cloth, gilt, Five Shillings and Sixpence net.*THE Interpretation of the Music of the 17th & 18th Centuries

AS REVEALED BY CONTEMPORARY EVIDENCE

BY

ARNOLD DOLMETSCH.

Published as a Net Book.Price, Cloth, gilt, Fifteen Shillings net.

APPENDIX

CONTAINING TWENTY-TWO ILLUSTRATIVE PIECES.

*Price Five Shillings and Sixpence.*THE SOURCES OF KEYBOARD MUSIC IN ENGLAND

BY

CHARLES VAN DEN BORREN.

Professor of the Université Nouvelle of Brussels.

TRANSLATED FROM THE FRENCH BY

JAMES E. MATTHEW.

Published as a Net Book.Price, Cloth, gilt, Ten Shillings and Sixpence net.

THE THEORY OF HARMONY

An Inquiry into the Natural Principles of Harmony, with an examination of the chief systems of Harmony from Rameau to the present day.

BY

MATTHEW SHIRLAW,

MUS.D., F.R.C.O.

(Lecturer in Music, University of Edinburgh, &c.)Published as a Net Book.Price, Cloth, gilt, Fifteen Shillings net.

THE ORGAN WORKS OF BACH

BY

HARVEY GRACE.

With an Introduction by ERNEST NEWMAN.

Published as a Net Book.Price, Cloth, Nine Shillings net.

LONDON : NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

COMPOSITIONS BY EDWARD ELGAR.

INSTRUMENTAL.

ORGAN.

ADAGIO from Symphony in A flat (Op. 55)	...	s. d.	3 0
CANTIQUE (Op. 3, No. 1)	...	2 3
CANTO POPOLARE (In Moonlight) (from Op. 50)	...	3 0
CHANSON DE MATIN (Op. 15, No. 2)	...	3 0
CHANSON DE NUIT (Op. 15, No. 1)	...	3 0
CONTRASTS (The Gavotte) (Op. 10, No. 3)	...	2 3
CORONATION MARCH (1911) (Op. 65)	...	3 6
ELEGY (Op. 58)	...	1 6
FUNERAL MARCH ("Grania and Diarmid") (Op. 42)	...	3 0
IMPERIAL MARCH (Op. 32)	...	3 0
INTRODUCTION to Part II. of "The Apostles" (Op. 49)	...	2 3
MEDITATION ("The Light of Life") (Op. 29)	...	1 6
PIACEVOLE (from String Quartet in E minor) (Op. 83)	...	3 0
PRELUDE AND ANGEL'S FAREWELL ("Gerontius") (Op. 38)	...	3 0
PRELUDE ("The Kingdom") (Op. 51)	...	3 0
SLOW MOVEMENT (from the Concerto for Violin and Orchestra) (Op. 61)	...	3 0
SOLEMN MARCH ("The Black Knight") (Op. 25)	...	1 6
THEMES from Symphony in A flat (Op. 55). (First Movement)	...	3 0
TRIUMPHAL MARCH ("Caractacus") (Op. 35)	...	3 0

PIANOFORTE SOLO.

CANTO POPOLARE (In Moonlight), arranged from the Concert Overture "In the South" (Op. 50)	...	s. d.	3 0
CHANSON DE MATIN (Op. 15, No. 2)	...	2 3
CHANSON DE NUIT (Op. 15, No. 1)	...	2 3
CORONATION MARCH (1911) (Op. 65)	...	3 0
FROISSART (Concert-Overture) (Op. 19)	...	3 6
FUNERAL MARCH ("Grania and Diarmid") (Op. 42)	...	3 0
IMPERIAL MARCH (Op. 32)	...	3 0
INTERMEZZO ("Dorabella") (from Op. 36)	...	3 0
IN THE SOUTH ("Alassio"). Concert-Overture (Op. 50)	...	4 6
MEDITATION ("The Light of Life") (Op. 29)	...	3 0
PRELUDE AND ANGEL'S FAREWELL ("Gerontius") (Op. 38)	...	3 0
SERENADE (Wand of Youth, First Suite) (Op. 1A)	...	2 3
SYMPHONY in A flat, No. 1 (Op. 55)	...	11 6
SYMPHONY in E flat, No. 2 (Op. 63)	...	11 6
THREE PIECES (Op. 10):— 1. Mazurka 2. Sérénade Mauresque. 3. Contrasts.	each	3 0
TWO INTERLUDES (from "Falstaff") (Op. 68)	...	3 0
VARIATIONS ON AN ORIGINAL THEME (Op. 36)	...	5 6
WAND OF YOUTH, THE (Music to a Child's Play), First Suite (Op. 1A)	...	4 6
Ditto, Second Suite (Op. 1B)	...	4 6

PIANOFORTE DUET.

INTERMEZZO ("Dorabella") (from Op. 36)	...	s. d.	3 0
IN THE SOUTH ("Alassio"). Concert-Overture. (Op. 50)	...	7 6
INTRODUCTION AND ALLEGRO for Strings (Op. 47)	...	6 0
SYMPHONY in A flat, No. 1 (Op. 55)	...	16 0
SYMPHONY IN E FLAT, No. 2 (Op. 63)	...	16 0
VARIATIONS ON AN ORIGINAL THEME (Op. 36)	...	9 0

VIOLIN AND PIANOFORTE.

CANTO POPOLARE (In Moonlight), arranged from the Concert-Overture "In the South" (Op. 50)	...	s. d.	3 0
CHANSON DE MATIN (Op. 15, No. 2)	...	3 0
CHANSON DE NUIT (Op. 15, No. 1)	...	2 3
CONCERTO (Op. 61)	...	11 6
MAZURKA (Op. 10, No. 1)	...	3 0
ROMANCE (from Sonata, Op. 82)	...	3 0
SERENADE (Wand of Youth, First Suite) (Op. 1A)	...	3 0
SONATA (Op. 82)	...	9 0

VIOLA AND PIANOFORTE.

CANTO POPOLARE (In Moonlight), arranged from the Concert-Overture "In the South" (Op. 50)	...	s. d.	3 0
CHANSON DE NUIT (Op. 15, No. 1)	...	2 3

CELLO AND PIANOFORTE.

CANTO POPOLARE (In Moonlight), arranged from the Concert-Overture "In the South" (Op. 50)	...	s. d.	3 0
CHANSON DE MATIN (Op. 15, No. 2)	...	3 0
CHANSON DE NUIT (Op. 15, No. 1)	...	2 3
CONCERTO IN E MINOR (Op. 85)	...	9 0
ROMANCE (Op. 62)	...	3 6
SERENADE (Wand of Youth, First Suite) (Op. 1A)	...	3 0

CLARINET & PIANOFORTE.

CANTO POPOLARE (In Moonlight), arranged from the Concert-Overture "In the South" (Op. 50)	...	s. d.	3 0
---	-----	-------	-----

BASSOON & PIANOFORTE.

ROMANCE (Op. 62)	...	s. d.	3 6
------------------	-----	-------	-----

NEW ALBUM OF NINE SACRED SONGS

Contents :

GOD'S GARDEN
(FRANK LAMBERT)

LEAD, KINDLY LIGHT
(SAMUEL LIDDLE)

ALL THROUGH THE NIGHT.
(LORD HENRY SOMERSET)

GREAT LORD OF LIFE
(FLORENCE AYLWARD)

GOD'S LILY
(HOPE TEMPLE)

GOD AND GOD ALONE IS LOVE
(WARD-STEPHENS)

O LOVING FATHER
(TERESA DEL RIEGO)

NEARER TO THEE
(ARTHUR E. GODFREY)

HARK! MY SOUL, IT IS THE LORD.
(CHARLES GOUNOD)

THE COMPLETE ALBUM, PRICE 2s. 6d. NET.
(By Post, 2s. 8d.).

CHAPPELL & Co., Ltd., 50, New Bond Street, LONDON, W.1.

Public and Press alike have been so quick to recognise the exceptional qualities of the first two volumes of these settings of Shakespearean lyrics by one of the most distinguished modern Italian composers, that the second series now published comes into the world fully assured of success.

MARIO CASTELNUOVO-TEDESCO SHAKESPEARE SONGS (SECOND SERIES)

BOOK III.

1. ORPHEUS, from "Henry VIII."
2. SYLVIA, from "The Two Gentlemen of Verona."
3. FOR THE RAIN IT RAINETH EVERY DAY, from "Twelfth Night."

BOOK IV.

1. SIGH NO MORE, LADIES, from "Much Ado About Nothing."
2. SEALS OF LOVE, from "Measure for Measure."
3. O MISTRESS MINE, from "Twelfth Night."

Price, each Volume, 3s. net.

The Critic of the "Musical Times" speaks in the following terms of the first series :

"There is far more frank tune than one expects from a member of the new Italian school, though the tune has often little apparent connection with the harmony. Strange and delightful things are done over an inverted pedal point in "Come away, Death," bell effects play an important part in "Tell me where is fancy bred"; there are ad lib. parts for triangle and female chorus in "Ye spotted snakes"; "Under the Greenwood Tree" is practically a string of softly jangling sevenths with suggestions of the cuckoo; the setting of "Blow, blow" has a more bitter flavour than our own composers give it, and the winter wind does not brace and stimulate, being of the moaning sort that gets into your bones. It is graphically suggested by quiet, rapid passages in the accompaniment, largely in fifths, pp, triste e monotono, with a cuckoo call thrown up at intervals. The refrain, "this life is most jolly," sounds satirical, and even the cuckoo call has a touch of liver. This setting is not Shakespearean, but it is a striking piece of work and a welcome relief from some of our native versions, which fuss and bluster without saying much. "It was a Lover and his Lass" has a capital tune, and a pianoforte part that will delight good players. A really engaging set of songs, full of character."

J. & W. CHESTER, LTD., 11, Great Marlborough Street, London, W.1.

THE MUSICAL TIMES

AND SINGING-CLASS CIRCULAR

FOUNDED IN 1844

PUBLISHED ON THE FIRST OF EVERY MONTH

No. 977.—Vol. 65

Registered at the General Post
Office for Canadian Postage

JULY 1 1924

Price 6d.; Postage 2d.

Annual Subscription, post-free, 7s. 6d.

ROYAL CHORAL SOCIETY.

Patron: HIS MAJESTY THE KING.

General Conductor: MR. H. L. BALFOUR, Mus. Bac.

(Season 1924—1925.)

There are now VACANCIES in the CHOIR for SOPRANOS, CONTRALTOS, TENORS, and BASSES. Applicants should have STRONG VOICES OF GOOD QUALITY, and must be prepared to pass an examination in SIGHT-READING. Address, The Secretary, Royal Choral Society, Royal Albert Hall, S.W.7

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

YORK GATE, MARYLEBONE ROAD, LONDON, N.W.1.

Instituted 1822. Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1830.

Patron: HIS MAJESTY THE KING.

President: H.R.H. THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT, K.G.

Principal: Sir A. C. MACKENZIE, K.C.V.O., Mus. Doc., F.R.C.M.

Acting-Principal: JOHN B. McEWEN, M.A., F.R.A.M.

ORCHESTRAL CONCERT, Queen's Hall, Friday, July 11, at 3. PLEASE NOTE SECOND CHANGE OF DATE.

DISTRIBUTION OF PRIZES by H.R.H. The DUKE OF CONNAUGHT, K.G., will take place at Queen's Hall, on Thursday, July 24, at 2.30; not at 3 o'clock on the 25th, as announced in the Calendar.

SCHOLARSHIPS in the following subjects will be competed for in September: Composition, Singing, Pianoforte, Organ, Violin, and Violoncello. LAST DAY FOR ENTRY, JULY 28.

CHAMBER CONCERTS Wednesday, July 9, and Tuesday, July 22, at 3.

FORTNIGHTLY CONCERT, Saturday, July 12, at 8.

L.R.A.M. September Examination. Entries will be accepted up to July 15, on payment of a late fee of 5s.

J. A. CREIGHTON, Secretary.

THE ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

PRINCE CONSORT ROAD, SOUTH KENSINGTON, S.W.7.

(Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1883.)

Patron: HIS MAJESTY THE KING.

President: H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, K.G.

Director: Sir HUGH P. ALLEN, M.A., Mus. Doc.

Honorary Secretary: GEORGE A. MACMILLAN, Esq., D.Litt.

Registrar: CLAUDE AVELING, Esq., M.A.

The College offers a Complete Course of Musical Education to pupils of both sexes, both professional and amateur. Upwards of seventy Scholarships and Exhibitions are founded which provide free musical education.

SPECIAL CLASSES for CONDUCTING and TRAINING of TEACHERS have been instituted.

The OPERATIC and BALLET CLASSES have the use of the fully equipped College OPERA THEATRE with SUNKEN ORCHESTRA.

Examinations for the Associateship of the College (A.R.C.M.) in all subjects held three times a year in December, April, and September.

MANCHESTER SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

Principal: ALBERT J. CROSS, A.R.A.M.

FOUNDED 1892.

The oldest Institution in Manchester devoted solely to the interests of Music.

All branches of Music taught. Day and Evening Private Lessons. Opera Class. Full Orchestral Class. Intermediate and Elementary String Orchestras, Classes for Ensemble Playing, Elocution, Choral Singing, Harmony, &c.

Single Subjects taught. Prospectus from 16, Albert Square.

Guildhall School of Music.

(CORPORATION OF LONDON.)

VICTORIA EMBANKMENT, E.C.4.

PRINCIPAL: SIR LONDON RONALD, F.R.A.M., F.R.C.M., &c.

PRIVATE LESSONS in all Musical Subjects, and STAGE TRAINING in Elocution, Gesture, Dancing, Opera.

Complete Musical Education at inclusive fees, £9 9s. and £12 12s. Opera Class, Saturdays. Special Training Course for Teachers (approved by Teachers' Registration Council).

Prospectus and Syllabus of Local Centres and Schools Examinations (open to general public) free.

Telephone: Cent. 4459. H. SAXE WYNDHAM, Secretary.

The Royal College of Organists.

The DISTRIBUTION OF DIPLOMAS by the President, Dr. ALAN GRAY, will take place on Saturday, July 19th, at 11 o'clock.

ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING, 11.45.

Regulations, list of College Publications, Lectures, &c., may be had on application.

The College is open daily from 10 to 4; Saturdays, 10 to 1.

Examples indicating the character and approximate difficulty of the NEW TESTS, to be set for the first time at the July, 1924, Examinations, may now be obtained at the College.

Associateship or Fellowship, 6d. each (post free).

H. A. HARDING, Hon. Secretary.

Kensington Gore, S.W.7.

ROYAL

MANCHESTER COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

Founded 1893. Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1923.

Patron: HER MAJESTY QUEEN ALEXANDRA.

President: H.R.H. THE DUKE OF YORK, K.G.

Principal: Dr. ADOLPH BRODSKY.

Registrar: STANLEY WITHERS, M.A.

Students are required to enter upon a complete course of Musical instruction, and are not admitted for a shorter period than one year.

Fee for the year, £36. Special fee for Organ Course, £30, and for Wind Instrument Course, £18.

Systematic Course for the Training of Teachers included in the curriculum.

The Prospectus, with Scholarship information, Diploma Regulations, and Entry Forms, on application.

ROYAL

MANCHESTER COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

PROFESSORSHIP of the PIANO VACANT in January next. Residence in Manchester preferred. Only candidates with highest credentials invited to apply. Particulars from The Registrar.

MR. HERBERT HODGE will give an Organ Recital (1,819th), at St. Nicholas Cole Abbey, on July 1, and every Tuesday at 1 p.m.

96 and 95, WIMPOLE STREET, W.1.

TOBIAS MATTHAY PIANOFORTE SCHOOL

Instruction under his teachers, and under his own supervision.

Open to Professionals and Amateurs, and also to Children.

The Staff consists of thirty-nine senior Professors of thorough experience and platform reputation, all trained by the founder.

Special Short Courses for Teachers during term and vacation.

LECTURE-LESSON Class by Mr. MATTHAY on the practical teaching of Technique and Interpretation, diagnosis and correction of faults, musical analysis and synthesis, &amp;c., alternate Wednesday evenings.

Mr. FREDERICK MOORE takes alternate Wednesdays.

COMPLETE TRAINING COURSE FOR TEACHERS.
(Approved by the Teachers' Registration Council.)

This ONE-YEAR Course may be joined at the beginning of ANY TERM.

For further particulars please apply, Mrs. MARION COLE, Secretary.

GLASGOW

ATHENÆUM SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

SESSION 1923-24.

The Session consists of Three Terms: September 10 to December 1, December 3 to March 8, and March 10 to June 6.

Complete Musical Curriculum. Day and Evening Classes. Single Subjects taught.

Prospectus and further information may be obtained from:

STUART S. FORSYTH, Secretary,
ATHENÆUM BUILDINGS, GLASGOW.

BIRMINGHAM & MIDLAND INSTITUTE SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

Visitor ... Sir EDWARD ELGAR, O.M., Mus.Doc., LL.D.
 Director ... GRANVILLE BANTOCK, M.A., D.Mus. (Ed.).

SESSION 1923-1924.

The Session consists of AUTUMN TERM (September 20 to December 18); WINTER TERM (January 19 to April 9); SUMMER TERM (April 11 to July 9).

Instruction in all branches of Music, Students' Choir and Orchestra, Chamber Music, Students' Rehearsals, and Concerts.

Prospectus and further information may be obtained from—

H. M. FRANCIS, Secretary.

Paradise Street, Birmingham.

JOHN B. WOOD, MUS. BAC.

C. G. WOOD, MUS. BAC., L.R.A.M.

THE IDEAL CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

EXPERT TUTORS.

THEORY OF MUSIC, HARMONY,
 COMPOSITION, ART OF TEACHING,
 INTERPRETATION,
 FORM AND MEMORY TRAINING
 FOR MUSICIANS.

Correspondents from all parts of the world and ex-students of the Principal Musical Institutions have been enrolled as pupils.

Write,

6, BOLTON ROAD, FARNWORTH, BOLTON.

There really IS something in the Gillett method of Modern Pianoforte Playing—investigate it and judge for yourself.

Full details of personal and Correspondence Lessons and copies of numerous testimonials from pianists of all grades will be sent free—or, better still—call and discuss the matter with

CHARLES A. GILLETT,

11, SOUTH MOLTON STREET, NEW BOND STREET,
 LONDON, W.1.

PAPER WORK BY MUS. B., F.R.C.O.

OVER 1100 SPECIMEN WORKINGS.

"Your lessons and ideas splendid."

"Your excellent models make my attempts look cold."

RECENT SUCCESSES.

2s. 6d. per lesson and postage.

"E. B.," c/o Novello &amp; Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

L.R.A.M. AND A.R.C.M.

TEACHING SINGING AND ELOCUTION EXAMINATIONS.

Numerous Successes both in Singing and Elocution Exams. at L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M.

Special Correspondence Course and personal tuition. Complete preparation.

Also Special Short Instructional Courses in Voice-Production and The Art of Teaching Singing, to meet particular requirements of the General Practitioner in Music.

MR. W. LEE WEBSTER, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M.

INGLESIDE, PARK ROAD, NOTTINGHAM.

THE LONDON CHOIR SCHOOL

(CHAMPION HILL SCHOOL),

GROVE LANE, DENMARK HILL, S.E.5.
 (Twelve minutes from Victoria, L.B.S.C. Railway;
 L.C.C. Trams 56, 58, 62, and 84 pass the door.)

Director: CARLTON BORROW, A.R.C.O.

Solo and Chorus Boys for Services, Oratorios, Madrigal Societies, Concerts, &amp;c. Solo and Chorus Altos (male), Tenors, and Basses for Temporary Engagements.

Telephone: Brixton 2124.

Apply, Secretary.

THE LONDON SCHOOL OF SINGING.

20A, HENRIETTA STREET, CAVENDISH SQUARE, W.1.

The School provides complete instruction and training in all branches of Vocal Art, for both Professional and Amateur; and specialises in the production and artistic development of the voice.

A special short course for beginners has now been arranged.

Auditions and advice free.

Lessons in Pianoforte and Theory.

For particulars and appointment please apply to Secretary.

Telephone: Mayfair 3819.

THE LONDON COLLEGE FOR CHORISTERS.

6 and 7, BLOMFIELD CRESCENT, PADDINGTON, W.2.

Founder: Mr. JAMES BATES.

Solo Boys and Chorus Boys supplied at short notice for Church Services, &amp;c. Telephone: Paddington 5990. Sec., ARTHUR G. BATES.

WIGMORE HALL STUDIOS.—These splendidly appointed Studios are the recognised centre of the best musical activities in London. Forty-five rooms. Grand Piano in every room. Lift, telephone and every comfort and convenience. Low inclusive rates. One morning or afternoon per week the minimum time arranged for. Apply, 38, Wigmore Street, W.1.

THE "INDIVIDUAL" METHOD (SPECIALISED COACHING).

INDIVIDUAL COACHING by
Correspondence, in Paper Work,
for all Degrees and Diplomas in Music.

Preparation may now be commenced
for L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M., September, also for Durham Mus. Bac., 1st and
Final, September.

Revision Lessons for July, A. and
F.R.C.O., and Trinity College Diplomas.

NUMEROUS SUCCESSES.

DR. NORMAN SPRANKLING

Mus. Doc. (London), L.R.A.M.,

48, LINDEN ROAD, REDLAND, BRISTOL.

'PHONE: BRISTOL 3033.

Candidates entering for the first time, and also those who have failed to pass any examination, should write to Dr. Sprankling (address above).

CONSULTATION LESSONS ALSO IN BRISTOL
AND LONDON.

The extraordinary success of
Dr. Sprankling's System is due very largely to the fact that the tuition is entirely INDIVIDUAL.

Instead of forming a fixed and rigid
"Course" of lessons, each lesson is sent with a view to the special requirements
of the individual student.

By this method, all weak points are at once concentrated upon, and each student is individually given a grip of everything essential to success, in the shortest possible time.

CALISTHENICS

FOR THE MUSCLES USED IN SINGING

As taught and perfected for 20 years.

Astonishing increase of POWER, QUALITY, RANGE,
and EASE of SINGING assured by five minutes' practice
twice (better three times) daily.

By Correspondence, Fee £2 2s., for Three Lessons.

No more sore or relaxed throat, or strained voice.

THOS. CHURCH SAXBY, L.Mus.T.C.L.,
UNDERCLIFFE, LEWES.

MR. ALBERT GARCIA

LESSONS IN VOICE PRODUCTION AND SINGING.

Special Coaching in Opera, Oratorio, and for Recitals.

Pupils prepared for A.R.C.M. and L.R.A.M. Exams.

"A number of Mr. Albert Garcia's pupils sang excellently at the concert which they gave on Wednesday evening. It was particularly pleasant to hear voices so well placed and well poised, smooth and even in tone from the lowest to the highest notes, showing a control which too few learn to exercise."—Daily Telegraph.

"One takes it that a concert by pupils fulfils its object if it demonstrates—as the one given at Wigmore Hall by singers studying with Mr. Albert Garcia certainly did—the excellence of that master's method."—Era.

"Mr. Garcia—himself a fine artist and the inheritor of a great tradition and a great name—has some most promising pupils, and such singers as Miss Rosa Burn and Mr. Frederick Lippold show in what an excellent school they have been trained."—Daily Telegraph.

For Auditions, Appointments, &c., write,
59, Queen's Road, St. John's Wood, N.W.8.
(Hampstead 4597.)

MODERN CORRESPONDENCE COLLEGE

PRINCIPAL:

ARTHUR MCALISTER, B.A. (CANTAB.).

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

A New Guide to DEGREES and DIPLOMAS in MUSIC

32 Pages.

READY JULY 1ST.

The most Comprehensive Guide ever prepared for Students of Music.

—FREE—

MODERN CORRESPONDENCE COLLEGE

“ST. MORITZ,” 201, ILKESTON ROAD, NOTTINGHAM.

LECTURES IN THE ART OF VOICE-TRAINING. DEMONSTRATIONS OF TEACHING METHOD.
 PRACTICAL LESSONS TO SELECTED FAULTY VOICES.
 LECTURES ON INTERPRETATION WITH, IN ILLUSTRATION,
 A PIANOFORTE LECTURE-RECITAL BY MADAME ELSIE HORNE, A.R.A.M., A VOCAL LECTURE-RECITAL BY MISS ELSIE DUNIAM-JONES, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. are the features of

MR. FIELD-HYDE'S 10 DAYS' HOLIDAY COURSE

At the RUSHWORTH HALL, LIVERPOOL, July 31st to August 9th, 1924.

This Course is acknowledged by all who know it to be unique. It is invaluable for all interested in Vocal Training from any standpoint. It covers all the frequently debated points in Vocal Science and Teaching such as Breathing and Breath-Control, the Placing of the Voice, Tone-Quality and the Difficulties of Overcoming Defects of Tone, Comparisons of the Different Schools of Voice-Training, the Principles of the Old Italian Method, Choir-Training, Adults and Boys, the Relations between Vocal Method and Teaching Skill, Voice Failures and their Causes, Vocal Interpretation, &c., &c.

The Course has been recommended by the greatest authorities in this and other countries, and the following testimonies are representative of hundreds expressed by members of previous courses:

"The most commonsense handling of the whole complicated matter I have come across."—A Cathedral Organist.

"The single lectures were worth the fee charged for the whole course."—Another Cathedral Organist.

"I shall always have much pleasure in bearing testimony to the great value of your Course, which has been such a help to me."—A University Organist.

"Your Course is ideal. Every member must inevitably be a better teacher afterwards."—The Principal of one of the largest Musical Colleges.

"I must express my entire satisfaction with your delightful and most lucid lectures. The fairness with which you dealt with controverted points, giving each school and method all the credit that could properly be claimed, and showing where each fell short of the ideal, was most instructive, and your positive teaching was helpful in the extreme. The sentiments here faintly expressed were over and over again uttered by the members of the class generally as they left the lecture each day."—An experienced Midland Teacher.

"Your books on 'The Art of Voice-Training' constitute the best work on the subject I have come across in all my experience as a teacher, and I am within two days of my seventieth birthday."—J. H.

For Syllabus and details of the Course, address, Secretary,

FIELD-HYDE VACATION COURSE, 43, Upper George Street, London, W.1.

The M.C.C. SPECIALISES in POSTAL TUITION.

It has been suggested that the Modern Correspondence College specialises for the following Exams. only:

MATRIC., MUS. BAC., A.R.C.O., F.R.C.O.,
 A. MUS. T.C.L.

A CONTRADICTION.

We beg to contradict this erroneous impression.

The MODERN CORR. COLLEGE has a larger Staff of SPECIALISTS in Music than any Correspondence College in the Country, and has carefully graded Courses in each of the following:

IN FACT.

Every Subject in the L.R.A.M. Syllabus.

" " " " A.R.C.M. "
 " " " " L.T.C.L. "

L.R.A.M.
 A.R.C.M.
 L.T.C.L.

PIANOFORTE TEACHING.
 SINGING.
 ELOCUTION.
 AURAL TRAINING.
 VOICE CULTURE, Etc.

BLACKPOOL MUSICAL FESTIVAL.

OCTOBER 13th to 18th, 1924.

WINTER GARDENS.

SOLO, DUET, QUARTET, CHORAL, ORCHESTRAL, FOLK-DANCE, AND SCHOOL CHOIR COMPETITIONS.

NOW PUBLISHED.

OFFICIAL SYLLABUS OF COMPETITIONS

(Post free, 6d. Four 18d. stamps).

The Official List of Awards and Adjudicators' Notes for the 1923 Festival. Post free, 2s. 6d. (Postal Order).

G. W. STANSFIELD, Hon. Secretary, 91, Church Street, Blackpool.

LONDON SEMI-NATIONAL EISTEDDFOD,

CENTRAL HALL, WESTMINSTER.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 20th, 1924.

MALE-VOICE CHOIR - - PRIZE £75.

(Consolation Gifts of £5 5s. and £3 3s. to Conductors of 2nd and 3rd Choirs.)

MIXED CHOIRS - - PRIZE £25.

CHAMPIONSHIP VIOLIN SOLO - PRIZE £10 10s.

SYLLABUS (Post free, two penny stamps) of Hon. Secs.,

J. DAVIES, 107, Falmouth Road, London, S.E.1.

D. B. JONES, 24, Distin Street, Lambeth, London, S.E.11.

ADAM CARSE, F.R.A.M.,

is prepared to Lecture to Schools,
Musical and other Societies, on

THE HISTORY OF THE ORCHESTRA

WITH OVER

FIFTY LANTERN SLIDES,

showing Orchestral Instruments from the 16th Century up to the present time, Pictures of Early Orchestras, Players, &c., and Photographs of First Editions of famous
Full Scores, &c.Apply: ADAM CARSE, WINTON, MARTINS END LANE, GREAT MISSENDEN, BUCKS.

MR. W. H. BREARE

VOCAL ADVISER AND TEACHER OF SINGING
TO STUDENTS AND THE PROFESSION.Author of "Vocalism," "Elocution: Its First Principles," "Vocal
Faults and their Remedies." Now Published: "Vocal Technique:
How it feels to Sing."

3s. 6d. each. Postage: 1 Book, 9d.; 2 or 3, 1s.; Set of 4, 1s. 3d.

"The most complete guide to singing in English."—"Lancelot," in the Referee."One of the sanest of sane expositions."—Musical Courier, N.Y."Is a reliable expert in all branches."—Gentlewoman."A magnificent guide to both teachers and students."—Eastern Morning News."Do not hesitate to commend."—Glasgow Herald."His technical knowledge is minute, wide, and accurate: what he has to say is well worthy of consideration by public singers and music teachers."—Aberdeen Free Press."Common-sense in all he utters."—Leeds Mercury."Is an acknowledged authority. . . ."—Western Morning News."I have not the slightest fear of contradiction when I say that no one knows more about the voice and vocal production than Mr. W. H.
Breare."—"Counterpoint," in the Newcastle Journal.

Address: "HERALD" BUILDINGS, HARROGATE.

TO CONCERT DIRECTORS.

ARTHUR MANGELSDORFF

(British-born).

The well-known Pianist is arranging a Recital Tour of the various seaside and holiday resorts.

He will be pleased to negotiate for a Recital or part programme.

Managers of suitable Concert-Hall also please send scale of charges for hiring.

Please address all communications to

ARTHUR ELLARSHAW, 497, Coventry Road, Birmingham.

MR. CHARLES TREE

BERLIOZ'S "FAUST."—"A triumph as Mephisto."—She eld Independent.Mr. Tree lectures next season on the "Art of Bel Canto" in many of the leading cities, including London, Glasgow, Leeds, Bradford."HOW TO ACQUIRE EASE OF VOICE-PRODUCTION" AND ITS COMPANION, "BEL CANTO" EXERCISES, 5/2 and 3/7 post free.

(If difficult to obtain, write direct.)

Mr. Tree will give a few Special Lessons to any keenly interested who will be up for the Exhibition. Accommodation may be had at

Bolton Mansions Hotel, Bolton Gardens, S.W.5.

Courtfield Gardens Hotel, Courtfield Gardens, S.W.5.

Concert Dates. Bolton Mansions Hotel, S.W.5. (Kensington 816.)

How To PLAY DIFFICULT
MUSIC WITH EASE.

PIANISTS who wish to play the music which affords the greatest enjoyment and relaxation—the compositions of the world's greatest musicians —and who are averse to the drudgery of wearisome keyboard practising in order to obtain the necessary technical proficiency, will find the "Brain to Keyboard" method of the greatest possible help.

Practice on this system, much of it away from the keyboard, is never wearisome; and after some weeks of it, spending quite a short time every day, a degree of technical proficiency is obtained which would be otherwise impossible, even after years of keyboard practising for several hours daily.

Many eminent musicians, including the late SIR
FREDERICK BRIDGE, have used and highly recommended my System—the ORIGINAL POSTAL SYSTEM.
More than 17,000 successful students of all ages add their testimony.

"From Brain to Keyboard"

Macdonald Smith's System
of Pianoforte Playing.

My illustrated book, "Light on Pianoforte Playing," will gladly be sent to any pianist. It fully explains the principles and advantages of the methods used in the System.
When applying, please state whether comparative beginner, average, or advanced pianist. The book will be sent free of charge, and post free.

M. MACDONALD SMITH, 19, BLOOMSBURY Sq., LONDON, W.C.1.

THE "INDIVIDUAL" METHOD.

(Specialised Coaching).

(See page 579).

MUSICAL COMPOSITIONS REVISED.

LYRICS SET TO MUSIC, MELODIES HARMONIZED, MUSIC TRANPOSED
AND COPIED, BAND PARTS WRITTEN, MSS. PREPARED FOR PUBLICATION
BY A MASTER HAND. ACCOMPANIMENTS OF DISTINCTION
WRITTEN TO SONGS.For terms, write, A. CARRINGTON BRIGGS, Glennholme, The Common, Hesse, E. Yorks.

MUSICAL REVISOR TO MESSRS. NOVELLO FOR THIRTY-NINE YEARS.

COMPOSERS' MSS.

REVISED AND PREPARED FOR PRINTING

H. ELLIOT BUTTON, "Harewood," Ardwick Road, N.W.2.

* * * The late Sir HUBERT PARRY and Sir FREDERICK BRIDGE permitted their names to appear, along with those of the following composers to whom reference is kindly permitted:—Sir EDWARD ELGAR, O.M.; Sir HENRY WALFORD DAVIES, Mus. Doc.

“Could not memorise a single note . . . .
Can now play Scriabin from memory.”

THIS is just one letter typical of hundreds received from pianists and organists who have overcome their memorising difficulties through taking the Mackinnon Musical Memory Course.

Players who have previously been unable to master the simplest piece, after taking the Course learn difficult music easily and quickly. And this is not all. The thorough grasp of the music given by the Mackinnon System of Memory Training banishes nervousness. Players who have never been able to do themselves justice before an audience play without fear of breakdown.

Technique is improved. A new sense of freedom results in full artistic self-expression for the first time.

The Course consists of Six clearly written Correspondence Lessons. Only fifteen minutes' daily practice is required. There is no drudgery of any kind.

Send Coupon below for free booklet, to-day.

MACKINNON'S MUSICAL MEMORY COURSE.

EMPIRE HOUSE, 175, PICCADILLY, W.1.

IN SIX POSTAL LESSONS - FEE, £3:3:0

—GUARANTEE—

If within four weeks from the receipt of the first lesson, and before the receipt of the second, any Student feels that he or she has not made definite progress as a result of taking the Course, such Student's fees will be refunded in full.

Just a few of the appreciative letters received daily. You can be equally successful:

From a Cathedral Organist.

“Many students of the organ find it difficult to accompany the Psalms satisfactorily. To those who find it so, I recommend this memory Course.”

From a Pianist.

“Your method makes one feel it is impossible to break down.”

From a Teacher.

“Prior to your lessons I found it impossible to memorise any piece. I can now learn and play with confidence and ease.”

From a Church Organist.

“Of the greatest assistance, cannot fail to play from memory where your instructions are followed.”

POST THIS COUPON TO-DAY.....

MACKINNON'S "MUSICAL MEMORY," Empire House, 175, Piccadilly, W.1.

Please send me, free, and post free, your booklet on "MEMORY TRAINING."

Name.....

Address.....

PROFESSIONAL NOTICES.

MISS LYDIA JOHN

(A.R.A.M., L.R.A.M.), CONTRALTO.

Concerts, Oratorios, Organ Recitals, &c.
 Recital-Lectures of Folk-Songs, Elizabethan Songs, &c.
 Pupils received for Voice-Production and Singing.
 Prepared for L.R.A.M., Associated Board, &c.

15, Albion Road, London, N.W.6. Tel.: Hampstead, N.W.6.

JAMES BARR

Alto Lay-Vicar (Soloist) Westminster Abbey.
 Accompanist. Lessons in Sight-Reading.

Professional Coach. Opera, Oratorio, &c.
 12, Salford Road, S.W.2. Phone: Streatham 3841.

FRANK CARLETON

(TENOR).

CONCERTS, ORATORIOS, Etc.

Address: 58, Hazel Street, Audenshaw, near Manchester.

MUNRO DAVISON

Professor of Singing, Guildhall School of Music.

Vocal, L.R.A.M., F.R.C.O. Principal Alto, Temple Church.
 For Singing Lessons, address, 434, Seven Sisters Road, N.4.

ARTHUR LEES

BASS.

Concerts, Recitals, Masonics, Oratorios, &c.
 "Ravenscroft," 120, Waldegrave Road, Brighton.

MR. HERBERT TRACEY

BASS.

8, Cavendish Mansions, E.5. London Wall 4033

MISS THELMA DANDRIDGE (A.R.C.M.),

'CELLIST.

Concerts, Pupils, &c., apply to "Inversnaid," Chinbrook Road,
 Grove Park, S.E.12. (Phone: Lee Green 1707.)

LEONARD SALISBURY (A.R.C.M.)

Founder of "The Gresham Singers."
 Receives Pupils in Voice-Culture and Singing,
 at 14, Hanover Street, Regent Street, W.1.
 Tele.: Streatham 2525.

ARTHUR MANGELSDORFF

SOLO PIANIST.

For terms, vacant dates, &c., apply to
 ARTHUR ELLARSHAW, 497, Coventry Road, Birmingham.

THE TRAINING OF TEACHERS.

CORRESPONDENCE COURSES IN

VOICE-PRODUCTION, covering the whole subject.
 FORM AND TEACHING, TOUCH, ACCOMPANIMENT,
 MUSICAL APPRECIATION, AND AURAL TRAINING.

Nearly 1000 Successes at L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., &amp;c.

MR. R. J. PITCHER, Mus. Bac., F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M.
 (Double Dip. Singing and Piano), L.R.A.M., Class A, Performer and Teacher.

Prof. Singing G.S.M., 1905-1915. Special Lect. on Mus. Appreciation to L.C.C.

"Recit. and its Rendering," 1s. 6d. "Vade Mecum for Singers," 6d.
 Send for prospectus, 21, Boundary Road, N.W.8.
 Phone: 1715 Maida Vale.

DR. ALLISON instructed by Post Candidates who

OBTAINED DEGREES OF MUS. B. and Mus. D. at Oxford,
 Cambridge, Dublin, London, and Durham Universities, Diplomas of
 L.L.C.M. (April, 1924), L.R.A.M., F.R.C.O., L. Mus. L.C.M.,
 A.R.C.M., Gold Medals, Silver Medals, Scholarships, Prizes, Certificates, and valuable professional appointments. Dr. Allison is willing to teach those who neither require nor desire to pass examinations.
 Harmony, Counterpoint, Orchestration, and Analysis of Compositions
 by Post, to correspondents anywhere. Personal instruction in Theory, Singing, and Piano. 24, Park Range, Victoria Park, Manchester.

REVISION OF MUSICAL COMPOSITIONS.

Dr. Horton Allison, 24, Park Range, Victoria Park, Manchester.

CAPTAIN PERCY BAKER, M.C., F.R.C.O.,

L. Mus. T.C.L. (Author of "Compend of Musical Knowledge,"
 "Studies in History and Form," &c.). Specialist in Tuition by post for T.C.L. and R.C.O. Essay Models, Sight Reading Courses.
 Study Aids, 9d. Studies in Modulation, 3s.

Send for interesting Pamphlets on Methods.

HAZELDENE, TEWKESBURY.

MR. J. PERCY BAKER, Mus. B., Dunelm.,

F.R.A.M., gives Postal Tuition and prepares for Examinations.
 Personal Lessons (Pianoforte and Theory), at 14, Hanover Square, W.1.
 Address, 12, Longley Road, Tooting Graveney, S.W.17.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:—

- (1) L.R.A.M. Paper Work.
- (2) A.R.C.M. Paper Work.
- (3) Interesting Courses of Study in Rudiments,
 Harmony, Form, &c.

L.R.A.M. Exams. 1910-24 ... 244 Correspondence Pupils successful.
 A.R.C.M. Exams. 1914-24 ... 64 " " "

MR. E. H. BIBBY, Mus. Bac., L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M.,

Waterloo Buildings, Piccadilly, Manchester.

In response to many requests, Mr. BIBBY begs to announce that he has prepared the following additional CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:

- (1) The "Mus. Bac." Degree.
- (2) A.R.C.O. and F.R.C.O. Paper Work.
- (3) A.T.C.L. and L.T.C.L. Paper Work.
- (4) The Associated Board Examinations in Rudiments,
 Harmony, and Counterpoint.

(Address as above.)

MISS J. BLAKE, A.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. (Regd.)

Teacher of Singing, prepares pupils L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M.
 Exams., as Teacher or Performer. Highest recommendations.—
 Studio, 139, New Bond Street, W.1.

L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. SPECIAL COACHING by

ARTHUR ELLARSHAW, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. Pianist.
 Paper-work Postal. Address, 497, Coventry Road, Birmingham.

DR. A. C. PHILLIPS EMBLING, Mus. Doc.,

Dunelm. (1921), Mus. Bac., Oxon., F.R.C.O. Lessons by post
 for Diplomas and Degrees. 64, Wokingham Road, Reading.

FREDERICK GREEN, L.R.A.M., ETC. Voice

Specialist, Vocal Coach, and Adjudicator. Preparation for
 L.R.A.M. c/o Rushworth & Dreaper, 11, Islington, Liverpool.

DR. CUTHBERT HARRIS, Mus. Doc., Dunelm.,

F.R.C.O. SPECIALIST IN CORRESPONDENCE
 TUITION. 405 Successes in Mus. D., Mus. B., F.R.C.O., and
 A.R.C.O., &c. 58, Avondale Road, Gorleston-on-Sea.

DR. HARRIS REVISES AND PREPARES MSS.

FOR PUBLICATION. Accompaniments to Songs written.

MISS H. HEALE COACHES for all EXAM-

INATIONS IN MUSIC (at private residence or at West-End Studio), in Pianoforte, Harmony, Counterpoint, Fugue, Form,
 Orchestration, "Teaching," Modulation, Transposition, &c. For
 Terms, &c., apply Dunraven House, 41, Albert Bridge Road, S.W.11.

HERBERT HODGE, F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M.,

Organist and Choirmaster, St. Nicholas Cole Abbey, Queen
 Victoria Street, London, has, since 1908, made a speciality of coaching Candidates for the Organ Playing Examinations of the Royal College of Organists, and can arrange a private course of instruction
 (or single lessons) to organists visiting London, at St. Nicholas
 Cole Abbey. Many recent F.R.C.O. and A.R.C.O. successes.
 5, Streatham Place, S.W.2. Telephone: Streatham 2195.

REVISION of MUSICAL COMPOSITIONS.

Melodies arranged for Piano. Orchestrations, Lyrics, &c., &c.
 Albert E. Holdaway, 30, Turret Grove, London, S.W.4.

DR. A. G. IGGULDEN, Mus. Doc. Dunelm., F.R.C.O.,

SPECIALIST IN CORRESPONDENCE COACHING.

Latest Successes: Durham, March, 1924—2 in 1st Mus. Bac. Sept., 1923
 —2 out of the 3 Mus. Doc. passes, and 4 out of the 6 Final Mus. Bac.
 passes. Also 6 Exercises, after prelim. course in composition. Over 150 Successes at Durham alone. The Durdans, Reigate.

DR. KNOWLES (Manchester 1919, Durham 1920)

specialises in preparing candidates by post for the Paper-work of all examinations in music. Solutions, with methods of working.
 Address, 45, Churchgate, Bolton, Lancs.

DR. F. J. KARN (Mus. Bac. Cantab.; Mus. Doc.

Toronto) continues to give lessons in Harmony and other
 Theoretical subjects, and prepares for all Musical Examinations.
 Compositions revised and Analyses written. Candidates prepared by
 Dr. Karn have gained the Mus. Bac. and Mus. Doc. degrees at the Universities and diplomas from the Musical Colleges.

Address: 106, Haverstock Hill, London, N.W.3.

MADAME LARKCOM, F.R.A.M., Prof. Singing,

R. A. Music, has resumed her lessons in Singing at the Wigmore Hall Studios, 40, Wigmore Street, W.1.

J. H. MAKINSON, F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M., A.T.C.L.
Correspondence Tuition in Paper Work (T.C.L. and other Diplomas). Terms moderate. Kent House, Lake Road, Ambleside.

MISS F. HELENA MARKS, Author of "The Sonata: Its Form and Meaning," prepares for L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., and all other examinations, Pianoforte, Harmony, "Form and Teaching," &c. Personal or Correspondence Lessons in all Paper-Work subjects, including those for L.R.A.M., "Aural Training and Sight-Singing," and A.R.C.M. in "The Teaching of Musical Appreciation," &c. Pupils received and visited for the Pianoforte. Many recent successes L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., &c.
10, Matheson Road, London, W.14.

DR. H. H. L. MIDDLETON, Mus. Doc., F.R.C.O.,
L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. Twenty-five years' experience in Private Tuition and Coaching for Degrees. More than 500 of Dr. Middleton's Pupils have obtained Degrees at the Universities, R.A.M., R.C.M., and R.C.O. Address, 60, Berners Street, W.1.

W. J. FREDERICK PUGH, L.R.A.M., Pre- pares for L.R.A.M. (Aural Culture and Voice Culture Diplomas), A.R.C.M. (Appreciation Diploma). Recent Successes, 34, Wilmington Avenue, Chiswick, W.4.

JOHN ROBERTS has VACANCIES for a few PUPILS in VOICE PRODUCTION. "R. J." c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

DR. TAYLOR'S POSTAL PUPILS HAVE passed Mus. Bac. 1st and final. A.R.C.O.; L.R.A.M.; A.T.C.L. Pupil gained the Stillie Bursary at Glasgow for Counterpoint. Latest success, A.R.C.O. for 1924. Portland Place, Lancaster.

DR. PERCY WOOD, Mus. Doc. Oxon., F.R.C.O.
SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:
(1) Elementary Harmony and Counterpoint.
(2) F.R.C.O. and A.R.C.O.
(3) L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M.
(4) Mus. Bac. Degree.
Several recent Mus. B. successes at Durham.

R.C.O. EXAMINER says: "Your system is undoubtedly an excellent one."

SUCCESS GUARANTEED—given any pupils with the requisite musical ability for the examination in view.

R.C.O. SUCCESSSES IN PAPER WORK:

6 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1914.	11 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1914.
6 F.R.C.O., July, 1914.	12 A.R.C.O., July, 1914.
4 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1915.	5 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1915.
5 F.R.C.O., July, 1915.	9 A.R.C.O., July, 1915.
2 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1916.	3 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1916.
3 F.R.C.O., July, 1916.	5 A.R.C.O., July, 1916.
2 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1917.	2 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1917.
3 F.R.C.O., July, 1917.	4 A.R.C.O., July, 1917.
2 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1918.	2 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1918.
4 F.R.C.O., July, 1918.	2 A.R.C.O., July, 1918.
1 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1919.	3 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1919.
3 F.R.C.O., July, 1919.	3 A.R.C.O., July, 1919.
4 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1920.	10 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1920.
3 F.R.C.O., July, 1920.	6 A.R.C.O., July, 1920.
3 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1921.	7 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1921.
6 F.R.C.O., July, 1921.	8 A.R.C.O., July, 1921.
5 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1922.	5 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1922.
4 F.R.C.O., July, 1922.	5 A.R.C.O., July, 1922.
8 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1923.	6 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1923.
7 F.R.C.O., July, 1923.	10 A.R.C.O., July, 1923.
7 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1924.	9 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1924.

"Tralee," Warwick Road, Cliftonville, Margate.

MISS MARGARET YOUNG, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M.
(Pianoforte); A.T.C.L. (Vocal and Pianoforte). Registered Teacher, T.R.C. Postal Tuition for Theoretical, above Diplomas; also General Musical Knowledge and Advice. Bawburgh, Norwich.

EASTBOURNE.

DOWNSMEADE BOARDING SCHOOL FOR BOYS.
Modern education with special musical education if desired. Prospectus on application to the Headmaster, F. E. Wilson, F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M.

SOLO and CHORUS BOYS supplied (CITY OF LONDON CHOIR COLLEGE). Apply to Francis Sutton, F.R.C.O., St. Stephen's Walbrook, E.C.4.

MAGDALEN COLLEGE, OXFORD.

ACADEMICAL CLERKSHIP VACANT. Alto Voice. Voice trial, July 11. The Clerk elected will be expected to become an Undergraduate member of the College, to sing in the College Choir, and to read for his Degree. The emoluments will be not less than £70 per annum. For full particulars write to The Dean of Divinity.

CHOIRBOYS.—Salary £10 per year. Vacancies in Central London Church for reliable boys. Write, "P. H.," 52, Tachbrook Street, S.W.1.

SOPRANO, SOLOIST and CHOIR-LEADER,
WANTED for Congregational Church, Stamford Hill, N.16. Must be in sympathy with the worship of the Church. Two Sunday services. Rehearsal Fridays. £25. Apply, S. Mumford, A.R.C.O., The Old Clock House, Winchmore Hill, N.21.

TWO TENORS REQUIRED for Christ Church,
Victoria Road, Kensington. Friday rehearsal, Sunday Services 11 and 6.30. Salary, £16. Address, "Organist," 4, Kelso Place, W.8.

ST. JOHN'S, Notting Hill, W.—Tenor required.
Salary, £20. Write, D. S. Easton, 91, Holland Road, W.14.

WANTED.—MALE ALTO and BASS for the Brompton Oratory. Must be good readers. Apply, Musical Director.

WANTED, July.—Experienced ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER for Parish Church. £60. Fine organ, electric blower. Rector, Woodbridge.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER for Dale
Street Wesleyan Methodist Church, Leamington. Modern, three-manual organ. Applications, stating qualifications, experience, salary required, and when free, to T. W. Bowen, Trustees' Secretary, 2, Lillington Road, Leamington.

ST. JOHN'S, NEWFOUNDLAND.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER WANTED for the Presbyterian
Kirk. An attractive post. Large mixed choir. Fine modern Norman & Beard Organ. Salary, $1,000 (about £200) a year. A good teacher of singing would find a good opening. Applications with copies of three recent testimonials should be sent before July 15, to Alfred H. Allen, Esq., Shottery, Stratford-on-Avon.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER WANTED for
Presbyterian Church in the West Central District. Apply, with references, to "J. M.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour St., W.1.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER WANTED
for the Congregational Church, Brent Street, Hendon. Apply to Mr. J. W. Butler, 93, Sunny Gardens, London, N.W.4.

MUSWELL HILL CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH, TETHERDOWN.

WANTED.—ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER.

Apply by letter, with copies of testimonials; also stating experience, and salary required, to

W. R. TALLEY, 13, Prince's Avenue, Muswell Hill, N.10.

ORGANIST REQUIRED, for Sunday mornings only, during August. Church in N.W. District. Use of fine three-manual organ, and expenses paid in return for services. Write, "Mus. Bac., F.R.C.O.," 44, Hopefield Avenue, Brondesbury, N.W.6.

WANTED.—ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER.
St. John Episcopal Church, Dumfries. Churchman. Salary £90. Apply, with testimonials, to Bertram McGowan, Solicitor, Dumfries, by July 19.

ASSISTANT-ORGANIST REQUIRED, to play a Plain Service. Letter only, to "Organist," St. Luke's, Hampstead, N.W.3.

ORGANIST of a University College, DESIRES
POST—musical or otherwise—for August and September. Good traveller and linguist. Apply, "B. S.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

THE ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER of Christ Church, Victoria Road, Kensington, has a VACANCY for a PUPIL-ASSISTANT. Free use of Organ for practice, and tuition given in return for services. Address, "Organist," 4, Kelso Place, W.8.

R.C.O. EXAMINATIONS.

SINGLE LESSONS (covering all the requirements) and PRACTICE on facsimile R.C.O. instrument. Many recent successes. ALLAN BROWN, F.R.C.O., 298, High Road, Balham, S.W.17.

ORGANS (New and Second-hand) for SALE.—
Electric and pneumatic action up-to-date. Built or reconstructed. Bedwell & Son, The Cambridge Organ Works, Cambridge.

CHURCH ORGANS STANDARDISED.—Two
Manuals, Pneumatic Pedals, various sizes; specially built. Five to fifteen stops. Introduced to meet the requirements of the times at minimum of cost. W. E. Richardson & Sons, Central Organ Works, Manchester, S.W.

PIPE ORGAN.—Two-manual, ten Stops, full compass. Apply to Lady Haking, Mill Cottage, Bulford, near Salisbury.

FOR SALE.—One-Manual PIPE ORGAN, with modern Pull-down Pedals, CCC to F. Four Stops, divided. Side blower. Mahogany case. Inlaid label, "John Avery, Londini. Fecit 1795." As it stands, £25. Apply, Mrs. J. West, 4, Hunter's Road, Handsworth, Birmingham.

FOR SALE—CHURCH ORGAN, by Foster & Andrews. Great organ, nine Stops; Swell organ, seven Stops and two spare slides; Pedal, one Stop and one spare slide. Four couplers. Three composition pedals. Compact, rectangular, 9-ft. by 14-ft.; Height 16½-ft. Apply, Vicar, Hoylake, Cheshire.

BELOW PRE-WAR PRICE.—ORGAN, Two Manuals and Pedals (Concave and Radiating). Eight full rows Reeds. Stops "through." £80. Seen London. Write, "K.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd. 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

THREE-MANUAL REED ORGAN, Mason & Hamlin. Pipe top. 32 Stops. 8, 16, 32 Pedals. Cheap for cash. New condition. Owner moving to country. "E.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

HARMONIUM, Christophe. As new. In walnut case. 20 Stops. 6 Rows of Reeds. Write, "C. L.," c/o 13, High Road, Chiswick.

FOR SALE.—HARP. Double-action, in good condition. Kynaston, Haslemere, Felixstowe.

TEACHING CONNECTION.

L.R.A.M. (Lady) wishes to PURCHASE a PIANOFORTE TEACHING CONNECTION within thirty miles of London. Write, "E. A. R.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

TEACHING CONNECTION (chiefly Pianoforte) FOR SALE, in East Devon Town, near Exeter. Average number pupils, 40. Suit Lady. Healthy situation. About five miles from sea. Write, "S.," c/o 125, Lavender Hill, S.W.11.

ORGANIST-COMPOSER, experienced with Music Publishers, can accept good berth in any musical capacity. "S. M.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

MUSIC COMPOSERS and LYRIC WRITERS. The Cosmos Publishing Co. are open to consider Songs, &c., with a view to publication. Send MSS. with stamp for reply, to Glenholme, The Common, Hessele

MUSIC COPIED neatly and accurately. Transposition, Band-Parts, &c. Gordon Jacob, A.R.C.M., 1, Homefield Road, S.W.19.

MUSIC COPIED, neat work, Transposition and Duplicating. E.W. Cartwright, 17, Belvedere Rd., Bournemouth.

FOR SALE.—DICTIONARY of MUSIC and MUSICIANS, by Sir George Grove, 4 vols. As new. What offers? "R. T.," 4, Dane Road, St. Leonards-on-Sea.

BARITONES and BASSES should buy new song, "BEAUTY'S DAUGHTER" (Oakley). Compass B flat to E flat. Price 2s. Weekes & Co., 14, Hanover St., W.1, and all music-sellers.

THE UNKNOWN TRUTH ABOUT THE VOICE AND ITS DEVELOPMENT. By E. DAVIDSON PALMER, Mus. Bac., Oxon. Showing the prevailing Error in the Training of Men's Voices, and the primary cause of Voice-Failure in Singers and Public Speakers. Post free, 1s. (Postal Order). Address: 11, Grazebrook Road, Stoke Newington, N.16.

RUDYARD KIPLING'S RECESSIONAL HYMN, Set to Music by ROWLAND H. WILLIAMS. Price 2d., post free. Special Prices for quantities. ESCOTT & Co., Ltd., 67, Newman Street, London, W.1.

THE TECHNIQUER

FOR STRETCH, STRENGTH, AND SUPPLENESS.

We have . . . investigated . . . 'THE TECHNIQUER' . . . and it seems to us it entirely meets the needs of an instrumentalist in a scientific and reliable manner. The inventor . . . backs his claims by . . . convincing testimonials from such well-known men as Lamond, Pouishnoff, Dyke, Walenn, and many others. To those who have small stretch or but little time for practice, we advise they should look into the matter for themselves. Mr. Pitcher . . . an L.R.A.M. as a public performer, approaches the matter from a highly scientific and experienced point of view."—Extract from The Strad, March, 1924.

"Hand Development," with numerous photos, 1s. 6d.

Send for full particulars, &c.—

Miss F. J. FITCH, A.R.C.M., A.R.C.O. (Sec.),

21, Boundary Road, N.W.8.

'Phone: Maida Vale 1715.

BECHSTEIN PIANOS

THE BECHSTEIN PIANO needs little recommendation to cultured tastes. Its beautiful tone and incomparable touch—qualities which have gained for it the esteem of every music-lover, and have set a standard to the world—are as exquisite and as characteristic as ever.

Write or call for Catalogue.

126, NEW BOND STREET
LONDON, W.1.

TELEPHONE: MAYFAIR 2653.

PIANOS

GRAND and UPRIGHT

By High Grade Makers.

NEW AND SECOND-HAND FOR SALE OR HIRE PURCHASE.

CHAS. STILES & CO.

74-76, SOUTHAMPTON ROW
LONDON, W.C.1.

Phone: MUSEUM 439.

STEINWAY

MUSIC LOVERS
CAN OBTAIN
PERFECT RESULTS
ONLY FROM THE PERFECT INSTRUMENT
THE STEINWAY.

115-117, WIGMORE STREET,
LONDON, W.1.

MOLLENHAUER FLUTES AND PICCOLOS

MESSRS. J. MOLLENHAUER & SONS possess a hundred years' world-wide reputation as makers of first-class Wood-Wind Instruments. Their Flutes and Piccolos are unrivalled in purity of tone, pleasing intonation, and solidity of mechanism, and are consequently used by the leading artists in every land.

Catalogue from—

FAUPEL BROTHERS,
4 & 5, OLD CHANGE, CHEAPSIDE, LONDON, E.C.4.
Telephone: City 5693.
Far Eastern inquiries to be addressed to our Hong-Kong office,
P.O. Box 631, Hong-Kong.

NEW PUBLICATIONS

By T. TERTIUS NOBLE.

816. NIGHT. S.A.T.B.
817. TO MY LOVE. T.T.B.B.
818. WHEN I AM DEAD, MY DEAREST. S.A.T.B.
819. SAVE, LORD, OR WE PERISH. S.A.T.B.
820. SAVE, LORD, OR WE PERISH. T.T.B.B.
821. BUT NOW, THUS SAITH THE LORD. S.A.T.B.

Price Fourpence each

822. MAGNIFICAT AND NUNC DIMITTIS IN B FLAT.
Price Sixpence.

BANKS & SON, MUSIC PUBLISHERS, YORK.

MENTAL-HEARING

How to acquire it.

By WALTER H. WATSON, F.R.C.O.

THE ability to HEAR MENTALLY seems to be possessed by few students, as the following from a well-known Musical Paper proves:

"Harmony on paper is a dead thing except to those who can hear what they see—the possession of about one student in a thousand."

Mental-hearing will enable the student to hear in his mind the sounds of the notes he is writing on the paper; they will not be mere soundless signs, but each will convey a definite sound to him, and until they do so all written harmony is a waste of time.

The acquisition of Mental-hearing will materially assist the practical work of the pianoforte and organ student, for if the student can hear mentally he will be encouraged to study mentally. Mental-hearing is the key to mental study, and Mental study is the key to more rapid progress. The mastery of this subject will also improve the student's sight-reading, memorising, and transposing.

Mental-hearing is a necessity for candidates for Diplomas such as L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., A.R.C.O., &c., and this work will also be of the greatest help to pupils preparing aural tests for the Associated Board Examinations.

Particulars of Correspondence Course of seven Lessons from

W. H. WATSON, GORDON COTTAGE, ELGIN.

THE "DISCUS"

REGD.

ORGAN BLOWER

THE QUIET EFFICIENCY OF THE "DISCUS"—

Blower is largely responsible for its widespread adoption in Cathedrals and Churches at home and abroad. Nearly a thousand are now in use. Apart from its quietness of working the "Discus" is a very attractive financial proposition. It saves the wages of a blower, and gives the organist the opportunity for rehearsal at all times. Any organ, large or small, can be fitted with the "Discus," and the motive power may be either electric motor, gas, or oil engine. Constructed of metal throughout, well designed and of the best workmanship. Its reliability and efficiency are guaranteed.

AS SUPPLIED TO WESTMINSTER ABBEY, YORK MINSTER, ETC., ETC.

WRITE FOR NEW BOOKLET.

MADE BY

B. WATKINS AND WATSON

ORGAN BLOWING SPECIALISTS FOR THE PAST THIRTY YEARS.

Designers and Manufacturers of all types of Hydraulic Engines, Gears, and Fittings for Organ blowing.

WHITE LION STREET, LONDON, N.I.

ESTIMATES SUBMITTED FREE.

Telegrams: "HYDISBLOW, ISLING, LONDON."

Telephone: NORTH 2039.

NOVELLO'S HANDBOOKS FOR MUSICIANS.

EDITED BY ERNEST NEWMAN.

CHORAL TECHNIQUE AND INTERPRETATION

BY

HENRY COWARD.

MUS. DOC., OXON.

*Published as a Net Book.Price, Cloth, gilt, Seven Shillings and Sixpence net.*THE TEACHING AND ACCOMPANIMENT OF PLAINSONG

BY

FRANCIS BURGESS.

*Published as a Net Book.Price, Cloth, gilt, Five Shillings and Sixpence net.*THE Interpretation of the Music of the 17th & 18th Centuries
AS REVEALED BY CONTEMPORARY EVIDENCE

BY

ARNOLD DOLMETSCH.

Published as a Net Book.Price, Cloth, gilt, Fifteen Shillings net.

APPENDIX

CONTAINING TWENTY-TWO ILLUSTRATIVE PIECES.

*Price Five Shillings and Sixpence.*THE SOURCES OF KEYBOARD MUSIC IN ENGLAND

BY

CHARLES VAN DEN BORREN.

Professor of the Université Nouvelle of Brussels.

TRANSLATED FROM THE FRENCH BY

JAMES E. MATTHEW.

Published as a Net Book.Price, Cloth, gilt, Ten Shillings and Sixpence net.

THE THEORY OF HARMONY

An Inquiry into the Natural Principles of Harmony, with an examination of the chief systems of Harmony from Rameau to the present day.

BY

MATTHEW SHIRLAW,

MUS.D., F.R.C.O.

(Lecturer in Music, University of Edinburgh, &c.)Published as a Net Book.Price, Cloth, gilt, Fifteen Shillings net.

THE ORGAN WORKS OF BACH

BY

HARVEY GRACE.

With an Introduction by ERNEST NEWMAN.

Published as a Net Book.Price, Cloth, Nine Shillings net.

LONDON : NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

---

JUST PUBLISHED.

EMPIRE SONG BOOK

A COLLECTION OF SUITABLE MUSIC FOR CHILDREN'S FESTIVALS WHICH IS SO ARRANGED THAT IT MAY BE PERFORMED WITH OR WITHOUT ACTIONS.

“SHE STANDS A THOUSAND-WINTERED TREE”
“AN EMPIRE SONG”

AND THE MEDLEYS

COMPOSED BY
PERCY E. FLETCHER.

(PRICE ONE SHILLING.)

Vocal Parts (Staff and Tonic Sol-fa Notations combined), Sixpence.

Orchestral Parts may be obtained.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

---

JUST PUBLISHED.

SECOND EDITION—REVISED AND ENTIRELY RE-WRITTEN

PART III. OF

THE MORRIS BOOK

WITH A DESCRIPTION OF DANCES AS PERFORMED BY

THE MORRIS MEN

OF ENGLAND

BY

CECIL J. SHARP

AND

HERBERT C. MACILWAINE

Price 4s. Cloth, 5s. 6d.

---

MORRIS DANCE TUNES

SETS 5 AND 6 (Revised Editions)

FOR USE IN CONNECTION WITH THE ABOVE.

Price 3s. each.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

NEW AND ENLARGED EDITION.

Cathedral Organists THE SHAFTS OF CUPID

PAST AND PRESENT.

A Record of the Succession of Organists

OF THE

CATHEDRALS, CHAPELS ROYAL, AND PRINCIPAL
COLLEGIATE CHURCHES OF THE UNITED KINGDOM.From about the period of the Reformation until the present day.With Biographical Notes, Extracts from the Chapter Books, Anecdotes, &c.

BY

JOHN E. WEST.

Price Seven Shillings net.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

No. 98.—NOVELLO'S MUSIC PRIMERS.

ELEMENTS

OF

MUSICAL APPRECIATION.

BY

W. J. FOXELL,

M.A., Mus. Bac., Lond.

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE.

London: NOVELLO &amp; COMPANY, Limited.

A LITTLE ORGAN BOOK

IN MEMORY OF

HUBERT PARRY.

A Collection of Pieces for the Organ, including a hitherto unpublished work by the late

SIR C. HUBERT H. PARRY.

*The following composers have contributed to this memorial
Publication:*WALTER G. ALCOCK. IVOR ATKINS. G. THALBEN BALL.
A. HERBERT BREWER. FRANK BRIDGE. HAROLD DARKE.
H. WALFORD DAVIES. ALAN GRAY. HENRY G. LEY.
CHARLES MACPHERSON. CHARLES V. STANFORD. CHARLES WOOD.

Cloth Gilt, 10s. 6d. net. Paper Boards, 6s. 6d. net.

From all Music Sellers, or the Publishers,

H. F. W. DEANE &amp; SONS

The Year Book Press Limited,

31, MUSEUM STREET, LONDON, W.C.1.

JUST PUBLISHED.

SONG.

THE WORDS BY

FRED G. BOWLES.

THE MUSIC BY

PERCY E. FLETCHER.

IN THREE KEYS.

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS EACH.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

AN EVENING HYMN

ON A GROUND

("NOW THAT THE SUN")

WORDS BY

DR. WILLIAM FULLER

MELODY AND BASS BY

HENRY PURCELL

EDITED AND AN ACCOMPANIMENT WRITTEN BY

HARVEY GRACE.

TWO KEYS

Price ... Two Shillings each.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

HIAWATHA'S WEDDING-FEAST

AND

THE DEATH OF MINNEHAHA

COMPOSED BY

S. COLERIDGE-TAYLOR.

ARRANGED FOR PIANOFORTE SOLO

BY

JOHN POINTER.

Price, Five Shillings and Sixpence each.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

THE ORGAN WORKS OF JOHN SEBASTIAN BACH.

BOOKS I—12, EDITED BY

J. F. BRIDGE, MUS. DOC. OXON., AND JAMES HIGGS, MUS. BAC. OXON.

BOOK I.—Price 4s.

EIGHT SHORT PRELUDES AND FUGUES.

BOOK II.—Price 4s. 6d.

Allabreve in D major.

Prelude in G major.

Canzona in D minor.

*Fugue in D minor ("The Giant").

Fugue in G minor.

*Prelude and Fugue in E minor.

(The well-known "Short" E minor, a great favourite of Mendelssohn's.)

Prelude and Fugue in C minor.

Trio in D minor.

BOOK III.—Price 4s. 6d.

Fantasia in C minor (five parts).

Fugue in B minor

(On a subject by Corelli).

Prelude and Fugue in A major.

*Prelude and Fugue in C major.

Fantasia and Fugue in C minor.

*Fugue in G minor.

(The well-known "Short" G minor.)

BOOK IV.—Price 4s. 6d.

SONATAS OR TRIOS FOR TWO MANUALS AND PEDALS
(Nos. I. to III.).

BOOK V.—Price 4s. 6d.

SONATAS OR TRIOS FOR TWO MANUALS AND PEDALS
(Nos. IV. to VI.).

BOOK VI.—Price 4s. 6d.

*Toccata and Fugue in D minor.

*Prelude and Fugue in D major.

Prelude and Fugue in F minor.

*Prelude and Fugue in E flat major.

(The Fugue known as "St. Ann's.")

BOOKS 13 AND 14, EDITED BY JOHN POINTER AND JOHN E. WEST.

BOOK XIII.—Price 4s. 6d.

CHORAL PRELUDES

Ein' feste Burg ist unser Gott.

Vater unser im Himmelreich.

Fugue on the Choral "Durch Adams Fall ist ganz verderbt."

Wer nur den lieben Gott lässt walten.

In dulci jubilo.

O Mensch, bewein' dein' Sünde gross.

Fugue on the Choral "Allein Gott in der Höh' sei Ehr."

Fantasia on "Komm, heiliger Geist, Herre Gott."

O Lamm Gottes, unschuldig.

* These pieces are published separately, price 1s. 6d. or 2s. 3d. each.

Also issued in Three Volumes, cloth, price 15s. each.

THE CHORALE PRELUDES

WITH AN INTRODUCTION BY ERNEST NEWMAN.

		s.	d.
Book	XV. Orgelbüchlein (Little Organ Book) ..	7	6
Book	XVI. The Six "Schübeler" Preludes and the "Clavierübung" (Part III.) ..	5	6
Book	XVII. The Eighteen Preludes ..	5	6

		s.	d.
Book	XVIII. Miscellaneous Preludes (Part I.) ..	5	6
Book	XIX. Miscellaneous Preludes (Part II.) and Variations ..	5	6
Book	XX. The Chorales only ..	5	6

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

BOOK VII.—Price 4s. 6d.

*Prelude and Fugue in A minor.

(The "Great" A minor.)

*Prelude and Fugue in B minor.

(The "Great" B minor.)

Prelude and Fugue in C minor.

(The "Great" C minor.)

Prelude and Fugue in C major.

Prelude and Fugue in G major.

BOOK VIII.—Price 4s. 6d.

Prelude and Fugue in C major.

(Printed under the title of "Toccata," in the key of E, in the Bach Society's Edition.)

*Prelude and Fugue in E minor.

(The "Great" E minor, the Fugue known as "The Wedge.")

*Prelude and Fugue in G major.

(The "Great" G major.)

Prelude and Fugue in G minor.

*Fantasia and Fugue in G minor.

(The "Great" G minor.)

BOOK IX.—Price 4s. 6d.

*The "Great" Toccata and Fugue in C major.

Prelude and Fugue in D minor.

(The Fugue arranged from Violin Sonata in G minor.)

Prelude and Fugue in C major.

Fantasia in G major.

The "Great" Toccata and Fugue in F major.

BOOK X.—Price 4s. 6d.

Toccata and Fugue in D minor (in the Dorian Mode).

Prelude and Fugue in A minor (the "Short" A minor).

Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor.

Fugue in C minor (on a subject by LEGRENZI).

Prelude in A minor.

BOOK XI.—Price 4s. 6d.

FOUR CONCERTOS (Arrangements of Works originally written as Violin Concertos, by ANTONIO VIVALDI):—

Concerto No. I. in G major.

Concerto " II. in A minor.

Concerto " III. in C major.

Concerto " IV. in C major.

BOOK XII.—Price 4s. 6d.

Fugue in G major.

Fantasia and Fugue in A minor.

Fantasia, with Imitation, in B minor.

Fantasia in G major.

Fugue in D major.

Fugue in G major.

Prelude in C major.

Fantasia in C major.

Prelude in C major.

Fugue in C minor.

Fugue in C major.

Pastorale.

Trio in C minor.

Aria in F.

TRINITY COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

President:

THE RT. HON. THE EARL OF SHAFTESBURY, K.P., G.C.V.O.

Director of Studies: C. W. PEARCE, M.A., Mus. D.

Director of Examinations: E. F. HORNER, Mus. D.

July 2nd, 9th, 16th, at 3 p.m.—Students' Concerts.

July 5th.—Last day of entry for the next open competition for Scholarships.

July 10th, at 3 p.m.—Students' Concert at Steinway Hall.

July 12th, at 3 p.m.—Orchestral Concert at Queen's Hall (Sole lessees, Messrs. Chappell & Co.), Langham Place, W.

The above Concerts are open free to the public, and Colonial visitors to London are invited to apply for admission tickets.

There are between Forty and Fifty Scholarships tenable at the College and open to all British subjects up to certain age limits, and the Bambridge Pianoforte Scholarship, value £100 per annum; also Eighteen Scholarships which provide complete preparation for the Degree of Bachelor of Music.

Particulars of the Teaching Department, with list of Professors, Fees, Scholarships regulations, &c., and the Syllabuses of the Diploma and Local Examinations, free on application to the undersigned.

C. N. H. RODWELL, Secretary.

Mandeville Place, Manchester Square, London, W.1.

NEW TRANSCRIPTIONS FROM THE WORKS OF EDWARD MACDOWELL

TRIOS.

(Piano, Violin, 'Cello.)

TO THE SEA. NAUTILUS.

(From "Sea Pieces.")

Price 2s. 6d. each.

STRING QUINTET.

(Two Violins, Viola, 'Cello, Bass.)

AT AN OLD TRYSTING PLACE.

2s. 6d. net.

FROM UNCLE REMUS.

3s. net.

(From "Woodland Sketches.")

Further Numbers in the Press.

Complete catalogue of MacDOWELL's celebrated compositions will gladly be sent free on request.

ELKIN & CO., LTD..

8 & 10, BEAK STREET, REGENT STREET,
LONDON, W.1.

BROADWOOD PIANOS

BOSWORTH & CO., LTD.

MIND-POWER IN MUSIC.

FOR STUDENTS,
TEACHERS, AND PERFORMERS.

BY

E. DOUGLAS TAYLER.

Price 1s. 3d. net.

This Text-Book covers a wide range of psychology as applied to music, and will prove of great help in overcoming any difficulties which may occur in the study of music.

BOSWORTH & CO., LTD.,

8, HEDDON STREET, REGENT STREET, LONDON, W.1.

JUST PUBLISHED.

No. 99.—NOVELLO'S MUSIC PRIMERS.

PIANOFORTE ACCOMPANIMENT

BY

WELTON HICKIN

Fellow and Professor, Royal Academy of Music.

CONTENTS.

Technical Proficiency—Artistic Imagination—Ensemble—Balance of Tone—Phrasing—Vital Notes—Pedalling—Recitations with Music—Reading at Sight—Transposition—Harmonization—Recitative—Modulation—Accompaniment studied in detail, &c.

PRICE ... FOUR SHILLINGS.
Paper Boards, 5s.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

The Musical Times

AND SINGING-CLASS CIRCULAR

JULY 1 1924

(FOR LIST OF CONTENTS SEE PAGE 656.)

CONDUCTORS AND CONDUCTING

BY WILLIAM WALLACE

I.

In a former series of articles on this subject, the historical side has been considered. In coming to modern aspects we are faced by the problem of describing in words an act which is muscular and at the same time largely mental and musical. The physical, and, it must be added, the visible part of the question is best answered by practical demonstration—unless, indeed, we resort to the unequivocal style of the Manual of Infantry Training, and then we should run the risk of inculcating mechanical habits which we are most anxious to deprecate.

Nobody need travel far out of his way to find handbooks which suggest to him the rudiments of the business, if he has not already made up his mind about them by constant attendance at orchestral concerts. In this respect mastery of music will not be complete without obedience of muscle.

Intimately connected with this are those tangles, those cruces, which are to be encountered on every page of every orchestral score—those challenges to interpretation, frankly accepted by conductors, no matter how unacceptable their readings may be to studious audiences. Individuality will assert itself, and the personal element cannot be disregarded. It is not the exclusive endowment of the conductor: it exists in varying strength in every one in the concert-room, and accounts for the diversity of opinion that follows a performance. Thus it comes about that howsoever practical our concern with the conductor in the co-ordination of his muscles and his orchestra, we have also to study the mind of the man who is thinking in music and transmuting his thought into action.

Of recent years the vogue of the conductor has robbed the prima donna of much of her glamour. At first sight this might appear as if one protagonist had yielded place to another, and in a certain sense it is true; but the artistic effort of each, and the influence of the audience upon them, must be taken into account in estimating their relative values.

To a generation that is no longer with us, it scarcely mattered what the 'star' sang. The dilettante concentrated his attention on the delivery of some favourite passage, or of a high note; what the composer had to do with it was of less, if of any, account. The prima donna was not interpreting music: she was displaying her physical and artistic capacity for singing. To put the matter accurately and frankly she was, as to her throat, a gymnast. The muscles of her larynx were to her what the muscles of a gymnast were to him. In demanding vox et preterea nihil, the public encouraged a vicious system in which music was merely a device for parading a highly cultivated vocal accomplishment, little attention being paid to the end of which singing was only an element of the means. Thus the reign of the prima donna was an Occasion—it was not a Creation.

The conductor, on the other hand, aims at reproducing the thought of the composer, employing his own critical judgment, and enhancing the score as it left the creator's mind, adding to its brilliancy, and unravelling obscure or complicated passages.

Thus we have two aspects of interpretation; one, in which the personality of the individual stands out and dwarfs the surroundings, the other, in which, through the co-operation of the orchestra, the personality becomes paradoxically impersonal, the combined effort of a number converging with singleness of purpose towards unity of effort.

The comparison between the conductor and the prima donna cannot worthily be carried very far. Reference, however, must be made to the matter, for through his ascendancy the conductor in recent years has come to occupy in the public mind a position somewhat analogous to that of the operatic soprano, and the risk for the public has been to concentrate the attention upon the doings of an individual rather than to view his results in true perspective. Audiences in fact have been attracted by the performance of the interpreter, whether conductor or singer, but with this broad distinction, that in the case of the conductor it is his attitude towards the composer's ideas that is held of most account; in the case of the prima donna nobody troubled about the composer who wrote the roulades so long as she overcame them with ease, yielded to encores, and dragged the concert to an inordinate length.

In recent times there has been much windy debate of this or that conductor's methods, but ultimately the question has resolved itself into a discussion of the music performed, and this is the right attitude. Indeed, of works which have failed to produce an impression, it is not rare to hear it said that even such and such a conductor of eminence could not have made them effective. This is going too far, for on the contrary ineptitude may contort a work out of all recognition. Still, the criticism shows that audiences are getting more discriminating, and that the lure of the conductor is not always potent enough to efface a composer's shortcomings.

The position of the 'guest' conductor is by no means established. It is being assailed by influences which, in days when orchestral music was less frequently heard, could be ignored or belittled, and of these finance is not the least formidable. The awakening of public interest in orchestral music has led to the formation of orchestras, amateur as well as professional, and although societies in some instances have clung to the superstition that the conductor must be a foreigner, artistic rivalry and competition have made themselves felt by that sensitive gauge, the box-office. It has come to be a vital question whether the large fees absorbed by the 'guest' conductor have been justified and balanced by increased audiences and improved resources, and whether the efforts spent in obtaining a commercial 'draw' might not have been diverted into less pretentious but equally artistic channels.

Self-supporting orchestras have found that the supply of 'guest' conductors—or at least those accepted by the public—is not unlimited, and these orchestras have been driven to fall back upon their own musicians, some of whom have at last been given the opportunity which was denied them so long as the foreigner had his own way.

The substitution of native for alien talent, at first viewed askance by those who had bent the knee to the foreigner and had refused bare justice in musical matters to their own fellow-countrymen, proved to be an experiment less hazardous and costly than had been anticipated. With increased facilities for performance came a correspondingly large supply of new works, and as many of these were of an advanced style of composition, often too intricate to be mastered by a permanent conductor, with other numbers in the programme to be rehearsed within a limited space of time, it became the custom, but not the rule, that the composer should conduct his own work.

Something will be said later of the composer in relation to the conductor. For the present it cannot be denied that it is quite as easy to write 'impossible' passages for the strings as it is to place on the conductor's desk a score of which not even the most conscientious study and analysis will help either the composer or his interpreters.

Herein music differs from all other forms of art. A piece of sculpture, a painting, a poem, stand before the public in their ripeness—even their audacity; but in music there are many mansions, and from door and window and house-top there are clamours, each voice asserting, expostulating, chattering, scoffing, quarrelling, flinging taunts, jeering, answering back, vituperating, till the rabble-riot is quelled by a man in the street, to all appearance threatening the noisy ones with a little stick.

It is not unlikely that a composer, trading upon the credulity of his audience by offering them the mangled discards of others, would find himself in a hopeless predicament were he politely offered the baton. In the present state of things, to venture an opinion might be fraught with danger. At all events, the composer has in recent years been given an opportunity for conducting which twenty-five years ago was denied him until with some assurance he took up the cudgels for himself. He has had his chance of conducting orchestras remote from the critical and not altogether encouraging eye of metropolitan dikasts, and in discovering the use of his arms has found his feet.

In a certain sense orchestral music may be regarded as a form of drama in which all the characters are assembled on the stage, with the conductor between the instrumentalists and the audience, like the chorus in a play, interpreting the composer's ideas. This is the dramaturgical aspect of his work. For the moment we are leaving out of consideration all the preparation which has to be made before he appears on the platform. It must often be the case that the conductor, while consciously playing upon his orchestra by indicating subdued moments and working up climaxes, is also carrying his audience along with him, and creating in their minds an understanding of the music somewhat akin to his own. The relation of eye-sense to ear-sense is a large question, and there is undoubtedly a psychic connection between the two. In the concert-room the visual impression is obtained from the conductor and orchestra: in the opera-house, where the auditorium is, or ought to be, darkened, the action on the stage provides the visual stimulus, and may be so engrossing as to deflect the attention wholly from the music.

But the same distraction can and does exist in the concert-room, and the intelligent observer may forget the music in wondering what the conductor will do next. With this suggestion of the dramatic in mind, we may ask if a conductor's reputation may not be due in part to invincible clumsiness of 'action' at the outset of his career, which eventually he is forced to cultivate deliberately as his 'style,' and without which he might jeopardise his popularity.

It is not incomprehensible that he may vary his reading on each occasion according to the intimacy or strangeness of his surroundings, the importance of the orchestra, or the preconceived demands of the audience. Rumour may have gone before, heralding his doom as an artist or his triumph as a comedian. These are grave matters, and concern the 'guest' conductor; indeed, it would be interesting to look into his mind and have a glimpse of his thoughts about it at all. But all conductors do not stand around the starry throne, and the time may come when audiences, bred in an environment more musical than spectacular, will divest themselves of the craving for show and settle down to listen.

It is by no means an overstatement that after a concert the visual impression is the first that is described by many, and the most enduring. It is not given to everyone to wander over the country in quest of music; for information about out-of-the-way musical doings the appeal has to be made to people calling themselves musical. On such an appeal to a person who had attended a remote but exceptional performance—one who would have shown deep resentment if regarded as unmusical—the only reply was a description of the conductor's exaggerated and unnecessary gestures: about the music, not a syllable.

Why, then, it may be asked, are we left with a feeling of insufficiency after a fine orchestral performance under a wooden and mechanical conductor? Why, again, can a brilliant conductor convince us that we have been listening to a first-rate band when, in fact, the quality has been indifferent? If we call to mind conductors who have made their name, and even those whose rare appearances have shown that they have a wide technical comprehension of the art; if, too, we analyse the impressions which they have conveyed to us, we will find, setting all music aside for the moment, that they have struck us as being physically endowed with dramatic instinct. For this instinct does not imply 'barn-storming,' page after page, but equally and appropriately reticence, motionless self-control. Furthermore, were we to drag the confession from them, they would admit very likely that the works which gave them the most pleasure to conduct were those which demanded some form of physical expression, over and above all the æsthetic content of the music. If candid they would acknowledge, as the actor does, a preference for certain rôles.

Eliminating for the moment all musical considerations, let us see what the conductor has to do in the concert-room. With his back to the audience he has to carry out movements of arms and body, and these, whether awkward or graceful, abrupt or suave, grotesque or restrained, must influence to some extent those who, behind him, are noting every action. Besides, the first point discussed after the concert is over will be, as we have pointed out, the conductor's style. It will be clear, then, that the method of the conductor has no small influence on the appreciation of the audience, and lack of co-ordination and reserve may vitiate the effect of the music.

From all points of view it is expedient that some consideration should be given to that part of the conductor's functions which he has to discharge in public, notwithstanding his special duty of training and directing the orchestra. It will be necessary, therefore, to enlarge upon the psychological aspect of his work, and to investigate the all-important influence which he wields. At the outset it is fitting to consider the conductor as he looms in the eye of the public before we come to practical and technical details.

So far we have had in mind only those conductors who from a managerial or popular point of view have a 'box-office value.' They, as artists, would be the first to repudiate with scorn any assessment of their capabilities on a sliding scale. At the same time they would be scarcely human to ignore it. The life of a 'star,' whether musical or celestial, were we to attempt to estimate it, would bring us into conflict with assurances and calculations, which, as we are mere musicians, we leave to statisticians and astronomers. So it is that when the City of Manford-super-Chesterpool announces the performance of Brahms's No. 5, the audience will flock to see it conducted by Herr Maschin. They will be disappointed in beholding a head of Nordic type, without long hair or bunchy necktie, and in feature not at all unlike one of their own tram-conductors.

(To be continued.)

A COMMENTARY UPON MENDELSSOHN

BY HUBERT J. FOSS

(Concluded from June number, page 499.)

The oratorios and pianoforte works of Mendelssohn are the basis of that fundamental love which the English still bear towards him. Of the pianoforte works, the Prelude and Fugue in E minor is not the most typical of his writings for the instrument, but is important as exhibiting a strong and interesting side of Mendelssohn's art; and also as quite the best of his Fugues, and one of the best things in his whole production.

Mendelssohn's pianoforte works may without arbitrariness be divided into three very characteristic moods: the suave, the agitated, and the capricious. Mendelssohn, himself a concert pianist, wrote for the pianoforte with no less, perhaps even with greater, skill than for other instruments. But while suited to the instrument, in technique his pianoforte works were neither original nor particularly interesting. There is in his pianoforte music not only a limitation of mood but also a limitation of technical interest: there is no novelty of effect, nor many passages which require really expert playing. There are indeed few things in all his numerous pianoforte compositions fit to compare with even the early Octet, and particularly with the bigger orchestral works.

In this Fugue on the other hand, Mendelssohn seems to stand outside himself. It is a work in which, in addition to the fact that it is in meaning far deeper than his habitual mood, he is able to display his skill in counterpoint. This his worst enemies cannot deny him, although they may assert with justice that it was frequently vitiated and even dismissed by his desire for harmonic sufficiency: that, in other words, his desire for horizontal interest was too often tempered by his desire for the sleek vertical effects for which his works are so notable. An early interest and education in Bach's music is not alone responsible for this contrapuntal efficiency; it was a seed that fell upon the good ground of his precocious technical facility. Despite, therefore, our surprise that Mendelssohn, the easily moved by outside impressions, should delight in the fugue, we can on technical grounds understand this interest and applaud it.

The turbulent Prelude to this Fugue is conceived in one short sweep from start to finish. Closely allied in subject-matter to the Fugue it precedes, it seems to give the spirit of the latter in a full blast of breath, a shout, while its successor is a reasoned and controlled statement of the same idea, no less orceful though less forcible, and achieving a greater strength by its more careful and deliberate progress.

The Fugue itself is comparable to the first movement of the later Violin Concerto (discussed infra) in its abandonment of that habitual and conventional reserve which makes Mendelssohn's utterance graceful rather than profound. The earlier work is nearer the hysterical than the later, but it is also nearer to the elemental, though indeed still too far from it. Built upon a subject of considerable inherent beauty:

Ex. 5.

should always be criticised only in its effective juxtaposition and contrast with the swift first movement, and not, as it is so frequently played by amateurs, as a solo piece standing in its own ground. Regarded in the former light it has, of course, a far greater value as music. The third movement exemplifies the 'airy-fairy,' scherzo side of Mendelssohn's mind, and may be described as dependent for its climax on the repetition rather than the development of themes. It has not the clinching quality that is now (but was not so much then) demanded of a last movement, and at the end of it we have a feeling of doubt whether its material is presented in the right form, whether that material is not too light to fill out a whole developed ternary movement, with solo instrument and orchestra. The subjects are certainly handled with dexterity, but not with finality.

There are not many points of detail that call for comment. Again we observe at once the economy of material—the use, for instance, that is made of the not very promising material contained in the triplet figure of the soloist after the first subject has been stated :

Ex. 6. Solo Violin.

The second subject exactly exemplifies Wagner's remark when he said, 'His second tunes, his slow movements generally, where the human element comes in, are weaker' :

Ex. 7.

Solo Violin.

There is the typical modulation of which Mendelssohn made such constant use all his life, the harmony—Mendelssohn was at least harmonist enough to exploit some of the richness of the discords made by pedal notes—and the clever interlacing of the wood-wind parts. But orchestrally it is a fine moment. Immediately after there is a relaxation, and the soloist's counterpoint, though clear, shows a failure of imagination.

The curious weakness of the opening of the development section is again highly characteristic. To introduce here the first subject in the major is so obvious a backsliding, so mechanical a device, and so ineffective a treatment, that even a student would instinctively shy at it. Then the pendulum swings the other way, when the soloist has a diminished statement of the 'bridge-passage' theme :

Ex. 8. Solo Violin.

This simple, delicate, dropping phrase for the violin is extraordinarily effective. There is a repressed emotional intensity here, which breaks out in a crescendo orchestral passage with a drum-roll as we approach the cadenza. The cadenza itself, apart from its perfect position, has curiously little musical interest.

The moments at the end of the repeated bridge-passage are of high emotional interest, and well exemplify both Mendelssohn's constructive ability and the strength of his ideas when writing this work. The attention is held in suspense until the music resolves into the calm second subject, which is given by its position a significance far beyond that of its mere notes. And this import is strengthened by the soloist's stating at the end the first phrase of the theme in a low register, and in the minor against held strings and staccato brass and drums, all pianissimo. This does not seem to me merely a convenience, a modulating phrase : it is an integral part of the recapitulation. The repetition of the Codetta (in E minor) now appears like a sudden flame bursting out of ashes that seemed to be dead, particularly in that from its start to the end of the movement there is an unbroken sweep of music in a great stretto.

At the end we have the feeling that the musical material has been given its final treatment, and that upon it has been built a structure that is a logical result of that material. It is a lastingly fine movement, which makes us regret deeply the falling away of the other two movements. Apart from the flimsiness of their material and its undecisive treatment, how can we regard from such a musician egregious errors of style such as the modulation from tonic to dominant that occurs in the last movement? In a hymn-tune it would be poor, but in an attempt to establish a key of the structural importance which the dominant bears in this form, such a procedure is an unpleasant commentary upon the musical methods of its author. Then again the use of the first-subject rhythm as a counter-phrase to the second subject is, in practice, a turning back upon his purpose which seems like sheer bad invention. This florid last movement is perhaps better to hear than to think about. It has an air of extravagance and lightness that are taking in performance, but it cannot be said to provide a fit ending to a Concerto with so fine an opening.

If one expresses the intention of examining the solid achievement of Mendelssohn he draws at once the enfilade fire of both flanking parties—the re-acted upon and those who are not even re-acted upon. But such fire can always be turned away; from the first side by appealing to its merely critical sense which has enabled it to transcend the Mendelssohnian; from the other by two even more pertinent questions—What is a master? and and why, by what right, is he accepted as a master with no fear of investigation? It is surely more complimentary to Mendelssohn than the words of both these parties to inquire into what he actually did, instead of taking for granted what he is accepted as having done or presumed not to have done.

I have here examined the three works which in my view are the nucleus of Mendelssohn's serious production. (It may be asked why I have not included the Midsummer Night's Dream Overture; the answer is because I prefer the Scherzo, as being his own, to the more prodigious Overture, as being Weber's; and to the Scherzo I prefer the three works enumerated.) What do we admire in these works? First their strong feeling for life as well as music: they all have 'drive.' Secondly their revelation of the man Mendelssohn: in all he has abandoned the conventional for the real, and if, perhaps, the real is not very important, it is at least real. But, thirdly, we admire the sheer music of these works; the economy of material never palls because there is development, wholeness, a use of actual and not conventional form, in an emotional and not an academic way. In all three there is inspiration of musical energy that produces the sweeping movement of them. They have bare relation to life. The staid feelings of the drawing-room have been thrust away for feelings that at once sum up and transcend humanity. Further than that, there is a universal idea in them, and not only a common idea (vide supra); and it is because this universal idea does not appear integrally through the other parts that make up the music, does not always show its pure nakedness through its veil of decency that is the music's texture, that these three works are not superlative, but only master works of a composer of the second rank. The nearness of them to the first rank is their remarkable feature, although to so many it will appear remarkable that they are not hailed with acclamation.

The responsibility of our age to Mendelssohn and his music is to bare our minds of the Mendelssohn idea, the Mendelssohn instinct, the idiom in which he wrote, the relation he bore to the music of his predecessors, and the influence he wielded over his followers. It is a matter of taking such a thing as 'the Mendelssohn ending' as a part of music, not as a part of a welcome or despised environment. Do we like, as music, that cadence, or not? Or do we merely like it as Mendelssohn? Only so can we discover Mendelssohn's relation to this age, which is the beginning of his relation to ages to come, and only so can we discover whether he was real or only an accepted composer, a man of skill or a man of strong if tempered passions, a man who made pretty or made individual music.

And it was not Mendelssohn's least virtue as a composer that he was not startling: if he showed individuality without being startling, which I find that he did in his best moments, then he, is the greater composer for that.

WORRYING ABOUT THE LARYNX

BY H. J. KIMBELL

Why worry about the larynx?

To judge from certain turns that discussions on the vocal art are apt to take, it would seem that a good many singers are inclined to forget singing by dabbling in physiological fancies. Should the larynx be held high; should the larynx be permanently depressed in song? It is a fashion to fritter away time and ingenuity over such questions as this—while life is all too short for the acquirement of essential vocal technics.

The physiology of vocal production is an absorbing topic, and the teacher of singing may no doubt profitably inquire into it, but he ought to realise that unless he take a full medical course he cannot be more than a dilettante, and that after all it is not the essence of his vocation. There were perfectly good singers and singing teachers before the A B C of physiology was known, just as there were athletes who could wrestle and box before the muscles of the body were catalogued.

There is a positive danger in undue preoccupation with functions which work aright naturally. Think overmuch about some fanciful improvement in lifting or dropping your feet as you walk, and you may lose all naturalness of gait. As for this recent agitated talk of the larynx, practical advice is to forget entirely throughout the whole of your vocal career that you have such an organ. The larynx is not normally under voluntary control. The more you think of it the worse you sing.

Singing is a matter entirely of two highly conscious proceedings—breathing and diction. The position of the larynx is dictated by the respiratory action. Respiration is not controlled by any placing of the larynx, and so, since singing depends on breathing and the appropriate reserve and control of the air in the lungs, why worry about the larynx?

It is always difficult to express what exactly is the point of mental concentration in the act of singing, and that is why no amount of writing about singing can ever be more than ancillary to practical instruction. After all, the essence of singing-teaching is to work for the right tone from the pupil to such a degree that the pupil acquires confidently the sense in his body of the conditions which have propagated this tone. The secondary function of the master is to detect when the tone is wrong, and the cause, and to correct it. All this can quite confidently be done without either party having a notion of laryngology.

But it seems to be becoming a positive craze that vocalists should neglect their desirable occupation of learning to sing well in favour of quasi-medical pursuits, in which they may waste time and even ruin their capacities for making music, while not being ever likely to rival Harley Street. My advice to singers is—whatever hobby you take up, avoid laryngology. Stamp-collecting may not be of much use to you artistically, but it is much safer. Of course much the best thing is to work hard, and become a good singer, a matter with which sensations in the larynx have nothing to do. Nature providentially neglected to give normal human beings, among whom I include singers, sensations in their vocal cords. You may think for hours of your vocal chords—you cannot place them.

Hearing all the sorry attempts at singing by the earnest, gifted, musical, young people who indefatigably invite their relations and the newspaper critics to West End concert-halls—attempts which on the whole compare so unfavourably with the corresponding concerts of instrumentalists—one had often sought for a reason for their imperfections. Perhaps we have it here in this new cult of the larynx. One had thought that these people had not even tried to learn to sing. But maybe they have all spent years in teaching their larynges tricks—some maintaining it high up, never allowing the unlucky organ to descend from its perch, others having put it through an arduous course of depression which taught it never to venture above the ridge of the collar. Hence, perhaps, so many dreary hours of helpless, uncontrolled, ugly, unpromising singing.

Bother the larynx!

BRAHMS: SOME THOUGHTS TOWARDS A RE-VALUATION

BY RICHARD BINNS

It is a truism that great artists are not recognised until they are dead. There have been notable exceptions; indeed, Mr. Newman was urging not long ago that no really great composer remains entirely unrecognised in his lifetime. But between a general recognition and that particular recognition which belongs to the few advanced intelligences able to make contact with genius while it is still nascent there is a vast gulf. The reputation of few composers has remained unaltered at their death; the ending of a man's creative activity frees the critical mind from the apprehensions incident to the analysis of anything incomplete, and allows the lifetime's output to be seen as a whole, and assessed, at least for the time being, as a tangible and unalterable entity. That perspective through which works of art settle more or less finally into their place in history is essentially a matter of longer time, with its increased data of comparisons and relationships. Brahms, it may be said, was one of the fortunate ones, in that he won some instant recognition; and while it is true that almost throughout his career praise of him alternated with detraction or open hostility, he cannot be classed with those to whom, in the flesh, Success disdained a glance. He was fated, however, to create one of the half-dozen historic controversies in music the whole issues of which have not, even yet, been determined. There was some reason, and much instinct, behind the objections of Brahms's early contemporary critics. What could you expect those good Germans to make of a man who first dumbfounded them with the difficulties of the Paganini Variations, and then responded to their bewildered applause by playing the last movement of a Rasoumovsky Quartet as a pianoforte solo? The twenty-five years since the death of Brahms have seen his works so much more frequently performed as to enhance the opportunities of a more widely-spread and considered judgment of their merits. Twenty-five years of composition, too, have materially changed the response of the general ear to relationships in musical sound. The standards of vocal, instrumental, and interpretative technique have changed also; and with these changes some of the old obstacles to the common appreciation of Brahms, if they have not been obliterated, have at least ceased to be formidable. To-day, even in England, neither the Paganini Variations nor the Handel Variations are regarded as in any sense the 'impracticable' music they were once thought to be, and works like the C minor Sonata, the E flat minor Scherzo, and the D minor Pianoforte Concerto, stormily disputed at their birth, have become veritable 'eagle's feathers.'

That the interest of the many in any composer's works is unlikely to persist for, say, more than a score of years, unless those works are great enough to bring inquiring minds back to them again and again in spite of patent discouragements, is not likely to be challenged. There were those bold enough to proclaim a few years ago that the war would sound the death-knell of Brahmsian music—if its beginning had not already done so; and there were also members of both the anti-Wagner and the anti-Brahms parties who were secretly well satisfied to claim the war as an admirable excuse for calling off an æsthetic battle which they were finding too difficult to sustain in face of the increasingly serious effort of the general musical public to see Brahms fairly, and see him whole. The ingenuousness of the Excusists proved well founded. To-day there is more interest in Brahms than ever there was. Possibly the natural reaction from a surfeit of extravagant and dubious modern music has stimulated a healthy inclination to submit old judgments to the test of more recent experience. Whatever the cause, it is clear that the comfortably-accepted view of Brahms as a rather forbidding formalist who carried the art of music no farther than where Beethoven left it, merely filling up a few gaps in the brickwork, and so making the Symphony a dead end, is being re-examined by a good many people. These, refusing to take on trust the assertion that the evidence of Brahms's output establishes little or nothing beyond the extent to which he fulfilled 'his mission to restore the classical traditions of music,' find a more fruitful regard for the element of expression in that output, and find also that it is more profitable to relate the traditional classicism of Brahms to this element of expression than to consider them as inalienable and the latter as necessarily secondary. They scratch the skin of the Classic and discover that the Romantic lies not so far beneath as they had been led to suppose, and in such measure, moreover, as to set Brahms for them in a new and more generous light.

One might discourse unendingly on the genius of Brahms in the structure and design of Symphonic music without getting much further than Hadow got twenty years ago (and was thought irresponsible and extravagant for it), in describing him as the fulfiller of the need for ... a composer who, while he maintains and develops the harmonic traditions of the Romantic School, shall take up the classical form where Beethoven left it, aid to free it from the conventions which that greatest of all masters did not wholly succeed in loosening, and carry it to a further stage and raise it to a fuller organization.

But—'the little more' ('and how much it is'—the quotation is apt enough to bear extension) would serve to show, I think, that not only did Brahms tie again with more perfect finish the ends that Beethoven had to leave tangled—it is admitted even by some of his opponents that he made a better job of the parcel than his great predecessor did—but that, without recourse to the methods of the Programmists, he made a distinct and personal contribution to the material of Romance in music, and raised the identification of it with the means employed in its expression, to a higher power. The last place to look for any supporting evidence, it might pardonably be thought, would be the Symphony in E minor, so long judged by many competent critics to be perhaps the knottiest of all Brahms's bigger compositions; yet unmistakably the evidence is there—lofty thought combined with perfection of form, and in the middle, two movements of extraordinary charm. The imposing symmetry of this symphony's architecture cannot be questioned; nor can the mastery of its polyphony; but between the grey melancholy and strife of the opening Allegro and the graven strength of the Passacaglia there is a world of Romantic beauty that opens only to a warm and infinitely human interpretation. Nobody before Brahms had made the simultaneous movement of varied rhythms and figuration so pregnant with life or had garbed his thematic limbs in them to such effects alike of strength and tenderness as Brahms did in the remarkable Andante whose unconventional A minor-E major harmony, once thought an oddity, is now conceived as a stroke of genius. Nobody save Schubert had come near the lyrical magic and mystery of this movement: not even Schubert evoked more subtle felicities of colour or more delicate variations of feeling than Brahms does here through his wonderful use of the woodwind and horns, which seem to become under his hands—and not by any means in this Symphony alone—the peculiar instruments of the soft rich beauty in Keats's Season of mists and mellow fruitfulness.

That Brahms learned as much from Schubert as from Beethoven is self-evident, but only the most superficial criticism could be content to assert that he merely borrowed ideas, types of themes, or tricks of colour, and leave it at that. For it is true, as Hadow has pointed out, that although Schubert could pour a more 'profuse strain of unpremeditated art,' art in its larger manifestations may be the gainer by premeditation. One result of the premeditation which was a part of Brahms's nature (and in a sense both cause and effect of his Pateresque withdrawal from social busy-ness) was to enhance most of what is Schubertian in his music by a depth of thought and a certain intensity of character which the work of Schubert rarely owned. Schubert, too, was at best but a short-breathed symphonic craftsman; Brahms possessed an athletic musical stamina which enabled him to set beside the questionably 'heavenly length' of Schubert's C major Symphony, not a similar profuse succession of fine tunes, but the monumental completeness of his own imposing E minor. The contrast between the first and revised versions of the B major Trio affords a striking illustration of this enhancement: of how far Brahms came to leave Schubertianisms behind: but the true pitch and value of the deeper notes in his themes, their accompanying extra richness of colour and rhythmic variety, can be more purposefully studied in such later works as the B flat Sextet; in the C major Trio (Op. 87), where Brahms seems to stride up exultingly from autumnal evening into the full brilliant light of summer day; and again in the Horn Trio (Op. 40), a few passages of which suggest a closer relationship with Wagner than with Schubert. It would be a mistake, however, to assume that this peculiar poetic bloom is no more than an incidental out-crop emerging here and there in the work of one preoccupied with some entirely dissociable or antithetic aim. Its persistence from the single golden thread of folk-song in the first Pianoforte Sonata to its part in the great closing compositions of Brahms's life suggests, indeed, that it was a direct effect of one of the fundamental informing spirits of his work. It is incipient, as I have hinted, in the slow movement and the con espressione theme of the Allegro of Op. 1—a little commonplace and of too lush a sentiment maybe, but beguiling us against our inclinations as commonplace things so often will; it is to be found, developed and polished, in the neglected F minor Pianoforte Sonata Op. 5; it can be traced in Protean manifestations through the Magelone Romances—where Brahms lightly touches Bach, Gluck, Handel, Beethoven, and Schumann, and passes on—much of the succeeding chamber music, the second Symphony, and on to the sublime Clarinet Quintet. In the second Symphony, where the workmanship (like the composer's playing, as Joachim wrote of it) is inevitable in its precision and certainty of touch, all the poetry of his inspiration seems to be gathered together as in a garland of late summer flowers, foredoomed to a short life, whose fragrance refreshes the heart as much as their external beauty satisfies the eye and mind.

Keats, it may be recalled, advised Shelley to 'load every rift of his poetry with ore.' There are not wanting signs that Brahms took a similar precept to heart. Shelley might, in reply, have invited his younger contemporary to consider the value of structural vertebrae. There was no need for any contemporary of Brahms to offer him the like advice. One might, without much stretching of analogy, apply to him Arthur Symonds's picture of Thomas Hardy:

You see the brain working with an almost painful simplicity—just saved from being painful by a humorous sense of external things which becomes also a kind of intellectual criticism. . . . In his feeling for nature, curiosity seems to broaden into a more intimate kind of communion. . . . His knowledge of nature brings him nearer to the unchanging and consoling element in the world. All the quite happy entertainment which he gets out of life comes to him from his contemplation of the peasant as himself a rooted part of the earth. . . . There is something brooding, obscure, tremulous, as he meditates over man, nature, and destiny.

Although Brahms as a philosophic thinker has suffered almost as unjust an eclipse in some quarters as Brahms the romantic poet, it will need a deal of thinking to explain away as negligible the philosophic content of the lovely Schicksalslied, the lofty Vier Ernste Gesänge, or the moving Requiem; and we have not yet penetrated the innermost shrine of the first Symphony, which seems at once to give and to conceal (but from how different a starting point!) as much as the Symphony of Beethoven in the same key. These works point to Brahms as one of the biggest minds of his day, and of bigger all-round musical stature than any subsequent symphonic writer, with the possible exception of our own Elgar. Emil Naumann finished his summing-up of Brahms somewhere about the middle of his life with a phrase that seems pitifully curious now: 'The only man worthy to be placed by his side is Rubinstein.' Naumann was the incarnation of Teutonism in the music-criticism of his day, and that declaration was meant for praise. It is interesting to turn to Paul Landormy's recently published History of Music for a modern declaration—which is all the more significant in that M. Landormy is about as much pro-German as Naumann was pro-French:

No composer of his own day [says M. Landormy] discovered rhythmic patterns more subtle . . . He was marvellously successful with effects in grayish half-tints, in which respect his two first Violin Sonatas are altogether beyond compare . . . He possessed an ensemble of qualities that were entirely his own, and his music is among that whose composer one recognises without hesitation . . . He was one of the most refined poet-musicians of the 19th century.

A good thing out of Nazareth, indeed!

Music, since Brahms, has ranged over new and widely opening pastures, and its channels have seemed to lead farther and farther away from him. And yet (as Mr. Langford has truthfully said) Brahms remains; his principles remain, too, stubbornly alive in his work,

. . . a standing reproof to all our modern ways, and they seem likely to remain until the art of music finds its way out of the machine-tempered system which is its modern prison. Those who build up the art afresh after this prison is destroyed, may possibly go back to Brahms for their beginning.

ADVERTISE MUSIC!

BY M.-D. CALVOCORESSI

Concert-managers, artists, and publicity experts have been holding a conference 'to determine the best way of attracting the right kind of music-lover to the West End concert-halls.' One newspaper informed us that 'advertising experts are convinced that concert-halls can be filled . . . provided they are brought before the public notice in a proper manner.' Even granting that the word 'they' in this wonderful sentence refers to concerts, and not—as mere parsing might lead us to believe—to concert-halls, all I can say is that advertising experts must be the most sanguine people under the sun.

If it is difficult to fill concert-halls—even, at times, with 'paper'—anybody (except perhaps advertising experts) might realise that the root of the trouble lies deeper. There can be no doubt that most of the present methods of advertising concerts are highly unsatisfactory.

But so long as people concentrate upon the minor question of bringing concerts 'before the public notice in a proper manner,' they are bound to fail in the end, although they may devise means that will provide now and then a temporary fillip.

Something might be done by inquiring into the meaning of these mystic words, 'the right kind of music-lover.' Perhaps the best way to conduct this investigation is to consider the state of things revealed by some of the present methods of advertising—especially the methods that seem to show that music is the last thing in which the public appealed to is supposed to be interested.

Nothing could be more sadly characteristic than the handbills that give all possible information about a forthcoming concert except the programme.

Only the other day one of these announcements came into my hands. It set forth that Mr. So-and-So was about to give his first concert in London. A large portrait enabled me to ascertain that Mr. So-and-So had wavy hair, a good forehead, an indifferent nose, and a fairly thick moustache. The usual particulars as to hall, date, price of tickets, and so forth, were followed by the letters P.T.O. I glanced at the back page only to find, instead of the programme, a biography of Mr. So-and-So and a list of people who thought highly of his playing.

In my Sunday paper this week, out of thirty-six concert announcements, twenty-five contain no reference to the programme, eight give the programme in full, and three a vague outline only. In other words, only twenty-two per cent. of these costly advertisements are worded so as to mean anything to the music-lovers who do not attend concerts merely in order to hear A's playing or B's singing. Perhaps some day advertising experts will realise that these music-lovers are music-lovers of the right kind.

The casual mention, 'Programme will include works by Bach, Beethoven, John Doe, and Richard Roe,' is almost as bad as no mention at all. The right kind of music-lover may wish to know whether he is going to hear other works by Bach or Beethoven than those of which recent concerts may have given him an overdose. Here, however, I grant that the prospect of a particular artist's interpretation may sometimes turn the scale.

With the names of John Doe and Richard Roe the position is different. They represent unknown quantities, and the additional information conveyed by the titles of their works would amount to nil. If the music-lover is of the right kind according to my own definition, he should in any case wish to hear John Doe's and Richard Roe's music in the hope that it may provide valuable additions to his stock of musical experience.

But to buy a concert ticket in order to hear works by unknown composers is a terrible gamble. To listen to new works by unknown composers is always a risk which only people endowed with an indiscriminating appetite or with a keen sense of duty can face as a matter of course. The average music-lover, even of the right kind, may hesitate to face it blindly. But if he had heard or read that the works in question were worthy of notice, it might be another matter.

Professional press advertisers are generally in quest of some peg on which to hang their advertisements. My advice to them is: let this peg be the music, and always the music. Concert advertising, at present, usually puts the cart before the horse, when it does not leave the horse altogether out. Let advertisers think of increasing the demand before devoting time and money to recommending a particular source of supply. Let them try their hand at turning a great portion of the public into gluttons for music as other lines in advertising have turned great portions of it into gluttons for pills and sauces and linoleum and fountain-pens.

This amounts to placing the question on a different footing altogether. Indeed, the matter ceases to be one of advertising in the narrower sense of the word. Small wonder that—so far as I can judge from the reports that came to my notice—not a single word on this aspect of the question, and very little on the question whether concert programmes are as satisfactory as might be, was uttered at the Publicity Club Meeting. Properly understood, the problem is utterly beyond the scope of mere advertising experts.

The Press could and should do a great deal to improve the conditions under which composers, concert-givers, and also—if only they knew it—music-lovers are struggling at present. But its first concern should be to deal with music in the same spirit of purposefulness and thoroughness as politics, science, commerce, industry, and literature are dealt with by the Press at its best. My first piece of advice to the editors of daily papers and weeklies that might do most in the matter, would be: 'Cease to treat music from the point of view of mere news. Give up the notion that the best policy is to provide the public only with what the public wants or is supposed to want. Aim at assuming leadership in music, as you do in all matters that you consider important. This is the only way to advertise music.'

From the point of view of the average editor a concert is usually news, but a musical work is not. I have heard an editor declare that even an account of a concert was no use to him unless it appeared the day after the concert. Whether an important work had been played, and whether his critic had important comments to offer on this work was no concern of his: time-limit alone mattered.

The editor of an American musical periodical once explained to me that it was useless for him to publish articles on composers of whom not one of his several hundred thousand readers had heard before. In 1910, a London editor emphatically asserted that the readers of his paper would not take the slightest interest in articles on the performances of the Russian Ballet at Paris—which included, among other things, the first production of Shéhérazade and of Stravinsky's Fire-Bird. More recently, I heard one pooh-pooh the notion of appointing a certain critic whose interest in contemporary music was known to him. 'Imagine,' he said, 'the feelings of my readers should they, on the strength of an article appearing in my paper, be lured into going to hear stuff by Stravinsky, Bliss, or Schönberg.'

These cases are no doubt isolated, but by no means exceptional. The consequences are exactly what might be expected. Three or four months ago a couple of new works by a composer whom not a few music-lovers hold in particular esteem were played for the first time in London. Out of three newspapers that devote the greatest amount of space to musical topics, two contained no notice of these works, and the third devoted two lines to each, against thirty odd lines dealing, in the same issue, with the merits and demerits of a violinist who plays half-a-dozen times a year in London, and contents himself with ringing changes between two or three dozen well-known items.

At this point, unavoidably, we are faced with the obligation of considering the duties and responsibilities of the critic as well as those of the editor. An editor, after all, is justified in thinking that he has done his best when he has appointed a critic whom he considers competent and conscientious. A little thought expended on the best policy to adopt with regard to the musical column might greatly alter the editor's standards of competence and conscientiousness.

It is utterly deplorable, for instance, that certain critics should achieve popularity by ostentatiously siding with the man in the street against the alleged 'highbrow.' A 'highbrow' being, so far as I can understand, a man who is not content with bowing to current opinion, a critic of this kind does exactly the reverse of his duty. Instead of stimulating the minds of his readers, he encourages them to laziness and self-satisfaction. He is among the very first people whom I should describe as responsible for the indifference of which our empty concert-halls stand as token.

The same may be said of critics who object to writing on contemporary composers pending the time when they will be able 'to see these composers whole,' and so make sure that they will never write a sentence which might be remembered against them. They are so very much afraid of impairing their critical reputation by one sin of commission that the heinousness of sins of omission never enters their heads. They are entirely in the right so far as they allege that their best work is that which refers to the topics that interest them most. They might allege the famous instance of Sainte-Beuve, that prince among critics, who went through life without ever offering a contribution to the study and appraisal of great contemporaries of his, such as Stendhal, Balzac, and Victor Hugo. But this is precisely where the editor might step in, intent upon ensuring that contemporary music will receive a due amount of consideration, and upon discovering the right man for the job. This is certainly a case where two heads would be better than one.

It will be noticed that if I were talking of any topic but music, remarks such as the above would be entirely superfluous. Literary critics do not seek to pit the classics against the moderns, or, when wishful to bestow praise upon Marie Corelli, inveigh against the 'highbrows' who revel in Meredith. Nor does any critic pour scorn upon admirers of Cézanne in order to lend weight to his own encomium of Millais. Nor would editors tolerate in any other column of their papers the recurrence of shortcomings such as are frequently noticeable in the musical column.

It is against this inequality of treatment that all those who just now are evincing concern with the concert-givers' plight should rise in arms. Surely, it is not unreasonable to expect that if the Press were to give music a normal amount of judicious attention, the public's interest in music would be stimulated more deeply and with more lasting results than by a mere advertising campaign. Create a public of genuine music-lovers, firstly by assisting the many genuine music-lovers that exist; secondly, by encouraging potential music-lovers; and thirdly, by making people realise that if they become genuine music-lovers they will be the gainers. I make the advertising experts and other people concerned a free present of these suggestions.

---

Ad Libitum

By 'FESTE'

---

A Palestine newspaper tells its readers that 'Sir Edward Elgar has been appointed Waster of the King's Music.' With due respect, I venture to point out that such a post would be a sinecure: how can one waste a thing that scarcely has an existence? There is general relief that the ancient office of the Mastership of the King's Music is to be continued, and a desire is being expressed in and out of print that the King and other members of the Royal Family should give music a helping hand by attendance at concerts. Such attendance, we are told, would cause all the snobs to roll up in the royal wake. Thus, The Sackbut for June says:

The King is the most potent influence among the snobs in England, and if he but realised the enormous value of music as a curative agent for much of the spirit of unrest that is abroad in his domains, I believe he would suffer the utmost tortures of the bored, and allow himself to be seen at concerts like [those of] the Royal Philharmonic Society.

Probably; but do musicians want that kind of support? Half the economic troubles in the musical world to-day are due to the fact that in the past musicians have depended far too much on such patronage. If during the Victorian era the profession had set about building up audiences from the rank and file, instead of catering for the fashionable few, music would now be able to count on steady support similar to that enjoyed by other forms of entertainment. That there is a huge and rapidly-growing public for musical performances is shown in several ways—the great crowds that attend the evening sessions of most of the Competition Festivals, the rapid increase in the number of gramophone records of the best music, and the steady improvement of wireless programmes. It is safe to say that the public for various kinds of good music is now almost, if not quite, as large as that for the cinema, the variety theatre, and the theatre proper. What the profession has to do now is to find the answer to the question, Why does this great public not fill the concert-halls? The answer will probably be found under several heads, one of which will deal with the competition set up by various methods of enjoying music at home viâ the gramophone, the pianola, and wireless. Others will be concerned with the faults of the concert-hall itself, with its cramped, stiff accommodation, unattractive appearance, stuffiness (in more senses than one), high prices of seats and programmes. Apropos of this last point, at what other public entertainment is one asked to pay a shilling for a programme that either tells the buyer no more than he could gather from the poster outside, or that pretends to justify the charge by giving him portraits of the performers, and some pages of more or less helpful analysis and description which very few have time or inclination to read? Even the portraits are often fictitious, for they usually show the performer about fifteen or twenty years younger than he really is. (Sometimes this flattering presentment is paraded outdoors as well. A few months ago a famous pianist, now bald beyond a peradventure, was shown on posters bearing the luxuriant mane with which he burst on London over a decade ago. What a game it is!)

The great music-loving public will not be coaxed into becoming regular patrons of the concert-hall by an occasional visit of Royalty. Does anybody believe that the King's partiality for racing and the theatre makes much difference to the attendance at those forms of recreation? Half the time the public doesn't know beforehand that His Majesty will be at a theatre, and a race meeting can always count on a good crowd.

Besides, if the King has no taste for music, why should he, or anybody else similarly blessed, be expected to turn up at concerts? I myself have only once attended a race meeting, and was then so bored that after an hour I sneaked off and played tennis. 'A poor meeting,' you suggest. Not at all. It was Gold Cup day at Ascot, in glorious weather, in pre-war days, with a glittering royal procession along the course, and I had a front seat. If the King feels about concerts as most musicians feel about race meetings, we need not wonder or complain at his absence from Queen's Hall. To expect him to come and act as a kind of decoy is unfair, and even undignified. If concert-givers can't get an audience they must realise that they are in the position of a tradesman who fails to attract custom, and they must do as the tradesman would do: they must overhaul their methods or shut up shop. To try to bolster up the concern by exploiting snobbery is a step backwards.

In the long run the only kind of audience worth having is one that turns up, not because the King or anybody else is there, but for the sake of the music.

Among the odds and ends of old journals lying round I have a set of The Overture, the very live little organ of the Royal Academy of Music in the 'nineties, edited, if I mistake not, by Mr. Corder. Turning over the pile a few days ago, I came across a passage that has some bearing on the question of State music. I give the paragraph in full:

We have often been amazed, but have been too loyal to raise our indignant voices, at the wretched class of music with which royalty contents itself, both in public and in private. The following paragraph, however, culled from a Court Circular . . . would seem to imply that a protest has at length been made:

'The Band of the Royal Horse Guards, under the direction of Mr. Charles Godfrey, Bandmaster, played the following selection of music during dinner:

March, "Copenhagen" . . .	...	Karl Kaps
Overture, "Maritana" . . .	...	V. Wallace
Walse, "Arcadia" . . .	...	C. Godfrey, Jun.
Fantasia, "Reminiscences of Meyerbeer" . . .	...	C. Godfrey
"Pizzicato" Gavotte . . .	...	M. Watson
Bolero, "La Constancia" . . .	...	A. E. Rae

Her Majesty's guests have left the Castle.'

Nothing in the way of comment could be neater than the six words added by The Overture Editor:

'It is greatly to their credit.'

Since writing the above I have seen a very hot and strong letter in the Daily Telegraph from Mr. George Sampson, headed 'The Programme Tax.' Mr. Sampson wrote it in order to supplement a previous letter from Mr. Sterling Mackinlay giving a list of the things that keep folk from the concert-hall. Mr. Sampson began by complaining that certain recitalists have lately developed a habit of asking their customers to buy a pig in a poke, or very nearly so. Thus he recently attended a recital by a famous pianist whom he never misses hearing, but until he arrived at the hall, 'the utmost diligence of research failed to reveal what he was going to play.' Only when Mr. Sampson had handed over a shilling for 'a wretched leaflet called an analytical programme' could he find out. Having paid a high price for his seat he very reasonably objects to two further extortions—the entertainment tax and the programme tax. Neither could be dodged; officialdom had its eye on the first, and the recitalist and/or his manager took care that

Mr. Sampson should not escape the second, by the simple expedient of not publishing the programme elsewhere than in the 'wretched leaflet' aforesaid. Mr. Sampson tells us that the programme contained eight pages, three of them blanks, and he gives us an idea of the kind of value yielded by the rest:

(1.) Liszt's Weinen, Klagen (or Crucifixus) Variations: Seventeen lines about the Crucifixus of Bach's B minor Mass, and one line about the actual work of Liszt to be played.

(2.) Three Bach Organ Chorale Preludes, arranged for pianoforte: Seven lines about Bach's Church Cantatas, and not a single word about the Chorale Preludes.

(3.) Chopin, Six Studies: Nineteen lines, fourteen of which were quoted from Niecks; but not the least indication which six studies out of the available twenty-seven were to be played.

(4.) Liszt, Waltz in Faust. Here the analytical gentleman spread himself out to forty-three ecstatic lines; but, unfortunately, he chose to describe Liszt's Mephisto Walzer, and the recitalist was playing Liszt's transcription of Gounod.

Certainly this is a very bad case; in fairness one must admit that it is far worse than the average. But even an isolated case ought not to be possible. After all, one such experience is enough to make any but the very keenest of concert-goers stay away for the next few weeks. Mr. Sampson is right when he says that such extortions leave the public resentful. 'We go to concerts for our pleasure [he says], not as an act of duty or charity. Make our going disagreeable, and we shall find pleasure elsewhere. After all, there are pianolas and gramophones.' And wireless, he might have added. I doubt if some concert-managers yet realise how serious is the competition set up by these methods of taking one's music at home. I do not exaggerate in the least in saying that I have on a good many occasions lately sat in slippers ease, with room for the proper disposition of all my knees and feet (a rare experience in a concert-hall), while the gramophone has delivered a programme of chamber music played by the London, Flonzaley, Léner, and other quartet parties, reproduced in such a way that a first-hand hearing would have given me very little more pleasure, if any at all. Put in the scale the comfort and convenience—no journey to and from the hall, a meal a few steps away whenever I wanted it, plenty of elbow room, a pipe, and no annotated programme (one shilling)—and the balance goes down with a rich, dull thud not on the side of the concert-hall.

Casella's recently-published Evolution of Music contains a lot of interesting things, but some of the author's statements show signs of haste. Thus he quotes a passage from one of Schubert's Waltzes, and tells us that in this bar:

'we have the first appearance of that chord of the dominant major ninth which is without any doubt the greatest harmonic discovery of the 19th century.' To-day, when we are unearthing so much wonderful old music of all kinds, one has to be cautious about claiming to have discovered the 'first appearance' of any progression. Even much-trumpeted 'first performances' of new or revived works are apt to prove to be the second or third or *n*th. The hero who first used the dominant major ninth may never be identified, but certainly his name was not Schubert. If this from Bach's Organ Toccata in F is not a dominant major ninth, I don't know one when I hear it:

It is not the only one in the Toccata, and the cadence of the Fugue gives us another.

I doubt if there are many earlier examples of this, although minor ninths were probably common enough. These Bach specimens are more definite than that in Ex. 1, because Schubert merely touches the ninth as an auxiliary note, in carrying out a melodic figure used throughout the rest of the piece.

There may be still more in Bach, too, but there is no need to tabulate them. I cannot, however, refrain from pointing out something far more striking—a first inversion of the supertonic major ninth that occurs at the close of the Prelude in F sharp major in Book II. of the Forty-eight:

And the interest and novelty are increased by the chord of the eleventh that follows the ninth.

On page 7 of his book Casella quotes the following from Monteverde:

and in his comments says that 'the three daring fifths scarcely need any comment.' Here I think he is wrong. A comment is needed—one pointing out that the fifths, so far from being daring, are almost certainly due to a slip of the pen. Surely the C in the bass is a mistake for B?

Seeing that until comparatively recent times practically all music was in manuscript, it is odd that critics and historians seem to underestimate the chance of error in copying. Thus, thousands of words have been written round the passage in the Eroica where the strings play dominant harmony while the horns enter with the theme in the tonic. Our ears to-day think nothing of the clash, but it is worth while remembering that so daring a composer as Berlioz couldn't abide it, and there are good judges to-day who hold that the clashes are due, not to a wild poetic flash on the part of Beethoven, but merely to a note or two having got on the wrong line or space. The A flat in the violin part may have been intended for a G, or the first three notes of the horn part may be slips for D F D. We know that Beethoven is said to have stuck out for the passage as it stands, but this need not rule out the possibility of its having been due to an accident of penmanship. He may have liked the result of the slip, or (more likely still) he may have pretended to like it out of mere stubbornness. Berlioz says that if the passage is 'really an intention of Beethoven, and if there is any truth in the anecdotes which are current upon the subject, it must be admitted to be a whim amounting to absurdity. . . . It is difficult to find a serious justification for this musical caprice.' But the point worries us so little to-day that very few average listeners would notice whether the orchestra played the passage as written or as amended by early editors. It is amusing to think of quarts of ink having been shed over so very ordinary a passage. (And here am I shedding a few drops more!)

In turning up my Bach just now for Ex. 2, I came across yet another case in which it is clear that editors have blindly followed one another in sticking to what is presumably the original manuscript version. In the 'Dorian' Toccata is a progression that is so unsatisfactory as it stands that one is surprised to hear organists playing it as written when the mere shifting of an accidental one beat farther back will make it more logical and effective. Here is the passage as it appears in every edition known to me:

But surely Bach meant:

The whole of the passage is in D minor (the modulation to G minor in the preceding bar is too transient to affect the argument), and the C natural is both ugly and pointless. I don't care twopence how it stands in the original manuscript; no composer is immune from slips of the kind, and in the case of the older men, whose works were often copied by pupils and circulated in manuscript, the chance of error was by no means small. Yet no Bach editor seems to have suggested that the sharp has somehow got in front of the wrong C. And so prone are we to go on playing a passage as we have always played it, and so much store do we set by original manuscripts (which are sometimes not original at all) that I can see in my mind's eye indignant readers deciding to dust my jacket for suggesting that we should tamper with the sacred text. They may dust their hardest, but so long as I can totter to the organ I shall play the C sharp where I think old Bach played it himself, however he may have written it.

I have to acknowledge letters from various correspondents in regard to the recent pillorying of bad music in these columns. It is good to hear that some readers have found in the 'pillory' powder and shot for use in discussions on the vexed question of what constitutes good and bad quality in music. One writer, however, abuses me for 'dragging into the limelight' the hymn-tune discussed last month, and regards my criticism as 'a cheap and nasty sneer at the clergy.' My withers are unwrung on both counts. When a composer publishes a work he throws down a challenge to criticism. Most composers complain of getting too little limelight; in fact so much good new music is published that there is not enough limelight to go round. But if a work does somehow come under the glare, and cuts a poor figure, is the fault with the limelight? As to my attitude to the clergy: I have the honour and pleasure of counting among my best friends a large number of parsons, and that fact, together with my high respect for their office, will keep me from sneering at them as a body. But we must never forget that in Church music the prime responsibility rests with the clergy. Too often they keep the standard down either by a laissez-faire policy or by dabbling in it in an amateurish, uninstructed way as directors or (worst of all) as composers of feeble hymn-tunes, which they foist on their own and other congregations. (The letters I receive on this subject would stagger readers; unfortunately the writers usually ask me not to refer to them publicly, as they wish to retain their posts as organists.) The press, musical and ecclesiastical, has hitherto been far too complaisant about these wretched tunes. A vigorous crusade, with no qualms about giving the delinquents' names, would soon choke off the worst of them. They would continue to compose, no doubt, but they would think twice before publishing. The thought of the limelight would give them pause.

Mr. Sidney Williamson has been appointed Musical Director to the Royal Christchurch (New Zealand) Musical Society—the oldest organization of the kind in Australasia.

ERBA, URIO, STRADELLA, AND HANDEL

BY P. ROBINSON

In some chapters of a book published in 1908,* reasons were given for concluding that a Magnificat, a Te Deum, and a Serenata, ascribed by Dr. Chrysander to Dionigi Erba, F. A. Urrio, and Alessandro Stradella, respectively, were really early works of Handel's, written in Italy (1707-10), when he was studying the Italian style.

To the evidence, and to the arguments, which won considerable acceptance, and perhaps would not be contested by anyone who could devote sufficient time and thought to the inquiry, a few additions will here be made. Of course, the great bulk of the evidence cannot be displayed again, but it is hoped that the significance of the additions will be sufficiently intelligible.

The subject has three main divisions: (1.) The positive proofs of Handel's authorship, based on thematic resemblances; (2.) The demonstration of the utter worthlessness of the alleged adverse evidence; (3.) Some probable, but not necessarily quite certain, explanations of the blunders. It is nearly certain that the Te Deum was written at Urrio, on Lake Como, about May, 1709, to celebrate at Milan a confidently expected, but never realised, European peace; the cantata Io languisco would thus be a companion work. Most probably the Magnificat had some connection with Benedetto Erba, later Cardinal Odescalchi—the 'place' explanation of the 'Erba,' though possible, was not advocated in the book. The 'Stradella' ascription must have been conjectural; in any case, the form proves that Stradella could not have written the work.

URIO-STRADELLA CONFIRMATION

It was claimed as demonstrated—and only from the resemblances which prove Handel's authorship of the Te Deum and Serenata could the conclusion have been reached or suspected—that Handel had the 'Urrio' in mind when he wrote the chorus 'Wretched lovers . . . Behold the monster Polypheme' (Acis, circa 1720). Yet how slight the superficial resemblance!

To claim that Ex. 2 is really Ex. 1 in disguise, might seem almost as far-fetched as Stephen Leacock's conception of a detective going about disguised as a dachshund. But turn to Saul (1738).

In Saul, No. 4, the words begin with, 'Along the monster atheist strode' [i.e., Goliath]. Here Handel must have been reminded of his other celebrated giant, 'the monster Polypheme,' with his strides, for, at the time, Acis was frequently performed. So he might naturally think of the 'Urrio.' And what do we find? That for the first time for nearly twenty years—for the first time in his life, according to the older theory—Handel has thought of the Te Deum. No. 5, still dealing with Goliath, begins with an unimportant stop-gap, ten bars long, derived from a secondary phrase in the Te Deum, and then plunges into the real business, a Fugue of seventy-seven bars, in character rather similar to the Acis chorus. And this is the theme:

The next use of the 'Urrio' is in No. 17, &c., where the introduction of bells is not sanctioned by the text. The next is in No. 61.

With the theme already in his mind, Handel might naturally think of combining it with a more lively motif in imitation of the Acis chorus, without troubling overmuch about appropriateness. But if, without prepossession, he were simply looking for music to fit the words, this chorus would be a quite inexplicable choice.

No reason can be given why a strange MS. should reach Handel on this day rather than on any other day during his forty-seven years' residence in England; and another 'accident' on the top of an already monstrously incredible series, is quite inadmissible. Unquestionably Handel wrote the 'Urrio' and the 'Stradella.'

ERBA

Handel's incomplete 1738 MS. of the Magnificat having been shown to be a revised copy, and the connection of the work with a 1708 cantata and a Hamburg opera having been pointed out, the supposed case for the obscure Dionigi Erba collapses. True, there is the 'del R<sup>d</sup> Sigr Erba' of the later R.C.M. copy. But the very form of this suggests that it was derived from no Italian ascription, but from some rough note on a MS. of Handel's, comparable to the 'dal Marche Ruspoli' of the Resurrezione (1708), and the 'd'Alvito' of Acis (1708), the last page of which has been recently discovered. The kindness of Mr. W. Barclay Squire has revealed to me a previous error with regard to the Resurrezione. It now appears that in neither work does Handel's name occur anywhere—at the beginning or the end. Now, these are the only two works of importance, written in Italy after July, 1707, of which the last pages, bearing notes of time and place, have survived, and in both, where a signature might have been expected, are notes which a copyist would not understand, and which might easily have generated an 'Oratorio del Marche Ruspoli,' or a 'Serenata del Sigr d'Alvito.' We may view Erba as of the class of the Marchese Ruspoli and the Duca d'Alvito (for the latter see Mr. Newman Flower's George Frideric Handel, page 74). None of these patrons, it may be remarked, is mentioned in the early biographies.

* Handel and his Orbit (Sherratt & Hughes).

Benedetto Erba, later Odescalchi (August 19, 1679–December 14, 1740),* of a rich and noble family, very prominent at Rome, was himself, when nuncio in Poland (1711–15), rich enough to spend largely out of his own pocket to carry on the war against the Turk.† Formerly, his relative, Innocent XI., was celebrated for his generosity, when sent as legate to Ferrara with corn. Now, corn was sent to Ferrara early in 1709; so Erba's vice-legateship to Ferrara may naturally be assigned to that date; indeed, long vice-legateships would hardly be important enough for a young man marked out for such speedy preferment (Cardinal, 1713). It becomes practically certain that Erba was Referendario, cameriere d'Onore to the Pope, and an 'Arcadian,' at Rome, during Handel's stay there, 1707–08.

URIO

Mrs. McCreery, who at the time owned the Castello di Urio, kindly informed me (October 29, 1908), after making further inquiries, that the villa was believed to have been built early in the 16th century.

The late R. A. Streatfeild sent me a letter (April 18, 1913), from which I make an extract:

The Handel story is this: At Varese (or just outside it) there is [a] large and luxurious hotel, which formerly was the country house of some Milanese grandee. A friend of mine in conversation with some ladies at Florence mentioned that he had been stopping there, whereupon one of the ladies said she had stayed in the house while it was still in private hands, and she remembered that it contained a harpsichord which was said to have been played upon by Handel.

Varese is about fifteen miles from Urio. Such a tradition was hardly likely to arise unless Handel had been in the neighbourhood; and any other date than 1709 is almost impossible. Handel did not leave London till January 27, 1729 (O.S.) (see Newman Flower, p. 177), and must have left Italy before the middle of May. I can find no evidence for the usual statement that he visited Milan then. Venice and Rome would demand all his time.

This stay near Milan does not conflict with recent chronologies. Possibly, however, Handel really produced Rodrigo in the autumn of 1708; wrote Agrippina at Venice during the Carnival of 1709, too late for production that season; and visited Milan, and perhaps other places, before the opera was produced, with newly-engaged singers, at the end of 1709. Cardinal Grimani might have procured him the commission for the Te Deum. This arrangement permits us to retain more than is usual of Mainwaring's original story.

There has been a suggestion that 'Urio, 1660,' might contain the date of F. A. Urio's birth. But dates on MSS. did not mean dates of birth or death or marriage. Moreover, anyone fortunate enough to know a date of birth would know more about the man than just—Urio. The date is obviously conjectural and valueless, like the other date, 'apud 1682.' It is worth observing that the conjecturers and inquirers about 1780 clearly never heard that F. A. Urio had written any Te Deum, much less this Te Deum; else they would have recorded the discovery in their numerous notes. The Te Deum is a very long work; a work hardly likely to have been written by anyone but a composer of repute for a very great occasion.

STRADELLA

It is just possible that the copyist wished it to be understood that the ascription was conjectural. Lines of points or dots are found under certain words, or parts of words of the ascription. Now, the placing of these dots does not fit in well with conjectures that they might be intended (a) for ornament, or (b) to emphasise the important words. Yet something they must mean. They might, then, possibly represent the parts not found in the original from which the copy was made (cf. the italics in English and Italian Bibles). These parts include 'Stradella' and the first half of 'Alessandro.' This suggestion is, of course, not intended as an argument for authorship.

STYLE

It may be remarked that Chrysander (iii., 78), when praising Handel for a passage in 'Thou sentest forth' (Israel), seems to have forgotten for the moment that all this is in the Magnificat. Indeed, many would think the passage particularly Handelian. Attention might also be directed to the 'Italian' style and feeling of 'Thou art the Everlasting Son' (Utrecht Te Deum, 1713).

Those who bear in mind that Handel was a versatile young man, avowedly studying and practising Italian style, will find no reason for not accepting the overwhelming evidence for his authorship of all three works.

DEBUSSY AND BRAHMS

BY ANDREW DE TERNANT

Claude Debussy once said to me that every professional musician should write an 'autobiography,' and that when he reached the age of sixty he would himself commence one. If the musician, he said, was not an interesting personality, he would at least preserve for posterity records of a certain number of musical contemporaries of eminence. This was one of the reasons why the short 'Diary' of Haydn in London, and the fuller 'autobiographies' of Grétry, Spohr, Moscheles, and Berlioz were so valuable. The excessive vanity of each of the last four was conspicuous on almost every page they wrote, but they were only human after all, and had the excusable weakness of wishing to let their admirers and enemies know they were somebody on the 'stage, where every one must play a part, and mine a sad one.'

Debussy, unfortunately, did not reach the age of sixty, and there is no evidence that he left any fragments or notes for an 'autobiography.' But though he had a strange dislike of speaking about himself and his own compositions, he had no objection to discussing the merits or otherwise of his musical contemporaries, and a favourite topic of conversation of his was the international musical movement. After being released from the rules and regulations of the 'Grand Prix de Rome' scholarship, he made up his mind to become personally acquainted with as many eminent foreign composers as possible, and his 'greatest capture' was Johannes Brahms. It was no easy task to approach 'the lion in his den.' He wrote a letter to him, and received no reply. He called twice at his house. On the first occasion he was informed that the master was unwell, and on the other that he was engaged. At last the wife of one of the secretaries of the French Embassy at Vienna promised to help him in his difficulty. She was an Hungarian by birth, though married to a French diplomat, and had been in her younger days to some extent a pupil of Brahms. The German master was no French scholar, and when he received a business letter from France or Belgium he always called on the lady to assist him in making out a draft in reply. It was not long before Debussy received an invitation to luncheon from the lady, and she stated there would be only three persons present, viz., the master, Claude Debussy, and 'yours sincerely.'

* Dictionnaire des Cardinaux, by 'L'Abbé.'

† Enciclopedia Italiana.

After the introduction, Brahms growled out, 'Are you the Frenchman who wrote to me and called twice at my house?' Debussy bowed graciously. 'Well, I will forgive you this time,' exclaimed Brahms, 'but don't do it again.' During the luncheon, Brahms did not utter a single word, but after drinking several glasses of French champagne at the end, he said it was the 'most glorious wine in the world,' and quoted the lines from Goethe's Faust:

One cannot always do without the Foreigner,
But give him to me in the shape of wine.
A true-born German hates with all his heart
A Frenchman—but their wines are excellent.

Franco-German wars were inevitable, Brahms said, but French and German art would always flourish, and would be, until the Day of Judgment, the glory and wonder of the world. He was quite aware of the fact that the French musical public considered him the most German of contemporary composers. The brilliant French nation was correct in its judgment, and he was heartily thankful. He was proud to be a German composer. A musician who abandoned his nationality in art would never leave any permanent mark on the history of the music of his own country. There was no excuse for the imitation of foreign music. That was why he so much admired French literature, art, and music. Auber's music was French all over, though the scenes of his operas take place in Italy, Spain, and Portugal. The Spaniards in Molière's comedies were in reality Frenchmen, and Racine's Greeks and Romans in his tragedies were French princes and noblemen at the Court of the great monarch Louis XIV. The greatest opera produced in Europe since the Franco-German war was undoubtedly Georges Bizet's Carmen. He (Brahms) had attended twenty performances of the work at the Vienna State Opera-House, and was by no means tired of it. Bismarck—who was certainly the best amateur judge of music he had ever met—told him that he had witnessed twenty-seven performances. A Spanish countess once said to him that Carmen was not much appreciated by Spaniards: 'It is too French in style.' 'That, Madame, is where its greatness lies,' replied Brahms.

'The French are the most cultured of the Latin countries, and this is reflected in their masterpieces of literature, art, and music. Bizet did not paint Carmen as a low-bred follower of Spanish soldiers, but as a bewitching, cultured woman of his own nationality.'

A few weeks before the production of Carmen, he (Brahms) was informed by his old friend, Camille Saint-Saëns, that Georges Bizet had expressed a desire to meet him. He always regretted since he heard this that the opportunity was now lost. He would have gone to the end of the earth to embrace the composer of Carmen. But he hoped some day to meet this gifted son of France in a better world. Bizet, unlike some of the great composers, had not produced a brood of imitators. This curse of the history of music had been responsible for some lamentable results. It was the avalanche of sickly imitations of Mendelssohn which drove that great master's compositions out of the concert-room. Rossini would have had a longer reign with his melodious operas if a crowd of his miserable countrymen had not drowned the Italian theatres with imitations of his tricks and mannerisms, without even a spark of his genius. Wagner might be annihilated by an idiot with a twelve-night music-drama embracing all the legends of Germany. Brahms had also suffered in a 'modest way.' He had been inundated with parcels of chamber music sent for inspection, which were mere pale imitations of his works of that kind, and had even been asked to express an opinion on the manuscripts submitted. The patent medicine manufacturer was legally protected from imitation in all countries by international law, but the composer who devoted much thought and study to finding a new road for himself, evidently was not considered worthy of protection.

Before separating, Brahms invited his lady friend and Debussy to dine with him on the following evening at a restaurant close to the State Opera-House. After that there 'would be a treat in store for his new young French friend.' Brahms said he was sorry he could not entertain at his house, because he was living with rather 'homely people, who were a bit ill at ease in their manners, and had not the slightest idea of French politeness.' The three met again on the evening arranged, and during the dinner Brahms was crackling with wit and repartee. At the conclusion Brahms said the 'treat in store' was a performance of Carmen. It would be the twenty-first performance he had attended, and practically his 'coming of age' in connection with the work. He had secured a box, and the title-part would be undertaken by the best actress-singer at Vienna. During the performance the German master followed every note with the closest attention, and in the intervals delivered quite a commentary-lecture on the principal numbers, and criticisms of the singers' performances of their respective parts.

Brahms subsequently devoted an entire day to conducting Debussy to places of musical interest at Vienna. They visited the graves of Beethoven and Schubert, the Conservatorium, and inspected the famous collection of musical manuscripts and autographs in the Imperial Library. Before leaving Vienna, Debussy called at the house of Brahms. He was 'at home' this time, and, wishing Claude bon voyage and a successful career, the great German master embraced the young Frenchman like a son. He said a 'crusty' old bachelor had quite as much fatherly feeling as a more fortunate married man.

A Summer Vacation Course for Adults in Dalcroze Eurhythmics will be held at the Paris Dalcroze School, 52, Rue de Vaugirard, Paris, V<sup>e</sup>, from August 4 to 16. The Course will be under the personal direction of M. Jaques-Dalcroze. English-speaking students may obtain all information from the Dalcroze School, 23, Store Street, W.C. (tel.: Museum 2294). Early inquiry is necessary, as accommodation is likely to be at a premium.

THE EXHIBITION OF THE ROYAL ACADEMY OF ARTS

BY ARTHUR T. FROGGATT

The number of works in this year's Academy is fifteen hundred and sixty-three, or nineteen in excess of those exhibited last season. I have not been able to find any reference to music in more than twenty-three of these. However, the proportion is greater than on the last occasion—one in sixty-five as compared with one in ninety-six. The central hall and Gallery No. 5 are the only rooms in which my search was fruitless.

A clever effect of reflected light is the distinguishing feature of 'The Music Room, Royal Pavilion, Brighton' (48), by C. H. H. Burleigh. If this apartment contains any musical instruments, they do not appear in the picture. 'The Violinist' (89), by Alex. Gerhards, compares very unfavourably with a similar subject by A. E. Brockbank in last year's Academy. In the first-named, the chin of the player rests on the tailpiece, his left hand is cramped, the bow is held at a wrong angle, and the right elbow is raised.

In Gallery No. 3, 'The Drawing-Room' (163), by L. Campbell Taylor, possibly deserves a passing mention in this article, for I have every reason to believe that a somewhat obscure object in the left-hand corner of the picture is the leg of a pianoforte.

There is no portrait of a living musician in the Academy. The imaginative 'Daphnis and Chloe' (170), by Harold Speed, does not compensate for this omission. It shows Chloe with bobbed hair, and Daphnis with a shepherd's pipe in his left hand.

The most arresting picture in Gallery No. 4, is undoubtedly 'The Old Watergate' (224), one of Tom Mostyn's gorgeous garden scenes. At the bottom of a flight of steps leading to the water stands a figure playing upon an oboe, or flûte-à-bec. 'Apollo and Marsyas' (226), by Harry Morley, shows the god with a five-stringed lyre (sic), and Marsyas holding a flauto traverso to his lips. A peculiarity of this painting is that large pieces of sheep's wool are descending from the sky—or are they by any possibility intended for clouds? In 'Don Juan and the Statue' (228), by Charles Ricketts, the libertine is striving to reach the hand of the Commandant, who is stooping from his pedestal to meet the Don half-way, while Leporello crouches at the mouth of a vault. Whether the death-like pallor on the face of the Don is the result of his past life, or of the unusual conduct of the statue, it is difficult to determine. 'John McCormack' (243), by Sir William Orpen, is, in my opinion, the most satisfactory portrait, upon the whole, of the five contributed by Sir William.

In Gallery No. 7, 'Peasants' Dance' (369), by Laura Knight, recalls similar subjects by well-known 17th-century Dutch artists. It is a scene from low life, a small picture, in which a fat man is playing a guitar for the benefit of a few couples who are dancing outside an ale-house. In Gallery No. 8, 'A Rehearsal' (414), by the same artist, is a much larger work in which a guitar, this time played by a girl, also figures.

In Gallery No. 9, 'The Spinnet' (522), by Dorothea Landau, is a charming little picture, both as regards the face of the girl and the clever treatment of the case of the instrument. Unfortunately the hands, of which the right is placed upon the keys, while the left supports the lid of the spinet, are not quite so satisfactory. 'Souvenir of Schumann's Carnaval' (556), by W. E. Webster, certainly suggests a carnival, but contains no special reference to Schumann's that I can perceive; and a definition should never include more than the thing defined. A young man in the costume of a century ago is making love to a danseuse, with Pierrot in the background, looking at them over his shoulder—an incident, I imagine, which has occurred at more than one carnival.

In Gallery No. 10, 'The Studio Dance' (585), by William Conor, is another picture, this time a large one, which does not tell its story, and which moreover can only be described as a daub. A girl is sitting in the foreground, while behind her is a young man playing an accordion.

A fine painting in Gallery No. 11 is 'Chiron and his Pupils' (659), by G. Spencer Watson. Chiron himself and one of his pupils each carry a chelys, formed with ram's horns, and bearing five strings.

Only two subjects among the water colours demand notice. 'Carmen' (718), by Gordon W. Nicoll, is a small, even slight, but very imaginative drawing; the crowd rushing out from the arena to see Carmen lying dead upon the ground. In 'The Nativity' (816), by Dorothy W. Hawksley, five angels, obviously female, stand upon the broken roof of the stable. One is so hidden from view as to make it impossible to say what she is doing; but the others are playing, one a viol, another a guitar, another a mandola, and the fourth a shophar. The style is very pre-Raphaelite, the drawing beautiful, the colouring lovely; and yet something is wanting. It may be unkind, it may even be untrue, to say it, but the spirit of Faith seems to be absent.

Two of the wood engravings (here again, of totally different character) must be mentioned. 'Music and Bells' (1014), by Alec Buckels, is quite delightful. Here are eight urchins, three of them with a bell apiece, and one with a trumpet or oboe: the others are clapping their hands. 'Armony' (1091), by J. G. Platt, is amusing in a different way. Two artists, standing not far from a cocoa-nut shy, are performing, the one upon a banjo and the other upon an accordion, and the former is adding his vocal efforts to the entertainment.

In the Architectural Room, 'New Church, Ampleforth Abbey, Yorks,' interior view (1246), by G. Gilbert Scott, includes a good organ-case, of flat design, on the south side of the chancel. 'Church at Gorton, Lancs' (1252), by Walter Tapper, also includes an organ case, this time on the north side, but it has the common fault of standing out too far from the line of the chancel wall. 'A Design for Proposed Concert Pavilion, Bournemouth' (1277), by A. G. R. Mackenzie, can only be described as unnecessarily ugly, even for a concert-hall.

It remains to draw attention to two pieces of sculpture. 'Pan' (1422), bronze statuette by G. A. Meredith Williams, is a figure of beautiful pose, playing the double-pipes. A 'Young Faun' (1452), bronze statuette by Harold J. Youngman, is a small figure, holding the double-pipes in the hands.

As regards the number of works, not to mention their importance from a musical point of view, it can hardly be said that the divine art receives its due share of recognition from modern painters and sculptors—not such a share as would be observable, I feel sure, in an exhibition of the works of the old masters.

THE PRAGUE FESTIVAL

BY EDWIN EVANS

Among the visitors to the Prague Festival the only subject of complaint was the superabundance of the musical arrangements. Everything was most efficiently organized. There was no hitch of any consequence, and the hospitality and attentiveness of our Czecho-Slovakian friends defied all praise. But thirty experiences of unfamiliar music, all within a fortnight, must have proved exhausting to those who stayed the course. For my part, circumstances involved me in the unintentional discourtesy of missing the greater part of the Smetana fixtures, which were the official core of the whole Festival. They occurred early, and I arrived late. Hence I heard only one of the Smetana operas, and that not the most interesting, and I missed the integral performance of the cycle of symphonic poems, My Country, by the joint orchestras of the Czech Philharmonic and the State Conservatoire, which, according to Mr. E. J. Dent, proved quite thrilling. My record really opens with the three concerts of the International Society for Contemporary Music, on May 31 and June 1 and 2. At these, fifteen works were performed under six conductors. The audiences were remarkable. Every seat had been allotted in advance, much to the consternation of some late-comers. There were present musicians from a dozen or more countries, some of whom must have looked with envy upon the music-lovers of Prague, for the almost complete absence of the usual trifling but irritating disturbances, whisperings, chair-shufflings, and programme-rattlings, was as remarkable as the receptivity displayed when the time came for applause. And in Czecho-Slovakia there is no need to plead the cause of native art. When the symphonic poem by Josef Suk was reached, quite forty scores made their appearance among the listeners. They take their music seriously at Prague.

The first programme opened with the Introduction and Polonaise which are the only completed portion of Smetana's Prague Carnival, followed by a Sinfonietta by Otakar Ostrčil, who conducts at the National Opera. Both works were directed by Václav Talich, the regular conductor of the Czech Philharmonic Orchestra, to which the exacting task of mastering all this music had been entrusted. Despite endless rehearsals, and the obvious strain of adaptation to conflicting 'modernisms,' the playing was brilliantly efficient. There were differences in tone-colour. The Czech oboists, for instance, have a sound technique, but favour a less seductive tone than we expect at home. But the aggregate effect was rich and vigorous. Ostrčil's Sinfonietta has that kind of dryness which remains attractive. It is a scholarly work showing much skill. No doubt some would call it academic, but, if the word applies at all, it is only in its best sense.

The next conductor was Fritz Reiner, of Cincinnati, who took charge of two works for baritone with orchestra, with the Czech singer, Stepán Chodounsky, as soloist. The latter incurred some comment among the less internationally disposed Czechs for singing Karl Horwitz's Vom Tode cycle in the original German, but otherwise the work aroused little interest. It has some good moments, but is rather dull on the whole. Horwitz is a Viennese composer who has lately had the misfortune to lose his hearing. Ernest Bloch's setting of the 22nd Psalm was a singularly effective and convincing piece of passionate musical declamation. It seems a little strange that the composer should have chosen the French version of the text. Apart from his having become an American, one would have thought Biblical English to be a more dramatic medium.

Between these Alfredo Casella conducted Vittorio Rieti's Concerto, in reality a concerto grosso with a wind quintet for its concertino. This is a breezy, open-airish work, in which scraps of diatonic tune jostle each other with an appearance of joyous irresponsibility. Though of slender importance if examined too closely, it provided a very welcome moment of exhilaration. Afterwards G. M. Witkowski, of Lyons, took charge of the first French instalment, consisting of the Bacchanale from Florent Schmitt's Antoine et Cléopâtre and Honegger's Pacific 231. Unfortunately Witkowski, a distinguished musician with some important works to his credit, is not equally proficient as a conductor. One could not avoid the impression that both works could have been made to sound far better than they did. Honegger's title refers to a locomotive, and the piece purports to idealise speed. It is a stimulating feat of genre tone-painting which could furnish a lively conclusion to many a too-sedate programme.

At the second concert Rudolf Schulz-Dornburg, of Bochum, conducted Eduard Erdmann's second Symphony, an exercise in the characteristically forbidding idiom which is just now regarded in German circles as the true expression of the modern spirit. It was doubtless very clever, but also tortuously wearisome. The conductor, who is an enthusiast, secured a good performance, and some of his countrymen professed to find more satisfaction in this ungrateful music than in any other feature of the Festival concerts. German musical taste is, however, passing through a peculiar phase. Its traditional nil admirari attitude towards the products of other nations is committing it to strange vagaries at home. Next followed Prokofiev's Violin Concerto, with Szigeti as soloist and Fritz Reiner conducting, a striking piece of modern bravura writing, technically very difficult, no doubt emotionally shallow, but extraordinarily brilliant in compensation therefor. Szigeti scored a great hit with his masterly performance. Half way through a string broke, and he borrowed a fiddle from the nearest desk. It proved a poor instrument; the effect for the time was scratchy; but we felt that the fiddle was having the time of its young life. Over the performance of Stravinsky's Nightingale which followed we will draw a veil. It really does not belong to the concert-room, and the only thing that reconciles one to its transfer from its right sphere is good conducting, which Witkowski was not able to supply. Then came Arnold Bax's Symphony, which had been entrusted to Fritz Reiner on his way through London less than a week before, and of which he gave a remarkably fine 'professional' performance, in the sense that nothing was missing that the conductor could contribute to its success. He was rewarded with the first real ovation of the Festival, he and the composer being recalled time after time, although the hour was late and the concert over. Here we had the opposite reaction to that of the Erdmann Symphony. In German opinion it was passé, but all other sections and the large Czech audience were enthusiastic, and performances elsewhere were arranged within a few hours.

The third concert was in a sense the most concise of the three. Like its predecessor it brought four works, but of these only one was on the really large scale: This was Josef Suk's poem, Ripening, with which the programme opened, under Talich. A spacious, unashamedly romantic work, it is finely constructed and effectively scored. It was followed by Szymanowsky's Violin Concerto, admirably played by Alma Moodie under Gregor Fitelberg, who was in London during the run of The Sleeping Princess, and now holds baton-sway at Warsaw. The work would have made a deeper impression if most of us had not heard the same music as the composer had unconsciously in mind when writing it. The reminiscent flavour was too obvious to be ignored. Casella then took up the story with the third set of Malipiero's Impressioni dal Vero—direct, expressive music like that of the preceding sets, except that the third piece, embodying an ancient Tarantella from Capri, is of more definite character than is usually associated with musical impressions. Finally, Witkowski gave a straightforward performance of Roussel's comparatively short and fastidiously reticent Symphony, a work of almost aristocratic probity, which will never make a sensational, popular success, but gives much pleasure to musicians whose palates do not need artificial stimulants.

Not to be outdone, the German Philharmonic also gave a concert, consisting of two Bach Chorales orchestrated by Schönberg, and Zemlinsky's Lyrical Symphony, for two voices with orchestra. The former proved a complete disappointment. Doubtless the Schönberg followers, who have reasons for everything, will write pamphlets to show that this is the right way to score Bach, but we can remain content with Elgar. Zemlinsky's work was typical of German 'yearning,' and suggestive of Mahler, and, for those responsive to this order of ideas, remarkably well conceived. At the German theatre we also had the first performance of Schönberg's Erwartung, with Maria Gutheil-Schoder, from Vienna, as the solitary singer on the stage. This work calls for longer notice than is possible here, but it is not so satisfactory in its way as Pierrot Lunaire, and in its theatrical aspect is somewhat old-fashioned. The composer at one time regarded it as impossible of performance, which makes the achievement of those concerned the greater. But it seemed a pity that this valiant effort should be expended upon a nine days' wonder. It was followed by a German version of Ravel's L'Heure Espagnole.

There was of course much more that would be equally worthy of report—e.g., the wonderful male-voice choirs of Prague and of Brünn, whither a few of us travelled at the close of the Festival; a performance of Czecho-Slovakian chamber music by the Bohemian String Quartet; operas by Dvorák, Fibich, Novák, Janáček, and Zich, the last-named developing a new application of the operatic convention; numerous other recitals and concerts, including at Brünn a fine performance by Zavel and others of a remarkable song-cycle by Janáček. In short, the fare provided seemed inexhaustible; but space is not—and neither, to be quite candid, was the endurance of the listeners. I must confess that by the time I reached the lengthy programme offered us by the group of Moravian composers at Brünn, even my almost insatiable appetite for music was giving way. But, with that one reservation, the Prague Festival has been a great success. Especially does it reflect credit upon the organizers, who must have coped with an amazing amount of detail work.

Occasional Notes

The question of publicity for music is being pretty well thrashed out lately, but in one important respect no improvement can be effected until the editors of certain of our daily papers are converted. In the June Musical Times we gave an instance of the way musical criticism and discussion is squeezed out in order to make room for things that emphatically don't matter. The recent visit of Chaliapin led to some further examples. The Daily Mail began by devoting a fat paragraph to the death of the singer's pet monkey. Jacko (or whatever his name was) arranged his demise with more consideration than is shown by most eminent people, for he breathed his last a day or two before his master arrived in London from America. The Daily Mail was therefore able to give the singer's concert a little puff preliminary: 'The news has not yet been broken to Chaliapin, who arrives in this country on Wednesday for his concert at the Albert Hall on Friday.' First, however, it was thought necessary to tell us all about the illness of Jacko—we beg pardon: reference to our cutting shows his name to have been Boris, after all. Still, 'Jacko' ought to have been goudounov. The little fellow caught a chill when staying at the Savoy Hotel last year (probably he would have had more attention at the Ritz) and never really got the better of it. Too weak to travel, he was left behind while his master went to America; but he was not forgotten—'regular reports being sent to the singer as to his pet's health.' For a time he made fair progress—indeed, he seems to have recovered sufficiently to leave his bed of pain, though still confined indoors. At all events, we read that he 'became a familiar figure in the winter garden of the hotel.' Unfortunately the medical and other staff in whose care he had been left paid too little attention to his diet. We grasped something of the kind from the second of the Daily Mail's large cap. head-lines, 'DEATH FROM EATING TOO MUCH CHOCOLATE.' And sure enough, later on we read that Boris 'began to develop extravagant tastes, with a marked preference for anything containing chocolate.' His lickerish tooth was his undoing, for 'he died after two days' lethargic stupor, following a heavy meal.' Well, pleasure must be paid, by simians as well as by humans, and those of us who, after extensive meals, succumb to lethargic stupors (poetically calling them 'forty winks') may learn something from Boris his end.

This ridiculous obituary of Boris was merely a prelude to the stream of Chaliapinana which set in a day or two later and was in full flood up to the day of the concert. There were the usual interviews in which the singer expressed his delight at being in London again, and announced how many new suits of clothes and pairs of boots he was going to furnish himself withal. Chaliapin was nothing if not expansive, and no details seemed too personal or intimate for publication. In fact, it is odd that a man who as a singer shows such a towering personality should, as interviewee, talk so like poor Poll.

Even after his concert there was a slight and ludicrous aftermath, the Daily Mail once more distinguishing itself by giving a substantial bit of space to a fox-trot composed by the singer, including a music-type quotation (inserted in the wrong part of the paragraph, and with some of the slurs upside down). It was, we were told, Chaliapin's 'first venture into the subtleties of syncopation.' But the cream of the paragraph was the news that he had 'achieved a distinctly fascinating effect by accenting the weakest part of every alternate bar.' Nothing very original in this, is there? Moreover, the quotation showed the accent, placed not on the weakest part of the bar, and not always in alternate bars.

Nobody would complain much of an important—or at least widely-circulated—daily paper giving space to Chaliapin's monkey and fox-trot if at the same time it did not overlook the needs of readers who want real musical news. But so long as journals can spare only a few lines for concerts (other than those given by prima donnas of both sexes) or for reviews of important new books or compositions, musicians have a grievance, and they will be well advised to air it.

They have been meek long enough.

In the June Sackbut, Miss Ursula Greville has an interesting article on 'Gesture in Song.' The subject calls for discussion, for no one can hear a string of aspirants in the vocal solo classes at competition festivals without observing that few singers know how to strike the happy mean between wooden impassivity and restlessness. We recently heard a small boy sing Schubert's Hark! hark! the lark. As he began the opening 'hark' he took a half-step forward and held out both hands towards the audience, as who should say, 'Just you listen to that lark!' He was so much in earnest that everybody forgave him—if there was anything to forgive, which is by no means certain. Even seasoned singers err at times in the matter of restlessness—for example, a well-known singer at the Albert Hall recently perambulated the stage to such an extent that we changed our irritation into interest by closing our eyes and guessing what part of the platform he would be occupying when we opened them a few moments later.

But this processional method is not gesture in the accepted sense of the term. What it is, and how it may be applied with good effect, was well shown in a concert notice in The Times of June 20. Speaking of Madame Giannini, the critic wrote:

'... she sings with her whole heart and with every part of her. Every movement of shoulder or finger, a step forward or back, each poise of the head, is a part of the song. You cannot call it acting; it is merely how anyone would look and stand and be who gave himself up wholly to the matter in hand.'

Chaliapin probably goes as far as a singer can safely go—which is a long way too far for most people. Yet we would not willingly miss that hint of a lurch he gives when singing a song about a drunkard, and still less would we forego the tiny movement by which in The Song of the Flea he suggests an urgent desire to scratch the least accessible part of his back. These gestures are so slight that they are as fine an art as subtle shades of vocal colour. Reading Charles E. Pearce's recently-issued book on Sims Reeves, we came across an amusing example of gesture carried to extreme. We had long since heard of it, but were never sure of the details till we got them from Mr. Pearce. In the last verse of The Bay of Biscay Braham used to exclaim 'A sail—a sail—a sail!' at the same time devoutly dropping on one knee (and, we seem to have heard, shading his eyes while he peered at an imaginary horizon, but Mr. Pearce says nothing of this). At a Hereford Festival this 'gesture' led to a contretemps. The platform had a very high front, and when Braham (who was a small man) knelt, he disappeared from view. The audience was alarmed, thinking he had gone through a trap-door, but he popped up again, amid shouts of laughter, and finished the song.

In Felix White's Mother, I will have a husband, one of the latest additions to Curwen's 'Unaccompanied Song Series,' the composer directs the singer to 'stamp foot' at the asterisk: 'Mother, I will have a husband,* And I will have him out of hand.' This seems to us to be overstepping the limit. A little more of such gymnastics and the result will be an action song.

A good deal of musical discussion has lately been taking place in English Mechanics. Clearly these particular English mechanics have no sort of use for modern music. Here is the way one delivers himself concerning Elgar:

'I must demur when "J. G. B." speaks of the "sweet sanity" of Elgar, and calls him "the world's greatest composer." Truly there are a few pieces of Elgar's containing much beautiful melody and inspiration, but most of his compositions and all his later works to which I have listened are, to my ears, mere jumbles of sound. They remind me of a person idly improvising on the pianoforte with his thoughts elsewhere and without any definite idea of what he wanted to play. (Compare these compositions with the exquisite and spontaneous outpourings of melody which emanated from Rossini!) Elgar's compositions lack even the saving grace of striking and novel harmony which characterise much of the music of some other modernists . . . There are occasional short—very short—flashes of melody, as though the composer recollected that he had something definite to say, but they are mere flashes, and the [Violoncello] Concerto consists of truly Elgarish, drawling, aimless, meaningless meanderings. . . . Surely it is time composers realised that their compositions are useless in any sense if they do not please the ear. What we want to-day is a composer who will wed modern harmony to melody. . . . Could we combine, say, a Beethoven and a Holst we should have music to which the term "gorgeous" might aptly apply.'

Among the letters evoked by the above was one from which we quote a brief passage:

'The haggis-like stuff [we hear protesting noises beyond the Tweed] that masquerades as music but ignores melody, like the art of the cubist, may appeal to the few cranks who gush about it, but the appeal, such as it is, is on a par with that which gave comfort to the good old lady who muttered the word "Mesopotamia." The veriest commonplace composition executed by a jazz band is preferable to these examples of how "a concord of sweet sounds" may by the art of the composer be degraded into noise, and worse than noise, because they owe much of their character, if the term may be used, to their studied employment of discord and complete ignorance of melody, the very soul of music.'

We resist the temptation to comment on these letters, especially as the correspondence is rounded off by an editorial note which puts the case in a nutshell—a chesnut-shell in fact: 'What is one man's meat is another's poison, or chacun à son goutier (sic) as regards music.'

The Propaganda Committee of King Edward's Hospital Fund for London asks us to remind readers of the Festival Service that takes place in Westminster Abbey on July 7, at 6.0. We gave some particulars of this service in our last issue, and are now able to add that the programme will include Purcell's Remember not, O Lord, our offences; Gibbons's O Lord, increase my faith; Samuel Wesley's In exitu Israel; S. S. Wesley's Ascribe unto the Lord; Weelkes's Hosanna to the Son of David; Byrd's Sing joyfully; and Parry's I was glad. Anthems by Bridge, Parratt, and Stanford will be sung in memoriam. As stated in our June number, the choir will be made up of singers from about twenty cathedral and collegiate churches. Admission to the Abbey will be by ticket only. Applications for tickets should be made to the Custodian, 2, The Cloisters, Westminster Abbey, and should be accompanied by a donation to the Fund.

We have received the Music Catalogue of the Bethnal Green Public Library and the 'Quarterly Guide for Readers' of the Finsbury Public Library. Both show a surprisingly large proportion of fine music, modern, as well as old. Thus the enthusiast at Bethnal Green may borrow miniature scores of Scriabin's Prometheus and Poem of Ecstasy, Stravinsky's Rite of Spring, Petrouchka, and Chant du Rossignol, Holst's Planets, Debussy's Petite Suite, Goossens's Five Impressions, all Debussy's and Scriabin's pianoforte works, &c., pianoforte arrangements of Elgar's Symphonies, &c. There is also a capital selection of song volumes ranging from Bach and Purcell to Wolf and Vaughan Williams. The Finsbury Library makes a special feature of music for military bands, the choice being, with few exceptions, first-rate. Local bands are thus able to supplement their repertory easily and cheaply. We believe that few public libraries cater for bands in this way. They might well follow this Finsbury lead, which, we understand, is a popular success. Another feature at this Library deserving of notice is in regard to music by wireless. Every week the London programmes of the B.B.C. are examined and all available copies of music that is down for performance are placed in a conspicuous position, with the result that they are usually snapped up on the day they are shown. When all public libraries show a like spirit musicians will feel that the art is after all getting a measure of aid from the rates.

A reader draws our attention to the fact that although the Musical Times has been established only eighty years (only!) the May issue is numbered 975, whereas with twelve numbers per annum the number should of course be 960. How do we account for the surplus fifteen issues? We are bound to say that the discrepancy had hitherto escaped our notice. The explanation, however, is simple. In eight months of the year 1854 and seven of 1855 the journal was issued twice—on the 1st and the 15th. In going into these figures we are reminded that we are now only twenty short of our thousandth number—an innings of unusual length in the history of musical journals.

The appointment to the Cambridge University Professorship has at last been made, the choice falling on Dr. Charles Wood. No worthier successor to Stanford can be imagined.

WILLIAM BAINES

(1899-1922)

A Tablet commemorating William Baines was unveiled at the Primitive Methodist Church at Horbury, near Wakefield, on May 28, by Mr. Frederick Dawson, who had been among the first to recognise the deceased composer's genius.

The inception of the memorial was due to Mr. Dennis Laughton, of York, who, with Mr. T. Bostock, of Horbury, collected the necessary funds among Baines's friends and admirers.

The moving inscription, which is in relief, was contributed by Mr. Edward C. Booth, the novelist. He also suggested the basis of the design of the tablet, which is of quartered oak, the scroll at the base, of solid bronze, having the Amen Prelude (in full) engraved upon it.

At the service which had been arranged for the unveiling and handing over of the Memorial to the trustees of the Church, eloquent addresses were given by the Rev. W. Fiddian Moulton and the Rev. W. Barton. The composer's father and mother, and many relatives and friends were present. Mr. Dennis T. Chapman played arrangements for the organ of Baines's Dreaming, Angelus, Ave Imperator, and Amen Prelude.

Mr. Frederick Dawson said that the Memorial was the outward symbol of the loving thought and devotion of many gifted and sympathetic friends and admirers of William Baines, and that it would associate Horbury with musical history for all time. Credit must always be given to Mr. L. Dunton Green for 'discovering' William Baines, and no praise was too high for Dr. Eaglefield Hull's unceasing propaganda. Mr. Dawson went on to say that:

Baines possessed an inexhaustible fancy and the truly enviable gift of translating into terms of sound his love of Nature and his joy in all that is beautiful. By hard work he acquired a technique which, when he had perfected his medium, enabled him to express his thoughts with certainty and completeness at fever-heat. No revision was ever necessary. . . . Without wishing to speak in superlatives or to use the language of exaggeration, I do not hesitate to say that William Baines's music—particularly the Seven Preludes, Paradise Gardens, Silverpoints, Good-night to Flamboro', and the Three Concert Studies—will be known and played when most of the present-day music is not only forgotten but unprocurable.

The Tablet was carried out by Messrs. W. H. Fraley & Sons, of Birmingham. On the opposite page we reproduce a photograph of the Memorial.

"OUT OF WEAKNESS MADE TITANIC" HEBREW.

Wireless Notes

BY 'CALIBAN'

Although the programmes sent out are being lightened according to plan during the summer months, they still contain a good proportion of first-rate music. I am not convinced, however, that there is so much need for this lightening of fare as some people think. It is a mistake to base a theory of the kind on the fact that concert-halls are practically closed during the summer months. Why are they closed? Chiefly because performers, like other folk, must have a holiday or at least a change of air. Moreover, although keen music-lovers are as fond of good music in the summer as they are in the winter, many of them object to spending summer evenings in the four walls of a concert-room. Good music heard in comfort at home is another thing. Even if we cannot transfer our wireless apparatus to a garden we can listen in a cool room by an open window, and be as receptive to good—even serious—music as at any other season. Personally, I have not found the feeble items in the wireless programmes any less irritating and boring during the recent hot spell than during the winter. There is no such thing as a seasonal change of taste in regard to quality, whether of food, books, clothes, or music. All we do is to change the type. We don't eat rubbish or wear shoddy just because the summer is come. We merely adopt a regimen less solid and heating. And if we are to forgo the symphonic joint during a heat wave, we want a substitute no less nutritious, albeit lighter. The programme from the London Station on June 20 just misses being a model light scheme. There are pianoforte solos by Chopin and Debussy, string quartet movements by Grieg and Borodin, Bach's Double Concerto with string quartet accompaniment, and some 'Syncopations' by a couple of players from the Savoy Orpheans. (Let me say here without shame that I frequently turn on the tap for ten minutes or so of dance music from the Savoy. There is a terrible sameness about it all, but a little dose now and then is good fun. It is all so slick and telling that one has some sympathy with the old lady who, according to the Radio Times, declared she could listen to these 'ere Savoury Orphans all night.) But this light programme suffers from some bad lapses in the way of cornet solos. I do not object overmuch to cornet solos as such, bearing in mind what I have heard done by the soloists of some of our crack championship bands. But I object strongly to Little grey home in the west, The better land, and Teresa del Riego's O dry those tears, whether sung or played. And I can foresee that on the 20th (I am writing this before the date) I shall have to do some dodging in order to escape Teresa without missing the start of the Grieg. As it is inconceivable that anybody wanting these cornet solos will also want Bach and Chopin, it is clear that a lot of my fellow-listeners will also be on tenter-hooks in their efforts to escape Chopin's Study in F without missing a note of Teresa. I hope this aspect of the case will not be lost on the director of programmes. We musicians don't in the least grudge other folk their simple pleasure, and we don't mind a moderate amount of mixing things up, realising as we do that a judicious blend of good and slightly less good is likely to bring on the laggards; but we protest against such maladroitness in programme-making as this.

However, let thanks be given to the B.B.C. for a capital move in their 'Hours with Living British Composers.' There is no better way of popularising a composer. A full concert programme of any one man is apt to be too much of a good thing, and a solitary item in a miscellaneous scheme is not enough. An hour of carefully chosen pieces gives a composer a chance to show his style and scope, and wearies nobody. I have been able to hear only two of such 'Hours'—the Cyril Scott and the Frank Bridge—and both were thoroughly enjoyable. I am sure both composers made many new friends as a result. Among the best things of the past few weeks have been the flute playing of Edith Penville (June 1) and Gualtiero Voghera in the Cyril Scott programme. A good many listeners must have been surprised at the possibilities of an instrument usually regarded as a mere colourless tootler.

I expected much of the Windsor Castle Harmonists (June 3), seeing what excellent singers they are individually. But it was depressing to find them succumbing to the worst tricks of male-voice parties. Their rubato in an arrangement of The Land of the Leal had to be heard to be believed. There were several items later in the programme that I wanted to hear, including an old friend in Quibbles' Cocoa, but before The Land of the Leal had finished dragging its slow length along I closed down, not without temper. (Warm as I was, however, I remembered with gratitude that had I been listening to this rhythmless, over-sentimentalised performance in a concert-hall, I should have had to sit it out: it might even have been encored!)

There has been some first-rate orchestral playing by the Wireless Orchestra under Dan Godfrey, jun. (though I hope when next he plays Bennett's Naiads Overture he will make it a bit less meditative). The results from this Orchestra, even when not augmented, are far better than those obtained from the much larger and costlier force playing at Central Hall. The B.B.C. need not go hunting round for big concert-halls so long as they can give us such clear and telling results from their own studio.

I have just sampled enough of the B.N.O.C. performances from His Majesty's to note that the transmission is excellent.

There may be a good deal in Mr. Calvocoressi's contention that modern music of the type that depends upon extremely subtle effects of tone-colour would not have fair play if broadcast. But isn't that a sign of weakness, not in the broadcasting, but in the music? Doesn't it point to poverty of material when a work can be ruined by a slight failure to carry out every trifling intention of the score? It is true that so far neither the gramophone nor the wireless can give us certain instrumental colours (e.g., the drum is nearly always a failure) and that the bass in most combinations is rarely firm enough. But any little deficiencies of the kind are amply compensated by the advantage of being able to hear the music at home. And on many occasions there is no need whatever to make allowances. For example, the Frank Bridge programme came through so clearly and with such good sonority that I do not think I should have had appreciably better results had I been hearing the performance in a concert-hall. But then the works were genuine music, with definite themes and good texture. Had Frank Bridge been a composer with nothing to say he might have been reduced to juxtaposing sonorities and devising super-subtleties that look well on paper and come off only once in a blue moon. Stanford used to say that the test of a piece of orchestral music was its ability to stand transcribing as a pianoforte duet. This was an over-statement, of course, but there was a good deal in it, and I am inclined to think that with the steady improvement of wireless and gramophone we shall eventually be pretty well able to rule out as unpractical failures any composers whose message cannot be recorded or transmitted without being much the worse for the journey.

Music in the Foreign Press

A GERMAN CRITIC ON MUSICAL ENGLAND

In the Musikblätter des Anbruch (May), Adolf Weissmann expresses the following views on musical conditions in Britain:

In England . . . music plays a very small part in the life of the average citizen, whose liking for light, jolly music crosses the path of earnest music. Yet efforts are being made to create a genuine musical public, starting with the plebeian classes. But the upper classes of society put many obstacles in music's way. Music must pander to their longing for pleasure. Hence concert programmes devoid of logic and style. Even the programmes of the more important concerts are motley affairs, intended to satisfy the craving for variety. There is a good deal of hero-worship, which goes to a few artists of established [the original text has patented] reputation, but is withheld from others. In short, while acknowledging that music—and even new music—is progressing in England, we must make it clear that there can be no question of a general movement. . . . The Englishman puts little faith in his own music so long as he remains conscious of the difficulties in his way. He feels how very much the present tendency to level all things obstructs that freedom which alone may beget great music. But he is making headway.

A FRENCH CONDUCTOR ON THE UPPER CLASSES

In Le Correspondant (May 25), René Dumesnil publishes his interviews with various French conductors. The following remark by Rhené-Baton is worthy of attention:

Whenever I conduct concerts in halls where the majority of the public belong to the upper classes, I notice that only consecrated works prove successful. For instance, at the Opéra, the audience will enthusiastically applaud the Prélude à l'Après-midi d'un Faune, but remains indifferent to Debussy's Nocturnes. L'Apprenti Sorcier will be encored, but La Péri will be received coldly.

ZEMLINSKY'S LYRIC SYMPHONY

In the same issue of the Musikblätter, Rudolf St. Hoffmann describes this new work, calling attention both to its originality and to its affinities with Mahler's Lied von der Erde.

DO WE HEAR TONES AS THEY ACTUALLY SOUND?

This is the problem which Prof. Ludwig Riemann raises in the Neue Musikzeitung (May 1):

Every ear hears subjectively. There can be no pure tone when two different instruments play together, any more than there is in the tempered notes of the pianoforte. The ear, moreover, may gradually lose its sensitiveness to minute differences of pitch. This property may eventually enable us to enjoy circus-music and exotic tunes (sic). Art music utilises concurrently three different orders of notes: natural notes, such as are produced on the trumpet and horn; notes determined by tuning in fifths (unaccompanied singing, open strings of bow instruments), and tempered notes (pianoforte, organ). So that the reply is: 'No; we do not hear notes as they actually sound, but merely as we conceive them, and we judge them according to the impression they produce on us.'

In the following issue, Hermann Keller considers cases when our linear conception of notes we hear gains the upper hand over our harmonic conception, or conversely.

If we play the following upon the pianoforte:

first very slowly, then quicker, leaving out the pauses, we no longer hear this:

but this:

It is a case of harmonic versus melodic conception. Reger in his BACH Fantasy, Op. 46, adheres to the former. Wolf in the second section of Penthesilea to the latter.

Other similar instances are adduced.

NEW MATERIAL FOR WAGNER'S BIOGRAPHERS

In the Zeitschrift für Musik (May), Sebastian Röckl publishes letters written by Wagner to L. von Dufflipp which refer to the first performances at Munich of Rheingold and Die Walküre. Arnold Schering publishes three letters from Wagner to Robert Franz, written in 1852 and 1853.

BERNARD ZWEERS

A special number of Cecilia (May 10) is devoted to tributes from various Dutch composers and writers to Bernard Zweers on the occasion of his seventieth birthday.

RONSARD AND MUSIC

The May issue of the Revue Musicale commemorates Ronsard's fourth centenary. It contains essays by Suarés, Laloy, de Nolhac, Prunières, Van den Borren, and Schaeffner. A musical supplement entitled Le Tombeau de Ronsard consists of settings of poems by Ronsard contributed by Dukas, Ravel, Roussel, Caplet, Aubert, Honegger, Delage, and Roland-Manuel.

SAINT-SAËNS

In Le Correspondant (May 10), Georges Servières publishes miscellaneous anecdotes and information relating to Saint-Saëns. Some are fairly amusing; most will prove useful to biographers in quest of fresh detail.

TOSCANINI

The June number of Il Pianoforte is a special Toscanini number, containing an essay by Pizzetti and tributes from composers and others of most countries.

M.-D. CALVOCORESSI.

New Music

NEW STRING MUSIC

Sir A. C. Mackenzie's Distant Chimes, for violin and pianoforte (Novello) strikes us as one of the best specimens of its class, which is Musique de Salon. It is a class which apparently appeals to the widest public, for most of the music that is being published to-day, both in England and abroad, comes within its domain. But it is not often that its obvious object, i.e., to combine distinction of workmanship with ease and fluency, is achieved as finally as in Distant Chimes. Sir Alexander does not set too difficult a task to his interpreters. All that he demands is a fair degree of technical skill, musicianly feeling, and average intelligence. His harmonic progressions have enough spice to make them interesting; he aims at effects of quiet pleasure; he does not want to astound us. And this is precisely what all such music should be.

Josef Holbrooke's Danse Moderne, for violin and pianoforte (W. Paxton), shows the gifted composer of some very charming, short violin pieces—not nearly so well-known as they should be—as the advocate of syncopation. It is written with that facility which is the most formidable and the most dangerous weapon in Mr. Holbrooke's armoury. In a work of modest dimensions such as the Danse Moderne we see only its advantages. The music flows easily from the first to the last bar, yet it is sufficiently piquant to retain an individual and characteristic flavour of its own. Louis Godowsky's Menuetto (same instruments and publisher) is a modest tribute to an old and ever-popular dance form. Neatly played it should answer the purpose of bridging over the gap between the Adagio and the lively concluding number in the customary group of short pieces in a concert programme.

Two short Trios for violin, violoncello, and pianoforte, transcribed by Madame Anna Priscilla Fisher from the works of MacDowell (Elkin) will appeal to the admirers of the American composer's talent. The first, To the Sea, has little to commend it except its straightforwardness. MacDowell was certainly not the first ever to burst into that noisy sea of lyricism. It begins fortissimo, it continues fortissimo, which it increases 'steadily' to fff; the storm abates for a while (but 'full and sonorous' say the directions); three bars to a pp; then fortissimo again and fff to the close. There is, perhaps, just a touch of the ancient mariner also about the second trio, Nautilus. But this is by far the more modest and acceptable of the two.

Herbert Howells's Lady Audrey's Suite, for string quartet (Curwen), is very charming programme music. Mr. Howells does not describe closely and in detail the incidents of a story in the Richard Strauss manner, and his music does not need letterpress to elucidate it. The 'Golliwogs' Dance' would be as witty, the 'Girl and the Shepherd' as tender, even if we did not know the source of the composer's inspiration. But the episodes told at the beginning of each movement are a great help to interpretation. The third movement is the most 'programme-like' of the four. But the temptation was irresistible. For the little girl (whose impressions inspire the whole Quartet) is described at church, where with more solemn impressions are mixed thoughts of the week's doing. What more natural than to plan the movement in variation form so that each day will be represented?

A 'Browning' for string orchestra, The leaves be greene of William Byrd, edited by Sir Richard R. Terry (Curwen Edition) is a capital example of the extraordinary ingenuity and unsophisticated charm of the great composer's music. It can be played by violinists who have little experience of higher positions, since, indeed, the only position that Byrd expects his players to know well is the first. The highest note in the first violin part is C; the second and third violins go so far as to avoid the E string altogether. Thus if the ideal performance can come only from experts, the 'Browning' can be studied with considerable enjoyment as well as profit by every string orchestra in the country. It also makes an ideal test-piece for festivals in which string orchestras need a technically easy test. B. V.

CHORAL MUSIC: UNISON SONGS

A big batch of new music for choirs shows the weak spot to be in the matter of unison songs for school use. As often as not the song is made quite unsuitable through a bad choice of words. For example, here is a song for boys by Alec Ashworth, I loved a lass, a fair one (Curwen). Is it reasonable to ask a choir of boys to sing Wither's well-known lines? Capital verses for an adult singer, with a touch of cynicism, but for youngsters...? Two songs by Granville Bantock show a good and bad choice of text. A Summer Night is a pretty fancy that will appeal to imaginative children—that is, to almost all youngsters; but Phoebe is surely more suitable for singing to, or about, a child rather than by children. The charming verses are by Graham Robertson, who also wrote those for A Summer Night. Musically, the better of the two is Phoebe (Curwen). Two excellent specimens come from the Year-Book Press—The Fairy Queen of the May, an Irish folk-song arranged by Charles Wood, to words by George Darley—the very thing for a girls' choir; and The Crew of the Albion, a spirited setting by Charles Macpherson of lines by James Cobb (1795), apparently taken from an old opera The Cherokee. This will suit boys down to the ground. For boys or girls who can appreciate the thought in Robert Green's Sweet Obscurity, Ernest Walker's setting is first-rate—smooth and vocal, and interesting rhythmically (Oxford University Press). From the same house comes a setting by Frederick Delius of What does little birdie say?—rather square as to melody, and with harmonic touches that are sometimes crude, sometimes happy. Joseph Williams sends Felix White's The New Moon, and Adam Carse's The Broomskire's Son, both excellently tuneful. (But Mr. White should have thought more about his accentuation—'Her two little horns,' 'We'd see the sun set,' 'I'd sit in the middle.') For massed choirs there is Vaughan Williams's Let us now praise famous men (Curwen), a characteristic setting of the well-known passage from Ecclesiasticus. It is decidedly plain-songy at times, and the descending bass figure is worked a little too hard, but a big body of voices, backed up by organ or orchestra, would make a finely impressive effect with it.

The Empire Song Book (Novello) is a collection of music suitable for children's festivals and other occasions, so arranged that the items may be sung with or without action. It opens with Rule, Britannia, and closes with the National Anthem, the body of the book being made up of three songs of England, Scotland, Wales, and Ireland, and five interludes, by Percy E. Fletcher, who also contributes An Empire Song. The interludes are attractive medleys of national songs, and lead into each section. Thus, the three English songs (Come, lasses and lads, With Jockey to the Fair, The Bailiff's Daughter) follow an interlude on The Vicar of Bray, Here's a health unto His Majesty, The Lass of Richmond Hill, Good-morrow, Gossip Joan, and The girl I left behind me. These instrumental pieces are quite short, and well within the powers of the average pianist. The book provides excellent material for celebrations of various kinds, musical and national.

FEMALE-VOICE CHOIRS

So many songs for S.S. and S.S.A. have been received for review that it will be possible to mention only the outstanding examples. Ethel Boyce's set of two-part songs (S.A.) under the general title of Four Birds, are tuneful settings of her own words—The Bullfinch, The Willow Wrens, The Peacock, and The Swallow. They are moderately difficult; a neat and dainty accompanist is called for. Arrangements for S.S.A., with pianoforte, have been made of two songs already popular—Bridge's The Goslings, and John E. West's John Peel. For unaccompanied S.S.S. there is a smooth setting, imitative in character, by George Rathbone of a carol by Hilaire Belloc—When Christ was four years old. All these are published by Novello. From this house may also be obtained some part-songs for female voices by E. L. Voynich, published by H. W. Gray, New York. For S.S.S. there is a canonic setting of Lenten is come; some quaint Old English words, for S.S.A.A., He that hath and a little tiny wit, the Fool's song from King Lear, and The School Boy—an air with variations, the words being by Blake ('I love to rise on a summer morn'). In the first and third both treble parts call for a high compass. The writing is diatonic, and shows a good knowledge of choral effect. The songs are for unaccompanied singing, and need a skilful choir.

Too few choirs realise the effectiveness of two-part unaccompanied work. Here are three songs by W. G. Whittaker that give an excellent idea of its possibilities. The cock has crowed an hour ago, The day grows hot, and The day's grown old are settings of delightful words by Charles Cotton. They are for equal voices, so the usual difficulty of finding enough alto weight in female-voice choirs is avoided. These songs are among the best things I have seen for a long while, really original—even daring—but with a freshness that recalls the two-part work of Dowland, though, of course, far less simple harmonically. They are published by the Oxford University Press, which sends also some admirable two-part (S.A.) songs by Ernest Walker—To an Autumn Rose, Sleep, and A Hawk's up, for a Hunt's up, a three-part (S.S.A.) setting by the same composer of Ben Jonson's Hymn to Diana ('Queen and huntress, chaste and fair'), and Frederick Delius's The Streamlet's Slumber Song—over luscious and dissonant, surely. George Oldroyd's two songs for S.S.A. unaccompanied, Spring, the sweet Spring and Sister, awake! give good opportunities for skilful choirs the former being far the more attractive.

Choirs in need of a cantata for two-part chorus will find a tuneful, straightforward example in Sydney H. Nicholson's Jackdaw of Rheims (Curwen). There are passages for solo voices, which may, however, be sung by semi-chorus or chorus with good effect.

MALE-VOICE CHOIRS

Some effective songs for male-voice choirs have lately been published. Two by Elgar are The Wanderer (the words from Wit and Drollery, 1661, by an anonymous writer who was clearly a poet) and Zut! Zut! Zut! (Remember) (Novello). Both are moderately difficult. The second is a marching song with a fine swing; well done, it would bring the house down. From Curwen come three by Rutland Boughton—Prospice ('Fear Death? to feel the fog in my throat'), Quick March, and Contentment. All seem to suffer from the fault common to male-voice choral work—too much point-to-point setting. But there is fine serious and sonorous music in Prospice. Contentment is dedicated 'To the Sleepers at Glastonbury,' and the Quick March 'To Diehards of all opinions.' The last-named has a jolly tune in folk-song style and some capital words by Thomas Hardy. James Lyon's Men of Eric ('A song of the Skalds,' from Fougère's Sintram), is picturesque, but oversophisticated; Gerrard Williams's Thou sent'st to me a heart has real charm, and despite its harmonic daring (each of its two verses ends with a poignant discord) sounds, and is, really simple and homogeneous. It is all too short. A gloomy affair is Slave Song, for bass solo and T.T.B.B. chorus, by Chris. M. Edmunds. The words are from a traditional Turkish song, and the melody was taken down in Asia Minor by the composer. It is a good companion in dolour to the Volga Boat Song. After these complications and depressions, Kenneth G. Finlay's Ho, ro! my nut-brown maiden, an arrangement of an old Highland melody, is refreshing in its healthy simplicity and heartiness (Bayley & Ferguson).

Martin Shaw has arranged an old song of Storace's, Peaceful slumbering on the ocean, for tenor solo and T.T.B.B. chorus, and the old drinking song, I cannot eat but little meat, for T.T.B.B. chorus (Curwen). Both are effective, especially the latter, which has the right rough and hearty smack about it. They are fairly difficult.

S.A.T.B.

Peter Warlock and Philip Wilson carry on their good work of transcribing the Lutenists. The latest numbers are John Bartlett's When from my love I looked for love, and three by the sprightly Robert Jones—My mistress sings no other song, Farewell, dear love, and Sweet, come away. All are as engaging as we expect such things to be. The songs may also be sung by solo voice (high), the lute accompaniment being arranged for such performance (Enoch). Choirs who wish to fly higher than four-part singing are usually held off by the excessive difficulty of the music. In E. T. Sweeting's six-part Evening (Novello), the music is of real beauty, and the composer has considered the practical side more than is usually the case. Thus the music is laid out for two trebles, alto, tenor, baritone, and bass, a convenient arrangement that most choirs will be able to manage. The words are by Henley, and the work is sufficiently long to enable it to stand alone as a biggish, separate item in a miscellaneous choral programme. It is only moderately difficult, the chief demands being on the expressive side. Three part-songs by Kenneth G. Finlay (Bayley & Ferguson) are notable for strong, diatonic harmony and interesting texture. Autumn Song is appropriately gray, and recalls Stanford in style; Nocturne makes its effect chiefly by vivid contrast between the rapid pace of the opening and the slow stillness of the close; Afton Water is an arrangement of the familiar air, in the singing of which great care is needed in the matter of balance. (It is odd how often we hear otherwise excellent choirs failing to see the point of arrangements of this kind, where the melody is sometimes given to a part other than the treble.) Mr. Finlay shows a real feeling for choral writing, though he is inclined to use rather too many notes. Over-elaborate counter-themes in the treble, however lightly sung, are apt to detract from the cantus. The familiar Delius sliding dissonances are prominent in the composer's The splendour falls on castle walls (Oxford University Press). There is a good deal of divisi, eight parts being used at times. Effective use is made of a separate choir humming to represent the 'horns of elfland faintly blowing.' From Curwen comes a striking and difficult song by Rutland Boughton, The Blacksmith. A novel touch is the reverberating effect at times (something like the old bebung in keyboard music), and in the last chord some of the first tenors sing a high C sharp, mf, falsetto, over the fff of the rest of the choir. Vaughan Williams's arrangement for T.T.B.B. of The Turtle Dove is well-known: he has now made another version for baritone solo and S.S.A.T.B. chorus (Curwen). It gives fine scope for vocal accompaniment, humming and with words. Another very expressive arrangement of folk-song is Henry G. Ley's The sheep under the snow, a beautiful Manx song (Stainer & Bell). Gerrard Williams's Whither runneth my sweetheart (Curwen) is a first-rate little scherzo, mainly diatonic, with some changes of key that are as natural as they are striking. The treatment of the word 'stay' is particularly happy. Great pace is called for; the song would be a fine test for enunciation. Alec Rowley adopts the folk-song style in his The sweet rose in June (Arnold), and so suits his text. I wish he had kept up the diatonic simplicity of his opening; the modulation back to the tonic for the last verse is commonplace and out of the picture. George Dyson's Thanksgiving (Arnold) is described as 'a festal song,' and is evidently designed for massed chorus singing. It is a strong tune, tellingly harmonized, and with a rhythm that is an effective blend of duple and triple. But I have my doubts about the words. Will the average choir or audience rise to such archaisms as 'y'wis,' 'brides,' 'than' (= 'then')? If they will, so much the better, as the song altogether is a fine, wholesome bit of English stuff. It is short—one verse only, which should be sung as quartet or semi-chorus, and repeated full. Edgar L. Bainton's The Tower, for mixed chorus and orchestra, has just been issued by Curwen. It is one of the novelties for the forthcoming Hereford Festival, so the reviewer need not anticipate a verdict that will have the advantage of being founded on actual performance. H. G.

SONGS

Love songs there are in plenty, and we remember a certain Hymn of Hate. But a Hate Song is something new. However, it is only a very little one—a setting by Gerrard Williams of four lines by Shelley ('A hater he came and sat by a ditch'). It is appropriately dissonant, but whether the performers (and listeners) get full value for their trouble is another matter. Two songs by Piero Coppola—There is a wheel inside my head (W. E. Henley) and Morn in May (Sir William Watson)—are so persistently dissonant as to become monotonous. I see nothing in the words of the latter to justify harmony that more nearly suggests evening in October. Similarly, need Felix White have been so elaborate and capricious in setting T. E. Brown's I bended unto me a bough of May? Grace Thynne's The Crimson Poppies (Max Plowman) is wholly delightful, with its folk-song like air and its spare accompaniment in which every note tells. Rutland Boughton's Sister Rain and Foam Song are more elaborate in every way, but always with good effect. A good singer (high soprano) and pianist could make a very picturesque thing of Foam Song. Maurice Jacobson has written a setting of Jolly good ale and old ('I cannot eat but little meat') that is funnily uncouth. Especially am I tickled with the cadence wherein the singer ends in D and holds that note with toperish obstinacy against the chord of E. (Haven't we often heard smoking-concert singers in the 'mellow' stage similarly distinguish themselves?) All the above songs come from Curwen's, who send also four more of the series of unaccompanied songs, started recently by Herbert Bedford. These are by Gerrard Williams (Indian Cradle Song) and Felix White (Mother, I will have a husband, Desolation, and The Shepherd's Daffodil). They do nothing to convert me to the form. Generally, the music is strong in harmonic implication and vague in rhythm. The only kind of song able to stand alone is one in which tune, rhythm, and words are so striking as to take the hearer's mind off any question of implied harmony. And the claim that the form makes for perfect verbal accentuation is let down in Desolation (a setting of Shelley's Widow Bird) by the composer's stressing—'There was NO leaf upon the forest bare.'

From Augener's come four songs by J. Maynard Grover—If I had but two little wings, All things passing away, The Dove said, give us peace, and When mother sings. The composer's chief lack is in the matter of rhythm, the worst example being the first song, Coleridge's delightful little poem being set to a pedestrian strain suggestive of a game leg rather than wings. And the occasional affectation of modernity (e.g., the consecutive sevenths in All things passing away) is irritating. The best of the four is When mother sings, thanks chiefly to the charming words of Isabel Butchart. Peter Warlock's dallying with strange chords is quite another thing. All the same, I wish he had used fewer of them in his Candlelight, a cycle of nursery jingles. Most of the little tunes are exactly right, and when Mr. Warlock is content to be simple in his accompaniments, we have perfect specimens of nursery rhymes. But few youngsters and mammas will have stomach for Mr. Warlock in his most Chelsea-ish flights.

Some good songs by Edgar Bainton come from Winthrop Rogers—Dawn, Sanctuaries, and Spring comes, the words of all three being drawn from Gordon Bottomley's Chambers of Imagery. The best, I feel, is Dawn, with its delicate bird-sounds in the pianoforte part. In Spring comes we are struck by the composer's neat avoidance of the commonplace. The G flat in the introduction leads us to expect some deadly harmonic clichés, but somehow the situation is saved. Sanctuaries is expressive, but there are ballad-y touches, especially in the melody and rhythm. Mr. Bainton has also provided a bold setting of Thomson's oft-set Give a man a horse he can ride (Joseph Williams). Roger Quilter's An Old Carol (Winthrop Rogers) in a beautiful treatment of the exquisite 16th-century I sing of a Maiden. Simple as it is, it abounds in happy touches—e.g., the rich yet not far-fetched harmony at 'As dew in April that falleth on the spray.' It is issued for low and high voice, but would apparently be best suited by the former.

Nancy's Hair is an old Border love-lilt, arranged by Mrs. Kennedy Fraser—a delightful little march-like tune that a baritone can make a great deal of (Paterson). Four more of such airs have been arranged by John Connell, to words by Malcolm MacInnes—Long the Way, Oh! happy he and scatheless, No more shall I climb, and Huill Horo (Stainer & Bell). Mr. Connell has kept the right, simple harmonic feeling until the third, when he dropped into the snare of the augmented sixth, and enjoyed the experience so much that he uses the chord four times, which (in this song) is four times too many.

Eight songs, in two sets of four, by Hans Pfitzner (Fürstner, Berlin), are none the worse for reminding us of work in the same field by Richard Strauss. They call for a high dramatic soprano and a first-rate pianist. The text is in German and English, the latter being by Alfred Kalisch. There are one or two discrepancies between the English words as given at the beginning and in the settings. Thus, 'Pearly tears of sadness' = 'Pearly tears of gladness,' the first being obviously right; and 'A viper's form I'll take' = 'I'll change me to a snake,' where the singer, having paid his money, may take his choice. But the sentiments and imagery generally are such that the songs are far better sung in the original tongue.

A capital waltz song is Percy E. Fletcher's The Shafts of Cupid (Novello). One gives a good idea of its style and merits by remarking that it has a pronounced flavour of Edward German in happy mood. It is issued in three keys, but would perhaps be most effective sung by a high soprano. H. G.

The Musician's Bookshelf

Modern Music: Its Aims and Tendencies. By Rollo H. Myers.

[Kegan Paul, 2s. 6d.]

The Language of Music, or Musical Expression and Characterisation. By Frederick Nicholls.

[Kegan Paul, 2s. 6d.]

Music and the Plain Man. By Daniel Gregory Mason.

[H. W. Gray Co., 25 cents.]

Hearing. By Robert Morris Ogden.

[Jonathan Cape, 15s.]

Music and Mind. By T. H. Yorke Trotter.

[Methuen, 7s. 6d.]

Music Makers. By H. Ernest Hunt.

[Kegan Paul, 1s.]

The First Book of the Gramophone Record. By Percy A. Scholes.

[Oxford University Press, 3s. 6d.]

Until very recently writers of books on music catered only for the professional musician and the skilled and enthusiastic amateur. To-day they are falling over one another in their efforts to help the general public to understand and enjoy music. As publishers are not in the habit of producing books for which there is no demand, it is reasonable to assume that the general public is ready to be helped. Here is a batch of books in which the authors more or less have had in view the needs of other than the trained musician. Here and there they appear to have fallen between two stools, the material or its presentation being too elementary for the musician and a bit over the head of the neophyte, but on the whole the latter has the pull.

At first sight it might appear that Mr. Myers's little book is one for the advanced musician, and certainly such readers will find it full of interest and information. But the author's account of the rise of the modern movement in art generally as well as in music is so clearly written that it may be easily grasped by the average reader.

Mr. Myers states the case fairly as well as clearly, although there is no doubt as to where his sympathies lie. He gives typical examples of polytonality, atonality, and other fashionable complaints, and they interest even though they may not convince. A particularly good chapter is that in which Erik Satie is discussed; the quotation from Socrate is all that Mr. Myers claims for it ('tender and profound in its quiet simplicity and limpidity of style'), and raises a desire to hear more of a composer who has largely himself to blame for his small repute on this side of the Channel. He should give us more of such things as the Gymnopédies, and fewer or none of such childish japes as the Morceaux en forme d'une poire. Of a fearsome example of Schönberg's vocal writing from Pierrot Lunaire, Mr. Myers says that 'it [sprechmelodie] is an innovation in vocal technique, the importance of which it is impossible to ignore,' adding: 'It is of course too soon to be able to pronounce upon the question as to whether such methods are likely to be universally adopted in the future.' Is it? I fancy that most people who heard the recent performances of the work in London were able to make up their minds on this point, however doubtful they may have remained on others. Speaking of Schönberg's polyphony, Mr. Myers admits that the composer '... pushes the doctrine of complete independence for each voice to such extreme limits that the result is abolition of tonality and thence (in some cases) to cacophony... It is probable that if our ears could ever be trained to follow each "voice" separately—and Schönberg's music really pre-supposes the possession of this faculty—much that at present sounds obscure or even cacophonous would then appear harmonious and clear.'

Never was there so much virtue in 'if!' And Mr. Myers is surely over-sanguine when he says that 'our ears will somehow have to adapt themselves to the new demands that are being made upon them.' Even if they are able to so adapt themselves, will the game be worth the candle? The limit of aural capacities may or may not have been reached, but it is certain that we have almost, if not quite, reached a point beyond which executants and hearers will refuse to travel, for the practical reason that life is not long enough. Mr. Myers's book is the best, clearest, and fairest statement for modernism that I have yet seen. He writes well, and incidentally shows that the subject can be discussed without the aid of polysyllabic jargon.

Mr. Nicholls describes his book as one of 'moderate, not excessive analysis'—a fair claim.

As he truly says, 'extreme analysis unbalanced by any strong unifying mental or emotional apprehension tends to obliterate all reality in the subject analysed.' In his eleven chapters he discusses clearly (albeit with far too many italics) the nature of music; expression; speech and music; expression through harmony, movement, and melody; variation of tone; musical dissertation; rhyme and alliteration; musical meanings and mysteries; and song. He has the right note of enthusiasm, and his book should be of service to many, especially perhaps to young musicians who need pointers in the matter of interpretation.

Mr. Mason's pamphlet is reprinted from The Freeman, and is a vigorous onslaught on certain aspects of musical life in America, and on the ultra-modern school:

'It may be true [he says] that we spend more millions of dollars on music than any other nation, but the question still remains: Do we get good value for our money?'

And he decides that the answer must be:

'... either a negative one or a highly qualified affirmative.'

He points out that

'It was the love of singing among plain people that sustained Bach; it was the violin and violoncello playing gentlemen of the Esterhazy and other courts who inspired Haydn's String Quartets; it was the wide diffusion of musical feeling among Austrians who themselves sang and played that made Beethoven possible... Among us the life-giving amateur spirit has largely succumbed to large-scale production under professional expert direction.'

Again:

'If we look candidly about us at our professional music, we shall see the hall-marks of decadence on every hand. First of all, or at any rate more striking than any other symptom, is the almost universal preoccupation with manner at the expense of matter.'

This bears out the observation of Mr. Colles and other visitors to the States. They found audiences far more concerned with the name of the conductor of orchestral concerts than with the programme. Mr. Mason is in flat opposition to Mr. Myers as to the 'worth whileness' of ultra-modernism:

'Not only has orchestral music become so difficult that only a few professional orchestras, after long and ever more expensive rehearsals, can play most of it, but pianoforte and chamber music, those parts of the art where in all great periods it has touched the amateur most closely, are hedged off from him to-day by well-nigh impassable technical barriers. Imagine college pianists and violinists, instead of navigating with some peril but endless delight, as we used to do, the varied and romantic seas of Grieg, Brahms, and Franck, venturing on the chartered wastes and engulfing billows of Florent Schmitt! Fancy a string quartet of young business men regaling themselves in leisure hours with Stravinsky and Schönberg!'

Of course we can't fancy it, and the failure seems to point to the fatal weakness of the extremists. As Mr. Mason says, there is no need for music to be so difficult; such appalling technical obstacles are a sign

'... not of skill, but of complications not thought out, and of problems left unsolved.'

And there is little if any exaggeration in his summing up:

'Nine-tenths of our modern music is, in plain fact, needlessly, injuriously, and stupidly complicated. Let us stop gaping at it in an equally stupid awe. Let us laugh it good humouredly out of court.'

A stimulating pamphlet winds up with some commonsense observations on the question of nationality in music.

Much of Mr. Ogden's volume is beyond the scope of review in a musical journal, being concerned with the actual physiology of the ear. There are chapters on acoustics, the scientific aspect of sound, noise, language, phonetics, &c.—matters on which the author is evidently clearly possessed of profound learning. The purely musical side discovers some weaknesses, however. Thus, speaking of melody, he gives a Siamese 'Fan Dance' as an example of a tune notable for 'the complete absence of a tonic,' and, therefore, without 'harmonic possibilities.' But the tune is as clearly in the key of C as ever a tune was, starting and ending on C, with a cadence that might have stepped straight from a modern ballad, and with a clearly implied modulation to the dominant. The discussion of the principles of harmony is far too scientific, with liberal use of such expressions as 'fusion of tones and intervals,' 'simple, bitonal chords,' the latter being classified as 'symphonic, paraphonic, and diaphonic.' There is a thoughtful chapter on the aural side of musical education, with a description of the tonoscope, an instrument which enables us to obtain a visible record of the sound produced by the human voice or any other instrument. In fact, for the scientifically-minded musician or layman, this volume of over three hundred pages is a mine that may be dug in with enjoyment and profit.

Dr. Yorke Trotter perhaps covers too much ground in his Mind and Music. The book divides into three parts, dealing with Music and Mind; The Art of Music; and Music in Education, either of which parts might have been developed into separate treatises. To some extent they overlap. Thus, there are many pages in Part I that would seem to belong to Part 2. In fact, we feel that had Parry not already used The Art of Music as a title, it would have served well for this book. In treating of the ecclesiastical modes, Dr. Trotter tells us that '... the type of scale that was chiefly used in the folk-songs [the Ionian] was condemned by the ecclesiastical authorities, and called modo lascivo. That this term had nothing to do with the intervals employed in the scale, but was used as denoting a scale found in dance music, is more than probable.'

But was the Ionian mode more used than others for secular purposes? Any collection of undoctored folk-melodies will, I think, show fewer melodies in the Ionian than in the Dorian or Mixolydian or Æolian. Dr. Trotter goes on:

'There can be nothing "lascivious" about the major scale, but to evoke memories of a certain kind might be considered worthy of the opprobrious epithet.'

But was not the ancient objection to the Ionian mode grounded on the feeling that the leading-note gave it a soft, effeminate character? Moreover, there can be no question that melodically it is the weakest of the set, and therefore likely to be less used at a time when music was mainly one-dimensional. That the scale was comparatively little used, even in secular song, was probably due to the fact that few primitive instruments could manage the leading-note. Even to-day one may hear itinerant musicians playing modern hymn-tunes and songs and flattening the seventh. No doubt these disabilities of early instruments were responsible for the frequent use of the 'gapped' scale in folk-song, though Dr. Trotter gives an elaborate explanation based on acoustics. There is a lengthy discussion of programme music which will meet with general approval, and a thoughtful and earnest section dealing with music in education. (By the way, we are surprised to find the Doctor speaking of The Elijah.)

Music Makers is a reprint of an address delivered at the Hastings Musical Festival last year. It deals with music as a universal language, inspiration, expression, and, above all, with the spirit of the ideal musical festival. Mr. Hunt aptly reminds competitors that they are the festival, and that the finest organization, the best test-pieces, and the pick of adjudicators are as naught unless the competitors have the right spirit.

Uncle already to hosts of school-children, teachers, and men in the street, Mr. Scholes now adds to his avuncular responsibilities by taking the gramophonist under his wing. In The First Book of the Gramophone Record he gives in true Scholesian style the results of a trial of hundreds of records. He has chosen fifty that on all grounds strike him as the best, has written descriptive notes on the music, with copious music-type illustrations, a glossary, a good deal of interesting general information, biographical and historical, particulars as to the price, &c., of the chosen records, and even publishers and prices of the scores of the music dealt with. The works discussed range from Byrd to Beethoven. Inevitably some readers will grumble that this or that work was left out, but they will, I think, be hard put to it to complain that any one of the chosen fifty was put in. They must have patience, seeing that the title holds out a promise of further blessings. H. G.

How to Become a Professional Violinist. By Oscar Cremer.

[London: The Strad.]

The 'Tips and Talks' of Mr. Oscar Cremer give us an insight into the lower branches of the profession but too often ignored by those who 'have arrived.' Mr. Cremer has as much to say about the theatre, music-hall, and cinema orchestra as about the concert and symphony orchestra, and the beginner will be grateful for such advice. Indeed it is not the student who, after having played his symphonies with his college or academy orchestra, is fortunate enough to secure an engagement with Sir Henry Wood, who needs assistance. It is the unlucky player nonplussed by the hardly legible MS. at a theatre or music-hall, who requires all the help that the experienced can give him. In the smaller provincial theatres the task of the 'band' used once to be easy enough. A little volume with a dozen tunes labelled 'love scene,' 'storm music,' 'the fight,' 'reconciliation,' 'first murder,' &c., was all that was needed. Each tune consisted of a dozen bars or so, and was repeated until the conductor tapping his desk acquainted the players with the fact that the situation was about to change. Incidental music is now a more serious question, and even hardened professionals with no experience of the music-halls are apt to wonder at the quickness with which music-hall orchestras pass from one type of music to another. Some contretemps or other does happen often enough, and the beginner need not be cast down if anything should go wrong on his first attempt. The wonder is that things do not go wrong oftener than they do.

The little volume is particularly valuable in view of the fact that increased numbers of professional musicians will naturally result in closer competition and a higher standard. At any rate practice in music-halls and smaller theatres generally is invaluable to players and conductors alike. A first violin in a famous orchestra is, of course, expected to possess higher qualifications. Yet his actual task is less complex than that of his colleague of the music-hall, for his 'parts' are free from error and clearly printed.

We wish the wording of some paragraphs were a little more strictly logical. What is the exact meaning of, 'Hautbois (French) means the oboe, and is always spoken of as such'? Does the author wish to say that we speak of the oboe as the hautbois or vice versa? Mr. Cremer advises orchestral players to use always 'Acribelle' or steel E strings, because they are cheaper and last longer. We have never risked the steel strings, but our experience of 'Acribelle' strings is that they never keep in tune. His distinction between ritard and rallentando is misleading. Ritard ought to be cancelled from the musical dictionary, because it lacks the final syllables which make the difference between present participle (ritardato as in ritenuto) and future participle (ritardando as in rallentando). If this were done, and terms based not on erroneous tradition but on simple grammar, it would no longer be possible to mistake rit. for both ritardando and ritenuto. B. V.

The Art of Counterpoint. By C. H. Kitson. Second edition.

[Oxford University Press. 10s.]

The Evolution of Harmony. By C. H. Kitson. Second edition.

[Clarendon Press, Oxford. 12s. 6d.]

Musical Groundwork. By F. H. Shera.

[Oxford University Press. 3s. 6d.]

Ear-Training and Musical Dictation. By Ethel Home.

[Kegan Paul. 2s.]

Since the publication in 1907 of Dr. Kitson's The Art of Counterpoint, a very decided change has taken place in the outlook upon contrapuntal study in this country. Those who are acquainted with the author's views on this subject, as set forth in the above work, will probably not be surprised to find that in preparing a second edition he has welcomed the opportunity now afforded him of carrying to its logical conclusion—as he himself puts it—what he had in mind in 1907, but felt at the time to be inopportune. Many revisions and additions have been made, and the second part of the book, dealing with modern or free counterpoint, is practically new. Many modal examples have been added, and there is a chapter on the English school of the 16th century.

In his prefatory remarks, Dr. Kitson argues that if the technique of strict counterpoint be deduced from the practice of the 16th century, it is only logical to employ the scalar system of that period. The atmosphere of 16th-century music cannot be obtained without using the modes. Further than that, the technique is bound up with the modes, so that if the modern scales be employed various difficulties in reference to unessential notes and harmonic progressions arise, leading to all sorts of false conclusions. Many new examples have consequently been written in the modes, but a fair proportion of the original examples have been retained.

In reply to those who inquire why Palestrina's work is taken as the standard authority, in preference, for example, to the work of our own Byrd, the answer is ‘... that whereas Byrd shows the spirit of adventure and enterprise—and this is true of the English school as a whole—Palestrina is not an innovator. He was content to apply the principles as he knew them. It is not that Byrd's work is inferior—in fact, it may be said to be superior in many respects—but the student primarily requires to know precisely what the principles are, and then to learn how to apply them.’

Bearing on this point, we read in the interesting chapter on ‘The English School’:

‘When we come to the question of harmonic resource, we see the spirit of enterprise and experiment marking a great deal of the music. It is impossible to formulate a theory from such a period, for it was transitional. It would be equally futile to attempt a theory of present-day harmony . . . . In all the points discussed in this short chapter we see that the English were not content to be mere imitators. Both in melodic idiom and harmonic progression they showed initiative. They went far beyond the bounds of musica ficta, and taken as a whole the music represents the transitional period between the counterpoint of Palestrina and that of Bach.’

Referring to the suggestion that there is a need for a text-book dealing with English counterpoint; the author considers

‘... it would seem impossible to draw up any definite theories as to technique for a period which was so experimental in its methods, no matter how successful these experiments may be. Nor is such an attempt desirable. The student should certainly study this music, and write some examples in the same style, but he must get his foundations in the Palestrinean technique.’

The second part of the book should be particularly helpful to students. As the writer points out in his Preface, Part 2 in its original form dealt in a broad way with modern contrapuntal technique. It gave examples of the technique, but provided no means of obtaining it. In this new edition the study of the technique of free counterpoint is systematized just as is that of strict counterpoint in Part 1, while all the important examples of the original edition have been retained as illustrations. Dr. Kitson's masterly work in its new form should meet with wide appreciation from both teachers and students.

The same author's The Evolution of Harmony first appeared in 1914. There can be no doubt that it has done much to make the study of harmony vastly more profitable and interesting than formerly under the old system of endless figured basses. Not the least of its features was its insistence on the importance of ear-training. The figured bass was discarded as a means of teaching harmony. Its use was retained, however, as a basis for decorative work, and as an exercise in the manipulation of many parts. Form was discussed from the very first, and a noteworthy feature was the comprehensive treatment of the unessential. Differentiation of style was not ignored, and there were chapters dealing with writing for the pianoforte, the organ, strings, and voices. In short, from start to finish, the book was of high excellence, as all those who have used it have doubtless discovered for themselves.

In the new edition the changes are few and of only minor importance. Here and there exercises are omitted or new ones added, and the latter portion of the chapter on five-part harmony has disappeared. Even the closing chapter on ‘Modern Tendencies’—probably quite wisely—remains unaltered. Substantially, therefore, it is the same book as that which has already earned for itself so high a position in the esteem of serious musicians.

Two books on ear-training are—in their different ways—excellent. Musical Groundwork, by F. H. Shera, who is Director of Music at Malvern College, is specially intended for the use of those teachers whose time for the teaching of this subject is limited, and to whom a more exhaustive treatise might easily prove a stumbling block. Brevity has been the aim throughout. The lessons are planned to occupy approximately thirty minutes each. They have been grouped to cover the ground in eight terms, and are carefully graded, so that they may be spread over a longer period if desired. The scheme has been divided into compartments, both to facilitate reference and to enable the unfortunate teacher who may have even less than thirty minutes weekly at his disposal to omit one or more sections. An Appendix gives suggestions for recreative music or appreciation classes. Three courses are outlined, the selection of works being limited to such examples as are procurable in the form of gramophone records. It is a pity that in the lists of records both the name of the producing company and the price are omitted.

Those more fortunate teachers who have a minimum of one hour a week at their disposal will find an admirable scheme of work outlined in Miss Home's book. The writer is head-mistress of the Kensington High School, and we are told that this scheme has been tested with the average pupil for the last sixteen years, and has been found practicable not only by the experienced teacher but by the young beginner in the ‘art of teaching.’ The children taking the work have been for the most part pupils in high schools or in schools of a similar type. The course is divided into twenty-five lessons grouped in three stages. In the first stage (ages four to seven) short and frequent lessons are obviously to be preferred. A minimum of four

(Continued on page 630.)

How excellent is Thy mercy

ANTHEM FOR TENOR SOLO AND CHORUS FROM "THY MERCY, O LORD"

Psalm xxxvi. 7

Music by GEORGE GARRETT

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED; NEW YORK: THE H. W. GRAY CO., SOLE AGENTS FOR THE U.S.A.

ORGAN.

Andante non troppo. ♩ = 76.

Sw.

Ped. soft 16 ft.

TENOR SOLO.

There

espress.

FULL. p

How ex - cel-lent, how ex - cel-lent is . . Thy mer - cy, O God.

p

Sw. 8 & 4 ft. soft Stops.

Voices alone.

Org.

- - - fore the chil - dren of men shall put their trust un - -

Ped. soft 16 ft. Sw. to Ped.

Copyright, 1924, by Novello and Company Limited

der the.. shad - ow .. of Thy wings, add Ob.
p
senza Ped.
Gt. Gamba L.H.
Ped.

there Ob. off fore the chil - dren, the chil - dren of

cres.
 men shall put their trust un - - - der the
cres.
Gt. L.H.

shad - - ow of thy wings.
FULL. pp
 How ex - cel - lent, how ex - cel - lent
pp cres.
Voices alone.

cres.
They shall be sat - is - fied

pp
is Thy mer - cy, O God.

pp
is . . Thy mer - cy, O God.

mf

Org. add to Sw.

Ped.

f
with . . the plenteousness of Thy house, they shall be sat - is - fied tranquillo.

with the plenteousness of Thy house, and Thou shalt give them

Ch. Gamba.

drink of . . Thy . . . plea - sures, as out of the riv - er, Thou shalt give them drink of . . Thy plea - sures, as out of the riv - er.

 How ex - cel - lent, how ex - cel - lent is . . Thy mer - cy, O God.
 There - fore the chil - dren of men put their trust . . un - der the sha - dow of Thy wings.

f
there - fore the chil - dren of men put their trust, put their

Fl. 8 ft. R.H.
Sw. soft 8 ft.

trust, put their trust . . . un - der the sha - dow

a piacere.
Sw.

of . . . Thy wings. How ex - cel - lent

FULL. p
dim.
How ex - cel - lent, how ex - cel - lent is Thy mer - cy, O God,

p
Voices alone.

ad lib.
is . . . Thy mer - cy, O . . . God. . . .

rall. pp
1st & 2nd ALTO.

pp
is Thy mer - cy, O God. . . .

Thy

Sw. with 16 ft. & Ob.

Org. Ch. Dul. rall.
Sw.

Ped.

(Continued from page 624.)

periods a week is advised, each period not exceeding a quarter of an hour. In the second stage (ages eight to twelve) the best results will be obtained from three twenty-minute lessons a week, which will gradually include extemporising and practical harmony at the pianoforte, in addition to sight-singing and dictation. In the last stage (ages twelve and over) one lesson a week of thirty to forty minutes is considered sufficient for ear-training. This stage comprises the last three lessons of the scheme, the advanced character of which may be gathered from the fact that the work contained in them can rarely be mastered in less than two years by the average pupil. Candidates for examinations, including those for diplomas, will find this book helpful in preparing for the aural tests. G. G.

On Tuning the Organ. By A. Hemstock. Revised by the Rev. Noel Bonavia-Hunt.

[Musical Opinion. 2s.]

A. Hemstock's little work on organ-tuning was originally produced in 1876, and dedicated to the Royal College of Organists. It has now been revised and largely rewritten by Mr. Bonavia-Hunt. Much new matter has been added, including a fresh appendix which deals with elementary defects in the speech of organ-pipes and gives practical hints on their correction. G. G.

Précis de Musique Intégrale: La Mélodie. Tome i. By Maurice Touzé.

[Paris: H. Herelle.]

That melody in its evolution has closely followed scientific laws is the claim of M. Maurice Touzé. His book is a fascinating treatise, in many ways. The author begins with the primitive scale C F G C, which he rewrites so as to form two intervals of fifths: F to C and C to G. Then he takes into consideration melodies of five notes (giving as instances the 'Valhalla' theme in Rheingold and a Mongolian melody), and sets down the notes of the scale at intervals of fifths—A flat, E flat, B flat, F, C; other types he reduces similarly to scale (E flat, B flat, F, C, G; or again: B flat, F, C, G, D), and so on through augmented seconds and diminished thirds until we come to chromaticism 'intégral,' which runs by fifths from B double-flat to D sharp; then—B double-flat, F flat, C flat, G flat, D flat, A flat, E flat, B flat, F, C, G, D, A, E, B, F sharp, C sharp, G sharp, D sharp. It is an ingenious and an intriguing game. But M. Touzé does not claim to have reached the Ultima Thule, and he refutes very ably such contentions as those of the Russian writer Oboukoff who, intending to give a characteristic individuality to each half-tone, ignored the difference between C sharp and D flat. In conclusion the author asks how it is that melody, 'daughter of fancy,' has followed in the centuries so strict and scientific an evolution. He answers this with the assertion that our ideas, our very passions, depend on the laws of the universe.

We would humbly submit another solution. The 'spiral' development of the scale has provided only the materials of music. Melody may be the daughter of fancy just as is a great palace or a monument; but there is no real reason why we should credit fancy with the provision of the tools the composer uses any more than with the stone, bricks, and mortar of the builder. The musician must needs use the materials he finds at hand. The theory of music may be science; but creation is surely art. B. V.

The Evolution of Music. By Alfredo Casella.

[Chester, 7s. 6d.]

To trace 'the gradual formation and development, during the slow course of centuries, of the principal elements of our magnificent edifice of modern music' is a task that calls for a good deal more space than Mr. Casella has allowed himself. After setting forth his aim as quoted above, he goes on to admit the hopelessness of any one hand being able to do more than give a 'synthetic and, so to speak, cinematographic survey' of 'the majestic and incalculable profusion of a millennium of human effort,' and expresses the view that such a survey might best be managed by 'a judicious and chronological choice of certain short musical examples, rather than by so many pages of more or less theoretical text.' This is true, and he could hardly have done better than to compile his anthology from examples of a technical formula common to all ages and schools—the perfect cadence. Accordingly he has selected a hundred full closes from representative composers from the 13th century down to the present day, dividing them into three groups—the Diatonic Period (the Primitives, the Renaissance, the Classics, and the Romantics); the Transitory Period (Post-Wagnerians, Neo-classics, Precursors of the modern era, &c.); and the Present Period (Polymodality, Tonal Simultaneity, and Atonality). The result is certainly a most interesting collection of passages, some of considerable length, and many from unfamiliar sources. (Oddly enough, Handel is not represented; and—less oddly, perhaps—no English composer is considered worthy of quotation.) Each example is followed by a brief comment, generally enthusiastic, and sometimes explanatory or analytical. Occasionally the author seems to have been in a hurry, contenting himself (but not us) with merely observing, 'Same remarks as for preceding example,' or 'Same characteristics'—forgetting that the same remarks do not always apply. Thus, Ex. 4 is a cadence from Josquin des Prés which the author says is 'admirable in its polyphonic perfection,' adding that it gives us 'a glimpse, though only in passing, of an authentic chord of the dominant seventh.' The next example is from Francesco d'Ana, and we are told that the same remark applies. But the d'Ana passage is harmonic rather than polyphonic, and gives us no glimpse of the dominant seventh. We expect less casual methods in a text-book. Again, the choice of examples in one or two cases is hardly to the point. Casella quotes the beheading passage from Berlioz's 'March to the Scaffold' in the Fantastic Symphony. The reader will remember that as the scaffold is reached to resounding chords in G minor, and the victim puts his head on the block, the clarinet plays a strain in G major, the dramatic meaning of which is obvious. This is suddenly interrupted by a G minor chord, fff, tutti, followed by pizzicato notes on the lower strings (the dropping of the head) and a roll of three drums playing G, B natural, and D. Casella calls this 'very strange . . . curious musical consequences of a literary programme!' Maybe, but can the passage be described as a full close or cadence? Occasionally the author is prone to make things seem more elaborate than they really are. Thus he gives a long extract from Liszt's B minor Sonata and calls it 'the most evolved and developed cadence we have yet encountered,' on the ground that about twenty bars separate the six-four from the dominant seventh, 'a record beaten only by Wagner and Strauss.' But there are two six-four chords, and the second is followed a few beats later by a chord which may be regarded either as a dominant ninth or as an ornamented dominant seventh, a progression that is repeated three bars later. Then come some abrupt departures from, and a return to, the original key. The real break in the cadence is after the dominant seventh in the sixth bar of the example. But the counting of bars between a six-four and its dominant seventh seems pedantic to-day. And is it necessary to explain the example from Debussy's Soirée dans Grenade as 'having its dominant based upon a hexaphonic scale [the whole-tone scale] instead of an Asiatic one'? Some of the explanations of the polytonic and atonic examples strike us as being very far-fetched. Surely such progressions stand or fall by their effect, not by their showing some strained relationship to more customary harmonic methods. I cannot resist quoting Ex. 94 from Casella (Sonatina for pianoforte):

Ex. 1.

Here is the author-composer's comment on this:

'The fundamental dominant (C sharp) is resolved into the tonic (F sharp). In earlier days, the last bar but one might have stood thus:

but the date of 1916 could obviously not have tolerated anything so elementary.'

It should be added that Mr. Casella leads off with a very interesting discussion of 'The Nature and Origin of Modern Music.' The book is beautifully produced, with a large page that suits the lengthy musical examples. It is in three languages—Italian, French, and English. The English version, however, is not first-rate. Generally it is too literal—for example, giro and tour are invariably translated as 'turn.' Thus when Casella describes a passage as a giro armonico e melodico (tour harmonique et mélodique), he obviously means a brief excursion (as we should say, 'taking a turn up the road'), and to translate it as a 'harmonic and melodic turn' is misleading. Again, why should all' accordo di quarta e sesta = l'accord de quarte et sixte be 'chord of the fourth and sixth' instead of the usual English 'six-four'? And, in the same paragraph, to speak of the 6-4 chord assuming 'that grandiose and "wilful" aspect, carried to the highest degree by Wagner,' is not illuminating. Does 'wilful' meet the case for 'voluntario' and 'voluntaire'?

H. G.

Gramophone Notes

By 'Discus'

Faithful are the wounds of a friend! In the Observer of June 15 Mr. Scholes 'went for' the gramophone companies on a variety of grounds, and with justice. The record that appears to have roused him specially was the H.M.V. of Mark Hambourg playing the 'Wedding March' from A Midsummer Night's Dream. Certainly no words are likely to be too hard for so meretricious a display. The poor old March is so overloaded with showy decoration that at times it is almost lost to sight, and at one point, in order to make the gruel thick and slab, a bit of the Overture is stirred into the mixture. To waste time and material on such vulgarity as this when there are stacks of fine pianoforte works unrecorded is a bad backsliding on somebody's part. However, the companies have a way of annoying us with one hand and pleasing us with the other. We may forgive and forget this 'Wedding March' faux pas for the sake of the complete record of Tchaikovsky's fifth Symphony, conducted by Albert Coates (H.M.V. six 12-in. d.s.). In this the fine standard set up by the Company's previous recording of big orchestral works is well maintained. The gramophonist need ask for nothing better than the brilliant parts of the Valse and the wind-up of the Finale. The whole set is first-rate.

Equally good is the H.M.V. 12-in. d.s. of the Egmont Overture, played by the Albert Hall Orchestra, under Sir Landon Ronald. The best thing in the June Columbia list is Bach's B minor Suite for strings and flute, played by the Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Hamilton Harty (two 12-in. d.s.). Robert Murchie is the flautist. This wholly delightful music comes off well, partly because of its inherent clearness and directness, and also because the flute is one of the best of instruments for recording purposes. I wonder, though, whether the results would not have been even better had a string quartet been used in the solo passages. There is some cutting in the opening movement, but so far as I can make out without turning up the score, only some repetitions are sacrificed. Apropos of 'cuts,' there is a good deal of unreasonable heat shown by gramophonists. I agree that we should protest against hacking works so that their structure is damaged. But in almost all large classical works there is a lot of matter that is almost, if not quite, as unnecessary to the balance as the 'repeats' which the early instrumental composers indicated in a purely conventional way. Shakespeare is 'cut,' so is Wagner, and we even find modern editions of literary classics issued in shortened versions. All that we gramophone users can fairly demand is: (1) That 'cuts' shall be the exception; (2) that they shall be made with as much care as would be shown by (say) Sir Henry Wood in preparing for a concert; and (3) that the label and catalogue shall state whether the record is complete or not. I am rather amused to see that the H.M.V. June Bulletin, speaking of the records of the Tchaikovsky fifth Symphony, says: 'There are, of course, no cuts.' I like that complacent 'of course.' 'Cut works?' it seems to say. 'What recording company would ever dream of such a thing?'

One would have expected the Columbia Company to have recorded the Meistersinger Overture long ago, but they have only just done it. It is a poor effort after some of their recent achievements. The orchestra seems small, and the anonymous conductor was apparently overcome by the importance of the occasion. The record gives us little of the music's brilliance and sonority. The Meistersingers are small shopkeepers, and even the apprentices are steady-going, subdued young fellows. There is some neat playing and reproduction in the wood-wind section, but the quiet string passages are sometimes unclear, and the bass of the famous three-themes-combined passage is practically inaudible until it gets well up the scale.

Two delicate movements from Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme—the 'Minuet after Lully' and Intermezzo—played by the Hallé Orchestra, conducted by Hamilton Harty, come out clearly (Col., 12-in. d.s.).

The question of 'cut' notification arises in regard to the Vocalion 12 in. d.s. of the Life Guards Band playing Rimsky-Korsakov's Capriccio Espagnol. The Bulletin says the record contains 'the most salient points'—which implies pretty drastic work with the axe. But, even so, the hewer left a longish dull stretch, which rather discounts an otherwise brilliant bit of work. Particularly fine is the effect of the wood-wind.

In the way of string music there are records of Tertis (his own arrangements of the familiar Bizet Adagietto and Schumann's Slumber Song, Æ.-Voc. 10-in. d.s.); Suggia (Henschel's Gavotte, Au Temps Jadis, and Glazounov's Sérénade Espagnol, H.M.V. 10-in. d.s.); Cedric Sharpe (the Barcarolle from Tales of Hoffmann and Glazounov's Chant du Ménestrel, H.M.V. 10-in. d.s.); Isolde Menges (Faure's Berceuse and one of Sarasate's Spanish Dances, H.M.V. 12-in. d.s.); and Kreisler (a Paderewski Mélodie and Chopin's Mazurka, Op. 33, No. 2, H.M.V. 10-in. d.s.)—all excellent as to playing and reproduction, but in some cases a trifle thin in musical interest.

Chamber music is poorly represented this month by the Cherniavsky Trio, which plays a Scherzo from Beethoven's Op. 1, and then declines badly by giving us on the other side a poor piece called At the Brook (Col. 10-in. d.s.). It is a pity these players try to cater for two entirely different publics. A month or two ago they bracketed Boccherini's Minuet with the hopelessly feeble By the Waters of Minnetonka.

The Æ.-Voc. Bulletin announces a 12-in. d.s. of the Spencer Dyke String Quartet playing Nos. 1 and 3 of Frank Bridge's Novellets. I pass on the information, but can say no more as the record was inadvertently left out of the review parcel.

John Amadio's brilliant flute playing scores as usual in a 10-in. d.s. of Terschak's La Sirène and Doppler's Fantasie Pastorale Hongroise (Æ.-Voc.). A large number of vocal records must be dealt with briefly. Olga Haley sings with fine dash in Rossini's Tarantelle La Danza; if she strikes us as being somewhat dull in the companion piece, M. V. White's When the swallows homeward fly, the fault lies with the composer (Æ.-Voc. 10-in. d.s.). Tenor singing far above to-day's poor average is that of Armand Tokatyan in 'Salut, demeure,' from Gounod's Faust, and 'Ah fuyez, douce image,' from Manon (Æ.-Voc. 12-in. d.s.). Dora Labette's voice sounds curiously tentative in Cherry Ripe and The lass with the delicate air, and in the latter the rhythm goes all to pieces owing to constant tricks with the time; the showing-off high notes at the close and the long portamento, like the vagaries of pace, are surely out of keeping in these simple, tuneful old ditties. Why does Miss Labette sing 'There's the land of cherry isle' when Herrick wrote 'There's the land, or cherry isle'? (Col. 10-in. d.s.). Another example of poor treatment of such material is Edgar Coyle's singing of Early one morning and Sigh no more, ladies; he is stilted in rhythm, chiefly because of his over-syllabic treatment of the words. Both singer and songs are hindered rather than helped by a fussy accompaniment played by string quartet (Col. 10-in. d.s.). A good contralto record is of Muriel Brunskill singing Brahms's Mai-nacht, unfortunately bracketed with a poor song in Frances Allitsen's The Lord is my light (Col. 12-in. d.s.). (Why is the Brahms song given an orchestral accompaniment? There is a growing practice of re-arranging pianoforte accompaniments for strings or orchestra, presumably because the pianoforte so often comes out badly. But it needn't. The pianoforte part of the above-mentioned Rossini Tarantelle, played by Ivor Newton, is first-rate in brilliance and tone-quality.) Best of all are two H.M.V. 12-in. d.s. of Galli-Curci (the Polonaise from I Puritani and 'Tutte la feste' from Rigoletto) and Frieda Hempel (Schumann's Du meine seele and Mozart's Schlafe, mein Prinzchen). The Polonaise is as brilliant as anything even Galli-Curci has done. Apropos of Frieda Hempel I wish to correct a slip in my June notes. I described her singing of Tchaikovsky's None but the weary heart and the old song Phyllis has such charming graces as being 'not a very good effort.' How the slip happened I don't know, but I revoke heartily: the record is well above the average. But slips are not confined to reviewers. The label says that None but the weary heart has a flute obbligato played by Louis Fritzi. It hasn't; there is a violin obbligato, very effectively played, presumably by the Louis aforesaid.

---

With deep regret we hear that Mr. Cecil Sharp died on June 23. We are asked to state that in consequence the Annual Festival of the English Folk-Dance Society, arranged for June 30 to July 5, is cancelled.

The Eternal God

COMPOSED BY

JOHN E. WEST.

953. A charge to keep I have ... King	4d.	296. Behold, I bring you ... E. V. Hall	4d.	483. Christians, awake ... J. Barnby	4d.
884. A crown of grace for man Brahms	6d.	810. Behold, I come quickly ... Ivor Atkins	3d.	648. Ditto ... H. M. Higgs	6d.
478. A few more years shall roll H. Blair	4d.	713. Behold, I have given you ... C. Harris	4d.	983. Christmas Day ... G. Holgate	4d.
597. A prayer for peace ... Crotch	4d.	554. Behold, I send ... J. V. Roberts	6d.	445. Cleanse me, Lord ... G. F. Whist	4d.
807. A solemn prayer ... A. H. Brewer	3d.	587. Behold my servant ... J. F. Bridge	4d.	989. Come and let us ... A. Hollins	4d.
935. A song of joy ... John E. West	4d.	65. Behold now, praise ... J. B. Calkin	4d.	52. Come, and let us return ... J. Goss	4d.
917. Abide with me ... Ivor Atkins	4d.	631. Ditto ... F. Iliffe	4d.	95. Ditto ... W. Jackson	4d.
429. Ditto ... R. Dunstan	4d.	912. Ditto ... John E. West	4d.	1106. Come, come, help, O God ... W. Byrd	4d.
805. Adeste Fideles ... H. Hofmann	6d.	915. Behold, O God ... F. W. Hird	6d.	805. Come hither, ye faithful ... Hofmann	6d.
927. All go unto one place ... Wesley	4d.	524. Behold, the days come ... Woodward	6d.	283. Come, Holy Ghost ... G. Elvey	6d.
247. All nations whom ... B. Luard-Selby	6d.	524. Behold the Heaven ... A. R. Gaul	4d.	201. Ditto ... J. L. Hatton	6d.
113. All they that trust ... Hiller	4d.	652. Behold the Name ... Percy Pitt	4d.	829. Ditto ... Palestrina	6d.
1033. All Thy works ... T. Adams	4d.	501. Behold, two blind men ... J. Stainer	4d.	717. Ditto ... C. Lee Williams	3d.
475. Ditto ... J. Barnby	6d.	378. Bethlehem ... Ch. Gounod	4d.	881. Come, let us join our ... E. V. Hall	4d.
503. Ditto ... G. H. Ely	6d.	378. Bless the Lord ... M. Kingstons	6d.	293. Come, my soul ... G. C. Martin	4d.
719. Ditto ... E. H. Thorne	4d.	726. Bless the Lord, O my soul ... Hailing	4d.	314. Come now, and let us ... H. W. Wareing	6d.
30. All ye who seek ... H. M. Higgs	4d.	855. Bless the Lord thy God ... Roberts	4d.	7. Come unto Him ... Gounod	3d.
9. All ye who weep ... Gounod	4d.	450. Bless thou the Lord ... C. Bayley	6d.	946. Ditto ... H. Leslie	4d.
592. Alleluia! now is Christ ... T. Adams	4d.	374. Ditto ... Oliver King	4d.	256. Come unto Me ... H. R. Coudrey	4d.
724. Alleluia! the Lord liveth C. Harris	4d.	603. Blessed are the dead ... B. L. Selby	3d.	103. Ditto ... G. J. Elvey	4d.
548. Almighty Father ... B. Steane	4d.	667. Blessed are the pure ... A. D. Annot	4d.	922. Come with high and holy ... Blair	4d.
937. Almighty God, give us ... Wesley	8d.	390. Blessed are they ... A. W. Batson	4d.	1005. Come ye, and let us ... Macfarren	4d.
261. And all the people saw ... J. Stainer	4d.	616. Ditto ... H. Blair	4d.	748. Come, ye children and ... J. Booth	4d.
699. And God shall wipe ... Greenish	4d.	77. Ditto ... W. H. Monk	4d.	924. Ditto ... H. J. King	4d.
1055. And in that day ... F. R. Rickman	4d.	112. Ditto ... Arthur Page	4d.	334. Come, ye faithful ... E. V. Hall	4d.
229. And it was the third hour ... Elvey	6d.	15. Blessed be the God ... S. S. Wesley	3d.	921. Come, ye faithful, raise the strain ...	4d.
485. And Jacob was left alone ... J. Stainer	8d.	756. Blessed be the Lord ... J. Barnby	4d.	1019. Come, ye Saints ... H. E. Button	4d.
658. And Jesus entered ... H. W. Davies	6d.	570. Ditto ... J. F. Bridge	8d.	951. Come, ye sin-defiled ... J. Stainer	3d.
732. And suddenly there came ... H. J. Wood	4d.	895. Ditto ... O. Gibbons	4d.	931. Come, ye thankful ... B. Steane	4d.
1089. And the earth was reaped ... E. S. Craston	6d.	876. Ditto ... E. V. Hall	8d.	934. Comes at times ... Woodward	4d.
675. And the Lord said ... T. W. Stephenson	4d.	183. Ditto ... Heap	8d.	1008. Ditto ... H. Oakeley	3d.
357. And the wall of the city ... Oliver King	4d.	770. Ditto ... Markham Lee	6d.	994. Coronation Offertorium ... Elgar	4d.
778. And there shall be signs ... E. Naylor	4d.	331. Ditto ... C. Lee Williams	6d.	622. Create in me a clean heart P. J. Fry	4d.
402. And when the day ... C. W. Smith	4d.	1006. Blessed be the Name ... Macfarren	4d.	688. Crown Him the ... B. Luard-Selby	3d.
361. Angel Spirits ... P. Tchaikovsky	3d.	724. Blessed be Thou ... E. C. Bairstow	6d.	356. Daughters of Jerusalem ... H. J. King	4d.
642. Angel voices, ever singing ... E. V. Hall	4d.	1120. Ditto ... Ed. Bunnett	4d.	449. Dawns the day ... R. H. Legge	4d.
611. Angels from the realms ... Cowen	4d.	838. Ditto ... J. Kent	6d.	213. Day of Anger (Requiem) ... Mozart	8d.
749. Ditto ... P. E. Fletcher	4d.	400. Blessed City ... A. C. Fisher	6d.	682. Day of wrath ... J. Stainer	4d.
751. Ditto ... E. V. Hall	4d.	284. Blessed is He ... F. E. Gladstone	3d.	252. Death and life ... Walter Parratt	4d.
1017. Arise, shine ... T. Adams	4d.	262. Ditto ... C. H. Lloyd	1s.	968. Death is swallowed up in ... Hollins	4d.
1093. Ditto ... H. A. Chambers	4d.	292. Ditto ... A. C. Mackenzie	6d.	849. Deliver us, O Lord ... Gibbons	4d.
1112. Ditto ... Ed. Bunnett	4d.	206. Blessed is the man ... Clarke-Whitfield	4d.	90. Distracted with care ... Haydn	6d.
923. Ditto ... G. F. Cobb	6d.	64. Ditto ... John Goss	6d.	887. Do not I lift heaven ... H. Blair	4d.
228. Art thou weary ... C. H. Lloyd	8d.	769. Ditto ... H. W. Wareing	4d.	737. Doth not wisdom cry ... D. S. Smith	4d.
948. As Christ was raised ... Wareing	4d.	1004. Blessed is the soul (s.b.) ... Macfarren	4d.	703. Drop down, ye heavens ... Stainer	6d.
311. As I live, saith the Lord ... E. T. Chipp	4d.	286. Blessed Jesu (Sabat Mater) ... Dvorak	4d.	277. Enter not into Judgment ... Clarke	6d.
333. As it began to dawn ... Ch. Vincent	4d.	943. Blessed Lord ... S. S. Wesley	3d.	362. Eternal source ... F. Brandeis	3d.
498. As Moses lifted up ... F. Gostelow	4d.	550. Ditto ... A. H. Brewer	4d.	1008. Evening and Morning ... Oakeley	3d.
643. As the earth bringeth ... A. H. Brewer	4d.	652. Blow up the trumpet ... F. Iliffe	4d.	854. Exalt ye the Lord ... H. Elliot Button	4d.
24. As the hart pants (s.s.r.b.) ... Gounod	4d.	97. Blow ye the trumpet ... Henry Leslie	4d.	764. Except the Lord build ... Edwards	4d.
147. Ascribe unto the Lord ... Travers	8d.	961. Born to-day ... J. P. Sweetinck	4d.	771. Ditto ... Eaton Paning	6d.
109. Ditto ... S. S. Wesley	4d.	118. Bow Thine ear ... W. Bird	4d.	628. Ditto ... H. Gadsby	6d.
399. At the Lamb's High ... E. V. Hall	4d.	939. Bread of Heaven ... E. German	4d.	470. Eye hath not seen (s.a.) ... Foster	4d.
456. At the Sepulchre ... H. W. Wareing	4d.	1082. Bread of the world ... H. A. Chambers	4d.	584. Ditto (s.a.t.s.) ... M. B. Foster	4d.
957. Author of Life Divine ... Button	3d.	1024. Break forth into joy ... W. G. Alcock	4d.	625. Far be sorrow ... E. V. Hall	4d.
1091. Ditto ... H. A. Chambers	4d.	774. Ditto ... H. E. Button	4d.	672. Far from the world ... H. W. Parker	4d.
660. Awake, awake ... John E. West	4d.	415. Ditto ... S. Coleridge-Taylor	4d.	329. Far from their home ... Woodward	4d.
700. Awake, awake, put on ... Greenish	6d.	798. Ditto ... H. A. Matthews	4d.	364. Father, hear the prayer ... F. Brandeis	3d.
36. Ditto ... J. Stainer	8d.	92. Ditto ... R. Prentice	8d.	763. Father, now Thy grace ... W. Coenen	4d.
759. Ditto ... Stephenson	4d.	491. Ditto ... B. Steane	4d.	46. Father of Heaven ... Walmisley	4d.
149. Ditto ... M. Wise	6d.	323. Brightest and best ... E. V. Hall	6d.	384. Father of Life ... S. J. Gilbert	4d.
955. Awake! O Zion ... C. Forrester	4d.	340. Bring unto the Lord ... Gladstone	4d.	768. Father of mercies ... E. V. Hall	4d.
199. Awake, thou that sleepest ... Stainer	8d.	98. Brother, thou art gone ... J. Goss	6d.	1065. Ditto ... S. P. Waddington	4d.
150. Awake up, my glory ... M. Wise	4d.	279. By Babylon's wave ... Gounod	3d.	671. Ditto ... John E. West	4d.
744. Be glad and rejoice ... M. B. Foster	4d.	197. By the rivers of Babylon ... L. Samson	6d.	1050. Fear not, O land ... E. Elgar	4d.
578. Ditto ... B. Steane	4d.	121. By the waters of Babylon ... Boyce	6d.	28. Ditto ... John Goss	4d.
212. Be glad, O ye righteous ... H. Smart	6d.	644. Ditto ... S. Coleridge-Taylor	4d.	916. Ditto ... W. Jordan	4d.
989. Be glad then, ye ... A. Hollins	4d.	511. Ditto ... H. Clarke	6d.	872. Fear Thou not, for I am ... J. Booth	2d.
143. Be merciful ... H. Purcell	8d.	853. Ditto ... H. M. Higgs	4d.	446. Flee from evil ... W. J. Clarke	4d.
257. Ditto ... E. A. Sydenham	4d.	1074. Ditto ... Palestrina	4d.	553. For a small moment ... J. Stainer	3d.
597. Be peace on earth ... Crotch	4d.	1076. Ditto ... H. Goetz	4d.	254. For ever blessed ... Mendelssohn	4d.
567. Be Thou exalted ... C. Bayley	4d.	742. By Thy glorious death ... A. Dvorak	6d.	198. For the mountains ... L. Samson	4d.
583. Be ye all of one mind ... A. E. Godfrey	4d.	116. Call to remembrance ... J. Battishill	8d.	901. For this mortal ... S. S. Wesley	4d.
471. Be ye therefore ... A. S. Baker	4d.	952. Ditto ... J. V. Roberts	4d.	728. Forsake me not ... J. Goss	6d.
440. Before the heavens ... H. W. Parker	4d.	680. Calm on the list'ning ear ... Parker	4d.	273. From the deep I called ... Spohr	8d.
651. Behold, all the earth ... G. F. Huntley	4d.	841. Cast me not away ... C. Lee Williams	3d.	227. Give ear, O Lord ... T. M. Pattison	3d.
598. Behold, God is great ... E. W. Naylor	4d.	975. Ditto ... S. S. Wesley	4d.	433. Give ear, O Shepherd ... A. Whiting	4d.
865. Behold, God is my John E. West	4d.	497. Christ both died ... E. W. Naylor	4d.	88. Give ear, O ye heavens ... Armes	4d.
636. Ditto ... F. C. Woods	4d.	454. Christ is risen ... G. B. J. Aitken	4d.	956. Ditto ... W. G. Alcock	4d.
1035. Behold, how good ... J. Battishill	4d.	368. Ditto ... J. M. Crament	4d.	604. Give thanks, O Israel ... Ouseley	6d.
349. Ditto (Male) ... Caldicott	3d.	666. Ditto ... W. Jordan	6d.	741. Give the King thy ... W. G. Alcock	8d.
349. Ditto (s.a.t.s.) ... Caldicott	3d.	533. Ditto ... J. V. Roberts	4d.	990. Ditto ... A. H. Brewer	4d.
219. Ditto ... Hamilton Clarke	4d.	814. Ditto ... E. A. Sydenham	4d.	309. Give the Lord ... C. H. Lloyd	1s.
89. Behold, I bring you ... J. Barnby	4d.	307. Christ our Passover ... E. V. Hall	4d.	381. Give unto the Lord ... H. W. Parker	4d.
348. Ditto ... J. Maude Crament	4d.	783. Christ the Lord is risen again ...	4d.	933. Glorious and powerful God Gibbons	4d.
1113. Ditto ... Ed. Bunnett	3d.	370. Christ the Lord is risen to-day ...	4d.	1039. Glorious in Heaven ... Vittoria	4d.

NOVELLO'S

OCTAVO EDITION OF ANTHEMS.

2.	Glory be to God ...	S. S. Wesley	3d.	366.	Ho! every one ...	J. M. Crament	6d.	780.	I will magnify Thee	E. M. Lee	4d.
779.	Glory to God in the	E. M. Lee	4d.	246.	Ditto ...	G. C. Martin	6d.	100.	Ditto ...	C. H. Lloyd	4d.
341.	God be merciful ...	A. H. Mann	6d.	330.	Holy Ghost, to earth ...	Dvorák	6d.	929.	Ditto ...	A. W. Marchant	4d.
49.	Ditto ...	S. S. Wesley	4d.	111.	Holy, holy, holy ...	Crotch	4d.	886.	Ditto ...	Palestrina	4d.
236.	God be merciful unto us	C. F. Lloyd	8d.	842.	Holy, Lord God ...	T. Bateson	6d.	1085.	Ditto ...	J. V. Roberts	4d.
105.	God came from Teman	Steggall	6d.	412.	Honour the Lord ...	J. Stainer	6d.	153.	Ditto ...	J. Shaw	4d.
967.	God is a Spirit ...	W. S. Bennett	2d.	129.	Hosanna (in C) ...	O. Gibbons	4d.	154.	I will mention ...	A. Sullivan	8d.
128.	God is gone up ...	Croft	6d.	1015.	Ditto (in E flat) ...	O. Gibbons	4d.	799.	I will not leave you	W. Byrd	4d.
892.	Ditto ...	O. Gibbons	4d.	43.	Ditto ...	G. A. Macfarren	4d.	375.	Ditto ...	B. Steane	3d.
864.	Ditto ...	Walter B. Gilbert	3d.	657.	Hosanna to the Lord	W. Jordan	4d.	519.	I will open rivers	E. Pettman	4d.
605.	God is my salvation	C. F. Bowes	4d.	646.	Ditto ...	Luard-Selby	4d.	371.	I will set His dominion	H. W. Parker	6d.
1062.	God is our hope ...	A. H. Brewer	4d.	1021.	Hosanna we sing	John E. West	4d.	100.	I will sing a new song ...	Armes	1s.
131.	Ditto ...	Greene	8d.	260.	How beautiful are the feet	Handel	4d.	608.	I will sing of the mercies	J. Booth	4d.
332.	God is our refuge ...	A. Foote	6d.	691.	How blest are they	Tschaikowsky	6d.	134.	I will sing of Thy power	Greene	6d.
101.	Ditto ...	H. Hiles	8d.	321.	How excellent is Thy ...	Coven	8d.	192.	I will sing unto the Lord	Wareing	4d.
75.	God said, Behold	G. Macfarren	8d.	615.	How great is the loving	West	4d.	1086.	Ditto ...	J. V. Roberts	8d.
969.	God so loved the world	H. Moore	4d.	373.	How long wilt Thou	Oliver King	3d.	6.	I will wash my hands	Hopkins	4d.
1012.	Ditto ...	E. G. Monk	6d.	867.	Ditto ...	Jeremiah Clarke	4d.	710.	If any man hath not	H. W. Davies	6d.
473.	Ditto ...	J. V. Roberts	4d.	647.	How lovely are ...	C. Salaman	4d.	819.	If Christ be not raised	Macpherson	6d.
342.	God, that madest earth	A. C. Eisher	3d.	104.	Ditto ...	Spohr	1s.	979.	If the Lord had not	E. C. Bairstow	4d.
1056.	God the All-fatherly	A. Hollins	4d.	988.	Ditto ...	J. Brahms	3d.	825.	If the Lord Himself	W. Child	8d.
344.	God, Who at sundry times	J. H. Mee	6d.	766.	I am Alpha ...	Ch. Gounod	4d.	758.	Ditto ...	Walmisley	8d.
715.	God's peace is peace eternal	Grieg	4d.	539.	Ditto ...	J. V. Roberts	4d.	53.	If we believe that Jesus died	Goss	2d.
1095.	Gracious Spirit, Holy H. Blair		4d.	623.	I am He that liveth	T. Adams	6d.	1117.	Ditto ...	Ed. Bunnett	6d.
1070.	Grant us Thy peace	G. Bullivant	4d.	664.	I am the Resurrection	Croft	4d.	1078.	Ditto ...	M. Vinden	4d.
550.	Grant, we beseech Thee	M. Elvey	3d.	662.	Ditto ...	R. Rogers	6d.	544.	If ye love Me ...	B. Steane	3d.
388.	Ditto ...	Roberts	4d.	263.	I am well pleased	J. Rheinberger	4d.	453.	Ditto ...	H. W. Wareing	4d.
517.	Great and marvellous	J. F. Bridge	6d.	120.	I behold, and lo ...	Blow	8d.	1118.	Ditto ...	Ed. Bunnett	4d.
187.	Ditto ...	Monk	4d.	280.	Ditto ...	Elvey	8d.	732.	Ditto ...	H. J. Wood	4d.
848.	Ditto ...	T. Tomkins	4d.	496.	I came not to call...	C. Vincent	4d.	789.	If ye then be risen	Ivor Atkins	6d.
223.	Great is Jehovah (Male)	Schubert	6d.	207.	I cried unto the Lord	Heap	6d.	469.	Ditto (s.a.)	M. B. Foster	4d.
987.	Ditto ...	Schubert	6d.	537.	I declare to you	Cruikshank	6d.	58.	In Christ dwelleth	Naylor	4d.
602.	Great is our Lord	M. B. Foster	6d.	168.	I desired wisdom	J. Stainer	8d.	61.	In divers tongues	John Goss	4d.
136.	Great is the Lord	Haves	6d.	230.	I did call upon the Lord	Pattison	6d.	913.	In every place incense	John E. West	4d.
708.	Ditto ...	A. W. Marchant	4d.	515.	I do not ask, O Lord	Roberts	4d.	619.	In heavenly love ...	H. Parker	4d.
237.	Ditto ...	F. Ouseley	8d.	147.	I have set God ...	Blake	8d.	655.	In my Father's house	Cament	4d.
481.	Ditto ...	B. Steane	4d.	130.	Ditto ...	Hamilton Clarke	6d.	777.	Ditto ...	H. Elliot Buton	4d.
513.	Ditto ...	E. A. Sydenham	4d.	122.	I have surely built	J. Goldwin	4d.	102.	In sweet consent	E. H. Thorne	4d.
220.	Grieve not the Holy Spirit	Stainer	4d.	219.	Ditto ...	T. T. Trimmell	6d.	802.	In that day (Christmas)	Bridge	4d.
609.	Guide me, O Thou	J. F. Blair	4d.	590.	I heard a great voice	G. F. Cobb	4d.	278.	Ditto ...	G. Elvey	6d.
427.	Hail! gladdening Light	J. T. Martin	6d.	596.	I heard a voice	John Goss	3d.	720.	In the beginning	C. Macpherson	6d.
545.	Ditto ...	J. T. Martin	6d.	107.	I laid me down to rest	W. Byrd	4d.	1114.	Ditto ...	Ed. Bunnett	4d.
326.	Hail, thou that art	A. Carnall	4d.	903.	I looked, and behold	H. Willan	4d.	582.	Ditto ...	F. Tozer	6d.
560.	Hail to the Christ	J. Barnby	4d.	1069.	I love to hear ...	M. B. Foster	4d.	890.	In the day shalt ...	H. W. Wareing	4d.
945.	Hail, true Body ...	H. Willan	3d.	1022.	I saw the Lord ...	C. Harris	4d.	338.	In the fear of the Lord	J. V. Roberts	4d.
499.	Hallelujah, Christ is risen	Stean	4d.	171.	I saw the Lord ...	J. Stainer	8d.	980.	In the hour of my ...	Davies	6d.
382.	Hallelujah! the Light	Oliver King	4d.	114.	I was glad ...	T. Attwood	6d.	659.	In the Lord ...	C. Macpherson	6d.
173.	Happy is the man	E. E. Prou	1s.	993.	Ditto ...	A. H. Brewer	4d.	282.	Ditto ...	R. Stewart	8d.
1077.	Hark! hark my soul	P. E. Fletcher	4d.	1123.	Ditto ...	Ed. Bunnett	4d.	385.	In Thee, O Lord...	S. C. Taylor	4d.
1697.	Hark, the glad sound	M. B. Foster	4d.	1080.	Ditto ...	H. R. Coudrey	4d.	35.	Ditto ...	B. Tours	4d.
909.	Ditto ...	A. B. Gaul	4d.	32.	Ditto ...	G. Elvey	4d.	148.	Ditto ...	J. Weldon	4d.
487.	Ditto ...	E. V. Hall	4d.	79.	Ditto ...	C. E. Horsley	8d.	725.	Is it not what harvest	T. Adams	4d.
345.	Hark, the herald angels	E. V. Hall	4d.	743.	Ditto ...	C. H. H. Parry	6d.	467.	Is it nothing (s.a.)	M. B. Foster	4d.
444.	Hark! what news	Oliver King	4d.	379.	Ditto ...	T. T. Trimmell	6d.	571.	Ditto (4 voices)	M. B. Foster	4d.
404.	Hark! Hymn ...	F. Tozer	3d.	205.	I was in the spirit	Blow	8d.	180.	It came even to pass	Ouseley	6d.
401.	Haste Thee, O God	John Shepherd	3d.	1034.	I will always give thanks	Clarke	4d.	231.	It is a good thing	J. Barnby	8d.
784.	Have mercy upon me	J. Barnby	3d.	874.	I will cause the shower	Naylor	4d.	215.	It shall come to pass	T. M. Pattison	6d.
535.	Ditto ...	J. Goss	6d.	73.	I will cry unto God	H. J. King	4d.	908.	Jesu, Lord of life and glory	Elgar	4d.
1013.	Ditto ...	E. Minshall	4d.	1065.	I will extol Thee ...	Steggall	4d.	397.	Jesu, lover of my soul (Male)	F. Iliffe	3d.
377.	Ditto ...	Kellow J. Pye	4d.	29.	Ditto ...	John E. West	4d.	907.	Jesu, meek and lowly	Elgar	4d.
401.	Ditto ...	J. Shaw	4d.	156.	I will give thanks	J. Barnby	6d.	1031.	Jesu, our Lord ...	Ch. Gounod	3d.
794.	He sendeth the springs	Wareing	6d.	568.	Ditto ...	E. J. Hopkins	8d.	654.	Jesu, Thou joy ...	E. H. Davies	4d.
701.	He shall swallow up	Greenish	4d.	915.	I will give unto him	H. Blair	3d.	844.	Jesu, Thou sweetness	H. J. King	4d.
707.	He that dwelleth ...	J. Booth	3d.	674.	I will give you rain	H. W. Wareing	6d.	904.	Jesu, word of God incarnate	Elgar	4d.
837.	He that shall endure	Mendelssohn	3d.	225.	I will go unto	Gauntlett	3d.	455.	Jesu Christ is risen	Oliver King	6d.
898.	He that spared not His	Gladstone	4d.	437.	I will go unto the altar	C. Harris	4d.	788.	Jesu Christ is risen to-day	Gaul	6d.
1102.	He wants not friends that hath	Thy love	...	1037.	I will greatly rejoice	Cruikshank	6d.	1104.	Ditto ...	C. V. Stanford	4d.
900.	He will swallow up death	Wesley	2d.	349.	I will lift up mine eyes	E. C. Bairstow	4d.	971.	Jesu lives! no longer now	Foster	4d.
389.	Hear me when I call (Male)	Distin	3d.	495.	Ditto ...	E. C. Bairstow	4d.	618.	Jesu of Nazareth	G. Byrd	6d.
339.	Hear my prayer	Mendelssohn	6d.	195.	I will lay me down	A. C. Edwards	4d.	548.	Joy in harvest	B. Steane	4d.
1001.	Ditto ...	H. Purcell	6d.	209.	Ditto ...	H. Gadsby	3d.	7.	Judge me, O God	Mendelssohn	4d.
146.	Ditto ...	C. Stroud	6d.	958.	I will lift up mine eyes	J. V. Roberts	4d.	677.	Just Judge of Heaven	Garrett	8d.
442.	Hear my words	L. H. H. Parry	1s.	739.	Ditto ...	D. S. Smith	4d.	614.	Justorum animæ	Byrd	4d.
310.	Hear, O God	A. Friedländer	4d.	126.	I will love Thee ...	J. Clark	6d.	179.	King all glorious	J. Barnby	8d.
138.	Hear, O heavens	P. Humphreys	4d.	1058.	Ditto ...	Oliver King	4d.	997.	Ditto (4 voices)	J. Barnby	6d.
94.	Hear, O Lord ...	John Goss	3d.	394.	Ditto ...	Kingston	6d.	581.	Kings shall be thy	G. C. Martin	3d.
139.	Ditto ...	C. King	3d.	760.	I will magnify Thee	W. H. Bell	6d.	894.	Kings shall see and arise	Bridge	8d.
162.	Ditto ...	F. Ouseley	4d.	1119.	Ditto ...	Ed. Bunnett	4d.	425.	Lead, kindly Light	R. Dunstan	4d.
831.	Hear, O My people	J. Holbrooke	6d.	78.	Ditto ...	J. B. Calkin	6d.	528.	Ditto ...	C. L. Naylor	6d.
203.	Hear, O Thou Shepherd	Clarke	6d.	27.	Ditto ...	John Goss	4d.	589.	Ditto ...	D. Pughe-Evans	4d.
526.	Ditto ...	T. A. Walmisley	6d.	633.	Ditto ...	F. Iliffe	4d.	1067.	Ditto ...	B. Smith	4d.
772.	Hear the voice and prayer	Tallis	3d.	405.	Ditto ...	Oliver King	6d.	37.	Ditto ...	J. Stainer	6d.
773.	Hearken unto Me	W. H. Bell	4d.
376.	Hide not Thy face	Kellow J. Pye	3d.

THE ETERNAL GOD IS THY REFUGE

ANTHEM FOR FESTIVAL OR GENERAL USE

COMPOSED BY

Deut. xxxiii. 27-29.

JOHN E. WEST.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED; NEW YORK: THE H. W. GRAY CO., SOLE AGENTS FOR THE U.S.A.

Andante maestoso. f SOLO (OR CHORUS).

Andante maestoso.  $\text{♩} = 72$ .

f Gt. Reed. Full Sw. (or Gt.) (Gt. Reed in.) f Gt.

Ped.

and un-der-neath are the ev - - - er - last - - ing

mf Sw.

CHORUS. SOPRANO.

ALTO.

TENOR.

BASS.

arms. . .

mf Gt. cres. f mf

The e - ter - nal God is thy re - fuge,

The e - ter - nal God is thy re - fuge,

The e - ter - nal God is thy re - fuge,

The e - ter - nal God is thy re - fuge,

The e - ter - nal God is thy re - fuge,

THE ETERNAL GOD IS THY REFUGE.

and un-der-neath are the ev - er - last - ing arms. . .
 and un-der-neath are the ev - er - last - ing arms. . .
 and un-der-neath are the ev - er - last - ing arms. . .
 and un-der-neath are the ev - er - last - ing arms. . .
 and un-der-neath are the ev - er - last - ing arms. . .

mf cres.
mf cres.
mf cres.
mf cres.
f Gt.

mf dim. men. mf dim. men. mf dim. men. mf dim. men. rall. Diaps. p Sw. with Ob. dim. poco a poco.

Allegro con spirito.

f.

Is - ra - el then shall dwell in safe - ty a - lone,

f.

Is - ra - el then shall dwell in safe - ty a - lone,

f.

Is - ra - el then shall dwell in safe - ty a - lone,

f.

Is - ra - el then shall dwell in safe - ty a - lone,

Allegro con spirito. ♩ = 126.

f. Gt.

Ped.

THE ETERNAL GOD IS THY REFUGE.

Is - ra - el then shall dwell in safe - ty a - lone: the foun - tain of Ja - cob, . . .

Is - ra - el then shall dwell in safe - ty a - lone: the foun - tain of

Is - ra - el then shall dwell in safe - ty a - lone: the

Is - ra - el then shall dwell in safe - ty a - lone: Sw. with 8 ft. Reeds.

mf Gt. mf.

Gt. to Ped. in.

cres. the foun - tain shall be up - on a land . . of corn . . .

cres. Ja - cob . . . shall be up - on a land of corn . . .

cres. foun - tain of Ja - cob shall be up - on a . . land of corn . . .

mf cres. the foun - tain of Ja - cob shall be up - on a land of mf Gt. cres.

Gt. to Ped.

and wine:

and wine:

and wine:

corn and wine:

f dim. mp Sw. with Oboe.

Gt. to Ped. in.

THE ETERNAL GOD IS THY REFUGE.

al - so his hea - vens shall al - so his hea - vens shall al - so his hea - vens shall drop down dew.
 al - so his hea - vens shall drop down dew.
Ch. 8 & 4 ft.
 drop down dew. Hap - py art thou, O Is - ra - el,
 drop down dew. Hap - py art thou, O Is - ra - el,
 Hap - py art thou, O Is - ra - el,
 Hap - py art thou, O Is - ra - el,
f Gl. (add Full Sw.)
cres. hap - py art thou, O Is - ra - el. Hal - le - lu - jah, cres. hap - py art thou, O Is - ra - el. Hal - le - lu - jah, cres. hap - py art thou, O Is - ra - el. Hal - le - cres. hap - py art thou, O Is - ra - el, Hal - le -
f

THE ETERNAL GOD IS THY REFUGE.

Hal - le - lu - jah, A - men, cres.

Hal - le - lu - jah, A - men, cres.

- lu - jah, Hal - le - lu - jah, A - men, cres.

- lu - jah, Hal - le - lu - jah, A - men, cres.

Full Sw. sf

sf A - men, ff A - men. f Is - ra - el then shall dwell in sf A - men, ff A - men. f Is - ra - el then shall dwell in sf A - men, ff A - men. f Is - ra - el then shall dwell in sf A - men, ff A - men. f Is - ra - el then shall dwell in ff Gr. dim. f

safe - ty a - lone, . . Is - ra - el then shall dwell in safe - ty a - lone : the mf safe - ty a - lone, . . Is - ra - el then shall dwell in safe - ty a - lone :

safe - ty a - lone, Is - ra - el then shall dwell in safe - ty a - lone :

safe - ty a - lone, Is - ra - el then shall dwell in safe - ty a - lone : Sw. with 8 ft. Reeds mf

THE ETERNAL GOD IS THY REFUGE.

foun-tain of Ja - cob, the foun-tain of Ja - cob shall be up-on a land of the foun-tain of Ja - - cob shall be up-on a land of the foun-tain of Ja - - cob shall be up-on a . . land of the foun-tain of Ja - - - cob shall be up-on a land of corn . . and wine :

corn and wine :

corn . . and wine : al - so his hea - vens shall drop down dew.

corn and wine : al - so his hea - vens shall drop down dew.

al - so his hea - vens shall drop down dew. Hap - py art thou, O al - so his hea - vens shall drop down dew. Hap - py art thou, O

Hap - py art thou, O

Hap - py art thou, O

Hap - py art thou, O

(add Full Sw.)

mf cres. mf cres. mf cres. mf cres. Gt. mf Gt. cres. Gt. to Ped. f mp f mp Ch. 8 & 4 ft. f mp Sw. with Oboe. Gt. to Ped. in. mp f mp f f f Gt.

THE ETERNAL GOD IS THY REFUGE.

Is - ra - el, hap - py art thou, O Is - ra - el.

Is - ra - el, hap - py art thou, O Is - ra - el.

Is - ra - el, hap - py art thou, O Is - ra - el.

Is - ra - el, hap - py art thou, O Is - ra - el.

Gt.

This system contains four vocal staves and a grand piano accompaniment. The vocal parts are in treble and bass clefs with a key signature of three sharps (F#, C#, G#). The piano part is in bass clef with the same key signature. The lyrics 'Is - ra - el, hap - py art thou, O Is - ra - el.' are repeated under each vocal staff. The piano part features a melodic line in the right hand and a harmonic accompaniment in the left hand, with a 'Gt.' (Guitar) marking above the first measure.

Hal - le - lu - jah, Hal - le - lu - jah, A - -

Hal - le - lu - jah, Hal - le - lu - jah, A - -

Hal - le - lu - jah, Hal - le - lu - jah,

Hal - le - lu - jah, Hal - le - lu - jah,

cres.

This system continues the musical score with four vocal staves and a grand piano accompaniment. The vocal parts are in treble and bass clefs with a key signature of two flats (Bb, Eb). The piano part is in bass clef with the same key signature. The lyrics 'Hal - le - lu - jah, Hal - le - lu - jah, A - -' are repeated under each vocal staff. The piano part features a melodic line in the right hand and a harmonic accompaniment in the left hand, with a 'cres.' (crescendo) marking above the first measure.

THE ETERNAL GOD IS THY REFUGE.

men, Hal - le -

men, Hal - le -

cres. A - - - - - men,

cres. A - - - - - men,

add to Gt.

lu - jah, Hal - le - lu - jah. lunga

lu - jah, Hal - le - lu - jah. lunga

Hal - le - lu - jah, Hal - le - lu - jah. lunga

Hal - le - lu - jah, Hal - le - lu - jah. lunga

cres.

THE ETERNAL GOD IS THY REFUGE.

Lento maestoso. ff

The e - ter - nal God is thy re - fuge, and un - der -

The e - ter - nal God is thy re - fuge, and un - der -

ff

The e - ter - nal God is thy re - fuge, and un - der -

ff

The e - ter - nal God is thy re - fuge, and un - der -

Lento maestoso. ♩=63.

ff Solo (or Gt.) Reed.

ff Gt.

f (without Reeds.)

cres. rall. ff

- neath are the ev - - er - last - - ing arms. . .

cres. rall. ff

- neath art the ev - - er - last - - ing arms. . .

cres. rall. ff

- neath art the ev - - er - last - - ing arms. . .

cres. rall. ff

- neath art the ev - - er - last - - ing arms. . .

cres. rall. ff

- neath art the ev - - er - last - - ing arms. . .

NOVELLO'S

OCTAVO EDITION OF ANTHEMS.

74.	O praise the Lord	J. Barnby	6d.	381.	Praise the Lord, O my soul	Elliott	4d.	542.	Sing to the Lord with	J. Barnby	6d.
178.	Ditto	John Goss	8d.	63.	Ditto	Garrett	8d.	525.	Sing unto God (Chos. only)	Purcell	3d.
613.	Ditto	... Handel	4d.	21.	Ditto	John Goss	4d.	1073.	Ditto	C. Macpherson	4d.
71.	Ditto	... Ouseley	4d.	208.	Ditto	Mozart	6d.	580.	Sing unto the Lord	J. F. Bridge	8d.
232.	Ditto	T. M. Pattison	4d.	959.	Ditto	John Pulein	4d.	603.	Ditto	C. Harris	4d.
358.	Ditto	W. G. Wood	6d.	513.	Ditto	H. Purcell	8d.	812.	Ditto	Sydenham	4d.
266.	Ditto	...Zingarelli	1s.	940.	Ditto	J. V. Roberts	4d.	856.	Sing we merrily ...	Adrian Batten	3d.
824.	O pray for the peace	... W. Child	4d.	439.	Ditto	T. P. Royle	4d.	944.	Ditto	... J. Blow	4d.
1081.	Ditto	R. Hunt	4d.	59.	Ditto	S. S. Wesley	8d.	532.	Ditto	F. A. W. Docker	6d.
166.	Ditto	E. H. Thorne	6d.	986.	Ditto	John E. West	4d.	410.	Ditto	... E. V. Hall	6d.
837.	O rest in the Lord	Mendelssohn	3d.	624.	Praise the Lord, ye	B. Steane	4d.	932.	Ditto	... O. King	4d.
492.	O Saving Victim	Cruikshank	4d.	1016.	Ditto	John E. West	8d.	991.	Sing ye to the Lord E. C. Bairstow	4d.
51.	Ditto	(No. 2) Gounod	6d.	827.	Praise to God, immortal	West	4d.	761.	Ditto	C. H. Lloyd	4d.
486.	Ditto	... Rossini	4d.	745.	Praised be the Lord	C. H. Lloyd	4d.	68.	Stand up and bless the Lord Goss	6d.
970.	O Saviour of the	H. Moore	4d.	797.	Ditto	C. Steggall	4d.	697.	Suffer the little	... B. Harwood	4d.
508.	Ditto	(Male) Roberts	3d.	416.	Prepare ye the way	J. M. Crament	6d.	792.	Sun of my soul	G. W. Chadwick	3d.
551.	O sing unto the Lord	Cruikshank	6d.	45.	Ditto	... Garrett	4d.	426.	Ditto	... R. Dunstan	4d.
142.	Ditto	H. Purcell	8d.	151.	Ditto	... M. Wise	4d.	1042.	Ditto	... J. H. Adams	4d.
1011.	Ditto	J. V. Roberts	4d.	846.	Put me not to rebuke	... W. Croft	6d.	905.	Take My yoke upon you	T. Adams	3d.
1009.	O Strength and Stay	... Barnby	4d.	60.	Rejoice greatly	Henry Gadsby	4d.	540.	Teach me, O Lord	G. J. Elvey	4d.
8.	O taste and see	... John Goss	4d.	984.	Ditto	C. H. Lloyd	4d.	297.	Ditto	J. W. Gritton	4d.
263.	Ditto	... A. H. Mann	4d.	317.	Rejoice in the Lord	Philip Armes	8d.	850.	Teach me Thy way	William Fox	3d.
87.	O that I knew where I	... Bennett	4d.	992.	Ditto	J. F. Bridge	6d.	852.	Ditto	E. Hooper	3d.
998.	O that men would	Hugh Blair	4d.	721.	Ditto	A. Hollins	4d.	669.	Ditto	... Spohr	2d.
772.	Ditto	J. B. McEwen	4d.	200.	Ditto	G. C. Martin	8d.	808.	Ten thousand times	E. V. Hall	4d.
896.	Ditto	W. Wolstenholme	4d.	145.	Ditto	H. Purcell	4d.	620.	Ditto	F. Tozer	6d.
1048.	O Thou that hearest R. W. Robson	4d.	258.	Ditto	J. Redford	4d.	458.	Thanks be to God	J. W. Gritton	4d.
806.	O Thou the Central Orb	Gibbons	4d.	164.	Ditto	F. R. Statham	6d.	627.	Ditto	Oliver King	4d.
663.	O Voice of the Beloved H. J. King	4d.	272.	Rejoice, O ye	... Rheinberger	4d.	684.	The Angel said (s.&b.) A. H. Brown	3d.
123.	O where shall wisdom	Boyce	8d.	38.	Remember now thy	... Steggall	6d.	723.	The arm of the Lord	... Haydn	6d.
1083.	O world in sorrow	A. Hollins	4d.	523.	Remember, O Lord	Walmisley	6d.	472.	The blessing of the Lord J. F. Bridge	3d.
435.	O worship the King	E. V. Hall	6d.	336.	Rend your heart	J. Clippingdale	4d.	194.	Ditto	A. C. Mackenzie	4d.
135.	O worship the Lord	... Hayes	8d.	626.	Ditto	A. E. Godfrey	4d.	421.	The day is past...	J. C. Marks	4d.
234.	O ye that love the Lord	Docker	6d.	753.	Rest, weary Earth A. M. Goodhart	4d.	461.	The Day of Resurrection E. V. Hall	4d.
158.	Ditto	...G. Elvey	6d.	879.	Righteous art Thou	John E. West	4d.	552.	The day Thou gavest	Woodward	4d.
325.	Ditto	...J. Naylor	4d.	1053.	Ring out, wild bells	... Fletcher	4d.	239.	The earth is the Lord's	Trinnell	6d.
196.	Ditto	H. W. Wareing	4d.	860.	Save, Lord, and hear us	John Blow	3d.	1100.	Ditto	Albert Lowe	4d.
1043.	Of the Father's love	... Bairstow	4d.	170.	Ditto	... Hayes	8d.	687.	Ditto	J. Hopkins	6d.
556.	Open to me the gates	...F. Adlam	6d.	822.	Save me, O God...	John Blow	4d.	996.	The Eternal God	John E. West	4d.
668.	Our Blest Redeemer	E. V. Hall	4d.	858.	Ditto	... William Boyce	3d.	482.	The eyes of all	... T. Adams	4d.
863.	Our conversation is in	Gilbert	3d.	287.	Ditto	... J. L. Hopkins	3d.	547.	Ditto	... G. J. Elvey	4d.
392.	Our Father, which art	J. Barnby	3d.	1060.	Save them, O Lord	F. Tozer	3d.	573.	Ditto	... M. B. Foster	4d.
976.	Ditto (8 voices) C. Lee Williams	4d.	740.	Save us, O Lord...	E. C. Bairstow	4d.	289.	Ditto	Orlando Gibbons	6d.
303.	Our God is Lord	E. Mundella	4d.	451.	Saviour, abide with us	T. Hanforth	4d.	878.	The eyes of the Lord are	West	3d.
1090.	Our God shall come	M. B. Foster	4d.	800.	Saviour, again to Thy	Chadwick	4d.	689.	The face of death	W. Parratt	3d.
242.	Out of the deep	... J. B. Calkin	4d.	840.	Saviour, Thy children	... Sullivan	4d.	448.	The First Christmas	J. Barnby	4d.
1110.	Ditto	Ed. Bunnett	1s.	1092.	Saviour, Who didst make	F. Adlam	4d.	534.	The first day of the week	B. Steane	4d.
638.	Ditto	... H. W. Davies	6d.	85.	Say whereis He born	Mendelssohn	8d.	214.	The fool hath said	W. Bennett	6d.
240.	Ditto	F. E. Gladstone	4d.	319.	Seek ye the Lord	Hague Kinsey	4d.	271.	The fool within his	Rheinberger	4d.
692.	Ditto	... G. C. Martin	4d.	189.	Ditto	J. V. Roberts	4d.	413.	The fowl ring earth	J. L. Hopkins	4d.
176.	Ditto	... Naylor	6d.	973.	Send out Thy light	Ch. Gounod	3d.	746.	The glory of Lebanon	... Wareing	4d.
1088.	Peace I leave with you	J. V. Roberts	4d.	630.	Sing a song of praise	... O. King	4d.	593.	The glory of the God	T. Adams	4d.
1069.	Peace lives again	J. F. Bridge	4d.	185.	Ditto	...J. Stainer	4d.	177.	The glory of the Lord	... J. Goss	8d.
81.	Plead Thou my cause	... Mozart	8d.	250.	Sing aloud with gladness	S. Wesley	8d.	245.	The God of Jeshurun	... J. Goss	8d.
55.	Ponder my words	Henry Gadsby	4d.	716.	Sing and rejoice	B. Harwood	6d.	1116.	The Good Shepherd has	Bunnett	4d.
300.	Ditto	(Male) Sawyer	3d.	238.	Sing joyfully unto God	W. Byrd	6d.	754.	The hallowed day	B. Luard-Selby	4d.
159.	Praise God in His holiness	B. Tours	4d.	1108.	Ditto	(in E <sup>b</sup> ) W. Byrd	6d.	804.	TheHeavens declare	Macpherson	6d.
521.	Praise, my soul	... E. V. Hall	4d.	985.	Sing, Odaughter of Zion	W. G. Alcock	4d.	299.	The hills stand about	G. Gardner	6d.
641.	Praise, O praise our God	B. L. Selby	4d.	365.	Ditto	Rea	6d.	755.	The hymn of the angels	J. E. West	6d.
712.	Praise our God	... E. V. Hall	6d.	936.	Ditto	H. W. Wareing	4d.	733.	The King shall rejoice	E. V. Hall	6d.
172.	Praise the Lord	... J. Benedict	1s.	291.	Sing, O heavens	A. C. Mackenzie	8d.	734.	Ditto	C. Harris	6d.
561.	Ditto	... J. M. Crament	6d.	781.	Ditto	Bruce Steane	4d.	313.	Ditto	Stewart	8d.
70.	Ditto	... G. Elvey	6d.	1002.	Ditto	A. Sullivan	3d.	981.	Ditto	C. Lee Williams	3d.
298.	Praise the Lord, O Jerusalem	Bliss	4d.	369.	Ditto	T. T. Trinnell	6d.	906.	The Lord came from Sinai	West	4d.
125.	Ditto	J. Clark	4d.	562.	Ditto	H. D. Wetton	6d.	193.	The Lord gave	A. C. Mackenzie	3d.
316.	Ditto	E. V. Hall	6d.	169.	Sing praises to the Lord	Croft	6d.	270.	The Lord give ear	J. Rheinberger	4d.
137.	Ditto	Hayes	6d.	36.	Sing praises unto the Lord	Gounod	8d.	526.	The Lord hath (Male)	Mendelssohn	6d.
577.	Ditto	H. Maunder	4d.	99.	Sing to the Lord...	Mendelssohn	1s.	312.	The Lord hath been	E. T. Chipp	4d.
510.	Ditto	Purcell	6d.	167.	Ditto	... Henry Smart	1/6	477.	Ditto	S. S. Wesley	4d.
364.	Ditto	W. G. Wood	6d.	1103.	Ditto (1st mvmt. only)	Smart	4d.

THE 'WHY AND WHEREFORE' OF THE RULES OF HARMONY

BY R. T. NICHOLSON

Some explanation of the 'why and wherefore' of the harmonic rules is badly needed. There is altogether too much of the ipse dixit tone about the text-books. 'Because I say so' is no basis for legislation. The pupil resents the arbitrariness of the harmonic flats as much as the teacher regrets it. Both would like to know the reasons underlying the rules.

Efforts have from time to time been made to show that harmonic practice is founded on physical acoustic facts; but I do not propose to make any such effort here. In truth, such efforts carry little conviction, and do not pretend to explain a great deal. Moreover, the science of acoustics has little appeal to musicians, whose ears are deaf to its syren notes. While, in course of my remarks, I may have to make occasional reference to certain very simple acoustical principles, my appeal will be made mostly ad aurem, and will be based upon certain common-sense facts which can be readily appreciated.

THE PRACTICE OF THE GREAT MASTERS

Why, then, the rules of harmony? It is, of course, possible to account for them as generalisations based on the practice of the great masters; and that is the usual justification given for their existence. But when that justification has been admitted, the question still remains: Why did the great masters on the whole so regularly acknowledge the rules?

The reply may be made that the great masters 'knew their theory' as it had been developed in their day, and that they themselves had learnt it from the text-books of their times; but this reply tells us little, for we have still to account for the appearance of the rules in their text-books.

Moreover, the fact that the great masters 'knew their theory' will by no means account for their almost unflinching application of the rules. We are apt to get the impression from modern text-books that the great masters wrote with a clear-cut harmonic code consciously in mind—that they analysed each chord as they committed it to paper, worried over the avoidance of prohibited consecutives and false relations, and saw to it that every discord was duly resolved. Admittedly genius, every now and again, played havoc with the rules, but that, we are assured, was attributable rather to carelessness than to any sacrilegious desire to fly in the face of law and order.

Prout, in particular, gives us this 'infinite capacity for taking pains' idea of the procedure of musical genius. He surmises, for instance, that certain unusual treatment of the diatonic discords at odd times by the great masters was due to their looking at them 'according to their true derivation,' as opposed to the old-time conception of them implied in the text-books of the period. He tells us—as another instance—that Schubert evidently looked upon a certain note as being, not a pedal-note, but an essential part of a certain chord, because otherwise 'the B in the bass would have fallen, instead of rising.' And so on.

Now, it is inconceivable that the old masters were thus analytical, because, in the first place, they knew nothing of the modern theories of chord derivation. Few of them worked 'in the light of Day'—that modern writer who built a highly complex harmonic structure on the simple acoustical facts enunciated at the beginning of the 18th century by Rameau.

And, in the second place, even if the old masters had been able to anticipate the modern developments of harmonic theory, and had determined to live up to them, it is doubtful if any one of them would have got farther than his first incidental 'chord of the 13th.' The rest of his life would have been spent in analysing it! Clearly, the great masters had no time for such minute analysis. The claims of practical composition were too insistent to permit constant efforts in chord derivation, and regular reference to a set of rules—even if mental. It would be as sensible to regard Shakespeare as writing in the light of Lindley Murray.

The great masters wrote as they felt; and they wrote thus and so because they were saturated with the musical spirit of their times. Their acoustical principles (if any) were mostly subconscious. It is to my mind doubtful if any great musician ever consciously avoided breach of a rule as such.

Rightly regarded, the laws of harmony are but descriptive of the ways in which master minds expressed themselves. The science of harmony is purely analytical: it has little or nothing to do with composition synthesis.

We are thus once more brought back to our original problem—the question why musical procedure has been so nearly uniform.

THE REASON WHY

The explanation is, I think, a simple one—one, moreover, which will account for nearly all the rules in the text-books, past and present, and which will also account for their modification in successive stages of musical evolution.

In the first place, the explanation lies in the fact that music is, and always has been, written mainly for vocal reproduction—that the great masters thought in terms of, and in sympathy with, vocal reproduction, and that the notes they committed to paper were therefore those which they knew the human voice, aided by the human ear, could most readily reproduce, whether in melodic sequence or in harmonic combination.

It may, however, be objected that much music is not written for vocal reproduction—that there is such a thing as instrumental music, and that such music is also governed by the harmonic rules.

Agreed; and I believe that if all music had been written for instruments with fixed notes, our harmonic code would have been altogether different, inasmuch as all progressions whatsoever are possible for performers on such instruments. But however that may be, it is a fact that, historically, vocal music came first, and that long after instruments had been invented, composers concerned themselves chiefly with the voice parts. Further, use of musical instruments with variable notes (like most of the strings, and some of the wind instruments) is conditioned by exactly the same considerations as apply to vocal music. If, e.g., you ask a violinist to play a certain interval, you appeal to his ear in just the same way as you appeal to the ear of a vocalist when you ask him to sing it. Ease and difficulty of reproduction are the same in both cases. The reason why the rules of harmony are the same for both vocal and instrumental music, is that instrumental practice has necessarily had to follow the lead of vocal production.

There is a second consideration. The composer desires to please a prospective audience. Usually, this second consideration does not—or need not—conflict with the first, though it sometimes does, as we shall see later.

Let me now show how this two-fold, basal explanation applies to the more important rules governing composition. I do not claim that it will cover every rule, or all the minute exceptions to the rules, found in the text-books, but I do claim that, broadly applied, it will cover most of them.

THE INTERVALS OF MELODY

Granted recognition of a scale,* it is obviously easier for a singer to step than to leap from one note to another, for the simple reason that a scale is a series of intervals which—whatever the reason may be—‘come natural.’

If a leap has to be made, it is obviously easier for the voice to leap by a consonant interval than by a dissonant interval, for exactly the same reason that it is easier to sing a ‘smooth’ consonant note in harmony than a ‘rough’ dissonant note. Whatever account we may have to give of such ‘smoothness’ and ‘roughness,’ it is a fact that dissonances are relatively difficult—whether melodic or harmonic.

If a leap by a dissonant interval is called for, it is easier for the voice to leap by a diminished interval than by an augmented interval, because, with two exceptions, all augmented intervals take the singer out of the series of over-tones related to the tonic.†

FALSE RELATION

Prohibition of chromatic variation of the same note by two different voices in the same chord is obviously due chiefly to consideration for the comfort and convenience of the singers concerned. It is but a musical version of the cautionary moral, ‘Don’t contradict’; and such contradiction is particularly rough in harmony.

Prohibition of chromatic variation of the same note by different voices in two successive chords (or even in the first and last of the three successive chords) is obviously based on the same fact. A singer finds it difficult to ‘contradict’ a note at all recently sounded by another voice, for the memory of the first note remains to confuse him.

Moreover, chromatic contradiction means departure from the ruling scale—always attended with some difficulty for the vocalist.‡ In cases in which such chromatic variation is considered not to amount to false relation (e.g., when the 3rd of the first chord is the root or 5th of the second chord), it will be found that the progression made, while it implies use of a new scale, also implies use of one closely related to the first. For instance, change of scale from C major to A minor is implied in the first of the following examples, and change from C major to D minor is implied in the second; and the scales of both A minor and D minor are closely related to that of C major:

Ex. 1.

(Quoted from Prout.)

Chromatic variations of notes by different voices in successive chords are allowable when the chromatic note is part of a fundamental discord. This again is because such chromatic variation implies change only to a nearly related scale. Any chromatic note entering into the composition of such discords must belong either to a tonic, a superdominant, or a dominant harmony: e.g., the major 3rd of the chord of the supertonic in C suggests change of key from C to G, while the minor 9th of the dominant chord suggests change from C major to C minor; and the scales of G major and C minor are both closely related to that of C major:

Ex. 2.

THE TREATMENT OF DISSONANCE

Dissonance means roughness and instability: it is indeed these qualities which distinguish a discord from a concord; and while (as Helmholtz has shown) there is no hard and fast line to be drawn between dissonance and consonance, it remains a fact that the essence of dissonance is roughness and instability.

It is difficult—in varying degrees—for the singer to ‘hit’ a dissonant note by leap; and it is equally difficult for him to make a dissonance the ‘jumping-off point’ for any other scale-note by leap. To minimise difficulty of approach, we are told to prepare our discords: to facilitate departure, we resolve them.

PREPARATION

It was at one time laid down as a rule that every discord whatsoever must be prepared—i.e., sounded as a consonant note in a chord immediately preceding that of the dissonance. The preparation was meant to help the singer to get on to the unstable note with certainty, and he would be already on it if he sounded it in the previous chord. Such rigid preparation is no longer considered necessary in approaching fundamental discords, because we have accustomed ourselves to other methods of approaching them, but it is still regarded as essential in suspensions, and in approaching all ‘inessential’ discords.

But not all preparation is of the kind described—the carrying over of a note from a consonant to a dissonant chord. The nature of the preparation required depends partly upon the nature of the dissonance in question. If relatively stable, the dissonance may be approached in other ways.

* It would carry me too far from my present purpose to try to account for our scales. We must start with the assumption of their existence as a heritage from the Greeks.

† The two cases in which augmented intervals taken by leap are diatonic are the augmented 4th between subdominant and leading-note of major and minor scales, and the augmented 5th between mediant and leading-note of the minor scale. As regards the first of these, it may be said that the 4:3 subdominant is doubtfully a scale-note at all, the harmonic series calling for an 11:8 subdominant. As regards the second, it is generally realised that the leading-note of the harmonic minor scale is doubtfully diatonic. Use of a minor 7th in descending passages indicates this. Discussion of these abstruse points would, however, take us too far from the subject in hand.

‡ That ‘doctors disagree’ widely as to this matter of false relation is apparent from the fact that Macpherson (Practical Harmony, p. 40) gives the following as a ‘bad’ instance of false relation, though Macfarren (a veritable stickler) would have passed it on the ground that the 3rd of the first chord is the 5th of the second chord (a fundamental discord withal!).

SECOND INVERSIONS

All inversions—even of common chords—have the elements of dissonance, inasmuch as they are relatively unstable, as compared with root positions. Even first inversions have some element of instability; but second inversions have much more of it. They are pyramids on their points—‘all topsy-turvy.’ They distribute the notes out of their ‘natural’ order—the order in which they arise in the harmonic series, or in the scale.

It is therefore ordained that they must be approached in certain ways—in ways not involving a risky leap from one unstable chord to another. You cannot without risk leap from one flying trapeze to another: you must leap from a solid foundation, or you may not ‘get there.’ Hence the rule that the bass of a second inversion must not be approached by leap from an inversion of another chord. (Leap from an inversion of the same chord is easy enough for the singer, as he is then only ‘changing places.’) In any other case, he must step, or stay where he is till the rest of the second chord comes to him.

This is really a form of preparation—avoidance of the difficulty of ‘hitting’ a dissonant note.*

RESOLUTION

The resolution of a dissonance is the method of quitting a dissonant chord. A dissonance being essentially an unstable state of things, the method of resolution must be as easy as possible; and in practice it always is so. The dissonant note either remains stationary to form a component part of the next chord, or it steps up or down; and when it steps, it regularly steps to the nearest note of the next chord, as being the easiest to reach.

In the case of a second inversion, the unstable note is the bass, and it follows this rule: but the unstable note also follows it when it figures as the 7th of a diatonic discord, or any dissonant note of a fundamental discord, or in a suspension.

It should be specially noted that omission of one of a pair of dissonant notes from a chord in which both might be expected to be present, ipso facto frees the other from the necessity for fixed resolution. Thus, in a second inversion of a fundamental discord of the 7th, the 7th is dissonant with the root; but directly the root is omitted, the 7th is free to quit as it pleases. This simply means that in such circumstances the sense of instability being gone, the singer finds it perfectly easy to make his way to any note whatsoever of the following chord.

‘CONSECUTIVES’

We have now to deal with some cases in which the composer is concerned rather with the gratification of his prospective audience than with the comfort of his vocalists. Such cases are those of the prohibited consecutives.

Now, it is perfectly easy for vocalists to sing in the prohibited consecutive intervals. Their avoidance by the composer is therefore not an effort made to assist the vocalist. In actual fact, we know that singing in octaves is the ‘natural’ method of singing, and that untrained singers will readily learn to sing in consecutive 5ths—even 4ths.

But as a rule, an audience does not care for such singing.

* There is perhaps another reason why a second inversion is treated as a dissonance. The interval of the perfect 4th has always been more or less suspect as a consonance, and it is the characteristic interval of a second inversion, lying, as it does, above the bass. Hence the need of modified preparation of the bass.

It sounds incomplete and amateurish. Consecutive octaves are naturally prohibited in part-singing, because there is no part-singing in such progressions: they therefore disappoint expectation, and an audience wants its money’s-worth! Moreover, they are crude, because of the elementary relationship existing between a note and its octave—a relationship amounting almost to identity.

Consecutive 5ths are also crude, 5ths being closely related to the fundamental note of the harmonic series—next after the octave. Octave and 5th are the ‘raw materials’ of all chords. Their repeated use, therefore, is like a course of uncooked meat, or an association of primary colours. These ‘raw’ effects are characteristic of all primitive art, but they are too barbaric and barbarous for cultivated taste.

‘No part may move in 4ths with the bass.’ This rule stands, I think, partly because a 4th is an inverted 5th, and accordingly shares its crudeness, which becomes specially obvious when the 4th stands above the bass.*

There is another reason why both 5th and 4th have been barred in consecutive progressions. Mediaeval musicians worked them to death, using them—with the octave—to the exclusion of all other intervals. The monotony of such lack of harmonic variety doubtless suggested total abolition of such progressions as being amateurish, crude, and commonplace.

In the prohibition of consecutive 2nds, 7ths, and 9ths, we have other instances of a composer’s concern for the comfort and convenience of his vocalists, mingled with a desire to avoid torturing his audience.†

I have indicated that there are cases in which the two desiderata may clash, though, generally, that which satisfies the singer will also please an audience, and vice versa. There is, however, one historic case in which a great composer regularly sacrificed the comfort and convenience of his vocalists to the gratification of his audience. Bach hated resolving the 3rd of a fundamental discord upwards when such progression would leave an incomplete common chord to follow: he carried the 3rd (awkwardly enough for the vocalist concerned) down to the 5th of the concord, as in:

(Quoted from Prout.)

In conclusion, let me admit that I fully realise that I have not covered all the rules and all the exceptions by application of my two main principles. This failure has, however, been due partly to the fact that I do not own this journal, and—to be quite frank—also partly to the fact that I do not think that they account for all the rules. If, however, they account for four-fifths of them—as I think they do—perhaps I may be pardoned for my indiscretion!

* Let it again be remembered that the consonance of the 4th has always been suspected, and that consecutive dissonances are always questionable.

† When detected in a breach of the elementary rules, a pupil may excuse his aberration by urging that ‘it sounds all right.’ There is no harm in agreeing with him that it may ‘sound all right’ when the notes concerned are played on the same instrument: but if they were sung, or played on instruments of different timbres, the offending intervals would ring out their falsity.

Church and Organ Music

ROYAL COLLEGE OF ORGANISTS

DISTRIBUTION OF DIPLOMAS

Members and friends are cordially invited to attend the distribution of Diplomas to successful candidates at the Fellowship, the Associateship, and the Choir masters' examinations, by the President, Dr. Alan Gray, on Saturday, July 19, at 11 a.m. After the President's address, Dr. Harold E. Darke, organist of St. Michael's, Cornhill, will play upon the College organ the three Fellowship organ-work pieces selected for the January examination, 1925, viz.:

- Prelude and Fugue in C major (Prelude in  $\frac{3}{8}$  time)
Book 9 (Novello) J. S. Bach.
Fantasia only from Fantasia and Fugue C. H. H. Parry.
No. 22, Original Organ Compositions (Novello)
'Adagio espressivo' from Symphony in C,
No. 5, Stainer's arrangements (Novello) Schumann.

No tickets are required. The Annual General Meeting will also be held on the same date at the College, at 11.45 a.m.

The following were the successful candidates at the May Choir-Training Diploma Examination: S. H. Baker, Hove; H. H. Sykes, Huddersfield.

H. A. HARDING, Hon. Secretary.

NEWCASTLE BACH CHOIR

There is no more enterprising or intelligent body of singers in the country than the Newcastle Bach Choir; no work is too new, too old, or too difficult for them. They added to their already high repute on May 31 when Byrd's 'Great' Service was sung at Newcastle Cathedral before a crowded congregation. It was claimed that this was the first performance of the complete work for nearly three centuries, and the claim is well-founded, seeing that the very existence of the Service was unknown until its discovery at Durham Cathedral by Dr. Fellowes a few years ago. The programme contained an account of this discovery, and of the subsequent unearthing of the remaining parts at Peterhouse, the British Museum, and elsewhere. It was fitting that the revival of the work should thus have taken place within a few miles of the spot where it was probably last heard three centuries ago. All honour to Dr. Fellowes, and to the Newcastle singers, who, conducted by Dr. Whittaker, gave a fine performance of this glorious music. Mr. William Ellis added to the historic and musical interest by playing English organ music, old and new, by Orlando Gibbons, Blow, William H. Harris, and Parry.

SCOTSON-CLARK AT WESTMINSTER CATHEDRAL?

When the new organ was being installed at Westminster Cathedral there were those who looked askance at the instrument—not for itself, but for what it might portend. The Cathedral had come to be regarded as a centre of a cappella singing of the finest Church music; would not the introduction of a big organ, with its corollary of brilliant solo playing, clash with the austere beauty of the vocal music? We have heard this question asked, and our answer was that the addition of a worthy organ need mean no more than that two types of musical beauty were to be available where so far there had been but one; there is no finer contrast than that of organ music and unaccompanied singing. But we hear that a Scotson-Clark March was recently played at the Cathedral, so perhaps the head-shakers were right after all. We can only hope that the report is much exaggerated, and that it was not really a Scotson-Clark March but merely something that sounded like one. Perhaps some of our readers who attend the Cathedral will kindly set our mind at rest.

The City Temple Choral Society wound up its season's work on May 22 and 29 with Mendelssohn's Hymn of Praise and selections from Judas Maccabaeus, Samson, &c., Mr. Allan Brown conducting.

WIDOR RECITALS

We commented recently on the comparative neglect of Widor's Symphonies as a whole in this country, and added some particulars of a Widor Festival given at New York last winter, at which about half of the Symphony movements were played by Dupré and Lynnwood Farnam. We now hear that Mr. Edwin Stanley Seder, organist of First Congregational Church, Oak Park, Chicago, has given the whole of the ten Symphonies at a series of recitals at his Church between October and March last. The works had the advantage of performance on a fine four-manual Skinner by a concert-player of whom report speaks very highly. Is it too much to expect similar performances from one of our numerous brilliant players on this side? The Toccata in F has surely earned a rest in favour of some undoubtedly far finer movements from Symphonies Nos. 6-10.

During Mr. Royle Shore's recent visit to Portugal his services were requisitioned by the British Chaplains at Lisbon and Oporto for some demonstrations in Church music, to acquaint members of the British communities with current movements in England. Opportunities were also afforded him for giving native Church musicians some private demonstrations of the modern revival in Plainchant under the Solesmes Fathers—hardly understood in Portugal—and the art of training the singing voice of the boy, of which almost the entire country appeared to be ignorant. Mr. Shore was struck with the general lack of knowledge of English music of any kind in Portugal, as in Spain, notwithstanding England's age-long alliance with the former and her close Royal associations with the latter country. Through the introduction of his cousin, Dom Luiz de Freitas Branco, he had the privilege of meeting Dom José Vianna da Motta, the Director of the National Conservatoire of Music at Lisbon, now of some ninety years' standing, with a student roll of about eight hundred. He is Portugal's great pianist, and, as such, happily is not unknown in London. Mr. Shore discussed with him the situation and the best means of counteracting this unfortunate lack of knowledge, particularly of England's modern and younger composers. Dom Luiz, the vice-director of the Conservatoire, is the outstanding composer of the country, and a leading musical critic and author. He is, it is interesting to note, a direct descendant of Duarte Lopo, Portugal's great polyphonist of the 16th century. After his return to England, Mr. Shore proposes to make some urgent representations on the subject to the leaders in the world of English music.—(Communicated.)

The London Society of Organists visited St. Anne's, Soho, on May 31, when a Bach recital was given by Mr. Albert Orton (E flat Prelude and Fugue, the C minor Trio-Sonata, Prelude and Fugue in D, Concerto in C, and four Chorale Preludes). Members were entertained to tea by Mr. and Miss Orton, after which Mr. Orton gave a pianoforte recital in the Church, his programme ranging from Bach and Scarlatti to Debussy. The Rector addressed the gathering on 'St. Anne and its associations.'

Three special services were recently held at High Pavement Chapel, Nottingham, when addresses were given by the Rev. Simon Jones on 'Religion in the Greek Drama,' with musical illustrations by the choir, under the direction of Mr. C. E. Blyton Dobson. For Antigone Mendelssohn was drawn on, Gluck provided for Iphigenia in Aulis, and for Alkestis Rutland Boughton's music-drama of that name was used.

A new organ has been erected by Messrs. Harrison & Harrison at Holy Trinity Cathedral, Shanghai, as part of the Cathedral War Memorial. Mr. R. C. Young gave opening recitals, with excellent programmes (Franck's Choral No. 3, Bach's Fantasia and Fugue in G minor and Toccata and Fugue in D minor, and works by Darke, Karg-Elert, Harwood, Jongen, Hollins, d'Evry, Cyril Scott, &c.).

Under the auspices of the Berkshire Organists' Association a Bach recital was given by Mr. W. C. H. Pearse at Binfield Parish Church on June 4. Mr. A. S. Allnatt played violin solos. There was a collection for the Organists' Benevolent League.

Mr. J. G. Macdonald has resigned the post of choir-master and organist at St. George's Presbyterian Church, Brondesbury, after thirty-one years' tenure.

LONDON SOCIETY OF ORGANISTS

The annual dinner was held at the Café Monaco on June 14, when an enjoyable evening was spent by a large number of members, the president for 1924, Dr. J. E. Borland, in the chair. A splendid programme of music was provided by students of Trinity College of Music and Mr. T. C. Sterndale Bennett. Visitors from the North included Dr. Alfred Hollins (Edinburgh) and Mr. S. W. Pilling (Yorkshire).

ORGAN RECITALS

Mr. H. H. Wintersgill, Christ Church, Skipton—Fantasia on 'Come, Holy Ghost,' Bach; Pastorale and Finale, Franck; Prelude on 'The Lord is my Shepherd,' Charles Wood.

Mr. Philip Dove, Queens' College Chapel, Cambridge—Trio-Sonata in G, Bach; 'Grande Pièce Symphonique,' Franck; 'Epinikion,' Rootham; Passacaglia, Bach; Prière, Franck; Pastorale, Ducasse; Final in B flat, Franck.

Mr. D. Rayner-Smith, St. Clement Danes—Rhapsody No. 3, Howells; Lento (Symphony No. 4), Widor; Musette, Bossi; Adagio (Symphony No. 3), and Allegro con brio (Symphony No. 1), Vierne.

Dr. William Prendergast, Winchester Cathedral—Benedictus (Sonata Britannica), Stanford; Variations on 'O filii,' John E. West; 'Laus Deo,' Harvey Grace; Prelude to 'Jesus Christ is risen to-day,' Alan Gray.

Mr. J. T. Horne, St. Finn Barre's Cathedral, Cork—Prelude in A minor, Rheinberger; Introduction and Fugue, Reubke; Toccata-Prelude on 'Pange Lingua,' Bairdston; Carillon, Vierne; Fantasy-Prelude, Macpherson; Lament, Harvey Grace.

Mr. Allan Brown, City Temple—Finale (Sonata No. 20), Rheinberger; Fugue in C minor, Bach; Grail Scene ('Parsifal'), 'Question' and 'Answer,' Wolstenholme; Toccata-Prelude on 'Pange Lingua,' Bairdston.

Mr. Herbert Hodge, St. Stephen's Walbrook—Tragic Overture, Brahms; Air with Variations in D flat, Noble; Sonata in G minor, Tinel.

Miss Lilian Coombes, St. Lawrence Jewry—Rhapsody No. 1, Saint-Saëns; Choral Preludes, Vaughan Williams; Moderato Cantabile (Symphony No. 8), Widor.

Mr. Richard B. Hamilton, All Saints', Hoole—Fantasia-Sonata, Rheinberger; Fugue in G minor, Bach; 'The Curfew,' Horsman; 'Carillon,' Faulkes.

Dr. E. Bullock, Parish Church, Dawlish—Programme of Choral Preludes by Pachelbel, Bach, Karg-Elert, Stanford, Brahms, Farrar, Wood, Parry, and Darke.

Mr. Harry Wall, St. Matthew's, West Kensington—Finale (Sonata No. 18), Rheinberger; Menuet (Symphony No. 4), Vierne; Prelude and Fugue in B minor, Stanford; Meditation, Harvey Grace; Madrigal and Cortège, Vierne.

Miss Marjorie T. Renton, St. Lawrence Jewry—Toccata (Dorian), Bach; Variations on a Ground Bass, Handel; 'Chant de Mai,' Jongen; Prelude and Fugue in G minor, Dupré; Allegro Appassionata (Sonata No. 1), Harwood.

Mr. Philip Miles, St. John the Baptist Parish Church, Southend-on-Sea—Dithyramb, Harwood; Sonata No. 8, Rheinberger; Canon in B minor, Schumann.

Dr. M. P. Conway, St. John's, Glastonbury—Adagio (Sonata No. 5), Rheinberger; Trio-Sonata No. 3, Bach; Pastorale Pensive, Jacob; Scherzo in G minor, Bossi.

Mr. W. J. Lancaster, Bolton Parish Church—Allegro Agitato and Cantilène (Sonata No. 11), Rheinberger; Rhapsody No. 3, Howells; Overture to 'Otho,' Cantabile, Jongen.

Mr. John Lomas, St. John's, Territet—Sonata No. 20, Rheinberger; Allegro and Finale (Symphonie Pathétique), Tchaikovsky; Fugue in G, Krebs.

Mr. W. Hunt, St. George's, Belfast—Fantasia and Fugue in G minor, Bach; Variations on a Ground Bass, Farrar; Pastorale, Recit, e Corale, Karg-Elert.

Mr. W. Wallace Thompson, St. James's, Garlick Hill—Laus Deo, Harvey Grace; Voluntary in A minor, Boyce; Madrigal, Berceuse, and Carillon, Vierne.

Mr. A. M. Hawkins, St. Andrew-by-the-Wardrobe with St. Anne, Blackfriars—Alla marcia, John Ireland; Two Hymn-tune Preludes, Vaughan Williams; Two Trios, Rheinberger; Chorale Improvisation, Karg-Elert.

Mr. C. H. Trevor, St. John's, Mortimer, Berks—Prelude in B minor, Bach; Allegro moderato (Sonata No. 1), Bach; Prelude and Fugue in D, Bach; Festal Commemoration, West.

Miss Christina Chalmers, St. Mary-le-Bow, Cheapside—Prelude and Fugue in A minor, Bach; 'Sonata Britannica,' Stanford; Chorale No. 2, Franck; Berceuse and Postlude, Vierne.

Dr. G. J. Bennett, Andover Parish Church—Fantasia in F minor, Mozart; Prelude to 'Sigurd Jorsalfar,' Grieg; Fuga alla Giga, Bach; Berceuse and Pastorale, Vierne.

Mr. H. J. Timothy, St. Vedast Foster—Largo, Dvorák; Lied, Vierne; Imperial March, Elgar; Easter Melody, Variations on 'O filii et filiae,' West.

Mr. Wallace G. Breach, St. John's, Clapham Rise—Allegro pomposo, West; Sketch in F minor, Schumann; Scherzo, Lemare.

Mr. Paul Rochard, Kendal Parish Church—Prelude and Fugue in B minor, Bach; Variations, Andante cantabile, and Toccata (Symphony No. 5), Widor; Introduction and Fugue, Reubke; Variations, Bonnet.

M. Marcel Dupré, Lincoln Cathedral—Toccata, Adagio, and Fuga in C, Bach; Prelude on 'Christe, Redemptor omnium,' Parry; Final in B flat, Franck; Variations on an old French Carol, Dupré.

Mr. Wilfrid Greenhouse Allt, St. Giles' Cathedral, Edinburgh—'Pilgrim's Progress' (Parts 3, 4, and 5), Austin; 'Consolation,' Reger; Prelude and Angels' Farewell ('Gerontius'); and a Hollins programme.

Mr. Gilbert A. Sellick, St. Stephen's Walbrook—Fantasia and Fugue in D minor, Stanford; Prelude on 'La Demoiselle Elue,' Debussy; Andante in D, Hollins; Prelude, Fugue, and Variation, Franck; Sonata in F minor (first movement), Rheinberger.

APPOINTMENTS

Mr. Harold Burgess, choirmaster and organist, St. John's, West Streatham.

Mr. Cyril Fogwell, choirmaster and organist, Holy Trinity, Winchester.

Mr. Frederick Green, choirmaster and organist, Egremont Presbyterian Church of England.

Mr. E. A. Moore, choirmaster and organist, St. Luke's, Manningham, Yorks.

Mr. John Nicholson, choirmaster and organist, St. George's Congregational Church, West Hartlepool.

Mr. J. S. Robson, choirmaster and organist, Grimsby Parish Church.

Mr. Herbert Strudwick, choirmaster and organist, St. Anselm's, Streatham.

Mr. Leslie Wilson, choirmaster and organist, St. George's Presbyterian Church, Brondesbury.

Letters to the Editor

MUSIC IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS

SIR,—It might appear almost ungrateful to Mr. Alban Claughton to criticise his diagnosis of the state of music in public schools, were it not that one is forced to take another view of the question—one with a more hopeful outlook.

Every one will concede the importance of his plea for producing a class of intelligent listeners, yet, surely, to suppress instrumental study to the extent he advocates must be to frustrate rather than to realise this aim. Granted that a certain standard of intelligent listening can be attained among boys who are not actively musical, how much more intelligent must be the appreciation of those who have already formed a more intimate acquaintance with the art by having learned to express themselves in it, though it be in quite a small way! It is in the matter of quality and not of quantity that the value of musical culture counts, and a boy who can do only a little, and yet that little with full musical and artistic realisation, has done an honourable thing; he can build further on it, and is 'one up' on the boy whose musical culture has stopped at listening. This quality is in the hands of the teachers to mould and develop. Teaching, to be worthy the name, must be a creative art from beginning to end. Regarded thus, teaching music is certainly not a matter of 'free-wheeling down a well-worn traditional track.' Real teaching in itself rules out of the question any fear of the 'exploitation of the active to the exclusion of the receptive,' for, provided that teachers can do as well as teach, it is in their power to develop the receptive as a stimulus to the active. Each, in fact, acts and reacts on the other to a degree that no amount of passive listening, per se, can ever aspire to. Boys who, e.g., are encouraged to join in chamber music among themselves, appreciate, beyond any comparison with passive listeners, the school chamber concerts, and with more understanding.

Of course every music-master has at some time or another encountered the four types of boy instanced by Mr. Claughton. Let us at once admit that there are a certain number who have absolutely no aptitude for music, and who, in nine cases out of ten, don't care for it. With these there is little to do; but to take as final the states of Mr. Claughton's four examples would be a depressing outlook. Yet can one hope to form a finished artist at school? Very rarely, if at all; nor should it be expected. But provided No. 2—the unpromising performer—is keen, a discerning and expert teacher could probably find the reason for his lack of improvement as a performer, and if so, possibly make something of him. But why, one may ask, should No. 3 with his skill in reading and his accuracy, perforce have a leaning to low-class music? There is, too, more to hope for in No. 4—'the earnest plodder'—than Mr. Claughton sees fit to give him credit for; it in no wise follows that the music he plods at should be below the level of his receptive faculties. It is this type that often blossoms forth when least expected. Intellectuals, in the making especially, are not all constituted alike; the very earnestness of such a type may be the spur to his intelligent focussing, bit by bit, of technical and musical principles to his ultimate self-expression. There is no 'forced labour' about it, nor need any of Mr. Claughton's four types be summarily dismissed as 'just worth while on account of the good he may get out of it,' although by my use of the term 'self-expression' it may be inferred that this is the sort of good I may have in view for a boy. Not at all. A boy at school finds wider scope than this for his work in serving the good of the community, and at house gatherings, in house singing, and accompanying, he can make himself useful. Not only does his responsibility as a leader have fresh demands made upon it; his musicianship also is tested. But his teacher must be his trainer, nothing less, and often in the matter of morale as well as musically; and it rests with his teacher whether he be trained as a musician or allowed to run to seed as a 'pianoforte typist.' As to a boy being turned down as having 'missed his vocation' as a musician, nothing is easier to say, nothing can be more triumphantly discouraging! Many Continental teachers in particular have a way of threatening a pupil with no lessons unless he have talent. How can one tell whether a pupil has talent unless he is first given the fair chance of really sound musical instruction coupled with a certain amount of sympathetic insight? One is reminded of a teacher despairing over a new pupil because he knows nothing. Of course not; he comes to be taught something. A teacher cannot expect a boy to understand him at his own level; he has to gauge the boy's potentialities, making his own ideas sufficiently lucid and simple to be grasped; not talking above the boy's head, or he will never prove receptive.

Now, surely, no 'live' teacher would dream of making a 'wonderful occult mystery' of the elements of music. I can conceive no object in this, nor do I agree with Mr. Claughton that elements, position of notes, scales, time-signatures, rhythm, &c., are any more easily learned away from the pianoforte than at it—by boys at any rate. They are part and parcel of a pupil's equipment, to be made use of—his tools in fact; and when a boy is shown how they serve him, he naturally wants to put them to practical use. Would any teacher of carpentry explain wood, hammer, plane, and saw, and expect a boy to remain content to look on and see someone else use them? No; he rightly wants to handle them himself. And Mr. Claughton fails to convince me that the mere knowing 'something about music' is more important to a boy than that 'he should play the game himself.' I know plenty of boys whose pleasure in the holidays is doubled by their being able to participate in chamber music-making with their family and friends, as well as in hearing concerts. Their taste as listeners, and their criticism, are more eclectic, and 'what there is to show' for their work at school is more real and far-reaching in its value than Mr. Claughton's somewhat sordid assessment as an 'important asset from the school-master's and parent's view.'

Naturally, it is a din indescribable (and inevitable) to hear a dozen or more pianofortes in full practice at once, with perhaps a violin and 'cello or two thrown in. For all that, the pianoforte need not, in a reasonably well-appointed music school, be in the pathetically unusable condition we are asked to believe that it generally is, nor is there any reason to assume that this din of simultaneous practice represents little else than 'eyewash.' Just as reasonably some amount of work may be in progress, and there are teachers who realise that one of the greatest needs of a pupil is to be taught how to practise. Supervised practices, too, are not unknown, but it depends on the system in vogue, and on the co-operation of the whole staff in carrying it out. It need not follow that this 'active side is being exploited to the exclusion, and, at any rate, to the paralysing of the more receptive side.' The two sides can and should co-exist and stimulate each other.

It may have been my fortunate lot to have served as assistant to an exceptionally inspiring and sane director of music, and in my experience of public school musical life I have not come across the dry-as-dust pedantry which Mr. Claughton laments. It exists, no doubt, and it certainly has existed in the past, but it is up to the teachers themselves to bring a vital meaning into the music studies, and to create a living interest among the boys, giving of their best in their demonstrations, not as of a pompous, exclusive, or awe-inspiring mystery, but an art directed to awaken a feeling for a sense of beauty natural to the boys, who in turn are within their right in wishing to express it in their own way. So once again it rests with the teacher to replenish the receptive and to train the active to expression. Give a boy, then, a lively conception of the principles which constitute the language of music, and the simplest air he may play with full realisation—technically, grammatically, and artistically—is something worth while, and on which he can build. But even the little he may do must be conscious effort of his own. The teacher must train the boy to think, and give him the principles on which he can think for himself, and then the hack term, 'learning music,' in the sense which Mr. Claughton rightly condemns, will give place to another synonymous with artistic musical training. If the former term were applied universally to public school music then Mr. Claughton would find no adverse criticism of his plea or outlook. But I am able to vouch for the achievement of the latter in more than one public school I could name. In one of these the gramophone library contains an excellent selection of records, carefully chosen by the director, not only from examples of the musical culture of our own times, but also from the principal works of the great masters. Boys are free to choose their records for house and private gramophones, and it is interesting to inquire whether this freedom tends towards the 'merely frivolous,' that of 'least resistance,' or to the 'yokel or street-boy taste.' Not in the least. For one reason, school-boy nature is not universally perverse; and the system of showing how the best is the more attractive, is another. With school chamber concerts in addition, organ recitals, lectures on music, musicians and their methods, I cannot see how reproach for neglect of the receptive side can be merited. That active work is stimulated by all this goes without saying, and the school is able to produce from among the boys the public performance at annual competitions of such standard works as the '48' of Bach, Sonatas of Beethoven, Études, &c., of Chopin, Rhapsodies, &c., of Brahms, Violin or 'Cello Sonatas of Mozart, Beethoven, Schumann, Grieg, &c., to say nothing of chamber music (including wind) and original instrumental and madrigal compositions. I contend that these boys must have developed a certain standard of musical intelligence, which embraces intelligent listening, and why they should be forcibly superannuated as listeners, and their creative music-thinking and music-making restricted on that account, I fail to see. The pessimistic tone of Mr. Claughton's one-sided view of the question, which I trust I have not misinterpreted, seems to call for some sort of protest, and a plea for a wider outlook.—Yours, &c., FRANCIS J. HILL.

Marlborough, Wilts.

SIR,—Will you allow me to express my hearty appreciation of Mr. Alban Claughton's article in your May issue. As one who has taught music for ten years in three important public schools, I hold that there is a crying need for more to be done in the way of cultivating musical appreciation, and thereby producing intelligent listeners. It must not be forgotten that the average boy who learns an instrument knows little or nothing of music beyond the pieces that he can play, or tries to play, and even the average boy is in a minority.

As Mr. Claughton says, for one boy who can perform, there are hundreds who can listen, and who would listen, if they knew something about it.

I sincerely hope that his article with its suggestions (particularly that of the employment of the gramophone for illustration purposes) will be widely read and pondered over by parents as well as music masters.—Yours, &c.,

Wellington College,
May, 1924.

L. H. OVENDEN.

THE DOH-MINOR

SIR,—Recently reading Parry's study of Bach, I was much struck with the original wording of the title-page of the '48,' which appears on page 145:

'Das wohl temperirte Clavier oder Praeludia und Fugen durch alle Töne und Semitonien sowohl tertiam majorem oder Ut Re Mi anlangend, als auch tertian minorem oder Re Mi Fa betreffend.' (The underlining is mine.)

Clearly Bach was no Doh-minorist. Incidentally, too he evidently believes in Moveable Doh. The fact that he uses Re Mi Fa instead of La Si Ut may be accounted for by the custom, in his day, of writing works in the minor mode with a flat less in the signature. For instance, a Prelude in C minor would have the signature of G minor—B flat and E flat.

Why this should not apply to sharp keys, I am ashamed to say that I cannot explain, but perhaps some reader can enlighten me.

I think it is a pity that the Lah- or Doh-minor question should be left unsettled. As in the case of pitch, there will always be found some who will grumble at 'low' pitch, but the French diapason normal is slowly becoming standardised and people are beginning to accept it, and to understand that it is more satisfactory to the majority of performers to have a standard pitch, in spite of the tears of the prima donna.

Speaking personally, I can see nothing more inconsistent or illogical in the Lah-minor method, than there is in the fact that in the Staff notation we use the signature of the relative major for the minor mode; and we expect our pupils to use their wits to discover the mode in Staff notation. Lah-minor teaches the relationship, and psychology teaches us the value of relationship and association.

Moreover, any Sol-faist will tell us that if we sing Lah Te Doh, Ray Me Fah, and Doh Ray Maw, on the same group of three notes, the Te Doh and Me Fah will be properly tempered and in correct tune, while the Ray Maw will be flat.

My experience is that—leaving aside musicians of professional attainment—the only people who understand tempering major thirds, minor sixths, and leading-notes (in fact, all and every interval of the scale) are those trained on the Sol-fa and Lah-minor methods applied to the Staff, because singers have to temper their intervals according to the laws of unequal temperament, whatever key they are in, and not merely to copy what keyed instruments, tuned to equal temperament, give them. One must learn to recognise the mental effect of scale-intervals. A great many musicians of professional attainment would reap considerable benefit if they would bend their minds to such simple first principles. 'Teach us delight in simple things,' writes Kipling in his Children's Song, which might well be taken to heart by children of older growth. We are never free from, or done with, first principles in any walk of life. Every choral and orchestral conductor will recognise the difficulty, even at the present time, of getting singers and string players to, e.g., sing and play major thirds, in tune and with correct 'chording,' because teaching methods have not been sound, and/or people think this kind of thing to be beneath their notice.

In teaching people to sing the minor scale I have found it satisfactory to teach Me Fah Se Lah for the upper tetrachord of the harmonic minor, because they get the Fah sufficiently flat and the Se sufficiently sharp to accentuate the augmented interval. Similarly, in the melodic minor, Me Bay Se Lah, has some subtle difference which stamps it as minor (Bay is surely sharper than Fe or Lah), although the notes on the keyboard are the same as Soh Lah Te Doh.

The Doh-minor is simply a survival of or an offshoot from the old fixed-Doh method, which was all right in the days of ecclesiastical modes, and is necessary for those who wish to use the modes nowadays; but now that we have equal temperament, and only major and minor modes, the fixed-Doh is as dead as the dodo.

The Doh-minor will die as natural a death, because it is illogical and artificial; and those of us who say so have Bach on our side—a man who could see centuries beyond the end of his nose.—Yours, &c.,

W. J. COMLEY.

Ware Road,
Hertford, Herts.
June, 1924.

SIR,—Your correspondent in the June issue seems to think that the subject of the signature in Staff Notation has been shirked. As a fact I had touched upon it in my first letter, but, for fear of being too lengthy, had at the last moment eliminated the paragraph.

The existing method of borrowing the signature from the so-called 'relative' major is obviously unsatisfactory, for it represents neither the harmonic nor the melodic forms correctly. I cannot do better than quote the following passage from Part 3 of Aural Culture based upon Musical Appreciation, by Messrs. Macpherson and Read:

'The evolution of the key-signature of the minor scale has not kept pace with the evolution of the scale itself from the mediæval modal system. As a consequence, it is to this day the custom to make use of the signature of the so-called "relative" major key, an accidental being inserted for the leading-note of the minor key whenever that note occurs in the course of the music. This curious anomaly is responsible for not a little of the notorious confusion in pupils' minds between the two tonalities, and moreover constitutes a real stumbling-block in the path of clear "key-thinking" to many whose sense of key is as yet not fully developed.'

I can only add that the evils stated to accrue from such a method in the Staff Notation must necessarily exist in the Lah-minor method of Sol-fa.

In answer to the question as to how the pupil is taught to find the place of Doh on the Staff, I mention my own plan: (1) By looking for the accidentals, especially at the beginning and end of the tune, in order to find te; (2) in pianoforte music, by looking at the last note in the bass to find Doh; (3) by the training of his aural perception (this last but not least).—Yours, &c.,

339, Romford Road,
Forest Gate, E.7.
June, 1924.

LOUISE DUGDALE.

THE ACT OF TOUCH

SIR,—Dr. Percy Rideout asserts that my Act of Touch is criticisable, and then proceeds to fill a page of your valuable space with quibbles to prove that in two instances my terminology is wrong. The Act of Touch was published just on a quarter of a century ago. It may be a satisfaction to Dr. Rideout to know that I myself have adversely criticised its terminology ever since, but the facts have remained unshaken—"the laws of nature never apologise"! Dr. Rideout contends that I have no business to speak of the finger, hand, and arm as 'levers,' and this on the ground that their fulcrums 'are movable.' He cites as an instance of the true lever the bar of a pair of scales. Does Dr. Rideout seriously contend that if I use a pair of scales on board a moving train the lever is therefore no longer a true lever, as its fulcrum is moving, say, at sixty miles per hour, and that the scales are no longer scales, but should be called, say, a mangle or garden-roller? My motor-car has lots of levers, but when I start the engine the fulcrums are all on the move, and therefore the levers cease to be levers, and the car then should be called, say, a boat. The sheer muddle he makes of the rotational element is a natural consequence of such perverseness of outlook and obvious ignorance of the requirements of pianoforte technique.

Seriously, however, I must protest that I have nowhere in my writings ever made the idiotic statement that the fulcrum of the finger is 'at its tip,' nor have I ever said that the knuckle of the hand or the wrist-joint should 'move upwards' during or 'after' the 'Act of Touch.' Such mis-statements show the true character and spirit of Dr. Rideout's attack, and I leave it to your readers to apply the correct terminology.—Yours, &c.,

Haslemere.

TOBIAS MATTHAY.

June, 1924.

[We sent a proof of the above to Dr. Percy Rideout, in order to expedite the discussion. His reply is given below.—EDITOR.]

SIR,—Clearly Mr. Matthay should read my letter again, and he will then see that I made none of the assertions he ascribes to me. The question I asked was, 'Where is the fulcrum of the leverage system employed in pianoforte touch according to his directions for performing the "act of leverage"?' No system of leverage can exist without a final stationary fulcrum, since no force can act against nothing. Mechanical force can be either applied pressure or released weight, and the question at issue is as much the nature of the force as the nature of the machine. If it is applied pressure, then the machine employed is a lever; if it is released weight the mechanism responds to the attraction of gravity. In each case the work done may be identical, and widely varied in degree, but the mechanisms are essentially distinct. Leverage by applied pressure is only a modification of the hammer-stroke. Many acts of leverage are carried out by released weight, such as when a boat rocks if the occupants move. As Mr. Matthay particularly discriminates between arm weight and the actions of the finger and hand, it is clear that the latter are not due to released weight. They must consequently be due to applied pressure—that is, a modification of the hammer-stroke, which, however, he excludes. What, therefore, is the nature of the force he applies to the key? And if it is inconsistent to apply hammer-stroke to impel the pianoforte hammer, why is it consistent to apply a hypothetical system of levers, without any final stationary fulcrum, to a key-lever which already exists in the instrument?

I trust when Mr. Matthay starts his motor-car engine the fulcrums are not all on the move, as it would indicate that he had the clutch and gears engaged, and his next journey would most probably be in a motor-hearse. When his car starts leverage certainly moves it, but the final fulcrum of the movement is the resistance of the stationary ground. Without such a fulcrum his rear wheels would merely revolve to the detriment of his tyres.—Yours, &c.,

June, 1924.

PERCY RIDEOUT.

THE FINGERING OF SCALES ON THE PIANOFORTE

SIR,—I have been reading with interest the correspondence on the subject of scale-fingering, and perhaps a few notes on the system I have adopted may prove useful. It is taken from J. A. Johnstone's Scales, Chords, and Arpeggi, and published by Messrs. J. Williams.

(a.) The scale consists of eight sounds, but as the 8th is the 1st an octave higher, it will need the same finger again if playing more than one octave.

(b.) The little finger is used for the outer extremes of the scales.

(c.) This leaves seven different notes to be played with four different fingers, and the most orderly arrangement will be a 1 2 3 group, and a 1 2 3 4 group.

(d.) From this we see that the 4th finger is used only on one note. If then the position of the 4th finger be memorized the rest is easy.

Now we come to the actual grouping (major scales):

I.—Scale of C and up to four sharps (C G D A E):

R.H.—4th on note below key-note.

L.H.—4th on note above key-note.

II.—Scales with five black keys (B or C♯; F♯ or G♯; C♯ or D♯):

R.H.—4th on A♯ (or B♭).

L.H.—4th on F♯ (or G♭).

III.—Scales up to four flats (F, B♭, E♭, A♭):

R.H.—4th on B♭

L.H.—4th on 4th degree of scale.

(Exception: F, L.H. 4th on G.)

The Harmonic Minors are fingered in the same way, with the following exceptions:

R.H. of F♯ and C♯—4th on 2nd degree of scale.

L.H. of B♭ and E♭—4th on G♭

In the Melodic Minor the exceptions are:

F♯, C♯, R.H. 4th on { Ascending 6th degree.
Descending 2nd degree.

B♭ L.H. 4th on { Ascending G♯
Descending G♭

E♭ L.H. 4th on G♭

A♭ L.H. 4th on { Ascending D♭
Descending G♭

This system I have found particularly useful. The same author has also a system of fingering arpeggi, but as this does not enter into the discussion it need not be quoted here.—Yours, &c.,

J. C. BRYDSON.

Kegworth, nr. Derby.

June, 1924.

SIR,—The rules advanced by various correspondents for memorising the fingering of the major scales are interesting. I am in the habit (have been for years) of using the following, which seem simpler than any so far given:

Sharp scales—4th finger next to key-note; flat scales—R.H., 4th on B flat; L.H., 4th on new flat.

The exceptions to these rules are obvious and easy: B in left, F in right, and F sharp (both).

Like Mr. Swinburne, I am not sure that I evolved this myself, though I fancy I did. I think, however, that I have seen something like it in a pamphlet since I used it.—Yours, &c.,

C. STANLEY PARSONSON.

Launceston, Cornwall.

June, 1924.

A REPLY TO 'THE TRAVELLER'

SIR,—'The Traveller' is evidently labouring in ignorance. I do not blame him—perhaps it is not entirely his fault. I, too, was once such as he, and keenly interested in any bad music. Somehow, I changed. I do not know the exact reason; I am too happy in my present state to wish to inquire. I do know that I began to think about and to probe into my taste. I found that my interest in bad music was the result of bad environment. I was made to believe that jazz music was the only music worth hearing. That was at the age of twelve; I am now only sixteen.

The real turning-point was reached when I had a volume of all Beethoven's Sonatas given to me. I mustered up sufficient interest in them to begin their analysis, and found they contained high and noble thoughts, whereas in jazz I realised the absence of such sentiments.

I determined to follow up this analysis with some more good music. Saving every penny I got, I bought—after weeks of waiting—a volume of Mendelssohn's Songs without Words and Liszt's Liebesträume. It seems a pity that I was never encouraged in the betterment of my taste. Not, however, that I wanted much guidance—I found enough in this music to encourage me to further effort.

Since then I have gone forward, never once regretting the change in my taste. I familiarised myself with more of Bach, Handel, Haydn, Mozart, and Beethoven. I was given a score of Lohengrin, which resulted in an immediate investigation of Wagner. From the libraries I borrowed Rienzi, The Flying Dutchman, and the rest, to the Ring and Parsifal. I found them wonderfully engrossing—so much so that now I can play quantities of any of these music-dramas from memory.

My interest in Wagner's views made me study Gluck and French opera, which afterwards led on to Italian opera and other German opera, terminating with Strauss's Electra.

Thus in four years I have made a study of music from the theories of Aristoxenus to the extremist views of Stravinsky. There is not a branch into which I have not inquired. Surely this account will make 'The Traveller' think? I may add that classical music has been more than a pleasure to me, for it has inspired a critical and saner view of the ways of man, a profounder sense of religion, and—what is worth a great deal—commonsense.—Yours, &c.,

GEORGE F. LINSTAD.

Clarkson Street, Sheffield, June, 1924.

A BACH COURSE

SIR,—I have read with interest the articles in your journal by Mr. Harvey Grace, on 'Bach's Organ Works,' and also the book containing these articles as published by Messrs. Novello.

Speaking of the Eight Short Preludes and Fugues, Mr. Grace suggests that it is a pity so many pupils are made to waste time over them. Would it be possible for him, through the medium of your paper, to indicate a progressive course of study from the organ works of Bach.

Such a course would be of the greatest possible value to those amateurs who wish to learn and play the best in Bach without wasting time over the inferior works, particularly those who are situated in places where it is impossible to obtain professional guidance.—Yours, &c.,

Khartoum (Sudan), May, 1924. P. F. WILLIAMS.

[Our correspondent appears to have read the book hastily. The author praises the Fugues, saying that they have taken 'a high place in the curriculum, and are hardly likely to be superseded.' The reference to 'wasting time' applies only to the Preludes. We will consider the feasibility of an article on the lines suggested.—EDITOR.]

WAGNERIAN CALUMNIES

SIR,—Is it not time that some protest should be entered against the campaign of calumny which has been carried on for the last twenty-five years in a certain section of the English press against the personal character of Richard Wagner, and, what is worse, against certain ladies of spotless character, now long dead? Again and again we have heard such epithets as 'cad,' 'liar,' 'amorist,' and others worse, which I do not care to quote, bestowed with such assurance that the uninformed public has learned to look upon him as a dishonourable and very disagreeable character. He was nothing of the kind. The authors of these charges, when challenged, appeal to writers of the class of Ferd. Praeger, Max Nordau, and Julius Kapps, who belong to the slums of the German press, who have earned a certain notoriety by spreading scandalous gossip, but are in no sense whatever authorities on Wagner.

Foreigners have not treated our great poets in this way, and for the credit of the English nation and of the English press such practices ought to be suppressed.—Yours, &c.,

Oxford, May, 1924.

GEORGE AINSLIE HIGHT.

E

RECOVERY OF THE VOICE

SIR,—As biographer and for four years pupil of Manuel Garcia, I hope you will permit me to protest against the sentence 'Garcia's discovery of the laryngoscope did incalculable harm to singing and singers,' in Miss Aubrey's letter in the May Musical Times.

Garcia had formed the theory that the glottis alone had the power of engendering sound, and that the different positions taken by the larynx had no action in the actual formation of sound. His desire to confirm this theory by direct observation of the throat during the process of singing led to his inventing (not discovering) the laryngoscope. By his examination of the glottis he had the satisfaction of proving that all his theories with regard to the emission of the voice were absolutely correct.

How can discovery of truth cause incalculable harm? Garcia did not teach with the laryngoscope, neither did his pupils. During twenty years as a teacher I have never used it, neither did Garcia use it while I was under him.

When there is reason for supposing that there is anything the matter with vocal cords or throat, pupils are sent to laryngologists, who by means of the instrument can discover the condition of the larynx.

Is this doing incalculable harm? Three per cent. of the human race has benefited from the invention, according to statistics.

The larynx is as it were a barometer of emotion. If it remained in a fixed position—either high, low, or at any point in between—emotion and tone-colour would remain fixed. This would be neither art nor nature.—Yours, &c.,

STERLING MACKINLAY.

PRIEST-ORGANISTS

SIR,—As an organist, I should like to dissent from the resolution of the Bournemouth Association of Organists, as reported in the June issue of the Musical Times. The resolution protested against the appointment of clergy to fill the position of organist and choirmaster.

Now if a merely 'musical parson' were chosen, professional organists might be justified in objecting; but when the priest-organist is (as are those to whom the resolution somewhat pointedly referred) equal in attainment to any Cathedral organist, and better qualified than some, organists have no right to criticise at all. A man having been appointed who is fitted for the post, his being a priest—or, for that matter, anything else—is no concern of theirs.

The whole thing savours of pique, which would be an unworthy feeling for any body of Church workers (as are organists) to harbour.

Points 2 and 3 of the resolution are clearly outside their province. If a gifted professional organist receives a call to the priesthood, certainly no body of laymen has the right to demand that he shall on that account make no further use of his musical gifts. He has doubtless been chosen to exercise both functions, and no one should try to prevent him. The supply of such priest-organists is bound to be limited, owing to the fact that to be thus doubly gifted and called to the dual office is rare.

A clergyman with a mere smattering of musical knowledge, who interferes with and hampers his organist out of ignorant prejudice, is perhaps deserving of criticism by organists; but the talented priest-musician, exercising all his gifts, whether in a Cathedral or other church where they can be used, ought to be regarded by his fellow-organists as a brother.—Yours, &c.,

L. M. GORDON.

Callington, Cornwall.

MR. F. J. CROWEST: AN APOLOGY

In our issue for May appeared a letter in which reference was made to 'the late' Mr. F. J. Crowest. We hear from Mr. Crowest that, so far from being dead, he is very much alive at Moseley Village, Warwickshire, where he is busy as a teacher of singing. We desire to express our regret for the publication of the letter, which we understand has caused a good deal of annoyance and inconvenience to Mr. Crowest and his friends.

Sharps and Flats

The concert opened with the National Anthems of France and England, the Leeds choir, three hundred strong, singing the words and the London Orchestra supplying the music.—Morning Post, Paris correspondent.

Prelude in C short minor.—Concert programme.

'Dvorák's Five Biblical Songs.'—Concert programme.

Why not have two violins and fifty trumpets if you can best say in that way what you wanted to say?—Edgar Varese.

The present musical season in London recalls the days before the war, when England led the world in music. That lead has only partially been lost by the tremendous force of the American dollar. Artists somehow seem incapable of resisting the lure of 'big money.'—Ettore Panizza.

From a Canadian Church service paper :

'Scripture and Offertoire : Romance is D flat.'

Sometimes, perhaps ; but Church is hardly the place to say it.—Punch.

There is a good demand for seats this year owing to the production of Sir Edward Elgar's Apostles, who will personally conduct the performance.—Harlech Castle Festival Circular.

Verdi's O tu Palermo, an opera which has now disappeared from the répertoire of most opera houses, possesses at least two good items, one of which is 'I Vespri Siciliani.'—Evening Paper.

Not so well known, perhaps, as the 'Rigoletto' song from his La Donna è Mobile.—Punch.

When you are nervous go back and keep quiet with Brahms, and you will find you are getting a new lease of life.—Sir Walford Davies.

. . . . Chaliapin's Volga Boat Song, which I sing every morning on rising.—Alfredo Nardi.

Some of our modern young composers ought to be made to sing the music they write for the voice.—Sir Henry Wood.

To-day, judged by our standards, most of the mid-Victorian singers would do better in the police force.—James Agate.

M. Chaliapin says, that after he had sung in a village in Soviet Russia, he got ten pounds of flour, one ham, five pounds of sugar, and a quantity of potatoes. We hope that none of this hit him.—Punch.

Music must be shorter and snappier. One chord must express a score of sounds used in the old music . . . . The day will come when we shall not need an orchestra at all. I am experimenting now, and I have found that sounds far sweeter than any orchestra can produce can be transmitted by electricity—pure sound, not the artificial sound we call music now.—Edgar Varese.

I must have my food ! Before the concert I had a steak weighing three-quarters of a pound and two glasses of Chianti. Why shouldn't I?—Dusolina Giannini.

The Amateurs' Exchange

Under this heading we insert, free of charge, announcements by amateur musicians who wish to co-operate with others.

Pianist wishes to practise chamber music. Any combination of instruments.—D. E. J., c/o Musical Times.

'Cellist (lady) wishes to meet violinist for mutual practice. Trios, &c.—E. T., 74, Erpingham Road, Putney, S.W. 15.

Soprano wishes to meet tenor and bass for mutual practice. Italian opera (La Traviata and Rigoletto). Putney district.—'LUCIA,' c/o Musical Times.

Amateur desires conductorship of orchestra capable of playing good standard works. N. or N.E. London preferred.—D. B., 3, Urswick Road, Hackney, E.8.

Young gentleman pianist (25) wishes to meet violinist or 'cellist, or a musical friend possessing grand or Weber upright pianoforte.—V. H., c/o Musical Times.

Orchestral pianist wishes to meet violinists for orchestral practice. S.W. district.—P. S., c/o Musical Times.

Keen amateur organist, good sight-reader, wishes to assist at services with view to obtaining mutual practice.—E. J. B., 71, Elmhurst Road, Forest Gate, E.7.

Vocalist (lady) wishes to meet accompanist who is also a violinist or 'cellist.—W. A. F., c/o Musical Times.

Experienced drummer wants practice with dance band during summer months. London district.—R. E. F., c/o Musical Times.

Violinist (lady) wishes to join other instrumentalists for practice of trios or quartets.—I. B., 18, Normanton Road, Clifton, Bristol.

Whitefield's Orchestra has vacancies for violins, viola, 'cellist, bass, flute, clarinet, and cornet, for monthly Sunday evening service at Whitefield's Tabernacle, Tottenham Court Road, W.1. Excellent musical library.—SPENCER SHAW, 112, Tufnell Park Road, N.7.

Advanced pianist (lady) wishes to meet singer or violinist for mutual practice. N.E. London.—P. W., 5, Exeter Road, E.17.

Pianist wanted to join violinist and 'cellist to form trio for mutual practice. Camberwell district.—H. G. Sollis, 42, D'Eynsford Road, Camberwell, S.E.5.

Vocalist (gentleman) wishes to meet gentleman accompanist for mutual practice and general musical interests. London.—B. CANTO, c/o Musical Times.

New Ealing Orchestra. Members wanted for Mr. Barclay Wilson's String Orchestra now being formed.—'Rosslyn,' Jersey Road, Osterley Park.

Young lady pianist wishes to meet instrumentalists for mutual practice. Croydon district.—Miss R. E. BAMPTON, 13, Dingwall Road, Croydon.

Honorary accompanist wanted for rehearsals of the West Middlesex Musical Society, re-commencing in September next.—Hon. Secretary, J. H. CUDDINGTON, 21, Selby Road, Ealing, W.5.

Organist (gentleman) offers services as deputy or otherwise.—R., c/o Musical Times.

Ladies or gentlemen willing to give occasional or regular help in the formation of an operatic and oratorio society in good working-class district are asked to communicate with the Choir Secretary, All Saints', Sumner Road, S.E.15. State voice or instrument.

The Tudor Singers have vacancies for a first soprano, a light tenor, and a bass. Weekly meetings at Victoria, re-commencing in September. Byrd, Palestrina, &c.—C. J. BATES, 76, Leighton Road, Ealing, W.13.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC

The chamber concert given in Duke's Hall on May 26 opened with an excellent performance of the first movement of Mozart's String Quartet in C. A set of short pieces for violoncello, with pianoforte accompaniment, by Purcell Warren, were most artistically played by Mr. Douglas Cameron, and two movements from a Sonata for violin and pianoforte by Godfrey Sampson, a student, were admirably played by Messrs. Jean Pougnat and Harry Isaacs. Brilliant pianoforte technique was shown by Miss Virginia McLean in Chopin's Scherzo in C sharp minor, and by Miss Alice Church in the same composer's Scherzo in B flat minor. A number of songs by Quilter, Bax, and Guirne Creith, a recitation from Bernard Shaw's Androcles and the Lion, and Saint-Saëns's Scherzo for two pianofortes, completed the programme.

The following awards have been made : The Matthew Phillimore Prize (male pianists) to Gerard Moorat (a native of Boulogne-sur-Mer), Clifford M. Curzon being very highly commended and Roy Ellett highly commended. The adjudicator was Miss Katharine Goodson ; the Piatti Prize (violoncello) to Peers Coetmore Jones (a native of Skegness), Albert E. Killick being highly commended, and Marion Bowlby commended. The adjudicator was Madame Guilhermina Suggia.

ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC

Besides the usual concerts and recitals, the last month has presented several features of interest somewhat out of the ordinary routine. The Ballet Class, which was instituted about a year ago, and is under the charge of Lady George Cholmondeley and Miss Penelope Spencer, gave a rehearsal-performance in the Parry Theatre on June 5. The programme provided a happy combination of music and dance, and included a Bach Prelude and Fugue in which different sets of dancers represented the different voices or parts, several dances to the accompaniment of single voices and chorus, and some episodes illustrating the lighter moods of composers so widely apart as Bach and Bartók. The performance had, in addition, the inestimable advantage of the practical assistance of the directors of the class, who gave some delightful items on their own account.

The Patron's Fund, which was founded by Sir Ernest Palmer in 1903, comes of age this year, and the occasion was celebrated on June 19 by a reception given to Sir Ernest and Lady Palmer, Sir Ernest Palmer being entertained to dinner beforehand by the Council.

A large and representative gathering, which included a great many composers and artists who have benefited by the operations of the Fund, assembled to do honour to the founder, and to show their high appreciation of the fine opportunities this foundation has been able to offer to professional musicians of every kind.

The final examination for thirteen open Scholarships took place on June 16 and 17, when the following awards were made:

Composition, Leonard C. Lambert and Bernard J. Naylor; pianoforte, Theresa Walters and Millicent Silver*; organ, Conrad W. Eden; singing, Mona Benson,* Rosalind Rowsell,* Phyllis M. Evens,* Gladys M. M. Gosling*; violin, Ernest J. R. Sealey, Barbara H. Pulvermacher*; violoncello, Audrey M. Piggott; wind, John Black (hautboy). (The asterisks indicate scholarships awarded for one year only.)

TRINITY COLLEGE OF MUSIC

During the past month three special concerts were given at the College, viz.: on June 11, Miss Emmeline Medd Hall, a successful teacher of pianoforte playing, gave a recital; on June 18, the Mandeville Quartet, along with some College string players and Miss Dorothy Robson as the soloist, repeated a concert given previously at Wigmore Hall; and on June 25 there was a violin recital by students in Mr. Louis Pecsai's class. To these must be added two interesting performances by the Opera Class under the direction of Mr. Cairns James, of the comedy-opera entitled The Village Coquettes, or a Rustic Romance, written by Charles Dickens, with music selected and composed by the late lamented Chairman, Sir Frederick Bridge.

We regret to announce the death of Mr. H. E. Smith, of Guildford, who for some thirty-six years had acted as the local secretary for the holding of the College pupils' examinations in that town.

With regard to the recent announcement of a stained glass window being placed in the Library to the memory of Sir Frederick Bridge, it has been decided that the central subject of the window shall be Samuel Pepys.

Sir Richard Terry has joined the examining staff of the College.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE OF NORTH WALES

The Music Department at University College, Bangor, was set up in 1920 in accordance with the recommendations of the Royal Commission. Mr. E. T. Davies was appointed Director and Organizer. A vigorous policy has been adopted from the start, and there is now at Bangor a flourishing Music Department, attached to which is an Instrumental Trio, which, with other competent teachers in singing and organ, constitutes the staff. Facilities for individual instruction in instrumental playing, singing, and theoretical subjects are offered to students upon generous terms. Weekly chamber concerts are held at the College, to which the students are admitted free of charge.

The College has always had its Choral Society, which gives an annual concert. Since 1920 the scope of these concerts has been widened so as to include symphonies and other orchestral works, in addition to the choral works studied during the session. In November next Bach's St. Matthew Passion will be performed.

A good deal of attention is also given to extra-mural work by means of lectures and lecture-concerts. The College Trio, under the scheme of the National Council of Music, visits the schools in North Wales for lecture-concerts during school hours, and on the evenings of these concerts a programme of interesting music, with lecture-notes, is given to the general public in the various districts.

The session now drawing to a close has been full of interest. The orchestra has played at several of the weekly concerts, and on May 27 gave an orchestral concert at which six hundred of the children of the secondary schools in the district were present. The programme on this occasion included the Unfinished Symphony, Mozart's Pianoforte Concerto in D minor, Holst's St. Paul's Suite, the Peer Gynt Suite, &c. Mr. E. T. Davies, who conducted, gave lecture-notes explaining the constitution of the orchestra and the construction of the pieces played.

During the past year the Department has set up two schemes of examinations, one, a College certificate for proficiency in instrumental playing and singing, and the other a certificate for class-teaching in music. In view of the urgent need for competent teachers in music in the schools in Wales, the value of the latter examinations cannot be over-estimated.

Mr. E. T. Davies and his department work in close co-operation with Sir Walford Davies and the National Council of Music, and in this way Bangor is contributing in an effective way to the big movement now on foot in Wales for the advancement of music.

No account of music at Bangor would be complete without a reference to the Bangor Musical Club, which is intimately associated with the College and which has flourished for twelve years or more. The Club arranges during the season six chamber concerts, and eminent artists of the day appear. During the past season the Club enjoyed visits from the Philharmonic Pianoforte Quintet, with Miss Helen Henschel as vocalist, the Philharmonic Quartet, the Brodsky Quartet, Harold Samuel, Jelly d'Aranyi, Myra Hess, and the University College Instrumentalists from Aberystwyth and Bangor.

EDWARD FITZGERALD: MUSICIAN

BY LLEWELYN C. LLOYD

It is one of the privileges attaching to the arts that the practice of one of them does not preclude the practice of the others by the same individual. Often, indeed, we find that a painter is a trustworthy judge in matters of literature or music, and a musician has discernment in pictorial art. Yet again a man may have knowledge and appreciation of all these branches of art; and such a man was Edward FitzGerald, known to fame for his work in the field of literature, but whose letters contain frequent allusions to music and painting. He used to refer laughingly to his 'three sides,' and it is of one of them—the 'musical side'—that I wish to speak here. It is a matter which has been little noticed by FitzGerald's biographers—a peculiar fact, for he seems to have had a deep and enduring love for music, and some of the passages in his letters relating to the art show him to have been endowed with no little critical discernment. Archdeacon Groome, a friend from Cambridge days, said: 'He was a true musician; not that he was a great performer on any instrument, but that he so truly appreciated all that was good and beautiful in music.' The same writer tells of FitzGerald's serene communings with his favourite composers at Boule, and a charming picture of his life there, when music was a constant solace during his long hermitage, may be pieced together from stray references in his letters. In one he says:

'I have little music here but what I make myself, or help to make with my Parson's son and daughter. We, with not a voice amongst us, go through Handel's Coronation Anthems! . . . Sometimes too, I go over to a place elegantly styled Bungay, where a Printer lives who drills the young folk of a manufactory there to sing in Chorus once a week.'

Elsewhere he says :

' . . . when tired of all, I take up my pipe, or sit down and recollect some of Fidelio on the pianoforte.'

Archdeacon Groome wrote :

'He was a good performer on the piano, and could get such full harmonies out of the organ that stood in one corner of his entrance room at Little Grange as did good to the listener. Sometimes it would be a bit from one of Mozart's Masses, or from one of his or Beethoven's Operas. And then at times he would fill up the harmonies with his voice, true and resonant almost to the last.'

As a critic FitzGerald presents some curious features. He lived, of course, before the recent revival in Bach-appreciation (I have not been able to find any reference to Bach in his letters), and consequently Handel occupied a high place in his esteem. But the remarkable thing is that he thought Handel's best work was contained in his operas, which—it is a commonplace to-day—are mostly so saturated with Italian influences that there is very little Handel left. FitzGerald's attitude towards Handel is summed up in two passages. In 1863, writing to W. B. Donne, he remarked :

'He [Handel] was a good old Pagan at heart, and (till he had to yield to the fashionable Piety of England) stuck to Opera and Cantatas, such as Acis and Galatea, Milton's Penseroso, Alexander's Feast, &c., where he could revel and plunge and frolic without being tied down to Orthodoxy. And these are (to my mind) his really great works: these and his Coronation Anthems, where Human Pomp is to be accompanied and illustrated.'

and, illustrative of this passage, this is what he said in 1842 to Frederic Tennyson of Acis and Galatea which he had heard in London :

'Do you know the music? It is of Handel's best: and as classical as any man who wore a full-bottomed wig could write. I think Handel never gets out of his wig: that is, out of his age: His Hallelujah chorus is a chorus not of angels, but of well-fed, earthly choristers, ranged tier above tier in a Gothic cathedral, with princes for audience, and their military trumpets flourishing over the full volume of the organ. Handel's gods are like Homer's, and his sublime never reaches beyond the region of the clouds. Therefore I think that his great marches, triumphal pieces, and Coronation Anthems, are his finest works.'

Again, he writes :

'What a pity Handel could not have written music to some great Masque, such as Ben Jonson or Milton would have written, if they had known of such a musician to write for.'

Imagine it—Handel versus Ferrabosco! What rivals!

A further extract from his letters tells us more about FitzGerald's attitude towards Handel. In a letter of 1844 to Frederic Tennyson, he said :

'I play of evenings some of Handel's great choruses, which are the bravest music after all. I am getting to the true John Bull style of music. I delight in Handel's Allegro and Penseroso. Do you know the fine, pompous, joyous chorus of These pleasures, Mirth, if thou canst give, &c. Handel certainly does in music what old Bacon desires in his Essay on Masques, "Let the songs be loud and cheerful—not puling, &c." One might think the Water Music was written from his text.'

Elsewhere :

'I grow every day more and more to love the old God save the King style: the common chords, those truisms of music, like other truisms so little understood in the full.'

If, however, FitzGerald was a little eccentric in his estimation of Handel, he foresaw the trend of modern opinion in his worship of Mozart, shared to-day by Stravinsky and the composers associated with him. We are tempted to wonder what FitzGerald would have made of, say, the Symphony for wind instruments, in memory of Debussy, but such a speculation—fascinating though it is—is outside the scope of this paper. To FitzGerald, Mozart was 'as a musical genius, more wonderful than all,' 'the most universal musical genius'; and again he wrote to W. F. Pollock, in 1870:

'I quite agree with you about the Italians: Mozart the only exception: who is all in all.'

Don Giovanni was a particular favourite with him. (How he would have revelled in Mr. E. J. Dent's recent productions of the opera!) In 1839, he wrote to Frederic Tennyson :

'I hear no music now: except that for the last week I have been staying with Spring Rice's mother-in-law, Mrs. Frere [widow of Serjeant Frere, Master of Downing College, Cambridge], one of the finest judges of music I know. She was a very fine singer: but her voice fails now. We used to look over the score of Don Giovanni, and many a mystery and mastery of composition did she show me in it.'

Six years later he declared roundly: 'It is certainly the greatest Opera in the world.'

FitzGerald could not understand Beethoven, although he admitted his genius. He seems to have looked upon the composer as a formalist, 'Beethoven has been too analytical and erudite'—a view of the author of the later Quartets and Sonatas which it is difficult to appreciate. This is what he said to Tennyson in 1842:

'Beethoven has been too analytical and erudite: but his inspiration is nevertheless true . . . and I think that he was, strictly speaking, more of a thinker than a musician. A great genius he was somehow. . . . He tried to think in music: almost to reason in music: whereas perhaps we should be content with feeling in it.'

And, again, in a similar strain, he wrote to the same friend three years later :

'Now Beethoven, you see by your own experience, has a depth not to be reached all at once. I admit with you that he is too bizarre, and, I think, morbid. But he is original, majestic, and profound.' Such music thinks: so it is with Gluck: and with Mendelssohn' [!]

Fidelio was FitzGerald's favourite among Beethoven's works. We have read of his 'recollecting some of Fidelio on the pianoforte,' and in 1870, when nearing the end, he addressed these words to W. F. Pollock:

'Ah, I should like to hear Fidelio again, often as I have heard it. I do not find so much "Melody" in it as you do: understanding by Melody that which asserts itself independently of Harmony, as Mozart's Airs do. I miss it especially in Leonora's "Hope Song." But, what with the story itself, and the Passion and Power of the Music it is set to, the opera is one of those that one can hear repeated as often as may.'

Of the fifth Symphony he wrote :

'The Finale of C minor is very noble. I heard it twice at Jullien's. On the whole I like to hear Mozart better; Beethoven is gloomy. Besides, incontestably Mozart is the purest musician; Beethoven would have been Poet or Painter as well, for he had a great deep Soul and Imagination.'

And these latter words have a truth that recurs to us time and again as we listen to the works of the Master of Bonn. Beethoven was at least as much a teacher, a philosopher if you will, as he was a musician in the narrower sense of the word, and, as Edward Carpenter has said:

'He freed the human spirit from innumerable petty bonds and conventions, he recorded the profoundest experiences of life, and gave form and utterance to emotions hardly guessed—certainly not definitely expressed—before his time.'

Of the other musicians mentioned by FitzGerald, Mendelssohn's name occurs the most frequently, and 'Old Fitz' evidently had admiration for this composer. In 1842 he said, Mendelssohn 'is by far our best writer now' and, later, 'Mendelssohn is really beautiful and original in romantic music.' He had not a great opinion of Elijah, which he heard in 1848, for he says he '... found it wasn't at all worth the trouble [of going to hear]. Though very good music it is not original: Haydn much better. I think the day of Oratorios is gone, like the day for painting Holy Families, &c.'

There are some passing references in the letters to other composers—Auber (in one of whose pieces FitzGerald found 'more of pure light and mystical solemnity than anything I know of Handel's'); Balfe (I dreamed that I dwelt in marble halls is described as 'a dreadful, vulgar ballad,' with the addition, 'I think you may imagine what kind of flowing 6/8 time of the last degree of imbecility it is'); Purcell (for whom FitzGerald had a deep admiration and whose King Arthur is 'real, noble English music, much of it'). In 1852, he tells Tennyson that he has been to hear Meyerbeer's Huguenots, but had been unable to sit through more than the first Act, which he found 'noisy and ugly.' He adds:

'Meyerbeer is a man of genius: and works up dramatic music; but he has scarce any melody, and is rather grotesque and noisy than really powerful.'

Wagner he dismissed with a serene contempt, although he had heard none of the master's works. He says to W. H. Thompson, in 1862, writing with the superiority of age and conservatism:

'I have seen no more of Tannhäuser than the Athenæum showed me; and certainly do not want to see more. One wonders that men of genius (as I suppose they are) should so disguise it in Imitation: but, if they be very young men, this is the natural course, is it not? By and by they may find their own footing.'

The extracts which have been quoted by no means exhaust the passages relating to the musical art which are to be found in FitzGerald's letters, but they present a fairly accurate view of his opinions in musical matters, and, even if his judgments are coloured at times by contemporary conservatism, they reveal a cultured mind, and one with a true perception of musical beauty. Mr. H. C. Colles, in a recent lecture, has laid down the qualifications of a good music critic as (1) a wide general knowledge of music and musicians; (2) the possession of a 'good ear'; (3) a conception of what is good—not only in music, but in the other arts, especially literature and poetry; and (4) above all, 'a great love of the best and the desire to find it.' If we accept these desiderata we must acknowledge Edward FitzGerald to have been a great music critic. And how the man could write!

'VIOLIN METHODS: OLD AND NEW'

On April 8, Mr. Jeffrey Pulver read a paper on the above subject at the last meeting of this session of the Musical Association. He began by saying that if we were to judge of the state of violin playing during the second half of the 16th and the whole of the 17th century from the didactic works published before 1700, we should be forced to conclude that the standard must have been very low indeed. The professional violinist of the 17th century was clearly not trained along the lines laid down in the tutors of that century, and, from the very primitive nature of these publications, we must suppose that they were intended for the amateur. Serious instruction on the instrument was given solely by personal lessons, and each teacher evolved studies as required. The reluctance of the earlier virtuosi to publish books containing their teaching method was partly due to the prejudice against the violin, which meant that a book would appeal to but a few readers, but it was also due to the desire not to give away trade secrets. The art of violin playing was still young, and excellent players were comparatively few; it was therefore to their interest to keep to themselves any little tricks of technique they might have discovered. Some of these early players made great use of the changes of position, and yet mention of the shift, much less instruction how to manage it, came very late in the tutors. If these early works did not at first keep pace with the strides made by the few great players of the period, they were still very interesting, because they showed the plane upon which the art stood from the view-point of the ordinary man who played for his own pleasure.

Mersenne was the first writer to make any sort of attempt at a guide to violin playing with his Harmonie Universelle (1636-37). He was the first to treat the violin seriously in a didactic work, and in spite of its shortcomings, Mersenne's contribution contained much that was still true to-day. He attached great importance to beauty of tone, and treated the bow with much more consideration than did many later writers. Evidently Mersenne was acquainted with the fundamental principles of violin playing. Playford devoted a section of his Introduction to the Skill of Musick to the 'Treble-violin.' He favoured the use of frets to enable the beginner to play in tune, though they were to be discarded later, and he also advocated a rough-and-ready way of fixing the pitch, by saying that the pupil should 'wind up his first or Treble string as high as it will bear,' and tune the other strings from the note thus produced.

The first real tutor was that written by Geminiani. It opened with the statement that no pandering to common taste would be indulged, and that only serious students need approach it. In his Preface the author says:

'The art of playing the violin consists in giving that Instrument a Tone that shall in a manner rival the most perfect human Voice; and in executing every piece with exactness, propriety, and delicacy of expression according to the true intention of musick. But as the imitating the Cock, Cuckoo, Owl, and other birds; or the Drum, French-horn, Tromba marina, and the like; and also sudden shifts of the hand from one extremity of the finger-board to the other, accompanied with contortions of the head and body, rather belong to the professors of legerdemain and posture-masters than with the art of musick, lovers of that art are not to expect to find anything of that sort in this book.'

Geminiani dealt with seven positions which he called 'Orders.' He termed the changing of position, the 'transposition of the hand.' Most of the principles laid down by him are observed to-day, sometimes slightly modified. The work was on the whole sane and sound.

Germany up to this time had produced nothing of any value in the field under consideration, but in 1756 the deficiency was brilliantly made good by Leopold Mozart with his Versuch einer gründlichen Violinschule. The work showed the high artistic aim of its author, displayed great knowledge, and although much of what Mozart said might now raise a smile, the basic principles of the art of violin playing as laid down by him applied with equal force at the present day. As his method was the one that made of his son the excellent violinist that he was, there could be nothing very wrong with it. After referring to several minor publications which appeared after Mozart's, the lecturer went on to say that Campagnoli's Nouvelle Méthode de la Mécanique Progressive du Jeu de Violon (1824) was an important work which proved a stepping-stone to the standard established by Spohr. From the technical point of view it was far more comprehensive than any published till then, and all the rules given could be applied to-day.

With Spohr's work, as the direct continuance of the Campagnolian method, we reached the beginning of the Grand Era. His tutor, the Violinschule of 1832, was clearly indicative of his tastes and tendencies, and given a good teacher with imagination and sympathy for the romantic and lyric sides of violin playing, the method of Spohr could still be used to the advantage of all concerned. There was no need to dwell upon the many excellences of Spohr's work. It was one of the first in which a gradual advance was made from the very earliest stages; and although later on progress was faster, the more elementary sections were not scamped through so hurriedly as was the case in all the works preceding his.

Before coming to modern methods, Mr. Pulver alluded to those published by Baillot, de Bériot, Dancla, and David, and then spoke of Sevcik's method, which from the technical point of view had never been equalled. It was the only one in which nothing had been overlooked, with the exception of the æsthetic side of music, but Sevcik aimed only at giving the violinist a technical equipment with which to exhibit his musical powers. Our power of musical expression and interpretation would be of no use if the hands were incapable of doing the mind's behests. There were no better studies than those contained in Sevcik's voluminous method, but they must be selected with care and combined with other works—sonatas, concerti, and so forth—so that the student might not overlook the ultimate object of his labours. If the method had produced unmusical and soulless technicians, that was less the fault of the method than of the pupil and the teacher. There was a distinct danger awaiting those who worked at it without imagination and without restraint. It could be a remarkably good servant but an exceedingly dangerous master.

In the Violin School of Joachim and Moser we did not find a technical scheme progressively arranged to the exclusion of everything æsthetic; there was regard for the musical instincts of the pupil, and a veritable cult was made of phrasing and dynamics. There was no better method for a really musically gifted student, provided he had a teacher who knew how to supplement it by selections from other works. It made a great point of tempered intonation, which it explained in so clear a manner that its mysteries must rapidly melt away. Another valuable feature in the Joachim-Moser system was the method used—based upon the appreciation of poetry—for the acquisition of a useful sense of rhythm and phrasing. There could be no doubt that the method appealed far more strongly than any other to the intellectual student and the truly musically-inclined.

Any written or printed method clearly could apply only to the average student; it could not provide for special cases of strength or weakness. Not a single method could be used for more than a very limited number of pupils without some modification, addition, or subtraction. The violinistic adaptability of the individual varied to an amazing extent, and therefore different methods had to be evolved. The universal or ideal method had not yet been written, and the success of the teacher's work lay in the first place on correct diagnosis; he had to discover the fault or weakness, and then find a cure for it. He had to ransack all methods known to him, and ransack his own brain also to discover a means of overcoming a shortcoming in his pupil's equipment—that is, if the teacher were sufficiently conscientious. It was a disquieting thought that rule of thumb general practitioners were responsible for the ruin of far fewer constitutions than were lazy, indifferent, or insufficiently-equipped teachers for that of good pupils.

London Concerts

THE PHILHARMONIC CHOIR

At the third concert of the Philharmonic Choir, on June 5, the most considerable works were the Credo of the Missa Papæ Marcelli and Bax's This world's joie, and both showed careful work. The much simpler Rejoice in the Lord always of Purcell achieved, however, a greater result. Purcell always sounds better than he looks, because he wrote knowing that he would have to teach it to his boys, and so was economical of difficulties which seem ingenious on paper, and because he would have to hear the result fairly often if he took the trouble of having it copied out, and so did not write what he might afterwards have to blush for. Holst's Two Psalms for chorus, strings, and organ are good, wholesome music, built on simple lines, for all their rich ornamentation, and were, perhaps, made on something of the same plan. A very welcome addition to the concert was M. Dupré's organ playing in Handel's first Concerto and Bach's Toccata, Adagio, and Fuga in C. We were particularly struck with those things which make up the real personality of of an organist, and which M. Dupré carries about with him whatever organ he may visit—things which are vaguely called touch, but consist in the last resort of intimate phrasings and rhythmical niceties. Just as we are consumed with envy and all uncharitableness when we hear the delicacy and precision of French prose, so the lightning intuitions of Latin rhythm make our very heart laugh with delight.

A. H. F.-S.

SINGERS OF THE MONTH

Chaliapin sang at the Albert Hall to a vast audience. Most of the songs were those he had already made well-known. Some were not intrinsically first-rate, but for my part Chaliapin can make even a second-rate song for the moment engrossing, and there was quite a fair proportion of masterpieces in his choice that evening. The 'Calumny Song' from the Barber of Seville was one of the more unusual items. It was sung in a most astonishing way, quite regardless of the conventions. Chaliapin delivered it as though it were sheer improvisation, abounding in fun, brio, and a rich, comic extravagance—a performance of the highest virtuosity, which the great artist himself enjoyed no doubt as much as his audience. Chaliapin's voice, qua voice, is indubitably one of the most beautiful that has ever beguiled human ears. But this beauty of tone is transcended by the man's personality to the point that we enjoy a different order of pleasure than from any other singer—a difference of kind, not degree. There are trifling mannerisms in Chaliapin's concert behaviour which make it not so faultless as his stage work, but one must be of a very captious nature to allow these to weigh much, as against such a manifestation of sheer genius as is his singing. The life and originality that he can give to a trite phrase are things impossible to convey at second-hand, but these are so much the dominating features of his art that ordinary technical criticism seems rather impertinent. Still there is a detail or two worth discussing. Several singers share with Chaliapin the ability to open up their tones on a high vowel at the dangerous point where the registers overlap. But usually others are glad to leave well alone and to return straightway to the safety of ordinary production. But Chaliapin can go on intensifying when it is felt that the limit has been reached. He suspends the note as though he were toying with an idea, and then, with a sudden breath reinforcement, which amounts musically to an effect of sforzato, audaciously piles up tone, setting us all gasping at the passion and grandeur of the unexpected effect. This sort of singing speaks of an abnormal physical capacity—and also of something more—a knowledge of the use of power quite outside any ordinary range. As for the marvellous, sustained, high pianissimos, a good deal might be said. I do not agree that there is anything of the nature of falsetto about them. But the discussion of this technical point might be wearisome here.

We have also had the eminent privilege of hearing Mattia Battistini sing two or three times this season. One always feels that he knows more about the technics of his art than any other singer of our time. As an example of what intelligence in training will do, he is unrivalled. So easily is his voice produced and so carefully managed that many listeners do not realise its exceptional volume—all its effects are so admirably proportioned. It was particularly at his Albert Hall concert, which followed that at Queen's Hall, that we realised the carrying-power of this voice, its solidity, and its admirable obedience to the singer's mind. At the first concert there had been some veiled notes, signs of wear at long last in the grand old voice. At the second concert the veteran sang like a springal. Battistini must be congratulated on not looking a day more than fifty, and his platform manner is wholly to be admired.

Madame Saltini-Mochi joined in the Battistini concerts with good music sung in a somewhat unequal way. In some Wolf she delighted us by her quick response to various moods. In Schumann's Lotus Flower her tone was lovely, and if we had heard nothing else we should have said she was an eminent singer. But her Mozart and Bach were hard, and she often sang flat.

Miss Maggie Teyte, at her recital at Æolian Hall, was in some respects hardly as pleasing as usual. Her voice is undeniably bigger than of old, but its quality was not, that afternoon, correspondingly improved, and several times Miss Teyte came near singing 'through' her tone.

Of course she could sing just as beautifully as ever, only she is now choosing to use her voice differently. Whereas formerly she insinuated it, she now seemed to be more deliberately trying to impress us. She underlined, she sang at us. Yet Miss Teyte's choice of music was appropriate for a light singer, and it would have ideally suited her some years ago.

Miss Dorothy Robson, whose concerts are never without interest—we feel her to be really musical as well as a steadily improving singer—was heard on the same day. She was not invariably successful. She makes a wide choice of good songs, not all of which, we feel, are of the same intimate appeal to the singer herself. And she is not yet a cunning enough artist to disguise a certain lack of enthusiasm for some pieces of her choice. Thus Delius's Autumn at this concert was rather dutifully than convincingly sung, whereas in Bax's Piper there was an unmistakable spark of vitality which showed that the singer was heart and soul with the music. W. McNaught's song, Dancing at the Lurgan, was encored. Miss Robson's worst technical fault at the moment is a habit of pinching certain vowels—for instance, 'awee' for 'away.'

Mr. Roland Hayes sang at Queen's Hall, and had the largest and most cordial audience of any of the minor singers all this season. I say 'minor,' because Mr. Hayes, with all his suave charm, owns only a narrow field of artistic expression. At the beginning of an evening his singing seems always an unmitigated delight. This time, for instance, he completely beguiled us with pieces by Handel (Care Selve) and Galuppi (E viva rosa bella). But towards the end of an evening with Mr. Hayes we are inclined to feel his art not much more than pretty. Still the popular young negro must be congratulated on his good sense in not forcing his ambition. He certainly has a firm hold over a public that likes pretty things—for instance, the music of Roger Quilter and Norman O'Neill. He had the sort of audience that wants to encore everything. Sometimes this was a declaration of ignorance. Thus who, knowing Morley's setting, would want to encore Quilter's It was a lover and his lass, of which that of the modern composer is a mere pastiche? Careful and suave as was Mr. Hayes's singing of Schubert and Schumann, we did not feel that the root of the matter was there. But the real thing came out at the end of the programme with a group of Negro hymns to which Mr. Hayes gave exactly the right expression, child-like and pathetic.

Mr. Reinald Werrenrath sang Brahms's Four Serious Songs as his principal effort at his concert at Æolian Hall. He is a singer above the average, who chiefly attracts by a pleasant competence, and frank and manly manners. He is a lyric baritone, and at his best his voice sounded quite beautiful. He showed a gift for intense expression without forcing his tone, and, like most other good singers of his type, he had an agreeable mezzo-voce. With so considerable a breath capacity, it seemed that Mr. Werrenrath might have still more consistently interested us. His power, so effectively used in the launching of long, sweeping phrases, was not always felt on individual notes. Now and again there was a high F that was uncovered and ugly.

Madame Claire Dux sang at the Albert Hall on June 15. Not many people apparently remembered her success here in opera ten or eleven years ago, for most of the seats were empty. Yet it was singing still worth hearing, although it did not maintain an invariable level of excellence. On the whole, a singer of this type should make up her mind that the Albert Hall is not the best place for her gifts. How fine an artist and charming a singer she is came out in the last part of Mozart's Deh, vieni. On the other hand, Voi, che sapete was stilted and 'precious.' When she was spontaneous she sang deliciously, but she did not seem always able to command spontaneity.

Miss Murray-Aynsley ranged the world of song from Russia to the Hebrides at her concert at Wigmore Hall. She has a very pretty voice, but she must be advised to do away with certain mannerisms. She strained at scoring points of interpretation in a way that became thoroughly irritating. A certain measure of this intelligent business might have been meritorious, but Miss Murray-Aynsley seriously overdosed us. The whole recital was too self-conscious, too sophisticated. If Miss Murray-Aynsley is going to be the really satisfactory singer we had hoped, she must learn to create an illusion of more simplicity and unforced naturalness in her performances. H. J. K.

Opera in London

ITALIAN OPERA

After the Germans, the Italians, beginning on June 4, came to Covent Garden. That is, Italian opera came, and there were several Italians among the singers, though only one—Cesare Formichi, robust baritone—was a principal.

The programme was not far-fetched. The three Puccini operas—the popular ones which there seems no escaping—shared the bill with the 'big two' of Verdi, bigness being measured by box-office opinion. La Traviata and Rigoletto never come amiss when well sung—and they were well sung. But there are other operas, even by Verdi. No doubt 'safety first' is a good policy in 1924; and of course it saves trouble in any year. Let us make the most of it, and declare that after all Rigoletto is full of good things. It swings and soars far above the scented caves of Puccini, and we can all enjoy the roundabouts when we like. The first Rigoletto of the year marked the launching of the new baritone Formichi. The part has been sung here quite lately with more lyric grace (by Urbano). But this massive, impressive, heavy Rigoletto was, all the same, a magnificent singer. He was too imposing for the part, dramatically, but his vocal gifts were of the right heroic order. He established himself that night as a Covent Garden singer. Succeeding nights confirmed him as a favourite of that critical audience—for, make no mistake, a Covent Garden audience, even if it is musically benighted, does know good from bad singing.

A very dainty little soprano, Madame Maria Ivoguen, was the Gilda. (She had, a few nights before, cleanly jumped all the five-barred gates and divers prickly obstacles in Strauss's Ariadne.) Nobody could have looked more the ingenuous, almost infantile, Gilda—a change at Covent Garden after the maturity of the Melbas and Tetrizinis. Her singing, on a tiny scale, was perfectly delicious when she had the field to herself and M. Panizza, the conductor, chose to give her a look-in. She did not merely vocalise Gilda's music; she gave it a human and expressive sense. Her pretty style harmonized well with Mr. Joseph Hislop's delightful tenor singing, which was not robust, but admirably graceful, well-judged, and artistically finished. This little Gilda was rather thrown into the shadow by M. Formichi's Rigoletto in Act 2.

La Tosca followed, on the next night, and introduced a tenor, Mr. Alfred Piccaver, a Lincolnshire man who has reached Covent Garden by way of Vienna. The curious fact of his origin naturally added to the interest of his success, which was built on very substantial qualities. He is a robust tenor of very nearly the first order. Is it possible that he may one day fill the place, still vacant, of Caruso? The voice is of the right type and volume. But what of his musical sensibilities? We cannot judge, without knowing something of him personally, how far he realises that his art requires still a great deal more refining and embellishing. So far as it goes it is right; the material is really magnificent. He can sing with the typical Italian fervour which carries away an audience, and, by way of contrast, he commands a casual parlando style which proves how natural and well-poised is his delivery.

But Mr. Piccaver has still a good deal to learn. Often when he was in course of building up a fine piece of work he failed to achieve a due climax. The crowning note that was expected did not always come off. He cramped his tone on certain vowels. He seldom attempted a true mezzo voce, and some of his singing was mannered. In several places when he sang in Rigoletto he 'showed off' his sheer physical power quite preposterously at the expense of the music and of the ensemble. His Donna è mobile failed completely through lack of that tastefulness and grace which are the charm of Mr. Hislop's singing. The Tosca of June 5 was Madame Yvonne Gall, a competent singer and actress, who carried on a well-established tradition by making the eccentricity of her dress in Act 2—one of the most exiguous it has been our fortune to behold—the central feature of her performance. Mr. Dinh Gilly's Scarpia was of course already well-known.

The inevitable Bohème came the next night, with Madame Selma Kurz as Mimi and Mr. Hislop as her lover. The style of these two delicately accomplished singers apparently won no respect from the conductor, M. Ettore Panizza, who made his way through the score as if nobody else was concerned in it. Such conducting, night after night neutralising much of the finer parts of the singing, was a great reproach to the season.

Madame Butterfly came the following week, introducing a soprano, Madame Madeline Keltie, who must be put down as a failure, for though she acted the part nicely enough, she had not the voice. Neither nature nor art had given her the quality which alone can make this music interesting at Covent Garden. Mr. Hislop's Pinkerton afforded the only pleasure of the evening.

On the next night Madame Edvina returned to Covent Garden as Tosca, and repeated her old success in the part—achieved less by vocal charm (of which, unfortunately, she has always possessed too little) than by attractive appearance and manner.

A real musical success was attained a night or two later by a new Norwegian Gilda, Madame Eide Norena—a true artist, appealing and sensitive, with a fresh and lovely voice, which was really more effective in the part than the dainty Ivoguen's.

La Traviata was sung on June 13—a show in which everybody took pleasure, since, as someone has remarked, Early Victorianism is taking on the charm of the antique. Madame Selma Kurz sang Violetta with reserve and almost anxious precaution, but in those reaches where that miraculous voice of hers still survives, her execution was a wonder not to be matched by anyone else whom Londoners of our times have heard. Mr. Joseph Hislop was well-nigh ideal as the Alfred de Musset young man, and Mr. Dinh Gilly was the père noble. H. J. K.

'PELLÉAS' AND THE B.N.O.C.

Debussy's Pelléas and Mélisande had been heard in London, both before and since the war, in French but never in English, until the performance by the British National Opera Company at His Majesty's Theatre on June 6. Both this opera and Mozart's Figaro, which had opened the season the night before, were among those which gained by the comparative smallness of the house, and showed how much we Londoners miss in not being given opera here regularly on the lines of the Opéra-Comique at Paris.

Pelléas is one of the most leisurely of operas. It almost surreptitiously approaches the soft spot in our heart. During many scenes it is little more than decorative, and the sad, oppressed characters hardly touch us more than the figures of a faded tapestry. But gradually we realise that the shadowy drama is growing poignant. The fatal love-tryst by the fountain, and the death of Mélisande, then fairly emerge from dreamland into a quivering actuality.

To present Pelléas in English was a unique undertaking, and unique risks were run—for, as in no other opera, the verbal importance of the vocal part completely outweighs melos. The work indeed remains Maeterlinck's Pelléas, so scrupulously does Debussy, pursuing his new æsthetic, subordinate his music. In the greater part of the vocal music of Pelléas Debussy's method seems to have been to transcribe into notation the tones and movement of speech as literally as he could. How faithful he was we had perhaps not quite appreciated until we heard this English Pelléas and Golaud—who sounded like Frenchmen fluent in English but not yet masters of the normal tonal rise and fall of our speech, for the translation (by Mr. Edwin Evans) was applying English words not so much to a tune as to the tonal rise and fall of a French sentence.

Certain minor awkwardnesses—the undue stressing of prepositions and so on—were details. The major question that grew large as the evening went on was whether a true translation of Pelléas was manageable at all. In English it certainly became something quite different—much more different than any other translated opera—from its original. The childlike simplicity of Maeterlinck's language had gone, and this radically altered the nature of the personages. Then the singers, having had to learn with labour notes that had no clear raison d'être—notes which had only an artificial association with their new text—oversang. And the listener, no longer finding the text the essential interest—the spinal column of the work—was inclined to seek for it where it was never meant to be, in the music. Since the translation was the work of a critical author and musician of authoritative ability, one decided that the task must have been impossible of ideal fulfilment—or at any rate impossible if a condition was the strict retention of Debussy's notes. If Debussy had contemplated a translated Pelléas, would not a rewriting of the vocal line to suit the new idiom have seemed to him indispensable? (During Debussy's lifetime Pelléas was sung in English only at Birmingham, a great city which is probably outside the ken of æsthetic Paris.)

It should of course not be understood that the translation was incessantly a misfit. There were numbers of felicitous lines, which gave hints of the peculiar quality of the original Pelléas. Mr. Goossens conducted, and the principal pleasure came from the murmurings and rustlings of the orchestral music. The Company however had put forth very considerable efforts, and the cast boasted capital singers—Mr. Walter Hyde (Pelléas), for instance, who in the following days in Tannhäuser and Samson affirmed his admirable qualities. If he was hardly the right Pelléas, every one must allow that this true artist is a far better Siegmund than those of the recent, much-praised Ring performances at Covent Garden. Miss Brunskill and Mr. Norman Allin were the grandparents, and Mr. Robert Parker the grim bridegroom. In her looks and slim grace Miss Maggie Teyte might have been picked by a painter as a model for Mélisande. On the other hand, the stage pictures (Mr. Oliver Bernard's) were harsh, and disappointed us by lacking any dreamily romantic quality. The difficulties presented by the frequent changes of scene were well overcome.

The extraordinary range of operas performed by the Company proved again its versatility and artistic ambition. Naturally, if eight different operas, mostly masterpieces, are to be sung within a week, any gaps in the personnel become very noticeable. The B.N.O.C. could, in particular, do comfortably with another good dramatic soprano. It is satisfactory that the casting has usually been very clever—often a decided improvement on the last London season. Certain individual performances have pretty well touched the ideal—for instance, Mr. Radford's Bartolo and Mr. Norman Allin's Landgrave (in Tannhäuser).

And nothing is more encouraging than the way in which certain younger members of the Company are progressing in their art. Thus Mr. Frederic Collier as Amonasro in Aida well surpassed his previous achievements. There are two young tenors full of promise—Mr. Browning Mummery and Mr. Walter Widdop—and among the women Miss Brunskill, Miss May Blyth, and Miss Constance Willis win increasing approbation. Such a Company as the B.N.O.C. must have a greatly stimulating influence on the practice of the vocal art. At the same time young singers, hard at work in the exacting day-by-day routine, should be warned against the danger of forgetting the importance of incessant private study for the perfecting of their technics.

C.

'FIDELIO' AT THE SCALA THEATRE

Fidelio, which had not been sung in London since the Beecham season of 1910, opened the series of operatic performances at the Scala Theatre by the Carl Rosa Company, a Company which has at least its name in common with certain makers of operatic history of a past generation. The Scala Theatre, which is certainly the most beautiful theatre in London, a theatre fit to be the setting of distinguished artistic enterprises, proved to be difficult of discovery by London opera-goers during the Carl Rosa season, and the valiant singers often had to face discouraging rows of empty seats.

Fidelio, of course, dates from the time of singers' operas. Not even the prophetic Beethoven foresaw a type of opera on which good singers would be wasted. Since there is always a public for singing, whether it is in or out of fashion, Fidelio might be re-established by supremely fine singing. Covent Garden is filled for the sake of Ah! Fors' è lui. Why not for Fidelio's song to Hope, and the tenor's music at the beginning of the second Act? Meanwhile, there is the Leonora No. 3 Overture, which remains, after all, the justification of Fidelio, as perhaps the labour and tedium of so many operas are justified by some one fine fruit—a magnificent fruit of music, for the growth and ripening of which it was necessary that some dramatic plot and the business of the concrete world should have excited the mind of a composer—a musical fruit which the world will go on enjoying when everything else that we know as opera is as superannuated as the Greek and Elizabethan theatre. All Wagner's troubles with King mythology may have been but Evolution's slow, mysterious way of bringing to birth Siegfried's 'Funeral March,' which will conceivably be treasured by epochs that have completely lost trace of Fricka.

We return to Fidelio and mention with respect the conviction with which it was sung in spite of an English text that seemed calculated to take the wind out of any sail. The principals were Miss Eva Turner and Mr. William Boland. These are singers of gifts that would, in a community less reckless of artistic values than ours, be held precious and worthy of the right fostering. We fear that both, who might be eminent, must be described as coarse in their performances. Both made the impression of singers too well accustomed to insensitive audiences—audiences for whom nothing counts but the gros moyens. No musical listener is above taking pleasure in the grand culminating outburst of tone in the right place. But some of us like it artfully prepared for, and we know how much more effective it then is. Wherein lay the success of the singing in The Rose Cavalier, which made it a nine-days' wonder last May, among all who cared for music in London? Not in any prodigious gift of a single one of the singers, but in a cultivation of the finer shades. Miss Eva Turner is a most remarkably gifted young woman. It is as much the blame of musical England generally as her own that she is not a better artist. Mr. Boland, too, has not, we feel, achieved all that Providence put him within reach of achieving. He can brace himself up to singing bright, clarion tones, but apparently he does not think soft singing worth so much trouble. His piano is nondescript, practically toneless.

There are other singers in the Carl Rosa Company who do well in a measure, and would, if we were sanguine, have to be called most interestingly promising. The tenor, Mr. Ben Williams, who was heard in Samson, is full of faults, but has the makings of a superb, robust tenor. His singing at present is regrettably 'tight,' with resultant monotony of tone and incorrect vowels ('oi' for 'i,' and so on). Mr. E. Hemingway and Mr. Gilding Clarke are basses in the rough (the latter gave us striking moments as the King in Lohengrin).

The makeshift technique of some of the Company was betrayed in the inadequate, uneasy handling of Mr. Nicholas Gatty's graceful trifle, Prince Ferelon, which, with a proper finish in the production, would surely have been a success. The doubtful impression left by the one-Act Bubbles of Mr. Hubert Bath (who was the principal conductor of the season), was due to the singularly unfeeling setting of the text, which fitted the music where it happened to touch. The piece, an Irish comedy by Lady Gregory, produced on that account a prevailing sense of discomfort.

A new composition of larger size was Mr. Isidore de Lara's Three Musketeers, in five Acts (June 17). The work was not over by midnight, and there was no obvious reason why the composer's pen, so fluent and so little disciplined, should not have run on all night. Certain scenes made something of a popular hit, and the Company was at its best. But musically there was little enough satisfaction in a style that picked up and dropped its matter with so flaccid a grasp. C.

MUSIC AT THE WEMBLEY EXHIBITION

There has been a certain amount of music of one sort and another at the Wembley Exhibition, but our art cannot be said to have figured adequately as yet in that great show of proud imperial activities and achievements. In fact, the poorness of its representation looks like acquiescence in the outworn theory that in whatever pursuits the British peoples shine, it is not music.

Compare the treatment of music with that of painting. The Palace of Art at Wembley contains a noble collection of pictures and sculptures, a collection which must draw to Wembley a great number of persons who would have been left cold by the appeal of cowboys and switchback railways. The various musical enterprises, some of which have been good, and some bad, have never at their best been at all comparable with the picture show.

The best music came from the massed military bands which on Empire Day began a week of first-rate concerts, the musical value of which was not adequately appreciated by the daily Press (not even that section of it which can find space for comments on the daily West-End performances of the Appassionata Sonata, the Devil's Trill, and Caro mio ben). This great company of British Army musicians numbered six hundred, and with Lieut. H. E. Atkins of Kneller Hall as their chief conductor, gave two concerts a day in the Stadium. The standard of execution and the quality of the music—not all unexceptionable, perhaps, but the mass of it utterly different from what a military band would have played a generation ago—brought fresh recognition of the good work of Kneller Hall, which nowadays may fairly be said to rank with the leading civilian schools of music. It was sad that the gallant bandsmen had a week of unsettled weather, which meant smallish audiences, and for themselves much discomfort—for while the audience was mostly under cover, the band played in the middle of the arena.

The band, for all its numbers, was as carefully balanced as a symphony orchestra, with which its effects were not incomparable. An immense section of clarinets took the place of violins. A military band of this sort must not be regarded as a makeshift for an orchestra. It is in itself a musical medium of the first importance—granted only that it is a permanency. Therein is no doubt the rub, and hearing on the first day Lieut. Walton O'Donnell's rich-sounding rhapsody, Songs of the Gael (which the audience encored), we wondered how many bodies of military bandsmen there can be in the country, able to do the elaborate and exacting work such justice. Col. Somerville urges composers to consider more seriously the military band. Yes; but is it anywhere laid down strictly what a military band consists of, and what it can do?

The programmes boasted some modern works written expressly for Kneller Hall, notably the Suites of Vaughan Williams and Holst, and also transcriptions such as those of Holst's Planets ('Mars' sounds superb this way) and Ethel Smyth's The Wreckers Overture. The transcriptions of Bach and Wagner were also well worth going to Wembley to hear.

On May 31, the first of a series of massed choral concerts, conducted by Dr. Charles Harriss, was given in the Stadium. The choir's size (ten thousand voices) matched the gigantic scene. Perhaps the performance is to be considered principally as a ceremony—the concert had a wonderful look, and every one had to agree that he had never before, not even at the Crystal Palace, seen such music-making. The programme consisted of short numbers by Parry, Sullivan, Elgar, and, among others, the popular conductor. The actual sound of the choral battalions was naturally not weighty, but it came across the arena with a diffused sweetness and mildness. It was very remarkable how well the singing was synchronised. At such choral concerts, the larger the numbers and the space, the gentler the impression, apparently. Yet if one had been singing among the basses, he would probably have believed the sound was like near thunder.

On the evening of that day the first of a series of Dominions Concerts was given in one of the halls of the Palace of Industry—a useful concert-hall (acoustically rather fierce, but that could be remedied by heavier draperies and a full audience). South Africa took the field first, and Canada followed a few days later. Then the concerts somehow ceased. To be frank, they were not well conceived or interesting. We heard a large number of vocalists, several quite good, a few excellent (Miss Evelyn Tierney and Madame Donalda, of Canada, for example). But the general effect was that anyone with the right birth certificate could come and sing anything. And performances of such compositions as Ombra leggiera and Somewhere a voice is calling did nothing to help the musical prestige of the Empire. The creative musicians of the Dominions seem at present to be of a retiring nature, and the executants were content with threadbare or shoddy products of the Old World. C.

MUSIC IN THE BRISTOL PAGEANT AT WEMBLEY

The music used in the Pageant which Bristol presented at Wembley in Whit-week was compiled after much research and labour by Mr. Hubert W. Hunt, organist of Bristol Cathedral, Mr. C. W. Stead, Mr. A. Bruce Bedells, and Mr. T. Pearse Clark. Mr. Joseph Jenkins was chorus-master, and Mr. Hunt conducted a band and chorus of two hundred and fifty.

The Pageant—the first which has ever been transported in its entirety from the provinces to London—deals chronologically with the part which Bristol has taken in the building of the Empire, and the music is drawn from composers contemporary with each scene. The Overture, indeed, is modern, being P. Napier Miles's From the West Country, but it designedly affords contrast with the items which follow.

The 10th-century March, which opens the first episode, is based on a song in honour of Charlemagne, and is one of the oldest tunes in existence. It is used again later, and Sumer is icumen in (1230) is introduced. The choral Song of Roland (11th century), which was sung at the Battle of Hastings, is used with adapted words (God save King Henry—Laurence Minst, 1340).

The second episode contains a melody from a Bodleian MS. by Childe (1450) and The Chorus of Angels. Folk-dances are also used here.

The plainsong used in the Cabot episode is from a MS. belonging to Bristol Cathedral, and is 14th or 15th century. Purcell's 'Hornpipe' from King Arthur and a Pageant March are also included.

The Elizabethan episode introduces Benet's All creatures now are merry-minded, the Earl of Bedford's March (Byrd)—with the words of Sir John Davies's acrostic, Elisabetha Regina—Weelkes's Long live fair Oriana, and more folk-dances.

A canticle by Elway Bevin, organist of Bristol Cathedral in 1610, a Maypole Dance by Roeckel, and an Interlude dated 1668 are heard in the fifth episode. In the sixth (Dorothy Hazard) episode the Assembly March of the Parliamentarians is the Old English tune Fortune my foe. Psalm 117 is sung to an old chant, and the victor is greeted with Prince Rupert's March (1645). The episode closes with Jeremy Savile's Here's a health unto His Majesty and another 17th-century March.

The finale of the Pageant consists of a massed scene of nearly three thousand performers, who join the choir in singing a noble Pageant hymn specially written by Fred E. Weatherly and set to music by Hubert Hunt. M. B.

Powell's setting of Lochinvar is hardly suitable music for the children's massed performance. The pianoforte playing did not maintain a high standard, and in the advanced division no competitor obtained honours. The result of the 'Henry Garner' Bowl Competition, an award offered to the 'best singer of the Festival,' caused much dissatisfaction among local teachers. The award was made according to the unanimous vote of three adjudicators to a singer who, in her solo class, had succeeded in obtaining only a second-class certificate. As the result of numerous complaints, it is probable that in future only specialists in their several subjects will be invited to adjudicate in the solo classes. It has also been suggested that a test in general musicianship shall be added to the final championship test. In the classes for 'Championship Choirs,' the first places were taken by Madame Gell's Ladies' Choir, Melbourne Male-Voice Choir (Derbyshire), and Mr. A. Higson's Mixed-Voice Choir. G. W.

The MORECAMBE Festival, which does not need to extend beyond its traditional three days to retain its renown as one of the pioneer Festivals, was held on May 15-17. It is essentially a musical Festival, and both test-pieces and concert music maintain a proper standard. A notable feature was the broadcasting of the final session. BATH was busy with competitions and competitors between May 16-24, during the Mid-Somerset meeting. The Berks, Bucks, and Oxon Festival, now twenty-one years old, came round this year to its birthplace at READING (May 21-24). It has meanwhile been to eight other centres. There were excellent concerts. Dunhill's John Gilpin was sung by the juniors, and Parry's Pied Piper and The Glories of our Blood and State by the seniors. At NEWCASTLE, the young 'North of England Tournament' has developed quickly into an event of prime importance (June 2-7). The principal awards were won by Cecilian Glee Society and Cleveland Harmonic Male-Voice Choir. Mr. Thomas Danskin, a tenor from Leamington, won a special trophy open to all solo singers.

In Yorkshire, where musical competitions flourish exceedingly, the month of May was a time of music—a kind of extension of the concert season which dies early in these regions. The PONTEFRACCT Festival, which ran to six days in the latter half of the month, excited great interest among the schools. HULL (May 21-24) was just as conspicuously and enjoyably a children's Festival. At IKLEY the eighteenth Wharfedale Festival continued with undiminished popularity (May 28-31). RICHMOND (Swaledale) and WHITBY were other Festivals on a similar scale and equally successful. With the Yorkshire Festivals may be coupled SCUNTHORPE, RETFORD, and BUXTON. In all this part of the country folk-dancing is an enthusiasm, and the Festivals are much brightened by it. The habit is spreading, among children and grown-ups, and from being an 'antiquarian cult' it bids fair to become a national amusement again.

In Scotland the competition movement is now strong and established. After GLASGOW, to which our last number made reference, came EDINBURGH, with a week of competitions and a hundred classes. Open prizes for choral singing were won this year by Kilsyth Co-operative Choir and Hall Russell Male-Voice Choir. In May a Festival was held at INVERNESS, and in June there was one at DUMFRIES.

Competitions in Ireland are headed by the Feis Ceoil at DUBLIN. It was on the whole an improvement on its own record, which is based chiefly on large entries of soloists. Mrs. Hugh Thompson, of Belfast, won the Plunket Greene Cup against eighty competitors. There were seventy-seven mezzo-sopranos, eighty-four junior pianists, and so forth. The characteristic sections of the Feis Ceoil—singing in Irish, playing the Uilleann pipes and the traditional Irish fiddle—were poorly supported. The choral classes, too, were unsuccessful. Only one mixed-voice choir appeared in each of Classes A and B. In Northern Ireland the last and youngest of the local musical festivals, CARRICKFERGUS, brought the competition season to a close at the end of May. Within three years this little Festival in a town incomparably more ancient than its big neighbour, Belfast, has grown wonderfully. Like all the local festivals in the Northern area, it benefits from

Competition Festival Record

At BIRMINGHAM this year (May 10-24) the outstanding feature of the Festival was the competition for children. About two hundred children's choirs entered, and the palm again went to the choir of the Birmingham Royal Institution for the Blind, which gave us singing of excellent quality. A weakness in these classes was the small number of entries for the sight-singing test. Only two choirs faced the ordeal. The boys' choirs excelled in tone-quality, but gave place to the girls for spirit. The general standard of singing had improved since last year, although the choice of test-pieces still left something to be desired. Laurence proximity to the largest Irish industrial centre. In a lesser degree so also do BALLYMENA, PORTADOWN, and COLERAINE. Perhaps in time to come these Festivals will specialise each in some individual direction. At present they are much alike in their aims, and differ only in size and scope.

The LEAGUE OF ARTS started a competitive Festival in promising style on May 30 and 31. Some excellent junior choirs were heard, but adult bodies were coy, as at so many other Festivals this year. Capital work was done in the Church choirs class by singers from St. Margaret's, Lee, under Mr. Frederic Leeds, and a mixed-voice choir from the Working Men's College (making what we believe was its first appearance on any platform) showed enthusiasm and real promise. This choir was conducted by Mr. Walter Yeomans. Soloists, vocal and instrumental, turned up in good numbers and were of fair average quality. Lady Maud Parry gave away the certificates at the prize-winners' concert. There is, we think, room in London for this new Festival, as it clearly tapped several new sources. We suggest, however, that it will be even more useful if it develops along lines with which the League has been associated since its inception. Thus it ought to make a feature of such classes as folk-dancing and singing, children's singing games, and communal singing. It has convenient headquarters at the Guildhouse, and behind it are enthusiastic people with vision and ideas. It should go ahead and become a practical means of carrying out as much as possible of the social and artistic policy of the League.

POT-HUNTING AT THE PALACE

It was unfortunate that the disturbance created by some Welsh choirs at the Crystal Palace British Empire Festival came immediately after the publication of the Federation's appeal. The general public might easily be led to imagine that unseemly demonstrations by unsuccessful choirs are of common occurrence, whereas they are extremely rare. A North London correspondent, writing to the daily press, pointed out that the dissentient choirs were ‘... surprised at the announcement in the programme that the Holme Valley Choir would sing a ballad by Mr. Cyril Jenkins, one of the adjudicators... For a chief adjudicator to arrange with a competitive choir to render his own work on the day of competition is apt to create an unfavourable impression.’

Mr. Jenkins replied that:

‘If it is impossible to ask a choir to sing without “collusion” being hinted at, then it is time we left musical festivals alone.’

Far better avoid giving an opening for suspicion. As ‘Advisory Musical Director,’ and also an adjudicator, Mr. Jenkins was in a position where it behoved him to be diffident concerning his own compositions. But what happened? Not only did he ask for trouble in the way shown above: no fewer than thirteen of his compositions appeared in the syllabus! As to the disturbance, Mr. Jenkins airily explained it away by saying:

‘Unfortunately many competitive choirs in Wales are more concerned with pot-hunting than with the study of music.’

This, from the organizer of a Festival at which one of the prizes was a trophy valued at 500 guineas and £100 in cash, is naivety itself. There would be no pot-hunters if there were no pots for them to hunt.

Music in the provinces

ABERYSTWYTH.—At the College concert on May 23 three chamber works with clarinet parts were played by Mr. Robert Clarke and others, Sir Walford Davies being the pianist.—The special features of the concert on May 30 were penillion singing by Mr. J. G. Jones, and a movement from Brahms's Sextet for strings

BANGOR.—Mr. E. T. Davies prefaced the College concert, on May 16, with a lecture on ‘The Orchestra,’

The programme included Bach's Chromatic Fantasia and Fugue, and Sonatas for violin and pianoforte by Handel and Purcell.

BIRMINGHAM.—To welcome Mr. Adrian C. Boult on his appointment as director of music and conductor to the City of Birmingham Orchestra, a reception was given by the Lord Mayor, Alderman T. O. Williams, on June 4. On this occasion Mr. Boult addressed a gathering of representative citizens, outlining his scheme for next season. Eight symphony concerts are to be given on Tuesdays, twenty-six Sunday and six Saturday concerts, and a series of Saturday afternoon concerts for children. Only one modern work will be included in each symphony programme. The first half of each Sunday programme will be devoted to one composer, and will end with some expression of nationality in music. Among the works promised for performance are Holst's Planets, Arthur Bliss's Colour Symphony, John Ireland's Symphonic Rhapsody, and a work by Bax. The visiting conductors for next season will be Eugène Goossens, Sir Landon Ronald, and Bruno Walter.—In October, an exchange of visits is to be made between Mr. Joseph Lewis and the conductor of the Brahms Society at Vienna. Mr. Lewis will conduct the Vienna Society, and the foreign musician will conduct the Wolverhampton Musical Society.

—The annual orchestral concert of the Midland Institute of Music was given on June 4. Of the solo works the outstanding item was a performance of Dvorák's Cello Concerto by Miss Mabel Whymark. The orchestra was assisted by professional players, and Prof. Granville Bantock conducted.—At a sonata recital on June 2, Miss Marjorie Chapman played Liszt's B minor Sonata. Beethoven's Waldstein was given by Miss Alice Clayton, and Miss Lilian Niblet played one of Mozart's three Sonatas in D. Miss Winifred Lowe and Miss Winifred Morris sang songs by Vaughan Thomas and Debussy.

BRIDGWATER.—Mrs. T. J. Sully, a local pianist and a great worker for music in the district, gave a recital with Miss Dorothy Silk, on May 16. She played the Tausig arrangement of the Bach Toccata and Fugue in D minor, and Beethoven's six Variations on an Original Theme in F. Miss Silk sang two Bach arias, some Schubert, and songs by Murray Davey (An Epitaph), Maurice Besly (Listening), Peter Warlock (Piggies), Purcell, and Robert Jones.

BRISTOL.—The University Male Choir sang Grieg's Landerkennung, the Agincourt Song, Dunhill's Pilgrim Song, some of Terry's Sea Chanties, Stanford's Songs of the Fleet, and Negro Spirituals, in Colston Hall on June 5, and the String Orchestra played Holst's St. Paul's Suite and Grainger's Handel in the Strand.

DOLGELLEY.—The Grammar School has been selected by Sir Walford Davies for making an experiment in fostering instrumental music, with the co-operation of the headmaster, Mr. J. Griffith, and Miss Griffith. On May 23 the school orchestra of forty members played Haydn's Symphony in G, to raise funds for a visit to Wembley, where they have been invited to take part in a school concert. The choir sang part-songs.

EXETER.—Under the auspices of the Chamber Music Club, Mr. George Parker (vocalist) and Miss Thelma Davies (pianoforte) gave two recitals on May 21. The songs included two by Dr. Ernest Bullock (who was at the pianoforte), and others by Bairstow, Stanford, Shaw, Geoffrey Gwyther, Wolf, and Vaughan Williams. At the members' meeting of the Club, on May 28, Beethoven's Septet for strings and wind instruments was played, and three-part songs by Stanford (The Peaceful Western Wind) and Robertson (The Shepherdess) were sung.—On June 10 the band of H.M. Coldstream Guards played a first Suite in E flat by Holst, and a Suite, The Seasons, by Glazounov, and five numbers from Ansell's The Shoe, conducted by Lieut. R. G. Evans.

LIVERPOOL.—The local Association of Schoolmasters held its second annual Festival at St. George's Hall on June 4. The choir consisted entirely of boys, to the number of five hundred, drawn from the elementary schools, who gave Old English compositions and several modern pieces. Mr. O. R. Owen conducted.

OXFORD.—On the Sunday in Eights Week unaccompanied music by Holst and Vaughan Williams was sung in the cloisters at Magdalen. The Elizabethan Singers sang at Christ Church on the following day, and Mrs. Gordon Woodhouse played harpsichord music. At Exeter College the Magi String Quartet played Dvorák and Tchaikovsky, and the choir sang part-songs. Holst's Cloud Messenger was sung by Kettle Choir, and the orchestra played Hamilton Harty's arrangement of Handel's Water-Music and Vaughan Williams's Wasps Overture. —On May 31 Eglesfield Musical Society brought the Eights Week musical programme to a close at Queen's College. The College Choir sang Shenandoah, Buck's The Blackbird (for boys only), and Holst's Bring us good ale. —On June 4 Miss Dorothy Moulton gave a Lieder recital, assisted by Miss Margaret Deneke at the pianoforte, in aid of the Endowment Fund of the Lady Margaret Hall. —On June 12 the Oxford Bach Choir joined with the Orchestral Society to celebrate the centenary of Beethoven's Choral Symphony and Mass in D. Of the latter, the Kyrie, Credo, and Agnus Dei were performed, and were followed by the Symphony, in which the solo parts were taken by the English Singers (Mr. Archibald Wilson replacing Mr. Steuart Wilson). Sir Hugh Allen conducted.

SEATON.—On June 4 the Choral Society, numbering eighty voices, and assisted by a string orchestra, performed Hiawatha's Wedding-Feast, conducted by Mr. W. C. Walton.

TORQUAY.—On May 22 the Winter Orchestra, conducted by Mr. E. W. Goss, played the Overture to Dame Ethel Smyth's The Boatswain's Mate, Mendelssohn's Scotch Symphony, the Pantomime music from Hansel and Gretel, and the first movement of a Pianoforte Concerto by W. L. Twining, a local musician. Dr. Harold Rhodes was the soloist.

BRITISH MUSIC AT BELGRADE

A programme of English song, covering three centuries, was recently given at Belgrade by Mr. Frederick Woodhouse, who prefaced his singing with a lecture on the old-time greatness of English music. The subject of the lecture and the music were quite novel to a Belgrade audience, and both were received with the greatest appreciation. The following is a list of the songs:

'If she forsake me I shall die'	... Thomas Rosseter.
'Oh, my Clarissa'	... Henry Lawes.
'Dearest, do not now delay me'	... Henry Lawes.
'Flow not so fast'	... Dowland.
'Never weather-beaten saile'	... Campion.
'What shall I do to shew'	... Purcell.
'Ye twice ten hundred Deities'	... Purcell.

MODERN SETTINGS OF SHAKESPEARE

'Blow, blow, thou winter wind'	... Frank Bridge.
'O Mistress mine'	... Quilter.
'Sigh no more, ladies'	... Aikin.
'Winter'	... Balfour Gardiner.
'Piggesnie'	... Warlock.
'Diaphenia'	... Denis Browne.
'Captain Stratton's Fancy'	... Warlock.

FOLK-SONGS

'Some rival has stolen my true love'; 'All alone'; 'Yarmouth Town'; 'Twankydllo'; 'Travel the country round'; 'Billy Boy' (Sea Shanty, arranged by R. R. Terry).

It is interesting to note that the item which evoked the greatest enthusiasm was Ye twice ten hundred Deities.

The lecture-recital was undertaken at the invitation of the Anglo-Yugoslav Club, a society which has recently been founded at Belgrade for the purpose of fostering closer relations between Yugoslavia and this country, particularly in matters artistic and cultural. It was held in the fine lecture-hall of the new University, and the audience of over eight hundred included most of the professors of the University and other leaders of intellectual life at Belgrade.

IRELAND

At the annual meeting of the Belfast Philharmonic Society, which this year attains its jubilee, the report was encouraging. Last season added nearly seventy pounds to the credit balance. This, with the £500 Riddell bequest (reported two-months ago), relieves the mind of the hon. treasurer, and enables the committee and conductor to plan progressive programmes for the coming winter.

Mrs. Whale's School of Music gave some delightful juvenile performances of a play, musical items, and dances in Ulster Hall on June 12 and 13. Mrs. Whale was the pioneer here of children's musical culture.

There was a very successful war charity week of Gilbert-Sullivan operetta, promoted by the Lady Mayoress of Belfast, at the Royal Opera House, on May 19 to 24.

On May 23, Dublin University Choral Society gave a good performance of Acis and Galatea under the conductorship of Dr. George Hewson. On June 2, Dr. Hewson gave an organ recital at St. Patrick's Cathedral in aid of the children's ward in Baginbun Street Hospital.

Musical Notes from Abroad

PARIS

LOUIS AUBERT'S 'LA FORÊT BLEUE'

Louis Aubert's fairy opera, La Forêt Bleue, was published, if I remember rightly, about fifteen years ago. It was successfully produced at Boston, U.S.A., and afterwards at Geneva. But, despite successful performances of excerpts at Paris concerts (these were duly recorded in the Musical Times), Parisian managers ignored its existence. This shows that even in a capital city boasting several permanent, State-aided operatic theatres with which private enterprise is ever competing, it remains possible for a fine score by a native composer to go begging. But now La Forêt Bleue has slipped at last into its right place in the repertory of the Théâtre de l'Opéra-Comique, and it is highly probable that it has come to stay. It received a warm welcome. The cast, comprising Mlle. N. Roussel, Guylu, Roger, Baye, Tiphaine, Messrs. Friant, Lafont, Guénot, and the conductor, Albert Wolff, came in for their share of success.

Both the play and the music are altogether delightful. The libretto, by Jacques Chenevière, is founded on the stories of Tom Thumb, Red Riding-Hood, and the Sleeping Beauty, as told by Perrault, but skilfully worked into an unassumingly picturesque and poetic whole. The music is instinct with subtle charm and poetry. The composer has a rare gift for combining grace and thoughtfulness. His workmanship is exquisite throughout, and the score contains a wealth of beautiful melody, fine choral writing, and rich, delicate, orchestral colour. La Forêt Bleue would prove well worthy of performance in this country.

The 'Association France-Grande Bretagne' gave its patronage to two concerts at the Théâtre des Champs Elysées on June 14 and 15 by the Leeds Choral Union, which was enabled to make the visit by the generosity of Mr. Henry C. Embleton. The profits were given to French Hospitals.

The first programme was miscellaneous, its chief features being choruses from Berlioz's Faust, Eaton Fanning's Moonlight, the Hallelujah Chorus and For unto us, a Lullaby of Byrd, two choruses from Israel in Egypt, the Epilogue from The Golden Legend, and two movements from Elgar's second Symphony, played by the London Symphony Orchestra. The second programme consisted of Blest Pair of Sirens and The Dream of Gerontius. The work of conducting was shared by Sir Edward Elgar, Dr. Henry Coward, and the leader of the orchestra, who directed the accompaniment to solos given by Miss Astra Desmond, Mr. Tudor Davies, and Mr. Herbert Heyner.

The visit was greatly enjoyed by the Choir, which received abundant hospitality. On the way home the singers gave a concert at Dieppe in aid of local charities.

TORONTO

Competitively speaking, the Ontario musical Festival this year, held at Toronto from April 28 to May 3, was a greater success than ever. There were upwards of seven thousand three hundred individual competitors in five hundred and seventy entries, three thousand seven hundred and twenty-five of these being in school competitions. In two classes—solo violin and pianoforte—the children completely outclassed the adults, so much so that Dr. James Lyon remarked that he had never in his experience heard more amazing talent. In a young country such as Canada, it is the children who are being carefully watched, for the future of music in the Dominion lies in their hands. And the future means more to us than both the present and past put together—artistically.

Interesting programmes continue to be provided by the New Symphony Orchestra. The seventeenth, eighteenth, nineteenth, and twentieth Twilight Concerts have drawn good audiences to hear Dr. Ernest MacMillan's impressive Concert Overture, conducted by the composer, von Kunitz's scholarly and inspired Violin Concerto in E minor, played by the composer, the Schumann C major Symphony, the Prelude and Love Death from Tristan and Isolde, Ruy Blas, two movements of Schubert's seventh Symphony, Prelude and Introduction to Act 3 of Lohengrin, the Henry VIII. Dances, the Casse-Noisette Suite, and the Blue Danube Waltz, with Aida Rose as soloist in 'From Mighty Kings' (Judas Maccabæus), and Norah Drewett in the Chopin F minor Concerto.

At last we have our own permanent string organization, called the Hart House Quartet (after the University Syndicate from which it emanates), and including Geza de Kresz, H. Adaskin, M. Blackstone, and Boris Hambourg. The first programme (invitation) was splendidly received. It comprised Haydn's D minor, Op. 76, No. 2, and Beethoven's F minor, Op. 95, and E flat, Op. 74 (Adagio only). Great things are expected after this very promising start.

The Toronto Conservatory Orchestra, under Frank Blachford, gave its initial performance of works by Elgar, Holst, Walford Davies, and Grainger, the soloists being Betty Marlatt and Scott Duncan. The latter is one of our most promising young pianists, whose career is being keenly watched. There was a large audience.

At the Empire Day Concert, held by the Board of Education, Mr. Duncan McKenzie assembled six hundred school-children and a school orchestra of sixty, and performed with amazing finish compositions by Holst, Balfour Gardiner, and Coleridge-Taylor, and several folk-songs.

At the Toronto Conservatory of Music and the Canadian Academy of Music annual concerts, marked talent was noticeable in the violin and pianoforte departments, three or four young artists showing maturity far ahead of their years.

News reaches us of the first concert of the new Chatham Choral Society, under Mr. Matthias Turton, late of Leeds, when Handel's Acis and Galatea drew a packed house. We also hear of a Londoner, Mr. Henry Easun, giving a very successful performance of The Messiah at Stratford, with an augmented choir.

Rehearsals have commenced for the pageant chorus of over two thousand voices (Canadian National Exhibition), under Dr. H. A. Fricker. A special performance will be given in the arena on June 19 at the Rotary International Convention, before representatives of twenty-nine nations.

H. C. F.

VIENNA

OPERATIC EVENTS

The Strauss cycle at the Staatsoper—and, indeed, that portion of it which was in the nature of concert performances—derived its 'festival' character merely from its association with Richard Strauss's sixtieth birthday, and from the more or less social features and celebrations which accompanied it. The quality of the performances was far from being on a festival scale, and equally far from unusual, the productions being merely poorly-rehearsed repetitions of the Strauss works which, during most of the season, form the larger portion of the Staatsoper's repertoire. The occasion coinciding with the absence of several prominent members of the Company for their London and Paris guest appearances, the casts were decidedly second-rate almost throughout. Attendances were exceptionally poor, even at the performances of Schlagobers, which was the one novel feature of the Festival. As the season at the Staatsoper draws to an end, directors Strauss and Schalk are frequently absent, and the summary of its activities is perhaps even more meagre than in former seasons. The unexpectedly interpolated première of Umberto Giordano's Fedora was palpably intended more as a compliment—and not a voluntary one—to Maria Jeritz, who in this, as in most of her other parts, presented the customary display of thrilling and sensational acting and explosive vocal methods, amid an ensemble obviously limited to the functions of a 'supporting cast.' Neither Fedora nor Das Rosenmärtlein—the last-named is now hastily being studied at the Staatsoper as the last novelty of the season, in honour of the fiftieth birthday of Julius Bittner, its librettist and composer—were originally announced in the season's schedule of new works.

At the Volksoper, Dr. Fritz Stiedry, the new director who comes from the Berlin Staatsoper, has auspiciously inaugurated his régime with a dignified revival of Tristan and Isolde. Dr. Stiedry seems to be an energetic and enthusiastic worker, and is cherishing big plans for the Volksoper. His aim—which is thoroughly commendable—is to make the Volksoper, with its more modest means and possibilities, not a rival enterprise, but rather a supplementary theatre to the luxurious and more bourgeois Staatsoper, and to produce not the often-heard operas which form the repertoire there, but the many classical works unduly neglected by the Strauss-Schalk directorate. It is particularly good news that Dr. Stiedry proposes to open the doors of his theatre to young and, in many cases, untried operatic composers, especially those of the radical school, which is completely barred from the Staatsoper. The programme of novelties which he has outlined for the next two seasons includes Stravinsky's Rossignol, and operas by Bartók, Paul Hindemith, Ernst Krenek, Wilhelm Grosz, Busoni (Arlecchino), Hans Gal (The Holy Duck), Franz Schreker (The Distant Sound), and Hans Pfitzner (Christelstein). Such a scheme should, if it materialises, bid fair to make the Volksoper an operatic theatre of far more than local importance.

A BRUCKNER PREMIÈRE

Dr. Stiedry is one of the two new conductors who have recently been engaged for permanent Vienna posts. The other is Dirk Foch, a Dutch musician, who for several years has conducted at New York, and who will now direct the Konzertverein symphony concerts. His appointment follows a successful guest appearance with this orchestra. The advent of Foch definitely puts an end to the régime at the Konzertverein cycle of Ferdinand Löwe, the revered and aged conductor who retires after many years' service. His farewell programme—the ninth Symphony of Anton Bruckner, whose reputation Löwe has been creating and fostering for several decades—evoked a response that was in the nature of a spontaneous ovation from the Vienna public.

A hitherto unknown Bruckner Symphony recently had its first hearing anywhere at Klosterneuburg, a small and musically active city near Vienna, where Franz Moissl is doing highly creditable work with his Philharmonic Orchestra. The Symphony, in D minor, is a posthumous work, the manuscript of which is at the Municipal Museum at Linz (Austria), a city prominently connected with Bruckner's activities as an organist. The score bears the inscription, in Bruckner's autograph, 'This Symphony is not good, and is merely an attempt,' but the quality of the music by no means justifies such severe self-criticism. Only the third and fourth movements (the Scherzo and Finale) were performed, and while they are not Bruckner at his maturest and best, they clearly foreshadow and to an extent reveal his real greatness. The Scherzo, with a lovely violin theme, is very bright in colour—a country dance of the sort which the Austrians refer to as Gestrampter—and it has a beautiful Trio which is Schubertian in mood. The Finale is truly Brucknerian in its stern ruggedness and grandeur. The first and second movements (Allegro and Andante) are as yet unknown. Chronologically the work comes between Bruckner's first (1865) and second (1871) Symphonies.

A UNIQUE PERFORMANCE OF BEETHOVEN'S 'NINTH'

The centenary of the day on which Beethoven's Ninth Symphony was first produced—May 7, 1824—was commemorated by a notable performance at the Konzerthaus. Paul von Klenau, the Danish conductor who will next season make his début in London, gave us the unique experience of hearing the Symphony in its original form. The scoring was identical with Beethoven's original manuscript, all the alterations and additions of Wagner and Mahler being eradicated. The original tempi were also restored, which resulted in a rather unusually slow pace, particularly for the second movement. It is, of course, a matter of conjecture whether Beethoven would not have demanded considerably faster tempi had he foreseen the technical perfection and possibilities of modern wind instruments. At any rate, the performance was a highly interesting experiment, and a great credit to the interpretative powers of Paul von Klenau. The rest of the programme was identical with that of 1824, including apart from the Ninth, the Overture Die Weihe des Hauses and the Kyrie, Credo, and Agnus Dei from the Missa Solennis. The event was commemorated also by the unveiling of a memorial tablet on the house in the Ungargasse where the Ninth was completed during the winter of 1823-24.

INTERNATIONAL CHAMBER MUSIC

The Austrian section of the I.S.C.M. closed its season of monthly chamber music concerts with two extra programmes of which the first was devoted to Viennese exponents of modern music, viz., Josef Matthias Hauer, Anton Webern, Alban Berg, Egon Wellesz, Rudolf Réti, Paul A. Pisk, and Karl Horwitz. With the exception of Horwitz, these young composers are all radicals. Pisk earned the epithet 'romantic' by the five pianoforte pieces, Op. 7, and his songs, Op. 15, which were heard on another occasion. The second extra concert was devoted to composers of several nationalities, viz., an eclectic piece for pianoforte and string quartet, by Adolfo Salazar, entitled Arabia; a cycle of pianoforte pieces, Poems of the Sea, by Ernest Bloch, conceived in MacDowell's melodious manner, and decidedly one of the composer's weaker works; a Sonatina for flute and pianoforte by Darius Milhaud, with some strange Wagnerian elements; three strongly national Czech Soldiers' Songs by Ladislav Vycpalek; Deux Esquisses, for string quartet, by Ernesto Halffter-Escriche, a Portuguese composer (exceedingly dull items dominated by endless reiterations of one theme); and Stravinsky's superb Suite from L'Histoire d'un Soldat, for clarinet, violin, and pianoforte. The programmes of these concerts were on the whole not such as to convey a clear conception of current musical tendencies in contemporary international music. Probably it is impossible to offer such a survey within the limited time of two evenings. Withal, the impression prevailed that, apart from such men as Stravinsky and Milhaud, the most radical musical tendencies of the European moderns are to-day embodied in Arnold Schönberg and his Viennese disciples and followers.

PAUL BECHERT.

Obituary

We regret to record the death of HENRY HEATHCOTE STATHAM, on May 29. He was born at Liverpool on January 11, 1839, and the first thirty years of his life were spent in that city, where he practised as an architect. From the first, however, music drew him strongly. In the introduction to his book The Organ and its Position in Musical Art, he tells us that the organ had been the great passion of his life, and adds that while at school he often took a packet of sandwiches and spent the two hours between morning and afternoon lessons in practising the school organ—sometimes in weather so cold that he had to warm his fingers every ten minutes over the gas-jet! After leaving school he acted as organist at various churches, and did a good deal of recital work. He also became acquainted with Best, and for fifteen years there was hardly a week in which he did not attend the St. George's Hall recitals. The first real appreciation of that great player was written by Statham as an appendix to the book referred to above. Soon after coming to London, when about thirty years of age, he began a series of organ recitals at the Albert Hall on Sunday afternoons during May, June, and July, and continued them for several years. These recitals were voluntary; he counted himself 'well rewarded by the enjoyment.' There was no public announcement—'I had no desire to see my name in the papers . . . We commenced on the first Sunday in May with an audience of some fifteen hundred or so, we ended on the last Sunday in July with an audience of four thousand or five thousand.' For about fifteen years he was unpaid organist at St. Jude's, Whitechapel—Canon Barnett's Church. He was editor of The Builder for twenty-five years, and was until near the end of his life a prolific writer on a variety of subjects, chiefly those connected with architecture and music. His musical works comprise My thoughts on Music and Musicians (a book of about 500 pages), Form and Design in Music, The Organ and its Position in Musical Art, and What is Music? He also wrote a number of articles for Grove. For many years he was musical critic for the Edinburgh Review, and also contributed papers on the art to the Nineteenth Century. An accomplished artist in black and white, he exhibited from time to time at the Royal Academy. He lectured frequently, not only on the subject of his profession but also on French sculpture and poetry. He was a fine organ player, and had practically all Bach's organ works at his fingers' ends. His copies show registration schemes orchestral in style (probably owing to the influence of Best) and remarkable, in view of the fact that they date from fifty years ago, when Bach's organ works as a whole were far from being generally known, even among organists. Without doubt one of the most versatile and gifted men of his generation, he deserves to be remembered with honour and gratitude by musicians, and above all by those who have to do with his favourite instrument, the organ.

Photo by)

[Elliott & Fry

Answers to Correspondents

Questions must be of general musical interest. They must be stated simply and briefly, and if several are sent, each must be written on a separate slip. We cannot undertake to reply by post.

Q.—(1) Can you give me information about Beethoven's Scottish Dances? (2) What is the meaning of 'Storm' as applied to Liszt's Hungarian March?—J. J. B.

A.—(1) There are Ecossaises for pianoforte, and one for military band—all posthumous. Beethoven also arranged twenty-five Scotch songs for one and two voices and chorus, pianoforte, violin, and violoncello. (2) Liszt composed two pieces called Ungarischer Sturm-Marsch (Hungarian Storm-March). For once in a way the word 'Storm' in music has nothing to do with the weather. Liszt uses the term in its military sense—to storm or attack. So the pieces are battle marches.

Q.—Which is the correct edition of Bach's '48'? I have that of Hallé, and also the Köhler edition. In Prelude No. 26 Hallé marks some of the opening phrases staccato, but Köhler marks them legato. Which is right?—A.R.C.M. STUDENT.

A.—Both, and neither. Bach left very few marks of any kind, and editors rightly make good the deficiency by suggestions which the player may please himself about adopting. There is no officially 'correct' edition. Busoni's contains a wealth of annotation and suggestion—rather more than the average player will need. The best all-round edition known to us is that of Harold Brooke—convenient for eye and hand, correct in text, and with just enough in the way of phrasing, fingering, and other marks (Novello, in two books).

Q.—I have noticed that when my teacher [of pianoforte] plays, the position of his hands is different from mine; when I ask him the correct position he tells me not to worry. He complains that my wrists are stiff, but does not give me exercises to correct the fault; legato passages I always make jerky, and I do not know whether staccato should be played from wrist or fingers. In any case, I always strike the wrong notes in playing staccato. Perhaps there is a book of wrist studies that would help. Is it necessary to study rudiments and harmony at the same time as pianoforte, and if so, is class-teaching as satisfactory as individual teaching?—INQUISITIVE.

A.—Apparently your teacher is not doing his work. If he were ours we should make a change. Try the wrist studies in Franklin Taylor's Progressive Studies (Novello). Certainly you should be working at rudiments and harmony. Here class-work may be almost, if not quite, as good as individual teaching.

R. G.—(1) We do not give analyses of works. (2) The fact that the use of the pedal is not indicated is no guide. Such a piece as the Mendelssohn F minor Prelude would sound poor without it. There is scope for pedalling in practically all pianoforte music, even the earliest. But the simpler, earlier, and more polyphonic the music, the greater the need for discretion—which is another word for taste.

G. B.—Mason's Touch and Technique (Schirmer: Winthrop Rogers); Hanon's Pianiste Virtuoso, and the German edition of Beethoven's Sonatas may be had from Novello.

C. E. D.—In 'Gave thee life and bade thee feed,' 'bade' is pronounced as 'bad.'

E. C.—Your question is obscure. If it means that you want to know of an easier pianoforte arrangement of the Unfinished Symphony than that of Max Pauer, we cannot help you. Of course you find it 'complicated and awkward.' Orchestral works cannot be boiled down into milk for pianistic babes. Stick to 'straight' pianoforte music a little longer.

C. J.—We understand that Busoni is now at his home at Berlin. He is convalescent after his recent illness, but still weak; composing, but doing no concert work.

W. H. J.—The course of study you mention ought to be useful to you. But if you want to improve your mental hearing, with a view to being able mentally to read a full score, you can do much for yourself. Begin with the simplest of music. Try to hear it mentally, and check your effort by playing the passage on the pianoforte. Proceed from series of common chords, through the more usual discords, to chants and hymn-tunes, and so on to short, straightforward pieces and songs. At the same time, in listening to music, try to see in your mind's eye a copy of the passages played.

MUSICAL STUDENT.—Write to Dr. Fischer at Messrs. Curwen, 24, Berners Street, W.1., for particulars of the Dominions Artists' Club. We know of no club of the kind for English students.

G. B. S.—In bar 27 of Prelude in G major in Book II. of the '48,' play E D sharp C sharp D sharp for the turn.

J. L. V. H.—We should play the Beethoven Waltzes at paces varying from ♩ = 104 to ♩ = 138.

LAVENGRO.—For information about the copyright of any of Tennyson's poems inquire of Messrs. Macmillan.

J. T.—There is no lack of clarinet music of the kind you inquire about. Write to Novello's for a list. For clarinet instruction books try Kappey's Tutor and Fricke's Studies, both published by Boosey.

S. H. P.—Vocal score reading exercises by Daymond (two books) and Peppin (both Novello), and James Lyon (Stainer & Bell); Sawyer's Extemporization (Novello); Choir-Training books by Martin (Novello) and Richards (Joseph Williams); The Boy's Voice (Curwen); and Bates's Voice-Culture for Children (Novello). For the mechanical side of the organ: The Organ, by Thomas Elliston (Weekes), and the article in Grove.

C. J. S.—(1) Only the first two of Rheinberger's Organ Sonatas are available in cheap English editions. Keep your eye on the catalogues of William Reeves, Charing Cross Road, Harold Reeves, Shaftesbury Avenue, and Foyle, Charing Cross Road, for second-hand copies. (2) Stanford's music for Becket is still in MS., held by Messrs. Stainer & Bell. We understand that an organ arrangement of the Funeral March is in prospect.

D. H.—The term Rester in string music indicates that the performer should continue playing in the position already in use.

W. M.—Yes, as you point out, our too general answer to 'H. B.' on the subject of copyright ignored the possibility that a composer of a work published on December 31, 1859, might live for forty-five years and six months after the publication, in which case copyright in the work would exist under the old law on July 1, 1912, when the new law extended it to fifty years after the composer's death. The question that we were answering implied a composer defunct long before 1905. Copyright may be long-lived. If a composer born in or after July, 1805, lived to be a hundred all his works would be copyright until July, 1955, or some later date.

Information is wanted as to (a) compositions by Horace Dowell, bandmaster, 1st Batt. Cameronians; and (b) the title and publisher of a song opening:

'Let thy gold be cast in the furnace,
Thy red gold precious and bright.'

SPECIAL NOTICE.

To ensure insertion in their proper positions, Advertisements for the next issue should reach the Office, 160, Wardour Street, London, W.1, not later than TUESDAY, JULY 22 (FIRST POST).

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
Conductors and Conducting.—I. By William Wallace	593
A Commentary upon Mendelssohn ( conclud.d. ) By
Hubert J. Foss	595
Worrying about the Larynx. By H. J. Kimbell	598
Brahms: Some Thoughts towards a Re-valuation. By Richard Binns	599
Advertise Music! By M.-D. Calvocoressi	601
Ad Libitum. By 'Feste'	603
Erba, Urio, Stradella, and Handel. By P. Robinson	607
Debussy and Brahms. By Andrew de Ternant	608
The Exhibition of the Royal Academy of Arts. By
Arthur T. Froggatt	610
The Prague Festival. By Edwin Evans	611
Occasional Notes	612
William Baines (1899-1922)	614
Wireless Notes. By 'Caliban'	616
Music in the Foreign Press. By M.-D. Calvocoressi	617
New Music	618
The Musician's Bookshelf	621
Gramophone Notes. By 'Discus'	631
The 'Why and Wherefore' of the Rules of Harmony.
By R. T. Nicholson	633
Church and Organ Music	636
Royal College of Organists	636
Letters to the Editor	637
Sharps and Flats	642
The Amateurs' Exchange	642
Royal Academy of Music	642
Royal College of Music	643
Trinity College of Music	643
University College of North Wales	643
Edward FitzGerald: Musician. By Llewelyn C.
Lloyd	643
'Violin Methods: Old and New'	645
London Concerts	646
Opera in London	647
Music at the Wembley Exhibition	649
Music in the Bristol Pageant at Wembley	650
Competition Festival Record	650
Music in the Provinces	651
British Music at Belgrade	652
Music in Ireland	652
Musical Notes from Abroad	652
Obituary	654
Answers to Correspondents	655

MUSIC.

'How excellent is Thy mercy.' Anthem for Tenor Solo and Chorus, from 'Thy mercy, O Lord.' By GEORGE GARRETT. 625

EXTRA SUPPLEMENT given with this Number

'The Eternal God is thy Refuge.' Anthem for Festival or General Use. By John E. West.

DURING THE LAST MONTH.

Published by NOVELLO & CO., LIMITED.

B BROWNING, S.—Sevenfold Amen. 1½d.

B BYNG, G. W.—"Pageant of Empire." Song. 2s.

F FARJEON, H.—"Salvator Mundi" ("Come unto Him, all ye who weep"). Trio for S.S.A. (No. 499, Novello's Trios, &c., for Female Voices.) 3d.

G GARRETT, G. M.—"How excellent is Thy mercy." Anthem for Tenor Solo and Chorus, from "Thy mercy, O Lord." (No. 977, The Musical Times.) 2d.

H HARNACK, F. W.—Vesper Hymn ("Praise to God for the gift of day"). 1½d.

P PARRY, C. H. H.—"Dear Lord, and Father of Man-kind." Hymn (No. 1121, Novello's Parish Choir Book). 1½d.

DURING THE LAST MONTH—continued.

POWELL, J. BADEN.—"Communion for the Seasons." Words only. 4s. 6d. per 100.

SCHOOL MUSIC REVIEW, No. 385, contains the following music in both notations.—"Three doughtie men." Composed by W. W. Pearson. Arranged as a Two-part Song for Boys' Voices. 2d.

SCHOOL SONGS. Published in two forms. A. Voice Parts in Staff and Tonic Sol-fa Notations, with Piano-forte Accompaniment (8vo). B. Voice Parts only, in Tonic Sol-fa Notation. A. B.

No. 1236. "The Shepherd's Home. Two-part Song. GEORGE RATHBONE — 3d.

No. 1308. "Dream Song." Two-part Song. GEORGE RATHBONE 4d. —

No. 1363. "The Elf and the Dormouse." Unison Song with Actions. W. McNAUGHT 4d. —

No. 1378. "Star Time." Unison Song. ALEC ROWLEY 2d. —

TONIC SOL-FA PUBLICATIONS:

"Hark! the Song of Jubilee." Unaccompanied Anthem. For S.A.T.B. R. WALKER ROBSON 3d.

PUBLISHED FOR

THE H. W. GRAY CO., NEW YORK.

C CLOKEY, J. W.—"Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis" in G. 15 cents (8d.).

G GENET, L. M.—"Blow, bugle, blow." Part-song for T.T.B.B. 15 cents (8d.).

L LESHURE, J.—"Benedictus es Domine" in E flat. 15 cents (8d.).

S SILBY, R. M.—"The Frogs of Windham." Humorous Part-song for T.T.B.B. 20 cents (1s.).

CORRESPONDENCE or ORAL COURSES

In preparation of all PAPER WORK required for Mus. B., R.C.O., R.A.M., R.C.M., and T.C.L. Examinations.

Also Courses of preparation for the AURAL TESTS of the above-named Examinations.

GEO. H. SKAER, Mus.B., DUNELM., 50, Park Road, Wandsworth, S.W.18.

To PIANISTS, ORGANISTS, VIOLINISTS, ETC.

The "Simplex" Pocket Finger Trainer (Registered).

A MOST EFFICIENT APPLIANCE FOR INCREASING STRETCH, INDEPENDENCE, FLEXIBILITY, AND STRENGTH OF FINGERS. Post free 1s. 6d., with full instructions.

DELAHAYE & CO., 16, SOUTHWARK STREET, LONDON BRIDGE.

THE MUSICAL TIMES

CHARGES FOR ADVERTISEMENTS:—

					£	s.	d.
Two Lines	...	...	...	...	0	3	0
Three Lines	...	...	...	...	0	3	4
For every additional Line	...	...	...	...	0	0	10
One inch (displayed)	...	...	...	...	0	10	0
Half a Column	...	...	...	...	2	0	0
A Column	...	...	...	...	4	0	0
A Page	...	...	...	...	7	10	0

Special Pages (Cover, &c.) by arrangement.

A remittance should be sent with every Advertisement.

PIANO PEDALS, with Octave Coupler

This wonderful invention supersedes all Piano Pedals, and is a Master Patent.

St. George's Hall, Liverpool,
9th April, 1921.

"The simplicity of the attachment, and the clever sixteen-feet, eight-feet, or both combined, 'OPTIONAL OCTAVE' contrivance, astonished me.

"I was delighted with the Pedal touch and with the variety in that touch, which your Attachment makes possible. It is very responsive to the movements of the feet, and is reliable."

HERBERT F. ELLINGFORD, Mus. Bac., Oxon., F.R.C.O.

Terms: 17 guineas net ash, or monthly payments made.

Write for Lists, Prices, and Clients' Opinions, and References to
THE MALKIN PATENT PEDAL CO., LTD.,
NEWCASTLE-UNDER-LYME.

London address: 11, Ashlake Road, Streatham, S.W.16.

U.S.A.—FOR SALE.—The sole rights to manufacture, import, or sell in the United States.

GLASTONBURY FESTIVAL.

August 2-16.—SUMMER SCHOOL. "THE ARTS OF THE MIDDLE AGES."

LECTURERS: G. K. CHESTERTON, H. J. CHAYTOR, LAURENCE HOUSMAN, WILLIAM POEL, WALTER RAYMOND, and SIR RICHARD TERRY.

August 19-30.—DRAMATIC PERFORMANCES.

WORKS: THE QUEEN OF CORNWALL, by THOMAS HARDY. Newly set as a music-drama by RUTLAND BOUGHTON. Produced by the Composer.
SIX LITTLE PLAYS OF ST. FRANCIS, by LAURENCE HOUSMAN, with incidental music by RUTLAND BOUGHTON. Produced by the Author.

ARTISTS: Gladys Fisher, Elena Geominne, Arna Heni, Zillah Hobart, Dorothy Holloway, Christina Walshe, Sumner Austin, Leslie Bennett, Rutland Boughton, Julius Harrison, Charles Hedges, George Holloway, Frank Mullings, Leyland White, Frederick Woodhouse.

For free programme, apply to the Director,
FESTIVAL SCHOOL, GLASTONBURY.

L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., AURAL TESTS. Special important paper. Success assured. This paper gives details how to work. Send 4s. 6d. to "Aural Tests," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

ESSAY.—A.R.C.O., on "English Folk-Song and Dance." Excellent Series of Six Model Essays—valuable hints. Secure Success. Send 4s. 6d. to "Essays," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

SINGING.—A long-felt want. Very many lessons saved by SPECIAL NEW PAPER. Students taught how to obtain the full singing voice. Enclose P.O. 5s. to "Singing," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

ORGANIST-CHOIRMASTER, A.R.C.O., L.R.A.M., open to deputize in or near London, week-days or Sundays, day-time or evening. Wide experience of best Church music. First-class choir-trainer. Percy Rendell, "Kenmore," Old Park Villas, Palmers Green, N.13.

EXPERIENCED TEACHER (L.R.A.M.) wishes to BUY good TEACHING CONNECTION. "A.R.C.M.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

ORGANIST (experienced) desires Engagements as DEPUTY. Anglican or Free Church Services. In or near London. For terms, apply, A. J. Sindall, 56, Manor Road, Brockley, S.E.4.

MUSICIANS and OTHERS.—Supplement your income by PIANO TUNING. Cawson's Postal Instruction is equal to personal tuition. No previous musical knowledge required. Write, Bankfield House, 117, Armley Road, Leeds.

CONCERT PIANIST, English and Continental Training, desites POST as TEACHER in School, College, or Conservatorium, September, London or Kent preferred. Highest references. Reply, "C. P.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

THAME, OXON. ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER WANTED by September 1st, if possible, but could wait. Salary £80. Apply, with testimonials, to the Vicar.

MUSICAL CONNECTION for SALE.—Piano-forte, Vocal, &c. Address, "J. V. M.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

ALTO WANTED for St. Peter's, Bayswater. £20 per annum. Good reader. Address, Leonard Butler, 28, St. Stephen's Avenue, Ealing, W.13.

Dedicated to SIR JOHN JAMES BADDELEY.

THE OLD CRYES OF LONDON

BY

SIR FREDERICK BRIDGE

WITH NUMEROUS ILLUSTRATIONS AND MUSICAL EXAMPLES
AND A COLOURED FRONTISPIECE.

Eighty-Eight Pages, Crown 4to ... .. Price Seven Shillings net.

THE MORNING POST: "His book has a delightful antiquarian flavour, increased by its quaint illustrations, and the use of the old-style music type."

THE TIMES: "Under the title 'The Old Cryes of London' Sir Frederick Bridge has now written, and Messrs. Novello have published, a delightful little volume. The best thing in this book is the author; and the next best things are the illustrations."

ARMY, NAVY, AND AIR FORCE GAZETTE: "A very unusually attractive book. It certainly forms a most welcome contribution to musical history."

THE REFEREE: "This contains a mine of antiquarian lore, reproductions of old woodcuts, and musical examples."

THE GUARDIAN: "Those individuals who were so unfortunate as to miss Sir Frederick Bridge's delightful lectures in the City on 'The Old Cryes of London' will derive both consolation and entertainment from this excellent volume."

THE CHRISTIAN WORLD: "This delightful little volume . . . an excellent piece of genial antiquarianism, musical, literary, and historical."

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

HARVEST FESTIVAL MUSIC.

CANTATAS.

A GOLDEN HARVEST

FOR TENOR AND BASS SOLI AND CHORUS
WITH HYMNS TO BE SUNG BY THE CONGREGATION

THE WORDS AND HYMNS SELECTED AND WRITTEN BY

H. KNIGHT

THE MUSIC BY

THOMAS ADAMS.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

Tonic Sol-fa, 1s.; Words only, 9s. 6d. per 100.

THE RAINBOW OF PEACE

FOR TENOR AND BASS SOLI, CHORUS, AND ORGAN

THE MUSIC BY

THOMAS ADAMS.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

Words only, 9s. 6d. per 100.

HARVEST-TIDE

FOR TENOR AND BASS SOLI, CHORUS, AND ORGAN
OR SMALL ORCHESTRA

THE MUSIC BY

HUGH BLAIR.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence; Tonic Sol-fa, One Shilling.

Words only, 6s. 6d. per 100.

Full Score and Orchestral Parts can be hired.

HARVEST CANTATA

FOR CHORUS, SEMI-CHORUS, AND ORGAN.

THE WORDS SELECTED AND WRITTEN BY

J. F. WALLER

THE MUSIC BY

G. M. GARRETT.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

Tonic Sol-fa, 8d. Words only, 6s. 6d. per 100; or 3d. each with Music to the Hymns. Full Score and Orchestral Parts can be hired.

RUTH

FOR SOPRANO, CONTRALTO, AND BASS SOLI AND CHORUS

THE WORDS BY

E. OXENFORD

THE MUSIC BY

ALFRED R. GAUL.

Price Three Shillings; Paper boards, Four Shillings.

Tonic Sol-fa, 1s. Choruses only, 1s. 6d. Book of Words, 6s. 6d. per 100.
Full Score and Orchestral parts can be hired.

HARVEST CANTATA

FOR SOPRANO (OR TENOR) AND CONTRALTO (OR BARITONE) SOLI AND CHORUS

THE WORDS BY

R. D. BETJEMANN

THE MUSIC BY

JULIUS HARRISON.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

Tonic Sol-fa, 1s.; Words only, 6s. 6d. per 100.

SONG OF THANKSGIVING

FOR SOPRANO, TENOR, AND BASS (OR CONTRALTO)
SOLI AND CHORUS.

WITH HYMNS TO BE SUNG BY THE CONGREGATION

THE WORDS WRITTEN AND ARRANGED BY

S. WENSLEY

THE MUSIC BY

J. H. MAUNDER.

Price Two Shillings and Sixpence;

Paper boards, Three Shillings and Sixpence.

Tonic Sol-fa, 1s.; Words only, 12s. 6d. per 100;

String Parts, price 13s. 6d.; Wind Parts, 21s. 5d.; Full Score, MS.

THE JUBILEE CANTATA

FOR SOLO VOICES, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA

THE MUSIC BY

C. M. WEBER.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

Paper boards, Two Shillings and Sixpence.

Words only, 9s. 6d. per 100.

String Parts, 12s.; Wind Parts, 9s. 8d.; Full Score on hire.

SEED-TIME AND HARVEST

FOR SOPRANO AND TENOR SOLI AND CHORUS

THE MUSIC BY

JOHN E. WEST.

Price Three Shillings. Tonic Sol-fa, 1s. 6d.

Words only, 6s. 6d. per 100; or 3d. each with Music to the Hymns.

Orchestral Parts can be hired.

A HARVEST SONG

FOR SOPRANO SOLO AND CHORUS

THE WORDS BY

J. BENNETT.

THE MUSIC BY

C. LEE WILLIAMS.

Price Two Shillings and Sixpence.

Words only, 6s. 6d. per 100.

String Parts, 9s. 9d.; Full Score and Wind Parts, MS.

HYMNS AND CAROLS.

BARNBY, J.—Come, ye thankful people, come ... ..	1½d.
Harvest-tide thanksgiving, The. (Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d.) ... ..	2d.
Words only, per 100	2s.
Let all our brethren join in one ... ..	1½d.
Words only, per 100	3s.
Lord of the harvest, Thee we hail (Two Versions) each	3d.
O Lord of heaven and earth and sea ... ..	1½d.
Praise, O praise, our God and King ... ..	3d.
Sing to the Lord a joyful song ... ..	3d.
Sower went forth sowing, The. (Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d.) ... ..	2d.
BUNNETT, ED.—Sing to the Lord a joyful song ... ..	1½d.
CRAMENT, J. M.—Sowing and reaping (Carol) ... ..	2d.
Words only, per 100	2s.
GILBERT, B.—Come, ye thankful people, come ... ..	1½d.

HARVEY, W. C.—We thank Thee Lord for this fair earth (Children's voices) (Staff and Sol-fa Notations) ... ..	1½d.
HERVEY, F. A. J.—Make melody within your hearts (Carol)	2d.
LEE, T.—King and Ruler of Creation ... ..	4d.
LOWE, A.—Holy is the seed-time (Carol) ... ..	2d.
Words only, per 100	3s.
MAUNDER, J. H.—Harvest Hymn of praise, A. (Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d.) ... ..	3d.
Words only, per 100	3s.
Joy of Harvest, The. (Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d.) ... ..	3d.
Words only, per 100	3s.
STIRLING, E.—Now Autumn strews on every plain ... ..	2d.
TOZER, F.—Lord of the rich and golden grain ... ..	3d.
Words only, per 100	3s.
TWELVE HYMNS selected from The Hymnary ... ..	1½d.

NOVELLO'S HARVEST ANTHEMS.

SELECTED LIST.

LET THE PEOPLE PRAISE THEE. By PERCY E. FLETCHER.

Price Twopence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

THOMAS ADAMS

ALL THY WORKS PRAISE THEE

Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Threepence.

IT IS A GOOD THING TO GIVE THANKS

Price Twopence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

W. G. ALCOCK

GIVE EAR, O YE HEAVENS

Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

E. C. BAIRSTOW

I WILL GREATLY REJOICE

Price Fourpence.

J. BARNBY

THE EYES OF ALL WAIT UPON THEE

Price Twopence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

HUGH BLAIR

OH, BRING TO THE LORD

Price Fourpence.

A. HERBERT BREWER

LET THE PEOPLE PRAISE THEE

Price Twopence.

EDWARD BUNNETT

BLESSED BE THOU, LORD GOD

Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

O CLAP YOUR HANDS

Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

PERCY C. BUCK

GOD BE MERCIFUL UNTO US

For Boys' Voices.
Price Fourpence.

H. A. CHAMBERS

IF YE WALK IN MY STATUTES

Price Twopence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

EDWARD ELGAR

FEAR NOT, O LAND

Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Threepence.

MYLES B. FOSTER

PRAISE WAITETH FOR THEE, O GOD

Price Twopence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

ALFRED R. GAUL

O BE JOYFUL IN THE LORD

Price Twopence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

A. M. GOODHART

LET US NOW FEAR THE LORD

Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Threepence.

CUTHBERT HARRIS

AND GOD SAID

Price Twopence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

SING A SONG OF PRAISE

Price Twopence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

ALFRED HOLLINS

GOD THE ALL-FATHERLY

Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Threepence.

ALBERT LOWE

THE EARTH IS THE LORD'S

Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Threepence.

ARTHUR W. MARCHANT

I WILL MAGNIFY THEE

Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

GEORGE C. MARTIN

THUS SAITH THE LORD GOD

Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Threepence.

E. W. NAYLOR

I WILL CAUSE THE SHOWER

Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

J. VARLEY ROBERTS

BLESS THE LORD THY GOD

Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

I WILL MAGNIFY THEE

Price Fourpence.

BRUCE STEANE

COME, YE THANKFUL PEOPLE, COME

Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

HERBERT W. WAREING

THE LORD GOD PLANTED A GARDEN

Price Twopence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

HAROLD E. WATTS

THE GOD OF ABRAHAM PRAISE

Price Twopence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

JOHN E. WEST

PRAISE TO GOD, IMMORTAL PRAISE

Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

FATHER OF MERCIES, GOD OF LOVE

Arranged for Boys' or Female Voices.
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Threepence.

W. WOLSTENHOLME

O THAT MEN WOULD PRAISE THE LORD

Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

JUST PUBLISHED.

CHORALES

HARMONIZED BY

JOHANN SEBASTIAN BACH

COLLECTED AND ARRANGED IN MELODIC ORDER

BY

H. ELLIOT BUTTON.

This Collection of Chorales harmonized by Bach contains, it is believed, all those that he arranged for voices. It includes also an Index by means of which any Chorale can easily be found if the first few notes of the melody are known.

Price ... .. Cloth, Ten Shillings and Sixpence.

SOME PRESS OPINIONS.

DAILY TELEGRAPH.

"The task of making this noble collection has been undertaken by Mr. H. Elliot Button, who has made the volume particularly useful to organists and choirmasters by arranging the chorales in melodic order and providing an ingenious Melodic Index by means of which a particular Chorale may be found in a moment. Organists, indeed, may find themselves in clover by exploring the latest publications of this house."

BIRMINGHAM POST.

"The compiler of this volume is H. Elliot Button, who has made an ingenious musical index based on the first note of each melody. The system also allows of all the harmonizations of a melody being kept together, and the student of Bach will find this an extremely interesting volume."

DAILY MAIL.

"Mr. H. Elliot Button is a hard and conscientious worker on behalf of music. His research work is invaluable, and his latest work of compilation has resulted in the collection of 'Chorales Harmonized by Johann Sebastian Bach' which appears to be the first complete and comprehensive edition in one volume. . . . The Melodic Index which Mr. Button has introduced, in addition to the usual indices, shows remarkable ingenuity. By recourse to this unique invention no difficulty is experienced in immediately satisfying one's requirements. . . . There is evidence of great painstaking labour in this work, and apart from its value as a work of reference, the collection is redolent of melodic and harmonic wealth which will be found useful by pianists and organists for many and varied purposes."

YORKSHIRE POST.

"The chorales are most clearly printed on good paper, and the book is one that will commend itself to all church organists."

ABERDEEN PRESS AND JOURNAL.

"A complete and reliable collection of chorales harmonized by Bach has long been needed. It now appears in a handsome edition published by Novello. No longer need the student laboriously plough through the oratorios, the cantatas, and the motets in search of the various harmonizations of this or that chorale. He will find them all in Mr. Button's book, together with those chorales used by Bach in works no longer extant, but which have been accepted as authentic upon the evidence of Bach's greatest son. . . . The present volume is invaluable; to the student a real boon, and a source of endless pleasure."

SUNDAY MERCURY.

Messrs. Novello have given to the world a wonderful book. J. S. Bach was, is, and ever will remain the most wonderful of all the great masters. The book is collected and arranged in melodic order by H. Elliot Button, who has indeed done the work with competence and amazing thoroughness."

YORKSHIRE HERALD.

"The collection is admirably arranged; a chronological index of titles, an ingenious melodic index, invented by the author, combined with excellent type and binding make it a handsome volume."

TABLET.

"Mr. Elliot Button has become our benefactor in giving us a fine folio edition of the Bach chorales on a very convenient plan. The melodic index is so contrived that even when you have completely forgotten the words of a particular chorale it is soon hunted down. This well-printed volume is handsomely bound in cloth gilt."

CHURCH TIMES.

"The Bach lover will be delighted to add this fine compilation to his music library."

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

"Such settings as these cannot do otherwise than tend to popularise the Church Service."—Musical Standard, June 6th, 1891.

"Good, effective, easy, and dignified."—Musical Times, April 1, 1891.

"Admirably adapted to meet the requirements of the majority of choirs and congregations." "Deserve extensive recognition and use."—Musical News, September 4 and 25, 1891.

Also recommended by the Guardian, Church Times, &c., &c.

POPULAR CHURCH MUSIC

BY

J. H. MAUNDER

HARVEST ANTHEMS.

	Staff Notation.	Tonic Sol-fa.
Sing to the Lord of Harvest ... ..	4d.	3d.
While the earth remaineth ... ..	4d.	3d.
Blessed be the Name of the Lord ... ..	4d.	3d.

SERVICES.

SERVICE IN G ... ..	2s.	1s. 4d.
---------------------	-----	---------

Or, separately:—

Te Deum ... ..	4d.	3d.
Benedicite, omnia Opera ... ..	3d.	3d.
Benedictus ... ..	3d.	3d.
Jubilate ... ..	4d.	3d.
Office for the Holy Communion ... ..	10d.	8d.
Pater Noster from the above ... ..	3d.	3d.
Amen ditto ... ..	1½d.	1½d.
Magnificat and Nunc dimittis ... ..	4d.	3d.

SERVICE IN CHANT FORM (No. 1) ... ..	1s. 4d.	10d.
--------------------------------------	---------	------

Or, separately:—

Te Deum, &c., with Kyrie ... ..	4d.	3d.
Office for the Holy Communion ... ..	8d.	6d.
Magnificat and Nunc dimittis ... ..	4d.	3d.

Te Deum in B flat ... ..	4d.	3d.
--------------------------	-----	-----

Magnificat and Nunc dimittis in C (partly Unison) ... ..	4d.	2d.
--	-----	-----

Magnificat and Nunc dimittis in D ... ..	4d.	3d.
--	-----	-----

ORGAN.

Voix Seraphique (for Recitals) ... ..	2s. 6d.	—
---------------------------------------	---------	---

CHURCH CANTATA.

Penitence, Pardon, and Peace (for general use) ... ..	2s.	1s. 4d.
---	-----	---------

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

SEVENTH AND REVISED EDITION.

A HANDBOOK

OF

EXAMINATIONS IN MUSIC

CONTAINING

600 QUESTIONS WITH ANSWERS

BY

ERNEST A. DICKS,

Fellow of the Royal College of Organists.

PREFACE TO THE SEVENTH EDITION.

Through the kindness of Dr. E. H. Turpin the seventh edition of the Handbook of Examinations in Music includes the latest type of Papers set by Trinity College of Music, London, in their scheme of Local Examinations in Musical Knowledge.

The work will also be found to have been considerably enlarged by the addition of fifty specimen questions, with answers. They have been designed for the most part after the manner of those set in the Theory Paper for the L.R.A.M. Diploma, and also that required by candidates for the Higher Practical Examinations held by Trinity College of Music, London. The author earnestly hopes that these additions will considerably enhance the value of the Handbook, and render it increasingly helpful to students.

E. A. D.

Price, cloth, Five Shillings and Sixpence.

THE QUESTIONS (separately),

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JOSEPH WILLIAMS LIMITED.

THE

ORGAN ACCOMPANIMENT OF THE CHURCH SERVICES.

to which is added an Appendix consisting of a short sketch of every Psalm in the Psalter, considered from the point of view of the accompanist, by

H. W. RICHARDS.

Paper Covers, 3s. 6d. net. Cloth Boards, 5s. net.

CHURCH CHOIR TRAINING.

BY

H. W. RICHARDS.

"All Organists and Choirmasters should read this book by such an authority as Dr. Richards."

Paper Covers, 3s. net. Cloth Boards, 5s. net.

SIX SONATAS FOR THE ORGAN.

BY

FELIX MENDELSSOHN-BARTHOLDY.

New Edition, complete in one Volume, 7s. 6d. net.

JOSEPH WILLIAMS, LIMITED,

32, GREAT PORTLAND STREET, LONDON, W.1

A VALUABLE BOOK FOR TEACHERS AND STUDENTS.

TECHNIQUE

AND

EXPRESSION

IN

PIANOFORTE PLAYING

BY

FRANKLIN TAYLOR.

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

In the course of my experience as a teacher of the pianoforte, an experience extending over many years, certain ideas have from time to time suggested themselves to me which have proved useful—to myself, as enabling me to express more clearly that which I desired my pupils to understand, and to my pupils, as tending to facilitate their comprehension of the various difficulties they have had to encounter, at the same time leading them to perceive the most practical means of overcoming them, and thus accelerating their general rate of progress.

These suggestions relate to both the mechanical and intellectual sides of the study of pianoforte-playing, or briefly, to Technique and Expression, the chief matters implied by the first of these terms being the production of various qualities of tone, the choice of suitable fingering, and the best methods of attacking certain difficulties; while the second, which may perhaps be more aptly designated the means of expression, includes rhythm, phrasing, variety and gradation of tone, the use of the pedals, et cetera.

WITH NUMEROUS MUSICAL EXAMPLES FROM THE WORKS OF THE GREAT MASTERS.

PRICE, CLOTH GILT, SEVEN SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE NET.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

COMPETITION FESTIVAL MUSIC

PUBLISHED BY NOVELLO & CO., LTD.

VIOLIN SOLOS WITH PIANOFORTE ACCOMPANIMENT.

	s. d.		s. d.
BREWER, A. H. Auf Wiedersehen ... ..	3 0	MacCUNN, H. Romance in G ... ..	3 0
CARSE, A. Suite in four movements ... ..	4 0	MACKENZIE, A. C. Benedictus ... ..	3 0
COLERIDGE-TAYLOR, S. Ballade in D minor ... ..	3 0	— Distant Chimes (Op. 89) ... ..	3 0
— Four Characteristic Waltzes (Op. 22) ... ..	4 6	— Saltarello ... ..	3 0
COWEN, F. H. Minuet d'Amour ... ..	3 0	— Zingaresca (Op. 37, No. 1) ... ..	3 0
DAVIES, H. WALFORD. Solemn Melody ... ..	2 3	MARKS, J. C. Rêverie ... ..	3 0
ELGAR, E. Chanson de Matin (Op. 15, No. 1) ... ..	3 0	NESVERA, J. Berceuse Bohémienne ... ..	1 6
— Chanson de Nuit (Op. 15, No. 2) ... ..	2 3	NEWTON, E. Eight Easy Melodies ... ..	4 6
— Mazurka (Op. 10, No. 1) ... ..	3 0	PARRY, C. H. H. Bourrée (Suite in F, Lady Radnor's Suite) ... ..	2 3
GERMAN, E. Bourrée and Gigue (Much Ado About Nothing) ... ..	4 0	— Capriccioso (Suite in D) ... ..	2 3
— Pavane (Romeo and Juliet) ... ..	3 0	— Twelve Short Pieces, in 3 sets ... ..	each set 4 0
— Three Dances (Henry VIII.) ... ..	4 6	RAFF, Cavatina ... ..	1 6
GOUNOD. Judex from "Mors et Vita" ... ..	3 0	REED, W. H. A la Campagne ... ..	3 0
HAYNES, BATTISON. Idyll ... ..	3 0	SCHUMANN. Träumerei ... ..	1 6
HOLBROOKE, J. Souvenir de Printemps (Op. 23, No. 6) ... ..	3 0	SITT, H. Bunte Blätter (twelve easy pieces, in 4 books) ... ..	each book 3 0
IRELAND, J. Bagatelle ... ..	3 0	WARNER, H. W. Elegie ... ..	2 3
LEMARE, E. H. Andantino ... ..	3 0	WOLSTENHOLME, W. Allegretto ... ..	2 3
LLOYD, C. H. Six Easy Pieces ... ..	4 6

PIANOFORTE SOLOS.

	s. d.		s. d.
ARENSKY, A. Prelude in F minor (Op. 42, No. 1) ... ..	3 0	LANGE, G. Two Hungarian Dances (Op. 266):
— Romance in A flat (Op. 42, No. 2) ... ..	3 0	1. Isteni Czárdás ... ..	2 3
BACH, Bourrée in C ... ..	2 3	2. Rozsabokar Czárdás ... ..	2 3
— Gavotte in B minor from Violin Sonata (Saint-Saëns) ... ..	2 0	MENDELSSOHN. Perpetuum mobile (Op. 119) ... ..	3 0
BEETHOVEN. Andante in F (Klindworth) ... ..	3 0	— Prelude and Fugue in E minor (Klindworth) ... ..	3 0
— Two Rondos (Op. 51, No. 1 in C, No. 2 in G) (Klindworth) ... ..	3 0	— Scherzo in G minor from Octet (Op. 20) (Kihl) ... ..	3 0
COLERIDGE-TAYLOR, S. Valse de la Reine ... ..	2 3	RUBINSTEIN. Barcarolle (Op. 30) ... ..	2 3
DALCROZE, JACQUES. Four Characteristic Dances ... ..	3 0	— Melody in F ... ..	1 6
ESIPOFF, S. Ballade. G minor ... ..	3 0	SAINT-SAËNS. Gavotte in C minor ... ..	2 3
— Cantique d'Amour ... ..	3 0	— Mazurka in G minor ... ..	3 0
FLETCHER, PERCY E. Valse Lyrique ("Smile of Spring") ... ..	2 3	SCHUBERT. Impromptu in B flat (Klindworth) ... ..	3 0
HANDEL. Aria con Variazioni ("The Harmonious Blacksmith") (Klindworth) ... ..	2 3	SCHUMANN. Arabesque in C major (Op. 18) ... ..	1 6
— Fugue in E minor (Klindworth) ... ..	2 3	— Three Romances (Op. 28) ... ..	1 6
HAYDN. Andante con Variations in F minor (Klindworth) ... ..	3 0	SCOTT-BAKER, H. Pantomime ... ..	3 0
HENSELT, A. Si oiseau j'étais, A toi je volerais! (Op. 2, No. 5) (Pachmann) ... ..	2 3	SPINDLER, F. Husarenritt (Op. 140) ... ..	3 0
— Wiegenlied (Op. 45) (Chanson de Berceau) (Pachmann) ... ..	2 3	STRELEZKI. Miniature ... ..	2 3
HOFMANN, H. From Golden Days (Op. 34, No. 3) ... ..	1 6	— Valse Impromptu ... ..	2 3
— Puck (Op. 37, No. 9) ... ..	2 3	TSCHAIKOWSKY. Marche Militaire ... ..	3 0
HUMMEL, J. N. Rondo in E flat (Op. 11) (Klindworth) ... ..	3 0	— Valse Scherzo in A major ... ..	5 0
— Rondo in B minor (Op. 109) (Klindworth) ... ..	3 0	WEBER. Rondo brillant (E flat) (Op. 62) (Klindworth) ... ..	3 0
		WEBSTER, ERIC. Vignettes (Three Pieces) ... ..	3 0
		WENDT, T. Cantique d'Amour ... ..	2 3
		WEST, A. H. Toccata ... ..	3 0

SONGS.

SOPRANO.		s. d.	TENOR.		s. d.
DVORÁK. Invocation ... ..	...	2 0	FARRAR, E. O Mistress Mine ... ..	...	2 0
ELGAR, E. Oh soft was the song ... ..	...	2 0	MACKENZIE, A. C. While my lady sleepeth ... ..	...	1 6
FARRAR, E. Brittany ... ..	...	1 6	PARRY, C. H. H. God breaketh the battle ... ..	...	2 0
MACKENZIE, A. C. Cross and Crown ... ..	...	2 0	SOMERVILLE, R. Invocation to the Dawn ... ..	...	2 0
PURCELL. Evening Hymn ... ..	...	2 0	WAGNER. Walter's Prize Song ... ..	...	2 0
CONTRALTO.			BASS.
COLERIDGE-TAYLOR, S. Soul's Expression ... ..	...	4 0	BENEDICT. Rage, thou angry storm ... ..	...	2 0
DVORÁK. Inflammatus ... ..	...	2 0	DALE, B. J. O mistress mine ... ..	...	2 0
ELGAR, E. A child asleep ... ..	...	2 0	GREENE, M. Like the young God of wine ... ..	...	2 0
GLUCK. Thou art gone, alas, for ever ... ..	...	2 0	HARTY, HAMILTON. Homeward ... ..	...	2 0
PARRY, C. H. H. Ballad of Meshullemeth ... ..	...	2 0	SMYTH, E. M. Chryssilla ... ..	...	2 0

Specimens of every kind of music will be forwarded on application. To ensure a satisfactory selection, the Syllabus of the last Festival should accompany the request.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

COMPETITION FESTIVAL MUSIC

PUBLISHED BY NOVELLO & CO., LTD.

MIXED VOICES.

BAIRSTOW, E. C. Dawn of Song, The ... ..	4d.	McEWEN, J. B. Let me the canakin clink ... ..	6d.
BANTOCK, GRANVILLE. Awake, awake ... ..	4d.	Links o' love, The... ..	2d.
Grass of Parnassus ... ..	4d.	PARRY, C. H. H. Music, when soft voices die ... ..	3d.
On Himalay... ..	4d.	My delight and thy delight ... ..	4d.
BRAHMS. Dirge of Darthula, The (Op. 42, No. 3) ... ..	6d.	Sweet day, so cool... ..	3d.
COLERIDGE-TAYLOR. Evening Star, The ... ..	2d.	There rolls the deep ... ..	3d.
Lee Shore, The ... ..	4d.	REED, W. H. My lady fell a-sighing ... ..	4d.
CORNELIUS, P. Hero's rest (Op. 19) ... ..	4d.	SHAW, GEOFFREY. Who would true valour see ... ..	4d.
O death! thou art the tranquil night (Op. 11, No. 1) ... ..	6d.	STANFORD, C. V. Corydon, arise ... ..	4d.
ELGAR, E. After many a dusty mile (arr.) ... ..	4d.	Phœbe ... ..	4d.
Death on the hills ... ..	8d.	SULLIVAN, A. When love and beauty ... ..	8d.
Feasting I watch (arr.) ... ..	4d.	WALLTHEW, R. H. Sleep... ..	2d.
Go, song of mine ... ..	8d.	WEST, JOHN E. How eloquent ... ..	4d.
Shower, The ... ..	6d.	Woodmen, shepherds, come away ... ..	4d.
FLETCHER, PERCY E. Folly's Song ... ..	4d.	WILLIAMS, C. LEE. Song of the Pedlar ... ..	4d.
GARDINER, H. BALFOUR. Cargoes ... ..	4d.	WILLIAMS, R. VAUGHAN. Fain would I change that ... ..	3d.
Old song resung, An ... ..	6d.	note ... ..	3d.
GERMAN, E. Chase, The ... ..	4d.	WOOD, CHARLES. Full fathom five ... ..	3d.
London Town ... ..	6d.
My bonnie lass, she smileth ... ..	4d.

ELIZABETHAN MADRIGALS.

BATESON. Hark! hear you not... ..	4d.	MORLEY. Arise, awake, you silly shepherds ... ..	4d.
BENET. All creatures now are merry-minded ... ..	4d.	Shoot, false love, I care not ... ..	4d.
BYRD. I joy not in no earthly bliss ... ..	4d.	TOMKINS. Oyes! has any found a lad... ..	2d.
This sweet and merry month of May... ..	4d.	Weep no more ... ..	2d.
FARMER. I thought my love, that I should overtake you ... ..	4d.	WEEKES. As Vesta was from Latmos' Hill descending ... ..	4d.
GIBBONS, ORLANDO. Ah! dere heart ... ..	2d.	Lady, your eye ... ..	4d.
I tremble not at noise of war ... ..	4d.	WILBYE. Adieu, sweet Amarillis ... ..	3d.
MARSTON. Nymphs and shepherds ... ..	4d.	Alas! what hope of speeding ... ..	3d.
		Lady Oriana, The... ..	4d.

MALE VOICES (T.T.B.B.).

BANTOCK, GRANVILLE. Festival Song ... ..	6d.	FLETCHER, PERCY E. Sailor's Return, The ... ..	6d.
Give a rouse ... ..	4d.	Vision of Belshazzah, The ... ..	4d.
How sleep the brave ... ..	4d.	GARDINER, H. BALFOUR. Sir Eglamore ... ..	4d.
BOYCE, E. Dirge ... ..	3d.	GERMAN, E. O peaceful night ... ..	4d.
CARSE, A. The tide rises, the tide falls ... ..	3d.	Sleeping ... ..	4d.
CORNELIUS, P. Rider's Song, The ... ..	6d.	HEGAR, F. Phantom Host, The ... ..	8d.
DAVIES, H. WALFORD. Hymn before Action ... ..	4d.	LLOYD, C. H. Wet sheet and a flowing sea ... ..	4d.
DUNHILL, T. F. Full fathom five ... ..	4d.	SCHUMANN. Night March, The (Op. 62, No. 1) ... ..	4d.
It was a lover and his lass ... ..	4d.	Song of Freedom (Op. 62, No. 2) ... ..	4d.
Who is Sylvia? ... ..	3d.	SOMERVELL, A. Soldier, rest ... ..	4d.
Wind and the rain, The ... ..	4d.	WEST, JOHN E. John Peel (Old English Song) ... ..	4d.
ELGAR, E. Reveille, The ... ..	8d.	WILLIAMS, R. VAUGHAN. Bushes and briars (Folk-Song) ... ..	3d.
Wanderer, The ... ..	4d.	WOOD, CHARLES. Down in yon summer vale ... ..	3d.
Zut! zut! zut! ... ..	4d.

FEMALE VOICES.

ATKINS, IVOR. Sea Song, A. (S.A.) ... ..	4d.	FLETCHER, PERCY E. *Dream, baby, (S.S.A.) ... ..	4d.
BERLIOZ, Ophelia. (S.A.)... ..	4d.	*Oh the merry May. (S.S.A.) ... ..	4d.
BOUGHTON, RUTLAND. Piper's Song. (S.S.A.)... ..	3d.	GERMAN, E. Beateous morn. (S.S.A.) ... ..	4d.
BRAHMS. *Barcarolle (Op. 44, No. 3). (S.S.A.A.) ... ..	2d.	O lovely May. (S.S.A.) ... ..	4d.
Gardener, The (Op. 17, No. 3). (S.S.A.) ... ..	4d.	HOLST, G. *Now sleeps the crimson petal. (S.S.A.A.) ... ..	3d.
*Now all the roses (Op. 44, No. 7). (S.S.A.A.) ... ..	4d.	*O swallow, swallow. (S.S.A.) ... ..	3d.
COLERIDGE-TAYLOR, S. Encinctured with a twine of leaves. (S.S.A.) ... ..	4d.	*Splendour falls, The. (S.S.A.A.) ... ..	4d.
From the green heart of the waters. (S.S.A.) ... ..	4d.	*Sweet and low. (S.S.A.A.) ... ..	4d.
DAVIES, H. WALFORD. Cradle Song, A. (S.S.A.) ... ..	4d.	*Tears, idle tears (S.S.A.A.) ... ..	3d.
Lamb, The. (S.S.A.) ... ..	4d.	SHAW, GEOFFREY. Three Hymns from Pan's Anniversary:—
Shepherd, The. (S.S.A.) ... ..	4d.	Of Pan we sing. (S.S.A.)... ..	5d.
ELGAR, E. Christmas greeting, A. (S.A.) ... ..	8d.	Pan is our all. (S.S.A.A.) ... ..	4d.
My love dwelt in a northern land (arr.). (S.S.A.) ... ..	4d.	If yet Pan's orgies. (S.S.A.A.) ... ..	4d.
Stars of the summer night. (S.A.) ... ..	8d.	WILLIAMS, R. VAUGHAN. Sound sleep. (S.S.A.) ... ..	6d.
		WOOD, CHARLES. La Fileuse. (S.A.) ... ..	4d.

ELIZABETHAN MADRIGALS (ARRANGED).

*BATESON. Nightingale, The. (S.S.A.) ... ..	2d.	MORLEY. *My bonny lass she smileth. (S.S.A.A.) ... ..	4d.
*BYRDE. Looke downe, O Lord. (S.S.A.A.) ... ..	3d.	*Now is the month of maying. (S.S.A.A.) ... ..	3d.
*EDWARDS. In going to my lonely bed (S.S.A.A.)... ..	3d.	WEEKES. *Nightingale, The. (S.S.A.) ... ..	3d.
*GIBBONS, ORLANDO. The silver swan. (S.S.A.A.) ... ..	2d.	WILBYE. *Seek sweet content. (S.S.A.) Adapted from the madrigal—"Fly love, to heaven!" ... ..	2d.

* Unaccompanied.

UNISON SONG FOR MASED VOICES.

Words by WHITTIER.

WORSHIP.
PRICE TWOPENCE.

Music by GEOFFREY SHAW.

Specimens of every kind of music will be forwarded on application. To ensure a satisfactory selection, the Syllabus of the last Festival should accompany the request.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

ENGLISH LYRICS

SET TO MUSIC BY

C. HUBERT H. PARRY.

EACH SET, PRICE FOUR SHILLINGS

FIRST SET.

- |                                    |                          |                                   |                    |
|------------------------------------|--------------------------|-----------------------------------|--------------------|
| 1. *My true love hath my heart ... | Sir Philip Sidney | 3. Where shall the lover rest ... | Scott       |
| 2. Good-night ...                  | Shelley           | 4. Willow, Willow, Willow ...     | Shakespeare |

SECOND SET.

- |                                      |                    |                                     |                    |
|--------------------------------------|--------------------|-------------------------------------|--------------------|
| 1. O Mistress Mine ...               | Shakespeare | 3. No longer mourn for me ...       | Shakespeare |
| 2. Take, O take those lips away ...  | Shakespeare | 4. Blow, blow, thou winter wind ... | Shakespeare |
| 5. When icicles hang by the wall ... | Shakespeare |                                     |                    |

THIRD SET.

- |  |                 |                               |                       |
|--|-----------------|-------------------------------|-----------------------|
| 1. *To Lucasta, on going to the wars ... | Lovelace | 4. *Why so pale and wan ...   | Suckling       |
| 2. If thou would'st ease thine heart ... | Beddoes  | 5. Through the ivory gate ... | Julian Sturgis |
| 3. *To Althea, from prison ...           | Lovelace | 6. Of all the torments ...    | William Walsh  |

FOURTH SET.

- |  |                               |  |              |
|--|-------------------------------|--|--------------|
| 1. *Thine eyes still shined for me ... | Emerson                | 4. Weep you no more ...                    | Anon. |
| 2. *When lovers meet again ...         | Langdon Elwyn Mitchell | 5. There be none of beauty's daughters ... | Byron |
| 3. *When we two parted ...             | Byron                  | 6. Bright star ...                         | Keats |

FIFTH SET.

- |                               |                       |                                   |                                |
|-------------------------------|-----------------------|-----------------------------------|--------------------------------|
| 1. *A stray nymph of Dian ... | Julian Sturgis | 4. Lay a garland on my hearse ... | Beaumont &amp; Fletcher |
| 2. *Proud Maisie ...          | Scott          | 5. Love and laughter ...          | Arthur Butler           |
| 3. *Crabbed age and youth ... | Shakespeare    | 6. A girl to her glass ...        | Julian Sturgis          |
| 7. A Lullaby ...              | E. O. Jones    |                                   |                                |

SIXTH SET.

- |                                       |                    |                                      |                         |
|---------------------------------------|--------------------|--------------------------------------|-------------------------|
| 1. *When comes my Gwen ...            | E. O. Jones | 4. *A lover's garland ...            | Alfred P. Graves |
| 2. *And yet I love her till I die ... | Anon.       | 5. At the hour the long day ends ... | Alfred P. Graves |
| 3. *Love is a bable ...               | Anon.       | 6. Under the greenwood tree ...      | Shakespeare      |

SEVENTH SET.

- |  |                       |  |                       |
|--|-----------------------|--|-----------------------|
| 1. On a time the amorous Silvy ...       | Anon.          | 4. O never say that I was false of heart ... | Shakespeare    |
| 2. Follow a shadow ...                   | Ben Jonson     | 5. Julia ...                                 | Herrick        |
| 3. Ye little birds that sit and sing ... | Thomas Heywood | 6. *Sleep ...                                | Julian Sturgis |

EIGHTH SET.

- |                            |                               |                         |                        |
|----------------------------|-------------------------------|-------------------------|------------------------|
| 1. Whence ...              | Julian Sturgis         | 4. Dirge in woods ...   | George Meredith |
| 2. Nightfall in winter ... | Langdon Elwyn Mitchell | 5. Looking backward ... | Julian Sturgis  |
| 3. Marian ...              | George Meredith        | 6. Grapes ...           | Julian Sturgis  |

NINTH SET.

- |                                    |                          |                        |                          |
|------------------------------------|--------------------------|------------------------|--------------------------|
| 1. Three aspects ...               | Mary E. Coleridge | 4. Whether I live ...  | Mary E. Coleridge |
| 2. A fairy town (St. Andrew's) ... | Mary E. Coleridge | 5. Armida's garden ... | Mary E. Coleridge |
| 3. The witches' wood ...           | Mary E. Coleridge | 6. *The maiden ...     | Mary E. Coleridge |
| 7. There ...                       | Mary E. Coleridge |                        |                          |

TENTH SET.

- |  |                           |                                   |                               |
|--|---------------------------|-----------------------------------|-------------------------------|
| 1. My heart is like a singing bird ... | Christina Rossetti | 4. The child and the twilight ... | Langdon Elwyn Mitchell |
| 2. Gone were but the winter cold ...   | Allan Cunningham   | 5. From a city window ...         | Langdon Elwyn Mitchell |
| 3. A moment of farewell ...            | Julian Sturgis     | 6. One silent night of late ...   | Herrick                |

ELEVENTH SET.

- |                                    |                               |  |                               |
|------------------------------------|-------------------------------|--|-------------------------------|
| 1. One golden thread ...           | Julia Chatterton       | 5. The faithful lover ...                | Alfred Perceval Graves |
| 2. The spirit of the Spring ...    | Alfred Perceval Graves | 6. If I might ride on puissant wing ...  | Julian Sturgis         |
| 3. What part of dread eternity ... | Author unknown         | 7. Why art thou slow ...                 | Massinger              |
| 4. The blackbird ...               | Alfred Perceval Graves | 8. She is my love beyond all thought ... | Alfred P. Graves       |

TWELFTH SET.

- |                                  |                         |                                 |                  |
|----------------------------------|-------------------------|---------------------------------|------------------|
| 1. When the dew is falling ...   | Julia Chatterton | 4. When the sun's great orb ... | H. Warner |
| 2. To Blossoms ...               | Herrick          | 5. Dream pedlary ...            | Beddoes   |
| 3. Rosaline ...                  | Lodge            | 6. O World, O Life, O Time ...  | Shelley   |
| 7. The sound of hidden music ... | Julia Chatterton |                                 |                  |

* Published separately, price 1s. 6d.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

COMPOSITIONS BY EDWARD ELGAR.

INSTRUMENTAL.

ORCHESTRA.

CONCERTO (for Violin and Orchestra) (Op. 61).

Full Score, 42s. ; Miniature Score, Paper, 7s. 6d., Cloth, 11s. 6d. ; String Parts, 21s. 6d. ; Wind Parts, 57s. 6d.

CONCERTO in E minor (for Violoncello and Orchestra) (Op. 85).

Full Score, 42s. Orchestral Parts on hire only.

CORONATION MARCH (1911) (Op. 65).

Full Score, 11s. 6d. ; String Parts, 6s. 8d. ; Wind Parts, 20s. 10d.

FALSTAFF ("King Henry IV." and "King Henry V.," Shakespeare). Symphonic Study in C minor, with two Interludes in A minor (Op. 68).

Full Score, 52s. 6d. ; Miniature Full Score, 11s. 6d. ; Cloth, 16s.
Orchestral Parts on hire only.

FALSTAFF. Two Interludes (from) (Op. 68): 1. Jack Falstaff, Page to the Duke of Norfolk. 2. Gloucestershire: Shallow's Orchard.

Full Score, 7s. ; String Parts, 3s. ; Wind Parts, 4s. 4d.

FROISSART, Concert-Overture (Op. 19).

Full Score, 11s. 6d. ; String Parts, 6s. 9d. ; Wind Parts, &c., 14s. 8d.

FUNERAL MARCH WITH INCIDENTAL MUSIC ("Grania and Diarmid") (Op. 42).

Full Score, 9s. String Parts, 3s. 4d. ; Wind Parts, &c., 8s. 8d.

IMPERIAL MARCH (Op. 32).

Full Score, 5s. 6d. ; String Parts, 2s. 8d. ; Wind Parts, &c., 9s. 4d.

IN THE SOUTH ("Alassio"). Concert - Overture (Op. 50).

Full Score, 31s. 6d. ; String Parts, 13s. 6d. ; Wind Parts, &c., 45s. 7d.

MEDITATION ("The Light of Life") (Op. 29).

Full Score, 7s. 6d. ; String Parts, 2s. 8d. ; Wind Parts, &c., 7s. 4d.

PRELUDE AND ANGEL'S FAREWELL ("Gerontius") (Op. 38).

Full Score, 9s. ; String Parts, 5s. ; Wind Parts, &c., 18s.

ROMANCE (for Bassoon and Orchestra) (Op. 62).

Full Score, 7s. 6d. ; String Parts, 3s. 4d. ; Wind Parts, 6s.

SYMPHONY in A flat, No. 1 (for full Orchestra) (Op. 55).

Full Score, 63s. ; Miniature Score, 11s. 6d. ; Cloth, 16s.
Orchestral Parts on hire only.

SYMPHONY in E flat, No. 2 (for full Orchestra) (Op. 63).

Full Score, 63s. ; Miniature Score, 11s. 6d. ; Cloth, 16s.
Orchestral Parts on hire only.

TRIUMPHAL MARCH ("Caractacus") (Op. 35).

Full Score, 9s. ; String Parts, 3s. 6d. ; Wind Parts, &c., 14s. 8d.

VARIATIONS ON AN ORIGINAL THEME (Op. 36).

Full Score, 25s. ; Miniature Score, 7s. 6d. ; String Parts, 1s. 9d. ;
Wind Parts, &c., 31s. 6d.

WAND OF YOUTH, THE, First Suite (Op. 1A).

Full Score, 26s. 1d. ; String Parts, 7s. 6d. ; Wind Parts, 17s. 8d.

DITTO, Second Suite (Op. 1B).

Full Score, 26s. 6d. ; String Parts, 10s. 6d. ; Wind Parts, 23s. 4d.

FANTASIA AND FUGUE in C minor, by J. S. Bach. Transcribed for Full Orchestra by Edward Elgar.

FANTASIA. Full Score, 6s. Orchestral Parts on hire only.
FUGUE. Full Score, 8s. 6d. Orchestral Parts on hire only.

OVERTURE in D minor, by G. F. Handel. Arranged for Full Orchestra by Edward Elgar.

Full Score, 7s. 6d. Orchestral Parts on hire only.

SMALL ORCHESTRA.

STRING ORCHESTRA AND CHAMBER MUSIC.

CANTO POPOLARE (In Moonlight), arranged from the Concert-Overture "In the South" (Op. 50).

Score, 4s. 6d. ; String Parts, 2s. 4d. ; Wind Parts, &c., 4s.

CHANSON DE NUIT (Op. 15, No. 1).

Score, 4s. ; String Parts, 1s. 8d. ; Wind Parts, &c., 2s. ;
Pianoforte Conductor Part, 8d.

CHANSON DE MATIN (Op. 15, No. 2).

Score, 4s. ; String Parts, 2s. ; Wind Parts, &c., 2s. ;
Pianoforte Conductor Part, 8d.

ELEGY (for String Orchestra) (Op. 58).

Score, 2s. 6d. ; String Parts, 1s. 8d.

INTERMEZZO ("Dorabella" from the Variations) (Op. 36), for Strings, Wood-wind, and Drums.

Score, 4s. 6d. ; String Parts, 3s. 2d. ; Wood-wind and Drum Parts, 2s.

INTRODUCTION AND ALLEGRO for Strings (Quartet and Orchestra) (Op. 47).

Full Score, 16s. ; Quartet Parts, 6s. ; Orchestral Parts, 10s. 6d.

PLEADING (Op. 48, No. 1). Song, arranged for small orchestra with Harp or Pianoforte.

Solo Violin, Flute, or Oboe, 4d. ; Solo Cornet or Clarinet, 4d. ;
String Parts, 1s. 4d. ; Wind Parts, 1s. 4d. ; Harp or Pianoforte, 8d.

QUARTET in E minor, for Strings (Op. 83).

Score, 7s. 6d. ; Parts, 12s.

QUINTET in A minor, for Pianoforte and Strings (Op. 84).

20s.

SERENADE (Wand of Youth, First Suite) (Op. 1A).

String Parts, 1s. 8d. ; Flute and Clarinet, 4d. each ;
Short Score, Harp or Pianoforte Conductor, 1s. 6d.

DITTO. For Pianoforte and Stringed Instruments, 4s.
Separate String Parts, 4d. each.

THREE PIECES (Op. 10) :—

1. MAZURKA.

Full Score, 7s. 6d. ; String Parts, 3s. 4d. ; Wind Parts, &c., 6s. 8d.

2. SÉRÉNADE MAURESQUE.

Full Score, 7s. 6d. ; String Parts, 3s. 4d. ; Wind Parts, &c., 5s. 8d.

3. CONTRASTS (THE GAVOTTE, A.D. 1700 AND 1900).

Full Score, 7s. 6d. ; String Parts, 3s. 4d. ; Wind Parts, &c., 7s.

NOTE.—These Pieces may be effectively performed by an orchestra consisting of 1 Flute, 1 Oboe, 1 Clarinet, 1 Bassoon, 2 Horns, 1 Trumpet (Cornet), Drums, and Strings. Any other instrument in the Score may be added with corresponding gain in effect.

MILITARY BAND.

	s.	d.
CHANSON DE MATIN (Op. 15, No. 2) ...	5	0
CHANSON DE NUIT (Op. 15, No. 1) ...	5	0
FOLLOW THE COLOURS ...	5	0
IMPERIAL MARCH (Op. 32) ...	13	6
MEDITATION, from "The Light of Life" (Op. 29) ...	7	6
PLEADING (Op. 48, No. 1) ...	5	0
THREE PIECES (Op. 10) ...	each	7 6

1. Mazurka. 2. Sérénade Mauresque.

3. Contrasts (The Gavotte, A.D. 1700 & 1900).

WAND OF YOUTH, THE, Second Suite (Op. 1B) 19 0

WITH PROUD THANKSGIVING (Military Band

Accompaniment to the Vocal Score only) ... 9 0

Brass Band Ditto ... 6 0

FOUR ENGLISH DANCES

SET 1.

COMPOSED BY

FREDERIC H. COWEN.

	s.	d.
Full Score ... ..	16	0
String Parts ... ..	9	0
Wind Parts ... ..	17	8
Ditto (small orchestra) ... ..	13	2
Military Band ... ..	19	0
Pianoforte Solo ... ..	4	0
Violin and Pianoforte ... ..	4	6
Quintet (Pianoforte and Strings) ... .. each	4	0
Extra Strings, 8d. each.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

OLD ENGLISH DANCES

SET 2.

COMPOSED BY

FREDERIC H. COWEN.

	s.	d.
Full Score ... ..	25	0
String Parts ... ..	14	3
Wind Parts ... ..	30	3
Pianoforte Solo ... ..	4	0
From the above: "MINUET D'AMOUR."
Pianoforte Solo, 2s. 3d.; Violin and Pianoforte, 3s.;
Quintet for Pianoforte and Strings, 4s.
Extra Strings, 8d. each.
Full Score ... ..	5	6
String Parts ... ..	2	0
Wind Parts ... ..	3	8
Military Band ... ..	7	6

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

FOUR CHARACTERISTIC WALTZES

1. VALSE BOHEMIENNE.
2. VALSE RUSTIQUE.
3. VALSE DE LA REINE.
4. VALSE MAURESQUE.

COMPOSED BY

S. COLERIDGE-TAYLOR.

(Op. 22).

PIANOFORTE SOLO.

PRICE, COMPLETE, FOUR SHILLINGS; SEPARATELY, 2s. 3d. EACH.

	s.	d.		s.	d.
Violin and Pianoforte ... .. complete	4	6	Full Score (Full Orchestra) ... ..	11	6
Violin and Pianoforte ... .. separately, each	2	3	Full Score (Small Orchestra), MS.
String Parts for Full or Small Orchestra ... ..	9	0	Arrangements, as Quintets, for Pianoforte and
Wind Parts for Small Orchestra ... ..	10	5	Strings, each Number ... ..	3	0
Ditto, for Full Orchestra ... ..	17	5	Separate String Parts, 8d. each.
			Military Band Arrangement ... ..	19	0

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

NOVELLO'S

POPULAR PIANOFORTE ALBUMS

FOR YOUNG PERFORMERS.

HUBERT BATH DOLL'S-HOUSE SUITE

Price Three Shillings.

FRANCESCO BERGER EIGHTEEN LITTLE PIECES

Price Two Shillings and Sixpence.

J. D. DAVIS. FOUR LITTLE PIECES

Price Two Shillings and Threepence.

EDMONDSTOUNE DUNCAN HAPPY THOUGHTS

Price Three Shillings.

ARNOLD KRUG TEN LITTLE PIECES

Op. 109.

In two Books. Price Two Shillings and Threepence each.

ARNOLD KRUG SCENES FROM FAIRY-LAND

In two Books. Price Three Shillings each.

TH. KULLAK TWENTY-FOUR PIECES

Op. 62 AND 81.

In four Books. Price One Shilling and Sixpence each.

MAX MAYER BAGATELLES

Price Four Shillings.

MENDELSSOHN SIX CHRISTMAS PIECES

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

ERNEST NEWTON WOODLAND DANCES

Price Three Shillings.

ERNEST NEWTON ROMANY LIFE

Price Three Shillings.

HUBERT G. OKE THREE PIECES

Price Three Shillings.

SCHUMANN PIECES FOR THE YOUNG

Part I., Price 1s. 6d.; Part II., Price 1s. 6d.

SCHUMANN THREE PIANOFORTE SONATAS

(Part III. of Pieces for the Young).

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

CLEMENT M. SPURLING SIX SHORT AND EASY PIECES

Price Three Shillings.

CLEMENT M. SPURLING OUR VILLAGE IN SUMMER

Price Two Shillings and Threepence.

E. A. SYDENHAM SIX SHORT AND EASY PIECES

Price Three Shillings.

TSCHAIKOWSKY CHRISTMAS ALBUM

In three Books. Price One Shilling and Sixpence each.

FRANCESCO BERGER FIRST STEPS AT THE PIANOFORTE

PRICE FOUR SHILLINGS.

LONDON : NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

SOLOS FROM THE SACRED CANTATAS

OF

JOHN SEBASTIAN BACH.

In eight Books—each Book, One Shilling and Sixpence.

FIRST SET.

SOPRANO.

- Air WITHIN MY HEART OF HEARTS ("A Stronghold Sure").
- Air OUR JESUS' HATH FOR AYE ("God goeth up").
- Air MY HEART EVER TRUSTING ("God so loved the world").
- Air O GRANT US, MIGHTY LORD ("Jesus, now will we praise Thee").
- Air SIGHING, WEEPING ("My Spirit was in heaviness").

ALTO.

- Air THOU, WHOSE PRAISES NEVER END ("Bide with us").
- Recit. { THE FATHER HATH APPOINTED HIM ("God goeth up").
- Air { MY SPIRIT HIM DESCRIBES ("God goeth up").
- Air INTO THY HANDS ("God's time is best").
- Air REJOICE, YE SOULS, ELECT AND HOLY ("O Light Everlasting").

TENOR.

- Air LORD, TO US THYSELF BE SHOWING ("Bide with us").
- Recit. { WHY HAST THOU THEN, O GOD ("My Spirit was in heaviness").
- Air { FAST MY BITTER TEARS ARE FLOWING ("My Spirit was in heaviness").
- Air REJOICE, O MY SPIRIT ("My Spirit was in heaviness").
- Recit. { THE MIGHTY GUARDIAN ("Thou Guide of Israel").
- Air { HIS FACE MY SHEPHERD LONG IS HIDING ("Thou Guide of Israel").
- Air AND WHY ART THOU, MY SOUL, SO FEARFUL ("When will God recall").

BASS.

- Recit. { HE COMES, THE LORD OF LORDS ("God goeth up").
- Air { 'TIS HE, WHO ALL ALONE ("God goeth up").
- Recit. { IT IS NOT MINE ("God so loved the world").
- Air { ON MY BEHALF " " "
- Recit. { YEA, THIS THY WORD ("Thou Guide of Israel")
- Air { WHOM JESUS DEIGNS " " "
- Air YET SILENCE ("When will God recall").

SECOND SET.

SOPRANO.

- Air OPEN WIDE, MY HEART ("Come, Redeemer").
- Air FATHER, WHAT I PROFFER ("Give the hungry man thy bread").
- Air COME, VISIT, YE GLOWING ("How brightly shines").
- Air I HAVE WAITED FOR THE LORD ("If thou but sufferest").

ALTO.

- Air GOD'S ENSAMPLE THUS TO FOLLOW ("Give the hungry man thy bread").
- Air JESUS SLEEPS ("Jesus sleeps, what hope remaineth").
- Recit. { INCLINE THINE EAR ("Lord, rebuke me not").
- Air { THE LORD HATH HEARD ("Lord, rebuke me not").
- Air ALL EARTHLY POWERS FROM GOD INHERIT ("Praise thou the Lord").

TENOR.

- Recit. { THE SAVIOUR NOW APPEARETH ("Come, Redeemer").
- Aria { COME, JESU, COME ("Come, Redeemer").
- Air WHAT VOICE IS WITH THE TEMPEST ("From depths of woe").
- Air TUNEFUL HARPS AND VOICES ("How brightly shines").
- Air THOU ART MY GOD ("Lord, rebuke me not").

BASS.

- Air THE PASCHAL VICTIM HERE WE SEE ("Christ lay in death's dark prison").
- Air DO THINE ALMS ("Give the hungry man thy bread").
- Air WITH JESUS WILL I GO ("Wailing, crying").
- Recit. { AH, WHEN ON THAT GREAT DAY ("Watch ye, pray ye").
- Air { BLESSED RESURRECTION DAY ("Watch ye, pray ye").

JOHN SEBASTIAN BACH

48 PRELUDES AND FUGUES

(THE WELL-TEMPERED CLAVICHORD)

A NEW EDITION, EDITED BY HAROLD BROOKE.

IN TWO PARTS.

Price Four Shillings each.

Or, Complete, Cloth, Price Twelve Shillings and Sixpence.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

ORIGINAL COMPOSITIONS FOR THE ORGAN.

(NEW SERIES.)

No.	RECENT NUMBERS	s. d.
75.	TOCCATA AND FUGUE ("The Wanderer") C. Hubert H. Parry	3 6
77.	ANDANTE RELIGIOSO ... .. Alec Rowley	1 6
78.	SCHERZO ... .. G. J. Bennett	2 3
79.	THREE PRELUDES ... .. G. J. Bennett	2 3
80.	DÉSÉSPoir ... .. Ch. Quef	1 6
81.	CAPRICE IN D FLAT ... .. J. A. Sowerbutts	2 3
82.	THREE PSALM-PRELUDES, No. 1 ... .. H. Howells	1 6
83.	" " " No. 2 ... .. H. Howells	1 6
84.	" " " No. 3 ... .. H. Howells	1 6
85.	THEMA OSTINATA ... .. C. C. Palmer	1 6
86.	COVENANTERS' MARCH... .. R. G. Hailing	1 6
87.	CHORAL MELODY ... .. C. F. Waters	1 6
88.	CONCERT OVERTURE IN F MINOR ... .. Alfred Hollins	3 0
89.	HOMAGE TO HANDEL ... .. S. Karg-Elert	3 6
90.	THREE SHORT AND EASY POSTLUDES (2nd Set) F. W. Wadely	2 3
91.	INTERMEZZI (No. 1, Pastorale) ... .. C. V. Stanford	2 0
92.	" (No. 2, Marcia Eroica) ... .. C. V. Stanford	2 0
93.	" (No. 3, Hush Song) ... .. C. V. Stanford	2 0
94.	" (No. 4, Intermezzo Founded upon an Irish air ... .. C. V. Stanford	2 0
95.	CHORAL IMPROVISATION ON "DER HÖLLE PFORTEN SIND ZERSTÜRT" ... .. S. Karg-Elert	2 0
96.	CHORAL IMPROVISATION ON "GELOBT SEI GOTT IM HÖCHSTEN THRON" ... .. S. Karg-Elert	2 0
97.	SEVEN PASTELS FROM THE LAKE OF CONSTANCE S. Karg-Elert	5 6
98.	PRELUDE AND FUGUE IN C ... .. C. V. Stanford	2 0
99.	PRELUDE AND FUGUE IN C MINOR ... .. C. V. Stanford	2 0
100.	PRELUDE AND FUGUE IN B MINOR ... .. C. V. Stanford	2 0
101.	VARIATIONS ON AN OLD ENGLISH MELODY ("Heartsease") Geoffrey Shaw	2 0

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

OLD ENGLISH
VIOLIN MUSIC

EDITED BY

ALFRED MOFFAT.

PREFATORY NOTE.

Although considerable attention has been given to the resuscitation of Church Music, Glee and Madrigals, Organ and even Harpsichord Music by the older English composers, very little has been done to make known the large mass of music for the Violin written by English musicians from the time of Purcell to the close of the 18th century. These works for the most part consist of Suites or Sonatas written for a solo violin with a figured bass, or for two violins and violoncello with a figured bass for the harpsichord or organ; another favourite form was the Concerto grosso.

It is with the object of making known to the public a selection of the best of these compositions that the present series has been undertaken.

ALFRED MOFFAT.

No.	s. d.
No. 1. SONATA in G major ... .. JAMES LATES	3 0
" 2. SONATA in D minor ... .. HENRY ECCLES	3 0
" 3. SONATA in B flat major ... .. WILLIAM BABELL	3 0
" 4. SONATA in G minor ... .. JOHN STANLEY	3 0
" 5. SONATA in A major ... .. JOHN COLLETT	3 0
" 6. TRIO-SONATA in E minor THOMAS AUGUSTINE ARNE	4 6
" 7. SONATA in D major ... .. RICHARD JONES	3 0
" 8. TRIO-SONATA in D minor ... .. WILLIAM BOYCE	4 6
" 9. THREE PIECES ... .. WILLIAM BOYCE	3 0
" 10. SONATA in E major ... .. CHARLES MACKLEAN	3 0
" 11. SONATA in G minor ... .. WILLIAM CROFT	3 0
" 12. SONATA in D minor ... .. JOSEPH GIBBS	3 0
" 13. SONATA in D minor ... .. JOHN HUMPHRIES	3 0
" 14. SONATA in A minor ... .. THOMAS VINCENT	3 0

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

TWENTY SHORT AND EASY PIECES FOR THE ORGAN

SET I.

No.		No.
1. Andante ... ..	Alfred H. Allen	11. Allegro. Op. 21... ..	Gustav Merkel
2. Spring Song ... ..	W. H. Bell	12. Andante. Op. 162 ... ..	Gustav Merkel
3. Andante con Moto ... ..	G. J. Bennett	13. Introductory Voluntary on the Russian Hymn	J. T. Pye
4. Song of Thanksgiving ... ..	Josiah Booth	14. Prelude No. 2 ... ..	A. Redhead
5. Church Preludes No. 5 ... ..	R. E. Bryson	15. Larghetto and Allegro ... ..	J. Varley Roberts
6. Postlude ... ..	H. Elliot Button	16. Allegretto Pastorale ... ..	C. Steggall
7. Postlude ... ..	G. Calkin	17. Contemplation ... ..	John E. West
8. Prelude ... ..	Percy E. Fletcher	18. Postlude ... ..	John E. West
9. Andante ... ..	J. W. Gritton	19. Moderato Maestoso ... ..	Kate Westrop
10. Allegro Moderato ... ..	Kate Loder	20. Andante Pastorale ... ..	W. G. Wood

SET II.

No.		No.
1. Allegretto Grazioso ... ..	G. J. Bennett	11. Andante quasi Allegretto ... ..	Gustav Merkel
2. Church Prelude ... ..	R. E. Bryson	12. Cavatina in G ... ..	Ernest Newton
3. Andante Tranquillo ... ..	George Calkin	13. Epilogue ... ..	J. Rheinberger
4. For Holy Communion ... ..	J. Baptiste Calkin	14. Andante in A ... ..	J. Varley Roberts
5. Postlude ... ..	Percy E. Fletcher	15. Andante in G ... ..	C. Steggall
6. Largo ... ..	G. F. Handel	16. March in G ... ..	Henry Smart
7. Berceuse ... ..	Oliver King	17. Andante Doloroso ("Marcia Funèbre")	John E. West
8. Adagio, from Sonata No. 2 ... ..	Kuhlau	18. Pastoral Melody ... ..	John E. West
9. Allegretto... ..	Kate Loder	19. Andante ... ..	Kate Westrop
10. Andante in G ... ..	G. F. Wesley Martin	20. Allegretto Grazioso ... ..	W. G. Wood

SET III.

No.		No.
1. Melody ... ..	A. Herbert Brewer	11. Cavatina ... ..	Joachim Raff
2. Maestoso ... ..	George Calkin	12. Monologue No. 5 ... ..	J. Rheinberger
3. Ave Maria ... ..	Edward T. Chipp	13. Melody in F ... ..	Anton Rubinstein
4. Interlude ... ..	Percy E. Fletcher	14. Dreaming ... ..	R. Schumann
5. Intermezzo ... ..	Alan Gray	15. The Poet Speaks... ..	R. Schumann
6. Postlude ... ..	Alex. Guilmant	16. Soft Voluntary ... ..	B. Luard-Selby
7. Sursum Corda ... ..	John Ireland	17. Menuetto ... ..	Berthold Tours
8. Lieder Ohne Worte No. 22	F. Mendelssohn-Bartholdy	18. Aspiration ... ..	John E. West
9. Andante ... ..	Gustav Merkel	19. Sketch in C minor ... ..	John E. West
10. Duetto in G ... ..	Ernest Newton	20. Andante con Moto ... ..	W. G. Wood

SET IV.

No.		No.
1. Romance ... ..	W. H. Bell	11. Lieder Ohne Worte No. 44	F. Mendelssohn-Bartholdy
2. Minuet and Trio (Symphony in G minor) ... ..	W. Sterndale Bennett	12. Trio ... ..	J. Rheinberger
3. Canzonetta ... ..	César Cui	13. Short Postlude ... ..	B. Luard-Selby
4. Interlude ... ..	Th. Dubois	14. Andante Maestoso ... ..	B. Luard-Selby
5. Elegy ... ..	Edward Elgar	15. Prelude ... ..	Henry Smart
6. Allegretto ... ..	Niels W. Gade	16. Fughetta ... ..	Henry Smart
7. Judex ("Mors et Vita")... ..	Ch. Gounod	17. Choral Song ... ..	S. S. Wesley
8. Intermezzo No. 3... ..	Alan Gray	18. Lamentation ... ..	John E. West
9. Chanson de Joie ... ..	R. G. Hailing	19. Allegretto Pastorale ... ..	John E. West
10. Hymnus ... ..	A. C. Mackenzie	20. Andante ... ..	W. G. Wood

SET V.

No.		No.
1. Chorale Prelude—Erbarm' Dich mein, O Herre Gott ... ..	J. S. Bach	10. Prelude ... ..	J. Rheinberger
2. Allegro Maestoso e Vivace ... ..	W. T. Best	11. Monologue No. 9 ... ..	J. Rheinberger
3. Meditation ... ..	Hugh Blair	12. Chanson Orientale ... ..	Schumann
4. Cantilène Religieuse ... ..	Th. Dubois	13. Four Sketches, No. 1 ... ..	Schumann
5. Intermezzo No. 1 ... ..	Alan Gray	14. Larghetto from Sonata in D ... ..	B. Luard-Selby
6. Then round about the Starry Throne ("Samson") ... ..	G. F. Handel	15. Andante ... ..	E. Silas
7. Lieder Ohne Worte, No. 4	F. Mendelssohn-Bartholdy	16. Six Short and Easy Pieces, No. 6	Henry Smart
8. Moderato ... ..	Gustav Merkel	17. Intermezzo founded on an Irish Air	C. V. Stanford
9. Ave Verum ... ..	Mozart	18. Andante in G ... ..	S. S. Wesley
		19. Lament ... ..	John E. West
		20. Canzona ... ..	W. Wolstenholme

PRICE, PAPER COVER, FOUR SHILLINGS EACH SET. CLOTH, SIX SHILLINGS EACH SET

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

Produced at Covent Garden, May 14, 1923

THE PERFECT FOOL

OPERA IN ONE ACT

WORDS AND MUSIC BY

GUSTAV HOLST

OP. 39

PRICE ... .. SIX SHILLINGS.

Libretto One Shilling

THE BALLET FROM "THE PERFECT FOOL."

Full Score, 15s.; Pianoforte Solo, 3s.; Pianoforte Duet, 4s.

SOME PRESS OPINIONS.

THE TIMES

The ballet music . . . is the most brilliant thing in a work glittering with brilliant moments. . . . There is one delicious musical moment, an almost Purcellian "round" for three voices. . . . and it is not an isolated moment.

THE DAILY TELEGRAPH

It is a safe and a proud thing to say that in the whole history of opera no composer has produced a more perfectly fitting score and libretto than Gustav Holst has produced in this opera. . . . In very truth this is a perfect little opera, a veritable masterpiece after its kind, of wit and humour. . . . Brilliantly clever and amusing.

THE MORNING POST

The Perfect Joke would be a better title for Mr. Holst's opera. . . . Mr. Holst shows the rare and precious ability to make a musical joke that everyone can see—or hear. . . . The whole thing is something entirely fresh, and follows a well-defined line of its own. . . . Actually there is not a weak page in the score, and though story and music differ from the expected, the way they are handled with originality and power constitute the opera a little masterpiece.

THE DAILY MAIL

The Perfect Fool . . . ought to have a sweeping success if musical people can command enough sense of humour and if people of humour have ears open to the splendour of the music. . . . Splendid music, and playfully mocking, allusive, fantastic libretto. . . . And there are numbers of first-rate tunes—for Holst is a prime melodist.

DAILY NEWS

It will appeal strongly to musicians all over the world who are familiar with operatic literature.

DAILY EXPRESS

His rhythmical capacity serves him extremely well in the ballet music, which is, indeed, some of the best that has been written in opera for a long time.

REFEREE

A ballet of such originality and interest, accompanied by such masterly music, that interest was excited and admiration aroused. . . . Musically this ballet is the finest portion of the work. . . . The instrumentation is a marvel of suggestion and humour.

PALL MALL GAZETTE

Holst has provided excellent entertainment in company with some remarkably good music. The latter is rich in the two essentials of tune and rhythm. . . . There are many tunes—the Wizard's "Wooing Song," for example—which are so simple and accessible that one is unconsciously whistling them after a single hearing. . . . There are many gems. The ballet-music, of course, is fairly well known by now, but the "Round" of the three girls fetching water was a charming moment, and the unaccompanied chorus towards the end a piece of real virtuosity.

DAILY CHRONICLE

A brilliant little fantasy. . . . The ballet music is most effective, particularly the exquisite Dance of the Spirit of Water.

BIRMINGHAM POST

Highly diverting in a vein entirely its own. . . . Plain, pure, unbending Holst from beginning to end, the writing masterly in its directness, and the scoring amazingly pointed and suggestive.

WESTERN DAILY PRESS

'We may reasonably hope that Mr. Holst's all too short opera will take its place permanently in that small but brilliant constellation of comic-operas on the grand scale of which The Mastersingers and The Marriage of Figaro are the bright particular stars.

MUSICAL NEWS AND HERALD

The Perfect Fool is the finest piece of real musical humour that has appeared for a long time.

THE MUSICAL STANDARD

The Perfect Fool is the best thing Holst has given us. . . . Themes of quite extraordinary beauty, arresting to the ear, and haunting the memory even after a first hearing.

SUNDAY TIMES

Indeed, he has performed a notable feat of alchemy. He has taken of the common objects of opera, grown hoary and wearisome in service, and accomplished, with enharmonic subtlety, their transmutation and combination into something new and significant.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

NURSERY SONGS

FROM THE
APPALACHIAN MOUNTAINS

ARRANGED WITH PIANOFORTE ACCOMPANIMENT

BY
CECIL J. SHARP.

ILLUSTRATED IN SILHOUETTE

BY ESTHER B. MACKINNON.

FIRST AND SECOND SERIES.

Price, Paper Boards, Six Shillings each Series.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

SOME SONGS RECENTLY PUBLISHED.

THE TUDOR EDITION OF OLD MUSIC

Transcribed and Edited by GERALD M. COOPER.

SERIES B.—No. 1.

THREE SONGS.

1. "MAN FIRST CREATED WAS"
(1604) Thomas Greaves
With accompaniment of String Quartet.
2. "IF FLOODS OF TEARS" Thomas Bateson
(1618)
With accompaniment of Violin, Viola, and Violoncello.
3. "CUCKOO" ... Richard Nicholson
(Early 17th Century)
With accompaniment of String Quartet.
Price 4s. net.

JOHN DOWLAND.

TWO SONGS FROM
"A PILGRIM'S SOLACE"
(1612)

Transcribed for Voice and Piano with Violin obbligato by

PETER WARLOCK and PHILIP WILSON

1. FROM SILENT NIGHT.
2. GO, NIGHTLY CARES.

Price 2s. net.

HERBERT BEDFORD.

Night Piece (The Dancer).
For Medium Voice, Strings, and Bass Triangle.
Transcribed for Voice and Piano by the Composer ... 2 0 net

LORD BERNERS.

Dialogue between Tom Filuter and his Man.
By Ned the Dog Stealer. Medium Voice and Piano ... 2 0 net

HANDEL.

O King of Kings (Allelujah, from "Esther").
For Soprano Voice and Piano ... 2 0 net

POLDOWSKI.

Reeds of Innocence.
For Medium Voice and Piano ... 2 0 net

POLDOWSKI.

Song.
For Medium Voice and Piano ... 2 0 net

R. STEGGALL.

Villanelle.
For Medium Voice and Piano ... 2 0 net

J. & W. CHESTER, LTD., 11, Great Marlborough Street, London, W.1.

THE MUSICAL TIMES

AND SINGING-CLASS CIRCULAR

FOUNDED IN 1844

PUBLISHED ON THE FIRST OF EVERY MONTH

No. 978.—Vol. 65
Registered at the General Post
Office for Canadian Postage

AUGUST 1 1924

Price 6d.; Postage 2d.
Annual Subscription, post-free, 7s. 6d.

ROYAL CHORAL SOCIETY.

Patron: HIS MAJESTY THE KING.

General Conductor: MR. H. L. BALFOUR, Mus. BAC.

(Season 1924—1925.)

There are now VACANCIES in the CHOIR for SOPRANOS, CONTRALTOS, TENORS, and BASSES. Applicants should have STRONG VOICES OF GOOD QUALITY, and must be prepared to pass an examination in SIGHT-READING. Address, The Secretary, Royal Choral Society, Royal Albert Hall, S.W.7

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

YORK GATE, MARYLEBONE ROAD, LONDON, N.W.1.

Instituted 1822. Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1830.

Patron: HIS MAJESTY THE KING.

President: H.R.H. THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT, K.G.

Principal: JOHN B. McEWEN, M.A., F.R.A.M.

MICHAELMAS TERM will begin on Monday, September 22.
ENTRANCE EXAMINATION on or about Thursday, September 18.

A SPECIAL COURSE FOR THE TRAINING OF CONDUCTORS has been instituted.

A SPECIAL TEACHERS' TRAINING COURSE has been arranged to meet the requirements of The Teachers' Registration Council.

J. A. CREIGHTON, Secretary.

THE ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

PRINCE CONSORT ROAD, SOUTH KENSINGTON, S.W.7.

(Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1883.)

Patron: HIS MAJESTY THE KING.

President: H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, K.G.

Director: SIR HUGH P. ALLEN, M.A., Mus. Doc.

Honorary Secretary: GEORGE A. MACMILLAN, Esq., D.Litt.

Registrar: CLAUDE AVELING, Esq., M.A.

The College offers a Complete Course of Musical Education to pupils of both sexes, both professional and amateur. Upwards of seventy Scholarships and Exhibitions are founded which provide free musical education.

SPECIAL CLASSES for CONDUCTING and TRAINING of TEACHERS have been instituted.

The OPERATIC and BALLET CLASSES have the use of the fully equipped College OPERA THEATRE with SUNKEN ORCHESTRA.

Examinations for the Associateship of the College (A.R.C.M.) in all subjects held three times a year in December, April, and September.

ROYAL

MANCHESTER COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

Founded 1893. Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1923.

Patron: HER MAJESTY QUEEN ALEXANDRA.

President: H.R.H. THE DUKE OF YORK, K.G.

Principal: Dr. ADOLPH BRODSKY.

Registrar: STANLEY WITHERS, M.A.

Students are required to enter upon a complete course of Musical instruction, and are not admitted for a shorter period than one year.

Fee for the year, £36. Special fee for Organ Course, £30, and for Wind Instrument Course, £18.

Systematic Course for the Training of Teachers included in the curriculum.

The Prospectus, with Scholarship information, Diploma Regulations, and Entry Forms, on application.

Guildhall School of Music.

(CORPORATION OF LONDON.)

VICTORIA EMBANKMENT, E.C.4.

PRINCIPAL: SIR LANDON RONALD, F.R.A.M., F.R.C.M., &c.

PRIVATE LESSONS in all Musical Subjects, and STAGE TRAINING in Elocution, Gesture, Dancing, Opera.

Complete Musical Education at inclusive fees, £9 9s. and £12 12s. Opera Class, Saturdays. Special Training Course for Teachers (approved by Teachers' Registration Council).

Prospectus and Syllabus of Local Centres and Schools Examinations (open to general public) free.

Telephone: Cent. 4459. H. SAXE WYNDHAM, Secretary.

The Royal College of Organists.

THE SOLO-PLAYING TESTS for the next F.R.C.O. EXAMINATION are:

Prelude and Fugue in C, 9-8 time, J. S. Bach. (Novello, Book 9, p. 156; Augener, p. 69; Peters, Vol. 2, No. 7.)

Fantasia in G major (without Fugue), C. Hubert H. Parry. Original Compositions for the Organ (New Series) No. 22. (Novello.)

Adagio espressivo, from the Symphony in C, Schumann. Stainer's arrangements, No. 5. p. 54. (Novello.) This arrangement only.

The 10 selected pieces and the book set for the Essay for the January, 1925, A.R.C.O. Examination, are the same as those set for July, 1924.

Regulations, list of College Publications, Lectures, &c., may be had on application.

Examples indicating the character and approximate difficulty of the NEW TESTS, set for the first time at the July, 1924, Examinations, may be obtained at the College.

Associateship or Fellowship, 6d. each (post free).

The College is closed during August.

H. A. HARDING, Hon. Secretary.
Kensington Gore, S.W.7.

96 and 95, WIMPOLE STREET, W.1.

TOBIAS MATTHAY PIANOFORTE SCHOOL

Instruction under his teachers, and under his own supervision.

Open to Professionals and Amateurs, and also to Children.

The Staff consists of thirty-nine senior Professors of thorough experience and platform reputation, all trained by the founder.

Special Short Courses for Teachers during term and vacation.

LECTURE-LESSON Class by Mr. MATTHAY on the practical teaching of Technique and Interpretation, diagnosis and correction of faults, musical analysis and synthesis, &c., alternate Wednesday evenings.

Mr. FREDERICK MOORE takes alternate Wednesdays.

COMPLETE TRAINING COURSE FOR TEACHERS.

(Approved by the Teachers' Registration Council.)

This ONE-YEAR Course may be joined at the beginning of ANY TERM.

For further particulars please apply, Mrs. MARION COLE, Secretary.

MANCHESTER SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

Principal: ALBERT J. CROSS, A.R.A.M.

FOUNDED 1892.

The oldest Institution in Manchester devoted solely to the interests of Music.

All branches of Music taught. Day and Evening Private Lessons. Opera Class. Full Orchestral Class. Intermediate and Elementary String Orchestras, Classes for Ensemble Playing, Elocution, Choral Singing, Harmony, &c.
Single Subjects taught. Prospectus from 16, Albert Square.

GLASGOW

ATHENÆUM SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

SESSION 1923-24.

The Session consists of Three Terms: September 10 to December 1, December 3 to March 8, and March 10 to June 6.

Complete Musical Curriculum. Day and Evening Classes. Single Subjects taught.

Prospectus and further information may be obtained from:

STUART S. FORSYTH, Secretary,

ATHENÆUM BUILDINGS, GLASGOW.

BIRMINGHAM & MIDLAND INSTITUTE

SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

Visitor ... Sir EDWARD ELGAR, O.M., Mus.Doc., LL.D.

Director ... GRANVILLE BANTOCK, M.A., D.Mus. (Ed.).

SESSION 1923-1924.

The Session consists of AUTUMN TERM (September 20 to December 18); WINTER TERM (January 19 to April 9); SUMMER TERM (April 11 to July 9).

Instruction in all branches of Music, Students' Choir and Orchestra, Chamber Music, Students' Rehearsals, and Concerts.

Prospectus and further information may be obtained from—

H. M. FRANCIS, Secretary.

Paradise Street, Birmingham.

PAPER WORK BY MUS. B., F.R.C.O.

OVER 1100 SPECIMEN WORKINGS.

"Your lessons and ideas splendid."

"Your excellent models make my attempts look cold."

RECENT SUCCESSES.

2s. 6d. per lesson and postage.

"E. B.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

L.R.A.M. AND A.R.C.M.

TEACHING SINGING AND ELOCUTION EXAMINATIONS

Numerous Successes both in Singing and Elocution Exams. at L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M.

Special Correspondence Course and personal tuition. Complete preparation.

Also Special Short Instructional Courses in Voice-Production and The Art of Teaching Singing, to meet particular requirements of the General Practitioner in Music.

MR. W. LEE WEBSTER, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M.

INGLESIDE, PARK ROAD, NOTTINGHAM.

THE LONDON COLLEGE FOR CHORISTERS.

6 and 7, BLOMFIELD CRESCENT, PADDINGTON, W. 2.

Founder: Mr. JAMES BATES.

Solo Boys and Chorus Boys supplied at short notice for Church Services, &c. Telephone: Paddington 5990. Sec., ARTHUR G. BATES.

WIGMORE HALL STUDIOS.—These splendidly appointed Studios are the recognised centre of the best musical activities in London. Forty-five rooms. Grand Piano in every room. Lift, telephone and every comfort and convenience. Low inclusive rates. One morning or afternoon per week the minimum time arranged for. Apply, 38, Wigmore Street, W.1.

THE ASSOCIATED BOARD

OF THE R.A.M. AND THE R.C.M.

FOR LOCAL EXAMINATIONS IN MUSIC.

Patron: HIS MAJESTY THE KING.

President: H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, K.G.

LOCAL CENTRE EXAMINATIONS (SYLLABUS A).

Written Examinations held in March and November at all Centres. Practical Examinations in March-April and November-December at all Centres. Entries for the November-December Examinations close Wednesday, October 15th, 1924.

"SCHOOL" EXAMINATIONS (SYLLABUS B).

Held throughout the British Isles three times a year, viz., March-April, June-July, and October-November. Entries for the October-November Examinations close Wednesday, October 8th, 1924.

ELOCUTION EXAMINATIONS will be held at certain fixed centres in March-April, June-July, and October-November each year. For full particulars see special Elocution Syllabus.

Examination Music and Scales for Pianoforte and for Violin, and Past Written Papers are published officially by the Board, and can be obtained from the Central Office, or through any Music Seller.

The Board offers annually SIX EXHIBITIONS tenable at The R.A.M. or The R.C.M. for Two or Three Years.

Syllabuses A and B, Elocution Syllabus, Entry Forms, and any further information, may be obtained post-free from:

THE SECRETARY, 14 & 15, Bedford Square, London, W.C.1.

THE LONDON SCHOOL OF SINGING.

20A, HENRIETTA STREET, CAVENDISH SQUARE, W.1.

President: A. NETTLEFOLD.

Principal ... .. WARD COWDERY.

Acting Principal ... .. DAVID GODELL.

The School provides complete instruction and training in all branches of Vocal Art for both professional and Amateur voices. Latent talent successfully developed. Public appearances arranged. Students' Concerts monthly. Auditions free.

Particulars from Secretary. Mayfair 3819.

THE

LONDON CHOIR SCHOOL

(CHAMPION HILL SCHOOL).

GROVE LANE, DENMARK HILL, S.E. 5.
(Twelve minutes from Victoria, L.B.S.C. Railway;
L.C.C. Trams 56, 58, 62, and 84 pass the door.)

Director: CARLTON BORROW, A.R.C.O.

Solo and Chorus Boys for Services, Oratorios, Madrigal Societies, Concerts, &c. Solo and Chorus Altos (male), Tenors, and Basses for Temporary Engagements.

Telephone: Brixton 2124.

Apply, Secretary.

JOHN B. WOOD, MUS. BAC.

C. G. WOOD, MUS. BAC., L.R.A.M.

THE IDEAL CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

EXPERT TUTORS.

THEORY OF MUSIC, HARMONY,
COMPOSITION, ART OF TEACHING,
INTERPRETATION,
FORM AND MEMORY TRAINING
FOR MUSICIANS.

Correspondents from all parts of the world and ex-students of the Principal Musical Institutions have been enrolled as pupils.

Write,

6, BOLTON ROAD, FARNWORTH, BOLTON.

THREE CHOIRS FESTIVAL. HEREFORD.

SEPTEMBER 7, 9, 10, 11, and 12, 1924.

The 204th Meeting of the Three Choirs of Hereford, Gloucester, and Worcester.

Principals:

THE LADY HOWARD DE WALDEN.
Miss DORA LABBETTE. Miss AGNES NICHOLLS.
Miss DOROTHY SILK. Miss ELSIE SUDDABY.
Miss MURIEL BRUNSKILL. Miss ASTRA DESMOND.
Miss OLGA HALEY.
Mr. JOHN COATES. Mr. TUDOR DAVIES.
Mr. STEUART WILSON. Mr. NORMAN ALLIN.
Mr. HERBERT HEYNER. Mr. CHARLES KNOWLES.
Mr. ROBERT RADFORD.
Miss BEATRICE HARRISON (Solo Violoncello).
W. H. REED'S STRING QUARTET.

LONDON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

(Principal 1st Violin: Mr. W. H. REED).

ORGAN, Mornings ... Sir IVOR ATKINS, Mus. Doc.
ORGAN & PIANOFORTE, Evenings Dr. A. HERBERT BREWER.
PIANOFORTE, CHAMBER CONCERT Mrs. PERCY HULL.
CONDUCTOR: DR. PERCY C. HULL.

IN THE CATHEDRAL.

SUNDAY, Sept. 7th, 3.0 p.m.

OPENING SERVICE WITH CHORUS AND ORCHESTRA.

TUESDAY MORNING, Sept. 9th, 11.30 a.m.

"Elijah" ... Mendelssohn

TUESDAY EVENING, 7.30 p.m.

"The Tower" (New Work) ... Bainton
"The Dream of Gerontius" ... Elgar

WEDNESDAY MORNING, Sept. 10th, 11.30 a.m.

"Mass in B minor" ... Bach
"Symphony No. 4" ... Brahms
"Go, Song of Mine" ... Elgar

THURSDAY MORNING, Sept. 11th, 11.30 a.m.

"The Kingdom" ... Elgar
"Parsifal" (Finale, Act I) ... Wagner
"The Hymn of Jesus" ... Holst
"Violoncello Concerto" ... Elgar

THURSDAY EVENING, 7.30 p.m.

"Requiem" ... Brahms
"Stabat Mater" ... Rossini
"Blest Pair of Sirens" ... Parry

FRIDAY MORNING, Sept. 12th, 11.30 a.m.

"The Messiah" ... Handel

IN THE SHIREHALL.

WEDNESDAY EVENING, Sept. 10th, 8 p.m.

ORCHESTRAL CONCERT.

New Works by Atkins, Brewer, Reed, Brent-Smith.
Songs, &c.

FRIDAY EVENING, Sept. 12th, 8 p.m.

CHAMBER CONCERT.

"On Wenlock Edge" ... Vaughan Williams
The W. H. Reed String Quartet, Violoncello Solos,
Songs, &c.

Chorus and Orchestra of about 350 performers.

Serial Tickets admitting to all Oratorios and Wednesday Evening Concert, £5 16s.

ADMISSION TO CATHEDRAL.—Division 1, Nave, 20s.; Division 2, Aisles, 12s.; Division 3, Transepts and Ladye Chapel, 7s. 6d.; Division 4, Choir Aisles, 2s. 6d. Rehearsals in Cathedral, 10s. 6d. Rehearsal in Shirehall, 7s. 6d.

SHIREHALL.—Wednesday, Grand Orchestral Concert, one class of seats only, 10s. 6d. Friday, Chamber Concert, 1st Division, 7s. 6d.; 2nd Division, 5s.; 3rd Division, 2s. 6d.

The above prices include Tax.

For any further information and all particulars as to Stewards, &c., apply to Mr. GEORGE HOLLOWAY, General Hon. Secretary, The Prospect, Aylestone Hill, Hereford; HUBERT M. WILSON, Assistant Secretary, 17, Eign Street, Hereford; or Messrs. HEINS & Co., Broad Street, Hereford.

COMPLETE PROGRAMME, POST FREE, 6d.

NOTTINGHAM COMPETITIVE MUSICAL FESTIVAL.

Thursday, Friday, and Saturday,
OCTOBER 23rd, 24th, and 25th, 1924.

ADJUDICATORS:

SIR RICHARD TERRY, D.Mus.
HARVEY GRACE. GRANVILLE HUMPHREYS.
FREDERIC DAWSON. SPENCER DYKE, F.R.A.M.

Full particulars published in the SYLLABUS (price 6d.), to be obtained from the Hon. Sec.,

W. F. BARTON, 28, Park Row, Nottingham.

THE National Union of Organists' Associations.

19, BERNERS STREET, W.1.

PRESIDENT ... S. H. NICHOLSON, Esq., M.A., Mus. B.

ANNUAL CONGRESS,

NEWCASTLE-UPON-TYNE, SEPTEMBER 2, 3, & 4, 1924.

The Congress Handbook and Programme is now ready, and may be obtained, post free, by any member. Copies will also be supplied to non-members on receipt of 6d.

JOHN BROOK, Hon. General Secretary.

MR. CHARLES TREE

BERLIOZ'S "FAUST."—"A triumph as Mephisto."—Sheffield Independent.

Mr. Tree lectures next season on the "Art of Bel Canto" in many of the leading cities, including London, Glasgow, Leeds, Bradford. "How to ACQUIRE EASE OF VOICE-PRODUCTION" AND ITS COMPANION, "BEL CANTO" EXERCISES, 5/2 and 3/7 post free. (If difficult to obtain, write direct.)

Mr. Tree will give a few Special Lessons to any keenly interested who will be up for the Exhibition. Accommodation may be had at

Bolton Mansions Hotel, Bolton Gardens, S.W.5.
Courtfield Gardens Hotel, Courtfield Gardens, S.W.5.

Concert Dates. Bolton Mansions Hotel, S.W.5. (Kensington 8r6.)

MR. W. H. BREARE

VOCAL ADVISER AND TEACHER OF SINGING

TO STUDENTS AND THE PROFESSION.

Author of "Vocalism," "Elocution: Its First Principles," "Vocal Faults and their Remedies." Now Published: "Vocal Technique: How it feels to Sing."

3s. 6d. each. Postage: 1 Book, 9d.; 2 or 3, 1s.; Set of 4, 1s. 3d.

"The most complete guide to singing in English."—"Lancelot," in the Referee.

"One of the sanest of sane expositions."—Musical Courier, N.Y.

"Is a reliable expert in all branches."—Gentlewoman.

"A magnificent guide to both teachers and students."—Eastern Morning News.

"Do not hesitate to commend."—Glasgow Herald.

"His technical knowledge is minute, wide, and accurate: what he has to say is well worthy of consideration by public singers and music teachers."—Aberdeen Free Press.

"Common-sense in all he utters."—Leeds Mercury.

"Is an acknowledged authority. . . ."—Western Morning News.

"I have not the slightest fear of contradiction when I say that no one knows more about the voice and vocal production than Mr. W. H. Breare."—"Counterpoint," in the Newcastle Journal.

Address: "HERALD" BUILDINGS, HARROGATE.

TWENTY-FIFTH YEAR.

WILLIAM WOLLER'S HOLIDAY AND WEEK-END COURSES.

"PRACTICAL VOICE-PRODUCTION."

"PRINCIPLES OF PIANOFORTE PLAYING."

"SPECIAL REQUIREMENTS."

To commemorate 25th year of these Courses, my "Special Requirements" Course will be included FREE to all taking the double Course.

WILLIAM WOLLER (DEPT. T),

75, Gunterstone Road, Kensington, London, W.14.

TWO VALUABLE VOCAL SCHOLARSHIPS

(£200-£300 each)

To commemorate 25 years of professional teaching. Stamp for particulars. William Woller School of Voice Culture (Dept. T), 75, Gunterstone Road, Kensington, London, W.14.

YOU CANNOT DOUBT IT IN THE FACE OF THIS. READ THESE LETTERS:

They are typical of the hundreds received from pianists of all grades who have overcome their piano difficulties by means of the "Gillett" SPECIALISED AND INDIVIDUAL CORRESPONDENCE LESSONS AND CONSULTATIONS in Modern Piano playing.

Mus. Doc., Oxon., F.R.C.O., writes:

"I do think your 'School' is so excellent. The thoroughness and lucidity with which you treat every detail of pianoforte playing are amazing, and ONE CAN HAVE NO POSSIBLE DOUBT that the principles you put forward are the CORRECT and FUNDAMENTAL ones for which we have sought so painfully in years gone by."

An Amateur writes:

"Of your course I think highly; your rational, scientific method appeals strongly to any mind that wants to go right to the fundamentals and rock bottom of all that is presented to it. There is nothing empirical in your instructions. Your premises are self-evident, and the development of your method from them as clear and convincing as it is possible to wish for. ONE CANNOT DEVELOP BAD HABITS UNDER YOUR SYSTEM, and the beginner's most common fault and greatest stumbling block, 'STIFFNESS,' is IMPOSSIBLE."

(Every pupil is treated in strict confidence, therefore no names are published.)

OVER TWO THOUSAND TEACHERS AND PIANISTS (several of whom have gained considerable fame) now use THE GILLETT METHOD which YOU TOO WILL EVENTUALLY ADOPT.

It is more than ever essential that you keep abreast of the modern movement for development of all phases of technique, ensuring remarkable Beauty of Tone. The "Gillett" method is a decided step forward in the right direction.

Mr. Gillett will be pleased to see those visiting Wembley or passing through London, who would like to make inquiries during the holidays. Single CONSULTATION LESSONS CAN BE ARRANGED, also SHORT HOLIDAY COURSES.

Particulars, with further letters describing the merits of the "Gillett" teaching, will be sent to those giving details of their individual difficulties, with names of one or two pieces they play.

CHARLES A. GILLETT PIANOFORTE SCHOOL,
11, SOUTH MOLTON STREET, LONDON, W.1.

HOW TO PLAY DIFFICULT MUSIC WITH EASE. MUS. BAC. AND MUS. DOC.

PIANISTS who wish to play the music which affords the greatest enjoyment and relaxation—the compositions of the world's greatest musicians—and who are averse to the drudgery of wearisome keyboard practising in order to obtain the necessary technical proficiency, will find the "BRAIN TO KEYBOARD" method of the greatest possible help.

Practice on this System, much of it away from the keyboard, is never wearisome; and after some weeks of it, spending quite a short time every day, a degree of technical proficiency is obtained which would be otherwise impossible, even after years of keyboard practising for several hours daily.

Many eminent musicians, including the late SIR FREDERICK BRIDGE, have used and highly recommended my System—the ORIGINAL POSTAL SYSTEM. More than 17,000 successful students of all ages add their testimony.

"From Brain to Keyboard" Macdonald Smith's System of Pianoforte Playing.

My illustrated book, "LIGHT ON PIANOFORTE PLAYING," will gladly be sent to any pianist. It fully explains the principles and advantages of the methods used in the System. When applying, please state whether comparative beginner, average, or advanced pianist. The book will be sent free of charge, and post free.

M. MACDONALD SMITH, 19, BLOOMSBURY Sq., LONDON, W.C.1.

Full Postal Preparation
by DR. SPRANKLING'S
"Individual" System of Coaching.

LATEST SUCCESSES.

Mus. Doc.	-	-	4
Mus. Bac.	-	-	6
Mus. Bac. "Exercise"	-	-	4
(after preliminary Course in Modern Composition).
1st Mus. Bac.	-	-	8

For terms, &c.,

DR. NORMAN SPRANKLING,
Mus. Doc. (London),
48, LINDEN ROAD, REDLAND, BRISTOL.

MUSICAL COMPOSITIONS REVISED.

LYRICS SET TO MUSIC, MELODIES HARMONIZED, MUSIC TRANSPOSED AND COPIED, BAND PARTS WRITTEN, MSS. PREPARED FOR PUBLICATION BY A MASTER HAND, ACCOMPANIMENTS OF DISTINCTION WRITTEN TO SONGS.

For terms, write, A. CARRINGTON BRIGGS,
Glennholme, The Common, Hessele, E. Yorks.

HAVE YOU SENT FOR IT?

New Guide to Degrees and Diplomas (32 pages).

It is the most comprehensive Guide ever prepared for Students of Music, but

IT IS NOT UP-TO-DATE (in one respect).

WHY? It was published on July 1st, 1924, and since then 9 of our Students have passed Matric.

This gives a total of 113 SUCCESSES at MATRIC.

As we have scored over A CENTURY, we invite

100 F.R.C.O.'S who can devote 5 to 6 hours weekly to the work, to start now and qualify for

MATRIC in from 4 to 6 Months.

---

OTHER RECENT SUCCESSES:

1st M.B.	- - - -	8	A.R.C.O., F.R.C.O.	-	22
L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M.	- -	16	A.Mus. T.C.L., A.T.C.L.	-	7

---

MODERN CORRESPONDENCE COLLEGE

"ST. MORITZ," 201, ILKESTON ROAD, NOTTINGHAM.

---

 THE "INDIVIDUAL" METHOD (POSTAL TUITION).

---

INDIVIDUAL COACHING by
Correspondence, in Paper Work,
for all Degrees and Diplomas in Music.

Full Preparation for L.R.A.M. and
A.R.C.M., September and December.
All Paper Work, and questions on Touch,
Technique, Fingering, Pedalling, &c.

Also for Mus. Bac. and Mus. Doc., and all R.C.O. and Trinity College Diplomas.

NUMEROUS SUCCESSES.

---

DR. NORMAN SPRANKLING

Mus. Doc. (London), L.R.A.M.,

48, LINDEN ROAD, REDLAND, BRISTOL.

'PHONE: BRISTOL 3033.

Candidates entering for the first time, and also those who have failed to pass any examination,
should write to Dr. Sprankling (address above).

CONSULTATION LESSONS ALSO IN BRISTOL
AND LONDON.

The extraordinary success of
Dr. Sprankling's System is due very largely to the fact that the tuition is entirely INDIVIDUAL.

Instead of forming a fixed and rigid
"Course" of lessons, each lesson is sent with a view to the special requirements
of the individual student.

By this method, all weak points are at once concentrated upon, and each student is individually given a grip of everything essential to success, in the shortest possible time.

---

CALISTHENICS

FOR THE MUSCLES USED IN SINGING

As taught and perfected for 20 years.

Astonishing increase of POWER, QUALITY, RANGE,
and EASE of SINGING assured by five minutes' practice
twice (better three times) daily.

By Correspondence, Fee £2 2s., for Three Lessons.

No more sore or relaxed throat, or strained voice.

THOS. CHURCH SAXBY, L.Mus.T.C.L.

3A, SEVEIRG BUILDINGS, LEWES.

---

PIANO PEDALS, with Octave Coupler

This wonderful invention supersedes all Piano Pedals, and is a Master Patent.
St. George's Hall, Liverpool,
9th April, 1921.

"The simplicity of the attachment, and the clever sixteen-feet,
eight-feet, or both combined, 'OPTIONAL OCTAVE' contrivance
astonished me.

"I was delighted with the Pedal touch and with the variety in that touch, which your Attachment makes possible. It is very responsive to the movements of the feet, and is reliable."

HERBERT F. ELLINGFORD, Mus. Bac., Oxon., F.R.C.O.

Terms: 17 guineas net cash, or monthly payments made.

Write for Lists, Prices, and Clients' Opinions, and References to

THE MALKIN PATENT PEDAL CO., LTD.,

NEWCASTLE-UNDER-LYME.

London address: 11, Ashlake Road, Streatham, S.W.16.

U.S.A.—FOR SALE.—The sole rights to manufacture, import, or sell in the United States.

CAN YOU PLAY FROM MEMORY?

Many pianists and organists imagine that musical memory is a natural gift for which the only substitute is hours of hard, uninspired practice.

This is not the case. Musical memory can be acquired through correct training.

The MACKINNON MUSICAL MEMORY COURSE, written by a well-known concert pianist and teacher, brings the training of musical memory to such perfection, that any pianist or organist who has fifteen minutes a day to spare, can acquire a sound and reliable musical memory. Previous failure to memorise is of no importance.

After taking the COURSE players who were unable to memorise the easiest piece, play difficult music from memory without nervousness.

The COURSE is complete in SIX CORRESPONDENCE LESSONS. No drudgery is required. Every lesson is novel and fascinating. From the outset a repertoire of beautiful music is formed. Fill up the Coupon below, and send for free booklet to-day.

MACKINNON'S MUSICAL MEMORY COURSE.

EMPIRE HOUSE, 175 PICCADILLY, W.1.

IN SIX POSTAL LESSONS - FEE, £3:3:0

GUARANTEE

If, within four weeks from the receipt of the first lesson and before the receipt of the second, any Student feels that he or she has not already made definite progress as a result of taking the Course, Miss Mackinnon will unconditionally refund such Student's fees in full.

USE THIS COUPON
TO-DAY.

Extracts from a few of hundreds of testimonials received:

From a Church Organist:

Of the greatest assistance. Cannot fail to play from memory where your instructions are followed.

From a Cathedral Organist:

To all who find difficulty [in memorising Chants], I recommend this Memory Course.

From a Pianist:

Quite wonderful — could not memorise a single note before I started the Course. Can now play Scriabin from memory.

COUPON

MISS LILIAS MACKINNON, Empire House, 175, Piccadilly, W.1.

Please send me, without obligation, your free booklet on "MEMORY TRAINING."

Name.....

Address.....

PROFESSIONAL NOTICES.

MISS LYDIA JOHN

(A.R.A.M., L.R.A.M.), CONTRALTO.

Concerts, Oratorios, Organ Recitals, &amp;c.

Recital-Lectures of Folk-Songs, Elizabethan Songs, &amp;c.

Pupils received for Voice-Production and Singing.

Prepared for L.R.A.M., Associated Board, &amp;c.

15, Albion Road, London, N.W.6. Tel.: Hampstead, N.W.6.

HAROLD KNOWLTON

TENOR.

St. Paul's Cathedral, E.C.4.

1, Hatherley Gardens, Crouch End, N. 8.

WILLIAM COLEMAN

(THE MANCHESTER BASS.)

Oratorio. Concerts. Lessons.

Address: 18, Plymouth Avenue, Manchester, S.E.

ARTHUR LEES

BASS.

Concerts, Recitals, Masonics, Oratorios, &amp;c.

"Ravenscroft," 120, Waldegrave Road, Brighton.

MR. HERBERT TRACEY

BASS.

8, Cavendish Mansions, E.5.

London Wall 4033.

MISS THELMA DANDRIDGE (A.R.C.M.),

'CELLIST.

Concerts, Pupils, &c., apply to "Inversnaid," Chinbrook Road,
Grove Park, S.E.12. (Phone: Lee Green 1707.)

LEONARD SALISBURY (A.R.C.M.)

Founder of "The Gresham Singers."

Receives Pupils in Voice-Culture and Singing,

at 14, Hanover Street, Regent Street, W.1.

Tele.: Streatham 2525.

TO CONCERT DIRECTORS.

ARTHUR MANGELSDORFF

(British-born).

The well-known Pianist is arranging a Recital Tour of the various seaside and holiday resorts.

He will be pleased to negotiate for a Recital or part programme.

Managers of suitable Concert-Hall also please send scale of charges for hiring.

Please address all communications to

ARTHUR ELLARSHAW, 497, Coventry Road, Birmingham.

MR. ALBERT GARCIA

LESSONS IN VOICE PRODUCTION AND SINGING.

Special Coaching in Opera, Oratorio, and for Recitals.

Pupils prepared for A.R.C.M. and L.R.A.M. Exams.

"A number of Mr. Albert Garcia's pupils sang excellently at the concert which they gave on Wednesday evening. It was particularly pleasant to hear voices so well placed and well poised, smooth and even in tone from the lowest to the highest notes, showing a control which too few learn to exercise."—Daily Telegraph.

"One takes it that a concert by pupils fulfils its object if it demonstrates—as the one given at Wigmore Hall by singers studying with Mr. Albert Garcia certainly did—the excellence of that master's method."—Era.

"Mr. Garcia—himself a fine artist and the inheritor of a great tradition and a great name—has some most promising pupils, and such singers as Miss Rosa Burn and Mr. Frederick Lippold show in what an excellent school they have been trained."—Daily Telegraph.

For Auditions, Appointments, &c., write,
59, Queen's Road, St. John's Wood, N.W.8.
(Hampstead 4597.)

THE TRAINING OF TEACHERS.

CORRESPONDENCE COURSES IN

VOICE-PRODUCTION, covering the whole subject.
FORM AND TEACHING, TOUCH, ACCOMPANIMENT,
MUSICAL APPRECIATION, AND AURAL TRAINING.

Nearly 1000 Successes at L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., &amp;c.

MR. R. J. PITCHER, Mus. Bac., F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M.
(Double Dip. Singing and Piano), L.R.A.M., Class A, Performer
and Teacher.

Prof. Singing G.S.M., 1905-1915. Special Lect. on Mus. Appreciation
to L.C.C.

"Recit. and its Rendering," 1s. 6d. "Vade Mecum for Singers," 6d.
Send for prospectus, 21, Boundary Road, N.W.8.

Phone: 1715 Maida Vale.

DR. F. H. WOOD

(Organist of Blackpool Parish Church),

COACHES FOR UNIVERSITY DEGREES.

Students' recent Successes include:

Durham Mus. D. (1923), Ex. and Final, both in the same year and at the first attempt. Mus. B. Ex. (1924). Also other Universities, Mus. D. (1922); Mus. B. (1923) and 1924 (2)

252, HORNBY ROAD, BLACKPOOL.

MUSICAL REVISER TO MESSRS. NOVELLO FOR THIRTY-NINE YEARS.

COMPOSERS' MSS.

REVISED AND PREPARED FOR PRINTING

H. ELLIOT BUTTON, "Harewood," Ardwick Road, N.W.2.

* * * The late Sir HUBERT PARRY and Sir FREDERICK BRIDGE permitted their names to appear, along with those of the following composers to whom reference is kindly permitted:—Sir EDWARD ELGAR, O.M.; Sir HENRY WALFORD DAVIES, Mus. Doc.

DR. ALLISON instructed by Post Candidates who
OBTAINED DEGREES OF MUS. B. and Mus. D. at Oxford,
Cambridge, Dublin, London, and Durham Universities, Diplomas of
L.L.C.M. (April, 1924), L.R.A.M., F.R.C.O., L. Mus. L.C.M.,
A.R.C.M., Gold Medals, Silver Medals, Scholarships, Prizes, Certificates, and valuable professional appointments. Dr. Allison is willing to teach those who neither require nor desire to pass examinations.
Harmony, Counterpoint, Orchestration, and Analysis of Compositions
by Post, to correspondents anywhere. Personal instruction in Theory, Singing, and Piano. 24, Park Range, Victoria Park, Manchester.

REVISION OF MUSICAL COMPOSITIONS.

Dr. Horton Allison, 24, Park Range, Victoria Park, Manchester.

CAPTAIN PERCY BAKER, M.C., F.R.C.O.,

L. Mus. T.C.L. (Author of "Compend of Musical Knowledge,"
"Studies in History and Form," &c.). Specialist in Tuition by post for T.C.L. and R.C.O. Essay Models, Sight Reading Courses.
Study Aids, 9d. Studies in Modulation, 3s.

Send for interesting Pamphlets on Methods.

HAZELDENE, TEWKESBURY.

MR. J. PERCY BAKER, Mus. B., Dunelm.,

F.R.A.M., gives Postal Tuition and prepares for Examinations.
Personal Lessons (Pianoforte and Theory), at 14, Hanover Square, W.1.
Address, 12, Longley Road, Tooting Graveney, S.W.17.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:—

- (1.) L.R.A.M. Paper Work.
- (2.) A.R.C.M. Paper Work.
- (3.) Interesting Courses of Study in Rudiments,
Harmony, Form, &c.

L.R.A.M. Exams. 1910-24 ... 244 Correspondence Pupils successful.

A.R.C.M. Exams. 1914-24 ... 64 " " "

MR. E. H. BIBBY, Mus. Bac., L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M.,

Waterloo Buildings, Piccadilly, Manchester.

In response to many requests, Mr. BIBBY begs to announce that he has prepared the following additional CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:

- (1.) The "Mus. Bac." Degree.
- (2.) A.R.C.O. and F.R.C.O. Paper Work.
- (3.) A.T.C.L. and L.T.C.L. Paper Work.
- (4.) The Associated Board Examinations in Rudiments,
Harmony, and Counterpoint.

(Address as above.)

MISS J. BLAKE, A.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. (Regd.)

Teacher of Singing), prepares pupils L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M.
Exams., as Teacher or Performer. Highest recommendations.—
Studio, 139, New Bond Street, W.1.

L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. SPECIAL COACHING by

ARTHUR ELLARSHAW, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. Pianist.
Paper-work Postal. Address, 497, Coventry Road, Birmingham.

DR. A. C. PHILLIPS EMBLING, Mus. Doc.,

Dunelm. (1921), Mus. Bac., Oxon., F.R.C.O. Lessons by post
for Diplomas and Degrees. 64, Wokingham Road, Reading.

FREDERICK GREEN, L.R.A.M., Etc. Voice

Specialist, Vocal Coach, and Adjudicator. Preparation for
L.R.A.M. c/o Rushworth & Dreaper, 11, Islington, Liverpool.

D. R. CUTHBERT HARRIS, Mus. Doc., Dunelm., F.R.C.O. SPECIALIST IN CORRESPONDENCE TUITION. 405 Successes in Mus. D., Mus. B., F.R.C.O., and A.R.C.O., &c. 58, Avondale Road, Gorleston-on-Sea.

D. R. HARRIS REVISES and PREPARES MSS. FOR PUBLICATION. Accompaniments to Songs written.

MISS H. HEALE COACHES for all EXAMINATIONS IN MUSIC (at private residence or at West-End Studio), in Pianoforte. Harmony, Counterpoint, Fugue, Form, Orchestration, "Teaching," Modulation, Transposition, &c. For Terms, &c., apply Dunraven House, 41, Albert Bridge Road, S.W.11.

HERBERT HODGE, F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M., Organist and Choirmaster, St. Nicholas Cole Abbey, Queen Victoria Street, London, has, since 1908, made a speciality of coaching Candidates for the Organ Playing Examinations of the Royal College of Organists, and can arrange a private course of instruction (or single lessons) to organists visiting London, at St. Nicholas Cole Abbey. Many recent F.R.C.O. and A.R.C.O. successes. 5, Streatham Place, S.W.2. Telephone: Streatham 2195.

D. R. A. G. IGGULDEN, Mus. Doc. Dunelm., F.R.C.O., SPECIALIST IN CORRESPONDENCE COACHING. Latest Successes—Durham, March, 1924—2 in 1st Mus. Bac. Sept., 1923—2 out of the 3 Mus. Doc. passes, and 4 out of the 6 Final Mus. Bac. passes. Also 6 Exercises, after prelim. course in composition. Over 150 Successes at Durham alone. The Durdans, Reigate.

D. R. PERCY WOOD, Mus. Doc. Oxon., F.R.C.O. SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:
 (1) Elementary Harmony and Counterpoint.
 (2) F.R.C.O. and A.R.C.O.
 (3) L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M.
 (4) Mus. Bac. Degree.
 Several recent Mus. B. successes at Durham.

R.C.O. EXAMINER says: "Your system is undoubtedly an excellent one."

SUCCESS GUARANTEED—given any pupils with the requisite musical ability for the examination in view.

R.C.O. SUCCESSSES IN PAPER WORK:

6 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1914.	11 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1914.
6 F.R.C.O., July, 1914.	12 A.R.C.O., July, 1914.
4 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1915.	5 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1915.
5 F.R.C.O., July, 1915.	9 A.R.C.O., July, 1915.
2 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1916.	3 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1916.
3 F.R.C.O., July, 1916.	5 A.R.C.O., July, 1916.
2 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1917.	2 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1917.
3 F.R.C.O., July, 1917.	4 A.R.C.O., July, 1917.
2 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1918.	2 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1918.
4 F.R.C.O., July, 1918.	2 A.R.C.O., July, 1918.
1 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1919.	3 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1919.
3 F.R.C.O., July, 1919.	3 A.R.C.O., July, 1919.
4 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1920.	10 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1920.
3 F.R.C.O., July, 1920.	6 A.R.C.O., July, 1920.
3 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1921.	7 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1921.
6 F.R.C.O., July, 1921.	8 A.R.C.O., July, 1921.
5 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1922.	5 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1922.
4 F.R.C.O., July, 1922.	5 A.R.C.O., July, 1922.
8 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1923.	6 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1923.
7 F.R.C.O., July, 1923.	10 A.R.C.O., July, 1923.
7 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1924.	9 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1924.
3 F.R.C.O., July, 1924.	10 A.R.C.O., July, 1924.

"Tralee," Warwick Road, Cliftonville, Margate.

F.R.C.O. AND A.R.C.O. PAPER WORK.

A SPECIAL COURSE OF CORRESPONDENCE LESSONS for the JANUARY, 1925, F.R.C.O. and A.R.C.O. Examinations IS NOW COMMENCING. The chief reason why this system of tuition is so successful is that pupils are taught how to work.

For example, in the recent F.R.C.O. examination the final section of a fugue was set, and pupils knew exactly how to work it so as to secure artistic interest and unity, and to end in a fitting manner. Similarly with the soprano solo in the afternoon paper; pupils were trained to a m at a definite scheme in the pianoforte accompaniment which could be applied to any words which the examiners could set.

Speed is a most vital factor; there is no time to sit and ponder over the tests, especially in the afternoon. Pupils were similarly instructed in the fugue episodes and part-song.

All the new tests will be covered in these lessons, and complete musical illustrations will be sent to each candidate showing exactly what the examiners require.

The whole aim of this method is to teach the principles which underlie all highly artistic music, and also the application of these principles to examination work, so that a pupil who is thus equipped is enabled not only to pass the F.R.C.O. or A.R.C.O. examination, as the case may be, but also to develop to the utmost the musical ability with which he is endowed.

DR. PERCY WOOD, Mus. Doc., Oxon., F.R.C.O.,

"TRALEE," WARWICK ROAD, CLIFTONVILLE, MARGATE.

D. R. KNOWLES (Manchester 1919, Durham 1920) specialises in preparing candidates by post for the Paper-work of all examinations in music. Solutions, with methods of working. Address, 45, Churchgate, Bolton, Lancs.

D. R. F. J. KARN (Mus. Bac. Cantab.; Mus. Doc. Toronto) continues to give lessons in Harmony and other Theoretical subjects, and prepares for all Musical Examinations. Compositions revised and Analyses written. Candidates prepared by Dr. Karn have gained the Mus. Bac. and Mus. Doc. degrees at the Universities and diplomas from the Musical Colleges. Address: 106, Haverstock Hill, London, N.W.3.

MADAME LARKCOM, F.R.A.M., Prof. Singing, R. A. Music, has resumed her lessons in Singing at the Wigmore Hall Studios, 40, Wigmore Street, W.1.

J. H. MAKINSON, F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M., A.T.C.L. Correspondence Tuition in Paper Work (T.C.L. and other Diplomas). Terms moderate. Kent House, Lake Road, Ambleside.

MISS F. HELENA MARKS, Author of "The Sonata: Its Form and Meaning," prepares for L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., and all other examinations. Pianoforte, Harmony, "Form and Teaching," &c. Personal or Correspondence Lessons in all Paper-Work subjects, including those for L.R.A.M. "Aural Training and Sight-Singing," and A.R.C.M. in "The Teaching of Musical Appreciation," &c. Pupils received and visited for the Pianoforte. Many recent successes L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., &c. 10, Matheson Road, London, W.14.

DR. H. H. L. MIDDLETON, Mus. Doc., F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. Twenty-five years' experience in Private Tuition and Coaching for Degrees. More than 800 of Dr. Middleton's Pupils have obtained Degrees at the Universities, R.A.M., R.C.M., and R.C.O. Address, 60, Berners Street, W.1.

W. J. FREDERICK PUGH, L.R.A.M., Pre- pares for L.R.A.M. (Aural Culture and Voice Culture Diplomas), A.R.C.M. (Appreciation Diploma). Recent Successes, 34, Wilmington Avenue, Chiswick, W.4.

JOHN ROBERTS has VACANCIES for a few PUPILS in VOICE PRODUCTION. "R. J.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

DR. TAYLOR'S POSTAL PUPILS HAVE passed Mus. Bac. 1st and final. A.R.C.O.; L.R.A.M.; A.T.C.L. Pupil gained the Stullie Bursary at Glasgow for Counterpoint. Latest success, A.R.C.O. for 1924. Portland Place, Lancaster.

EASTBOURNE.

DOWNSMEADE BOARDING SCHOOL FOR BOYS. Modern education with special musical education if desired. Prospects on application to the Headmaster, F. E. Wilson, F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M.

SOLO and CHORUS BOYS supplied (CITY OF LONDON CHORAL COLLEGE). Apply to Francis Sutton, F.R.C.O., St. Stephen's Walbrook, E.C.4.

CHOIRBOYS WANTED, N. W. London Free Church. 7s. 6d. monthly. Light duties. Organist, 50, Salusbury Road, N.W.6.

ST. STEPHEN, BOW.—Voluntary TENOR WANTED. Full Choral Services. Bach's "Christmas Oratorio" and "St. John Passion." Excellent opportunity experience. Choirmaster, 32, Marlborough Road, E.18.

TENOR REQUIRED, St. Michael-and-All-Angels, Bedford Park, W.4. Good reader. £20. Write, C. D. Underhill, 27, St. Peter's Square, Hammersmith, W.6.

A MATEUR OPERATIC and DRAMATIC SOCIETY, S.W. district, requires members, Ladies and Gentlemen. Secretary, 2, Pentland Street, The Grove, S.W.18.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER WANTED for Denny Parish Church. Salary, £80 per annum. Two-manual organ. Good prospects of teaching. Applications and testimonials to be lodged not later than August 15. William J. H. Ritchie, Session Clerk, Hawthorn Villa, Denny, Stirlingshire.

HOLY TRINITY CHURCH, Guildford. Wanted ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER, as soon as possible. Fine three-manual instrument. Good choir. Cathedral type of Service. Churchman, disciplinarian. Good choir-trainer. Recitalist essential. Delightful neighbourhood. £120. Apply, V. Stanley, Alexandra Hotel, Harrogate.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER, St. Paul's, Church End, Finchley, N. Usual Sunday and Week-day Services. Salary £60, and usual fees. Apply by letter, stating qualifications and experience, to Vicar.

ORGANIST-CHOIRMASTER of West-End Church, F.R.C.O., desires change of appointment. Recitalist. Recommendations from leading organists. Trainer and disciplinarian. "G." c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

DEPUTY-ORGANIST, experienced, free to officiate in Nonconformist Churches. Write, Organist, 14, Abbey Gardens, N.W.8.

CONDUCTOR (Scotsman)—REQUIRED for LONDON SCOTTISH CHOIR. Honorariums as circumstances permit. Write, stating experience, qualifications to W. Bogie, 10, Crestbrook Avenue, N.13.

CONCERT PIANIST, English and Continental Training, desires POST as TEACHER in School, College, or Conservatorium, September. London or Kent preferred. Highest references. Reply, "C. P.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

EXPERIENCED TEACHER wishes to BUY TEACHING CONNECTION. Singing, Piano. London or within easy distance. "L.R.A.M.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

TO RETIRING ORGANISTS.

WANTED TO PURCHASE, a good TEACHING CONNECTION with Organ Appointment. Write, "M.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, London, W.1.

MUSIC COMPOSERS and LYRIC WRITERS. The Cosmos Publishing Co. are open to consider Songs, &c., with a view to publication. Send MSS. with stamp for reply, to Glenholme, The Common, Hessele

ORGANS (New and Second-hand) for SALE.—Electric and pneumatic action up-to-date. Built or reconstructed. Bedwell & Son, The Cambridge Organ Works, Cambridge.

CHURCH ORGANS STANDARDISED.—Two Manuals, Pneumatic Pedals, various sizes; specially built. Five to fifteen stops. Introduced to meet the requirements of the times at minimum of cost. W. E. Richardson & Sons, Central Organ Works, Manchester, S.W.

A TWO-MANUAL PIPE ORGAN, 14 Stops, by Vowells, Bristol, standing in St. James's, Cardiff. Apply, 7, The Walk, Cardiff.

TWO-MANUAL Pedal ORGAN. 17 Stops, with Foot and Hand Blower, and Bench complete. By Bell. New condition. £60. J. Soane & Sons, Bath.

PIPE ORGANS Enlarged, Re-voiced, Repaired, and Tuned. Attractive Terms. Henry Morgan & Son, Church Organ Builders, 19, Cowdrey Rd., Wimbledon, S.W.19. Founded 1896.

CATHEDRAL ORGAN PHOTOGRAPHS.—Liverpool, St. Paul's, Canterbury, Westminster; many others. Critical definition. List from Benham, Church Lodge, Barnet.

WANTED.—MUSTEL ORGAN, one- or two-Manual. Also Ibach, Bechstein, or other first-class PIANO. Baby Grand or Upright. Full particulars, first letter, "M. B.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

BECHSTEIN Conductor's PIANO. Specially constructed. 4 Octaves. Incorporating Conductor's Stand and Desk. Superb tone. £50. Elliotts, Chequer Street, St. Albans.

'CELLO for SALE, by Benjamin Banks, Salisbury. Fine tone. Mr. Dreweatt, Norfolk Lodge, Speen, Newbury.

FOR SALE.—'CELLO (Glenister); lovely tone; perfect condition. 75, Monkham's Lane, Woodford Green, Essex.

MUSIC COPIED neatly and accurately. Transposition, Band-Parts, &c. Gordon Jacob, A.R.C.M., 1, Homefield Road, S.W.19.

MUSIC COPIED, neat work, Transposition and Duplicating. E.W. Cartwright, 17, Belvedere Rd., Bournemouth.

MUSIC COPIED.—12-stave page, 9d. (transposition extra). Neat work. M. J. Morris, 114, Alexandra Road, Hampstead, N.W.8.

MUSIC COPYING and Transposition Work WANTED. Neat and accurate. Terms moderate. "M. O.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

ORGAN MUSIC for SALE. Splendid bargains. List for stamp. "C.," 107, Oxford Street, Church Gresley, Burton-on-Trent.

THE UNKNOWN TRUTH ABOUT THE VOICE AND ITS DEVELOPMENT. By E. DAVIDSON PALMER, Mus. Bac., Oxon. Showing the prevailing Error in the Training of Men's Voices, and the primary cause of Voice-Failure in Singers and Public Speakers. Post free, 1s. (Postal Order). Address: 11, Grazebrook Road, Stoke Newington, N.16.

RUDYARD KIPLING'S RECESSIONAL HYMN, Set to Music by ROWLAND H. WILLIAMS, Price 2d., post free. Special Prices for quantities. ESCOTT & Co., Ltd., 67, Newman Street, London, W.1.

BARITONES and BASSES should buy song, "THE SILENT LAND" (Oakley). Compass A to D. Price 2s. Weekes & Co., 14, Hanover St., W.1, and all music-sellers.

L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., AURAL TESTS. Special important paper. Success assured. This paper gives details how to work. Send 4s. 6d. to "Aural Tests," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

THE ESSEX HOUSE SONG-BOOK, complete in Ten Vols. Words and Music all beautifully done by hand. £10 or offer. Apply, "A. B.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

TO COMPOSERS.

WE OFFER

TWENTY-FOUR GUINEAS AS PRIZES

FOR

TUNES AND AN ANTHEM.

Particulars, post free, on receipt of stamped addressed envelope. JAMES BROADBENT & SON, LTD., Boston Spa, Yorks.

THE TECHNIQUER FOR STRETCH, STRENGTH, AND SUPPLENESS.

We have . . . investigated . . . 'THE TECHNIQUER' . . . and it seems to us it entirely meets the needs of an instrumentalist in a scientific and reliable manner. The inventor . . . backs his claims by . . . convincing testimonials from such well-known men as Lamond, Pouishnoff, Dyke, Walenn, and many others. To those who have small stretch or but little time for practice, we advise they should look into the matter for themselves. Mr. Pitcher . . . an L.R.A.M. as a public performer, approaches the matter from a highly scientific and experienced point of view."—Extract from The Strad, March, 1924.

"Hand Development," with numerous photos, 1s. 6d.

Send for full particulars, &c.—

Miss F. J. FITCH, A.R.C.M., A.R.C.O. (Sec.),

21, Boundary Road, N.W.8.

'Phone: Maida Vale 1715.

To PIANISTS, ORGANISTS, VIOLINISTS, Etc.

The "Simplexa" Pocket Finger Trainer (Registered).

A MOST EFFICIENT APPLIANCE FOR INCREASING STRETCH, INDEPENDENCE, FLEXIBILITY, AND STRENGTH OF FINGERS. Post free 1s. 9d., with full instructions.

"SIMPLEXA," 7, YEW VILLAS, THAMES ST., WEYBRIDGE, SURREY

No. 63.—NOVELLO'S MUSIC PRIMERS.

BREATHING

FOR

VOICE-PRODUCTION

(Re-written and brought up to date).

PART I.

OF

EURHYTHM: THOUGHT IN ACTION

BY

H. H. HULBERT,

Capt. R.A.M.C., M.A. Oxford, M.R.C.S., L.R.C.P., &c.

Price ... Three Shillings.

Paper Boards, 4s.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

BECHSTEIN PIANOS

THE BECHSTEIN PIANO needs little recommendation to cultured tastes. Its beautiful tone and incomparable touch—qualities which have gained for it the esteem of every music-lover, and have set a standard to the world—are as exquisite and as characteristic as ever.

Write or call for Catalogue.

126, NEW BOND STREET
LONDON, W. I.
TELEPHONE: MAYFAIR 2653.

PIANOS

GRAND and UPRIGHT

By High Grade Makers.

NEW AND SECOND-HAND FOR SALE OR HIRE PURCHASE.

CHAS. STILES & CO.

74-76, SOUTHAMPTON ROW
LONDON, W.C.1.

Phone: MUSEUM 439.

STEINWAY

MUSIC LOVERS
CAN OBTAIN
PERFECT RESULTS
ONLY FROM THE PERFECT INSTRUMENT
THE STEINWAY.

115-117, WIGMORE STREET,
LONDON, W. I.

MOLLENHAUER FLUTES AND PICCOLOS

MESSRS. J. MOLLENHAUER & SONS possess a hundred years' world-wide reputation as makers of first-class Wood-Wind Instruments. Their Flutes and Piccolos are unrivalled in purity of tone, pleasing intonation, and solidity of mechanism, and are consequently used by the leading artists in every land.

Catalogue from—

FAUPEL BROTHERS,
4 & 5, OLD CHANGE, CHEAPSIDE, LONDON, E.C.4.
Telephone: City 5693.
Far Eastern inquiries to be addressed to our Hong-Kong office,
P.O. Box 631, Hong-Kong.

MUSIC FOR STRING ORCHESTRA.

ERNEST AUSTIN. THE VICAR OF BRAY. Variations.
Score, 9s. Parts, 9s.

ADAM CARSE. BARBARA ALLEN. Variations.
Piano Conductor, 2s. 3d. String Parts, 6s.

J. D. DAVIS. SONG OF EVENING.
Score, 4s. Parts, 3s. 4d.

T. F. DUNHILL. THE CHIDDINGFOLD SUITE.
Score, 7s. 6d. Parts, 9s. 9d.

EDWARD ELGAR. ELEGY.
Score, 2s. 6d. Parts, 1s. 8d.

INTRODUCTION AND ALLEGRO (Op. 47). Quartet
and Orchestra.

Score, 16s.; Quartet Parts, 6s.; Orchestral Parts, 10s. 6d.

PERCY FLETCHER. TWO BAGATELLES.
Parts, 4s. 6d.

C. H. H. PARRY. SUITE IN F. (Lady Radnor's Suite.)
Score, 7s. Parts, 7s. 6d.

PERCY PITT. AIR DE BALLET.
Score, 3s. Parts, 3s. 4d.

HENRY PURCELL. SUITE FROM DRAMATIC MUSIC
Edited by ALBERT COATES.
Score, 1s. 6d. Parts, 2s. 8d.

TWO SUITES FROM "THE GORDIAN KNOT UNTIED."

Edited by GUSTAV HOLST.
(With additional wind and drum parts ad lib.
MS. on hire.)

No. 1. Score, 4s. Parts, 2s. 8d.

No. 2. Score, 4s. Parts, 2s. 8d.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

HARVEST ANTHEMS

BY
WM. JOHNSON.

"HE HATH MADE THE EARTH" ... .. 3d.

"I WILL MAGNIFY" (6th 1000) ... .. 3d.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

THE "DISCUS" ORGAN BLOWER

Is installed and giving complete satisfaction in over a thousand Cathedrals, Churches, Theatres, and Cinemas in Great Britain alone. This fact is eloquent, as well as convincing testimony, to its efficiency and durability. It is the most satisfactory method of mechanical organ blowing, and as the motive power may be oil, gas, or electric motor, the "Discus" is suitable for churches in any locality. The application of a "Discus" equipment to an organ ensures a steady supply of wind being instantly available, and enables the organist to obtain the best possible effects from the instrument. The "Discus" blower is the most scientifically designed machine for organ blowing purposes on the market. It is made of metal throughout, of the best quality combined with high grade workmanship. Being entirely free of complicated mechanism, a minimum of attention is required, and very many years of satisfactory services ensured. Efficiency and reliability are fully guaranteed with each "Discus" equipment we instal.

AS SUPPLIED TO WESTMINSTER ABBEY, YORK MINSTER, ETC., ETC.

WRITE FOR NEW BOOKLET.

*Sole Makers, Watkins & Watson, Organ Blowing Specialists for the past thirty years.
Designers and Manufacturers of all types of Hydraulic Engines, Gears, and Fittings for Organ Blowing.*

ESTIMATES SUBMITTED FREE.

WRITE TO

B. WATKINS AND WATSON
WHITE LION STREET, LONDON, N.1.

Telegrams: "HYDISBLOW, ISLING, LONDON."

Telephone: NORTH 2039.

Begin with the New Volume.

No. 13, JULY, 1924.

"THE ORGAN"

"A QUARTERLY MAGAZINE WORTHY OF THE INSTRUMENT."

No. 13 contains SEVEN PLATES.

GLOUCESTER CATHEDRAL. West and East Fronts (2 plates).

CHATEAU DE VERSAILLES. Buffet and Detail (2 plates).

ST. GEORGE'S, HANOVER SQUARE, LONDON. The Case and Console (2 plates).

DIJON CATHEDRAL (1 plate).

LITERARY CONTENTS.

64 quarto pages of literary matter, well printed on antique paper, with numerous music examples.

THE ORGANS OF GLOUCESTER CATHEDRAL. ANDREW FREEMAN, Mus. B., F.R.C.O.

THE SWELL ORGAN: ITS PLACE IN THE MODERN ORGAN. W. O. VAUGHAN.

THE GRAND ORGAN OF THE CATHEDRAL OF DIJON. A. C. DE BRISAY.

THE HARMONIC-CORROBORATING ORGAN STOPS. GEORGE ASHDOWN AUDSLEY, LL.D.

GOTTFRIED SILBERMANN AND HIS TIMES. J. MATTHEWS.

LISZT AND THE ORGAN. A. EAGLEFIELD HULL, Mus. D.

THE ORGAN OF THE CHAPEL OF THE CHATEAU DE VERSAILLES. FÉLIX RAUGEL.

SOME LITTLE KNOWN FOREIGN ORGAN MUSIC. M. P. CONWAY, Mus. D.

THE CINEMA ORGAN. CECIL AUSTIN. "A LITTLE ORGAN BOOK." A. W. WILSON, Mus. D.

INTERESTING LONDON ORGANS: ST. GEORGE'S, HANOVER SQUARE. GILBERT BENHAM.

Copies may be purchased for 2s. each (post free, 2s. 2d.) at the Office of Musical Opinion, 13, Chichester Rents, by the Old Gateway in Chancery Lane, London, W.C.2.

The Subscription is 9s. yearly, for home or overseas.

NOVELLO'S HANDBOOKS FOR MUSICIANS.

EDITED BY ERNEST NEWMAN.

CHORAL TECHNIQUE AND INTERPRETATION

BY

HENRY COWARD.

MUS. DOC., OXON.

*Published as a Net Book.Price, Cloth, gilt, Seven Shillings and Sixpence net.*THE TEACHING AND ACCOMPANIMENT OF PLAINSONG

BY

FRANCIS BURGESS.

*Published as a Net Book.Price, Cloth, gilt, Five Shillings and Sixpence net.*THE Interpretation of the Music of the 17th & 18th Centuries

AS REVEALED BY CONTEMPORARY EVIDENCE

BY

ARNOLD DOLMETSCH.

Published as a Net Book.Price, Cloth, gilt, Fifteen Shillings net.

APPENDIX

CONTAINING TWENTY-TWO ILLUSTRATIVE PIECES.

*Price Five Shillings and Sixpence.*THE SOURCES OF KEYBOARD MUSIC IN ENGLAND

BY

CHARLES VAN DEN BORREN.

Professor of the Université Nouvelle of Brussels.

TRANSLATED FROM THE FRENCH BY

JAMES E. MATTHEW.

Published as a Net Book.Price, Cloth, gilt, Ten Shillings and Sixpence net.

THE THEORY OF HARMONY

An Inquiry into the Natural Principles of Harmony, with an examination of the chief systems of Harmony from Rameau to the present day.

BY

MATTHEW SHIRLAW,

MUS.D., F.R.C.O.

(Lecturer in Music, University of Edinburgh, &c.)Published as a Net Book.Price, Cloth, gilt, Fifteen Shillings net.

THE ORGAN WORKS OF BACH

BY

HARVEY GRACE.

With an Introduction by ERNEST NEWMAN.

Published as a Net Book.Price, Cloth, Nine Shillings net.

LONDON : NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

SOLOS FROM THE SACRED CANTATAS

OF

JOHN SEBASTIAN BACH.

In eight Books—each Book, One Shilling and Sixpence.

FIRST SET.

SOPRANO.

- Air WITHIN MY HEART OF HEARTS ("A Stronghold Sure").
- Air OUR JESUS HATH FOR AYE ("God goeth up").
- Air MY HEART EVER TRUSTING ("God so loved the world").
- Air O GRANT US, MIGHTY LORD ("Jesus, now will we praise Thee").
- Air SIGHING, WEEPING ("My Spirit was in heaviness").

ALTO.

- Air THOU, WHOSE PRAISES NEVER END ("Bide with us").
- Recit. { THE FATHER HATH APPOINTED HIM ("God goeth up").
- Air { MY SPIRIT HIM DESCRIBES ("God goeth up").
- Air INTO THY HANDS ("God's time is best").
- Air REJOICE, YE SOULS, ELECT AND HOLY ("O Light Everlasting").

TENOR.

- Air LORD, TO US THYSELF BE SHOWING ("Bide with us").
- Recit. { WHY HAST THOU THEN, O GOD ("My Spirit was in heaviness").
- Air { FAST MY BITTER TEARS ARE FLOWING ("My Spirit was in heaviness").
- Air REJOICE, O MY SPIRIT ("My Spirit was in heaviness").
- Recit. { THE MIGHTY GUARDIAN ("Thou Guide of Israel").
- Air { HIS FACE MY SHEPHERD LONG IS HIDING ("Thou Guide of Israel").
- Air AND WHY ART THOU, MY SOUL, SO FEARFUL ("When will God recall").

BASS.

- Recit. { HE COMES, THE LORD OF LORDS ("God goeth up").
- Air { 'TIS HE, WHO ALL ALONE ("God goeth up").
- Recit. { IT IS NOT MINE ("God so loved the world").
- Air { ON MY BEHALF " "
- Recit. { YEA, THIS THY WORD ("Thou Guide of Israel")
- Air { WHOM JESUS DEIGNS " "
- Air YET SILENCE ("When will God recall").

SECOND SET.

SOPRANO.

- Air OPEN WIDE, MY HEART ("Come, Redeemer").
- Air FATHER, WHAT I PROFFER ("Give the hungry man thy bread").
- Air COME, VISIT, YE GLOWING ("How brightly shines").
- Air I HAVE WAITED FOR THE LORD ("If thou but sufferest").

ALTO.

- Air GOD'S ENSAMPLE THUS TO FOLLOW ("Give the hungry man thy bread").
- Air JESUS SLEEPS ("Jesus sleeps, what hope remaineth").
- Recit. { INCLINE THINE EAR ("Lord, rebuke me not").
- Air { THE LORD HATH HEARD ("Lord, rebuke me not").
- Air ALL EARTHLY POWERS FROM GOD INHERIT ("Praise thou the Lord").

TENOR.

- Recit. { THE SAVIOUR NOW APPEARETH ("Come, Redeemer").
- Aria { COME, JESU, COME ("Come, Redeemer").
- Air WHAT VOICE IS WITH THE TEMPEST ("From depths of woe").
- Air TUNEFUL HARPS AND VOICES ("How brightly shines").
- Air THOU ART MY GOD ("Lord, rebuke me not").

BASS.

- Air THE PASCHAL VICTIM HERE WE SEE ("Christ lay in death's dark prison").
- Air DO THINE ALMS ("Give the hungry man thy bread").
- Air WITH JESUS WILL I GO ("Wailing, crying").
- Recit. { AH, WHEN ON THAT GREAT DAY ("Watch ye, pray ye").
- Air { BLESSED RESURRECTION DAY ("Watch ye, pray ye").

INSTRUCTION BOOKS FOR THE VOICE.

GUSTAV GARCIA A GUIDE TO SOLO SINGING

Price 3s. ; Paper Boards, 4s.

H. H. HULBERT. BREATHING FOR VOICE- PRODUCTION

Price 3s. ; Paper Boards, 4s.

AGNES J. LARKCOM THE SINGER'S ART

Price 1s. 6d.

RICHARD MANN A MANUAL OF SINGING

Price 1s. 6d.

MARGARET NICHOLLS SCHOOL CHOIR TRAINING

Price 3s.

ALBERTO RANDEGGER SINGING

Price 6s. ; Paper Boards, 7s.

J. STOCKHAUSEN METHOD OF SINGING

Price 6s. ; Paper Boards, 7s.

D. C. TAYLOR SELF-HELP FOR SINGERS

Price 2s. 6d. ; Paper Boards, 3s. 6d.

VOCAL EXERCISES FOR ALL VOICES

WITH MARKS OF EXPRESSION AND PHRASING

BY

ALBERTO RANDEGGER.

MARCO BORDOGNI TWENTY-FOUR VOCAL EXERCISES FOR MEZZO-SOPRANO

Price 2s. 6d.

CONCONE

50 Lessons for the Medium Part of the Voice.
(Cloth, 4s. 6d.)

25 Lessons. A Sequel to the Fifty Lessons for the Medium Part of the Voice.

15 Vocalises. A Sequel to the Twenty-five Lessons for the Medium Part of the Voice.
Ditto. For Mezzo-Soprano or Contralto.

40 Lessons for Contralto.

40 Lessons for Bass or Baritone.
Price 2s. 6d. each.

AUGUSTE PANSEON FORTY MELODIC AND PROGRESSIVE VOCAL EXERCISES

FOR SOPRANO AND TENOR

IN TWO PARTS.

Part I. Containing Nos. 1 to 26. Part II. Containing Nos. 27 to 40.
Price 3s. each Part.

FORTY-TWO MELODIC AND PROGRES- SIVE VOCAL EXERCISES

FOR CONTRALTO, BARITONE, OR BASS

IN TWO PARTS.

Part I. Containing Nos. 1 to 29. Part II. Containing Nos. 30 to 42.
Price 3s. each Part.

FIFTY VOCALISES FOR TWO VOICES SOPRANO AND MEZZO-SOPRANO, OR TENOR AND SOPRANO, OR TENOR AND BARITONE.

IN TWO PARTS.

Part I. Containing Nos. 1 to 30. Part II. Containing Nos. 31 to 50.
Price 3s. each Part.

PROGRESSIVE STUDIES FOR THE VOICE

WITH PIANOFORTE ACCOMPANIMENT

BY

GEORG HENSCHEL.

PART I.

STUDIES IN SUSTAINED SINGING.

PART II.

STUDIES IN FLORAL SINGING.

Each Part published for High, Medium, or Low Voice.

Price 4s. each.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

TRINITY COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

President:

THE RT. HON. THE EARL OF SHAFTESBURY, K.P., G.C.V.O.

Director of Studies: C. W. PEARCE, M.A., Mus. D.

Director of Examinations: E. F. HORNER, Mus. D.

September 22nd—MICHAELMAS TERM begins.

September 24th, at 3 p.m.—The Inaugural address of the Term will be given by Sir RICHARD TERRY, Mus. D. Subject: "Tudor Instrumental Music." The address will be followed by a distribution of Prizes and the performance of a short programme of music.

The CLERGY VOICE-TRAINING CLASS, conducted by Dr. GEORGE OLDROYD, resumes on September 22nd at 2 o'clock. The scope of the class embraces the Preservation of the Voice, Efficiency in Service Music and Oratory.

The College provides INSTRUCTION and TRAINING in all Musical Subjects (Instrumental, Vocal, and Theoretical) and Dramatic and Operatic Elocution. The Lessons are arranged to meet the convenience of both day and evening students. Entry may be made for any number of Subjects—from one to the Full Course. The College is open to beginners as well as to the more proficient student; pupils under 16 years of age are received for the Junior School at reduced fees.

The ORCHESTRAL, CHORAL, the OPERATIC, and CHAMBER MUSIC CLASSES are open also to sufficiently competent persons who are not College Students for other subjects.

Tuition in the Rudiments of the Theory of Music, Harmony, Counterpoint, Form, Instrumentation, Composition, and the Art of Teaching is also given by Correspondence.

There are between Forty and Fifty Scholarships tenable at the College and open to all British subjects up to certain age limits, and the Cambridge Pianoforte Scholarship, value £100 per annum; also Eighteen Scholarships which provide complete preparation for the Degree of Bachelor of Music.

Particulars of the Teaching Department, with list of Professors, Fees, Scholarships regulations, &c., and the Syllabuses of the Diploma and Local Examinations, free on application to the undersigned.

C. N. H. RODWELL, Secretary.

Mandeville Place, Manchester Square, London, W.1.

NEW TRANSCRIPTIONS FROM THE WORKS OF EDWARD MACDOWELL

TRIOS.

(Piano, Violin, 'Cello.)

1. TO THE SEA.                      2. NAUTILUS.
3. A.D. 1620.                      4. SONG.

(From "Sea Pieces.")

Price 2s. 6d. each.

STRING QUINTET.

(Two Violins, Viola, 'Cello, Bass.)

1. AT AN OLD TRYSTING PLACE.
2s. 6d. net.
2. FROM UNCLE REMUS.
3s. net.

(From "Woodland Sketches.")

Complete catalogue of MACDOWELL'S celebrated compositions will gladly be sent free on request.

ELKIN & CO., LTD..

8 & 10, BEAK STREET, REGENT STREET,
LONDON, W.1.

BROADWOOD PIANOS

BOSWORTH & CO., LTD.

MIND-POWER IN MUSIC.

FOR STUDENTS,

TEACHERS, AND PERFORMERS.

BY

E. DOUGLAS TAYLER.

Price 1s. 3d. net.

This Text-Book covers a wide range of psychology as applied to music, and will prove of great help in overcoming any difficulties which may occur in the study of music.

BOSWORTH & CO., LTD.,

8, HEDDON STREET, REGENT STREET, LONDON, W.1.

JUST PUBLISHED.

No. 99.—NOVELLO'S MUSIC PRIMERS.

PIANOFORTE ACCOMPANIMENT

BY

WELTON HICKIN

Fellow and Professor, Royal Academy of Music.

CONTENTS.

Technical Proficiency—Artistic Imagination—Ensemble—Balance of Tone—Phrasing—Vital Notes—Pedalling—Recitations with Music—Reading at Sight—Transposition—Harmonization—Recitative—Modulation—Accompaniment studied in detail, &c.

PRICE ... FOUR SHILLINGS.
Paper Boards, 5s.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

The Musical Times

AND SINGING-CLASS CIRCULAR

AUGUST 1 1924

(FOR LIST OF CONTENTS SEE PAGE 751.)

CECIL JAMES SHARP

NOVEMBER 22, 1859—JUNE 23, 1924

The death of Cecil Sharp brings a sense of personal loss to thousands of music-lovers who would have been comparatively unaffected by the passing of far greater figures in the world of music. Nor is this feeling confined to folk-song and folk-dance circles. For some years past it has been apparent that in many departments of our musical life, ranging from composition to school music, one of the most potent factors is the movement with which Cecil Sharp was specially identified.

It is true that he was far from being the first or only labourer in the vineyard. Two country parsons, Charles Marson and Baring Gould, Lucy Broadwood, Frank Kidson, Alfred Moffatt, Arthur Somervell, and, later, George Butterworth and Vaughan Williams—these and others did valuable rescue work; and on the folk-dance side it is well to remember that there was a pioneer as long ago as the 17th century in Playford. But with all these collectors the salvage and study of folk-song was more or less a hobby; with Cecil Sharp it was a passion to which in his later years everything else took second place.

During the past month the daily and weekly Press has included notices of Cecil Sharp so complete in biographical detail that there is no need for us to go over the ground again. Moreover, the Musical Times of October, 1912, contained a lengthy article which gave not only the chief facts of his life but also a fairly complete exposition of his views in regard to the part played by folk-song in the evolution of a national idiom in music. For the purposes of record we add a few details in order to complete that article.

In the years 1916-18 he paid lengthy visits to the Southern Appalachian Mountains, and there collected many variants of folk-songs that he had previously noted in England, in addition to numerous ballads that had died out in this country. A selection of these, with accompaniments, has since been published by Novello. The result of the first year's investigations, with an account of the community itself—descendants of original settlers from England who retain many of the primitive tastes and customs of their forbears—appeared in a volume published in 1917.* The material collected in 1917 and 1918 will probably be issued in due course. In 1919 he was appointed occasional Inspector to the Board of Education, and in 1923 Cambridge University acknowledged his work by conferring on him the honorary degree of Master of Music. He had already been placed on the Civil List, the benefit of which he relinquished later.

This measure of official recognition and reward can only be described as meagre. He had, however, a far better recompense in the not too common happiness of seeing his work consummated and bearing fruit in a degree that even he himself probably never expected.

The two most obvious influences in our music at the present time are discoveries—English folk-song and the work of the Tudor and Elizabethan composers, and the fact of the two revivals taking place almost simultaneously is perhaps less a matter of chance than appears to be the case. Sharp was violently attacked in some quarters for maintaining (in his 'English Folk-song; some Conclusions') that folk-song must be the basis on which a national school of composition is founded. No doubt he pressed his theories too far, but nobody can examine the output of our composers during the past decade without being aware of two facts: (1) there are elements—especially melodic and rhythmic—that are unmistakably derived from English folk-song; (2) the bulk of this music is so plainly English that a hearer unaware of its origin could ascribe it to no other nationality—though the uninitiated might find it difficult to say exactly in what respects its Englishry shows itself. Vaughan Williams, Holst, Howells, the Shaw brothers, Armstrong Gibbs, Whittaker, Boughton, Quilter (in his later works), Butterworth, Ernest Austin, Balfour Gardiner, Warlock, Ireland—in all these the folk-song influence is more or less prominent, and in most cases the debt is directly due to the work of Cecil Sharp.

But the value of his work elsewhere was, perhaps, even greater.

The folk-song, in its simple state or as a basis for choral music, is now a feature in competitive festivals, and the folk-dance is steadily making for itself a similar place. No one can attend a meeting at which folk-dances figure without being struck by their popularity with the audience. Indeed, at some festivals where such classes have been introduced, an unexpected result was the tapping of a large new public.

It is in this bringing of the folk-song and dance back to the people that the greatness of Sharp's achievement lies.

He once spoke of his fear 'lest the songs and dances should become a cult and be exploited as quaint antiques—"the things those dear peasants dance and sing, you know"—and be protected from the common herd; whereas of course it was to the common herd that they belonged,—and to them that I meant to restore their lost heritage.'* So, by issuing the songs in a handy form, with accompaniments that were a good deal more than a bleak succession of supporting chords, and yet of a modest degree * 'English Folk-songs from the Southern Appalachians,' by Dame Olive Campbell and Cecil Sharp. Putnam's Sons.

* Music and Letters, October, 1923.

of difficulty, he enabled a host of teachers in elementary schools, girls' clubs, and institutes of various kinds to adopt them and so develop what might otherwise have been a mere rescue into a genuine revival. The reality of that revival is proved in the simplest of ways. In schools, clubs, and institutes, in city slum and village alike, you will find old and young singing, humming, or whistling such tunes as 'Dashing away with the smoothing iron,' 'Oh no, John,' 'Admiral Benbow,' 'The lark in the morn,' and dozens more of delightful ditties that but for Cecil Sharp might have been lost. True, they do not achieve the kind of vogue that stamps the 'winner' from Charing Cross Road or New York. They are not played by orchestras in restaurants, and the street organ as a rule knows them not. But the life of 'winners' is as short as it is strepitous, and 'Dashing away' and its companions see them come and go, a fresh set every half year or so. The wise man of old who cared not for the making of a nation's laws so long as he could make its songs is so often quoted that one hesitates to drag him in once more. But he can hardly be kept out of the folk-song question. If a penny saved is a penny gained it may be said that a song saved is a song made. This being so, we might well envy the man who in our day has thus made more good songs than a score of composers put together. And there is a touch of the fantastic in the fact that one who occupied only a modest place as an executive or creative musician has made one of the biggest of marks on the musical life of his country, and is as secure of fame as any composer of his day.

In connection with the Inspectorship mentioned above, a letter from Mr. H. A. L. Fisher (late Minister of Education) is of interest. Writing in The Times on June 24, he said:

... At my request Cecil Sharp called at the Board of Education in 1919 in order that we might discuss the best method of instilling a sense of rhythm and a love of our old English national songs and dances into the minds of children in the elementary schools. It soon became apparent to me that Sharp was marked out by his great knowledge and single-minded enthusiasm to spread the flame, and that the place in which his peculiar gifts would render the greatest contribution to national education in the shortest time was the training college. He was accordingly given a special appointment in relation to the training colleges, and in that capacity inspired a large number of intending teachers with something of his own delight in old English melodies and dances. The impetus which he gave will not soon die out, and if generations hence folk-music and folk-dance are familiar things in our towns and villages, the happy result will be largely due to his inspired and inspiring labours.

The reference to Sharp's ability to inspire others touches on the secret of his success. If the folk-music revival is as well-established as it appears to be, the fact is due to the large number of keen and accomplished teachers who passed under his hands.

No better tribute to Sharp can be found than that paid by Mr. Fox-Strangways in the Music and Letters article already quoted—an article descriptive of a week at one of the folk-dance schools:

Sharp has spoken for himself on an earlier page, but there are some things which he did not say. He did not tell us that he has given all his labour free; or that he has suffered all his life from a complaint of which doctors know too little to say whether this air or that soil will be 'beneficial,' and so he rushes off at a moment's notice to capture a new dance, not knowing whether he is going to be normal or miserable there; or that he is one of those rare people who combine the instincts of a true artist with shrewd powers of organization and the knowledge of men and women that these imply; or that, though most conversations are lectures or arguments, and most arguments come round at last to folk-dance, yet he has formed his own opinions on most subjects of human interest, and where he has not he is a good listener; or that when he does talk people do not as a rule want him to stop.

We spoke above of the position the folk-dance has made for itself in the competitive festival. With recollections of the delight taken in the dances by audiences and competitors of all ages, we have little doubt as to the answer to the 'if' in the end of Mr. Fox-Strangways' article:

Well; there, anyway, are these folk-dances of ours for us to take or leave. As you have seen, about two thousand people think it worth while to come for a week once a year and refresh their memories (or make them) at a 'school'; and we cannot suppose that these people do nothing with the dance when they get home, so that many thousands of men, women, and children know and care about it already. When the engineer of all this happiness is eventually laid on the shelf the dance will be on its trial. If it then proves itself to be a real thing, it will live; if not, it had better die.

But there was to be no 'shelf' for Cecil Sharp: no leisured retirement from which he could watch the spread or otherwise of the happiness he had spent himself in 'engineering': he was hard at work until the last few weeks of his life. Doubts as to the permanency of the folk-music revival do not affect our gratitude to the man who, more than any other, brought it about. For well over a decade it has given to thousands recreation of a type all too rare to-day, and so has already proved far more worth while than dozens of 'art' movements that have made infinitely more noise in the world. Even if it came to an abrupt end to-morrow, the country's debt to Cecil Sharp is one that can hardly be over-estimated.

CONDUCTORS AND CONDUCTING

BY WILLIAM WALLACE

(Continued from July number, page 595.)

II.—DRAMATURGICS

Reference has been made to the dramatic instinct requisite in the conductor. We may now consider the matter more closely.

At a date when music was finding itself, the intense human note was not felt so universally and profoundly as is now manifest. There was for the most part a pellucid glittering surface which concealed or veiled the deep underflow. Storms there were, but they were soon deluged in a flood of sunshine. When the predominating idea was one of tragedy it was relieved by contrasts which lightened the burden and dispelled the gloom. Subjects and episodes persisted (in sonata form), and were maintained for a space sufficient to allow the mind to meditate in serenity without that 'conflict of emotions' upon which the later schools of musical thought were nursed. Whatsoever the technical explanation may be of the 'repeat,' which in orchestral music meant nothing more than saying the same thing all over again without modification of colour or nuance, its existence gives us an indication of the workings of the musical mind. It would appear that it was necessary in order to impress upon the hearer the themes of the movement, so that when they came to be developed they could be recognized either in their original form or in material derived from them.

In works which are not disturbed by exuberance or violence there is a temptation to aim at refinement and finesse in performance by over-elaboration of detail. It is as if we were to print in italics every important—and unimportant—word in a sentence. Perfect accuracy and minuteness are eminently desirable, but it may be asked if in orchestras which have brought this polish to a fine art, much musical texture has not been sacrificed to uniformity of surface.

A conductor may strive to attain this finger-tip finish and yet distract the attention of the audience from his endeavours by obtruding himself, as it were, between the music and the audience, and thus emphasising his supreme accomplishment and not the composer's way of thinking. Under ideal conditions, the simpler the music the less apparent the need for a conductor, but orchestras, grown up in the midst of strenuous and intricate technique, do not so readily adapt themselves to the earlier modes of expression. On one occasion, at a classical concert, after two numbers from the modern repertoire had been played, the conductor and orchestra broke down at the beginning of a Mozart aria, and had to start afresh. At another concert, following a fully scored Wagner number, Beethoven's 'Pastoral' Symphony was played, and its opening strains were received by the audience with a titter. As each conductor was independent of any society or committee to suggest the works to be performed, he should have constructed his programme with better judgment. But perhaps the choice of the 'Pastoral' was deliberate.

It is just the simpler music that cannot be left to take care of itself. The first seven bars of Mozart's Overture to 'Figaro' look simple enough, but with a modern orchestra at full strength there are sixty musicians playing the same notes in three octaves, not mezzo-forte but pianissimo. It is not quasi niente, inaudible and therefore impossible, but pianissimo. Here, if anywhere, is need for what has just been called 'finger-tip'—it might equally be called 'tip-toe'—precision. And, let it be added, finger-tip conducting.

On the dramaturgical side the conductor's gestures prepare the audience for developments. It may be that we have come to associate his movements with emotions of varying depth and intensity, and once this convention has been established we accept him in the dual rôle of conductor of the orchestra and interpreter to the audience. In this there are pitfalls to be avoided. The conductor must have a keen sense of the dramatic, not in the music alone, but in himself. It has been said that 'the greatest effect in music is no music,' and the pause over a rest, to which the remark clearly applies, can be heightened or rendered pointless according to the gesture. If he indicates that the pause is merely transitory by keeping his arm in readiness for the next outburst he carries the attention forward in anticipation of what is about to come. But if he abruptly ceases all movement during the pause he rivets attention and creates a feeling of strain, infinitely more pregnant. Similarly an inelastic beat in a purely cantilena passage may reduce poetry to prosaic drab, while an accent of sentimentality may awake a feeling of revulsion and charge with sickness an atmosphere which should have been of clear air.

In orchestral music, as has been said, the mental impression may owe nearly as much to the eye as it does to the ear, for unless the vision is turned away the conductor may shape the judgment in a wrong direction. The effect of hasty or indiscriminate appreciation may be far-reaching and not always beneficial to the art or the artist. Many in an audience are more preoccupied with sights than with sounds, and an exaggerated style of conducting may appear to them masterly activity, in spite of constant slips in the orchestra and a ragged performance. Thus a mediocre conductor may ultimately work his way by sheer gymnastics, impressing by a physical display and making up for lack of insight by energy. This is the corybantic style—the conductor as maestro di ballo.

There is no doubt that vigorous movement and alertness on the part of the conductor can infect the orchestra with some measure of responsiveness, but instrumentalists are too thoroughly proved to be beguiled. This is seen again and again when one conductor, almost without perceptible movement, obtains a reading equal to, and often better than, that of another, whose form of exercise would belong more appropriately to the prize-ring. It is not always the case that the excess of gesture is justified by the dynamics of the music. It can be—it not infrequently has been—wasted on some tiny flutter in the orchestra, an 'aside,' so to speak, during the composer's discourse.

The conductor, in fact, should have a sense of proportion, with an unerring flair for the essential. Again and again at rehearsal conductors have exhausted patience by going over some passage of subsidiary importance which the orchestra finally plays for the sixth time exactly as it did at the first. This particularly happens when the passage contains a small solo which the musician, as the conductor ought to feel assured, has taken no little care to practise beforehand. [The subject of rehearsals will occupy us at a later stage.]

Up to the end of the last century organised orchestral societies had their permanent conductors. Hence men like Hallé, Henschel, and Richter in England, Pasdeloup, Colonne, and Lamoureux in France, Theodore Thomas and Damrosch in the United States, gave their names to orchestras under their direction. Manns at the Crystal Palace had his permanent orchestra, and thus was able to give new works a trial in private before he decided to place them in his programmes. Of these orchestras, some were independent of managers, committees, or impresarios, and decided their own policy, but others were limited in their duties. The programmes were drawn up for them, and any individual preference for this work or that was granted by courtesy. So it was that Wagner, in 1855, at the Philharmonic Society, in eight programmes had to conduct five works by Mendelssohn, whom he detested, as against three of his own ('Lohengrin' selection and the 'Tannhäuser' Overture twice), along with works by Onslow, Potter, Macfarren, and the Hummel Pianoforte Concerto in B flat.

But the first years of the present century saw the permanent conductor disappearing from some Societies, and being replaced by 'guests' who went on tour like pianists and other virtuosi. Hence programmes were constructed so as to trot out each conductor's cheval de bataille from a whole stableful, and audiences witnessed physical performances which had been rehearsed times without number. They, and the orchestra, were able to contrast one conductor with another, to note how the same result, demanding in one case an excess of effort, was obtained in another by the tiniest movement, or almost none at all.

To steer a course between the two extremes should not be difficult, but the immense energy that some conductors expend is apt to convey a wrong impression. Are they really carrying along the orchestra with their widespread 'action,' or did things go so badly at rehearsal that they must put forth all their strength? To anticipate the discussion of rehearsals at present, it may be asked, Would it not be preferable to explain to the orchestra that the broad and generous movements are used to enforce points in interpretation, and that having been employed thus at rehearsal, they will be subdued or suppressed at the concert? Might not this exuberance during performance imply to some of the audience inadequacy of rehearsal? Whether some of those indications of nuances, to which orchestral players have become accustomed, are unduly insisted upon or whether conductors are aiming at a personal success with the audience more than with the music—these are questions which it is impossible to decide. But it may be said that a young conductor who had won his spurs got a hint on one occasion that if he was not more demonstrative he might be passed over when arrangements for the following season were made—and he was.

The ideal would be to make that which is essential at rehearsal superfluous at the concert. We have been assuming, of course, that the conductor has been working under ideal conditions, and that he has had at his disposal an orchestra whose personnel and strength are constant. But too frequently it happens that musicians with more or less important parts to play are absent, and are replaced by 'deputies' who have to be instructed in their new duties. In this way the attention and care which have been given to one instrumentalist have to be repeated in the case of his substitute, and with the press of work and limited rehearsals the conductor may not feel free to exercise that restraint which would have been possible with an orchestra every member of which understood his ways. A gesture, therefore, which might appear to be more for the audience than for the musician, may have a rational explanation.

But we are not going outside our province to consider the matter from another aspect. Still regarding the conductor as an actor in a certain sense, do we credit him with sincerity in every mood and gesture? His reading of a score may be compared with the actor's interpretation of a part, repeated till it borders on the mechanical. The question opens the way to a large discussion as to whether the impersonator should actually feel the emotion which he is depicting, or should have so schooled himself that the emotion is deliberate and assumed. In other words, is the emotional reaction of the music upon the conductor so potent that he is conscious of it every time he conducts some particular work, or has habit become so ingrained that at various points his methods are invariably the same? Who can say that the exponent of what, without disrespect, may be called the mechanical, is artistically on a lower plane than the exponent of the spontaneous? It must be remembered that however mechanical the manner now, at one time it had to be spontaneous, and that spontaneity through experience became stereotyped.

To some extent we are foreshadowing points which will be dealt with at a later stage, but it may be said here that however mechanical and studied in his gestures the conductor may appear to have become, it would not be fair to deny him, or refuse to recognise, those flashes of inspiration—the divine ictus—which suddenly light up his reading and illuminate his task. It would not be fair—it would be closing our ears to the truth.

These questions are not put forward in a dogmatic spirit, but with the aim to stimulate thought—for we are apt to confine ourselves, in looking at the conductor's art, to the obvious, without attempting to penetrate the deeper mysteries of the mind which in him seem to crave for physical expression.

Here perhaps we are going a little further than our present subject allows, and intruding upon the intimacy that exists between rhythm, music, and action.

(To be continued.)

MORE ABOUT THE LARYNX

BY GRANVILLE HUMPHREYS

Among those who aspire to sing are some whose vocal organs instinctively assume the position and condition essential to correct voice-production. For such favourites of nature singing is a comparatively simple affair, ordinary exercises, systematically practised, sufficing for the attainment of a satisfactory vocal technique. Others, however, less fortunate, find their progress impeded by obstacles which conventional methods of practice fail to overcome. A faulty position of the larynx is one such obstacle, and, as good singing is largely conditioned by the proper behaviour of this important, if somewhat capricious organ, its correct functioning becomes a matter of moment calling for careful consideration.

Perhaps the most noticeable effects of changing the position of the larynx are the modifications in volume, quality, and texture of the voice. With the low larynx the volume is relatively full; the quality sombre; the texture loose and rough. Conversely, a high larynx gives a tone of smaller bore (with possibly greater carrying power); brighter timbre and smoother texture.

If the matter ended here the choice of position might be considered merely a question of individual taste, of no more consequence than whether one's handwriting should slope right or left. But as a high larynx also extends the upward range, raises the tessitura,* and increases the enduring powers of the voice, it has strong claims to be regarded as the better method of the two.

But the alternative does not lie between these two extremes. A fixed position of the larynx, high or low, is undesirable. It should be allowed such freedom of action that it may rise and fall in sympathy with the mutations of pitch. Anatomical science and practical experience support this view. Dr. Hugh Campbell says, 'It [the larynx] rises as the scale is ascended and vice versa.' G. H. von Meyer (Professor of Anatomy at Zürich University) says: 'When high tones are produced the larynx rises.' And again: 'Falsetto [head] notes are accompanied by an elevation of the larynx.' Then we have the testimony of Jenny Lind, who, writing to a student friend said: 'But before you sound the note the larynx must be properly prepared in the position in which the forthcoming sound lies, whether high or low.' One might give the names of artists now before the public whose singing conspicuously exemplifies this method, the lively movements of the larynx, in some cases, being easily observable from the auditorium.

The question now arises whether the movement (or non-movement) of the larynx should be left to chance or consciously controlled. Circumstances alter cases, and the answer to the question must depend on individual considerations. Singing is largely an imitative art, and, if the student be young and free from mental and physical bias, a correct pattern, assiduously repeated, will usually secure the desired result. But when bad habits of vocalisation have been formed, either as the result of definite training or misguided self-effort, the imitative method is of itself insufficient, and must be supplemented by physiological instruction relative to the difficulties being encountered. Obviously, similar physical conditions must be established, as between master and pupil, before the tones of the one can be successfully copied by the other. Where such correspondence of method does not obtain, though the student form never so correct an idea of the tone set forth for his imitation, it will be impossible for his voice to respond to the dictates of his ear. A comparable difficulty is experienced by many pianoforte students, whose earnest endeavours to extract a given tone-quality from their instrument are rendered nugatory through ignorance of the essential muscular conditions and bodily positions governing its production. The bright, ringing tones and other vocal characteristics peculiar to the high position of the larynx are impossible when that organ is fixed low in the throat. Consequently laryngeal freedom is a necessary preliminary to successful vocal practice. How this freedom is to be won is not, however, a topic for present discussion.

Voice-production is a difficult art, and only diligent practice will bring it to perfection—or anywhere near it. The dictum 'practice makes perfect' is only true if the practice be on right lines. When progress is unsatisfactory, and indolence may not be charged, method should be challenged. To alter one's method is always troublesome, but often necessary. In a recently published work on singing the author, a prominent operatic singer, states that he has changed his method eight times!

Happily, problems of the larynx rarely concern children unless they have been prematurely set to sing low parts in concerted music. The trouble begins at adolescence, when, with the sudden enlargement of the larynx, the young singer has to adapt his or her technique to new conditions for which previous experience is but an indifferent preparation. Obviously, whatever new difficulties arise concern the larynx exclusively, the lungs and other vocal organs continuing a steady development which offers no new problems of management.

THE CRITIC AND THE COMPOSER

By JEFFREY MARK

When the melancholy Touchstone, looking out across the world, wished to express his opinions on what he saw, he demanded first a 'charter as large as the wind,' and the liberty to 'blow' on whom he pleased. The critic is in this position at the outset, but probably finds that the privileges of the 'charter' are chiefly a source of confusion to him; the very openness of his commission is a distraction. He is as a man who roams at liberty over a garden whose vastness is more than he can even comprehend; he has a watering-can in one hand and a hatchet in the other, and is instructed to watch over the growths, and to prune or encourage as the occasion would seem to demand.

* 'Tessitura' is an Italian term signifying that portion of the voice which best supports the strain of continuous singing. It must be distinguished from range. The tessitura of a tenor, for example, is higher than that of a baritone, and though the upward range of the two voices might in some cases be co-extensive the baritone would soon be fatigued by a succession of high-pitched sounds that the tenor would sustain with ease. Mozart's 'Il mio tesoro' and Verdi's 'Il Balen' have practically the same range, but the difference of tessitura is immediately apparent on singing the two airs.

Probably the first things he notices are the trees. Usually he has little to do with these; they are marvellous affairs, but, withal, so natural a feature in the scheme of things that they scarcely call for treatment of any kind. Thus it is that composers of the first rank are more or less immune from criticism. Bach simply rears up as a wonder, whose naturalness and perfect fitness in the musical landscape sometimes serves to obscure the very miracle of his existence.

There are some, however, whose temperament is irritated by the straight tallness and grace of the poplar, who somehow resent the very ease of its growth, and who cannot resist a slash at the trunk with their hatchets as they pass; such are the few who cavil at Mozart's work. On the other hand, there are some of diametrically opposed tastes who cannot appreciate the spirit of strength and sturdiness which characterises the oak tree—who point contemptuously to the knots and coarsenesses of the bark, and who cannot sympathise with the hardness and the visible difficulty of the growth; such are they who sneer at Beethoven.

In the main, however, the trees are safe, and the few cuts and slashes which they bear upon them can scarcely interfere with the lasting grandeur of their appearance. It is curious, too, to find that the only other species which is more or less safe from attack, is at the other extreme as regards size and significance. The humble garden-flowers and the simple flowers of the field are tolerated for their very inoffensiveness and the sweetness of their smell. There are few who have violent objections to such music as that of Grieg, and there are probably none who would wish to root it out; most people, again, have a genuine liking for folk-song, although quite a number may fail to see the sense in tearing them away from their natural surroundings and making them up into a sort of children's posy by binding their stalks together with a piece of string.

When, however, the critic is loosed and ramps abroad, and comes across such different things as, say, a cactus tree, a passion flower, or even a piece of seaweed, he is sometimes nonplussed, but more often indignant, and usually ends up by using his hatchet with disastrous effect. Occasionally he stumbles across a hothouse, and is either enchanted or repelled by what he finds within. There are some who even content themselves with beating upon the outside, and discovering, to their huge satisfaction, that the glass is no match for the hatchet. It is similarly cowardly to break in upon Chopin and expose his blooms to the coldness of the winds, to point out how they wilt and die in the open, or to compare them to their disadvantage with the spring flowers which perk up cheerfully amongst the snows. The only thing to do is to walk inside, stick the heat even to perspiration point, and admire the flowers in their natural surroundings and for what they are.

The process of selection is made even more difficult for the critic because, in the case of musical flora, it is possible for composers to manufacture specimens which resemble the genuine article only in their external significance. Such men allot to themselves a certain piece of ground, and (much in the manner of the mysterious municipal workers who periodically break up the streets) place screens around themselves, and work away silently within. Among such, Strauss is pre-eminent. Of course he needs specially large screens to cover up the vastness of his designs and to preserve his working secrets from the common gaze, but, like the rest of them when their work is finished, he suddenly removes his screens through the night and creeps stealthily away. The gigantic affair which he has created is left silently in the middle of the field, in the hope that, with the arrival of the dawn, the critics will come along and say to themselves, with much satisfaction, 'Hullo! Another tree!'

It is necessary, of course, that the critic should ultimately be able to differentiate between such erections and the real thing, but having done so it does not follow that he must condemn. If it is granted, for the moment, that Strauss's music is inspired by a kind of exalted artificiality, it is nevertheless unreasonable as well as unnecessary that it should be exploded for that reason. The intricacy of the design, the closeness and subtlety of the imitation, should make his work unique in its interest for musicians; it is sufficient that the critic should understand and make it plain that there is a process which 'accounts' for the music. The main difference to the hearer is, that in the case of the genuine product the enjoyment is chiefly determined by one's temperamental sympathy with the composer's outlook (and, of course, his ability to rouse that sympathy), whereas, in the case of the imitation, there are often occasions and moods when music such as that of Strauss is a positive irritation even to the man who is normally an admirer.

This last paragraph passes rather lightly over the difficulty of the actual differentiation itself. One way to develop an appreciation of the differences is to put oneself in the position of the imitator, and from that imagine what the characteristics of the product must be. It is obvious, at the outset, that such a man will be uncertain about the ultimate shape and pretensions of his work; he is as one who finds himself at the intersection of many paths, with no special motive to make him take up any one with certainty. When he does select, and walks along the path of his choice, it is with much hesitation and with an occasional look over his shoulder which at once betrays his lack of purpose; he may even come to a dead pause, make a sudden resolution, then climb the dykes and strike out along another path. His progress, therefore, is wholly different from that of the man who hurries along under the impulse of an overpowering conviction which forces him to take up one path and no other. There are then no side-glances, and no pauses which would suggest irresolution. The work of such a man is felt to be inevitable; we are rushed along with him, and express our appreciation by saying that the music is convincing.

The imitator is further disclosed in his moments of stress: in his climaxes, where he wishes to create his main impression. The result is usually made manifest in a sudden confiction of styles at these points, whereas, in the case of the natural product, it is superfluous to say that an essential feature is a uniform consistency in this respect—the stalk of the violet is characteristic of the violet and of no other flower. It is very natural, however, that the maker of new flowers, in his effort to achieve something strikingly beautiful in its vital peculiarities, should often betray himself by placing his violet head on the top of a sunflower or even a cabbage stalk. On such grounds there are many to-day who will agree with Spohr in his condemnation of the last movement of the Ninth Symphony. However opinions may differ on this subject, it should be apparent that Beethoven is here trying to achieve something which would impress itself on his hearers as the crown and climax of the Symphony (we had almost said 'of his life's work'). He is straining himself to create something big, but at the same time only vaguely comprehended by him, and is in fact deliberately jeopardising his reputation as one of the most sincere composers who ever lived. A notable inconsistency in style is the result: the case is the reverse of that referred to above, and the cabbage head lolls oddly on the flower stalk. (Here we must add, in fairness to Beethoven, that neither cabbage heads nor violet stalks are either adequate or appropriate in themselves, but in the event of their superimposition the obvious discrepancy bears a fair relative relationship to the case in point.) Again, however, it is not necessary to condemn: if we admit that the product of man's genius, in art as in all other things, approaches but never actually attains to absolute perfection, it is possible to realise the power and beauty of the Symphony and still be conscious of its grotesqueness. Probably the surest method of all for the detection of clever imitations, is a careful examination of texture. If I see sunflowers in a vase and am rather uncertain as to whether they are genuine or not, I at once feel the petals. This gives me the truth, and is, in fact, a simple test of texture. If they are made of cloth or paper, the finger-tips reveal what is hidden from the eyes; if of wax, they crumble and fall at the merest pressure. Similarly, if an orchestral score is examined with the idea of finding out how and of what the fabric is made, it will be possible to estimate its genuineness. The quality of the material and the coarseness of the weaving can be sensed as with the finger-tips; if, on the other hand, the weaving is subtle and the surface smooth and soft to the touch, but the stuff itself inanimate, it is as wax, and will break up under the pressure of a direct investigation.

Although whole books have been written as allegories consistently sustained from start to finish, and are still read to-day with pleasure, it is nevertheless a fact that modern taste is, in the main, set against them. This is probably because of our always associating them with a moral, or at least, a didactic purpose, and for the existence of such a prejudice we have chiefly to thank Æsop, Spencer, Bunyan, Swift, and the Biblical parables. In spite of this, the allegory still remains an extremely useful and attractive method, and no apology is made for a further reference to our gardener's attitude when faced with the problem of the cactus tree, the passion flower, and the piece of seaweed. Here indeed, is the critic's real difficulty, and here it is that some set of principles must be decided upon at the outset. The mode of procedure in connection with trees, garden flowers, field flowers, hot-house plants, and superior imitations has been discussed, and only a few will violently disagree with the main contention in each case. When, however, to use the same phrase, the critic 'ramps abroad' and experiences new sights and sounds, curious and interesting, but often only of a minor, if genuine significance, he can be excused if his policy is a little lacking in conviction, for no one can be resolute when puzzled. Of all the wrong attitudes to take up, quite the most harmful of all is to be 'sincere' (in the sense of one's emotional or temperamental reaction to a new phenomenon), and to deliver judgment from that standpoint. Such a criticism, as a mere statement of likes and dislikes, and possibly with sound argument and example to back up the contention, is misleading if it is enthusiastic and wholly vicious if it is condemnatory. Those who pride themselves on being strictly 'honest' in their utterances on all occasions, are, like certain products of our 20th century civilization who deliberately affect this attitude in society, either dangerous or simply a nuisance, but more usually both. The true critic is a connoisseur, while your 'honest' man is a mere collector of curios, whose house may be interestingly and pleasantly furnished, crammed as it is with specimens indicative of his own prejudices, but whose influence, so long as it can affect the uninformed tastes of the multitude, is to be guarded against. Oscar Wilde regarded the function of the critic as even greater than that of the creator, but here he was definitely considering the highest order of critic—the connoisseur, in fact, of our last comparison. His function is purely contemplative; his joy derived from a work of art is chiefly due to an instinctive realisation of its supreme fitness—his reaction, in fact, is almost wholly æsthetic and only mildly sensuous. In practice, that is to say, he unconsciously refers the work to a system of abstract criteria which does not select—as in the case of the 'sincere' man—but simply tests. If it fails, he puts it aside; if it survives, he experiences a kind of exalted satisfaction which is common to himself and the connoisseur sampling a tried wine—as opposed to the much-maligned 'honest' man on the one hand, and, on the other, your convivial liquor-swiller who pours his favourite stuff down his neck, and looks very happy and red in the face after and during consumption.

It is only natural that the critic without some abstract set of principles to guide him should fail most noticeably when brought up against stuff which is good but only limited in its significance. The work of the minor poets and musicians, however deserving and excellent in its own sphere, is, by virtue of its actual classification, particularised to some extent; whether it is luxurious or ascetic in feeling, there is definition and a point of view everywhere apparent. Then, of course, our fervent apostle of truth is either of the ingenuous and simple-reverence type which prefers a sweet-pea to all other flowers, or he is a little more ordinary, and confesses to a red rose, or . . . and, in any case there is trouble. When he meets with the cactus tree or passion flower, he is either pricked or puzzled, and imagines that his querulous complaints will pass for criticism. This, of course, leads us directly to the statement that, unless he can appreciate a passion flower as a passion flower or can see the prickles as something peculiarly appropriate to the general scheme of the cactus tree and is not prejudiced by what his hands suffer from them during investigation, his remarks as to the merits of either will be worthless.

It is rather a setback, after so much argument and simile, to arrive at a conclusion which is often expressed to the effect that the critic should take up the composer's point of view at the beginning. In case, therefore, further commonplaces should be discovered, I once more take refuge in the allegory. Granted, therefore, that the critic has accustomed himself to appreciate his flowers for what they are meant to be, and not from the point of view of his favourite sweet pea or rose, there is still much useful comparison to be done. The most obvious, of course, is to recall some splendid bloom of the species under consideration and to see how far it falls short, or is superior to it. This may seem to be a rather stilted method, but in practice he need not refer directly to his standard type, for if he has made himself perfectly familiar with its beauty he will, by a series of unconscious comparisons, at once notice the defects and virtues of the new bloom. Then, of course, if another creator is feverishly engaged in making seaweed, he can still say, after examination, that his specimens are disreputable (if they are), or, if they are good, he can, with some justice, point out that the man would probably be much better employed making sweet peas or even red roses. There is a type of creator who has a perverted passion for the making of curious things, and, while deprecating the practice generally, it must nevertheless be admitted that many of these men have produced stuff which is valuable as well as interesting. Among this number, at random, we pick out Moussorgsky as typical—although no doubt we would find seaweed much too ordinary, and would be happier when, with great labour, he was fashioning a large lump of coal, or perhaps a decaying piece of timber.

This roughly covers the whole range of critical problems, except in one respect. It has been maintained that works of art should be first classified as genuine or imitative, and estimated on that classification; that they should be accepted for what they are, however remote; that in all cases, judgment should be based on æsthetic considerations, and should be as free from emotional prejudices or temperamental attractions and repulsions as is possible in the circumstances. There still remains, however, the point as to how far the bulk and breadth of the work (provided it is not mere flabbiness or bombast) is to affect the final estimation. This is, in truth, the most important consideration of all, and concerns the real significance of the work—how deeply it cuts, and how successfully it grapples with the issue. In the main, people are so far agreed upon this point that it will not call for much emphasis. There are still some, however, who so much confuse the function of art with the creation of merely perfect things, that to them a flawless string quartet is of higher value than a symphony, which is necessarily somewhat cruder in texture, but may be at the same time a thing of quite overwhelming significance. From this proceeds the present-day tendency to elevate Mozart above Beethoven; it is the point of view, in fact, so well and familiarly expressed by Ben Jonson (actually in reference to the 'trees' of our second paragraph):

A lily of the day,
Is fairer far in May,
Although it fall and die that night.

It has a certain affinity, too, with Wordsworth's confession:

For me, the meanest flower that blows
Holds thoughts that lie too deep for tears.

No one can fail to sympathise instinctively with the sentiment in each case, but it must be confessed that both proceed from a kind of deliberate and wistful fallacy, with which we often seek to soothe ourselves in moments of weakness. Carlyle is looking out among things in truer perspective, and is responding to a more sincerely human impulse, when he bows down before the magnificent gods and giants of the Northern sagas and is carried away by the conception of the tree Igdrasil, which has its roots in Hell and bears the clouds of the sky like leaves upon its branches. Thus, in any comparative estimation of Wagner's work, we must throw on half the box of weights when 'The Ring' is in the scale, in order to balance the magnitude of its conception; for in this it is as the tree of Igdrasil, even if, in sheer musical interest, it is only a bad second to 'Die Meistersinger' or 'Tristan.' To the musician pure and simple this will be heresy, but to the ordinary mortal it is a matter of common justice. Thus it is that the epic grandeur of Milton's scheme of things in 'Paradise Lost' places that poem unquestionably in the first rank, although, as in the case of 'The Ring,' it is full of absurdities and gross crimes against common artistic decency, which, except for the saving grace of its primary recommendation, might well make such a perfect work as 'L'Allegro' feel ashamed of their common parentage.

It will be realised, with some measure of despair, that the type of critic whose attitude is outlined in this essay will, even more than the creator, be born, not made. This does not alter the fact that the ordinary critic, who is capable of a sound general judgment, or the man who can write interestingly and suggestively about his own opinions, is very necessary, and, in most respects, more vital to the art interests of the present day. Nevertheless, it is maintained that criticism is tending towards, and will continue to approach, this higher and more contemplative plane; it will demand a more complete detachment from worldly or personal considerations, and will estimate a work on the grounds of, firstly, its power and significance, and, secondly, its consistency of style. Just as painting, following Pater's prophecy, has been making attempts with Whistler and his present-day derivatives to approach the condition of music in that it 'seeks to rid itself of its responsibilities to its subject or material,' so criticism will more and more tend to neglect those personal predilections and temperamental sympathies which have been the very stuff from which it has been moulded, and will become a matter 'of pure perception only.' When this condition of things is arrived at, the critic will be restored to that post of honour which was held anciently by the pagan philosophers, and also by the Chinese sages: it will then be possible to realise the ultimate truth—that to create is merely human, but to appreciate, Divine.

Ad Libitum

By 'FESTE'

A good many thousands of words concerning critics have been released by writers and speakers during the past few weeks. In fact, there is a likelihood of musical criticism becoming a kind of big gooseberry. As Mr. Newman says:

With the usual fin de saison languor on him, and the holidays coming nearer and nearer, the weary critic naturally looks for subjects that neither he nor anyone else can take seriously. That is why I write to-day on musical criticism.

Although it has led to some capital speeches, and makes far better 'copy' than most 'silly season' topics, many of the arguments and discussions are bound to be futile, because the subject is one in which personal taste inevitably plays so big a part that the old de gustibus tag comes in. Moreover, you will observe that most speakers confuse genuine musical criticism—that is, the critical appraisalment of music old or new—with the reports of musical performances written and published within a few hours of their occurrence. You will note further that the writers of the latter are the Ishmaels of the profession: every man's hand is against them.

I suggest that any future debates on musical criticism shall have what committees call 'terms of reference' laid down, and that speakers shall be made to stick to them. Thus, one heading should deal with musical criticism of the type that is represented by some of the best books in musical literature, e.g., Newman's 'Study of Wagner,' Dent's 'Mozart and the Opera,' Parry's 'John Sebastian Bach,' Pirro's 'L'Esthétique de Jean Sébastien Bach,' and so on. Another topic would be the reviewing of new music—a type of criticism that is perhaps the most difficult of all, because the writer rarely has an opportunity of hearing the music he is judging. As a rule the most he can do is to run it over at a pianoforte, and we know that most of the music produced to-day—at all events, the music that calls for serious review—is of a type that demands more keyboard dexterity than the average musical journalist can spare time to acquire or keep up. In the case of chamber and orchestral music, a good deal of choral music, and the more difficult songs, he has to depend on his ability to hear the music mentally. With due respect to the clever folk who expect us to believe that their favourite method of hearing music is through the eye, I maintain that the ear is the only reliable medium, even for fairly simple things. Beyond dispute, then, the reviewing of new music is one of the most important and difficult branches of musical journalism; it is also among the less lucrative kinds, owing to the fact that it calls for the expenditure of a great deal of time with a disproportionately small amount of 'copy' as a result. Yet the ethics and various difficulties of the work have not been discussed so far as I am aware. The British Music Society might well devote a session to it. Here are a couple of questions with which to open the ball: (1.) In view of the fact that the reviewer is writing about music that he has not heard, ought he to confine himself to such questions as degree of difficulty, length, general style, &c.? (2.) Would it not be better to avoid all unfavourable criticism, and to select for review only such works as the reviewer feels he can praise without a qualm? In other words, should he not play for safety and content himself with giving a list of 'The Best of the Month'?

Perhaps I may be allowed to put forward timid answers:

(1.) Reviews limited to matter that can be got from the title-page, plus a word as to the degree of difficulty, would have the double drawback of being poor 'copy,' and of merely duplicating information that the publisher's advertisement or catalogue already gives in a handier form. The interest of a review lies almost entirely in the critical side, which in the hands of a good musician able to express himself clearly may be of considerable value to the student.

(2.) A list of the 'best only' implies that works not mentioned are among the worst; it condemns by implication, which is less satisfactory than a directly unfavourable review which gives a reason for the adverse opinion. Nor should the reader hastily assume that an unfavourable review necessarily has a bad effect on the sale of a work. A review of any kind is a better form of publicity than an advertisement, because a lot of people miss advertisements, whereas most of them read the reviews. Moreover, the points that call forth the strictures of the reviewer are sometimes the very ones that commend a work to certain of his readers. I remember once meeting a composer a year or so after I had pitched into one of his works. To my surprise and relief, he began by thanking me for that unfavourable review. Before its appearance, he said, the work had hung fire; a few weeks after, the sales went up and the failure had become a success. I was glad to find that I had done him no material harm, and said so, though I did not pretend to regard the popularity of his music as being other than disastrous so far as public taste was concerned. This case may be unusual, but only a few instances of the kind are needed to back up my point that composers would be the losers if reviewers ignored works that struck them as inferior. It is with music and books as it is with individuals: praise if you can, blame if you must, but for heaven's sake don't ignore them. Other questions in regard to reviewing will suggest themselves as being worthy of consideration. It is time this really important form of musical criticism received some attention from our deliberative bodies.

As for the writer of concert notices, nobody loves him; the poor fellow had the usual rough passage at the British Music Society's Congress. Dr. Eaglefield Hull even went so far as to say that rather than ask the critics their opinion, he would prefer to consult the programme boy. Mr. Scholes, in the Observer, neatly pointed out that the critics are perfectly willing to accept this statement as indicative of Dr. Hull's tastes and preferences—which I am sure is the last thing the Doctor wants them to do. He will learn from this that when on the platform a mere Doctor of Music scintillates at his peril; better leave such sweeping and startling dicta to Bernard Shaw, who has the trick of it, and whom nobody takes too seriously. G. B. S. mixed up a lot of shrewd commonsense with his fireworks at the Congress. Among other things he said (speaking of his early days as music critic of the World forty years ago) that 'even stockbrokers used to read his article every week, not because they were keen on music perhaps, but because it was interesting in itself.' There, in a nutshell, is the rationale of the concert notice. People who assume a lofty attitude and pooh-pooh it as mere 'clever reporting' are really paying it the highest compliment. The ability to write a first-rate report, whether it be of a murder trial, a horse show, or a concert, is less common than appears to be the case. We read many columns of newspapers because of our interest in the subjects, not because of any skill in the reporting. Rarely do we come across anything arresting on the purely literary side. We wade through all those yards of print not because of the quality of the report, but in spite of it. When good reporting is valued as it ought to be, we shall find people praising a writer of concert-notices by some such remarks as: 'Manktelow is more than a mere music critic; his concert notices are so good that one might even call him a first-class reporter.'

It is difficult to understand the complaint of some speakers at the B.M.S. Congress as to editors of the daily press regarding concert notices almost entirely from the news standpoint. Why shouldn't they? What is a newspaper for if not to give its readers an account of the previous day's happenings? The commonsense way of looking at concerts is to put them among the recreations and amenities, with the drama and sport. Reports of new plays, cricket matches, boxing, tennis, &c., all give us news, and yet have room for criticism. The best of these reports reach a very high standard. The Times reports of the recent Wimbledon tennis championship, for example, were both news and literature—really engaging articles from which the player-reader could learn much. Neville Cardus's new book, 'Days in the Sun,' shows what can be done by a 'mere reporter' when dealing with cricket. Everybody agrees that music needs more publicity. Can there be a better way of getting it than by inducing the average newspaper reader to take in concert reports with the other news? If stockbrokers forty years ago read weekly what Bernard Shaw had to say about music, mainly because they knew Shaw's articles to be good stuff, why shouldn't their stockbroking sons be reading concert notices to-day? Perhaps they are: there are plenty worth their attention. Most of those in The Times, for instance, are models, in their throwing to the surface the important points in the programme or the performance. There are few without the felicitous touch that keeps one reading, and the musician who can learn nothing from such 'reporting' as this is past instruction.

A writer in the Musical Courier recently went too far in pressing the news side. He said that the public cares nothing about ... the art of interpretation, nor opera-giving, nor anything else concerning art. What the public wants ... is informative, non-technical news.

He complained that concert notices

... give no idea of an artist's personality, of the character of his offering or the quality of his reception, and ended by declaring that

... it is time the critics discovered the public, and it is time we were relieved of the flood of technicalities that comes day by day from the press, and can only interest professionals.

By a happy chance this same issue of the Courier contained a full-page advertisement of William Backhaus, in which were displayed reports of one of his recitals, by half a dozen of New York's best-known critics. Very readable notices they are, too, with no 'flood of technicalities,' though only one seems to come near to the standard required by the Courier writer quoted above—that by Deems Taylor, which opens thus:

When Mr. Backhaus, playing his last recital of the season at Aeolian Hall last night, paused after the second movement of the Beethoven Op. 108 Sonata, his hearers, instead of breaking into applause, waited in silence for the next movement to begin. Which is a striking comment, both upon Mr. Backhaus's playing and the sort of audience he draws. He is essentially a musician's pianist. He has no mannerisms nor platform tricks. He keeps his hands on the keyboard and his mind on the music. He does not make faces nor crack small jokes with the audience. He falls into no sculptural poses. Some of his hair is long, but more of it is missing, and the present scribe, for whom he has been mistaken upon occasion, is one of the few persons, probably, who is strikingly impressed by his personal beauty.

Here we have 'an idea of the artist's personality' and 'the quality of his reception'; and the reference to the player's hair (both present and absent) comes under the head of 'informative non-technical news.'

A generation ago much importance was attached to such matters as the size of the audience and the 'quality of the artist's reception.' Turning over the 1836 volume of the Musical World recently I found some concert notices in which this kind of information entirely squeezed out the musical side. Here, for example, is the report of 'Mr. Mori's concert':

The Great Room in the King's Theatre being totally inadequate to the accommodation of the subscribers to the Annual Concert of this public favourite, the performance was transferred to the Opera House itself. The result was, that so large an audience assembled, as to fill the theatre. We did not perceive a box unoccupied; while the pit and gallery appeared to be crowded. The Italians, and best of the English singers were engaged; and the concert, which was a choice one, extended to a very late hour. It has been conjectured that Mr. Mori cleared £800 by this benefit.

Which was good business for Mr. Mori; but what he, or 'the Italians, and best of the English singers' sang, or how they sang it, appears to have been of no importance. Most of the concert reports of the period contain a reference to the size and type of the audience—'the room was respectably filled'; 'the company appeared to be much gratified by the general performance'; 'the concert was numerously and fashionably attended'; 'the room was crowded with high fashion,' and so on. But let it be added that many of these Musical World notices are surprisingly good to read, with their strong commonsense and frank style.

Before I return this Musical World volume to its shelf, let me extract a quaint item from its review columns:

'Signal Fires,' a song written and composed by THE WIFE OF A DISTRESSED CLERGYMAN. WILLIS.

The simple circumstance of the Archbishop of Canterbury's lady (an accomplished theorist) having subscribed for three hundred copies of this song, will of itself obviate any critical remarks we might otherwise feel called upon to offer respecting its simple and affecting beauty.

Shirker!

The most unreasonable attack lately launched against the musical critic was that of Mr. Stacy Aumonier in the Evening Standard of June 20. He began by describing as 'a profound mystery' the fact that 'the artist is the only member of the community who is allowed to be libelled, bullied, or insulted, without redress or the right to hit back.'

If [he went on] I wrote: 'I went yesterday into Messrs. Booster's stores in Oxford Street, and saw a dud line of blankets. I never saw such flimsy stuff. And the price they are asking for them is wicked,' Messrs. Booster would immediately put the law on my track. I should be heavily fined, if not put in prison, for making statements liable to damage their business. But if I wrote: 'I went yesterday into the Queen's Hall, and heard Mr. Skrape play the Saint-Saëns Concerto. I never heard a worse performance. His tone is appalling, and his technique utterly inadequate,' people would say, 'Bright boy! that's the stuff to give 'em!' Mr. Skrape would have no redress, and he could not answer back. And yet I should be damaging his business just as seriously as if I had made the statement in question concerning Messrs. Booster.

This seems all right until one begins to look into it. The analogy then begins to give at the knees, and soon collapses entirely. To begin with, Messrs. Booster are not in the habit of asking the critic to come and see their stock in order that he may publish his opinion on it; whereas Mr. Skrape not only invites the critics, but is mightily offended if they don't come. Moreover, the quality and price of blankets are matters of fact that can be demonstrated beyond question; but who can prove that Mr. Skrape's performance of a given work was not the worst the critic had ever heard? And tone and technique are matters of opinion as much as of fact. Mr. Aumonier's case would have been better had he not written a parody instead of a typical concert notice. I can think of no music critics likely to write of Mr. Skrape as Mr. Aumonier's imaginary critic writes. Even if they felt that way about Mr. Skrape they would let him down with reasonable lightness. Mr. Newman, for example, might say in effect exactly what Mr. Aumonier's burlesque critic says, but without the crudity which makes the notice offensive.

By the way, I find myself wondering if Mr. Aumonier has read many of Mr. Newman's concert notices. He says:

Criticism in itself is useful, natural, and frequently stimulating, but in the present form in which it is served out in the Press it has a deceptive value to the reader, and an unfair hold over the performer. A critic like Mr. Ernest Newman talks about himself in a human, lovable way. He says things like this: 'I arrived rather late, and was sitting in a bad part of the hall, but my impression was,' &c. This is the right and candid way to criticise. We know not only whom, but the kind of man we are dealing with.

I have read E. N. for a good many years, and hope to read him for lots more, but I am bound to say I do not recognise him in that diffident 'my impression was'! If Mr. Aumonier really thinks this is 'the right and candid way to criticise' he should have adopted it when he set out to criticise the critics, and to accuse them of 'libelling, bullying, and insulting' the artist. 'I have not read the newspapers lately [thus he should have timidly ventured to remark] and my memory for such things is failing, so I cannot be sure; but I find it impossible to avoid an impression that critics are at times disposed to speak of artists with a degree of candour that is—well, not quite nace.'

And when Mr. Aumonier says that artists are 'libelled, &c., without redress or the right to hit back,' he is talking manifest nonsense. An artist has the same redress as other citizens. And as for 'hitting back,' some of them spend a good part of their working life doing it. Mr. Aumonier has evidently not seen the booklet issued recently by Mr. Josef Holbrooke, wherein the whole bunch of critics was smitten till they roared again—albeit only with laughter. And a few months ago Mr. Holbrooke in Musical Opinion expressed his view that 'all critics were living frauds,' whereas no critic has ever disposed of all composers or performers in so wholesale or libellous a way.

Only in one point is Mr. Aumonier's article well-founded. He has us with him when he contends that all criticism should be signed. Criticism is the most personal of writing, and derives much of its interest from that fact. I look out each week to see what Newman and Scholes say of a work or a performance, not because I need their assistance in making up my mind, but merely because I want to see how they've made up theirs. And while I am finding out, I am pretty sure to get some fresh light on the work or the performance: even if, for once in a way, the little bit of extra light is thrown only on Messrs. Newman and Scholes themselves, I still feel I have my money's worth.

Far too much is made of the divergent views expressed by critics. Seeing that nobody expects Newman and Scholes to agree in other matters where taste is a factor, why should we be aggrieved if they are not always in accord over music? And if one says 'white' and the other 'black,' it only encourages me to go on holding stiffly to my preference for blue. As a fact, however, the differences of opinion between critics are as a rule small—at all events in this country. I do not recall such remarkable contrasts as those frequently shown by American critics. Here, for example, are some findings, pilloried in the Musical Courier, from which I have already quoted: Of a singer the Herald said that he had 'a fine voice, well controlled'—this same voice, however, striking the Mail as 'not always pleasing to the ear . . . tone thick and unsteady . . . a voice without great charm.' The Mail complained of a violinist—Josef Borisoff—that he 'relied too much on full vibrant tone, and too little on refinement . . . and [in the Franck Sonata] showed an inclination to tear emotion to tatters.' The Herald felt this, too: 'There was plenty of fire . . . perhaps more vibrancy and temperament and less refinement in Franck's Sonata than the Belgian composer would have enjoyed.' By this time you have a picture of Josef letting himself go, and putting the Franck across like a real he-man, as they might say over the water.

And now see Josef as he struck the Sun, the Evening World, and The Tribune: 'The strange weakness lurking in this excellent equipment was a certain coldness almost approaching routine.' 'One wishes that his tone were not so dry, and that he might put greater warmth into his playing.' 'The Franck Sonata . . . seemed calm and correct rather than expressive.'

You say that these extracts show the absurd inconclusiveness of criticism. I don't agree. One learns from them: (1) That Josef is an excellent fiddler; (2) that critics A and B differ from their brothers C, D, and E, as to the emotional content of the Sonata; and (3) that the player differs from both groups, being too warm for one, too cold for the other, and therefore almost certain to be right. If Josef is wise, he reads these notices with interest, refuses to regard himself as bullied, insulted, or libelled, and continues to play the Franck as he feels it, and not as he gathers certain critics think he ought to feel it.

But how if such differences of opinion concern, not an interpretative, but a technical point? Then Josef, still wise—I am speaking of Borisoff, not Holbrooke—will begin by assuming that the adverse criticism is right, and will overhaul that part of his technical equipment, or take pedagogic advice, until he is satisfied that it is wrong. In most cases he will find it is right, for the reason that critics rarely commit themselves to definite statements on technical points (especially in the direction of finding fault) unless they are well-qualified and sure of their ground.

The lack of unanimity over which so much fuss is made is on the whole a good thing. A virtue or defect may easily escape one critic; it can hardly get past the whole gang. Anyway, good thing or bad, it is inevitable. Quot homines. . . Even Dr. Hull's panel of programme boys would not always speak with one voice.

'SONATE PATHÉTIQUE'

BY H. SCOTT-BAKER

It has been stated in Die Musik that probably Beethoven's Op. 13 is connected with Cherubini's opera 'Medea,'* which was produced at Paris in 1797, two years before the publication of this Sonata. The composer's title 'Pathétique,' which was the first of the dozen or so times when he used one, suggests, of course, a programme which, so far as is known, Beethoven never explained.†

Cherubini was ten years older than Beethoven. At the time of the production of 'Medea,' the former would be thirty-seven and the latter twenty-seven. At this time, too, it is probable that Cherubini was the most discussed composer in Europe, much in the same way as Stravinsky, Scriabin, Strauss, and others have been in our own time. His operas 'Lodoiska' (1791), 'Koukourgi' (1793), 'Elisa' (1794), and 'Medea' (1797), are spoken of as belonging to a new style, with unusual harmonic combinations and instrumental effects which were 'both startling and brilliant, and took the composers of the day completely by surprise.'‡

It is a fact that Beethoven esteemed Cherubini above all other living composers, and it is acknowledged that the former's choral work was much influenced by the latter; indeed, Beethoven thought so highly of Cherubini's Requiem that he is reported to have said that he would borrow largely from it in the event of his writing one. The scores of 'Medea' and 'Faniska' were found in his scanty library, and a fragment of a sketch-book—at one time in the possession of the late Dr. Joachim—contains the Trio in the 'Deux Journées' mixed up with sketches for 'Fidelio' and the Finale of the B flat Symphony. These facts, as well as plenty of other evidence, are to be found in 'Grove,' and they tend to prove that Beethoven was a close student of Cherubini's work, much in the same way as Wagner was of Beethoven's.

'Medea' is the story of intense hatred, witchcraft, jealousy, and passionate grief; the mythological background adds much to the atmosphere of the story. The opera book is based on the tragedy of Euripides of the same name, which, as every one knows, is the sequel to the romance of the Argonauts. The quest of the Golden Fleece by Jason and the heroes of ancient Greece, and how they were helped and protected by Medea, must be read in detail, otherwise the passionate hatred of Medea, which culminates in the tragedy, may appear exaggerated.

The ensemble in the second Act is the scene of the banishment of Medea. This is the place in the story where Medea is goaded into a state of furious hatred, jealousy, and an awful sense of her wrongs. She pleads with the king to be allowed to live near her children, but he refuses. The dramatic situation is heightened by a chorus of warriors, alternately reiterating the king's commands and appealing to the gods to protect Corinth from Medea's witchcraft.

Here Cherubini makes a good deal of use of this figure in the accompaniment:

It has a strong likeness to Beethoven's Allegro at bar 25:

of which the opening subject of the Allegro is but a development.

These variants of Ex. 1 appear fifteen times in the first movement, and the development section is largely devoted to it. Bearing in mind the psychological moment when it is used in the opera, is it not possible that Beethoven may have used these strenuous motifs to represent the passions of hate and revenge?

Richard Hohenemser, the writer of the article in Die Musik, considers the second subject of Beethoven's first movement, as well as the Rondo subject, to be related to certain themes in the Finale of the opera. For instance, when Neris enters and implores Jason to rescue his children, Cherubini has this:

This leads to the figure which accompanies Jason's futile dash to save his children:

But at other points in the opera a resemblance to Beethoven's themes occurs. In the opening scene, Act I, Dirce (Medea's rival) expresses doubt of Jason's fidelity, since he has already broken faith with his wife, Medea. Cherubini uses this figure in the accompaniment:

Then again, in the second Act, after Medea's sentence of banishment, Neris assures Medea of loyalty 'even unto death':

* Musical Times, November, 1923. † 'Grove,' vol. ii., p. 672.

‡ Ibid., vol. i., p. 342.

Ex. 6.

Beethoven may have developed either or both of the following subjects from Exx. 3, 4, 5, or 6 :

Ex. 7.
2nd Sub. 1st Mov.

But Nottebohm states that the Rondo subject, Ex. 8, was originally intended for the third of the String Trios, Op. 9, which were probably composed in 1796.* If this was the case, then Beethoven invented the figure before Cherubini's work appeared. Is it possible that Beethoven found that his motif suited the Medea scheme, and withdrew it from the Trio for use in the Sonata? Except for the Coda the Rondo is rather a pleasant affair; it does not breathe the same spirit as the other movements. In the scheme of things it is inclined to be incongruous: it also shows signs of having been made to refer to other movements, to the Adagio, for instance. Compare Exx. 9 and 10 with Ex. 11 :

Ex. 10.
*Rondo.*Ex. 11. Adagio.

Although Ex. 12 is a variant of Ex. 8, it manages to carry the mind back to the opening of the Adagio, as well as to the third and fourth bars of Ex. 7 :

In fact the subject-matter of the first and second movements is often metamorphosed into the Rondo, as will be seen on analysis, but the effect falls short of bringing the movement into the already established atmosphere. The hearer is, so to speak, hoodwinked by the brilliant Coda.

The expressive nature of the themes Beethoven uses in the Grave, is best shown by comparison with those of Wagner's 'Tristan.' This story, like that of 'Medea,' is concerned with sorcery. It was the custom in olden times for princesses to be acquainted with and to practice this science. Both Medea and Isolda, therefore, would possess certain knowledge of magical art. The story of 'Tristan and Isolda,' for instance, turns on the substitution of a love for a death potion. Wagner uses the following motif whenever sorcery is mentioned or implied. The Prelude has it thus :

Langsam, &amp;c.

At Isolda's words, 'O zahme Kunst der Zauberin,' thus :

Ex. 14. Schnell.

and so on.

In the seventh and eighth bars of the Introduction to the 'Sonate Pathétique,' Beethoven has used very much the same :

Grave.

The Introduction Grave is mainly concerned with this gloomy and sinister motif :

It appears later, in the middle section of the Allegro, as :

and has a striking resemblance to the 'look' motif in 'Tristan' (which is especially noticeable when we compare its major form at bar 5 of the Grave) :

Tristan.

These comparisons between the 'Pathétique' and 'Tristan' may reveal only a coincidence; on the other hand it may be a case of 'Apostolic succession,' which is so admirably defined by Sir George Grove.* If the latter, then there will be some justification for supposing that a tragedy with a sinister background of sorcery, as seen in 'Medea,' underlies the composition of the 'Pathétique.' Beethoven has so seldom * Grove, vol. i., p. 177, vol. ii., p. 672. Op. 9 was published in 1798.

* Beethoven and his Nine Symphonies, p. 60.

indicated a programme that it is well to remember the late Sir Hubert Parry's dictum on this point :

Even if it deals with a story it does not represent the circumstances, but the condition of mind which results from its contemplation.*

This may be nearer the mark than the suggestion that Beethoven specifically used Cherubini's ideas, or that Wagner used Beethoven's.

We are told that 'great minds think alike,' and if a 'condition of mind which results from contemplation' produces musical ideas which have a likeness, it is feasible that dissimilar stories have a common origin. The earliest form of the 'Tristan' story belongs to Solar mythology ; the same may be said of the 'Medea' story. In Greek mythology she is immortalised as the grand-daughter of the Sun. According to Alice Cleather and Basil Crump,† Wagner shows that he was acquainted with the earliest solar form of the Tristan myth by the lines :

Mit blutender Wunde bekämpft 'ich einst Morolden :
Mit blutender Wunde erjag 'ich mir heut' Isolden !

(Act 3, Scene 2.)

As Tristan sinks dying in Isolda's arms, the two motifs shown in Exx. 13 & 18 are heard, thereby accentuating their place in this drama by being used at its climax. Likewise in the Free Fantasia section of the first movement of the 'Pathétique,' Exx. 2 & 17 are brought into close contact, which, from their associations might typify passionate hatred and sorcery, although the latter is not apparent, so to speak, until Wagner has pointed it out. But is it not possible that, considering the circle in which Beethoven moved, and which would have contained eminent scholars, philosophers, and the like, some account of the original mythology of 'Medea,' and the sinister influence of passion, love, and magic would set him thinking? Indeed, the phrase 'Fire of Love,' which is exemplified in both these dramas, comes from Pagan sun-worship. Its adoption in Christian worship, in the 'Veni, Creator,' for instance, is an anachronism which has a parallel in the use of the beautiful melody of the Adagio for an Anglican chant.

Beethoven was twenty-nine when he published the Sonate. He had been resident at Vienna about five years, during which time his relations with his contemporaries were anything but pleasant. He was fully conscious of the fact that his music was not understood. He was sensitive and suspicious to a degree, the slightest hint of ridicule made him furious. It is not difficult to understand what his feelings would be like if, after explaining his meaning of the 'Pathétique,' Woelffl, Hummel, and a few other lively sparks made fun of it—he was hardly likely to run the risk. His strong sense of humour, too, might make him enjoy the many attempts there must have been at the time to unravel the mystery of such a title.

He was evidently chary of giving titles to his works. He qualified the title of 'Pastoral' to the sixth Symphony with 'more the expression of feeling than painting'; and as for the 'Eroica,' the well-known story of Ries is illuminating on this point, for when he told him that Napoleon had assumed the title of Emperor, Beethoven tore the title-page in half and threw it on the ground, and, it is said, never referred to the connection between his Symphony and Napoleon until seventeen years afterwards, when he was told of the death of the latter at St. Helena (May 5, 1821). Then he stated that he had already composed the proper music for that catastrophe, meaning, of course, the 'Funeral March.'

Then there is the inconsistency of style between the Rondo and the other movements. Beethoven must have realised this soon after publication ; he was too big an artist not to have done so. How very different, for instance, is the so-called 'Appassionata' Sonata (Op. 57). This is consistent throughout. It was composed in the summer of 1806, after a season at Vienna which included many meetings with Cherubini, who was there in 1805-06 producing his operas. It is stated that the composers were much together.

The writer of the article in Die Musik states that it is unlikely that Beethoven was never conscious of the relationship between this Sonata and 'Medea.' If such is the case, then Op. 13 is 'more the expression of feeling than a fantasia on themes'—to paraphrase the Master's own words. On his own admission he always worked to a picture.* As to what this may have been he very seldom affords a clue. But as he progressed towards maturity, he thought less and less of his early works and, great artist that he was, the incongruous nature of an early Rondo tacked on to obviously-inspired first and second movements must have been distasteful to him. This was probably the reason why no indication ever came from him as to the meaning of the 'Pathétique.' But the atmosphere of 'Medea' seems to be reflected in the Sonata, added to which there is an apparent working of some of Cherubini's themes which will justify an association of the two works.

NEW LIGHT ON LATE TUDOR COMPOSERS

BY W. H. GRATTAN FLOOD

I.—WILLIAM SELBY

Although William Selby (or Shelby) is included in the list of 'practitioners' by Morley, in his well-known 'Plaine and Easie Introduction to Practical Musicke,' in 1597, and is quoted by Stafford Smith, yet no particulars of his biography have been hitherto available.

Henry Davey, in the new edition of his 'History of English Music' (1921), is content with the following notice of this Tudor composer :

Selby was doubtless the William Shelbye whose 'Felix namque' and 'Miserere' are preserved in the Mulliner MS. The former is in four real parts, long and elaborate ; the latter—a fantasia on the plainsong Miserere—has throughout two notes in the upper part against three in the middle and nine in the bass. Stafford Smith made a marginal note that the piece was not intended to be exactly divided, but I think the various 'proportions' would have been precisely what 16th-century musicians employed and appreciated. There is in most of the pieces in the Mulliner MS. still a certain stiffness resulting from too strict contrapuntal calculation ; from beginning to end each piece is without variety, having always the same 'proportions' as in Shelbye's 'Miserere,' in Tallis's 'Natus est nobis' (two-part, with quavers in bass and minims in melody), and many others.

Dr. Ernest Walker, in his 'History of Music in England' (second edition, 1924), writing of the * 'Grove,' vol. iii., p. 574.

† 'Tristan and Isolda,' described and interpreted in accordance with Wagner's own writings' (Methuen).

* Beethoven and his Nine Symphonies,' p. 158.

ecclesiastical influence in the pieces given in the Mulliner book, says:

The pieces of Redford and Shepherd seem on the whole the least artistically uninteresting; those of Blitheman, himself a great executant, show forecasts of the virtuoso fireworks of his pupil Bull, some of whose rhythmic devices are also foreshadowed in such things as a 'Miserere' Fantasia by Shelbye, which combines three different measures uninterruptedly from start to finish—an example of sheer mathematical calculation of a kind which seems to have had considerable attraction for contemporary composers.

Parry, in his 'Style in Musical Art' (new edition, 1924), thus refers to Selby:

Further, in this book of Mulliner's, there are examples which show the instinct of composers to break the bonds of the old choral style, and to seek for intimately ingenious devices which might be qualified to represent a new kind of art. A very curious and amusing example is an elaborate speculative combination of species by Shelbye. The Canto Fermo (a Miserere) is given to the little finger in what appears to be two semibreves in a bar, though it requires the addition of a quaver to each semibreve to make it fit, the middle part for the thumb and contiguous fingers of the right hand and the part for the left hand are in a time equivalent to nine crotchets in a bar. Such devices are met with also in later Elizabethan compositions for the Virginals.

So far, then, we have ample evidence as to Selby's powers as a composer, and yet the only clue as to the period in which he flourished is the fact that two of his instrumental pieces are found in Mulliner's MS., c. 1560. Therefore I proceed to throw some new light on his biography—not many details, I am sorry to add, but still such as may prove helpful to future historians.

William Selby was probably born c. 1510, and we meet with him as organist of Canterbury Cathedral in 1540. In the Chapter Acts there is an entry under date 1550, chronicling the fact that Selby was Master of the Choristers and also 'pulsator' of the organ. We are therefore safe in concluding that his creative period as a composer may be placed between the years 1540 and 1560. Another interesting entry from the Chapter Acts, under date 1567, records the payment to Mr. Selby, Master of the Choristers, of a honorarium 'for his pains in making and pricking divers books of music for the choir.'

Selby either retired or died in 1569-70, as his successor, Thomas Bull, was appointed Master of the Choristers in 1570. He deserves inclusion in the present series of articles as one among the Tudor composers who endeavoured to break away from the old traditions, and who yet must be reckoned with those who, as C. H. H. Parry writes, 'beat their wings fruitlessly against the confines of their cage.'

For any who desire to study at first hand the two compositions by Selby, an examination of the Mulliner MS. in the British Museum will repay perusal.

We have received from Messrs. Paxton the book of music for the Welsh Festival at Wembley—a selection from 'The Messiah,' some of the best of Welsh hymn-tunes and folk-songs, motets and anthems by Palestrina, S. S. Wesley, and Mendelssohn, and five of Robert Jones's delightful ditties. The collection is edited by Sir Walford Davies, who also writes a characteristic 'Foreword,' in which are some practical suggestions concerning massed singing. The music is printed in both notations.

The Musician's Bookshelf

'The Necessity of Art.' [The Student Christian Movement, 7s. 6d.]

This volume consists of seven lengthy chapters, the subjects and authors being 'Art and the Escape from Banality,' A. Clutton Brock; 'Christianity and Art,' Percy Dearmer; 'The Art of Movement,' A. S. Duncan-Jones; 'The Puritan Objection to Art,' Malcolm Spencer; 'The Artist and the Saint,' Alfred W. Pollard; 'Literature and Religion,' J. Middleton Murry; and 'The Doctrine of Values,' Percy Dearmer.

One is disappointed to find no chapter devoted specially to music—the art capable of being practised by the largest percentage of people and at the lowest cost. However, Mr. Duncan-Jones allots a section of his chapter to music in connection with religion, and of course music frequently comes in by the way throughout the volume. The actual claim expressed in the title is best backed up in the opening chapter, 'Art and the Escape from Banality,' and in the second of Dr. Dearmer's contributions. The bulk of the latter appeared in The Guardian some time ago, and well bears re-reading. Dr. Dearmer quotes the following from the article, 'Æsthetics,' in the 'Encyclopædia Britannica' (the Doctor's italics):

(1.) Æsthetic experience (in all but its simpler and cruder forms) has been, and still is, confined to a small number of persons; so that the subject does not appeal to a wide, popular interest.

(2.) Both play and æsthetic contemplation . . . contrast with the serious work imposed on us, and controlled by what we mark off as the necessities of life, such as providing for bodily wants or rearing a family. They each add a sort of luxurious fringe to life.

Dr. Dearmer has no difficulty in riddling this pestilent theory, and he ends his lively exposé with the opinion that the poor . . . never fell into the great modern heresy about art: it has always been an upper-class idea that art is only necessary to the rich, and a middle-class idea that art is not necessary to anybody.

Mr. Duncan-Jones says some good things, but some of his musical statements are rash. Is 'The Magic Flute' the supreme achievement in music? And is it true to say that 'for the fullness of the drama music is needed, and so is the dance'? If so, Shakespeare's works would be better as operas than as plays, which is unthinkable, if only for the reason that the exigencies of musical setting would end in our being obliged to scrap a good deal of the poetry of Shakespeare, and to exchange some of the remainder for the poetasting of the librettist. Mr. Duncan-Jones evidently has a higher opinion of Mozart's 'Requiem' than have most musicians. Can it be truly said that, apart from a few fine pages, the composer has risen to the height of his tremendous text? Had he done so, a performance of the 'Requiem' would be one of the most moving—even shattering—of experiences. But is it?

Mr. Duncan-Jones gives a good example of the ignorance which persisted until very recently, even among educated people, concerning the ancient music of the Church. Thus:

The 'Cambridge Mediæval History,' in its first volume, has a chapter on 'Early Christian Art' in which this most signal achievement of the Christian spirit is not mentioned. In the second volume it manages in one place to couple the word 'music' with the name of Gregory. In the third volume the subject is waved aside with an apologetic gesture. 'No idea of the progress made in music can be given, but by a specialist.' As the specialist was apparently not forthcoming, we are left to console ourselves with the reflection that the shadowy and sordid history of emperors, counts, and viscounts was at any rate relieved by gorgeous buildings and learned writers.

Yet, as he says elsewhere, the so-called Dark Ages

... witnessed a steady growth and development which endowed the Church with perhaps the largest body of pure melody that has ever existed. And more—busy minds devoted themselves to the study of the principles that underlay it, and to the evolution of its science.

Officials and others who suffer from over-long 'settings,' with wearying repetitions of words, will envy the courage of Bishop Ullathorne, of whom Mr. Duncan-Jones tells a delightful story. Speaking of the early days of church music and ceremonial, and of the free methods of clergy in the conduct of the services in days 'when they had not fallen victims to the church musician nor to the mind of the sacristan,' Mr. Duncan-Jones says:

Bishop Ullathorne was quite in the ancient fashion when, having sat through an elaborate creed till the limit of endurance was reached, he rose in his place, as the choir were singing genitum non factum for the eighth or ninth time, and carolled forth, Factum vel non factum, Dominus vobiscum.

A musical journal's main concern is with music, so there is no call for a discussion of other chapters in this excellent book. But it may be permitted to draw attention to the unusual fairness with which the Puritan attitude to art is treated, to Mr. Middleton Murry's earnest pages on 'Literature and Religion,' and, above all, to the opening chapter—which by its vision and cogency reminds us of the country's loss in the death of Arthur Clutton Brock. All who are working for the proper recognition of the things of the spirit will find their objects stated in this symposium with a completeness that has probably never before been given to the subject.

H. G.

'Sims Reeves.' By Charles E. Pearce.

[Stanley Paul, 16s.]

Mr. Pearce's book has for sub-title 'Fifty Years of Music in England,' and in the long run it will probably be valued more as a record of a period than as a biography of a singer. Singers' lives make poorish reading, as a rule. There is little of the interest that attaches to the career of a composer, for example. We are engrossed in reading of the circumstances in which a great work comes into being, because we have the work before us, and such knowledge is often an essential preparation to complete enjoyment of it. But the singer's life is usually an alternation of success and squabble, and both alike are soon no more than dull—sometimes sordid—memories. The gramophone will improve matters, because it will help us to reconstruct a great singer's success. Thus a life of Caruso can be made a vivid affair by means of a score or so of his best gramophone records. What would we not give for some records of Sims Reeves, even though the music were balladry of the shoppiest! Mr. Pearce calls him 'England's greatest singer,' and there seems to be no reason to doubt that we have never had another tenor in the same class. He had volume, range, sweetness, and above all that ease of production which is absent from so many tenors of to-day. Mr. Pearce suggests that much of his success was due to the fact of his having been first trained as a baritone, and the singer himself seems to bear out the theory. In 1892 he said:

The modern voice has a wide range but no middle. It has been written up till the middle register has grown weak and thin. If a tenor has a good, strong middle voice, he is now called a baritone. I think I may claim to be a tenor, yet I used to be called a baritone at first because I had preserved this part of my voice fresh and strong.

As Mr. Pearce says, no doubt the youthful Reeves possessed, unknown to his teacher, the high notes of a pure tenor. Had the teacher not been deceived by the richness of the middle notes, and unaware of the high ones, he might have concentrated on the top and starved the middle—a common fault of teachers to-day, if we may judge from most sopranos and tenors.

But Sims Reeves was a good deal more than a mere voice. We are apt to under-rate his all-round ability and musicianship, misled by his facile success with so many poor songs. Yet as a boy he absorbed a lot of excellent music and got something like a good standard in the matter of execution, thanks to the concerts of the Royal Artillery at Woolwich (where his father played the violin and bassoon, besides singing bass solos in the R.A. Chapel); he learned musical notation almost with the alphabet, and in early childhood was accustomed to be ready for a pianoforte lesson from his father at five in the morning. Later he was leading treble and occasional organist at North Cray Church, and while still in the adolescent stage was a pupil of Callcott for harmony and counterpoint, of John Cramer for pianoforte, and was able to make a good show with the violin, violoncello, and oboe. And he appears to have added yet other instruments to his repertory, for we hear later of him during an engagement at Edinburgh 'taking up half a dozen instruments and playing difficult passages for the instruction of the bandmen who were unable to execute them correctly.' He even learned to engrave music! His father, a cautious Yorkshireman, had some doubts as to the stability of a livelihood gained from singing, and advised his son to take up the graver's tools and so have a craft at his back in case of failure. On the singing side, the most useful training at this early period of his life was got from frequent attendance at the King's Theatre, where he heard all the operatic stars of the day—Grisi, Persiani, Rubini, Lablache, Tamburini, and others who happened to be at their best just then.

Mr. Pearce discusses the complaint sometimes made as to Sims Reeves's having done little in the cause of good music. He quotes Mr. Willert Beale:

It is much to be regretted that one with so much influence at his command had not done more for the art he represents. In oratorio singing he was unsurpassed. Being recognised, and justly so, as the leading tenor of the day, he could have advanced English music, had he been so disposed, to an incalculable extent; yet his practical encouragement of composers has been limited to writers of ephemeral compositions.

Mr. Pearce says that Mr. Beale, to be just, should have mentioned examples of good English music which Reeves could have sung and didn't; and he contends that such examples do not exist. Admittedly, the period of Reeves's prime was a lean time in English composition; but it can hardly be denied that his choice of songs might have been much improved. A Gervase Elwes or John Coates would have snapped his fingers at the taste and convention of 1850, and would have found something better than Pretty Janes. But is it not probable that Mr. Beale meant 'music in England' rather than 'English music'? If so, there is even less defence for Reeves. At his innumerable concert engagements he seems to have relied on threadbare operatic excerpts and poor ballads. He made a great success with 'Adelaide'—now generally admitted to be one of Beethoven's weakest songs. Were there no other songs by the classical lieder school obtainable in England at the time? Think what a singer of his standing, with a public ready to eat out of his hand, could have done by the introduction of one or two first-rate songs into each of his programmes! Mr. Pearce's real answer to such strictures as those of Mr. Beale lies on other grounds than mere choice of songs. It is almost impossible to exaggerate the amount of good a singer of Reeves's gifts can do in awakening wide public interest in the art itself. Mr. Pearce draws attention to the great increase of musical activity—especially in choralism—that took place about 1850. May not much of this be credited to Sims Reeves? He could not have drawn those great crowds to hear him sing at concerts and in oratorio without bringing thousands under the spell of music; and his every appearance set up a standard in vocal beauty and purity of style that must have had incalculable effects for good on the young singers of his day.

Apropos of the choral activity of that period, Mr. Pearce says that in 1854 'nearly every provincial town had its choral class. The London suburbs were busy in establishing musical societies, and Camberwell, greatly daring, engaged Prof. Pauer to conduct a choral body of a hundred and fifty singers,' and goes on to quote Chorley's view that 'chorus singing, whether theatrical, sacred, or orchestral, has never before been carried to such high perfection in England—our country may now in this improved branch of musical execution challenge its rivals, whoever they may be.' Mr. Pearce follows this quotation by asking: 'What would Mr. Chorley say of the paucity of choral singing at the present day?' Mr. Pearce must be curiously out of touch with the musical life of the present, or he would be aware that both in quantity and quality choral singing to-day is immeasurably ahead of that of seventy years ago.

There are so many quotable and discussable matters in this book that a reviewer looks at his copy, with its dog's-ears and pencil-notes every few pages, and finds that after all he has to leave unpicked all manner of plums.

As was said above, the work is less a biography than a discursive account of a period. Mr. Pearce has made a good and attractive job of it despite an occasional lack of care in style and some dubious views in regard to musical taste. (For example, he is prone to defend poor music, and to scoff at attempts to improve public taste.) But his book is so entertaining that he may be forgiven. Indeed, so great is our debt to him that he may even be absolved for saying (p. 154) that 'some of the singers were non est.'

H. G.

'N. A. Rimsky-Korsakov: My Musical Life.' Translated by J. A. Joffe. Introduction by Carl Van Vechten.

[London: Martin Secker, 25s.]

There are too few books about music written 'from the inside.' Here is one of them.

There is not half enough of it—or rather not half enough of the most interesting parts of it. But do not let us start by grumbling, for the best parts are of such an extremely rare sort:

True, music written without the aid of a pianoforte is distinctly heard by the composer; nevertheless, when chance offers one an opportunity to play (on the pianoforte) for the first time a considerable quantity of music composed without a pianoforte, there is a peculiar impression, unexpected in its way, and one to which the composer has to grow accustomed. . . . During the process of composing an opera the tones imagined mentally belong to voices and orchestra, and when performed for the first time on the pianoforte they sound somewhat strange. . . . It is laughable, but at that time I developed an indefinable longing for the F minor tonality, in which I had composed nothing for a long time. . . . This unaccountable yearning drew me irresistibly to compose Lyubava's Aria, for which I jotted down the verses on the spot.

That is not profound, but I for one find it curious—a reflection in the mind of a man who makes the wondrous works at which we non-creators gape without really understanding (not the best analysts among us) how they came into being. How little the great composers have told us of the musical mind and its workings, even those who wrote copiously and brilliantly: Schumann, Wagner, Berlioz, Ethel Smyth. Schumann said the best things, and we grasp at them. But most have said nothing.

Rimsky-Korsakov did not write one of the great autobiographies of the world, but he wrote one of the best of musicians' books. We deplore his destruction of his sketches for a general work on æsthetics, to which he was incited by reading Hanslick, 'a writer of slight wit and exceeding paradox.' This autobiography was jotted down at different times, and stops at August, 1906, thus leaving out the last two years.

The introduction tells us that the original is 'artlessly, even badly written.' However that may be, the introducer is not in a position to criticise. Judge of his writing when he calls Rimsky-Korsakov 'a skilled workman at setting folk-jewels in operatic platinum,' &c. Rimsky happily avoided such flowers of speech.

His book reads coolly and laconically. He was evidently bent on setting down objective facts. Nothing could be more different from the swagger of Wagner's and Berlioz's books. This translation has Americanisms which might, in a London publication, have been pruned, but it is thoroughly readable. The system of transliteration ('Byelyayeff' for Belaiev, and so on) has a clumsy look, but means well.

This book, more than any other, brings us into personal contact with Balakirev and his friends. It breaks down the barriers of sixty years and the distance of Petersburg, and we feel how normal and human were these musicians who were engaged on such extravagant adventures—'Antar,' 'Boris,' 'Islamey'—in the heyday of our Macfarrens and Sterndale Bennetts. Reading here of them, one feels them much nearer than Macfarren and Sterndale Bennett, and, in fact, extraordinarily like clever folk one has met at post-war parties at Kensington and St. John's Wood. What they said at Balakirev's in the 1860's, is nowadays to be heard at Chelsea :

Eight Symphonies of Beethoven found comparatively little favour . . . they had little respect for Mendelssohn, and Moussorgsky often called him 'Mendel.' Mozart and Haydn were called out-of-date and naive. Chopin was likened by Balakirev to a nervous society lady. . . . Chopin's melodies were considered sweet and womanish; Mendelssohn's, sour and bourgeois. The themes of Bach's Fugues were undoubtedly held in respect. The greatest amount of attention and respect was showered on the musical elements called additions, introductions, brief but characteristic phrases, ostinato dissonant progressions (but not of the enharmonic variety). . . . Berlioz . . . was highly esteemed . . . They respected Dargomijski . . . the 'Vorspiel' to Wagner's 'Meistersinger' he [Balakirev] hated.

The book makes us love these men because of their passion for music—the amateur's passion. All five of them were queer cases, and Rimsky as queer as any, no matter how drily he writes about himself. On page 38 we find him a midshipman putting in to refit at Gravesend, in 1862, on his way round the world. He was here in England for four months, and here wrote the Andante of the Symphony which Balakirev had urged him to start on. He posted the score to Russia, and Balakirev said that the Gravesend Andante was the best movement. Has any midshipman, before or since, occupied his leisure in writing a symphony? That was in 1862. Rimsky-Korsakov was eighteen. 'I did not know the A B C of theory at the time.' On his return to Russia, in 1865, the Symphony (which was called the first 'Russian' Symphony—Rubinstein did not count) was performed with some success.

Rimsky-Korsakov, years later, buttressed his instinctive musical gifts with the solidest technical studies, and he looks back with some irony on his youthful adventures, as on those of his brilliant friends. They were the most amazing amateurs that ever were. If Balakirev could not be called an amateur, it was not that he was a trained musician but that he was a prodigy, a complete musician by instinct. He utterly dazzled the young Rimsky-Korsakov, and no wonder. The older Rimsky-Korsakov is critical enough, but sums him up :

An excellent pianist, a superior sight-reader, a splendid improviser, endowed by nature with the sense of correct harmony and part-writing. . . . Then, too, he was a marvellous critic, especially a technical critic. He instantly felt every technical imperfection or error, he grasped a defect in form at once.

Rimsky-Korsakov in retrospect blames him for not realising that the musical education of which he had no need might be useful and even necessary to others. In 1871, Rimsky-Korsakov, on the strength of 'Sadko,' 'Antar,' and 'The Maid of Pskov,' was appointed a professor of composition and orchestration, and conductor of the orchestral class at the Petersburg Conservatory. He says :

I was a dilettante and knew nothing. . . . I not only could not decently harmonize a chorale, had not written a single counterpoint in my life, but I had hardly any notion of the structure of a fugue; nay did not even know the names of augmented and diminished intervals. . . . As for the conductor's art, never having conducted an orchestra, I had no conception of it.

He learnt by teaching, and mastered all the academic arts. Meanwhile Borodin and Moussorgsky carried on by the light of nature. Rimsky-Korsakov leaves us valuable sketches of these two friends. To the good Borodin he was particularly attached, and he mixes dry humour with regretfulness in his account of Borodin, who was divided between music, chemistry, and philanthropy, living a restless life with a neurotic wife, crowds of poor relations, cats, and no time-table. No wonder that 'Prince Igor,' at which he had worked for twenty years, was left unfinished.

And Moussorgsky passes before us in these candid pages, from a foppish young guardsman degenerating into a dreary toper. On page 210 is Rimsky-Korsakov's defence of his drastic editing of Moussorgsky's MSS. He found in the unfinished works :

. . . absurd, incoherent harmonies; ugly part-writing; now strikingly illogical modulation, now depressing absence of any at all; ill-chosen instrumentation of orchestrated pieces; in general a certain audacious self-conceited dilettantism; at times moments of technical dexterity, but more often technical impotence. Withal, these compositions showed so much talent, so much originality, offered so much that was new and alive, that publication was a positive obligation.

And if the world really wants Moussorgsky's ipsissima verba the MSS. are, so the candid friend the Editor points out, always accessible. Long years after, in 1904,

I remained inexpressibly pleased with my revision and orchestration of 'Boris Godounov'. . . . Moussorgsky's violent admirers frowned a bit . . . But I had not . . . painted out the old frescoes for ever.

Rimsky-Korsakov certainly faced posterity with a perfectly clear conscience. One reads attacks on his editing of Moussorgsky which leave the historical considerations out of count. Whether he was well-advised or no, Rimsky-Korsakov all his life was a model of artistic probity. This book of his, which spares neither himself nor others, speaks unmistakably for a character of extraordinary courage and strength. C.

'A Students' Hymnal for use in Schools and Colleges.' Edited by Sir Walford Davies for the National Council of Music in Wales and the Welsh County Schools Association.

[Humphrey Milford, Oxford University Press. Harmony edition, 6s. 6d.; Melody edition, 1s. 6d.]

'Hymns of the Kingdom,' being the English Section of the 'Students' Hymnal.'

[Humphrey Milford. Harmony edition, 4s. 6d.; Melody edition, 8d.]

'A Transition Hymn-Book.' By the Rev. R. E. Roberts.

[Humphrey Milford, 1s.]

'The English Hymnal.' Melody edition.

[Humphrey Milford, 2s. 6d.]

Not very many years ago the compilation of a new hymn-book was a simple proposition; you overhauled all the existing books, took from them such tunes as met with your approval, got a few composers to write more or less original tunes so that your book would include a few pages of matter hitherto unpublished, and there you were. Of definite policy, or of freshness in laying out or presentation there was little until the 'English Hymnal' came on the scene.

Since that date a good many collections of various sizes have appeared, and in all of them a certain liveliness has been reflected from the 'English Hymnal.' The 'Students' Hymnal' justifies itself amply in a variety of ways. To begin with, the music is set forth in both the Staff and the Tonic Sol-fa notations; the indexing is copious and convenient; the order is alphabetical; and—a specially valuable feature—a melody edition is available. It is a pity the names of authors and composers do not appear over or under the hymns. (One of the best points about the 'English Hymnal' is the fact that we can see the sources of words and music without reference to the index.) In the matter of laying out there seems to be only one fault in the harmony edition: in some cases all the words are sandwiched between the two staves, and where there are as many as five or six verses, plus the Tonic Sol-fa signs, the inevitable result is a very wide separation of the staves. (In No. 61 the staves are separated by no fewer than fourteen lines of text!) This does not matter to singers, but players who are poor readers or inexperienced will find themselves hampered by the gap between the S.A. and T.B. parts—especially when (as so often happens in hymn playing) one hand has to help out the other by taking over an extra voice for a note or two.

The quality of the tunes leaves room for the minimum of complaint. The prime feature is melodic strength, both in melody and rhythm. There are many new tunes—so many that an attempt to discuss them as they deserve would call for a far longer review than is possible here. There is a section of over a hundred hymns, with Welsh text and mainly Welsh tunes, a short collection of anthems (including the 'Dona nobis pacem' from the B minor Mass), a half-dozen carols, a few Psalms marked for chanting, a harmonized Pater Noster, and a setting of the Te Deum for choir and congregation. Among the adaptations are some that are questionable. The tune set to 'As with gladness men of old' is an example. The familiar 'Dix' is, as most people now know, an abridgment of a fine German chorale, 'Treuer Heiland, wir sind hier.' In the 'Students' Hymnal' we have 'Dix' with a difference, the fourth phrase being drawn from the 'Treuer Heiland' with the first note changed. As a result we have neither 'Dix' nor 'Treuer Heiland,' but a variant which will confuse and irritate those who know either tune. It is a pity a metrical fit could not have been found for the German tune with its splendid penultimate phrase (absent from 'Dix'). There is not much plainsong in the book, and what there is might have been better treated. Plainsongites will not be pleased to see a common metre tune hacked out of the exquisite 16th-century 'Rosy Sequence.' The result is an ordinary hymn-tune that gives no more than a hint of the beauty of the original. 'Christe Redemptor' (No. 76) has an effective faux-bourdon, but the organ part of the other verses has rather more chords than are desirable—a point in which practically every hymnal fails. It is hardly possible to sing these melodies with the right elasticity if almost every note bears a chord. 'Æterna Christi Munera' is set out in a mixture of minims, crotchets, and quavers that will give the uninitiated little idea of the proper rhythm. The harmonization of these old tunes is diatonic rather than modal. (It is a popular error to regard the terms as synonyms. Modal harmony is diatonic, but diatonic is not necessarily modal.) Thus the 'Christe Redemptor' is here plainly in E flat, with a final cadence in the dominant; there is no suggestion of the First Mode. An objection of this kind should not be lightly dismissed as mere pedantry. Many composers and a large proportion of the musical public alike now recognise the beauty of the modal system, not only for its own sake but as a welcome relief from the tonality of the major and minor scales. This being so, we are sorry to see the few plainsong tunes in this hymnal harmonized with so little feeling for their modality.

Among the revisions that are improvements is one of Boyd's 'Pentecost' ('Fight the good fight'). The rhythm and harmony are altered for the better, but no amount of revision can ever make it a good tune; those maddening repetitions of the third of the scale put it out of court as a melody. Sir Walford Davies probably thought twice before including it, even with the revisions. I wish he had not stopped at twice. Some day a hymnal will appear courageously without 'Pentecost.' 'Melita' has several of its dominant sevenths pruned away, but still too many remain. 'St. Oswald' is reharmonized with advantage, its original stationary alto and bass passages giving way to something more suggestive of 'the pilgrim band' being on the move. All the changes of this kind strike one as being in the direction of life and interest.

Marks of expression are absent, and there are no indications as to pace. There are a few bits of free accompaniment so good that one wishes there were more. Particularly effective is the rolling pedal for the last verse of 'Thou, Whose Almighty Word' to 'Moscow.' The stereotyped plagal cadence 'Amen' is not tacked on to every hymn. Often there is no 'Amen' at all, and those that are included are varied in form. In some cases the 'Amen' is very fittingly made into an imposing climax by division of the voices. Similarly, the 'Alleluia' at the close of No. 78 has three treble parts. This sounds ambitious, but any ordinarily well-provided choir would find no difficulty in it; the average choir-boy revels in an opportunity of the kind. In regard to the new tunes an interesting point is that some have a communal origin, those ascribed to the 'University of Wales' being written by a group of (presumably) students—with the editor as moderator, no doubt. Capital tunes they are, on the whole. The Preface tells us that in two cases no less than five people had a hand in the making of a four-lined melody. (But I wish the syndicate had not taken the fine old French tune 'Christe Sanctorum,' and evolved from it the poor effort set to No. 38.) The Preface, by the way, says so much that is wise and practical that it might well serve as the basis of a separate review. It should be read by all who have to do with hymn-singing. The thousands of people who have spent delightful and profitable hours at hymn festivals conducted by Sir Walford Davies will here find much of him in solution. The 'Students' Hymnal,' despite a few grounds for fault-finding, is a live and challenging book. Like the 'English Hymnal' it will affect for good any collections that may be appearing for a long time to come.

As will be seen from the heading of this review, the English section—about two hundred hymns—is issued separately under the title 'Hymns of the Kingdom.'

'The Transition Tune Book' contains fifty-two tunes from the 'English Hymnal,' brought together with the object of paving the way to the adoption of that book. Unfortunately some of the tunes cannot be called other than bad, e.g., the feeble 'Leominster' of G. W. Martin, 'Calcutta,' 'Pilgrims of the Night,' 'Stella,' 'Benevento,' and Lowell Mason's Missionary Hymn. I doubt if any ardent admirer of the 'E. H.' (I am one) can lay his hand on his heart and say that he regards these tunes as being better than (or even so good as) the 'A. & M.' ones they are designed to supersede. The compiler says that in justice to the 'E. H.' he has to point out that his primary object 'has not been to select the most popular tunes, but to supersede the worst.' But surely a collection brought together for propaganda purposes, so to speak, should contain no example to which exception may be taken on purely musical grounds. We have to face the fact that the 'E. H.' fine book as it is, contains a good number of tunes and harmonizations that many Church musicians who have used it from its inception hope to see dropped from any revised edition; it is a pity that Canon Roberts has included at least half a dozen of them. However, there still remain a good forty excellent specimens, so the booklet will serve its purpose, though less convincingly than it would have done with a more exacting compiler.

It was stated above that one of the excellent points about the 'Students' Hymnal' and 'Hymns of the Kingdom' is that both are issued in a melody edition. Choirmasters who have used the 'English Hymnal' and have chafed at the costliness of the music edition and at the size and weight of the volume for small choir-boys will be delighted to hear that it is now to be had with melodies only—a slim, handy volume in stout green cloth. The print is small, but as the book will be used mainly by young people, the drawback is not serious. The edition will be a boon in churches where congregational practices are held. Its issue is a wise though belated move, and does away with one of the obstacles to the adoption of the book in poor parishes.

H. G.

'Harmony Exercises.' By Adam Carse.

[Augener. Books 1 and 2, 2s. 6d. each.]

Here are two books which students and teachers of harmony should find exceedingly useful in supplementing the exercises—usually far too scanty—given in the ordinary text-books. The author has done his work very thoroughly and systematically, and the result is a total of over a hundred and twenty pages of carefully graded material for the student to work at. The two books together comprise forty-five sections, in the majority of which the exercises are arranged in three groups—(a) Figured Basses, (b) Melodies, (c) Unfigured Basses. The author has clearly aimed at making the exercises musically interesting, many of them being in instrumental idiom. In fact, in the praise-worthy attempt to reduce to a minimum stodgy exercises of the hymn-tune type, he lays himself open to criticism in the case of some of the examples in the early part of the book. There is more than one instance where certain notes would be better treated as unessential. Unessential notes, however, are not introduced till the eleventh section, so that even so far on as page 30 we find the student being asked to harmonize—with a separate chord for each note, of course—a descending scale of eight quavers in a bar of  $\frac{4}{4}$  time. Many of the exercises in this part of the book would have been capable of more artistic and more natural treatment had even simple passing-notes been introduced at an earlier stage.

Apart from this Mr. Carse's book appears to be in every respect admirable. Not the least of its good points is the prominence given to modulation from a very early stage, and the helpful nature of many of the exercises in this respect. One is glad to see, scattered throughout the book, several sections devoted to pianoforte writing—melodies to be harmonized for pianoforte (with keyboard idiom) or for violin with pianoforte accompaniment. The final stages deal with analysis of chords, and of chromatic and enharmonic progressions and the harmonization of chorales and ground basses.

G. G.

'A History of Music in England.' By Ernest Walker.

[Humphrey Milford, 10s. 6d.]

A reprint of this admirable book has been long overdue, and, now that it has arrived, the only complaint one has to make is that the necessary additions, modifications, and corrections appear as an appendix instead of being incorporated into the body of the book. There are of course economic reasons for this, but these will not help the new reader, who will be well advised to read the appendix first, and make a note of the pages to which the fresh matter refers. There are few actual corrections, the bulk of the extra chapter being devoted to the carrying on of the review of British composers from the point at which it stopped twenty years ago. It is, however, still far from complete, owing to Dr. Walker's decision to include only composers who have passed their fortieth year. He gives us telling thumbnail valuations of Delius, Ethel Smyth, Bantock, Vaughan Williams, Boughton, Holbrooke, Frank Bridge, and others. Some of these little critical sketches tell us as much as pages of average writing would do. For example, the strength and weakness of Delius are exactly hit off in the view that his music 'often sounds more like the work of an amateur of great genius than that of a professional musician.' Good as all this is, however, the book would be hardly less valuable without it. As a piece of historical writing, and as criticism, it remains one of the best things in English musical literature. On its first appearance it drew attention to a wealth of early music, much of which has since been 'discovered' (with fanfares); it uttered some courageous opinions about Handel, Sullivan, and other British idols—opinions which were violently assailed at the time, but which have since proved to be those of a great number (perhaps a majority) of musicians; and, above all, it was written in a style worthy of its subject. If you would realise how great and unusual that virtue was, read any twenty of the numerous books on music that have appeared during the past few years. If you can find three of which the same can be said, you will have been lucky in your choice—or easily pleased.

H. G.

'The Complete Opera Book.' By Gustav Kobbé.

[Putnam, 15s.]

This is a new and enlarged edition. When the book appeared (about two years ago) English reviewers pointed out that although this country could not claim to have contributed extensively to the operatic repertoire, she had not been entirely barren. Hence a book that contained no reference to English composers could hardly be called complete. The criticism has not been fruitless, for this new edition contains a supplement in which Mr. Ferruccio Bonavia deals clearly and concisely with Holst's 'Savitri' and 'The Perfect Fool,' Boughton's 'Alkestis' and 'The Immortal Hour,' and Ethel Smyth's 'Fête Galante,' 'The Boatswain's Mate,' and 'The Wreckers.' We may hope that the third edition will go even further towards adequate notice of English opera, past and present. Mr. Bonavia gives also synopses of Stravinsky's 'Le Rossignol,' Rimsky-Korsakov's 'Ivan,' and Moussorgsky's 'Khovanschina.' A few music-type illustrations accompany the Holst and Boughton works. The volume now contains over nine hundred pages, and is surely the best thing of its kind, despite a few shortcomings.

H. G.

THE PERFORMANCE OF ELIZABETHAN CHURCH MUSIC

By HEATHCOTE D. STATHAM

An attempt is made in this article to put forward some practical suggestions as to the performance of Elizabethan and early 17th-century Church music. Though for convenience's sake the suggestions are set forth dogmatically, they are frankly suggestions rather than ex-cathedra statements; and they have only such authority as comes from practical experience and experiment.

LEGATO: STRESS

The two essential points of technique required for the correct performance of this music are (1) perfect legato singing and (2) the application of what is called here stress, which includes word-stress and rhythm-stress. They must be dealt with together, because legato singing is impossible without proper word-stress and rhythm-stress. When a perfect orator speaks a phrase with conscious art he emphasises certain syllables not by attacking consonants, but by enlarging and vocalizing on the vowel sounds of important syllables, and by lightening and reducing tone on unimportant syllables. He also reduces to a minimum the cessation of vocal tone caused by the interruption of consonants. This is exactly what has to be done in singing. Each separate voice part in an Elizabethan service or anthem is oratory raised to its highest and ultimate form—it is speech which has been glorified into music. The composers were nearly always meticulously careful in fitting the music to the words. Not only do accents fall where they naturally do in speech, but the curve of the music often follows the inflections of the speaking-voice. The first phrase from Byrd's 'Songs of Sundry Natures' is an excellent example of correct accentuation and inflection:

Ex. 1.

Fast.

Here the unimportant syllables have been placed in brackets. On each important syllable there should be stress, i.e., a pressing home and beautifying of tone on the vowel sound: on the unimportant syllables there should be a lightening and cutting away of tone. The singer should have two distinct levels of tone, one for stressed syllables and the other for unimportant syllables. These two levels of tone vary in power as the singer sings louder or softer, but they do not vary in relation to each other.

They should move in parallel lines. (Naturally no singer could, in practice, keep the two tone levels in unvarying relation one to the other, but the comparison with parallel lines does give a mental picture which is useful.) These stresses are not only necessary for marking important syllables; they are necessary for marking rhythms. In the following example from Tallis's Motet 'Audivi vocem de coelo' it is necessary that the accented notes of the triple rhythms should be pressed home and the unaccented notes lightened. The expression marks here are Sir Richard Terry's, the editor of the Motet:

Ex. 2.

It is not to be supposed that this system of stressing and lightening is to be used unvaryingly throughout a work. It is not, e.g., required to as great an extent when all the voices sing the same rhythm simultaneously. But it does seem essential when two or more rhythms are proceeding together. In the following example from Gibbons in F, the rhythms will stand out clearly only if the syllables 'light' and 'on' are stressed, and the others lightened. Moreover, there should be real contrast between the two tone-levels used:

Ex. 3.

The singer who stresses and lightens according to the natural inflections of the speaking-voice is usually on pretty safe ground. There are, however, times when an unimportant word, such as 'and,' must be stressed in order to mark a characteristic rhythm.

FREE RHYTHM

Tempo rubato, like fire, is a dangerous thing to play with. Such is its fascination, especially to pianists, that one hears it applied indiscriminately to almost every phrase. It should certainly be used in such a passage as the following :

Ex. 4.

BYRD in D minor.

Without absolute freedom of rhythm this loses half its fervency. But no rules can be laid down as to its use. This particular Service, Byrd in D minor, calls for almost the same looseness of treatment as Merbecke's unison Mass. Gibbons in F, on the other hand, has an aloofness and austerity which would make an extensive use of rubato a mistake. In such a phrase as the following :

it should of course be used. The first quaver here has to be stressed and held, and the remaining quavers have to be lightened and hurried.

SYNCOPIATION AND SHORT RHYTHMS

The idea of syncopation should not exist at all in the singer's mind when singing this music :

Ex. 6.

Magnificat. THOMAS HUNT.

Example 6 can only be satisfactory if the singer feels the apparent syncopation as a short triple rhythm. To do this he should count on every quaver: the unimportant syllables should be very much lightened, and the accented ones stressed more than usual. These short triple rhythms frequently occur, and have a delightful feeling of lilt and freedom if they are treated in the proper way. In the following lovely passage from Tomkins's second service, the tenor should sound through with perfect freedom and no hint of syncopation :

UNDERLAYING OF THE WORDS.

The composers' methods of underlaying the words often seem strange to modern ears. The underlaying of the words has been changed from the originals in almost all editions except the most recent ones, and so it comes to us now as something of a new thing. It is most important that it should be given correctly, as the character of many passages is quite altered if it is not. In Hunt's service this phrase occurs :

Ex. 8.

Nunc dimittis.

THOMAS HUNT.

This is quite different from the following :

Ex. 9.

slurred in the modern way. With Hunt's underlaying of the words, the effect of the phrase should be almost that of an irregular slither down the scale, with pressures on the first of each of the slurred notes and a feeling of absolute looseness about the whole phrase. It is passages such as this which give us an insight into the methods of the Elizabethan singers. The original manuscript part-books of this work are all marked with slurs. This is unusual, and gives the service a special value, apart from the worth of the music. In the underlaying of the words it is constantly the unimportant word or syllable which is slurred to two or three notes, and the first of these slurred notes often falls on the unaccented beat of the bar. There is a temptation in singing them to place an accent on the beat: the accent, however, should fall on the first of the slurred notes. Single words like 'their' are often slurred to a short note followed by a longer one, the longer one falling on the beat of the bar. There should be just that suggestion of 'scooping' about the singing of them as there is when a violinist slides a finger from one note to another on one string :

FINAL CADENCES.

The final cadence is often the gem of a composition, and is the opportunity for each singer to give his most beautiful tone with the greatest tenderness and fervour :

* I have kept the spelling and notation of 'throughout' as they appear in the old printed part-books.—H. D. S.

Ex. 11.

In this pathetic ending from Farrant in A minor (G minor in Boyce) the alto part should be noticed. It starts from F and returns to F again. This second F should be lingered on, beautified and caressed with all possible tenderness. Phrases like this which return to the note from which they started, as though unwilling to leave it, are common, and should always be treated in this sympathetic way. The last bar contains an example of a well-known formula. Too often one hears the crotchets thumped out with heavy accents and a portentous rallentando. Unless the ending is of a triumphant nature, this is wrong. This simple conclusion should suggest a tender gesture of farewell rather than a military salute on dismissal.

One of the peculiarities of Elizabethan choral music is the simultaneous use of the major and minor thirds. The following looks horrible and, played on a keyed instrument, sounds horrible:

Ex. 12.

Magnificat.

HUNT.

Yet there is no doubt that the composer meant it to be sung as written. When sung unaccompanied it does come off: it has the effect, especially in a resonant building, of a sudden brilliant flash of colour. Though such passages may be too acrid for some palates there is yet something sturdy and John-Bullish about this refusal of the alto to be jostled from his path. In his 'English Madrigal Composers,' Dr. Fellowes explains the technique of singing these clashes. It consists in slightly sharpening the major third and slightly flattening the minor. If such a phrase is accompanied, the part responsible for the clash should always be omitted from the accompaniment.

Although this music is usually sung unaccompanied, it was probably not so sung at the time when it was written, for there are numerous old organ books in existence. The organ parts in these books are, however, of a very sketchy character, and have far less substance than a reduction of the voice parts to short score. When the organ is used it should not duplicate the voices throughout: it should be used rather as a help in time of trouble, and a means of emphasizing the beauty of inner parts by soloing on a soft stop that blends with the voices. But its effectiveness in this way depends very much on whether the singers and the organ are close together.

There can be no question, too, that the use of the organ does take the keen edge off the just intonation of the voices.

For cathedral choirs this is surely the ideal music, for it gives to each singer the chance of singing the words beautifully and naturally. But it can be approached in no haphazard or light-hearted spirit. Dr. Fellowes's wise words about madrigal singing should be remembered:

'It is the conductor's first business to go through the separate parts thoughtfully and carefully, bringing some into prominence, suppressing others, and contriving suitable phrasing and emphasis, and that not exclusively in points of imitation. In this lies the secret of successful Madrigal singing. If, on the other hand, it is ignored, or set aside as being too difficult for attainment, the only reasonable alternative is to leave the Madrigal severely alone. There is no place for a sors tertia.'

Neither is there a place for a sors tertia in Elizabethan Church music.

[This article was written some time ago. Since then Musica Ficta, the underlaying of words and other technical points, have been fully dealt with in the prefaces to the first and second volumes of 'Tudor Church Music.']

Occasional Notes

When is London to have its first performance of Schönberg's orchestral transcriptions of a couple of Bach Chorale Preludes? They were played at Carnegie Hall, New York, so long ago as December, 1922. We first heard of the transcriptions from Mr. Lawrence Gilman, the music critic of the New York Tribune, on the occasion of a call he paid us last summer. Mr. Gilman has since kindly sent us a copy of the programme containing his notes on the works, so that we may pass on some information to our readers. The Preludes chosen are 'Schmucke dich' and 'Komm, Gott, Schopfer, Heiliger Geist.' The transcriptions were the outcome of a suggestion made to Schönberg by Josef Stransky in the summer of 1922. The idea was so attractive that Schönberg set to work at once and finished the score by the end of the summer. He has treated the text with more scruple than is usual with transcribers, adding very little to the original. Indeed, Mr. Gilman speaks of him as having been 'almost anxiously reverent.' But this 'reverence' has not precluded the use of some instruments that one would not readily associate with works of the kind. On this point Mr. Gilman says:

Some may remark that 'anxious reverence' would hardly seem to characterise a transcriber of Bach who surrounds him with triangle, glockenspiel, celesta, and the other light women of the orchestra. It is apparently difficult for many to realise that there is plenty of evidence to prove that Bach was anything but a tonal blue-nose. It is not difficult to imagine him listening with delighted ears to a modern orchestra, or even to first-class jazz, and then sending one of the little Bachs post-haste for score-paper 3-ft. high, and proceeding with a glad whoop to write for all the instruments used in the score of 'Salome' or 'Le Sacre du Printemps.'

Schönberg opens 'Schmucke dich' pp, with woodwind, strings, horn, and harp, a clarinet, flute, and oboe in turn doubling the upper voice in the octave above. Three solo (second) violins, three violas, and three violoncellos, muted, fill out the harmony. The chorale melody is given to a solo violoncello, the accompanying counterpoints being played by small sections of the strings, muted and divisi, with wood-wind, celesta, and harp (harmonics). The tone-colour is described as 'of extraordinary delicacy and sensitive artistic rectitude.' The other Prelude is No. 17 of the 'Eighteen Chorale Preludes' (Novello edition, Book 17). As most readers will remember, this is an extension of the eight-bar piece that appears in the 'Little Organ Book.' Schönberg gives the melody in the first section (where it appears in the treble) to the wood-wind, and the remaining voices to strings and harps, with the drums and triangle accenting the close of each phrase of the tune. In the second portion of the piece the chorale is proclaimed in the bass by trombones, tuba, and bassoons, the semiquaver passages above being shared by the strings, wood-wind, horns, and trumpets, with (says Mr. Gilman)

... singular ingenuity and some poetic license of a wholly venial kind—as, for instance, the flashing scale-passages in 32nd notes that heighten the brilliancy of the first pause of the bass tune on C, and the arpeggios later on for violins and violas. The superb close is enhanced by its orchestral setting, with the full splendour of the orchestra—fortissimo and molto ritardando—on that final bar.

The orchestra employed is of two flutes, two piccolos, two oboes, two English horns, two E flat clarinets, two bass clarinets, two bassoons, two double-bassoons, four horns, four trumpets, four trombones, tuba, timpani, triangle, glockenspiel, cymbals, two harps, celesta, and strings. This certainly seems an enormous battery to employ on these particular works, but, the principle of transcription once granted—as it must be—no one can take exception to any combination of instruments as such. Everything depends on what the transcriber does with them. A small force is no guarantee of good taste or sense of fitness, as we discovered recently in hearing an arrangement of the 'Sleepers, wake!' Prelude. Only a few instruments were called on, but a set of tubular bells happened to be among them. These musical drain-pipes were used in such a way as to drown the chorale melody and distract attention from the exquisite long-drawn tune that makes this piece such a joy. We do not know the name of the arranger, so we make this complaint without prejudice. Meanwhile we hope that worthy orchestral versions of Bach's organ works will continue to be made; and we should particularly like to hear what a masterly scorer could do with the Prelude in E flat—a blend of pomp and brilliance to which full justice can be done only by a full orchestra.

Mention of Bach reminds us of a curious fact in relation to Sir Dan Godfrey's 'Memories and Music' that no reviewer seems to have pointed out. At the end of the volume there is a 'Selected List of classical and other foreign works' played at the Bournemouth Symphony Concerts from 1895 till 1923, and the name of Bach does not appear. It seems incredible that Bournemouth has yet to make the acquaintance of the Concertos and Suites, and it must be poorly compensated by having had over thirty performances of Cherubini's Overtures. In the list of works by British composers is the Bach-Elgar Fantasia and Fugue; apart from this second-hand reference, Bach is absent. His name is not even in the general index. In a book of this kind one looks to find letter B leading off with Bach; here it starts astonishingly with 'Bailey, Sir Abe.' We should have thought it impossible for an orchestral conductor to write so bulky a book, with particulars of the repertory for nearly thirty years, and yet somehow dodge John Sebastian, but Sir Dan has managed to do it. Perhaps there is a slip somewhere.

